Charge alleges endangerment of P'burg mayor

by SHELDON COMPTON STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG – An Allen woman is now facing a charge of first-degree wanton endangerment against Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin.

According to police, on April 9, Brenda K. Lewis, 44, of Allen, blocked the road with her vehicle as Fannin was driving along Cliff Road to his residence. When the mayor turned around to travel in the opposite direction, away from Lewis, the 44-year-old 'ran him off the road," a police report says.

In Fannin's complaint, issued to the city police department on the day of the alleged incident, he told officers he had been run off the road, while transporting another adult and four children, all under the age of six, adding that one of the children in his vehicle was 18

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month

by DR. WILLIAM SMITHWICK

PRESIDENT & CEO, SUNRISE CHILDREN'S SERVICES

Childhood is supposed to be an age of innocence, but for too many in the Commonwealth it's a time of suffering. In 2009 a report revealed that Kentucky led the nation in the number of children who die as a result of abuse and neglect. Statistics show that every minute in Kentucky, two children are victims of abuse and neglect that can leave emotional and physical scars that last a lifetime. No doubt there are countless more cases that go unreported.

What's worse is the fact that many of these victimized children will grow up likely to continue the pattern of abuse. It's a deadly eycle that claims lives, destroys families, harms communities and haunts future generations.

There's no overnight solution but for over 142 years. Suprise Children's Services has been working to serve wounded children who long for a safe home and the support of caring adults. Over the course of time, specific needs, challenges and methods of helping these children have changed, but the core of our work continues to center on providing hope and healing to young people who have suffered from abuse and neglect.

The first step in helping protect anyone from a dangerous situation is to provide them with a safe haven. Through a statewide network of foster homes and residential centers, Sunrise offers a refuge for young people who have experienced physical, sexual or emotional abuse and neglect. or emotional abuse and neglect.

It is amazing to see the kids in our care change as we begin to meet their physical, emotional and spiritual needs. Kids must have love, stability, direction and structure to thrive, and in time we see these kids respond positively to our efforts.

Success comes when we see a child who struggled socially or academically because of the trauma endured at home, blossom into a young person full of potential. Success comes when a into a young person full of potential. Success comes when a young child whose medical ailments caused by abuse or neglect are treated and they become healthy and active. Success comes when we see a child, whether a toddler or a teen, smile because they finally feel safe, secure and valued.

Ultimate success however comes not from helping children who have been abused, but rather acting proactively to help present child abuse in the first place. Towards that end, Sunrise and other agencies are optimistic about efforts to provide in-home contraction to a trief amilies. Stepping in to help agency who counseling to at-risk families. Stepping in to help parents who might need assistance in learning how to cope with the everyday stresses of raising a family is key in not only stopping abuse, but possibly breaking a cycle of abuse that has plagued a particular family for generations.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month and we'd like to invite all Kentuckians to join in the effort to bring awareness to this tragedy that harms thousands of children in every part of our state. It's a great opportunity for you to partner with Sunrise or other child advocacy groups to help. You can find out more about Sunrise at www.sunrise.org, or to report child abuse, use the Kentucky Child Abuse Hotline at 1-800-752-6200.

A legislative perspective

by REP. GREG STUMBO

This week, a little before sunrise on April 12th, the United States officially began commemorating the 150th anniversary of the Civil War.

It goes without saying that Kentucky played a major role in this conflict. In one of the more obvious ways, we are the birthplace of both President Abraham Lincoln and Confederate President Jefferson Davis, who were born just eight months apart and less than 100 miles away from each other.

We contributed in many other ways as well. It was a native Kentuckian, for example, who was the commanding officer at South Carolina's Fort Sumter when it was overtaken by Confederate forces in the war's first battle. Incidentally, not a single soldier was killed in the two days of fighting.

Major Robert Anderson was not a single soldier was killed in the two days of fighting.

Major Robert Anderson was hailed as a national hero in the North for his actions, and he returned triumphantly at the war's conclusion to re-raise the flag that had been surrendered exactly four years earlier. That high point took place on the same day as the era's lowest point: the assassination of President Lincoln.

As a border state, Kentucky had strong allegiances to both the North and the South. The governor at the time, for example, favored the Confederacy while the General Assembly supported the Union. We were officially neutral, but still had a star in both flags; Bowling Green was the state's Confederate capital for a brief time.

Confederate capital for a brief time.

About 100,000 Kentuckians served in the Union army, and-while numbers for the South are sketchy, it's estimated to be as many as 40,000.

