BETSY LAYNE High School sent out the call and Betsy Lay School students on August 24.

Betsy Layne High School sent out the call for the first blood drive of the school year, which included a total of 39 donors who rolled up their sleeves and donated at the high school.

According to Floyd County Schools, this blood drive saw 19 first time donors, who expressed a little nervousness, but whose desire to help save lives outweighed any doubts.

"I was a little nervous but it was worth it because I am saving lives," said first-time donor Leanna Hall.

Betsy Layne High School has been a blood drive site for several years.

According to Floyd County Schools, through donating blood and recruiting others to donate, students also learn how important it is to be involved in a community service activity.

BLHS Counselor Micky Ratliff says offering activities such as the blood drive allows students to participate in real-life situations that involve the community and school working together.

BLHS also provides an additional incentive for the students in the form of a scholarship for a graduating senior the Blood Center offers.

Three other drives are being planned for the rest of the school year.

PRESTONSBURG — A Floyd County couple is charged with abusing five children after a horrifying incident was uncovered in their home by police last week.

The police report states that five children were found in the home in which "human and animal feces" was everywhere.

Inside the apartment, three children were found with blisters and rashes, and two more children were found upstairs lying in feces and urine. Prescription medication was also reportedly "scattered throughout the house in the children's reach."

Upstairs, officers found two special-needs children, who were reportedly "found in a room that had a locked gate and a thick string tied from the knob to the gate so door couldn't be opened from inside."

"I cut the string, and found two special-needs

PRESTONSBURG — The Appalachian Regional Commissions "Healthy Families: Healthy Futures" conference began Thursday with several dignitaries in attendance.

Gov. Steve Beshear welcomed visitors from across the state and across the Appalachian region to the conference.

Beshear said the conference is "an opportunity to marshal intellectual and financial resources and focus them on a mission."

According to Beshear, picking a topic for the conference was obvious: "Facing the healthcare situation that we all do, in all our Appalachian counties."

During his opening remarks, Beshear touched on some of the topics to be discussed during the conference, including dental care, childhood obesity and substance abuse.

In regard to the ever-growing substance abuse problem in Appalachia, Beshear said, "We have to take an aggressive approach to tackling the scourge of prescription drug abuse."

Beshear said recent statistics regarding "drug abuse" in Kentucky show that two Kentuckians die every day from overdose deaths. "Prescription drugs are killing more Kentuckians than car wrecks."

Beshear said that recent work with the Florida governor to help reduce the flow of illegal prescription drugs from "Pill Mills" into Kentucky will not solve the problem, but it will help.

ARC Federal Co-Chair Earl F. Grohl also spoke during the opening remarks and touched on the challenges facing Appalachia.

"In Appalachia we have broad challenges, and a lot of great oppor-extended family had been killed in the towers.

Paxton said she was attending a conference at Lake Cumberland and had joined others in front of a television when her phone rang.

"I got a phone call from my father that my brother's brother-in-law had been killed, that he was in the tower," said Paxton.

John G. Farrell, 32, had been an employee at Cantor Fitzgerald, a New York investment firm.

Cantor Fitzgerald's corporate headquarters and New York City office were on the 101st-105th floors of One World Trade Center in Lower Manhattan which was 2-to-6 floors above the impact zone of one of the hijacked airliners. As a result of the attack, Cantor Fitzgerald lost PRESTONSBURG — Memories of the attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon 10 years ago have left lasting effects on the people who watched a tragedy unfold.

"I was high school principal at the time, and I remember one of our office staff telling me that a plane had hit the tower," said Floyd County Supt. Henry Webb.

Webb says, at first, he thought what most people probably thought — that it had been an accident.

"Somebody had a medical situation, something happened, so a plane had veered off course and hit the tower."

Webb says he turned on the TV just in time to see the second plane hit the South Tower, and then he knew it was no accident.

"Being in a school, word spread pretty kind of fast, once it was stated that terrorists, that we're under attack," said Webb. "I remember panic from faculty and staff, from the kids."

Webb says he and the faculty talked to the kids, and tried to keep them informed about what was happening.

Webb says no one knew exactly what was happening. "There was a lot of uncertainty. Was it widespread? Was it coordinated? What was going to be next? Lots of things were going through parents' minds, through people's minds."

"I'll never forget the images of people jumping out of the windows," said Webb.

For others in Floyd County, none of what was happening seemed real.

"It was the most helpless day," said Cheryl Leslie, owner of Lad-N-Lassie.

where he trained to prepare to teach this class. Mayton and his classmates created projects that he will use in his classroom.

"I think our students will see tremendous benefit from this program. It raises expectations and will help our students better understand the skills their future careers require," said Mayton.

Principles of Biomedical Sciences is a part of a four-course sequence to prepare students for careers in medical, engineering and other science and math fields. Students engage in hands-on activities as they explore the complexities of the human body systems.

According to Floyd County Schools, PLTW has relationships with more than 100 colleges and universities. Of these, 36 offer credit to students for completion of select PLTW courses. Students who receive an 80 percent on the national test for Biomedical Sciences could receive college credit for an anatomy class at selected colleges.

PLTW is a national nonprofit organization that partners with middle schools and high schools to implement a curriculum that emphasizes hands-on experiences in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics to prepare students for academic and professional success in these disciplines.

This project is based on a grant the school received this past spring. Allen Central High School officials say thanks are due to Connie Estep, who aided in the grant-writing process.

Allen Central High School officials say this is one step toward ensuring that graduates are college- and career-ready and is excited about the opportunities it will afford those students who complete the program.

Grohl says that the role of the ARC is to allow people the opportunity to take advantage of opportunities.

"The world has changed a lot, it's changed in terms of how the United States deals with health care, it's changed in terms of the way the ARC has been able to engage the communities," said Grohl.

Grohl said that the conference is about the details of health care, "four real serious challenges that we have in Appalachia."

"If there is one idea that you take back home for one kid, if there is one idea that you take back home that makes your healthcare system in your community more robust and more active, if there is one idea that you take back home that reduces the cost of health care, you've met the goals of ARC. You've helped create a more competitive workforce. You've helped to create jobs. And you've also helped reduce, contribute to the reduction of the national debt," said Grohl. Topics being discussed at the conference include:

- Expanding healthcare access for children
 - Creating community-based approaches to disease prevention
 - Preventing substance abuse among adolescents
 - Improving children's oral health
 - Using information technology to improve the quality of health care
- The two day conference is taking place at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

House Republican pre-files bills dealing with allowing expanded gaming in Ky.

FRANKFORT — Rep. Mike Nemes, R-Louisville (38th District) announced Thursday that he has pre-filed two bills for the 2012 session that, if approved, would allow voters to decide whether to allow expanded gaming in Kentucky.

"This issue has been debated for years in the Commonwealth on whether to allow gaming in Kentucky, even whether it needs voter approval or not," said Rep. Nemes. "While the Commonwealth drags its feet on this issue, other states like Indiana and Ohio have approved legislation on expanded gaming. It's time for the voters of Kentucky to end debate and decide whether Kentucky needs to legalize expanded gaming."

BR 189 would place a constitutional amendment on the ballot for the 2012 General Election for voters to come to a decision on whether expanded gaming should be legal. BR 246 would establish a new section of KRS Chapter 239 for implementation of expanding gaming. Rep. Nemes says BR 246 is different that past proposals for expanding gaming for various reasons:

- It allows counties to vote on whether or not to allow expanded gaming in their community
- Allows horse racing facilities in counties that approve expanded gaming an option for a limited gaming license
- Allows counties with horse racing facilities to vote on whether to allow only a limited gaming license or both full and limited licenses
- Opens bidding for a full casino license to all entities including but not limited to horse racing facilities in counties that approve expanded gaming

- Gives horse racing facilities the option to take the winning bid with all amenities and add eight percent to obtain the full license in that county that approves expanded gaming
- Gives counties a fee of $1 per admission from those entering a casino
- Gives counties a say to restricting and the minimum requirements for acceptable facilities
- Gives counties a say as to which bid is accepted for expanding gaming facilities in their community

In addition Rep. Nemes' bills also sets up a statewide program to provide counseling and assistance for compulsive gamblers. "It is my belief these bills represent a good first step in debating expanded gambling in the 2012 session," Rep. Nemes added. "I know there are many different ideas, views and concerns about this issue not only among legislators but with Kentuckians as well. But it's time we decide whether expanding gambling is good or bad for our Commonwealth, and the only way to do that is put it before the voters."

