AG Investigating David School payments to director

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

DAVID — The David School is the target of an investigation into money paid to Director Daniel Greene, and the state Attorney General's Office filed a petition Thursday in Floyd Circuit Court, seeking to force the school to turn over documents related to Greene's compensation.

Upon information and believe, for a period beginning no later than 1 October 2005, Defendant Daniel Greene, during his service as director and administrator of The David School, utilized his positions to unlawfully divert, convert or otherwise misappropriate charitable assets of The David School for his own use or private benefit, including but not limited to (1) paying himself twice for two pay periods without any authority from the Board of Directors," the petition reads.

According to the petition, the AG's office issued a Civil Investigatory Demand to the school on Feb. 29, seeking a number of documents related to money Greene has received from the school. The material requested by the AG's office includes:

• "All financial records of the nonprofit relevant to the preparation of the 2008 and 2009 Internal Revenue Service Form 990s, including but not limited to the nonprofit's general journal, all subsidiary journals, bank statements, cancelled checks, work-papers or schedules, and financial reports or statements (including the trial balances, balance sheets, income statements, cash flow statements) for period beginning 1 July 2007 to and including the date of this letter. • "All board of directors material regarding Mr. Daniel J. Greene's compensation (as that term is defined for purposes of completing Sub-part c of Part IV of the Internal Revenue Service's Form 990-EZ) by The David School Inc., for period from 1 January 2000 to the present. • "All board of directors material regarding any transactions between The David School, Inc.,

Times egg buried under construction

Readers being asked to decide what happens next

Times Staff Report

The 2012 Great Easter Egg Hunt has come to an end, but not in a way that anyone would have liked.

No one found and returned this year's prize egg, worth $500, but that isn't because people were looking in the wrong place.

The egg was hidden at Mud Creek, in a drainage ditch alongside a new bridge where the finished portion of new Route 680 hides the portion still under construction. However, a couple weeks after the egg was hidden, road workers at the site reworked the approach to the bridge, resulting in the egg being buried under several tons of dirt, sandstone and shale.

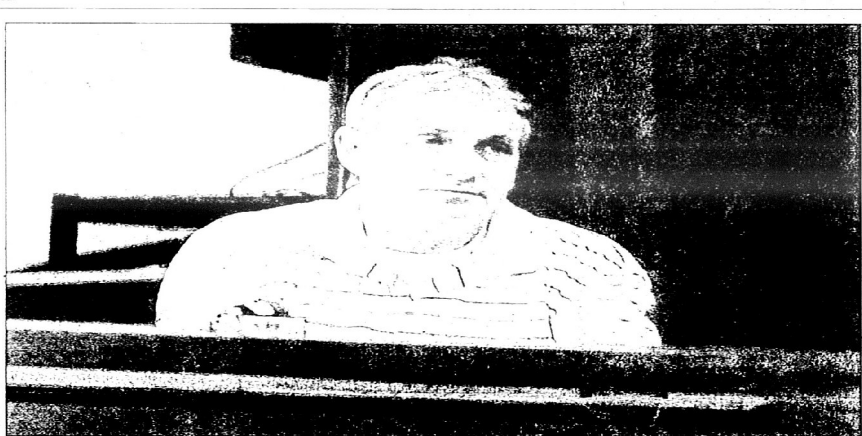

"In my wildest dreams, I never would have imagined something like this happening," said Times Editor Ralph B. Davis, who hides the egg and writes the clues for each year's contest. "I've had my eye on that spot ever since last year, because I'm always on the lookout for a good hiding spot. And it was a good spot, until the egg was hidden there."

"As the contest went on and people began to figure out the general area where the egg was hidden, the newspaper began receiving calls about the possibility that the egg had been buried under construction. However, the paper was in an unusual position of being unable to verify the reports.

"We couldn't exactly go out to the spot, because people would have noticed us there and would have known where we hid it," Davis said. "If the reports had been wrong, that would have given someone an extremely unfair advantage. And if the reports were right, we still wouldn't know if someone had found the egg before being buried, but hadn't yet brought it in. Of course, most people would bring it in right away if they found it, but one year we did have a winner wait more than a week to turn it in."

