Local Dairy Queens among 56 purchased

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG—The Dairy Queen locations in Prestonsburg and Martin, along with 56 other Dairy Queen locations in both Kentucky and Indiana, are now under new ownership.

Fourteen Foods, the purchasing company, made the announcement March 28, saying the deal now nearly doubles the number of restaurants it now owns. As of the March 28 announcement, Fourteen Foods owns a total of 119 Dairy Queen locations through the upper Midwest as well as now Kentucky and Indiana.

Attempts to reach the manager of Prestonsburg's Dairy Queen for comments on how, if at all, this might change any aspects of the local eatery were unsuccessful. But according to a press release sent out by the company, plans are to "keep many of the local favorite items." "We, as a company, feel that the states of Kentucky and Indiana, and the communities within are wonderful places to do business," said Matt Fratushnik, owner and chief executive officer of Fourteen Foods. "We look forward to meeting and working with members of our new communities. We want to continue making wonderful lasting memories for years to come with the families and friends that visit our DQ restaurants."

In addition to the Prestonsburg location, Fourteen Foods also bought locations in Martin and Pikeville. However, the bulk of locations purchased were in Louisville and Lexington.

Conn selected for Naval Academy program

Andrew B. Conn

LAKE WYLIE, S.C.—The son of a former state trooper who served for years in Floyd County will be one of a select group of students to soon attend the Naval Academy Summer Seminar as a guest of the United States Navy.

Andrew B. Conn, 16, of Lake Wylie, S.C., the son of Rick and Tracey Conn, was chosen to be one of 2,250 young men and women who will travel to the seminar in Annapolis, Md.

The fast-paced program is for what the Navy refers to as "high achievers" who have completed their junior year of high school and are considering applying for admission to the Navy after they graduate.

At the seminar, Conn and others will be taught about life at the naval academy at many levels, including academics, athletics and professional training. Each student will attend a six-day session and experience a part of naval life.

This experience for the selected and potential applicants will be more than just seminars, as well. During their stay the students will live in Bancroft Hall, the dormitory in which all Navy midshipmen live, eat in the dining hall, participate in academic and leadership workshops and also take part in daily physical training involving group runs and conditioning exercises.

Conn and his fellow attendees will also participate in seamanship and navigation classes while also taking an actual cruise aboard a Navy Yard Patrol Craft to apply what they learn in class.

Massey, others cited for violations

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

CHARLESTON, W.Va.—Massey Energy Company is now facing a slew of new violations following the most recent session of inspections conducted by the Mine Safety and Health Administration, the Associated Press reported this week.

The report came after an announcement from MSHA officials that Massey was cited for more than 80 violations during these most recent inspections. Administration officials say that the citations against Massey are among 166 issued across five states, including Kentucky, during special inspections in February.

"MSHA has been conducting these targeted inspections for nearly a year and, while some operators have been responsive and showed a willingness to change, others continue to commit the same serious violations," MSHA Director Joe Main said in a statement to the Associated Press earlier this week.

Three mines not operated by Massey were among those cited, however. Pike County's Massey subsidiary Process Energy's No. 1 mine saw 43 citations leveled against it, with approximately 42 percent considered by inspectors as being "significant and substantial" violations.

Making an example of one smaller scale Kentucky coal mine in Harlan County, D&C Mining, inspectors pointed out the mine was "operating without a mandatory emergency shelter at locations such as not following its ventilation plan for controlling dust," the Associated Press reported.

The increase in inspections started shortly after the explosion at Massey's Upper Big Branch mine in West Virginia last year that resulted in the death of 29 miners.

Vouchers for free seeds offered

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PRESTONSBURG—With warm weather around the corner, those looking for potential help with their green thumbs can take advantage of Big Sandy Area Community Action Program's Garden Project, an initiative that will provide garden seed vouchers to eligible households to purchase seeds and plants of their choice from April 4 until April 8.

"This is an excellent opportunity for people to supplement their income by means of a vegetable garden that will provide fresh produce for eating and earning," said James Michael Howell, executive director of Big Sandy Area Community Action Program. Eligibility for the program is determined by federal poverty guidelines. Applicants must provide Social Security numbers for all household members and verify their prior month's income.

Applications will be accepted from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, at all of the outreach offices of the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program. For more information, contact the Floyd County office by calling (606) 886-2929. Interested vendors can request an application by calling (606) 789-3641.

practices based on disability are on the rise," Peña said. "The United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has stated that denying housing or evicting a victim of domestic violence may have basis to file a discrimination complaint based on gender."

The April 7 training session aims to provide information on reasonable accommodations and modifications for qualified individuals with a disability and will cover HUD's guidance to refrain from discrimination against a victim of domestic violence.

The training will take place at the Big Sandy Area Development District's office along Resource Drive from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Plane

identification. According to Pikeville's Public Safety Department, at just before 1 p.m. Wednesday a twin-engine plane crashed along a gas well road just below the airport.

Doug Tackett, Pike County's Director of Emergency Management, has said that federal investigators are continuing to determine what may have caused the crash.

No further information has been released at this time.

Darrell Yoder, who works near where the crash occurred, spoke with broadcast news stations shortly after the crash Wednesday, saying the plane "came over the ridge top and hit the trees."

McKenzie's age. This time around, Hall did as he said he would following those citations and arrested Shepherd.

According to the police report, Hall saw Shepherd showing a catalogue to potential customers to look through. The catalogue, Hall said, contained a list of movies Shepherd had stored in his vehicle.

"The movies were illegal copies that (Shepherd) had in two large boxes, sorted and packaged for sale," Hall said, adding in the report that Shepherd also had "a large amount of money" from the sale of the movies.

Hall said after citing Peña and McKenzie last month that the police department is currently looking into the possibility that the burned copies are being made somewhere in the city limits, but have mentioned no new information on that theory.

Guest View We've heard assumptions before

Let's see if we can get this straight: Gov. Beshear called a special session of the General Assembly to handle the Medicaid debacle because the House and Senate couldn't agree on a $166 million budget patch during the regular session and the Senate left Frankfort early.

So, the legislature comes back during this special session, which is costing Kentucky (i.e. the taxpayers) about $62,000 a day. That's money that could be spent on something like, say, Medicaid expenses, for example.

Instead, the House approves this hackneyed Medicaid patch that promises to kick the Medicaid can down the road until next year, and if it doesn't work we'll just make broad spending cuts to state government then.