About 20 months ago, Governor Beshear authorized a new commission to recognize Kentucky's contributions to a war that ended up taking the lives of 30,000 Kentuckians and 625,000 soldiers overall, or nearly as much as o'ur country lost in Wyll, WWII, Korea and Vietnam combined.

The 25-member commission,

The 25-member commission, which will be dissolved at the end of 2015, is in charge of coordinating activities tied to the war's sesquicentennial anniversary and increasing public awareness, including in our schools. Kentucky has ties to two national efforts that had roots in the Civil War or the causes leading to it. Maysville is home to the National Underground Railroad Museum, which highlights the long journey many slaves took to reach freedom, while President Lincoln signed into law what remains the highest award given for valor in battle: The Medal of Honor.

Nearly 3,500 have been awarded since then, and all but one have been presented to men. The lone woman Mary Edwards Walker was the first female—surgeon in the U.S. Army and later spent time in Louisville as a supervisor of a women's prison of 2011, Louisville will lost the Congressional

In the fall of 2011, Louisville will host the Congressional Medal of Honor Society Convention on what will be the 150th anniversary of that award. There are of course many other contributions Kentucky made in the Civil War, and it was President Lincoln himself who underscored just how important we were to the cause. "I hope to have God on my side," he said, "but I must have Kentucky."

PRESTONSBURG — Wyatt's Wishing Well Fundraiser, an event to raise money for Wyatt Carcione, an infant afflicted with Poland's Syndrome, was held on Saturday at Destination Saturday at Community Church Prestonsburg, and family mem-bers say the event was a huge suc-

"This fundraiser began as a vision from local photographer, Deana Johnson, to dedicate a day of photography sessions to a dear friend in need." said Sondra Lafferty Riney, a relative of Wyatt Carcione. "With the enlistwhat carcione. With the enist-ment of other photographers and volunteers, a committee of nine ladies was formed. After much collaboration, these ladies transformed a vision into a dream and created Wyatt's Wishing Well. The fundraiser was more than a success. I don't even know what word could describe it."

According to Wyatt's mother, Amanda Ratliff Carcione, a native of Prestonsburg, he is currently in Vanderbilt Children's Hospital in Nashville, Tenn.

After is diagnosis of Poland Syndrome at birth, Wyatt faced four surgeries. The first was the placement of a tube for feeding purposes at three-weeks-old. The second surgery occurred when Wyatt was two-months-old to secure his aorta to his sternum to help fix the compression of his airway. Because of complications during this surgery, another surgery was needed to help repair the function to his diaphragm. Unfortunately, this surgery did not remedy his breathing issues, and a tracheotomy was needed. Wyatt will oventually become strong enough to live without the tracheotomy, but it could take as long as five years.

"Wyatt's Wishing Well would like to express our gratitude to volunteers who worked so hard to local businesses and individuals who were so generous with their who were so generous with their donations," Riney said. "Thanks donations," Riney said. "Thanks to Destination Community Church for allowing us to hold our fundraiser in your church. To our community who came out to support this benefit, your overwhelming response of encouragement and love will truly touch the lives of this courageous family. We are extremely touches and grateful for all the efforts put into this benefit."

Castle's two homers lift Bears over Rio Grande

PIKEVILLE – Three Pikeville College home runs helped the Bears to a sweep of Rio Grande on Thursday, night. Pikeville defeated Rio Grande 5-2 in back-to-back games. Pikeville improved to 14-15 on the season and 5-11 in Mid-South Conference play, running its win streak to four heading into Friday afternoon's doubleheader at Berea College. The Bears will return home on Saturday when they host the University of the Cumberlands at 1 p.m. at Paul Butcher Field.

Gaine One: Freshman Emily Castle (Williamsport/Paintsville High School) blasted two home runs, accounting for all five runs. She ripped a solo shot in the second to open scoring and a grand slam in the fourth.

Castle was also solid in the field, accounting for six putouts and five assists in the win. Senior Corey Huston, sophomores Kayla Morgan and Hannah Vinson and freshman Jordyn Hale added singles in the win.

Morgan got the win, scattering eight hits over seven innings.

Game Two: Vinson opened a three-run third inning with a solo home run to put the Bears on top for good.

After Rio Grande posted a single-run in the top of the first, the Bears tied it in the bottom half: Huston scored them thome run. Singles by Hale and Castle kept the Inning title and castle kept the Inning title tacked on an insurance run in the bottom of the sixth when junior Ashleigh Stanley singled and scored on a wild pitch.

Senior Whitney Compton allowed only five hits and struck out two while going the distance in the win. She improved to 6-5 while lowering her ERA to 2.36, allowing two unearned runs in the decision.

