Hi Hat home destroyed by fire

by RALPH B. DAVIS
MANAGING EDITOR

HI HAT — A single-family dwelling was gutted by fire Sunday afternoon, with firefighters calling the home "a total loss."

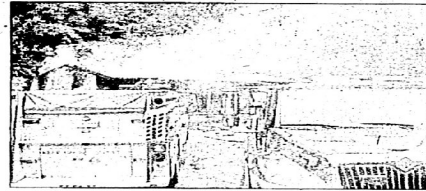

The fire started shortly after noon. Left Beaver Fire and Rescue was first notified at 12:23 p.m.

Deputy Fire Chief Will Parker said the house, belonging to Veda Blankenship and located along Route 122, adjacent to other homes and a nearby video store, was fully engulfed when firefighters arrived.

In the end, the home's stone walls were about all that remained. The fire caused the roof to cave in on the structure, and a late afternoon sun illuminated a charred and blackened interior.

"We tried to go in the front door, but we only that had that much visibility from the floor," Parker said, holding his thumb and Despite firefighters' best efforts, the home of Veda Blankenship was a total loss, following a fire Sunday.

PIKEVILLE — Expert John L. Herman Jr. (known as just "Herman") will be in Pikeville Thursday afternoon for a seminar at the Hampton Inn.

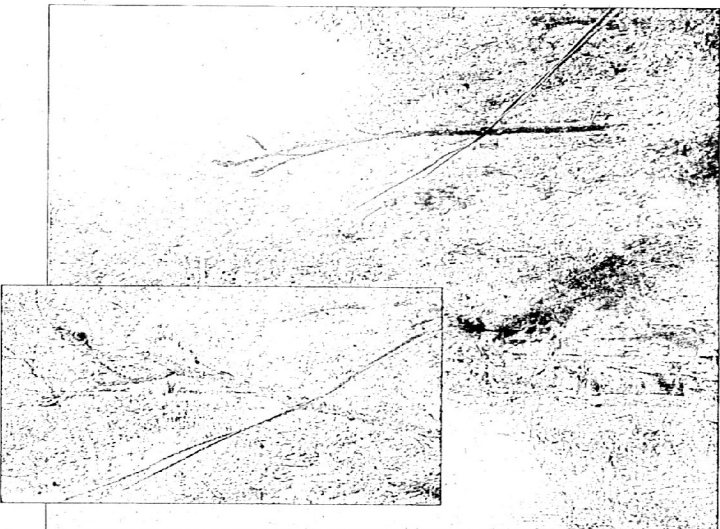

The event will take place July 21 in the Pikeville Hampton Inn from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The workshop, which is sponsored by Morehead State University and the East Kentucky Small Business Development (EKSD) center, will focus on Herman's experience with entrepreneurship. During the seminar, Herman offers advice, commentary and anecdotes drawn from his experience.

According to EKSD, the program is not intended to discourage people from starting new ventures, but rather intended to help people realize issues they might otherwise ignore, but shouldn't.

To register for the seminar go to <http://bit.ly/hermanism>. The cost to attend the workshop is $39.

DANGER ABOVE

An overhanging tree that has threatened motorists along Route 122 for the last few months should be gone after today. AT&T, which owns the lines suspending the dead tree, says a contractor is scheduled to remove the tree today.

Traffic-threatening tree slated for removal today

PRICE — For the past few months, drivers along Route 122 have been greeted with a jarring sight — a fallen, dead tree, hanging perilously over the highway, held in place, for now, by the utility lines that caught it when it fell.

That should all be a memory soon, as the utility company that owns the lines has said the tree will be removed later today.

It is unclear whether it was winter ice or spring winds, or perhaps even a strong storm last summer, that brought the tree down. What is known is that the tree has remained a lurking danger to passersby, suspended 20-to-30 feet above passing traffic, for several months.

Sara George, information officer for the state

Transportation Cabinet's Highway District 12, said the Department of Highways is also concerned about the danger the tree poses, but is powerless to do anything about it.

"We are not allowed to do anything — even in an emergency situation — if it has to do with touching, or possibly touching, a utility line," George said.

BETSY LAYNE — A new 100,000 gallon per day wastewater treatment plant for the Floyd-Pike, Hollow area of Harold, Betsy Layne and Stanville is being considered by the Southern Water and Sewer district.

According to Southern Water, the project, known as "Pride on the River," will include 20,000 linear feet of sanitary sewer force mains and will be located in the 100-year floodplain.

"We have the money to build phase one," said Hubert Halbert, "and we believe the money for phase two is committed."

According to Halbert, phase one of the project will connect just over 127 customers in the southern part of Floyd County.

"The project starts at Mine Creek and runs to the Pike-Floyd line," Halbert said.

Halbert says the plant will be built on property donated by ICG, and that the total project cost is just under $4 million.

20 Years Ago
(July 17 and July 19, 1991)

Investigators are conducting a probe into a fatal car crash, Sunday, involving a Kentucky State Police trooper. The accident killed a 54-year-old Prestonsburg woman, and seriously injured her father. Ruby Baisden Lafferty was pronounced dead on arrival at Highlands Regional Medical Center after the car she was a passenger in was struck at the intersection of KY 3 and KY 1428 at Lancer, by a Kentucky State Police cruiser driven by trooper John Blanton, who was in pursuit of a red Chevy S-10 pickup, KSP officials said.

A Tuesday morning fire destroyed the home of Mrs. Shirley Fay Stone of Buckeye at Blue River. The blaze, fed by oxygen from open windows in the house, consumed the home within 35 minutes, according to Larry Adams, training officer for the David Volunteer Fire Department, which responded to the scene. Mrs. Stone's neighbor and relative, Roger Stone, who is a member of the fire department, recognized the odor of a house fire around 10 a.m. that morning. The house was empty. Stone discovered the blaze and reported the fire over his radio which speeded the response, Adams said.

David School director Danny Greene was named as a member of the Prestonsburg Community College Advisory Board, Tuesday by Governor Wallace Wilkinson. Greene will serve in that position until June 30, 1995. He will replace Robert Conley of Paintsville, whose term expired.

The Eastern Kentucky Veteran's Outreach Clinic will open July 22, and will serve veterans from seven eastern Kentucky counties. A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held Sunday, July 21, at 2 p.m., at the clinic, located in the Riverview building on U.S. 23 in Prestonsburg, below Highlands Regional Medical Center.

A criminal investigation into the Bingo games at Prestonsburg High School is continuing, and any evidence of wrongdoing will be presented to a Floyd County Grand Jury, Kentucky State Police detective Johnnie Ray said Tuesday that the investigation is in its preliminary stages and a completion date could not be set.