Kentucky ranked first for higher-ed improvement

FRANKFORT — Over the past decade, Kentucky has improved faster than any state in the nation on key higher education performance measures, according to a report issued Wednesday by the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems of Boulder, Colorado.

Realizing Kentucky's Educational Attainment Goal: A Look in the Rear View Mirror and Down the Road Ahead measures Kentucky's rate of improvement on key metrics from 2000 to 2009. The report found that Kentucky ranked first among all states on three metrics, including the rate of improvement in the percent of working-age adults with college degrees, six-year graduation rates at four-year colleges and universities, and the number of undergraduate credentials awarded relative to the population with no college degree.

Kentucky ranked second in the nation in the rate of improvement in the percentage of younger adults, ages 25 to 44, with college degrees, as well as in the rate of improvement in the three-year graduation rates at two-year institutions. Further, total undergraduate credentials produced in the Commonwealth increased at a rate that surpassed all but four states.

The announcement was made at a news conference attended by Gov. Steve Beshear and other dignitaries instrumental in the passage of the Kentucky Postsecondary Education Improvement Act of 1997 (House Bill 1). The landmark legislation was signed into law by former Governor Paul E. Patton who now serves as the chair of the Council on Postsecondary Education.

"We are here today to acknowledge and celebrate the tremendous progress that has been made by Kentucky's postsecondary system on key measures of educational performance.

This kind of success would not be possible without the dedication of many leaders, educators and volunteers who made higher education improvement a priority," Gov. Steve Beshear said.

"Better education - and better access to education - are keys to sustained economic growth for our state. Investing in higher education is not only an investment in our students, but also an investment in our economy and future economic competitiveness."

Council President Bob King said, "This progress validates the vision of HB1, which created a new set of expectations for postsecondary education tied to higher levels of degree production, economic growth, and greater opportunity for all citizens.

"While we are improving at a faster rate than other states on these measures, Kentucky still faces challenges that we will focus on over the next several years, including college and career readiness, achievement gaps, and better connecting the work of higher education with the state's economic needs," added King. The report's key findings are described below.

- Since the year 2000, Kentucky's college attainment rate for associate degrees and higher among adults age 25 to 64 has improved by six percentage points - from 24.5 to 30.5 percent. The actual percentage change from 2000 to 2009 was the largest of any state in the nation.
- The percentage of college degree-holders among younger adults has improved by more than six percentage points from 27.3 to 33.7 percent. The most notable change is in Kentucky's state ranking from 44th in 2000 to 36th in 2009. Over this time period:

The tribute by the Cow Creek Fire Department to honor Taylor was felt by each of us in our hearts and souls. The wonderful dinner held by the Cow Creek Freewill Baptist Church for family and friends was truly appreciated. A special "thank you" to the Auxier VFW and George Bailey. The military honors were truly amazing. The flags that were presented will be passed on through generations of our family. Thank you, Roger and Sandy and all of the Nelson Frazier Funeral Home staff. May God bless each of you in a special way and keep you in his care.

Worth Repeating ...

The Usual Eccentric

Flippant treatment of vampires makes my blood boil

by WILL E. SANDERS

I know a lot of vampires, so I just want to give you proper warning: They are super peeved. Their words, not mine. Well, they didn't actually say "peeved." They used another word for it. It rhymes with the word — well, that word isn't suitable for publication, either, nor that I think about it.

My point is that these vampires I know have every right to be upset. Look at how their kind has been inaccurately portrayed in such horrifying literature as the "Twilight" books — which are nothing more than pre-pubescent vampire porn for teens — or the fancy HBO television series "True Blood," which actually might constitute as pornography.

Personally, I sympathize with the vampires. They believe that for far too long, their ilk have silently suffered the ill effects of nasty and hateful stereotypes and Hollywood re-brandings. Maybe a new civil rights movement is needed.

For starters, despite what Anne Rice might have you otherwise believe, most vampires do not stroll about the five-long night in gold shirts half-unbuttoned and long, luxurious locks of flowing hair dangling from their undead heads. Nor do they use hair gel. Most vampires I know dress just like us (some even wear sweatpants) and object to such archaic characterizations.

There's no getting around the truth: Most vampires are not kind individuals. Most are ruthless predators no more concerned with our lives than we are with a hamburger's feelings moments before half-unbuttoned our jaws to destroy the latest bacon burger at Burger King.

Nor are vampires interested in sex. In fact, they lack the testicular wherewithal — if you know what I mean — to perform the act altogether. After all, "immortal" and "impotent" are synonymous. I wonder if I will ever live to see vampire Viagra.

For some strange reason, that reminds me of something. While many Democrat vampires exist, only the most ardent and depraved vampires on this continent sit within the dark chambers of the Republican National Committee's elite inner circle. It is for no other reason that the other Democrat vampires purposefully place an obvious liberal bias on most network news programming.

Heck, one vampire even told me that Larry King actually is a vampire. That's definitely one theory explaining his longevity, no doubt. Plus, his show was always on exclusively at night after the sun went down. That's pretty convenient, if you ask me.

Speaking of the sun, don't breach the issue with a vampire. It's a burning topic with them — and with me. See, my girlfriend goes to every one of those "Twilight" movies, which of course means I go to every one of those "Twilight" movies.

Every. Single. One. On opening night. And there's like, 17 or 18 of those movies made every month.

For those of you with a life, the "Twilight" franchise is about a vampire named Edward or Eugene. I can't remember. All I can tell you is that actual vampires have cooler names. Anyway, Edgar is an 89-year-old vampire who has a sexual tryst with an underage gal whose name isn't important.

Essentially, it's vampire pedophilia, or human necrophilia; I can't tell which.

But that's not what really bothers me. That's right, supernatural child molesters don't bother me.

What bothers me is the vampires in those "Twilight" movies aren't bothered with the sun. They go into warm rays of the sun and go surfing. They don't even put sunscreen on.

Like an expired blood bag, that doesn't sit well with me. For the sake of conversation, let's pretend vampires didn't exist. We could agree that vampires are fictional creatures, and as such would be open to future adaptations with those who seek to create liberties with their way of life.

It's universally accepted that vampires do not come out in the daylight, because doing so would immediately annihilate them. The "Twilight" came along and stripped the bloodsuckers of even that notion. In "Twilight," vampires aren't killed by the sun. The only drawback for going out into it is — they sparkle like a cheap nightlight.

So where does it stop? Why don't we also strip them of their fangs, bloodlust and penchant for speaking in 18th century dialects? Before long, vampires will be so watered down that we might as well call them humans.

The very thought makes my blood run cold. To contact WILL E. Sanders, visit his website at willsanderson.com, or send him an email at willte@willesanders.com.

Apple's Steve Jobs: Not quite Henry Ford

By DONALD KAUL

OTHERWORDS

Steve Jobs has the rare privilege of attending his own funeral. Who among us hasn't wanted to do that — to see who's there, who's not, who's crying and who seems perfectly calm, even bored?

He's not dead, of course, but ever since he stepped down as chief executive of Apple last month, people have treated him as though he were. Virtual obituaries, eulogies, and testimonials are flowing freely.