Vinson and Stanley had two hits apiece in the win. Huston, Hale, Castle and Maynard also had hits.

Pikeville College to host baseball alumni weekend

PIKEVILLE – The Pikeville College Baseball Alumni Weekend will be held on April 15-16 as the Bears entertain WVU Tech in the final weekend of the regular season.

The Bears would like the honor of having all former baseball players to come back for a weekend of baseball, reminiscing and taking batting practice.

On Friday the first pitch between the Bears and Tech is at 1:00. Following the games there will be a reception at former Bear pitcher Tommy Chamberlain's home and all alums are welcome. Food and refreshments will be provided.

On Saturday, the baseball alums will take batting practice starting at 10 a.m. and get the opportunity to meet and speak with the current Bears. The alums will also get the opportunity to go out on their position and stand during the national anthem.

"We are very excited about having the former baseball players being a part of the program again,"said Coach Robert Taylor, himself a former Bear catcher. "We hope they will all; come back and enjoy a great weekend of baseball action."

Threshold for new high school sports championships revised

KHSAA set to ponsor bowling in 2011-12 schoolyear

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON - The KHSAA Board of Control voted to revise the threshold from 20 percent to 10 percent the participation of schools required for the KHSAA to sponsor a sports championship at its regular meeting on Monday. The Association's triennial survey is being distributed and a new threshold of 10 percent could open the door for the addition of more sports, including archery, lacrosse and bass fishing in the com-ing years.

including archery, lacrosse and bass fishing in the coming years.

"By lowering the number of schools required to sponsor a championship sport we think it might actually encourage more schools to offer a sport and grow that sport at a faster pace than it otherwise might do," said KHSAA Commissioner Julian Tackett. "Any time we can pick up a new group of student-athletes who can compete at the sport they love, while giving them structure and a reason to excel in the classroom with their academic progress monitored, there is really no downside to it."

The Board has already approved bowling as a championship sport for the 2011-12 school year after survey results indicated more than 80 schools plan to offer the sport next year, with another 45 vowing to offer the sport within five years. Bowling, a winter sport, will begin practice on Oct. 15 and will hold regional tournaments the week of March 11-17, 2012, with the state tournament scheduled for March 23-24, 2012. for March 23-24, 2012

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

Borrowing from the pantry for pest-free soils

by SANDY MILLER HAYS

Done any good worrying lately about methyl bromide?

Done any good worrying lately about methyl bromide?
Yes, I know, it's allergy season, it's ax season, and you're thinking, "What the heck is methyl bromide, anyway?"
If so, you're probably not a farmer. That's because farmers have been using methyl bromide since Betty Boop was hot stuff. (By the way, did you know that Betty Boop was modeled after "It" girl Clara Bow? In fact, that's reportedly why her name has three syllables, just like Clara's.)
Methyl bromide's been such a long-running hit because it works. It wipes out a wide spectrum of crop pests, including weeds, nematodes and plant pathogens—those natural nasties that cause disease in our favorite fruits and veggies.

But, alas, that's not all that methyl bromide appears to do. These days it's subject to, strict environmental controls because it depletes the Earth's o'zone layer. That's why, as part of an international agreement, ground a separation of the sandy spoduction tool.

"That's especially tough in Florida, where the sandy voils limit organic place to snuggie through the cooler months.

This is a high-stakes game for the Florida growers. For example, freshmarket tomatoes and bell peppers, both raised in Florida with methyl bromide, netted growers there a combined $889 million in 2008.

Ornamental caladiums are produced largely with methyl bromide, and theyre a $15 million crop in Florida. Fortunately; for many years the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) has had a very active research program on searching for alternatives to methyl bromide, and one of their latest ideas involves an ingredient as familiar as Grandma's homemade gingersnaps: molasses!

iar as Grandma's homemade ginger-snaps; molasses!
At the ARS laboratory in Fort Pierce, Fla., the scientists are raising bell peppers followed by eggplant in field tests of a biological approach that uses a combination of composted hersiler liter molasses, and what's broiler litter, molasses, and what's called anaerobic soil disinfestation, or

ASD. In ASD, a carbon source--that's where the molasses comes in--is added to the soil to stimulate microbial activity, and then the soil is covered with a clear plastic tarp. The topsoil is saturated with water and then

In this particular study, before the scientists heated the soil, they treated areas of it with different versions of organic additions: with or without poultry litter; and with 2 inches of water per acre, 4 inches per acre, or no water at all. The poultry litter boosted the soil moisture and added organic mast at all. The poultry litter boosted the soil moisture and added organic mast at all. The poultry litter boosted the soil moisture and added organic mast at all. The poultry litter boosted the soil water before the soil.