State police are investigating the death of a 38-year-old Harold man who died Saturday at a construction site in Teaberry. Jay L. Tackett was killed at 12:10 p.m., Saturday, when the block walls of the building he was helping construct, collapsed, sending the roof trusses down on top of him, police officials said. Tackett was pronounced dead at the scene by Deputy Coroner Glenn Frazier.

Highlands Regional Medical Center Chief Greg Hall, clarifying an earlier statement, said Thursday that police sergeant Gerald Clark had the intention of conducting a roadblock last Sunday before the crash between a Kentucky State Police trooper and a car driven by a Prestonsburg man and his daughter. Ruby Baisden Lafferty, 54, was killed in Sunday's collision, and her 84-year-old father, LeRoy Baisden, was critically injured. Their vehicle was struck by a KSP cruiser driven by John Blanton at the four-way intersection near Lancer.

A group of county judges, including Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, from coal-producing areas of the state, descended on Frankfort, Tuesday and Wednesday, to testify before the legislative Coal Revenue Allocation Task Force. The task force is considering a redistribution of monies collected from the coal severance tax. The coal severance is mineral tax money returned to counties which are impacted by coal mining.

Smoke escaping from the open windows of a building adjacent to Martin Elementary School, Tuesday, caused Martin firefighters to prepare for the possibility of a school fire. Around 1 p.m., school workers heard the fire alarm sound at the school and investigated the adjoining building, which school board members voted to tear down earlier this year. The building's fire alarm system is networked with the school's, and workers had previously discovered the alarm sounded if the building's occupant, Charles Salyers, created a lot of smoke during his cooking.

There died: Ruby Baisden Lafferty, 54, of Highland Avenue, Prestonsburg, was pronounced dead on arrival Sunday, at Highlands Regional Medical Center from injuries received in an automobile accident near Lancer; Ollie Music Gray, 72, of Greenup, formerly of Mays Branch, Prestonsburg, Tuesday, at Our Lady of Bellefonte in Russell; Nellie May Osborne, 92, of Myra, July 15, at the Mountain Manor

Nursing Home in Pikeville; Pearl Hamilton Sr., 79, of Willard, Ohio, Thursday, in Hillside Acres Nursing Home, Willard; Raymond O'Brien, 65, Indianapolis, Indiana, formerly of Hunter, Tuesday, in Indiana, following a long illness; Josie Ousley, 81, of Alger, Ohio, Saturday, at Hardin Memorial Hospital, Kenton; Mary Elizabeth Stephens Estep, 69, of Langley, Saturday, at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, (See YESTERDAYS, page 5)

I can't believe it has been one year since my world fell apart. I'm still here with tears flowing down my cheek, and a broken heart. Dear Granny I miss you so much, and at times, I feel so blue, don't know how much longer, I can go on without you. But I will, with the good Lord's help and strength from above.

He continues to help me thru the hard times with His Grace and Love. Sometimes I imagine Him sending you to come for me. Like He did when He sent His angels the night you left me. I always wanted to be the first to go, before you. But, Jesus had other plans, so His will we will do. I always wanted to be with you to be able to be by your side. You have God and Jesus. They are all you need, and They will provide. I visit you quite often, either at the cemetery or in my mind. Whether it's night or day, I think about you all the time. I miss your beautiful smile, and your eyes of blue. You laugh, your actions, just everything about you. I am so very thankful to the good Lord above. To have such a granny that showed me all kinds of love for having you in my life for forty-one years. I look back at our life together with much laughter and tears. The days have turned into weeks and now it has been one year. I still cannot believe that you are not here. But all I have now are memories of me and you. I look at the house and I cannot believe you are not in there, I could go in, but I choose not to, so from a distance, all I do is stare. It looks so empty inside, just like me. It's not nice and cozy like it used to be. I miss the relationship that we had, when you made over-me like you did. When I grew up, and when I was a kid. I thank you Granny for Mother. I love her so much, she is so special to me, she is like no other. She loves and misses you so. But one day we all will be together, and we will be made whole. So, we will go thru life with you in our hearts. And one day we will be together and no longer apart. You were such a beautiful lady. And you were and always will be My Very Own Granny. I love and miss you with all my heart.

Time for a test ban treaty

by KATHY CRANDALL ROBINSON

July 16 marks the 66th anniversary of the first nuclear weapons test explosion. The United States' test, code-named "Trinity," was exploded in the desert of New Mexico and ignited the nuclear age. The bombing of Hiroshima on August 6 and Nagasaki on August 9 were followed by some 2,050 nuclear tests worldwide, with over half (1030) conducted by the United States. Nuclear testing has fueled the arms race, enabling varied and ever more deadly nuclear arsenals to grow. Along the way, nuclear testing has harmed the environment and human health worldwide.

It has now been almost 20 years since the United States last conducted a nuclear weapons test. For most Americans, nuclear weapon testing is not on their radar of concern. In fact, dangers of nuclear weapons are mostly easy to ignore nowadays. When I tell people about work on policies to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons, they're only vaguely interested. When I try, "I'm working toward the ratification of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty (CTBT)," I get complete incomprehension — eyes glaze over.

For me, this is not just another wonky issue. Nuclear nonproliferation and disarmament — specifically the CTBT — have been compelling work for me since the late 1980s. Then, as an intern, I attended a press conference about efforts to achieve a permanent ban on nuclear testing and there heard about Women Strike for Peace. There's a story that began in 1961 when it wasn't possible to ignore dangers of nuclear weapons.

The Berlin crisis and threat of nuclear exchange with the Soviet Union frightened everyone. "Duck and cover" became a routine school drill. In 1961, nuclear tests were being conducted in the atmosphere, spewing radioactive poison worldwide. Parents were sending their children's baby teeth to be checked for Strontium-90 contamination. It was enough to drive women to take to the streets for a one-day strike to "End the Arms Race — not the Human Race" and for "Pure Milk, Not Poison."

These women kept going after the one-day strike, organizing actions and lobbying campaigns. In 1963, when the Partial Test Ban Treaty was ratified, the Kennedy Administration credited Women Strike for Peace with helping move the president to push the treaty. Although it was an enormous stride forward in protecting health and the environment, banning tests in the atmosphere did not slow the arms race. Instead, testing underground accelerated and nuclear stockpiles grew.