The paper then decided there was only one option: Set a deadline to turn in the Berry Hall, who faces the death penalty in his trial for the murder of Alan and Lisa Tackett, took the stand in his own defense Wednesday. During testimony, Hall said he could not remember much of what happened and blamed the prescription drug Prozac for his actions.

Hall testifies on his own behalf

Hall says, "if the jury finds me guilty I reckon I'm in trouble."

PRESTONSBURG — Berry Hall said a misdiagnosis by his family doctor and an incorrect prescription of medication are to blame for the deaths of Alan and Lisa Tackett.

Hall was called to testify by his defense counsel. Hall said that before the shootings, he was being treated for depression and stress by his family physician Dr. Charles Hieronymous. Hall said that Dr. Hieronymous prescribed Hall the wrong medication, and that it actually made his symptoms worse. "It was making stress worse and stuff because I was having to fight medication off, you know."

Hall said after a while, his medication was switched again. "I went plumb out of my damn mind on that stuff." Dr. Charles Jerome Hieronymous Jr. died July 23, 2009. When questioned by the defense, Hall told the jurors the medications made him paranoid and delusional. He testified that he heard things, and saw things that weren't really there, including demons. "I'd turn around to answer somebody and there weren't nobody there."

Fire chief's home burns; ruled accidental

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

LANCER — Prestonsburg Fire Chief Bobby Carpenter found himself in a familiar situation, but in an unfamiliar role, as he watched his home go up in flames Thursday night.

Carpenter had just returned home from a rescue squad meeting and delivered some dinner to his son, when he went next door to visit his father. Moments later, his son came running, saying, "The house is on fire."

Carpenter called 911 to report the fire, then donned his fire gear and began to get to work, just as he would any other fire. He first rescued his dogs from the home, and by that time, the fire engines had begun to arrive. Carpenter said he was in "chief mode" initially, as he busied himself with helping his fellow firefighters begin the work of putting out the blaze. But after someone asked him if there was any way to help and he asked that person to call his wife to tell her the house was on fire, he said the "stress and excitement" of the situation "became too much for him."

"As soon as I said those words, 'The house is on fire,' it hit me," Carpenter said. The chief was checked at the scene and it was found his blood pressure had skyrocketed to 186/164. He was then taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center as a precaution, but later released.

Carpenter said the home was a total loss and his family lost "about 75 percent of all that we owned."

While Carpenter typically inspects the remains of house fires in the city to determine a cause, Paintsville Fire Chief Bob Dixon was called in to inspect Carpenter's home, to avoid any appearance of impropriety.

Dixon said Tuesday that he traced the origin of the fire to an electrical problem in the attic, where a wire had shorted out and set up a condition he termed "carbon tracking."

"The heat that develops from the short is not enough to cause it to catch fire, but it does burn a little bit and slowly turns the area around it into carbon," Dixon explained. "Over time, there is no wood left. It all burns to carbon and becomes flammable." Dixon said it appeared to him that the suspect wiring was "very old." Based on his investigation, Dixon ruled the fire as accidental.

Guest View End tax handouts

Doug Pibel

When I file my tax return and look at the amount of income tax I pay, I can't help but think of those who don't pay any taxes at all. Some of them—even though they make money during the year—not only pay nothing but actually get money back. According to one estimate, they cost every single taxpayer $481 a year. And I, for one, am tired of carrying them.

If you agree, I'd like you to join me in working to get these deadbeats to pony up their fair share. I refer, of course, to General Electric, Boeing, Wells Fargo, and a whole list of other major corporations.

That's right: According to a recent study by Citizens for Tax Justice (CTJ), in the 3-year period from 2008 through 2010, 30 Fortune 500 companies made a profit each year and yet paid zero or less in taxes. Their average tax rate was negative 6.7 percent. They made billions and then, when case time rolled around, billions more.

We gave the most money to GE. In the three years studied, GE showed a profit just shy of $10.5 billion. Its tax bill...well, you can't really call it a bill...was negative $4.7 billion. That's 4.7 billion dollars of the dollars we paid in taxes going into the pockets of GE. The corporation's tax rate was negative 45.3 percent.