So, the Senate gets this plan, amends it to make the cuts now, cuts which include just about everything. They send their amendments back to the House, but the only trouble is that there can be no compromise between the Senate plan and the governor's plan because Gov. Beshear and Senate President David Williams are likely to be opponents in the upcoming gubernatorial race this fall and there can be no civility in politics, especially during an election year.

So, the House approves the Senate amendments with the promise that the governor intends to hack it with his mighty veto sword to transform it to as close as the House's original plan as possible, which he promptly did on Friday of last week.

On Monday morning, Independent gubernatorial candidate Gatewood Galbraith came into the Herald's office for an interview with our editorial staff. He handed us some campaign literature, at the top of which states: "Our current government is like two Bull-Eik with their horns locked up fighting over territory..."

After watching this Medicaid debate unfold in Frankfort, that's a pretty astute analogy, only we see no clear victor between the Governor and his likely Republican opponent this fall, especially when it comes to the people of Kentucky.

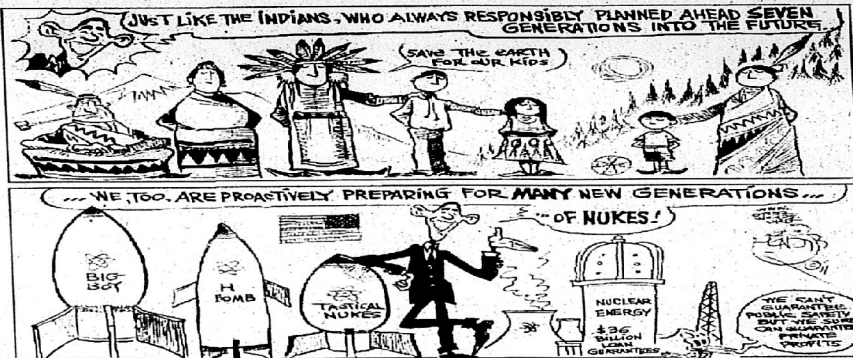

Thankfully we won't see 35 percent cuts to Medicaid next month as Gov. Beshear warned if the legislature failed to act, but we wonder what's coming next year.

In response to a question from the Herald during a stop at the Wendell H. Ford Airport in Perry County earlier this month, Beshear said his plan will institute managed care savings and the like to balance the budget next year.

That really sounds like an assumption to us, the same sort of assumption Beshear made in 2010 when he proposed a budget that relied heavily on expanded gambling measures that were never going to make it through the legislature.

There's an old saying about assuming and how it makes "you and me" look. We only hope that Beshear's gamble of assumption will not come back to smack the people of Kentucky in the face this time next year. If it does, those cuts being proposed in the Senate now will begin to look pretty good about then, especially compared to what will be waiting down that road.

Beyond the Beltway

Sarah Palin and the dozen dwarfs

by DONALD KAUL
OTHERWORDS

There are those—I won't name them, they know who they are—who have taken to calling the slate of Republican presidential hopefuls "Sarah Palin and the Seven Dwarfs." That's unfair.

There are way more than seven GOP politicians ready to run. I put the list right now at about 12, give or take a dwarf.

And there'd be more except that John Thune withdrew from the race a month or so ago.

Most of the rest of the GOP gang showed up in Washington a few months ago to try out their acts at the Conservative Political Action Conference. Generally speaking, the candidates spoke with one voice—for God, guns, and Ronak Reagan. They were uniformly against health care, taxes, and Barack Obama. (Have I mentioned that the conference was about a quart lov on new ideas?)

The 10,000 attendees listened to all of the speeches, then made Ron Paul, the Texas flat-earthier, their choice for president. (Did I also mention that its sense of reality was running on empty?)

Ironically, the only Republican that a clear majority of Americans could pick out of a police lineup—Sarah Palin—failed to show up at the conference. She and Mike Huckabee, the comfort-food candidate, were busy organizing their sock drawers. Or something.

To call the Republican field weak is to underestimate the obvious. It's a collection of has-been (Newt Gingrich, Haley Barbour, Mitt Romney), never-were (Tim Pawlenty, Rick Santorum, Mitch Daniels) and "who's he?" candidates (Herman Cain, Jon Huntsman).

The real problem the Republicans have, however, isn't the relative anonymity of their candidates—after all, hardly anyone knew who Obama was two years before he was elected. It's the fact that no Republican who can win the general election in 2012 can be nominated. Call it the tea party effect.

Republican candidates aren't merely afraid of tea party conservatives, they're terrified. One after another, they've repudiated past votes, policies, and beliefs in fear of offending those wild-eyed people in the funny hats.

Romney? As Governor of Massachusetts he advocated and got passed a health care plan much like President Obama's. He's now against it.

Pawlenty? When he was Governor of Minnesota he backed cap-and-trade legislation, a scarlet letter to real conservatives. He has apologized for the error.

Newt Gingrich? The former Speaker of the House may be a great advocate for the sanctity of marriage, but both times this do-what-I-say-not-what-I-do adulterer got divorced, he was dumping a wife suffering from a severe illness. The first was recovering from uterine cancer and the second had recently been diagnosed with multiple sclerosis.

Go through the list. Everyone's got something about him for conservatives to hate.

No wonder they look back so fondly on Ronald Reagan, the mythical figure bearing the name of our 40th president.

To hear Republicans talk, Reagan was George Washington, Winston Churchill, and John Wayne rolled into one.

He really wasn't. The real Ronnie wasn't as bad as Democrats made him out to be, but he was guilty of one great sin: He convinced the American people that they could have all the government they wanted without having to pay taxes for it.

He tripled the national debt during his time in office and set his party on the disastrous course the United States still travels.

Yet, given the yahoos and know-nothings the Republicans are left with today, I can see why they look back upon Reagan with fondness. He was a man of great charm.

Then again, so was Bernie Madoff.

The Usual Eccentric

Six heads are better than none

by WILL E. SANDERS

I just finished the super glue job of a lifetime, and boy, my fingers are tired. No, really, and they hurt. One finger is sorta stuck to the other one, tooooooo. Sorry, my middle finger was stuck to the "o" key there for a second. And the more I think about it, I should hurry up and write this before I lose all feeling of my right index finger.

It all started this morning. I had just finished serving the very end of my devil dog Silas when he decided to go into the front room and that which dogs love doing the most. Things they know they aren't allowed to do.