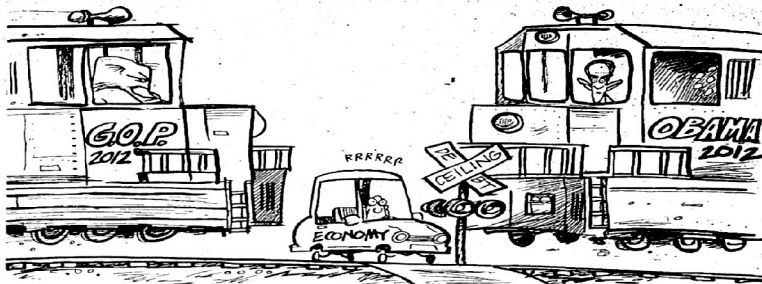

A quarter of a century after I heard this story, Women Strike for Peace was joining with others to call for a CTBT to permanently end nuclear testing. Women who had participated in the initial 1961 strike called the CTBT "our unfinished business."

Yes, another 25 years have gone by, and this treaty remains unfinished business.

The United States stopped testing in 1992 and maintains the most sophisticated, sizeable and capable nuclear arsenal in the world. There is no military or scientific justification for testing, and there is certainly no political push for U.S. test explosions. But now, without U.S. Senate ratification of the CTBT, America is unable to realize the benefits of this tool to constrain other countries' nuclear weapons programs. That makes no security sense.

Fifteen years ago, the United States was the first country to sign the CTBT. U.S. leadership had galvanized multilateral negotiations that resulted in the verifiable treaty to detect, deter and confront countries that would test nuclear weapons. Victory had seemed so close, but then the Senate got tangled up in a rushed partisan political debate, failing to ratify the treaty. Now, the world awaits the United States to put its weight behind a push for a treaty we led the way in establishing. It's past time to reassert leadership for America's security. And it's past time to complete unfinished business. The Senate should consider the

by REP. GREG STUMBO
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

One of the country's biggest challenges over the next few decades is ensuring that the "golden years" truly live up to, their name for our older citizens. As more Baby Boomers begin turning 65 — the first began celebrating that milestone birthday in January — this group of citizens promises to be a fastest-growing demographic for quite some time.

According to the Kentucky State Data Center, there are almost 600,000 people in the Commonwealth who are 65 and older. This group is nine percent larger than in 2000, but is expected to grow by nearly 30 percent this decade and another 27 percent in the next. Some counties, almost all of which are in the central portion of the state, will see this population double between 2010 and 2030.

Earlier this summer, the U.S. Census Bureau released figures showing that this graying trend is especially pronounced in our rural communities. In fact, 12 counties that lost population during the past decade nonetheless saw double-digit growth of those 65 and older.

When it comes to our older citizens, the General Assembly has a long legacy of doing what it can to help. We have established more stringent oversight of assisted-living facilities, for example, and we created the "Golden Alert" law that greatly speeds up search efforts for vulnerable adults who are missing.

Earlier this year, my colleagues and I passed two new laws that will better protect senior citizens. Under the first, those found guilty of exploiting, neglecting or abusing adults in their care will no longer be able to serve in a position of authority over the victim or the victim's estate. This law also creates a trust fund that will help pay for programs that target elder abuse.

The other new law, meanwhile, will make it easier to guardians of vulnerable adults when more than one state is involved, as long as the other state has adopted the same model legislation. This should reduce the red tape the guardians have to overcome to carry out their duties.

One bill that did not become law, but that passed the Kentucky House unanimously, would have established an adult-abuse registry. This would have kept those convicted of these crimes from working in such places as nursing homes. My goal is to see this passed in 2012, because Governor Beshear has said his budget proposal would fund it.

With that in mind, he announced last month that the state had received a $3 million grant to greatly improve background checks of those who work in our long-term care facilities; instead of using name-based checks alone, these facilities will soon be required to also rely on fingerprint scans.

As the number of older citizens increases, the reports of elder abuse have predictably grown as well. A congressional report in March estimated that 14 percent of older Americans have been abused, though it said the figure could be even higher.

Here in Kentucky, there were 13,000 reports of abuse last year involving those 60 or older. The state's Cabinet for Health and Family Services said almost 1,900 were substantiated, and 300 criminal charges were filed.

If you are aware of anyone being harmed, you can call the cabinet's abuse hotline — anonymously, if you prefer — at 1-800-752-6200. The cabinet also offers many other programs that help senior citizens, by the way. The Kentucky Department for Aging and Independent Living can provide more information by calling (502) 564-6930.

One new area of concern for older Kentuckians is known as the "grandparent scam." Late last month, the Attorney General's office said victims have been defrauded by about $40,000 in recent weeks because of people posing to be their grandchild. Often, the criminal says he or she is in trouble in another state or country and requests money for help. Sometimes the scammers pose as police officers or lawyers who claim to be calling on behalf of a relative. Be wary if you get these types of calls.

As the efforts I've mentioned hopefully show, the state has made a lot of strides when it comes to improving the quality of life of our older citizens. But there is always more to do more. In the months and years ahead, we will see what else we can do to make a difference.

House week in review

Kentucky's energy policies have created what state officials say is the largest investment in energy efficiency in the state's history.

Kentucky Deputy Commissioner of Energy Development and Independence John Davies told the Special Subcommittee on Energy this month that policies born from legislation passed by the Kentucky General Assembly over the past several years have led to substantial investment in energy efficiency in public schools and state buildings, including over $27 million for energy management in public schools statewide.

In 2008, only 17 schools in the state were certified by Energy Star — a federal program that distinguishes a building as highly energy efficient, Davies said. Today, 105 schools are Energy Star certified.

Energy efficiency is the first strategy in the governor's energy plan, which was unveiled in 2008 and incorporates legislation passed by state lawmakers. The plan focuses on seven strategies: improving energy efficiency; fostering renewable energy; sustainable increasing production of biofuels; developing a coal-to-liquid industry; increasing natural gas supplies; initiating carbon capture and sequestration projects; and examining the use of nuclear power to generate electricity in Kentucky.

Another show of Kentucky's energy efficiency policy's success is the Commonwealth's distinction of being the only state with two near net-zero energy user schools: Turkey Foot Middle School in Kenton County and Richardsville Elementary in Warren County, Davies said. Turkey Foot's kilowatt usage for May-June was a negative 2,000 kilowatt hours.

State buildings are being made more energy efficient through assistance by the Green Bank of Kentucky, a state program that provides low interest revolving loans for energy efficiency projects and contracts. Davies said $14 million in Federal Recovery Act funds provides capital for the revolving loan fund.

Yet another success story is the Energy Star appliance rebate program of 2010, which Davies said provided over $3.4 million in rebates to over 34,000 Kentuckians on $51 million in appliance sales. The sales generated $3 million in sales tax revenue, with clothes washers and refrigerators being the most popular purchases.