In 2008 through 2010, 78 different companies paid zero or less in taxes in at least one of the three years studied. In a single banner year, Wells Fargo got almost $4 billion from us. Verizon's two-year take was $1.3 billion.

There's been a lot of talk in the presidential primaries about cutting the supposedly crippling 35 percent corporate tax rate. President Barack Obama wants to take it down to 28 percent. Mitt Romney aims for 25. Rick Santorum thinks 17.5 percent is the right number. They'll pay for this tax cut, they say, by closing loopholes.

But since companies routinely pay so much less than the official rate, only Santorum's proposal would actually represent a tax cut, on average, for the 280 companies Citizens for Tax Justice looked at. True, they found 71 companies that paid more than 30 percent per year. But the average for all 280 was 18.5 percent.

If you think that corporations are going to stand by quietly as their taxes are raised, you haven't heard about Super PACs and lobbying. "Representation Without Taxation," a report from U.S. PIRG and CTJ, lays out the facts about corporate spending to influence tax policy. The 30 companies that paid no taxes in 2008 to 2010 spent half a billion dollars in the same period on lobbying. Of course, they lobby on any number of issues. But even if every penny of that half billion went for tax lobbying, they saw a return of 21 to 1. There aren't many investments out there that pay better than that.

And all of us make up for it. In 1956, corporate taxes made up 27.3 percent of federal revenue while individuals paid in 58 percent. By 2010, the corporate share had dropped by two-thirds, to 8.9 percent and the individual contribution had increased by half, to 81.5 percent.

There's a lot of resentment over taxes. Most of it gets directed at poor people who, the story goes, are dragging the rest of us down by refusing to pay their fair share.

But who, after all, are the real drags on society? People who don't pay income tax because they're barely scratching out a living? Or corporations that make billions in profits and then come to us with their hands out?

Last fall, the Occupy movement brought the idea of the wealth divide into public awareness. Politicians and pundits expressed puzzlement over this class warfare. You can help them understand the problem by letting them know that it's time to end welfare as we know it: It's time for corporations to pay their fair share.

Doug Pibel wrote about corporate taxation in the current issue of YES! Magazine, where he is managing editor.

Rep. Greg Stumbo
Speaker of the House

It took a little longer than anyone wanted, but the General Assembly took two major steps forward for the state on Friday when it finalized the funding for the $4.5 billion road plan and approved a far-reaching measure. I sponsored to combat the prescription drug abuse epidemic.

As you may recall, both of those issues were left unresolved on April 12th, the regular legislative session's final day, after Governor Beshear refused to give in to Senate leaders' demands to sign the road plan after only a few hours' review instead of the 10 days he has to consider bills under the constitution.

When the Senate then decided not to act on funding the road plan, the governor had no choice but to call legislators back. Otherwise, the entire Transportation Cabinet would have had to shut its doors on July 1st, the start of the fiscal year.

Like you, I believe we should have finished our work during the regular session, but that does not undercut the importance of the two bills expected to be signed into law soon.

The road plan, for example, has been a bright spot in recent months because of healthy growth. That is making it easier to meet our many needs across the state, especially here at home. Fortunately, we will be able to bring the Minnie-Harold connector closer to reality, thanks to more than $80 million set aside for it.

The soon-to-be law on prescription drug abuse, meanwhile, will go a long way to slowing a problem that claims the lives of at least three Kentuckians a day on average. If you add the innocent victims killed by those under the influence of these drugs, and the family members devastated by the loss of loved ones, the total number affected by this epidemic reaches well into the tens of thousands each year.

The hallmark of the bill is expanding as well as strengthening the state's prescription drug monitoring program, known as Kentucky All-Schedule Prescription Electronic Reporting, or KASPER.

Although this law keeps the program in the Cabinet for Health and Family Services, I believe we would be better served if it had been moved to the Attorney General's office. That would ensure this tool would be put to its best use in spotting and then stopping suspicious spikes in prescription drug use.

Nevertheless, there are many other aspects of the law that will help us fulfill this mission. To begin with, the law will now require all doctors to register with KASPER and use it as well when prescribing controlled substances, though there are some sensible exceptions in such cases as surgery or emergency care.