On this particular morning, Silas decided to use the corner of the coffee table as a means to scratch his rear end. This act, above all others, is strictly forbidden — and not just because of the sanitation issues that arise from such canine muthy. I keep a lot of important and highly fragile things on top of the coffee table. Like, for instance, this expensive ceramic incense burner in the shape of a wicked seven-headed dragon.

So you see, it is understandable that when I heard a large crash in the front room I not only knew the culprit, but I also knew the precise piece of home decor Silas just added to his household hit list (and this is from a dog that managed to break my first oven). When I say precise, I mean precisely that. I distinctly remember hearing each individual dragon head smashing against my wood floor and scattering into various directions — some of which included rolling into the heating vent only to be found an hour later.

Meanwhile, Silas the Dragon Slayer retreated to his cage where he began plotting other irreplaceables that he could shatter at a later date.

Once I thought all of the pieces had been recovered, I went about the business of putting Humpty Dumpty back together again at the kitchen table.

I prefer Loctite Super Glue to all others, even though super glue enthusiasts would largely disagree. Nevertheless, I find that Loctite's patented pressure-activated grip applicator and control gel drastically reduces the number of times I think I will need to call 911 during the super glue process.

While I'm on the subject, I love the warning that's located on the side of most super glue bottles: "In case of eye contact, flush with water for 15 minutes." I was unaware that using super glue correctly was that much of a problem. If you are getting super glue in your eyes, you need more than a good adhesive in your life. You need professional help. Or, more people are getting super glue bottles mixed up with eye drop medications. They are quite similar in shape and size, you know.

What about the disclaimer warning you not to ingest super glue. Huh? Are there untold millions out there sucking down one super glue bottle after another that I am unaware of? (In the case of ingestion, do NOT induce vomiting and call a physician.)

I find that working within the abstract medium of super glue to be a particularly troublesome endeavor. I find you are either born for it, or your fingers become stuck together a few more times in your life than you expected. Super glue was always more of my mother's medium. When growing up, I remember how my mother never minded family artifacts breaking around the house because I think she secretly looked for reasons to use super glue in order to ply her trade.

From my makeshift workbench, I spent two hours gluing tiny ceramic pieces — many of which contained chunks of my skin — to one another. When I (thought I was) finished, I stood back and admired the craftsmanship. Except, my super-glued monstrosity contained only six heads instead of seven. That's when I knew my attempts to piece back together my incense burner had gone up in smoke.

In time, I'm sure the missing dragon head will turn up. Until then, I guess I'm stuck with this six-headed, super-glued abomination ....

Sorry about that, my finger got stuck to the keyboard again.

Cats prove many wrong

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

Back in the day, my brother David Keith and I loved the show Happy Days. I don't know why. I'm sure it was dumb and corny - pretty sure my dad didn't care for it much - but we did. We loved it.

Of course, the show was centered around "The Fonz," who was a smooth talker with the ladies, could turn on any juke box with a fist and was easily the coolest cat in Milwaukee.

But "The Fonz" - Arthur, as Mrs. C called him - had a hard time saying he was wrong. He could get to "wr" but that was about it.

When it comes to this current edition of Kentucky Wildcat, I was "wr... wr... wr..."

But admit it. You were too.

Who among us saw this team making the Final Four? I correctly tabbed them as a four seed in January, but something strange happened at the beginning of March. This team, which consists of six "starters" and four guys who couldn't have gotten significant minutes playing for the national-champion Bears, bucked a trend.

It won a road game. And not just any road game. They went to Knoxville and knocked off the Vols.

I'm not sure if that was it. It could have just been a sign as to how badly the home team was spiraling out of control under the leadership of Bruce Pearl. Maybe that was it. The Vols were a worse team than Kentucky was a bad road team.

Or maybe they won that one and then realized that for the rest of the season, they'd never play another road game. Only neutral floors awaited, so whatever mental blocks they had about playing on someone else's home court no longer mattered.

And then they turned it on.

These six guys have been remarkable. They've managed to play through foul trouble, to hit big shots and survive the one thing nobody seems to be writing about - the, um, "slowing

Calipari brings Kentucky back to spotlight of Final Four

by BILL RABINOWITZ THE COLUMBUS DISPATCH, OHIO (MCT)

NEWARK, N.J. - John Calipari is going back to the Final Four.

This time he hopes his team's place in college basketball's premier event isn't written in Etch A Sketch.

Calipari's Kentucky Wildcats outlasted North Carolina 76-69 in the East Regional final at the Prudential Center.

Kentucky, seeded fourth in the regional, goes to Houston as the betting favorite, not that that means much in this upset-filled tournament. For the first time since seeding began in 1979, no No. 1 or

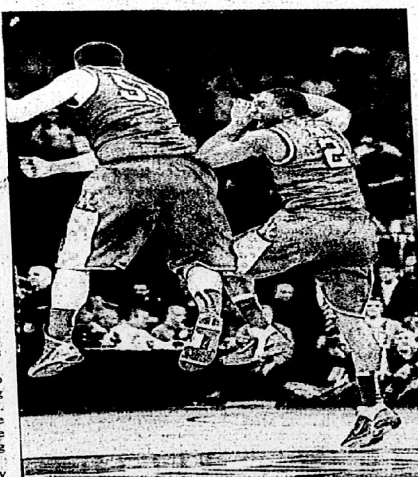

No. 2 seed won a regional.

Calipari becomes only the second coach to take three schools to the Final Four. But his previous two trips - in 1996 with Massachusetts and in 2008 with Memphis - were vacated because of NCAA violations. Although Calipari was not implicated in either case, a cloud has followed him.

That didn't stop Kentucky from pursuing him two years ago. Basketball royalty, the Wildcats hadn't been to the Final Four since winning the title in 1998.

Calipari's first Kentucky team was supposed to lead the Wildcats back. Last

Lady Bears sign Jenkins standout

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - Pikeville College has signed another local product to play women's basketball.

Sarah Corbett, a 5-9 senior from Jenkins High School, signed her letter of intent on Friday afternoon in a ceremony after school.

Corbett averaged six points and nine rebounds per game for the Lady Cavaliers this season. She also had two blocked shots per game and two steals per outing, helping her team to a 12-13 record this season.

"We think Sarah has a nice future ahead of her," said Coach Bill Watson of Pikeville College. "We like her demeanor and what she brings to the table both as a student and an athlete. We're excited to add Sarah to our family at Pikeville College."

For her career, Corbett has surpassed 750 rebounds and 100 blocked shots and holds the school record for pulling down 16 offensive rebounds in a single game.