Several lawmakers asked officials from the state Energy and Environment Cabinet what the Executive Branch's position is on federal regulatory changes affecting Kentucky's coal industry. Senate Majority Floor Leader Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, said the coal industry's economic impact on Kentucky is at least three times greater than the impact of the horse industry, which is known as Kentucky's signature industry.

Karen Wilson of the Energy and Environment Cabinet said the administration has sent letters, testified before Congress and sued the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to show "displeasure" with its policies, including a lawsuit filed last year on the EPA's permitting policies affecting coal mining.

Center for Rural Development offers first responders free course on dealing with media

SOMERSET — Picture this scenario: a major incident has just occurred and the media is quick to respond. The camera's lights pierce the darkened outskirts of the cordoned-off area of the incident. The reporters, lit only by the camera's lights, are pacing with anticipation.

As a senior member of the emergency response team, it falls on you to become the voice of the incident and to carefully communicate what's happened. There is no other source of information and no other provision.

Yours is a small town, without the funds necessary to have dedicated communications personnel, so this is it: the camera's lights are shining in your eyes, blinding you in the darkness. The microphone is at the ready and the interviewer's eyes and words are pleading for a response for a public that is hungry for comfort. What will you say?

To help rural first responders in Southern and Eastern Kentucky prepare for such a scenario, the Rural Domestic Preparedness Consortium (RDPC) is presenting a free course on Aug. 10 at The Center for Rural Development in Somerset entitled "AWR 209: Dealing with the Media: A Short Course for Rural Emergency Responders."

This course will provide first responders with adequate awareness as to how best to deal with the media if they find themselves thrust into the role of public information officer.

This 6-hour, Department of Homeland Security-certified course is a free-tuition, awareness-level course designed to provide rural first responders with the skills and knowledge to quickly adopt the role of public information officer (PIO) if and when needed and to communicate with the public through the media.

In the event a first responder is thrust into the role of PIO, whether it be roadside at the scene of an emergency or detailing directions to the public in a crisis situation, it is important to understand how the media works and how best to work with the available media outlets. The only prerequisite is that you be a U.S. citizen.

The event will be held at The Center for Rural Development, Ballrooms A and B, 2292 South Highway 27, Somerset, Kentucky, 42501 (at Traffic Light 15) on Aug. 10 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The registration deadline is July 27, 2011. To register for the course, please visit the registration link: <http://www.ruraltraining.org/training/delivery/8057>

For further information on this or any other RDPC courses, please visit www.ruraltraining.org/courses. Legislators hear plans for '11/11/11' initiative.

State energy policies reviewed by legislative panel

FRANKFORT—Kentucky's energy policies have created what state officials say is the largest investment in energy efficiency in the state's history.

Kentucky Deputy Commissioner of Energy and Development and Independence John Davies told the Special Subcommittee on Energy that policies born from legislation passed by the Kentucky General Assembly over the past several years have led to substantial investment in energy efficiency in public schools and state buildings, including over $27 million for energy management in public schools statewide.

In 2008, only 17 schools in the state were certified by Energy Star—a federal program that distinguishes a building as highly energy efficient, Davies said. Today, 105 schools are Energy Star certified.

"It's by no mistake that energy efficiency is the first strategy in the governor's (energy) plan," Davies said. The energy plan, unveiled in 2008, focuses on seven strategies: improving energy efficiency; fostering renewable energy; sustainably increasing production of biofuels; developing a coal-to-liquid industry; increasing natural gas supplies; initiating carbon capture and sequestration projects; and examining the use of nuclear power to generate electricity in Kentucky.

Another show of Kentucky's energy efficiency policy's success is the Commonwealth's distinction of being the only state with two near net-zero energy user schools: Turkey Foot Middle School in Kenton County and Richardsville Elementary in Warren County. Davies said Turkey Foot's kilowatt usage for May-June was a negative 2,000 kilowatt hours.

State buildings are being made more energy efficient through assistance by the Green Bank of Kentucky, a state program that provides low interest revolving loans for energy efficiency projects and contracts. Davies said $14 million in federal Recovery Act funds provided capital for the revolving loan fund.

"As these loans are repaid, the funds will be recycled to support new energy saving performance contracts in state facilities," said Davies.

Another success story is the Energy Star appliance rebate program of 2010, which Davies said provided over $3.4 million in rebates to over 34,000 Kentuckians on $51 million in appliance sales. The sales generated $3 million in sales tax revenue, with clothes washers and refrigerators being the most popular purchases.

Having a more diverse energy portfolio—or more diverse ways to generate power—could also benefit the state, which Davies said now relies on coal-fired power for 94 percent of electricity generation. "In the future, primarily relying on one power of electricity may not be prudent," he said, adding that regulatory and other pressures will place new demands on the coal industry and the coal it exports to other states.

Kentucky exported around 74 percent of total coal produced here to other states in 2009, he said. Most of those states were in the Southeast. "These are the same states that will be affected by the federal EPA regulations that may dampen their demand for imported coal," said Davies, who then explained how biomass, biofuels, clean coal technologies and other energy sources are being used to benefit the state.

"We have made a strong start, but there is much more to do," he said.

Several lawmakers asked officials from the state Energy and Environment Cabinet what the Executive Branch's position is on federal regulatory changes affecting Kentucky's coal industry. Senate Majority Floor Leader Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, said the coal industry's economic impact on Kentucky is at least three times greater than the impact of the horse industry, which is known as Kentucky's signature industry.

"Last time I looked at the statistics on coal we had over $5.5 billion in sales, which is greater than the total economic impact of the horse industry, so if you do an equivalent multiplier, we probably have close to a $15 billion impact in this state and I would suggest it is probably higher than that," Stivers said.

Karen Wilson of the Energy and Environment Cabinet said the administration has sent letters, testified before Congress and sued the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to show "displeasure" with its policies, including a lawsuit filed last year on the EPA's permitting policies affecting coal mining.

"We would like to see some sensible time frames for the various regulations that are either coming out now or are going to be coming out," said Wilson, including regulations concerning greenhouse gases and coal ash.

Some lawmakers voiced concern that non-elected officials at a federal agency—namely the EPA—are effecting environmental policy on coal, which remains a dominant energy source nationwide.

"I think many of us believe and are concerned...they are legislating on their own," said subcommittee Co-Chair Sen. Brandon Smith, R-Hazard.

"It's a problem when an agency snubs its nose at Congress..." said House Majority Leader Rocky Adkins, D-Sandy Hook. "It's not their job to make the law." Adkins said "common sense" regulations are needed, not regulations that will negatively impact the economy and jobs.