Currently, only about a third of doctors use it to check their patients' drug history, but the need to have all of them take part is clear. According to a 2010 survey of doctors that did use KASPER, nearly 90 percent said what they learned caused them to change what they had planned to prescribe.

These reports will be even more useful later this year, when Kentucky's system is more widely linked with similar monitoring programs in other states. That will make it much harder for addicts to doctor shop, especially along our borders.

Another provision in this law will limit the often fly-by-night pain clinics that have popped up across the state, especially as other states have cracked down on them.

New pain clinics will have to doctor-owned, and those grandfathered in will fall under the same regulations if anyone involved is convicted of a crime tied to improper prescribing of controlled substances. We also now limit all doctors from giving out more than a 48-hour supply of controlled substances from their office.

The law calls for greater cooperation among law enforcement, those running KASPER and the physician-licensing boards, and for the boards to provide more training on pain management and addiction and to be more responsive when complaints of over-prescribing are received.

Coroners will also be called upon to screen for drugs if an overdose is suspected and there is no other cause of death. This data will give us a much clearer picture of just how many die from their addiction; like me, many believe it is much higher than the 1,000 now reported annually.

Although our work passing laws is now over, that does not mean the legislature's work for the year is finished. Later this spring, the joint House and Senate committees will begin meeting again, to review the progress of legislation and to see what other issues may need to be addressed when next year's legislative session begins in January.

As always, if you would like to contact me or any other legislator no matter what time of year, you can call 800-372-7181. For those with a hearing impairment, the number is 800-896-0305.

A legislative perspective

Letter to the Editor

EPA's new rules will end the use of coal as we know it.

The United States Government's Environmental Protection Agency's war on coal may have driven a nail in coffin of the coal industry. Pike County is Kentucky's No. 1 coal-producing county and coal is the backbone of economic livelihood in central Appalachia.

Last month, EPA administrator Lisa Jackson, who leads the Obama Administration's war on coal, issued a new regulation that would drastically cut Pike County's coal market by ending the use of coal in new power generation plants in America.

This just doesn't make good sense and is an inappropriate use of environmental regulatory authority.

The Obama Administration just can't continue to look beyond coal. America's ever-growing energy demands must be met. We are in a period where gasoline is $4 per gallon and our federal government is spending over a trillion dollars a year on imported oil. It's just mind-boggling that America's coal deposits, which is the most abundant energy source and produced domestically, contains more energy than world's oil. Coal is by far the most inexpensive source of fuel per BTU.

The war on coal is ongoing while America's insatiable lust for foreign oil threatens our quality of life. The Obama Administration has stopped fund-to-liquid (CTL) plants in America. Energy production in America is also an issue of national security. I have been to the Pentagon and had discussions with generals. From these discussions I determined that the present administration in Washington needs to bring factual, no nonsense dialog to the forefront in regard to America's energy needs. We could lose our freedom and our quality of life.

Coal fuels more electricity in America than all other energy sources combined. Electricity production from coal is essential, affordable, and according to the United States Department of Energy's own research, coal production must double by the year 2020 to meet America's Energy needs.

Every person in Pike County and across central Appalachia must stand up against this war on coal; so many people's future depends on coal jobs. Coal operators can't get permits from the federal government for surface mining or for deep cuts in coal seams underground. We all must urge the Obama Administration to use and trust in the creative genius of America's researchers and entrepreneurs and empower them to pioneer a generation of clean coal technology. America can continue to look beyond coal.

We all must keep a positive attitude about our coal industry. Coal miners and operators aren't the villains the national media and the federal government portrays them to be, they are America's heroes.

A positive attitude is one treasure God will not let anyone take from us.

God Bless,

What did those clues mean?

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

Even though the grand prize egg in the 2012 Great Easter Egg Hunt was lost due to circumstances beyond our control, many people are left wondering how this year's clues should have been interpreted.

The egg was hidden at Mud Creek, in a drainage ditch alongside a new bridge where the finished portion of new Route 680 meets the portion still under construction. However, a couple weeks after the egg was hidden, road workers at the site reworked the approach to the bridge, resulting in the egg being buried under several tons of dirt, sandstone and shale.