Corbett is also a force in the classroom, having been named a KHSAA First-Team Academic member all four years at Jenkins, and has won the school's academic award for six years.

She is a four-year winner of the school's award for best free-throw percentage and has been honored for having the top field-goal percentage the last two years. She has been named her team's MVP and Best Defensive Player the last two seasons and has been named All-53rd District.

Ky. Afield Outdoors: Spring Wild Turkey Season Preview

by ART LANDER JR. KENTUCKY AFIELD

FRANKFORT - When Kentucky's spring wild turkey season opens April 16, hunters should get plenty of opportunities to match wits with the older, experienced gobblers that make the sport so challenging and exciting.

"We have a high percentage of adult birds in our flocks and they are coming into breeding season in excellent condition because of last fall's big mast (nut) crop," said

Steven Dobe, wild turkey biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "The big harvest of 2-year-old birds last season may have buffered (lessened) the number of 3-to-4 year-olds taken."

Kentucky's 23-day spring wild turkey season closes on Sunday, May 8. The youth-only season, for hunters under age 16, is the weekend of April 2-3.

Hunters should anticipate the prospect of another excellent spring season. "I think we'll see some carryover from that reproductive boom in 2008. It was such a massive hatch," said Dobe.

In the past two years there have been record harvests, but Dobe reminded hunters not "year-in" and year-out, weather is a major factor in the spring harvest. The harvest could go higher if we get four sunny, rain-free weekends.

In 2009, hunters took 29,007 turkeys. The harvest jumped to 36,097 birds last spring. Hart County led the state for the spring 2010 turkey season with 739 birds taken. Logan County was next with 703 birds, followed by Grayson County with 650 birds, then Butler County with 647 birds. Wayne County rounded out the top five with 604 birds. These harvest numbers are a remarkable turnaround from a decade ago.

"Last spring's harvest was a 94 percent increase over the 18,607 turkeys taken during the spring 2000 season," said Dobe.

Statewide, Kentucky's wild turkey flock is stable at about 225,000 birds, but growth continues in some mountain counties. "There's an obvious abundance of turkeys in eastern Kentucky," said Dobe. "That was concealed somewhat by the lack of hunting pressure."

Hunter success and turkey numbers are increasing throughout the state. The most impressive gains were in 24 counties of southeastern Kentucky. In that area, Dobe said there was a 37.5 percent increase in turkey harvest during the past season. Two counties in that region

Pikeville College men's, women's basketball players honored nationally

PIKEVILLE — With the conclusion of basketball season comes the announcement of many postseason awards and this year, Pikeville College student-athletes and a coach were ranked high among the honorees.

Kelly Wells was named Rawlings-NAIA Coach of the Year after guiding the Bears to an improbable title of the Buffalo Funds-NAIA Division I Men's Basketball National Champion.

Wells led the Bears to the first 30-win season in school history and in the national tournament became the first team to win the event by beating five seeded teams along the way. The Bears beat five of the top nine teams in the tournament en route to the crown, including the defending national champion in the opener and the No. 1 seed in Robert Morris University.

It was the second time in his career Wells has been nationally honored. He was named the national coach of the year by the high school coaches association while at Mason County.

His record of 105-56 gives him the third most wins in school history in men's basketball and lands him fifth on total basketball wins in only five years at the helm of the Bears.

Senior guard Vance Cooksey was named a Second-Team All-American by the NAIA.

The 6-0 point guard led the Mid-South Conference with an average of 18.73 points per game. He was second in assists at 5.05 and steals with 2.24 per game and finished fourth in field-goal percentage, hitting 46.9 percent.

The Chicago native

scored 693 points this season with second in the country. His total of 83 steals was good for third and his 187 assists finished sixth. He was in the Top 50 in the country in six different categories.

Senior Natiera Hinton was named Honorable-Mention All-American.

Hinton was in the nation's Top 20 in scoring with an average of 17.6 points per game. She finished fourth in the Mid-South with 2.57 steals and 1.18 blocks per game and was fifth in rebounding, pulling down 8.11 per game.

Her total of 1,763 points puts her fifth on the women's basketball all-time scoring list.

Two members of the women's basketball team were named to the 2011 Daktronics NAIA Division I Women's Basketball Scholar-Athletes team. In order to be nominated by an institution's head coach, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum grade-point average of 3.5 on a 4.0 scale and must have achieved a junior academic status to qualify for this honor.

Among the picks is senior Whitney Compton. In addition to making the team while playing both basketball and softball, she will graduate in May with a triple major of communication, English and religion.

Junior Megan Mosley was also on the academic team, majoring in education.

Cats

year's team had five players who were taken in the first round of the NBA draft, led by No. 1 overall pick John Wall, but Kentucky lost in the regional final.

But this less-heralded team has outdone that one, surprising even Calipari.

"When I saw the board, the seedings, yeah, I am a little surprised we're here," he said. "But not because of how my team was playing. I just thought the path to get here would be so ridiculous that we would have to play out of our minds or people would have to get knocked off" beforehand.

Kentucky got no help in its regional from upsets of others. The Wildcats did it all themselves.

Brandon Knight, Wall's successor at point guard, hit shots to beat Princeton and No. 1 overall seed Ohio State.

Center Josh Harrellson, a barely used reserve last year, provided much-needed bulk and surprising scoring in their tournament run.

DeAndre Liggins, a player so criticized in the past that Calipari said people urged cutting him, played sterling defense and hit a three-pointer against North Carolina that effectively clinched the victory.

All the while, there was Calipari on the sideline - cajoling, berating and the end, hugging his players.

In one sense, Kentucky won yesterday because it won the battle outside the three-point arc and fought to a stalemate in the paint against the bigger Tar Heels. The Wildcats made 12 of 22 three-pointers, including 5 of 11 by Knight, who scored a game-high 22 points and was named the regional's Most Outstanding Player. North Carolina, a poor three-point-shooting team, made only 3 of 16.

On the boards, Kentucky was outbounded by only two, led by Harrellson's eight.

But in a more important way, Kentucky won because it imposed its will on North Carolina early and showed the resilience to answer every Tar Heels thrust.

North Carolina trailed by 11 early in the second half before shedding its mysterious passivity. Tar Heels freshman forward Harrison Barnes scored eight straight points to pull North Carolina to within two points, and North Carolina finally tied the game on a pair of free throws by center

But Knight hit another three-pointer to give the Wildcats back the lead.