Senate President Pro Tem Katie Stine, R-Southgate, asked Cabinet officials about progress toward meeting the goals of 2010 Senate Bill 132, a bill filed by Sen. Stine and passed into law that supports construction of energy efficient schools. "I would hope that you would take this legislation seriously, and that you would seek to work with (the Department of Education) to implement it, and also find private entities or federal funds, if there are any, to help in the funding mechanism in that legislation in order to move these schools forward."

Phase II is expected to cost just over $1.2 million. The money to fund the projects has been made available through coal severance, rural development grants, and the Appalachian Regional Commission, among other sources. "This is something a lot of people have been working on for a lot of years,"

Halbert said. "It started back with [former Judge-Executive] Paul Hunt Thompson and has received a lot of support from R.D. Doc Marshall and Ronnie Akers."

Tree

Highway crews are barred from interfering with fallen utility lines, George said, because a line could be live. For that reason, only the utility company that owns the line is allowed to remove a fallen line.

The problem in this instance, however, is that the Department of Highways has thus far been unable to determine who owns the line.

"The men at District 12's Minnie Maintenance facility think the lines belong to AT&T ..." George said. "I have asked the crew at Minnie Maintenance to try to contact AT&T and ask them to come to the site and determine whether the lines are their or not, and, if they are in fact AT&T's to remove the tree."

However, by Monday, the Department of Highways had been unsuccessful in its attempts to contact AT&T. George said repeated calls to the number for a local office were never answered and voicemail messages had not been returned.

The Floyd County Times was able to reach the office Monday and spoke to Jack Salyer, an employee with AT&T. Salyer said he had received no reports of the fallen tree and could not determine from information provided during the phone call whether or not the lines are owned by AT&T. However, Salyer said he would personally visit the site and make a determination.

After visiting the site Tuesday, Salyer said the lines do belong to AT&T and that he had contacted a contractor about removing the tree. He said the contractor is supposed to do the work today.

PRESTONSBURG — A committee charged with the task of determining whether Floyd County's magisterial district boundaries need to be redrawn will continue working this week, before making a final recommendation to the fiscal court on Friday.

County Clerk Chris Waugh, who serves as a non-voting member of the committee, said he and committee members Raymond M. Jarrell, Anthony "Harpo" Castle and Robert Duncan have been meeting regularly to go over population figures provided by Big Sandy Area Development District, to see whether or not the lines need to be adjusted.

Government bodies at all levels are currently charged with the task of examining election district boundaries in the wake of updated population figures from the 2010 Census. Magisterial districts are required to be as nearly equal as possible in population, to provide equal representation to all Floyd Counties.

Waugh said that, based on what he has seen so far, he does not expect any significant shifts in district lines.

"There may be some small changes, but I don't see any changes, at this time," Waugh said.

ations within 30 days. "We are very pleased that the court not only prohibited advance notice of MSHA inspections to those working underground, but also required the employer to post the order and train workers and contractors, so this incident will not recur in the future," said Joseph A. Main, assistant secretary of labor for mine safety and health. "If miners are to be protected, MSHA must be able to conduct unannounced inspections in order to identify hazardous conditions in mines." According to the U.S. Department of Labor, the order received from the Office of the Solicitor will last for three years, however, the prohibition of advance notice shall remain permanent while it remains part of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977. The action by the U.S. Department of Labor stems from a June 17 inspection when a mine foreman allegedly had been notified that the Mine Safety and Health Administration were outside the gates giving underground personnel sufficient time to hide any smoking materials. The presence of smoking materials provides a potential source of ignition that can cause explosions in underground coal mines. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, due to the advance notice, inspectors were unable to determine whether miners possessed smoking materials or were smoking underground.

Section 108 of the Mine Act provides for injunctive relief against noncompliant mine operators who interfere with, hinder or delay inspections of mines by permitting advance notice communicated from the surface operations of mines to individuals working underground.

Jackson signs with UPIKE Paintsville left- hander joins Bears baseball program

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — One of the top pitchers in the 15th Region has signed to play at the University of Pikeville. Zach Jackson, who stood out at Paintsville High School, has signed with Coach Robert Taylor's program. Jackson was 8-4 with a miniscule 1.58 ERA as a senior for the Tigers, who finished 15-14 and reached the 15th Region tournament this season. In 71 innings, he struck out 94 while walking only 24. "Zach was one of the best left-handed pitchers in the region this year, and we're thrilled to have him," said Coach Taylor. "We're building toward something special here at Pikeville and we're pleased to have Zach as a member of our family here."

Former Paintsville High School standout Zach Jackson, a left-handed pitcher, recently signed with the University of Pikeville baseball program.

Opening ceremony, teams highlight second weekend of State Games

TIMES STAFF REPORT

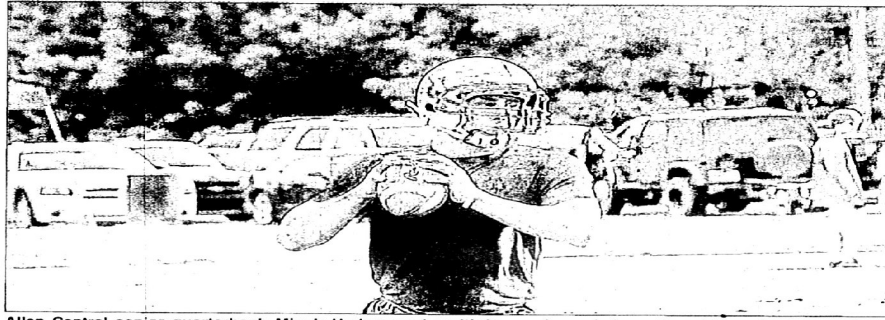

LEXINGTON — More than 6,300 people participated during the second weekend of the FITM Bluegrass State Games, presented by Subway. One of the biggest weekends of the event, 17 events were held Friday through Sunday at venues throughout Central Kentucky.

The weekend began with the traditional Celebration of Athletes at Whitaker Bank Park in conjunction with the Lexington Legends baseball game. The event drew nearly 1,000 participants and their families who were able to play video games, play on inflatables and get autographs and pictures with University of Kentucky Head Football Coach Joker Phillips and former UK basketball standout and current New York Knick, Josh Harrellson.

The Games officially opened later in the evening when 4th-grade 5K participant Maddie Soard of Richmond, proclaimed the 2011 Games "Open," as Subway Restaurant's "Subman" finished the last leg of the torch run and lit the cauldron. The entire crowd of 5,850 was then treated to a fireworks show.

The weekend's competition began with the 5K race Saturday morning where approximately 250 runners took part. The rest of the weekend saw 16 more competitions including a near-record 77 men's and women's softball teams and 142 youth soccer teams participated from across the Commonwealth.