With the contest now over, we can finally explain what the clues mean.

This is a game of many smiles. This is a game in 395.46 miles. — Floyd County is 395.46 square miles in area. The egg was hidden in Floyd County.

Good thing the storm has now moved out, or else I might be flying about. — The egg was hidden outside. If it had been hidden prior to the March 2 tornadoes, it could very well have been blown away.

Those who fail will have learned that they shouldn't have left any unturned. — This clue is a reference to the old saying about "leaving no stone unturned." The egg was hidden under and between two large stones.

Over my head water sometimes will flow, but there's always more further down below. — The water sometimes above the egg is a reference to water flowing down the drainage ditch. The water below is a reference to the creek below.

The weight upon me hurts my feet. I'd rest but I can't find a seat. — The first part of this clue is another reference to the stones under which the egg was hidden. The second part means the egg was not hidden in the county seat of Prestonsburg.

Two becomes one. One becomes two. Somewhere in between, old becomes new. — This clue begins to narrow down the location, referring to Route 680 and Route 979. The two roads merge together, then split apart again. The egg was hidden in the merged section, where "old" Route 680 meets "new" Route 680.

Am I a homebody? Not in the least. This year I traveled to the Middle East. — Looking at the location on a map, the egg was hidden in the eastern portion of the county, roughly midway between north and south.

Last year I was in four, but that was before. This year you'll find me in the other four. — Last year, the egg was hidden in school district 4. This year, it was hidden in magisterial district 4.

Two run apart, but sometimes combine. The difference between them is 299. — Another reference to Route 680 and Route 979. Subtract 680 from 979 and you are left with 299.

No bandage needed; there'll be no blood. But take your boots, for there will be Mud. — This clue is intended to definitively say the egg was hidden at Mud Creek.

Not found me yet? You need a new plan. You'll find me hidden beside the new span. — The "new span" is the new bridge built where new Route 680 ends.

Construction began this week to replace the grass field at Prestonsburg High School with a new turf field.

egg, and then check the hiding spot after the contest ended.

But just because this year's egg was lost, that doesn't mean the matter is settled.

"The Great Easter Egg Hunt is one of the best public participation contests I've ever been a part of," said Joshua Byers, publisher of the Times. "It's only right to let the public decide what to do in prior to the shooting, he had similar feelings during an argument with his neighbors and went upstairs with a gun, but he said, "at that time, he caught himself."

Under cross-examination, Commonwealth's Attorney Arnold Brent Turner grilled Hall with questions about what he did and did not remember about the shooting.

Turner asked Hall where he was before the shooting. "I guess I must have been sitting there on the couch eating and watching TV. They said I was watching TV. I guess I was," said Hall.

"Well, were you or weren't you?" asked Turner.

"I guess I was, I must have been. I was sitting right in front of the TV on the couch," Hall replied.

"What I am asking is do you recall sitting on the couch," Turner asked again.

"Not really," Hall said.

Hall said he could only remember bits and pieces of what occurred the day of the shooting. He told jurors that after the fighting started, he got up off the couch and blacked out. "I got up and turned stiff, and that pressure hit my head."

Hall said that his anger was so bad, "you do something to prove to yourself, and you was gonna get hurt, buddy."

Turner asked Hall if that was the point when he went upstairs and shot Lisa and Alan Tackett.

"I don't know, I just got up, turned stiff and blacked out," said Hall.

"So your testimony is that you don't know what happened up there?" asked Turner.

"Not really. I know I had a gun out the window, I'm pretty sure about that."

The cross-examination continued to go back and this unique situation."

Beginning today, The Times will run a poll on its website, asking the public what should be done after this year's egg was lost. There are three options — Start a new contest immediately, double next year's prize, or donate money to charity.

The poll will be available on The Times website — www.floydcountytimes.com — beginning today until the end of business next Wednesday. Results will be published online Thursday, May 3, and in the May 4 edition of The Times.