And I'm sure he's pleased with the reviews. They're very, very good. A visionary on the level of Henry Ford, they say. The greatest entrepreneur of his time. A business genius.

And so he was. I mean it. More or less.

He didn't invent the computer or the cell phone or the Internet. But he did bring them to the fingertips of the average person and make them a virtual necessity.

He was a hard-driving executive who hired brilliant engineers and drove them relentlessly to things they didn't realize they could do, all with the consumer in mind.

Above all, he brought an elegant sense of aesthetics to an industry that was, up to then, innocent of it. Just walking into an Apple store makes you feel cleaner.

Once, having been ousted as Apple's leader, he bought Pixar. He developed it into the most innovative and best of its kind.

He owns nearly 300 patents, but his main skill was (there I go again, is) a kind of editor. He worked with his teams to craft and shape their inventions to correspond with his signature style and unique vision.

It can be said that he transformed his industry and in doing so changed the way we live. Yet, even with all that, he was no Henry Ford.

Ford was born during the Civil War in 1863 into a world of horses and wagons, oil lamps and outdoor plumbing.

By the time he died in 1947, just after World War II, it was in a world largely of his making, dotted with giant factories and crisscrossed with paved highways lined with cars capable of traveling 100 miles an hour.

It was a world of exploding suburban growth with an interstate highway system just over the horizon and the decline of our great industrial cities just about to begin, victims of their (and his) success.

Ford didn't invent the automobile any more than Jobs the computer. Yet, like Jobs, he brought his remarkable machine within reach of the average man and eventually made it all but a necessity of life.

He was doing so he changed where we live, where we shop, where we work, and the very air we breathe. Parenthetically, he also did a lot for teenage sex.

JWT responds to Times coverage

The Board and staff at Jenny Wiley Theatre (JWT) would like to thank you for your story and editorial expressing your concerns in regard to the new indoor facility in Pikeville. We would also like to take this time to clarify the facts regarding the expansion and our process of informing our supporters and the public. In fact, JWT had a carefully designed plan to thoughtfully and respectfully inform our supporters, especially those in the Prestonsburg area, about this opportunity and its benefits.

This is not a change from outdoor to indoor theatre: JWT will continue to provide summer productions at the amphitheatre at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park as it has done for the last 47 summers. In fact, this expansion is nothing new. JWT has been trying to provide year-round theatre for nearly a decade. However, the last few economic conditions has hampered this effort significantly as we have to continuously search for production slots, rehearsal space and adapt to a variety of physical spaces and limitations. Despite these challenges, it is imperative that JWT provide year-round indoor theatre at this time, for a variety of reasons:

First, funding for summer-only theatre has decreased over the last decade. In fact, the Kentucky Arts Council requires all arts organizations to be year-round in order to be eligible for state funds through the KACC. This necessitated our expansion into indoor, year-round theatre several years ago and necessitates our continued expansion in that direction.

Second, audience participation in outdoor summer theatre is declining for a variety of reasons: warmer temperatures, increased threat of inclement weather and competition from air-conditioned activities, including more home entertainment options, are major challenges. Also, recent economic conditions and higher gas prices have resulted in declining outlays in travel and entertainment, and from our constituents out of the region. Over the last five to seven years numerous outdoor theatres have closed and the Institute of Outdoor Drama even shut down until East Carolina University took it over as a result of the economic crisis. JWT has survived to survive it cannot depend solely on outdoor summer amphitheatre.

Additional points in your article are worth clarifying as well. This expansion by JWT does not compromise holiday show offerings in Prestonsburg; in fact, that has not been the case since 2005. While JWT would have been happy to produce a holiday show at the MAC, the MAC's holiday production schedule makes a JWT show during that season impossible. The absence of a theatrical holiday offering in Prestonsburg will not be the result of this expansion as it occurred prior to this agreement.

Also, while Prestonsburg may lament the opportunity for JWT to create a year-round slate in another location, the City and the MAC were, in fact, approached last spring about this very issue. Research indicates that additional arts offerings in an area enhance existing ones rather than detract from them. In essence, when it comes to the arts, the more the merrier. Theatre patrons who seek outdoor theatre will continue to do so, and are unlikely to substitute attendance at a smaller indoor theatre during the year for that outdoor experience. Expanding JWT to include year-round theatre will increase participation in the arts and create additional productions as well as hopefully increase participation at the MAC, the Mountain Homeplace, the Sipp Theatre, Actors Collaborative Theatre and other performing arts venues in our region.

The clause regarding the 36-month period of no repetition of shows may seem problematic at first glance but actually poses no threat. First, JWT retains artistic control over the theatre and will determine the show selection for each season. Second, the clause does not prevent JWT from repeating a show within three years (with the exception of The Legend of Jenny Wiley which is not subject to that clause). Good marketing drives show selection and shows are never repeated to repeat a show within the 36-month period, the JWT Board will make that judgement and the year of Pikeville will recognize the benefit to making the exception. Second, the venues will dictate very different types of shows. The Amphitheatre will continue to be the home of large musical productions that JWT is known for, while a smaller indoor space will be more suited to smaller musicals and dramas. Again, one will enhance the other and what is good for JWT will be good for both Prestonsburg and Pikeville and our entire community. In a related matter, it is important to note that The Legend of Jenny Wiley is, by this contract, protected as a show to be presented at the Jenny Wiley State Resort Park amphitheatre, and would only move elsewhere in the event that the amphitheatre is closed.

Finally, your implication that this expansion will somehow be a panacea for our financial woes is incorrect if only that were the case! The contributions by the City of Pikeville are solely oriented towards getting a new indoor facility built and operational. This will allow JWT to expand to a year-round production schedule with a full schedule rather than incrementally as we have been trying to do for the last years. This should allow us to reap the benefits (financial and otherwise) more quickly than we would from an incremental or highly debt-ridden approach. While this contribution may reduce the amount needed to be raised to launch a full year round schedule, it will not cover the entire amount and fundraising for ongoing operations as well as new programming must continue full throttle. And, for the record, JWT's offices will remain in Prestonsburg and the contract does not stipulate a move of the business offices, contrary to your editorial. The Pikeville space will, of course, have a box office and require tickets to be able to produce shows in that location, but the Jenny Wiley Theatre office will remain in Prestonsburg.

Jenny Wiley Theatre has, for 47 years, provided quality entertainment in eastern Kentucky that enhances the region's culture and economically. The JWT Board desires to continue to provide that level of professional theatre for the next 47 years. Expanding to include a complete roster of year-round indoor productions is necessary if we are to survive. We hope that eastern Kentucky can learn from the example being set by Mayors Gray and Fisher of Lexington and Louisville that cooperation and collaboration will be more effective in promoting economic development than competition between cities. There is no reason why this continued expansion of JWT cannot be a win-win for Prestonsburg and Pikeville as well as Jenny Wiley theatre and all the citizens of eastern Kentucky.

AARP's 'Drive to End Hunger' in spotlight in September

Times Staff Report

FRANKFORT — September is Hunger Action Month, but the "Drive to End Hunger" has been in high gear for months. Four-time Sprint Cup champion Jeff Gordon has suited up for AARP to help raise awareness and dollars for food banks.

Gordon has decked out his trademark No. 24 race car with the logo for AARP's anti-hunger campaign.

Scott Wegenast, associate state director of AARP Kentucky, notes how the recession has affected Kentuckians, especially those age 50 and older.

"AARP launched a 'Drive to End Hunger' several months ago. And, in Kentucky, almost 6 percent of our seniors are at risk of hunger every day."

Contributions help the Meals on Wheels program and local food banks such as Feeding America, Kentucky's Heartland in Elizabethtown, a regional food bank which serves more than 125,000 people in 42 counties, according to development director Tamj Delaney.

"The majority of the individuals that attend our local food distributions on a monthly basis would be your seniors, who are just trying to supplement their monthly income, and also people with disabilities."