Also, making its debut in the Games was TOPSoccer. The Outreach Program for Soccer is a community-based soccer program that is designed to meet the needs of individuals with physical and/or intellectual disabilities. Teams competed at the Masterson Station complex in Lexington.

Allen Central's gridiron slate features seven Class A foes

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

EASTERN — The Allen Central Rebels are busy preparing for the 2011 season. Allen Central, under the direction of Coach Jeremy Hall, held a morning practice Tuesday. During the upcoming season, Allen Central will be matched up against seven Class A opponents in 10 outings. That number includes three district foes — Pikeville, South Floyd and Phelps. Senior quarterback Micah Harlow is set to lead the Rebels from under center. Following a record-breaking campaign in 2009, Allen Central fell to 5-6 last season. Defensive leader Sheldon Rice and running back Seth Jarrell are other talented players back on the gridiron for the Allen Central football team. Facing Class A foes during the regular season should help get Allen Central prepared for the postseason. In a four-team district, all members are guaranteed a spot in the State Playoffs.

Here's a look at Allen Central's 10 opponents for the 2011 season:

Jenkins (Aug. 26): The Cavaliers ended the 2011 season 9-11. Seniors Charlie Cox (QB/LB) and Gavin Fleming (G/LB) are the top returnees for the Cavaliers. Jenkins competes in Class A, District 6 along with reigning state runner-up Hazard (14-1), Harlan (5-7) and Pineville (8-4).

Leslie County (Sept. 2): One of two non-Class A foes for the Rebels, Leslie

NASCAR: Ryan Newman has just enough gas

by MARK LABORE
THE NEW HAMPSHIRE
UNION LEADER (MCT)

LOUDON, N.H. — It was a great day for Stewart-Haas Racing and an even greater day for Ryan Newman.

Driving with a nearly empty fuel cell, Newman took a major step toward assuring himself a position in the Chase for the Sprint Cup as he won the NASCAR Lenox Industrial Tools 301 at New Hampshire Motor Speedway before a NASCAR-estimated crowd of 95,000 fans on Sunday.

In addition, his car owner, Tony Stewart, finished second in the race, marking the first time Stewart-Haas Racing has posted a 1-2 Sprint Cup finish.

Newman, who is eighth in the series points race and just 16 points ahead of 10th-place drivers Denny Hamlin and Stewart, gave himself some insurance for a possible wild card entry into the chase with his first victory of the season.

Newman has 15 wins in 351 Sprint Cup races and has three Cup wins at NHMS.

The victory completed a personal sweep for Newman as he won the Modified Tour F.W. Webb 100 on Saturday. He started both races from the pole, and his qualifying time for the Lenox Industrial Tools 301 was a track record 28.165 seconds for 135.232 miles per hour.

"Just a great day," said Newman. "We backed up what everybody said we couldn't back up, that was our qualifying effort on Friday. This was huge for our team and even bigger for the organization."

"Man, this was one hell of a perfect weekend for Stewart-Haas Racing," said Stewart, who started from the outside pole aside Newman. "It was a sweet one-two in qualifying and one-two in the race. I'm so damn proud I can't see straight ... We just needed one weekend where we didn't have something stupid go wrong and it happened for both of us today.

"It's no secret we've been struggling this year," Stewart added. "It's been one of the weirdest years as far as just weird things and bad luck happening to both of us."

It almost happened again. Newman was forced to conserve fuel as the race wound down, his last pit stop coming on lap 217. The fuel window at NHMS is approximately 80 laps.

"I was only get nervous when (crew chief Tony Gibson) told me we were eight laps short," said Newman. "Then he told me 15 laps later after several yellow flags we were still eight laps short. I was thinking to myself, we shouldn't be here. I knew I was doing a really good job of saving fuel, which is not the easiest thing to do."

The long, sweeping NHMS corners allow the drivers to coast quite a bit to reduce fuel consumption.

"I think hindsight being 20/20, I don't mind running second and having him win the race versus us winning the race and him running out of fuel," said Stewart.

Hamlin, who finished third, was concerned about fuel as well. He was second with 11 laps to go, but could not race Newman for the lead and the victory.

"I was running the 39 (Newman) down," said Hamlin. "The crew chief is screaming that we have to back off. At that point you have to think about the risk versus the reward. If we go out there and try to win the race, we get about 10 more points than we get if we coast and get a third place finish, or if we go for it and miss, run out of fuel, we end up with minus 20, 30 points."

Joey Logano finished fourth; Jimmie Johnson, who faced a series of problems during the race, including a crash with Juan Pablo Montoya, rallied for fifth.

"I don't think of the three times he's wrecked me it's been intentional, but he's out of mulligans and I've had enough of 'oh, I'm sorry, you're spun out,'" said Johnson.

The race featured 21 lead changes among 14 drivers. Newman led on five different occasions, including the race's final 71 laps, for a total of 119.

Carl Edwards moved into first place in the series points race with his 13th-place finish. He now has 652 points. Johnson, is second with 645.

Kurt Busch, who led for 66 laps, is third with 641.

Stewart led 48.

Kyle Busch, the series points leader entering the race, suffered a flat tire, hit the Turn 3 wall and was forced to bring his car into the garage after 76 laps for extensive repairs.

"Too much brake heat transferring through the wheel and blew a tire," said Busch, who became just the third driver in NASCAR history to notch 100 victories with his triumph in the Nationwide Series New England 200 here Saturday. His misfortune dropped him to fifth with 632 points.

Summing up his day, Newman said, "I've won 'em here on fuel, I've lost 'em in fuel, won 'em in rain, lost 'em in rain. Really happy for the U.S. Army team. This is for the soldiers. We appreciate all the things they have done and do. They make all the difference. We see it every day from our stand-point. We hope everybody else does, too."

Kyle Busch blows Sprint Cup Series points lead

by RICH THOMPSON
BOSTON HERALD (MCT)

LOUDON, N.H. — Kyle Busch took a hard fall in the drivers standings when he was forced from yesterday's Lenox 301 at New Hampshire Motor Speedway on Lap 61.

After entering the race as the Chase for the Sprint Cup points leader (624), Busch dropped to fifth (632) with a 36th-place finish.

Busch was making a move on Dale Earnhardt Jr. when he blew a tire on Turn 4 and crashed into the wall. The car retreated to the garage for repairs, and Busch returned to race on the 136th lap. He started the race in the 19th position because of a poor qualifying run.

"Just blew a bead I guess transferring too much brake heat through the wheel," Busch said of the crash. "It had nothing to do with anything else."

Busch, who notched his 100th career NASCAR series victory Saturday by winning the Nationwide New England 200, experienced a similar disaster at NHMS when he was points leader in September 2008. In that race, he lost a sway bar during the Sylvania 300 and finished 25th.

