Regardless of sexual preference, city pool no place for religion

Guest View-

It seemed everything was turned upside down here last week. The Queen City of the Mountains made national press after two gay men were kicked out of the Hazard Pavilion on June 10, allegedly because of their sexual preference. Considering the number of people who claim the men were asked to leave the Pavilion because they were gay, and then the number of people who claim it was because of "excessive displays of affection" while swimming in the Pavilion pool, the verdict really is out on that. But one thing we can know for sure is that officials with the City of Hazard responded correctly in suspending a city employee who, according to a report from the City of Hazard, referenced the Bible after asking the two men to leave.

leave. Considering the funding sources of the Pavilion, which is an excellent facility we would recommend any day of the week for those seeking a good place to get fit, there is no room for religious-references in the enforcement of public policy. But perhaps the most troubling aspect of this whole fiasco is how Hazard and, in effect, south-eastern Kentucky has been stripped down once again to the stereotypical undergrowth that has been astern Kentucky has been stripped down once again to the stereotypical undergrowth that has been the proverbial thôm in our side for so long. It was just last week that we received a call from from a woman in another state expressing disgust at what she learned had happened here in central Appalachia. She assured us that Hazard was certain-ly looking poorly in the eyes of our fellow Americans. While that is not news to us — and certainly not mew either — we would contend that the issue is being blown out of proportion. The city's initial response was a good one. They put their lead attor-ney in a fact-finding investigation. The results of that investigation, which uncov-ered that a city employee undeniably made religious references when ousling the couple led to another good response: a five-day suspension without pay

I recently wrote a column suggest-ing that my 'lamestream media'' col-leagues give Michele Bachmann more love. As the most Republican of the Republican candidates, she deserved more attention, I said. They took me seriously. In the recent New Hampshire GOP debate, she emerged as the star. ful list. However, in the spirit of tardily locking the barn door, let me make this clear once and for all. Bachmann isn't a serious presi-dential candidate. Despite winning three elections for her seat in Congress, she wouldn't be a serious candidate for homeroom teacher. She could be a serious tarot card club manager, maybe — that's it. Has our media gone completely mad? Has it let one well-rehearsed performance in a single debate wipe out the memory of a long public career filled with absurd misstate-ments of fact and bizarre conspiracy theories that cross over into the Twilight Zone?

Twilight Zone? Have we forgotten who Bachmann is? Already? Here are a few of her choicer thoughts: On doing away with the mini-mum wage: "We could potentially virtually wipe out unemployment completely because we gould offer jobs at whatever level." On global warming: "It's all voodoo, nonsense, hokum, a hoax." On an energy tax: "I want peo-ple in Minnesota armed and dager-ous on the issue...because we need to fight back."

Roosevelt started the Depression by passing the "HootSmalley" Act (Herbert Hoover signed the Republican-sponsored SmootHawley Tariff Act in 1930, two years before FDR was elected), that the American Revolution started in New Hampshire (it was Massachusetts), that Jimmy Carter was responsible (during Gerald, Ford's administration),

Just how old is my father? Let's put it this way: A buddy tried insulting me with a, "yo' daddy, so old" joke last week; and I was hardly offended. How old? Really old! My father is turning 60, which seems to be a mile-stone, or a millstone: I guess it's all about how you look at life; isn't it? See how he likes it.

I could be wrong, but I am fairly certain I could now take my father in a bare-knuckled, no-holds-barred, Pier Six brawl. Don't get me wrong, the old guy is still filled with pee and vinegar, and I don't doubt he can still deliver like a barrel-chested prize fighter despite the potential legalities involved. When I was a kid, I thought 30 was old. Now I am 31, and it doesn't seem that old at all. But 60 in my book is officially old.