The food pantry saw a 30 percent increase in need when the recession began three years ago, Delaney says, and the numbers haven't tapered off.

"I would love to tell you that the need isn't as great as it once was, but the truth is that the lines when we give out food at a local distribution, they're still long. And, they're still seeing new faces and new situations."

The Drive to End Hunger campaign is necessary because, Wegenast says, for older adults the need is great.

"We're providing short-term support for people in need. We're increasing the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program enrollment for qualified individuals. And, we're developing sustainable solutions to hunger."

AARP says Kentucky ranks

18th in the nation for food insecurity among seniors. Nationwide, nearly 9 million Americans age 50 and older face hunger risks, according to new research commissioned by the AARP Foundation, and those numbers have spiked significantly in the sluggish economy. The Drive to End Hunger will be featured on Gordon's race car through 2013. More information about the campaign is online at drivetoendhunger.com.

Hazard artist on display at Big Sandy Community and Technical College

Times Staff Report

PRESTONSBURG — Big Sandy Community and Technical College (BSCTC) plans to host the work of Hazard artist Marge Fulton in the Art Gallery this month.

BSCTC says Marge Fulton's art has as many layers as a Stack Cake. Paint, torn paper, stamped designs and textured elements like dyed baby wipes and party napkins often are part of her creations which will be open to the public beginning September 15 and lasting through October 15 in the Prestonsburg Campus art gallery.

Art seemed to always be just around the corner for Marge. Her mother painted about twenty-five oil paintings.

The family of four moved often as her father climbed the corporate ladder. Ten states were called home. Art was a refuge for her mother; it has become the same for Marge.

She says, while she was in high school a family friend who was a doctor told her parents she should study medical illustration. Special Education became her career instead but art kept that classroom rolling.

Two decades of teaching blossomed into a beloved second career in the arts.

One of her mixed media paintings sold at a London craft fair just after Thanksgiving. It was a sunflower made from torn pieces of a yellowed German church bulletin. The buyer had family in Kansas of German descent. Somehow that sale seemed to be a milestone for her. Paintings like Giant Sunflower symbolize her life and art style. The mixed media combination of papers and several layers of paint combine to form a complex but balanced picture.

Although she loves the simplicity of watercolor or drawing mediums, collage art is her magnet. Art journaling has also become a passion. In the past year she has been contracted to teach three workshops on art journaling.

The Appalachian Artisan Center in Hindman, KY has been a big part of her development as an artist. As a studio artist she got her feet wet. They have facilitated three shows for her so far: The Underground Gallery at Whitesburg, Artwalk at Whitesburg and her recent show at Whitesburg.

Governor, First Lady ask Kentuckians to remember victims, families and military on 9/11

FRANKFORT — Gov. Steve Beshear and First Lady Jane Beshear are asking all Kentuckians to remember each of the lives lost on 9/11 with a statewide day of prayer and remembrance on Sunday, Sept. 11.

"Sunday marks ten years since the terrorist attacks that rocked our nation and took the lives of nearly 3,000 Americans. It was a horrendous event in our country's history," Gov. Beshear said. "Jane and I are asking every Kentuckian to join us in this day of prayer and remembrance to honor these Americans and their families on 9/11."

The governor is also requesting that flags at all state office buildings be lowered to half-staff from sunrise to sunset on Sunday, Sept. 11.

"It's important for all of us to remember the men and women who lost their lives on this day back in 2001 — as well as the thousands of military servicemen and women who have been fighting terrorism since that terrible day," said First Lady Jane Beshear. "In the last ten years, our nation has continued to fight the war on terrorism at home and around the world."

At 2 p.m. on Sunday, the Governor and First Lady will attend a 10-year anniversary event in Louisville at Waterfront Park on River Road. Gov. Beshear recently joined three other governors on a visit to the Middle East to personally thank the nation's troops for their continued patriotism and sacrifice.

"These men and women volunteer to protect our freedoms and willingly put themselves in dangerous circumstances because they believe in something bigger than themselves," Gov. Beshear said. "They truly deserve not only our utmost respect, but also our everlasting gratitude."

The call for a statewide day of prayer and remembrance is part of Gov. Beshear's overall effort to pledge his support to the initiative began on Memorial Day with a ceremony in Grant County and will lead up to a Veterans Day celebration.

Veterans Day is Nov. 11, 2011 - or 11-11-11.

Gov. Beshear and his administration are highlighting and honoring Kentucky's veterans through Veterans Day with this special initiative. The initive began on Memorial Day with a ceremony in Grant County and will lead up to a Veterans Day celebration.

Beshear announces more than $650,000 for Rural Dental Education Partnership PRESTONSBURG — Gov. Steve Beshear announced Wednesday a new Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) and higher education partnership to enhance sustainable, collaborative dental health education and care in Eastern Kentucky. Morehead State University (MSU), the University of Pikeville (UPIKE) and the University of Kentucky (UK), through its College of Dentistry, will partner in the design of the Appalachian Rural Dental Educational Partnership Plan. The goal: to train more dentists to practice in rural areas and give them the tools necessary to set up thriving dental practices in eastern Kentucky.

"Maintaining proper dental care is a fundamental health matter that affects every Kentuckian, yet not every Kentuckian has access to adequate dental treatment," Gov. Beshear said. "Implementing this planning project is an essential step toward recruiting and educating more dentists in Appalachia who can provide the quality care our citizens need. Thanks to ARC and each university involved in taking the lead on this worthy and important project for our state."

The Appalachian Rural Dental Educational Partnership Plan is funded by a $400,000 ARC grant, as well as $127,292 from UK, $82,035 from UPIKE and $47,873 from MSU.

The partnership's main goal is to design and implement a program to increase the number of practicing dentists in Appalachia through enhanced training, recruitment and educational assistance. Through the program's implementation, potential dental care providers will not only have access to high-quality oral health education, but will also learn how to operate financially sound rural dental practices. The participating universities will assess national dental education models with similar objectives before designing and developing dental programs and DMD degree options for eastern Kentucky.

"The majority of eastern Kentuckians have struggled to sustain quality dental health, and one of the barriers to maintaining good dental health is poor access of quality dental care," said Department for Local Government (DLG) Commissioner Tony Wilder. "I commend Gov. Beshear, ARC and the universities for creating and expanding opportunities for dentists to provide much-needed quality care for our Appalachian communities."

The most recent Kentucky Dental Provider Workforce Analysis estimated there will be 2,064 practicing dentists in 2016, a loss of 286 dentists from the state total in 2006. This study also documented the uneven distribution of dentists - with the lowest numbers of dentists per population in the rural eastern and western counties. A January 2010 re-licensure data analysis found that of Kentucky's 2,348 practicing dentists, 40 percent were age 55 or older.

"This is another example of how collaboration between educational institutions can benefit citizens of Kentucky," MSU President Wayne D. Andrews said. "A lot of hard work by each university went into this and we are extremely proud to be able to offer this program. Dental health is very important to overall health and we know that many people are struggling to afford dental treatment at the moment, so the program will undoubtedly improve access to dental care."

"We know that if we can break a cycle of poor health, we can begin to break cycles of poverty. Cycles of despair can become legacies of hope," said UK President Eli Capiluto. "We also, increasingly, know that partnerships and greater collaboration are the best - and, perhaps, only way to address major challenges. Against the backdrop of a still challenged national economy, it is even more important that we engage in strategic alliances and partnerships. Uncommon resolve can be utilized to tackle common concerns and address commonly held challenges. Today's announcement represents a unique partnership: Federal funding from the Appalachian Regional Commission; leadership at the state level from the Governor and his team; a commitment of resources from the state's flagship institution, Kentucky's public institution dedicated to serving the people of eastern Kentucky, and a critically important college with deep roots in eastern Kentucky."