Liggins followed with the game's biggest plays. With Kentucky up by one point with 1:02 left, North Carolina's Kendall Marshall drove down the lane for what looked to be a layup. But Liggins came from behind to block the shot. He then knocked down a three-pointer for a four-point lead with 38 seconds left.

North Carolina could not summon more magic.

In the final, seconds, Calipari summoned Liggins to the sideline, kissed his forehead and embraced him.

The game ended fittingly. Harrellson cradled a rebound of an airballed three, waited for time to expire and flung the ball high into the air.

"A lot of people doubted us this year," Harrellson said. "A lot of people really didn't think we would be the team we are. We know we struggled early in the season, but we lost a couple of close games we should have won. We really pulled it together as a team. And we're back now."

made the top 10 in harvest for the state: Wayne County was fifth with 604 birds taken and Pulaski was eighth with 576 birds taken.

Both of these counties are typical of the region - hilly terrain, large tracts of public land, and lots of potential for finding a good place to hunt. "It's a matrix of forested and open land, with good nesting habitat," said Dobej.

Kentucky has an estimated 90,000 wild turkey hunters. The hunter success rate in 2010 was about 40 percent.

Wild turkey restoration in Kentucky began in 1978. At that time, the statewide flock was estimated at roughly 2,380 birds. Biologists started live-trapping turkeys in 1981 and gradually increased the number of birds caught in-state for Kentucky's stocking program.

From 1978 through 1997, 6,760 birds were relocated on 430 sites across Kentucky. Restoration was completed in 1997 when Kentucky's wild turkey population had increased to around 130,000 birds.

The spring season limit is two bearded turkeys per hunter, but hunters can only take one bird per day. Any wild turkey with a visible beard may be taken, including bearded hens, which typically make up less than one percent of the harvest statewide. In some wild turkey populations, a higher percentage of hens may grow beards. Hens' beards are shorter and thinner than gobblers' beards.

Hunters are reminded that hunting over bait, such as grain, seed or manufactured animal feed, is illegal. Feeding wildlife outside the outline of a home (the area immediately surrounding a home or group of homes) is prohibited March 1 through

It is a hunter's responsibility to know if an area has been baited. By law an area is considered baited for 30 days after all bait has been removed.

While it is legal to use locator calls such as a crow or an owl call prior to the season, it is illegal for hunters to mimic the sounds of a wild turkey from March 1 until opening day of the spring season.

For complete regulations regarding Kentucky's spring wild-turkey season, visit the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources website at: fwky.gov.

down" of Terrance Jones. He picked an odd time to become a freshman, or perhaps he's just worn down from the grind of playing 37 games.

At any rate, they've been tremendous.

What has been well documented is the tremendous contributions they've gotten from the three upperclassmen.

Josh Harrellson has become one of my all-time favorite Cats. I've always loved a rebounder, and he does it like none other. I've always maintained that, for the most part, rebounding is effort. You have to be skilled to hit three's on a regular basis. You have to have talent to lead the break.

You need desire - the want to get to the loose ball more than the other nine guys on the floor - to rebound. He does this phenomenally.

Darius Miller is as quiet a basketball player as you'll see. Rarely does he change expression or make a gesture. He just plays the game. Sometimes it may appear he's playing at a little less intensity than the rest, but I don't believe that's the case. He's final after the Ole Miss debacle he'd never pass up a big shot and he's stuck to his guns so far.

But in my estimation, the difference in this team now and this team six weeks ago is DeAndre Liggins. You can say the MVP is point guard Brandon Knight, and to that I have no answer. But he's been doing that all season.

In the tournament run, Liggins has really stepped it up. He can defend, he can be a headache to the most skilled of offensive players and he will rebound.

On the offensive end, however, he has been Mr. Big Shot. I found it funny in Sunday's postgame press conference that the first question for the student-athletes was to Knight about his late three. Part of his answer, and I'll paraphrase here, was to correctly say the one

Liggins hit in the closing minute was bigger.

So now, we've reached Houston. Somehow, some way, Kentucky is in the Final Four. It's an easy argument that nobody saw any of these four coming. Personally, I have only one of the remaining teams in my bracket. I correctly got UConn there. In fact, I have them in the finals.

At this point I'd gladly pay my money to the folks who run my pools to see Kentucky keep that from happening.

It's hard to imagine what the weekend will hold. But I wouldn't be surprised now if Kentucky won it. It goes against many of my beliefs about this coach and team, but in this wild, unbelievable season, it wouldn't surprise me at all.

I've already missed this team by about three rounds. Here's hoping they have two more in them. I've been "wrong, wrong, wrong" before. But admit it. You have Boris Karloff returns to the franchise that made him a household word in this shaky sequel that casts him as the last descendant of Baron Von Frankenstein.

The film opens with an awesome sequence. A young lady comes running towards the camera screaming in abject terror, while a hulking brute (with a nasty limp) shuffles after her. The location is remote and the fog is thick enough to slash with a knife.

The lady turns a corner and finds herself trapped between the creature and a murky pond. She opts to get wet, but this critter is not afraid of water and plunges after her. The beast grabs her in a chokehold and hastens the process by showing her head under water. A voice calls out, "Cut!" and we realize we have been punked; it was all a movie.

Actually, these people are filming a schlocky television documentary on the history of the "Frankenstein" legend. To this end, they have hired the last remaining member of the family to let them use his ancestral home as their prime location. They are a slimy crew that include a fast-talking director, his backstabbing publicist and a determined young actress. Frankenstein is a sad and somewhat disheveled dude whose tired appearance owes to having been captured and tortured by the Nazis during World War II.

The television crew is also staying in Frankenstein's castle, and most of the action is set there. Frankenstein proves to be an awkward host, but the place looks more modern and even sports an enormous aquarium as the centerpiece of the living room. Unfortunately, the basement rocks a secret laboratory, where Frankenstein is trying to keep up the family business by attempting to reanimate the dead using nuclear energy.

This Frankenstein is a bit amateurish and allows his butler to see his experiment. This means he has to go and he does — but not before donating his brain to the experiment. The doc has a second klutz episode and drops eyeballs he has collected for the monster. This necessitates sending out his creature, without the benefit of eyesight. This leads to much confusion, as one of the screen's most awkward monsters goes on a mini-rampage that also knocks over a lot of stuff.

The ending finds the monster turning on the wicked doctor and accidentally causing a reactor leak that wipes out the pair and pre-dates "The China Syndrome" by 20 years.