"Kind of knew things weren't going to go our way today," Busch said. "This morning I woke up and everything went wrong that could go wrong."

Missing piece...

Jimmie Johnson was within striking distance of winning when he visited pit row during the eighth caution on Lap 217. He took on fuel and four tires to make a run at the lead.

Johnson would have joined the race in 19th place, but he had to return to pit row because he was missing a lug nut on his left front tire. The costly mistake was quite an oversight from a crew that helped Johnson to five straight Sprint Cup championships. On Turn 2 in Lap 241, Johnson was spun around by Juan Pablo Montoya, but he battled to the end to finish fifth.

"Anything that could go wrong today did, and we had issues on pit road," Johnson said. "I don't think the three times he's (Montoya) wrecked me were intentional, but he's out of mulligans and I've had enough."

Kurt response...

Kurt Busch led twice for a total of 66 laps and was in fifth place after 300 laps. Busch experienced fuel problems on Lap 301 and dropped five places to 10th.

"We put ourselves in the best position to try and get the best finish we could, and 10th was that today," Busch said.

Driven to election...

Former Massachusetts governor and presidential candidate Mitt Romney was pressing the flesh of potential Granite State voters. Before entering politics, Romney was president and CEO of the Salt Lake Organizing Committee that staged the 2002 Winter Olympics in Utah.

Romney appreciated the efforts NHMS and NASCAR expended on the event.

"It's great coming out and being part of such a massive scene," Romney said. "It is amazing how this many people can come together and enjoy a great experience. It is really quite an undertaking, and they do a superb job."

Joseph on hand...

The Joseph family of Monson served as grand marshals. Tom Joseph, who has worked for title sponsor Lenox for 27 years, lost his family home in June when tornadoes ripped through Western Massachusetts.

Kentucky's First Lady tells Shoot Hoops Not Drugs participants to avoid temptation

TIMES STAFF REPORT

WILLIAMSPORT — A sign in the cafeteria at Meade Memorial Elementary reminds visitors, "A winning tradition ... whatever it takes."

That philosophy, as it applies to the region's fight against substance abuse, was echoed by Kentucky First Lady Jane Beshear during a visit to Operation UNITE's Shoot Hoops Not Drugs basketball camp July 12.

"There's a lot of temptations out there. It's scary," Beshear warned the camp participants. "I want you to learn that you can say 'No.' It's important to stay free of drugs."

"The world is out there for you to do anything you want to," Beshear stressed, but added "you can only do it if you take care of your mind ... and you take care of your body."

The camp, held at the eastern Johnson County school, was conducted by former University of Kentucky basketball standout Jeff Sheppard.

This was the fifth of six regional programs being held this summer and drew 154 youth participants from six counties (Johnson, Lawrence, Pike, Floyd, Martin and Magoffin) and Indiana.

Winners of two basketball goals given away during camp were 5-year-old Brooke Proctor of Inez in Martin County and 10-year-

Proctor carries a 190 average for Titusville High School, which has just started a bowling team. As an individual, she competed in the district last season and bowled a career-best 716 to win top honors. She also has the high average at her home house, River Lanes, in the United States Bowling Congress (USBC) Youth Leagues.

In the Florida state championships, Proctor, who has a high score of 287, finished seventh.

Senior quarterback Troy Napier returns under center for the Eagles.

Middle linebacker John Brewer, running back Chris Maggard, tight end Hobert Asher and Austin Collett, all seniors, will also lead for the Eagles throughout 2011.

Betsy Layne (Sept. 9): As a result of rigorous training, Betsy Layne made the move up to Class 2A. The Bobcats were a resurgent team in Class A. Now, Betsy Layne competes out of Class 2A, District 8 along with Prestonsburg (10-3), Leslie County (4-8) and Shelby Valley (3-8).

Sophomore quarterback Dylan Hamilton is the new starting signal-caller for the Bobcats. Senior running back Corey Jarrell is a leading returnee in the Betsy Layne backfield.

Paintsville (Sept. 16): Rebuilding, Paintsville is now in Class A, District 7, along with Fairview (11-2), Raceland (7-5) and Nicholas County (6-5). lead the way for the Tigers.

Williamsburg (Sept. 23): The preseason favorite in Class A, District 5, Williamsburg (7-5) features proven specialists in junior quarterback Logan Hamilton and senior fullback Kevin Hoffman. Junior offensive tackle/noseguard Jacob Jeffers (6-4, 310), however, leads the way for the YellowJackets. Jeffers is the Class A, District 5 Preseason Player of the Year.

Williamsburg competes in Class A, District 5 along with Campbellsville (4-7), Lynn Camp (3-8) and Berea (2-9).

Pineville (Sept. 30): Graduation didn't spare the Pineville football program. Junior halfback Byron David Asher and junior quarterback Jamie Roan (881 yards passing) are the leading offensive players back for the Mountain Lions (8-4).

Phelps (Oct. 7): Heading into a new campaign, Phelps will look to build some early momentum and maintain steam after concluding last season on a five-game losing skid. Senior running back Austin Mayhew and Josh Blankenship are expected to help pace Phelps offensively.

South Floyd (Oct. 14): The Raiders row two of the first four games last season before dropping four straight. In a shootout, South Floyd defeated Phelps 78-58 for its lone district win in the 2010 season. Senior quarterback Tyler Moore and running backs Gordon Hall (Sr.) and Westin Little (Jr.) are leading performers back on the field for the Raiders.

Pikeville (Oct. 21): The Panthers are once again a preseason district favorite. Pikeville (8-5) returns quarterback Nick Jones and Zach Burgis-Vanhoose, all of whom are seniors. The Panthers are picked ahead of Allen Central in The Cats' Pause 2011 Kentucky Football Yearbook Class A, District 8 preseason poll.

Prep track and field rules changes focus on jewelry violations, pole vault requirements

TIMES STAFF REPORT

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — The penalty for wearing jewelry during high school track and field competition will shift from the team to the individual competitor beginning next season.

In its June 8-10 meeting in Indianapolis, the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) Track and Field and Cross Country Rules Committee addressed the jewelry rule and clarified two rules in the pole vault among its nine major changes. All changes were subsequently approved by the NFHS Board of Directors.

The revised jewelry rule states that "for the first violation, the competitor shall be required to remove the jewelry before further competition and be issued a warning that a subsequent violation shall result in a disqualification from the event."

"The rule still prohibits the wearing of jewelry, but the members of the rules committee and results of the questionnaire strongly support the penalty applying only to the competitor involved as opposed to the entire team," said Becky Oakes, NFHS assistant director and liaison to the Track and Field Rules Committee.