"Poor oral health is a serious problem in Eastern Kentucky," said UPIKE President Paul E. Patton. "The University of Pikeville is pleased to join in this partnership with the University of Kentucky and Morehead State University to address the issue. This effort will be a part of our continued programs of service to the people of central Appalachia."

The Appalachian Rural Dental Education Program is the second announcement in a month from Gov. Beshear as a part of his Healthy Smiles Kentucky initiative, a groundbreaking effort launched in 2009 aimed at improving the dental health of Kentucky's young people. Two weeks ago, Gov. Beshear heralded a new pilot program called "Smiling Schools," also funded in part by ARC, which will improve dental health for 25,000 Kentucky children.

To learn more about the Healthy Smiles Kentucky initiative, visit KidsHealth.ky.gov.

Established in 1965, ARC partners with federal, state and local governments in an effort to support sustainable community and economic growth throughout Appalachia by funding projects that range from education and job training to housing and business expansion to transportation and infrastructure development.

rion, Kentucky moved more positions in the positive direction than any state in the U.S.

The six-year graduation rates at four-year institutions, both public and private, improved nearly nine percentage points from 2000 to 2009. This is the largest percentage change of any state in the U.S., and Kentucky moved nine positions among the states - from 44th to 35th.

The three-year graduation rates at two-year institutions increased by roughly the same amount. It was the third highest percentage point change in the nation, and Kentucky moved from 38th among states to 16th.

Kentucky had the fifth highest percentage point change in total undergraduate credential and degree production (one year or more in length) of any state in the country. This is even more impressive considering that the states ahead of Kentucky (Arkansas, Florida, Nevada and Virginia) benefited on this measure largely because of shifting demographics.

The percentage change in the number of undergraduate credentials awarded per 1,000 adults with no college degree is the largest in nation. This is a measure of market penetration and shows how well states are awarding college credentials relative to the population in need. On this metric, Kentucky jumped nine positions from 45th among states in 2000 to 36th in 2009.

Keathley joins NBA D-League team as assistant coach

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

Former East Kentucky Miners head coach Kevin Keathley is now one step from the NBA. Keathley has been named an assistant coach for the Bakersfield Jam, an NBA D-League franchise in California. Bakersfield is the affiliate team of the NBA's Phoenix Suns, Toronto Raptors and Los Angeles Clippers. In Bakersfield, Keathley will have an opportunity to work with Jam head coach Will Voigt. A few years back, Pro Basketball News touted Keathley and Voigt as two of the nation's top 10 coaches not in the NBA. Voigt is doing well with the Bakersfield franchise and the Keathleys hire makes the Jam coaching staff even stronger. The Jam had four players called up to the NBA last season. One of the players, Trey Johnson, signed a two-year deal with the Los Angeles Lakers. In around two weeks, Keathley will be in California working for the D-League team.

"Words can't do my feelings justice in this case," Keathley commented. "I'm extremely excited and grateful for the opportunity that the Bakersfield Jam and Coach (Will) Voigt have given me. To get a chance to learn from one of the brightest coaches on the pro level and to work for such an outstanding organization just makes this opportunity that much more special."

The Jam will open up the 2011-12 NBA D-League regular-season against Reno Nov. 25. Bakersfield compiled a record of 29-21 last season and reached the NBA D-League Playoffs.

The NBA D-League enjoyed a record number of callups to the NBA last season. NBA TV and the Versus Network carry NBA D-League games. The talent-heavy NBA D-League features several notable coaches, including former NBA head coach Eric Musselman. NBA D-League teams play a 50-game regular-season schedule.

Keathley is eager to go to work in California. He'll also have an opportunity to reunite with Brian Levy, a former member of the East Ken-

Woods' fifth-place finish at Pickwick to air on Versus

KENNETH "BOO" WOODS

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

HAZARD — A FLW Tour tournament held at Pickwick Lake (Florence, Ala.) featuring an area fisherman will air on Versus Sunday at 1 p.m. Mark Rose (Marion, Ark.) won his first-ever FLW Tour title on July 24 at Pickwick Lake. Kevin Snider (Elizabethtown), Robbie Dodson (Harrison, Ark.) and Lance Vick (Mineola, Texas) occupied the first-fourth-place positions, respectively. The winner was local angler Kenneth "Boo" Woods. Using a total catch of 67 pounds, 9 ounces, Woods, a Hazard resident, managed a top-five finish.

"At the last EverStart Series event here I spent a lot of time looking around (for good fishing areas)," Woods, a fifth-place finisher, said following his fifth-place finish. "I basically fished that tournament in preparation for this week. But during that June tournament, I found this spot where there was a big school of fish. And when I came here I found them again — I actually couldn't believe it. We wound up thrashing on those fish for three solid days."

In the end, Woods netted a payday totaling more than $16,000.

Woods, who calls Kentucky Lake his favorite body of water to fish, recommends the FLW Outdoors Fantasy Fishing Challenge, which is free to free to enter. Woods is fishing at Lake Champlain this weekend in another tour event.

ucky Miners front office. Levy is Bakersfield's Director of Player Personnel.

"I look forward to getting started and doing whatever it takes to build a championship-caliber team this season," Keathley added. "We have an outstanding staff in place. I've heard nothing but good things about Coach Voigt over the years and know that he has a big-time work ethic and drive to be successful. Brian Levy worked for me with the Miners and he has an outstanding basketball mind as well as a great feel for the business. I couldn't ask for a better group of people to go to work with. It's going to be an exciting year in Bakersfield."

Keathley will have an opportunity to work upcoming free agent camps for the Jam.

"I know Coach Voigt and the staff have been working hard on preparing for the draft as well as our free agent camps," Keathley added. "So, I'm looking forward to jumping in and helping where coach needs me. We have a busy couple of months ahead of us with free agent camps in Phoenix and Toronto."

One of Keathley's early assignments will be coaching in a D-League camp in Los Angeles.

"I was asked to coach in the NBA D-League pre-draft camp out in Los Angeles on the 24th of this month, so that will essentially be my first event as a member of the Jam's staff," Keathley said. "The NBA and NBA D-League did such a great job with the event they held in Louisville earlier in the summer. I'm just honored that they asked me to come back to be a part of the second one. I look forward to getting out in LA and doing some scouting and coaching in the event. A lot of solid players showed up to the one in Louisville. Hopefully the league will have that same type of turnout for this camp."

Keathley got a taste of the D-League over the summer when he coached in the league's camp held in Louisville.

"When you get an opportunity to coach within an NBA platform and work with teams like the Phoenix Suns, LA Clippers and Toronto Raptors, you don't let the opportunity pass you by," Keathley said. "It's the chance to see how you measure up against the very best in the coaching profession."

Keathley was instrumental in bringing professional basketball to Eastern Kentucky. His East Kentucky Miners teams entertained fans in back-to-back CBA seasons. Keathley will take a part of Eastern Kentucky with him to California.

"The last 10 years has prepared me for this moment and I'm really ready to use the experience that I have to help Coach Voigt and the rest of the staff in any capacity," Keathley confided. "I just want to win ball games and learn from Coach Voigt and the other coaches around the league. I really couldn't be more thankful. To have the chance to work with Brian Levy and team with him makes this a little more special. He's a good young up and coming guy in this business and it makes it a little more exciting when you know you're going to work with hungry individuals - and Brian is one of those people." Keathley figured it out well on a Voigt-led coaching staff known for working hard and producing wins. The Floyd County native has already been a part of two championship teams on the professional level.

"Coach Voigt is one of the very best that the NBA D-League has to offer and to get an opportunity to work with him gets me pumped up," Keathley exclaimed. "It's going to be a special year. Coach Voigt brings a hardworking attitude and when the head guys sets the tone with hardwork, it's going to bring out the best with everyone else on the staff."