"It is truly regrettable how this year's contest ended," Davis said. "No one likes this, especially those of us here at the newspaper. But sometimes things happen that are beyond our control, and we hope to correct the situation by allowing the people to decide what to do next."

forth, with Turner asking Hall questions and Hall delivering his answers to the memories of others, and the guilt for his actions to his doctor and the medication he was taking.

"These two people are dead because he gave me Prozac," Hall said. "It was Charlie's fault. He was the one that done negligent. I told him that stuff wasn't right, told him it was causing anger."

Hall told the jurors he was uncertain of whether or not he was standing in the bedroom when he shot Lisa and Alan Tackett, or lying on the bed. Hall also said that he was not trying to shoot the couple.

According to Hall, in his blacked-out state, he was actually trying to shoot the ground.

"You aimed that gun through the scope, you're saying at the ground, but somehow when you pulled the trigger you shot Lisa just about right in the heart, didn't you?" Turner asked incredulously.

"Yeah, I know that. [That's] how come I didn't understand how I hit that girl in the heart right there," said Hall.

"Well, isn't the logical explanation because that's where you were aiming? When you're trying to kill somebody, that's where you see them, isn't it?" asked Turner.

"Well, yeah, that's a good point," Hall conceded.

As Turner continued to ask Hall questions concerning the shooting, Hall's answers became more and more confused. At one point, Hall was asked if he shot Alan Tackett at which point he replied "no." When Turner asked him again if he shot him, Hall said, "I shot the man, but I didn't know I shot the man."

Hall said that, like his previous testimony with regard to shooting Lisa Tackett, he was not aiming at Alan Tackett when he shot him twice; once through the left hand, and then again in the head.

Turner pointed out that for someone who wasn't aiming at his targets, Hall was a good shot. "You were three for three."

The defense began Monday morning calling several of Berry Hall's brothers and sisters to testify about a family history of mental instability, beginning with Berry's father, who all of Hall's siblings testified had issues of paranoia and anxiety. Delma Hall, Hillard Hall and Mike Hall were all called and each testified about their own mental health issues.

Another brother, Burly Hall, testified that he once lost a job because he threatened to shoot people at his work with a shotgun. Burly said he was on the verge of a nervous breakdown during that incident and that he could see similarities in Berry's worsening mental state.

"I knew something bad was going to happen down there," Burly Hall said. "I told my wife I should've gone down there to see him."

Burly Hall said Lisa and Alan Tackett should have been made aware of Berry's condition. "They should've known, as sick as he was, said Burly. "They shouldn't have been fighting out there."

The trial of Berry Hall will resume today as the defense continues to call witnesses.

and Mr. Daniel J. Greene involving any disbursements, payments, transfers of property, financial transactions, or other monetary or financial benefit for any purpose other than Mr. Greene's compensation (as that term is defined in the preceding question). (This request covers the period from 1 January 2000 to the present.)"

On March 9, the school sent copies of Greene's W2s from 2006 to 2011, a copy of a deferred compensation check to Greene dated August 11, 2006, bank statements dated from 2009 to 2011 and a copy of the school's 2009 tax forms. Along with those documents was a letter from Greene explaining he would be going to the school the following week and would send the remaining materials.

On March 22, Greene sent an email to the AG's office, saying, "We have been making copies and will get to your office as soon as possible."

Despite those assurances, the petition says that no further documents have been forthcoming. The petition goes on to say that the AG's office has "a concern that Defendant, The David School, may not be able to pay its debts as they become due in the usual course of affairs," and notes the school filed its 2009 IRS 990 form late and has failed to file an IRS 990 form for 2010. The petition seeks to force the school to comply with all requests in the Civil Investigatory Demand.

A message left on Greene's voicemail requesting comment on the investigation has not been returned.

David School Principal Diantha Daniels said the school is in the midst of preparations for graduation and she hopes the good works the school has accomplished in its 38 years will not be forgotten in the news of the investigation. But she said the school will comply with any requests it receives from the AG's office.

"We will support the investigation in any way we are asked to," Daniels said.

Doctor testifies Hall's actions influenced by depression

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

PRESTONSBURG — A psychologist called to testify in the trial of Berry Hall Tuesday told jurors he believes the defendant's actions were influenced by what he diagnosed as major depressive disorder.