After these alterations to the soil, the scientists planted peppers in the fall and eggplant in the spring, using the type of raised-bed production system that's commonly used in Florida. And before they planted, they "doctored" the soil with Phytophthora capsici, which causes crown rot and root rot, so they'd get a better idea of their control rates. They buried packets of the pathogen six inches deep in the soil, and then retrieved the packets after three weeks of the ASD to eval-

Patricia Salyers, 71, will soon graduate from the registered nurse education program at Big Sandy Community and Technica College. She plans to take the state board exam after graduation.

LIFELONG LEARNING

Septugenarian to graduate from nursing program

BSCTC FACULTY

Patricia Salyers, of Auxier, will graduate from the nursing program at Big Sandy Community and Technical College in just six short weeks. She is completing the ambitious Registered Nurse education program and will take her state board exam after graduation.

This is a remarkable achievement for any college student of any age, but especially notable for Patricia, who celebrated her 71st birthday on March 15.

What's more, Patricia had worked as an birthday on March 15.

What's more, Patricia had worked as an L.P.N. for 'nearly' 20 years at Highlands P.N. for 'nearly' 20 years at Highlands P.N. for 'nearly' 20 years at Highlands for the present in 2005. She decided to retire when her son and daughter-in-law were preparing to have their first child and her first grandchild. For two years Patricia devoted herself to caring for her grandchild while his parents were at work, but then when the young family grew by one more, they elected to put both of their children in daycare. Patricia was at loose ends.

Although her husband was also retired, he had his own interests. A volunteer fire-fighter and avid gardener, Charles Salyers did not have a problem filling his day. But Patricia didn't know what to involve herself in. "I don't like soap operas or television and I'm not that fond of housekeeping," she says with a smile. Then, one day while she was driving along the highway, she saw a sign.

says with a smile. Then, one day while she was driving along the highway, she saw a sign.

No, not divine intervention; it was a sign for Big Sandy Community and Technical College. Without any forethought or planning, she turned her car around and followed the sign to campus. At 67 years of age, with no clear goal in mind, she reenrolled in college just for the challenge. "I enjoyed it," she said, "and got to where I looked forward" to coming to class. "They say if you don't use it, you'll lose it, she explains further. "I didn't want to stagnate, to give up."

She didn't give up and she excelled in college. Class after class, semester after semester she plugged along, achieving an extremely respectable grade point average of 3.8. Then, on a whim, once she had enough credits, she applied to the L.P.N. to R.N. Bridge Program for nursing school.

Considering the competition, during an average selection 200 students apply for the 65 slots available, Patricia didn't think she had a prayer. But then one day she got the letter saying she had been accepted. The course work and clinicals were extremely, challenging and, while the grade point average took a hit, she was surviving and, this close to graduation, perhaps even thriving?

"If it hindn't been for God. I wouldn't have made it this far," Patricia asserts. So, okay, maybe there was some divine intervention after all.

Just weeks from graduation, Patricia is looking for the next challenge, although she notes she will miss the many good friends she has made on her college journey. While she would like to work at least partitime as a nurse, she also wants to be sure and retain enough freedom to spend time with her two grandchildren, and the third on the way.

Hovever, she's still not sure she's done, with college yet, confessing with a sideways glance and a sly smile, "I might be back in August."

Annual spring concert a musical mosaic

PIKEVILLE — From rock to harmony and a band ensemble, the Pikeville College spring concert has something for everyone Pikeville College Concert Band and Choix will perform on Tuesday, April 19, at 7:30 p.m. in Chrisman Auditorium on the college campus.

Concert band selections include

"Heritage Overture" written by the leg-endary Jim Andy Caudill, a former music professor at the college. The concert band is under the direction of Nathan Varney. The concert choir performance will open with a four-part harmony of the college's alma mater and also feature the works of Kirby Shaw and Moses Hogan. The evening will close with an arrangement of "Somebody to Love," by Queen accompanied by a rock band. The concert choir is led by Janean Freeman, assistant professor of music.

The $64,000 question is:
Did it work?

The scientists found that at depths of 6 inches, the ASD treatments heated the soil to about 113 degrees Fahrenheit, which is at or just below the heat levels needed to kill many soil pathogens. They also found that nematode populations went down with the molasses/poultry litter mix, went down with the molasses/poultry litter mix.

grass weeds just as well as methyl bromide did, and the ASD treatments controlled the P. capsici in the buried packets as well as the methyl bromide did, regardless of the mix of molasses, poultry litter and water.

Sounds to me like we might have a new "recipe" for fighting back against crop pests!