This is hokey but great fun, thanks to a sly turn by Karloff. He is perfectly at home with the material, though the action never gets better than in the opening sequence. The film does a decent job of parodying the genre. Karloff appears to be winking at the audience, especially when he is called upon to play the organ and deliver an evil laugh.

The self-centered television crew is a jaded poke at the industry, which was beginning to challenge the popularity of going to the movies; Howard Koch direct-

IN PERFORMANCE

Singers, songwriters take part in Red Bud Fest

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PAINTSVILLE — Staci Carriere, a Floyd County native, will be one of a group of young singers and songwriters who will be performing today at the Country Music Highway Museum in Paintsville as part of the Red Bud Festival on Friday.

Carriere is a freshman at Middle Tennessee State University where she is enrolled in the music industry program with an emphasis on songwriting. According to information provided by Goodtime Productions, "Staci is a Kentucky Opry member and has been performing on stage since she was 6-years-old. She has already recorded an EP with six of her original songs. Within just a short time in Tennessee, Staci has already won a college-wide songwriting contest and was invited to perform in two major songwriting festivals in Florida and Memphis. In addition to her singing/songwriting, she plays the skulele, fiddle and keyboards. Her goal is to become a full time musical performer."

Also scheduled to perform at the concert are Bronson Bush, Kestin Howar and Johanna Day.

Carriere and Bush also performed at the Red Bud Festival last year.

The concert is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. on Friday. The cost is $5 for adults. Children ages 12 and under are admitted for free.

DINNER DIVA

Roasted — Ideas for leftover roast

So you bought a gigantic, on sale roast beef, did you? Want to know what to do with the leftovers so you can get every scrap out of it? Here then are four recipes that will get your leftover roast "cooking" again! Enjoy!

- 1. Roast Beef Soup
Serves 6
1 1/2 cups roast beef chopped
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, crushed
6 cups beef broth
2 large carrots, peeled and sliced
2 large potatoes, peeled and sliced
1 teaspoon dried parsley or 1 tablespoon fresh parsley, chopped fine
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

In a large soup pot, heat oil until hot, add onion and garlic. Cook until onion is clear. Add everything else and bring to a boil. Turn down, cover, and simmer until potatoes and carrots are done. About 45 minutes.

- 2. Open Faced Hot Roast Beef Sandwiches Makes as many as you have leftovers for.
This one is really simple! Toast sour dough bread, top with gravy and heated leftover roast beef, ta da! Just like in the diner. Serve with a nice big green salad.
- 3. Roast Beef Enchilada Casserole
Serves 6
2 cups leftover roast beef, sliced into thin strips
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 green bell pepper, chopped

- 1 yellow bell pepper, chopped
  - 1 red bell pepper, chopped
  - 1 onion, chopped
  - 2 green onions, chopped
  - 1 teaspoon cumin
  - 2 cloves garlic, peeled, minced
  - 1 1/2 cups chunky salsa
  - 6 corn tortillas
  - 1 cup cheddar cheese, shredded
  - 1/2 cup Greek yogurt
- In a skillet, heat oil over medium high heat. Add peppers, onions, cumin, and garlic. Cook until onion is soft. Add beef, and 3/4 cup of salsa. Spoon the mixture in equal parts into each tortilla and wrap. Place in 11x7 prepared pan, side by side, seam side down. Spoon remaining salsa over all, cook for about 20 minutes in a 350 degree oven. Top with cheese, return to oven for 10 more minutes until cheese is melted. Serve with a dollop of Greek yogurt.

Thank you for faithfully reading the Family Medicine® column. Staffing changes have driven us to make the hard decision to discontinue the column. You might find the Web site of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, <http://health.nih.gov>, helpful as a reliable source for general information about health conditions. On behalf of all who have been involved with the column over the years, we wish you well, happy and safe.

Q I had a benign growth removed from my chest about six months ago, now I have this really big, ugly, pink scar that keeps growing. Someone told me it's a "keloid." Is it dangerous? Should I go back and have it removed?

A Keloid scars are an overgrowth of collagen, the substance that helps wounds heal. They are benign but can cause some discomfort and cosmetic distress. Keloids, like all scars, occur where skin has been cut or damaged by anything from an accident or a surgical procedure to a body piercing or acne.

The body produces collagen just below the top layer of skin to fill in breaks in the skin. Normally, collagen "knows" when it's no longer needed. But some people keep producing collagen, so the scar keeps growing. If the overgrowth follows the boundaries of the original injury but is slightly raised, the resulting scar is called a hypertrophic scar, and these often fade over time. But if the scar extends both up and beyond the original injury, it's deemed a keloid.

Keloids are generally shiny, pink and dome-shaped, and they're usually firm. They seem to run in families and are more common in people of African and Asian descent. Keloids can occur anywhere on the body but are most common on the chest, upper back, shoulder and earlobes (after piercing). A keloid may form one time out not another. Usually, keloids cause no symptoms, but some people experience itching and tenderness while they're growing. Also, the site of the keloid may cause problems, such as a keloid on the bottom of the foot.

Aside from the appearance of the keloid, itself, another cosmetic issue is dark pigmentation that occurs if the scar is overexposed to sun within the first year it's forming. The scar will tan darker than the skin around it, and usually, the difference in color is permanent.

I tell my patients to put a patch or band aid over the scar if they're going to be in the sun. While this, too, will result in a scar that is a different color than the skin around it, at least it's a temporary difference, and the skin tones should even out the following year. And remember: scar or no scar, you should always use a high SPF sunscreen.

In more than 50 percent of cases, surgery to remove keloids results in increased scarring, but advances are being made to improve this number. Other remedies exist that can help, but it is very difficult to completely remove a keloid.

Cortisone injections can help flatten it. These are repeated monthly. Cryosurgery — freezing with liquid nitrogen — may also help flatten the scar, but it also can discolor the skin. Some physicians have used lasers to treat keloids, but the outcomes have not been stellar. Some are also trying lasers plus cortisone. Finally, there are some over-the-counter products, such as silicone sheeting, that have shown good results, but only with very long-term treatment.

Ask your family doctor about the scar. He or she may recommend that you see a dermatologist or plastic surgeon.

GOOD HEALTH

Triptans offer some relief from migraines

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please write about migraine headaches. My granddaughter, age 22, suffers from them. She is a college student and also works. What causes these headaches? — E.F.