I-chested prize fighter,...
I could be wrong, but I am faity certain I could now take my faither in a bare-knuckled, no-holds-barred, Pier Sky brawl. Don't get me wrong, the old guy is still filled with pee and vinegar, and I don't doubt he can still deliver like a barrel-chested prize fighter. Over the years, my father mised me with the belief that he was constantly sudditioning for the part of Moe. in some upcoming 'Three Stoges' movie, always opting to give me a good old thump on the head when J was acting out of line. To this day, nine of out 10 doctors agree this drastically stunted my growth and scomehow managed to postpone puberty. which I the the I may in my mid-20s, no the me that I moving the stute royal any more than I would be daring somig more than I would be daring satisfuer's. Statisbury is delicions indeed, but nothing worth getting your growth stunted over.

Iwo transportation projects kicked off

by JARRID DEATON

FEATURES WAITER PIKEVILLE - Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear partici-pated in a ceremonial ground-breaking for two transporta-tion projects in Pike County on Monday. The projects include $8.24 million to build a bridge over creek and railroad tracks at Draffin, in Pike County, and $2 million for the construc-tion of Fishtrap Lake Road to end the isolation of the Upper Pompey area. According to information provided by Beshear's office regarding the bridge in Draffin, residents trying to reach the highway now must negotiate a steep hill to reach a low, narrow, flood-prone bridge. They also are subject negonate a steep nui to reach a low, narrow, flood-prone bridge. They also are subject to long delays when a train is on the tracks. In addition, Draffin's access road inter-sects U.S. 460 at an angle so acute as to make it vitually impossible to execute a right turn, to head erast Drivers turn to head east. Drivers wanting to go east must turn instead go west and use a roadside turnaround spot. Yeah, I figure the only way I could take my old man is to ambush him using, guerilla-like warfare in some sorta donnybrook free-for-all fracas in which I throw sand in his eyes in order to blind him. I should be careful not to provoke him too much because my father would likely pluck me up by my shoestrings, spin around like an Olympic discus par-ticipant and fing me out of the zip code like a spoiled sack of potatoes. Miners OK after 14 hours trapped in coal mine

THE MIDDLESBORO DAILY NEWS

MIDDLESBORO - Three mine maintenance workers were freed and appeared to be in good health Monday after being trapped for 14 hours in the Jellico No.1 mine just outside of Middlesboro. The miners had been trapped by rising water since about 6:40 am. The three were identified as Pamell Witherspoon, Doug Waren and Russell Asher. Dick Brown, spokesman for the and Russell Asher. Dick Brown, spokesman for the state energy and environment cabinet, said the men were able to leave the mine Monday at 8:22 p.m. "All three miners are out. They re fine. Everybody is safe. No injuries," said C.K. Lane, chief operating officer with James River Coal, which owns the mine. "We pumped the water down, and they were able to walk through the water and walk on ourside."

The men were taken to the Middlesboro Appalachian Regional Hospital for evaluation and were able to see their families there. All were to see their families there. All were reported to be in good condition. Relief was on the faces of Pernell Witherspoon's family, gathered Monday night at Middlesboro Appalachian Regional Healthcare Hospital.

Hospital: "He's doing real good," said Witherspoon's brother, Nike Witherspoon, 'He was perfect, every-one was perfect." Elaine Smith, community and patient advocate at the hospital, said the three men were evaluated and released. The men had been on dry ground about 600 feet from the mine entrance since getting caught in the mine, when officials said a collapse at the entrance sent water from a swollen drainage ditch gushing in. They were nearing the end of their shift when it happened, said Eddie Starks, an MSHA official. Starks said the men used their helmet-mounted headlamps one at a time to conserve

They were also able to communicate with rescuers via underground tele-phone as well as to one family mem-ber each. Families had gathered near the mine along with anxious co-workers while crews used six pumps to remove the water from the mine. The pumps were able to move about 3,000 callons of water per minute brinsing.

primes were able to move about 3,000 gallons of water per minute bringing the water down at a rate of one inch every 15 minutes. State and federal regulators issued a closure order for the entire mine after the incident Monday in order to determine how much damage the water caused the mine and the equip-ment, Brown said. It may take sever-al weeks to assess the damage and for the company to make repairs, he said.