Winning the two championships on the pro level were really special, but this ranks right up there."

the season. Allen Central took the first set 25-20 in the Floyd County high school volleyball match. But the Ladycats battled back. Betsy Layne won the second set 25-21, evening the match and setting the stage for a dramatic third set. Allen Central rebounded to win the third set 25-20, posting the district/conference win.

Allen Central improved to 3-0 in conference/district play.

Katie Kendrick paced the Rebels with 14 kills via 700 hitting. Courtney Hedge contributed six kills for the Rebels. Brooke Risner earned 19 assists as Allen Central won.

Allen Central hit 311, producing 34 kills. Brenna Ousley and Kelsey Blevins slapped in three service aces each. Both Ousley and Blevins served without an error in the match.

Defensively, Allen Central returned 157 Betsy Layne point attempts, earning 52 digs. Julie Halbert led the Rebels with 20 digs. Kelsey Blevins added eight digs for 15th Region All "A" Classic champion Allen Central. Kendrick registered six blocks and a block-assist while Katelyn Tackett stopped five attempts for the Rebels. Ciara Jones also earned a block-assist in Allen Central's district/conference victory.

Allen Central will face 12th Region champion Burgin on Saturday at 8 a.m. in the All "A" Classic Statewide Tournament at Paducah.

The setback came by scores of 25-21, 25-13 and 25-19 and kept the Bears winless through seven matches this season.

UPIKE was led offensively by sophomore Paige Thacker, who had 10 of its 21 kills in the win and all but one of its four service aces.

Junior Brooke Parrott and freshman Alexis Howard had nine assists each.

lier in a season-opener.

Leslie County limited Leslie County to 130 yards of total offense. The Rebels netted only 59 yards via 28 carries. Struggling at times to hold on to the football, Allen Central fumbled on three separate occasions en route to the setback.

Allen Central was 11-of-28 passing for 71 yards. Leslie County intercepted three Allen Central passes in the non-district game.

The Rebels also failed to find the endzone from two yards out during one of their drives.

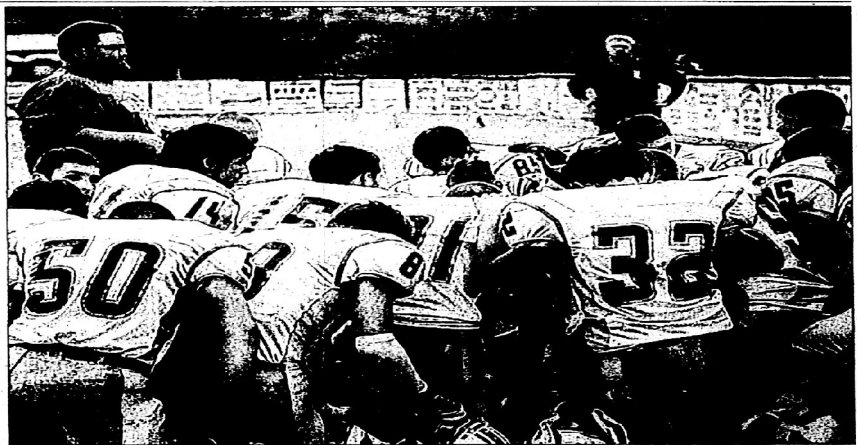

Six costly turnovers hindered the Allen Central offensive unit's progress.

Zach Murphy led Allen Central on the ground. Murphy netted 55 yards on only five carries.

Defensive leaders for the Rebels were Chris Hunter (seven tackles, one sack, one tackle for a loss, one fumble recovery), Sheldon Rice (seven tackles, one for a loss), Aaron Wright (one fumble recovery for a touchdown) and Micah Harlow (one forced fumble).

"We turned the ball over six times, seven if you count the turn over on downs on the two-yard line," Allen Central Coach Jeremy Hall commented. "At the same time, that's not taking anything away from Leslie County — they are a really good team and getting better every week. I think that district had better give them some credit. They are fundamentally-sound, big and athletic and that makes for a great football team. But we did shoot ourselves in the foot, more than once. Several times as a matter of fact. We can't turn the ball over and expect to win. We've went back to work on ball control and doing the little things right this week. We are back against a very good and off to a good start Betsy Layne team. We have to get healthy, we have to get our basics done and done right and we have to work hard. A big win one week does not mean that the next week that team will lay down for you. Especially when they are good and expect to win. This week our motto has been practice hard and when we are going hard enough, go harder."

Allen Central will host Floyd County rival Betsy Layne tonight. Kickoff for the Allen Central-Betsy Layne game is set for 7:30 played on Paul E. Patton Court.

The naming was announced and the signage unveiled at a press conference held at the Expo Center on Tuesday morning.

"I'm very surprised and honored by this," he said.

Patton thought he was on hand for a press conference to announce a major promotion for basketball season. That was held as well. Appalachian Wireless, Bruce Walters, City Commissioner Barry Chaney took the podium to make the announcement.

"Gov. Patton recognized for years that Pike County needed a more diverse economy," Chaney said. "He also saw that we needed an improved quality of life, and as a result he brought the Expo Center to Pikeville."

"Because of the efforts of those like Patton, Chaney said, "people are excited to come to the city of Pikeville. I certainly think it is very fitting, and can think of no one else that this floor should be named after than Paul Patton, president of the University of Pikeville."

Patton was humbled by the announcement. "I've lived a blessed life here," he said. "Nothing has been a bigger blessing for me than working to bring education to the people of Central Appalachia."

"I'm really surprised by this, and honored at the same time. I'm very proud of what is happening here in our community and I'm proud to be a part of it."

Gov. Patton became the 18th president of Pikeville College in August 2009.

Patton was the first Kentucky governor in nearly 200 years to serve two successive terms (1995-2003). A national leader, particularly in education policy, Patton was known as the "higher education governor." He proposed and championed the successful passage of Kentucky's Higher Education Reform Act in 1997, an effort which has been recognized as a model of progressive higher education policy. He also made substantial improvements in Kentucky's pre-school and adult education programs, as well as successfully maintaining the momentary and funding for the Kentucky Education Reform Act. In February 2009, Patton was named chairman of the Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education.

Patton has called being president "the crown jewel" in his lifetime, and his faith in the school is as strong today as it has ever been.

"The University of Pikeville is going to make a difference in Eastern Kentucky," he said.

Kelly Wells Signature Edition UPIKE truck to be given away

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The first year it was a Toyota Camry, a fitting choice because the car and nights opponent were both built in Georgetown.

Last year, it was a Ford Mustang. So how do you top those? By doing something extra special, and that's exactly what Appalachian Wireless, Bruce Walters Ford and East Kentucky Broadcasting have done.

This year's automobile will be a Ford F150 pickup which will be given away on Jan. 26, 2012 when the Bears play host to Mid-South Conference rival the University of the Cumberland.

But not just any F150. This year's giveaway is a Kelly Wells Signature Edition UPIKE Ford F150, black with orange detailing, personalized UPIKE logos and Kelly Wells autographs both on the outside and the interior of the vehicle. Danny VanHoose, director of Marketing for Appalachian Wireless, said the truck will be given away this night. "This isn't a situation where someone will have a chance to win the truck," he said. "One lucky fan will win this truck on January 26."

The announcement was made on Tuesday morning at a press conference held beside the basketball court at the East Kentucky Expo Center. At the end of the announcement, it was also announced that the playing surface will now be called "Paul Patton Court" to honor the two-time governor who was in office when the Expo Center was constructed.

The truck was the result of an idea from Bruce Walters Jr., to tip his cap to the coach of the Bears. "I wanted to honor Coach Kelly Wells with a signature truck," he said. "He brought a national championship here to our hometown and was named national coach of the year so we thought this would be an excellent tribute to his hard work and dedication."

This year even more Bears fans will have an opportunity to win the truck. Whereas in the past there were six finalists, this year a dozen will be on the podium with a chance for the grand prize.