ANSWER: Migraines start out as one-sided throbbing headaches that can last 24 or more hours. As time passes, the entire head might hurt. Along with the pulsating pain, nausea often strikes, and sometimes people have to vomit. Migraine sufferers are sensitive to light and sound, so they seek a quiet, dark room where they can lie down.

The cause of these headaches is controversial. A popular theory is that a wave of slow electrical activity spreads over the brain and inflames its coverings, which produces the pain.

The above "cause" of migraines, I am sure, is not what you wanted. You want to know what brings them on. Triggers for migraine include too little or too much sleep, skipping meals, strong odors, bright lights and loud music. Women often find that menstrual periods will usher in the headaches. Stress, both physical and emotional, can start them. Foods that often serve to initiate a migraine are chocolate, cheeses, fatty foods, sausage, salami, oranges, tomatoes, onions, red wine, peanuts and hot dogs.

In the past 20 years, triptans have brought a marked change in the treatment of migraines.

Sumatriptan (Imitrex), zolmitriptan (Zomig), almotriptan (Axert), rizatriptan (Maxalt), frovatriptan (Frova) and naratriptan (Amerge) can control severe migraines and are available as pills, nasal sprays and self-administered injections. For less-intense pain, aspirin, Tylenol, ibuprofen and naproxen are sufficient.

When migraines recur with disrupting regularity, preventive medicines have a place in treatment. They include propranolol (Inderal) and verapamil.

The booklet on headaches deals with the common varieties, including migraines. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 901W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My biggest health problem, if you can call it a health problem, is getting to sleep at night. I lie in bed for what seems an eternity before I fall asleep. A friend told me she had the same problem and cured it with melatonin. I'd like to try it if it's safe. Is it? I am 76 years old and would like a few years of good sleep. — T.R.

ANSWER: Melatonin is a hormone secreted by the pineal gland, a small gland attached to the brain. It conditions the body to adapt to day-night cycles. Melatonin secretion is 10 times greater at night, with peak secretion occurring between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Evidence suggests that this hormone shortens the time it takes to fall asleep and lengthens the time spent in uninterrupted sleep. Melatonin production wanes with age, and its lack could explain your sleep problems.

It also has been used for shift workers to get their brains and bodies conditioned to new sleep-wake cycles, and travelers sometimes take it to prevent jet lag.

Melatonin isn't sold as a drug, so it's not closely supervised. Serious side effects haven't been reported. A safe starting dose is 0.2 mg to 0.3 mg.

Salome's Stars Weekly Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It isn't always easy for the rambunctious Aries to give a second thought to their often spur-of-the-moment choices. But aspects favor rechecking a decision before declaring it final.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Information emerges for the business-driven Bovine who feels ready to restart a stalled project. Be prepared to make adjustments as needed at any time during the process.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Part of you wants to complete plans for an upcoming event, while your other self wants to see how things develop first. Compromise by moving ahead with your plans while being open to change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An unexpected change in a relationship could end up a problem or could lead to a much-needed and too-long-delayed reassessment of a number of matters. The choice is yours to make.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Time for the Lion to total the pluses and minuses resulting from recent personal and/or professional decisions. See what worked, what didn't and why, and base your next big move on the results.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The clever Virgo can make persuasion work by presenting a case built on hard facts. Sentiment might touch the heart, but it's good, solid information that invariably wins the day.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You usually can win over the most stubborn skeptics on your own. But this time you can benefit from supporters who have been there, done that and are willing to speak up on your behalf.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You win admiration for your determination to do the right thing. Don't be distracted from that course, despite the offer of tempting alternatives that might suddenly turn up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While you still need to maintain control of a dominant situation, a new development emerges, making the task easier and the outcome potentially more rewarding.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) New factors might have a positive effect on a still-pending matter, but only if the information proves to be credible. Trusted colleagues might be able to offer needed advice.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The week favors moderation, especially if a health problem is involved. Resist the impulse to do more than might be good for you at this time. You can catch up later.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You could feel more than a mite upset by someone or some people who might be creating problems for you. Find out why they won't change their ways. Their reasons might surprise you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You know how to inspire others to do their best by setting a persuasive example of your own.

A PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT FROM R.D. "DOC" MARSHALL FLOYD COUNTY JUDGE/EXECUTIVE

It appears that someone is spreading a rumor that I will not run again for the office of Floyd County Judge/Executive in four years.

I want to publicly squelch that rumor once-and-for-all. After receiving the wonderful vote of confidence that resulted in a great victory for and by you the good people of Floyd County.

I will be, with your help, your Floyd County Judge/Executive for many years to come and look forward to doing my very best to represent Floyd County at the highest level possible.

I love Floyd County and my loyal and true supporters. May we grow in numbers so that we can work hard and lead our county for many years in the future.

My family and I felt it was time to put down any rumors. So you know that I want to continue to be your Judge/Executive for many years to come.

May God Bless.

Why is excessive idling considered severe duty?

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray: Why in the world is "excessive idling" defined as "severe duty" in all owner's manuals? I read in one column that idling is harder on the valve train than running at red-line! What's the explanation? Lower oil pressure? Hotter oil? I'm crossing my fingers for an answer, as I've asked this question many times of many different people, and I still don't have any idea. — Frank

CLICK & CLACK Talk Cars

TOM: Well, I happen to be an excessive idler, Frank. And my ex-wives will all tell you that having me around was definitely "severe duty."

RAY: "Severe duty," in automotive terms, is a collection of conditions listed in most owner's manuals. If you meet those conditions, it's recommended that you change your oil more frequently than everyone else.

TOM: In the old days, excessive idling was listed probably because cars ran so rich. Carburetors dumped buckets of gasoline into the cylinders. Some of it was combusted, and some of it wasn't. The gasoline that didn't combust just ran down the walls of the cylinders, and some of it snuck past the rings into the oil pan.

RAY: That diluted the oil with gasoline. And since diluted oil doesn't lubricate as well as pure oil, it makes sense to change it more often.

TOM: Nowadays, cars rarely run rich. But the reason they recommend more-frequent oil changes for excessive idlers — like police cars and taxis — is because it means your engine is running for more hours than your mileage indicates.

RAY: In other words, if you idle in front of the sensor center for five hours a day trying to get a check like my brother does, you'll have added zero miles to your odometer, yet your oil will have been working to lubricate your engine for five hours.

TOM: And if you wait until 7,500 miles go by before changing the oil, your oil may be overdue for a change by then.

RAY: This is one reason why manufacturers like GM and Honda now have oil-change indicators on the dashboard. They measure the amount of time the engine runs and the conditions under which it runs, and then use an algorithm to figure out how much life is left in your oil.