In Rule 7-5-2, requirements for pole vault competitors were changed. The rule eliminates the limit of only two layers of tape on the grip end but still requires any tape placed on the pole to be of uniform thickness on the grip end.

In addition, Rule 7-5-25 clarifies who may touch or catch the pole and under what circumstances touching the pole is not allowed. The rule reads, "No person shall be allowed to touch the vaulting pole except an assigned official, assigned pole catcher or the competitor, when circumstances warrant, but never to prevent the pole from dislodging the bar."

"The competitor or designated official can catch the pole, but the touch or catch by the competitor that prevents the crossbar from being dislodged is still a foul," Oakes said.

The committee also made updates to Rule 9-1-1 regarding the method of measuring a cross country course that reflect trends in the sport. The cross country course shall be measured along the shortest possible route that a runner may take, as opposed to measuring down the middle of the course.

Another change now makes it legal for competitors to wear visible undergarments that have a contrasting stitching to the color of the single, solid color of the undergarment. The stitching must function in the construction of the undergarment and not as a design.

Other rules changes approved by the committee include:

Rule 3-4-2: The referee retains clerical authority over the contest through the completion of any reports, including those imposing disqualifications, that are responsive to actions occurring while the referee had jurisdiction. State associations may intercede in the event of unusual incidents after the referee's jurisdiction has ended or in the event that a contest is terminated prior to the conclusion of regulation play.

Rule 5-7-3: The starting command for individual races — or opening relay legs of 800 meters or more outdoors and 600 meters or more indoors — shall be to instruct all competitors to take a position three meters behind the starting line or dashed arc behind the line. With "On your marks," the competitors step to the starting line.

Rule 7-4-10: The games committee may assign competitors to flights of no less than five for preliminary competition or may conduct the event in continuing flights. In continuing flights, the first five competitors, as determined by the games committee, constitute a flight. As a contestant clears the bar, passes a turn at the height or is eliminated, the next competitor in order will be moved up so that the number of competitors in the active flight remains constant. When the field is down to eight or fewer competitors, it is recommended that participants are called as listed on the event sheet.

Rule 9-3-3: Updates were made to this rule that address the use of bib transponders or timing chips on the shoes and the official order of finish when the computerized item(s) are used.

old Jason Blevins of Sitka in Johnson County.

Presented by Phoenix Products, Shoot Hoops Not Drugs camps are fun, interactive, and provide a safe, drug-free to active environment where children have an opportunity to interact with positive role models while learning fundamental basketball skills.

At the beginning of camp, parents and guardians of the youth participants were presented a program on the importance of keeping close tabs on their prescription and over-the-counter medications.

"We need to have strong, healthy, productive children," Beshear told the adults. "We owe it to these kids to give them every opportunity for success."

For youth to reach their potential they need the right influences, she said. This includes addressing environmental and social issues that increase the risk of experimentation with drugs.

"You can't wrap them in cotton. Children in the community belong to the community. We need to take responsibility to provide the right path," Beshear said. "I know what UNITE has been doing over the years. I want to see it continue."

Prescription drug abuse is a growing epidemic across the nation, and studies have shown that most teens first experiment with drugs obtained from their family or a friend's family without their knowledge.

Beshear stressed the importance of keeping track and properly disposing of their prescription and over-the-counter medications, the focus of UNITE's "Accidental Dealer" awareness campaign earlier this year.

Helping make the 2011 Shoot Hoops Not Drugs camps possible are:

Gold Sponsors: Codell Construction, Knox County UNITE Coalition, Rockcastle County UNITE Coalition, Sensure, Telephone and Walmart of Eastern Kentucky.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

A scrub, scrub here, and a scrub, scrub there

by SANDY MILLER HAYS AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

You can't say I'm not up for a challenge!

In my 40s, I decided to tackle learning Spanish—not "Donde está el baño" type of Spanish, but scientific, technical Spanish. That's because in my job, we produce a tremendous amount of news about the research findings of the Agricultural Research Service (ARS), and we thought it would be great to extend those findings even further to a whole other segment of the world's population, by translating our news stories into Spanish.

Obviously, we couldn't be putting out news items that I couldn't even read, so I had to take on the enormous task of learning scientific and technical Spanish. I always say that was a lot like trying to drive a nail into a rock, but I'm now so immersed in Spanish that sometimes I have to turn to Brian at home, with some household object in my hand, and say, "Honey, what do you call this in English?"

Of course, it's somewhat hilarious, because I could stand up and give a passable extemporaneous speech in Spanish about genetic engineering or real-time reverse transcriptase polymerase chain reaction—but I don't really have a clue of how to say "I want to comb my hair" in Spanish.

It's a lot like when I took ballroom dancing as a way to escape (er, I meant "fulfill") the physical education requirement in my freshman year in college. I wound up able to fox trot and tango and rumba and waltz with the best of them, but since the severe shortage of males in the class meant I had to be a "boy" for the whole semester, I can only do those amazing dances if I get to lead!

Then in my 50s, Brian and I took up a whole new challenge, which is sailing. The uninitiated often say, "Ah, sailing, that looks so relaxing!"—when the fact is that as Brian and I are falling out of his car at the end of a sailing weekend, barely able to walk upright, I often say, "Sweetheart, tell me again about how 'relaxing' this is!"

But it's been a real learning experience, too. I now know all about secondary fuel pumps and bilge pumps and yes, I admit it, marine toilets—why they work, how they work, and what you have to do when they don't work. And one thing I've learned is that when you've spent a hot summer day working on a marine toilet, you just can't wash your hands thoroughly enough afterwards! You find yourself thinking, "Hmmm, wonder if I could stand to boil them..."

I think it must be a lot like that for the ARS scientists who work with critters like E. coli and Salmonella. Don't get me wrong, I'm everlastingly grateful that they do it, but I'm just glad it's not me.

One of their latest findings has to do with how E. coli makes itself at home in fresh-cut lettuce. It turns out that the mechanical cutting of lettuce leaves into large chunks or shredding them into stripes can use in two fillings breaks open the lettuce cells. Those broken cells then exude carbohydrates, which the E. coli can use as a source of energy.

Perhaps surprisingly, the injured cells also can leak natural compounds such as antimicrobials that make life a little uncomfortable for the pathogen. But does that help protect us?

The ARS scientists did a study that showed that E. coli, when exposed in lab tests to the contents of broken lettuce cell leaves, can adapt quickly. Using cutting-edge lab tests, the scientists were able to show that the pathogen uses its genetic arsenal to protect itself not only against the antimicrobial compounds, but also against a whole host of threats to its