The opportunity to be a finalist will come the following ways:

Beginning in September, one finalist will be drawn each month from texts. To register, simply text UPIKE to the short code 3673 from your Appalachian Wireless phone. Standard and premium text rates apply.

A finalist will be selected from those in attendance at the UPIKE reception in the KFC Yum! Center prior to the Bears game with the University of Louisville on October 26.

One finalist will come from those in attendance on National Championship Banner Night when the Bears entertain Union College on October 29.

One will come from fans who attend Bruce Walters Ford Night, which will be November 19 against Georgetown College.

One will be drawn on East Kentucky Broadcasting Night, which is January 5, 2012, when the Bears face Campbellsville University.

A finalist will come from entries in a box located in the Downtown Pikeville Appalachian Wireless retail store on Main Street.

Another finalist will come from those who send texts on the day of the giveaway, which is January 26.

The last finalist will come from the crowd in the Expo Center on January 26, which is Appalachian Wireless Night.

"The university is thrilled with this new promotion," said Vice President James Hurlley. "It highlights several key games throughout the season and should foster tremendous support for the basketball programs."

Again, Appalachian Wireless is striving to set an attendance record at the UPIKE game with Cumberlands, having done so the last two years when it gave away automobiles.

Coach Kelly Wells, humbled by the honor of having a signature automobile, is both thankful and excited by the promotion.

"We always strive to bring in as many fans as we can, and we want them at every game," said Wells, who also delighted in his team being ranked No. 7 in the country by The Sporting News in its preseason publication. "We're so blessed to live here in Pikeville and have the kind of support we get from the community and our corporate sponsors."

University Kentucky Wildcats respond with intensity, focus in practice

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — For the second consecutive day, the University of Kentucky football team has been moved indoors to the Nutter Field House because of rain in the Lexington area, but the gloomy weather didn't stop the team from having a productive day at practice with head coach Joker Phillips saying the team had high intensity and focus on Wednesday.

"Our intensity was better and our focus was a lot better," Phillips said after practice Wednesday. "It should be. We have been working on Central Michigan for three days so we should have a better understanding about what we are seeing. Our skills (positions) were a lot better throwing and catching today and we just hope it shows up on the game on Friday."

Phillips said he was very happy with the performance of Kentucky's wide receivers in practice Wednesday along with junior quarterback Morgan Newton.

"It was definitely a lot better today and a lot of that has to do with the understanding what we are seeing on defense after studying Central Michigan for three days," Phillips said about the play of UK's offense.

"But we shouldn't have any problems throwing and catching the ball, regardless of who we are playing, but we were a lot better today."

Phillips had a really good day today. He threw the ball to the right people and the guys caught the ball. That goes a long way with his confidence and his confidence in other guys when they make plays. We protected better also today. When you protect better I think that helps his confidence and when he does throw and we make catches that helps his confidence too."

The Kentucky head coach has been very impressed with the play of Kentucky's freshmen so far this season, with several getting a chance to play in UK's season opener last week. Phillips said the coaching staff continues to deliver the message for all players to handle themselves as "pros."

"They responded great," Phillips said when asked how the freshmen that got in the game last Thursday have responded in practice. "That is the reason they are playing because they are mature guys. You watch them in meetings, they are very attentive and they act like pros. That is one of the things that we have been talking to this football team about is being a pro. A pro comes to work early and he pays attention to what is going on and pays attention to what is going on at practice, too. We have a lot of young guys that carry themselves like pros. That is the reason why they are playing."

Phillips announced after practice that Kentucky injured offensive lineman Billy Joe Murphy and Matt Smith did not practice Wednesday. Phillips said they will reassess the two players Thursday and see if they can practice in order to get prepared for the game Saturday.

Pikeville keeper named Defensive Player of the Week

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — She has started two games in her collegiate career and to this point has still not allowed a goal.

For that, University of Pikeville freshman Chelsea Schulte was named Mid-South Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

She was honored alongside Georgetown College's Anna Ayers, who was named Offensive Player of the Week by the league.

The weekly conference honors are the first of the season for both. Ayers earns her second career conference player of the week honor while Schulte picks up her first.

Schulte recorded a pair of shutouts last week to earn MSC Defensive Player of the Week.

The Burlington, Ky., freshman goalkeeper recorded 11 saves in a 3-0 win over Ohio Valley University. Schulte completed the week with eight more saves in a 0-0 draw against Warren Wilson (N.C.) College.

Pikeville improved to 2-0-1 on the season with its week.

Ayers scored four goals and assisted on two others to earn MSC Offensive Player of the Week.

The Fort Thomas, Ky., junior midfielder scored twice and assisted on a pair of goals to lead the Tigers to a 3-3 win over Milligan (Tenn.) College. Ayers added two more goals in Georgetown's 5-3 loss at Union (Ky.) College to end the week.

Georgetown is 1-1. The next MSC Women's Soccer Players of the Week awards are scheduled to be announced on Monday, Sept. 12.

UPIke to hold ring ceremony at Saturday's football game

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — Ask any athlete why they play their sport, they'll answer you in two words: The Ring.

For last year's members of the University of Pikeville men's basketball team, that dream will come to fruition at halftime of Saturday's football game when they will receive their rings from last year's national championship. The team will be rewarded for winning the 2010 Buffalo Funds NAA Division I Men's Basketball National Championship during halftime of the Bears' game with Kentucky Wesleyan College, which kicks off at 6 p.m. at the W.C. Hambley Athletics Complex.

"This is a very exciting day for us, one the players in particular have been pointing toward since we left Kansas City," said Coach Kelly Wells, who was named national coach of the year at the end of last year's tournament. "I'm more excited for them than for us. It means a great deal to them and we're excited to have them together, for the most part, once again."

Nearly every member of last year's team will be at the event. Quincy Rankine-Cole, who is playing professionally in Iceland, of course will not be available.

The Bears became the first team to knock off five seeded teams en route to the title, with all five opponents being among the top nine seeds in last year's event.

The wins came over defending champion Oklahoma Baptist, the previous season's runner-up Azusa Pacific, top-seeded Robert Morris, fifth-ranked Martin Methodist and third-seeded Mountain State in the finals, an overtime thriller that finished 83-76.

Trevor Setty, who returns for his junior season, was named the tournament MVP. "We've been so excited about these rings and looking forward to this all summer long," he said. "We've seen them, but we haven't gotten ours yet and we're pumped to finally have them on our fingers."

"It'll also be nice to have most of the guys back here. We haven't seen some of them in a while so we're excited about that too. This means a great deal to us."

Wells is appreciative of all those who have contributed to make this a reality. "The people who have made donations or want to make donations toward this have made this a great day for our student-athletes," he said. "We will never be able to thank them enough for what they've done for us."

'The Strangers'
 by TOM DOTY
 TIMES COLUMNIST

A trio of mysterious figures terrorizes a young couple at an isolated farmhouse, in this chiller that is short on words but long on nail-biting suspense. It all starts with James and Kristen spending the night at his family's country home after attending a wedding. You can cut the tension with a knife, but that has nothing to do with being terrorized by three masked goons, and everything to do with the fact that Kristen turned James down when he proposed earlier that evening.

These two are so absorbed by their issues that they don't consider too odd

KYCOM's Class of 2015 to receive symbolic 'white coat of compassion'

PIKEVILLE -- University of Pikeville Kentucky College of Osteopathic Medicine (UP-KYCOM) will formally welcome members of the Class of 2015 during a traditional White Coat Ceremony on Saturday, Sept. 17, at 7 p.m. in Booth Auditorium.

White coat ceremonies are rites of passage for beginning medical students. White represents purity, healing and the professional ideals of the medical profession that focus on compassionate caregiving. The long white coat is the quintessential symbol of a physician and conveys to patients and the public the wearer's identity as a physician. The short white coat indicates the wearer's status as medical student or student-doctor.