Failed Inspection pres-ents a seeming Catch-22 Dear Tom and Ray: Goofy problem here: We were loaned a Jeep Cherokee by our daughter and son-in-law while, our whicle is being manired and son-in-law while our vehicle is being repaired. With a catch, of course It needed a "speed sensor" in order to pass the emissions test. We got the part, had it installed and promptly failed the emissions test. We were told that we need-ed to put 50-100 miles on the thing before they could retest the emissions. Is that standard for electronic (or computer-ish) parts? Is

In Crannage there some rationale I'm missing on that? Basically, I need to Know so I can tell the judge why I'm driving without an inspection stick-er if the state of the state of the er if the state of the state of the order to ret it inspected if you're not supposed to drive it until it passes inspection? Thanks! -- Nan RAY: Good questions, Nan. But 'your emissions inspector is right. TOM: Here's how inspections work these days. A scanner gets plugged into your car's computer port. That scanner downloads a bunch of emis-sions-related information that your car's computer has monitored and stored. RAY: But if your battery dise completely, gets dis-connected or the computer's memory gets wiped out for some other reason (which I'm guessing is what hap-pened in your, case), the computer doesn't have enough stored data to deter-mine whether you should pass inspection. mine whether you should pass inspection. I don't know how if works in all 50 states, but where we live, you then get a temporary "Rejected" sticker, and you have 60 days to drive around, humiliated, fix the problem and get re-inspect

TOM: So I'm guessing that your daughter and son in-law failed inspection a while ago because the vehithat cle's speed sensor didn't work. And their 60 days had work. And their 60 days had run out by the time they handed you the keys. So when you failed, it was for the second time, and there was no longer a grace peri-od.

- It was 19th-century German philosopher, Arthur Schopenhauer who made the following sage observa-tion: "There is no absurdity so palpable but that it may be firmly planted in the human head if you only begin to inculcate it before the age of five, by constant-ly repeating it with an air of great solemnity."

- If, like me, you are constantly finding excess wire hangers in your clos-ets, you probably won't be surprised to learn that more than 2.7 billion of them were imported in 2010

- You might be sur-prised to learn that beer brewers in Australia are on the cutting edge of alterna-tive energy production. They have created a "beer battery" -- the world's first, they claim -- in which elec-tricity is generated by bacte-ria consuming the waste that is created by the brew-ing process. ing process.

- Companies today sometimes seem to go too far in advertising their prod-ucts, but consider Richard Chesebrough, who invented the petroleum jelly Vaseline in 1872. In order to market his new creation as a salve for cuts and burns, he trav-eled around New York state demonstrating the efficacy of the product by burning his skin with acid, then applying Vaseline to the injury. A display of his past burns that had been healed with Vaseline would, in the-ory, convince people to buy the product. - If you're looking to

At this very moment, a large study is taking place to ascertain the place of lutein in the treat-ment of this common eye condition. The amount of lutein being tested in the study is 10 mg at day. Lutein appears to be a very safe substance, but I would stick with the 10 mg dose until the present study defines lutein's place and its optimum dose. lin Businesses that fail to file Deadline fast approaches for all businesses entities in Kentucky to file their 2011 annual, reports with the Kentucky Secretary of State's office. All for-profit and nonprofit corporations that do business in Kentucky are required to file current reports no later than 4:30 p.m. EDT. Thursday, June 30th. Filing via the Secretary of State's web site at www.sosk.ygov/fiselect is the quickest and simplest way to complete the yearly report which is required by state law. Checks for the fee should be made payable to the Kentucky State Treasurer and they must be received by the office by the June deadline. Elaine Walker, Sceretary of State, emphasized that the fastest and most cost efficient' way to file an annual report is on line. "As a small business owner myself, I completed my filing on line in a matter of minutes and avoided the extra paperwork and cost of mailing," she said. "Our office sent a notice to all business the confidence that you can get the job done. PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean.