TOM: It's a better system than using mileage alone. Not only do you not wait too long between oil changes, but you don't change the oil too often, either. So you save money and room in our landfills.

Smart-stop technology is coming, but not for older cars.

Dear Tom and Ray: I wonder if it is possible to take one feature from a hybrid car and use it on a regular car to save gas.

When stopped at a red light or stop sign, or dead cold in a traffic jam, why can't a regular car have the feature that simply shuts off the engine and then turns it on again when you hit the gas pedal? Come to think of it, golf carts do this, too. Is it some Foreign Oil or Big Three conspiracy that keeps us from benefiting from this ingenious fuel-saving feature? Or am I missing something very obvious as to why this could not be installed in my trusty 2006 Saturn Ion? — Luther RAY: You already have that feature, Luther. It's called the key.

TOM: Actually, you're looking for an automatic system. The good news is that it's on its way. A number of manufacturers are planning to add "stop-start" technology to their non-hybrid new cars in coming years.

RAY: Engineers say that gas mileage can be increased by as much as 5 percent to 10 percent with stop-start, depending on how much you what? Stop and start?

TOM: But you can't easily retrofit it to your 2006 Saturn Ion. The problem is that your car's starting system, which consists of a 12-volt battery and a 12-volt starter motor, is designed to start the car only a few times a day. It's not built to start the engine hundreds of times a day. And it won't hold up over time.

RAY: Even if it did hold up, starting it so many times would eventually damage the gear on the flywheel. And replacing the flywheel on most cars requires removing the engine and transmission, which runs into big money.

TOM: What you'd need is a more robust starting system, and that's really something you have to design into the car from the beginning.

RAY: A popular system in use by cars that have start-stop systems is a belt-driven alternator that doubles as a starter motor. So when the engine is running, the engine turns a belt, which spins the alternator, which charges the battery. And when the engine's not running, the alternator becomes a starter motor, and it turns the belt, which starts the engine. That avoids the flywheel altogether.

TOM: But while you can't install a system like this on your old Ion, Luther, we're guessing your next new car will have something like this. In fact, we think all cars will have start-stop at some point. Sooner rather than later.

by TOM DOTY TIMES COLUMNIST

A new movie from the revived "Hammer Studios" and the Academy Award-winning film for best performance by an actress combined to offer viewers plenty of options for choice chills this week.

"Black Swan" — Anyone who thinks that ballet is boring should check out this flick from Darren Arranofsky ("The Wrestler"), which tells a chilling tale of mental torment inspired by "Swan Lake."

Natalie Portman won her first Oscar as a tight-lipped dancer who gets promoted to the lead in her company's production of "Swan Lake." The problem becomes keeping the role, when her director begins courting another dancer, while her stage mother applies the pressure better than Harley Race employing the spinning toe-hold.

Things get creepy in a hurry and a lot of blood is shed before the eerie conclusion. The supporting cast is also good here, with Barbara Hershey doing an outstanding job as Portman's overbearing mother. Wynona Ryder is also good in a small but effective role as last year's model.

"The Resident" — Hammer Films is back and this effort commemorates the event by casting Christopher Lee in a small role. The story finds Hillary Swank moving into an upscale apartment in New York City after divorcing her husband. It's a great place with a wonderful view, except she can't shake the feeling she's being watched. This is a horror movie so I'll just say that the terror is right under foot, and she better watch out. Jeffery Dean Morgan ("Supernatural") costars.

"Mad Men: Season 4" — AMC's excellent series about an ad agency in the 1960s gets even better with this last season. Now that the ad guys have created their own agency, they have to work twice as hard to protect it, while events seem to conspire against them. The show is anchored by lead actor Jon Hamm. His Don Draper character begins to come apart this season and finally comes to grips with his past.

Meanwhile, the agency loses its best client and must struggle to bring in the top clients.

"Xena and Hercules: Season 2" — The second season of the fantasy favorites arrive on DVD with affordable cover prices. Tongue-in-cheek action fare that was shot in New Zealand and benefits from the beautiful locations. The action sequences are topnotch, as are the scripts and production values. These series totally rock and offers yuks and thrills. Kevin Sorbo puts a human face on demi-god Hercules, while Lucy Lawless rules the roost as an action heroine who could hold her own against any dude.

Next week brings big budget sequels with a new "Narnia" adventure and a revamped version of "Tron."

ed and would prove to be a better producer, having put together "An Inland" and "The Odd Couple."

The biggest blunder is the monster. It spends the whole movie wrapped in bandages and its head is so bulbous that you would think it's a mummy that was wrapped up before it could ditch the lampshade it was wearing. Luckily the film is featured alongside three other horror romps featuring Karloff and Bela Lugosi. You also get "The Walking Dead," "You'll Find Out," and "Zombies on Broadway." Extras include commentary by Tom Weaver, who has published interviews with all of the horror greats. Best line: "Shuter, yours is not the brain that I would have chosen, but at least you are obedient." 1958, unrated.

Strange ... but true

It was American educator Laurence J. Peter who made the following sage observation: "An economist is an expert who will know tomorrow why the things he predicted yesterday didn't happen today." Incidentally, he also came up with what's known as the Peter Principle: "In a hierarchy, every employee tends to rise to his level of incompetence."

Ever wonder why it's called the silver screen? In the early days of the cinema industry, the projection screens were embedded with real silver to enhance the reflective nature of the surface.

Greyhounds have better eyesight than any other breed of dog.

Worried about grocery prices going up? How's this for a pricey egg: In 2007, a Fabergé egg was sold at auction for nearly $16.5 million. Good thing the ones used in your omelets aren't encrusted with jewels!

Those who study such things say that Americans drink more carbonated beverages every year than coffee, tea, sports drinks and juice combined.

A legislator in the Louisiana State House of Representatives once introduced a bill that would make it illegal to charge a bald man more than 25 cents for a haircut.

The plant formally known as titan arum produces the largest cluster of flowers in the world, sometimes reaching more than 10 feet in height. What's perhaps even more notable, though, is its odor: The plant gives off a strong smell that is most often compared to that of a decomposing animal. Hence the plant's more common name, the corpse flower.

Thought for the Day "First there is a time when we believe everything, then for a little while we believe with discrimination, then we believe nothing whatever, and then we believe everything again — and, moreover, give reasons why we believe." — Georg Christoph Lichtenberg