The white coat ceremony tradition was begun by the Arnold P. Gold Foundation in 1993 to promote humanism in medicine. The Gold Foundation provides a gold pin to KYCOM student-doctors to wear on their white coats to symbolize commitment to providing compassionate and competent patient care.

In the presence of family members, friends and the campus community, students from the Class of 2015 will be "coated" by the students from the Class of 2014.

The keynote speaker for the ceremony will be Stephen C. Shannon, D.O., M.P.H. Shannon is the president of the American Association of Colleges of Osteopathic Medicine (AACOM). Prior to assuming this position, he served as Vice President for Health Services and Dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine at the University of New England. He also served as Chair of the AACOM Board of Deans.

Shannon earned his doctor of osteopathic medicine degree in 1986 from the University of New England College of Osteopathic Medicine in Biddeford, Maine, and his master's of public health degree in 1990 from the Harvard University School of Public Health. He is board certified in osteopathic family practice and preventive medicine.

As President of AACOM, Shannon serves as spokesperson on behalf of the nation's 25 colleges of osteopathic medicine, articulating the community's priorities and positions in a variety of national and international settings. Shannon also guides the association in fulfilling its vision and mission, and in positively influencing state, federal and executive branch policy formulation relative to medical education.

The community is cordially invited to attend the White Coat Ceremony. For more information, contact the University of Pikeville Public Affairs office at (606) 218-5270.

"ALL OF LEROY'S BRIGHT IDEAS HAVE A DIMMER SWITCH."

Jacqueline Bigar's HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Sept. 9, 2011. This year, be open to the unexpected within a partnership. Your understanding deepens because of a continually developing perception. Travel, a foreigner and education all could play significant roles in your year. You might be looking at making a commitment to a new lifestyle. If you are single, you could meet someone from a different culture. Get to know this person and his or her lifestyle before making a commitment. Do not want to make a lifelong commitment to this person and his or her culture. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from planning that special, long-desired vacation. ACQUARIUS is a good sign for a co-worker. The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult. ARIES (March 21-April 19) * Someone could be quite fussy. You might be partially listening, not wanting to deal with this person's energy. Know that you are fortunate with funds, but don't overspend. A partner seems to be easing up and retaxing. Tonight: Find your pals. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) * You might be dealing with considerable tension, yet you seem to be able to twist a difficult situation into a more positive one. Realize your limits within the workplace. An awkward moment or two could evolve into a new understanding of boundaries. Tonight: A must appearance. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) * Put your imagination into fifth gear. You'll not only come up with some good ideas, as will a child or loved one. Frequently, you allow your mind to open up to more fantasies and get in touch with the child within. Tonight: A late lunch could develop into a fun night. CANCER (June 21-July 22) * Deal on a one-on-one basis with others. A friendship could help you overcome some sense of awkwardness. You are in a very stable position where you enjoy yourself a lot more. Listen to feedback carefully. Tonight: Kick back and allow someone to express him- or herself. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) * Others clearly want your attention. You have little control over various situations. Understand what is happening and how a new friendship could be impacting your daily life. A boss, parent or supervisor looks up to you. Tonight: A must appearance. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) * A nice, easy pace marks your interactions. If you detach and try to understand where others are coming from, you will gain. When people sense your comprehension and empathy, they naturally want to connect. Hook up with a co-worker or two. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) * Give 100 percent of yourself no matter what you do. Your levity and intensity draw another person to you. Allow your creativity to come forth when it counts. Lighten up and relax with the moment. Tonight: Christen the weekend well. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) * In your environment, there could be a variable involved that could be getting the best of you. Realize what is going on with someone you deal with on a regular basis. You might need more feedback from a friend or a trusted loved one before making a decision. Tonight: Don't make it too late! SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) * Keep conversations moving as you gain a greater sense of direction and knowledge. Take time to go over the pros and cons of a situation or project with an associate. A discussion, though serious, could be the gateway to a fun afternoon. Tonight: Hang out. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) * Be aware of what you have to offer. Money isn't the only asset you have. Your assets touch both your intellect and your emotions. Tap into your innate creativity and take a risk. You could be surprised by what someone offers. Tonight: Treat a friend to a fun few hours. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) * Continue to express yourself. Someone delights in your offbeat yet perceptive ideas. You might feel a bit awkward with someone who is too detail-oriented for your comfort. Remain in control and create your plans. Tonight: Start the weekend full force. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) * You could be exhausted by everything that is going on. Say little and observe more. A partner shares much more than he or she has in the past. You are full of information, but hold back for now. Tonight: Opt for something tranquil. Jacqueline Bigar is on the Internet at www.jacquelinebigar.com.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR KENTUCKY MEDICAID PATIENTS

The State of Kentucky Medicaid managed care program goes into effect on October 1, 2011. Medicaid patients were assigned by the State into managed care organizations (MCO's) and will soon receive a letter from an MCO indicating assignment to a primary care physician.

The Big Sandy Physician Hospital Organization wants to alert you that:

- You can change your MCO assignment beginning October 1, 2011; work with your physician or care provider to determine which MCO best preserves your relationship.
- Big Sandy PHO physicians have agreements with all 3 MCOs; this means you will be able to see your physician regardless of your MCO assignment.
- While many members will be accurately matched to a primary care physician, there may be errors in the physician assignment process.
- Errors can be corrected by contacting the MCO at the number indicated, and requesting a switch to your physician.
- Some Big Sandy PHO physicians may not be listed in an MCO until September 15, 2011. (You may have problems switching your physician before this date; if you do, contact your physician.)

The Big Sandy PHO will publish a complete list when all PHO physicians are accurately listed in the MCO networks.

Highlands Health System and the physicians of the Big Sandy PHO have served the community for many years. We are committed to providing high quality service here in our community and we are working to keep you and your families healthy.

Movies

that a stranger knocks on their door at 4 a.m. They send her off without opening the door (the smartest move they make), but then James goes off for cigarettes and leaves Kristen alone.

She is still pretty much in her own world, so it takes a few pranks by the trio before she is aware that something is wrong. The things they do are clever and involve moving objects that she has put down. At one point, one of them even strolls into the kitchen and watches her for a few moments before shrinking back into the house without ever being spotted.

The woman who rang the doorbell comes back and does it again, which finally sets off Kristen's radar. She calls James and he rushes back.

He does a wise thing by seeking out and finding the family shotgun. He even obtains ammunition and manages to load the firearm properly before succumbing to the trigger-happy instincts of a bored deer hunter half-asleep in a blind. When he finally hears a noise he promptly blows off the head of his best friend, who stopped by to help out.

Things only get worse now, as the unholy three bust up James' car. He actually tries to escape on a flat tire and winds up piloting a crashbox after the three strangers ram him with their pick-up. Now the game is on, but this pair is overmatched and they soon find themselves at the mercy of three people who never heard of the word.

This is a simple story, but it is so well told that they get away with it. Sure the victims do some stupid things, but the strangers are the real attraction here. They are mostly silent and behave like a trio of Siamese cats that just love torturing their dinner. They also rock conservative clothes while sporting pale white masks that totally obscure their faces. You never learn much about them and that adds to the tension.

There's a lot you want to know, too. Who is in-charge? Two appear to be women and one is a male, so what is that dynamic? We never find out, but the most chilling moment comes at the end, when Kristen implores them for a reason and their only reply is simply, "You were home."

Writer/director Brian Bertino deserves the credit for this exercise in terror, but Hollywood doesn't appear to know what to do with him. He is currently wasting his time on a sequel that will either repeat the mayhem we've already seen or (worse yet) explain the origins of this mysterious trio and thus invalidate the first movie's main strength.

Best line: "They want something. People don't just stand there staring at you. They want something."