Dr. James Walker, a forensic neuro-psychologist from Nashville, who interviewed the defendant in December 2009, told jurors that Hall's IQ had been measured in the 70s.

"Mr. Hall struggles with thinking and reasoning ability," said Walker. "If you took 100 people, 96 percent of them would score higher than Berry Hall." Walker said he used the Wechsler Adult Intelligence test to measure Hall's IQ.

Walker also testified that he does not believe the defendant was ever lying to him, in an attempt to make himself appear more crazy, or being what he termed, "malingered." Malingering is a medical term which means to fabricate or exaggerate the symptoms of mental or physical disorders for a variety of motives, which include seeking lighter criminal punishment.

Based on his own findings, reports by the Kentucky Correctional Psychotherapy Center (KCPC), and the notes of Dr. Charles E. Anonymous, Walker told the jurors he believes Hall suffered from major depressive disorder.

When asked by defense attorney Jim Gibson if he believed the symptoms of that depression contributed to the shooting of the Tackets, Walker said, "In my mind, I think it's very clear that Mr. Hall was impaired in those areas, that he ... he ... that because of his mental illness, he was not about to think and function as a normal human being would."

According to Dr. Walker, Hall also complained of auditory and visual hallucinations, and displays "magical thinking."

In the prosecution's cross-examination, Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner asked Walker if he could say with any certainty what happened on March 20, 2008.

"I don't claim perfect knowledge," said Dr. Walker, "but I do think I have an understanding of what happened that day."

Hall testified on Monday it was the prescription anti-depressant medicine he was on that caused him to shoot Lisa and Alan Tackett. On Tuesday, Turner asked Dr. Walker if he thought Hall was capable of hurting anyone now.

"No, I don't think so," said Walker.

"So he is crazy, but he's what, rationally crazy?"

"I think there was some element of choice in his actions," answered Walker, though he added that he believed that choice was impaired by mental illness.

Turner asked Walker if the acts of Berry Hall were the random acts of a crazy person.

Dr. Walker responded by saying, "I've never said that this event was caused by someone who was crazy or hallucinating and uh, some random event. I don't think it was random. I think it was, to some degree, instigated by Mr. Hall, that he made a choice and I believe that in fact, uh, at the time of the shooting, I don't know that he was psychotic, or as you use the word, crazy."

Despite all the testimony given staffing that Hall

Dr. James Walker testified Tuesday that Berry Hall suffers from major depressive disorder, which could have affected his judgment when he gunned down his neighbors in 2008.

suffers from depression, Walker testified that Hall is currently not taking any medication.

"Hall has many symptoms of depression as we sit here today, yes. I don't believe that he is psychotic today. I don't think that he is seeing things or hearing things, or having strange thoughts right now. But I do think he does have serious symptoms of depression as we sit here today," said Walker.

"He only has those things when he wants to shoot people is what you're saying?" queried Turner.

"Not at all," Walker responded.

Testimony in the trial of Berry Hall continued beyond press time Tuesday afternoon. Times staff will continue to monitor and report on the case again as it resumes on Wednesday.

Court names bridge for Owens, questions several bills

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

PRESTONSBURG — The Floyd County Fiscal Court voted Friday to name a bridge after the husband of current member Hattie Owens, and their fallen former member, Jackie Edford Owens.

Della Craft and Virginia Hughes appeared before the court to ask that a bridge near Maytown on Route 550 at Midas curve be named after Owens.

The motion was made and seconded, with all magistrates saying aye. "He earned it," said County Attorney Keith Bartley.

Magistrate John Goble said, "He served this county well."

Also during the fiscal court meeting last Friday, court members broached the subject of a full-time county employee whose name appeared on the claims list. According to the claims list, Cathea Newsome was paid a sum of $1,897 for contracted services related to FEMA work.

No one on the court was disputing the work done by Newsome, or the need to complete the backlog of FEMA work which Marshall said was four floods behind. "It would be in our best interest to close that out," said Marshall, who stated that he was the applicant agent responsible to FEMA for the work.

The problem was, a paid employee cannot also work as a contracted employee for the same business or government entity.

In order to remedy the situation, the court voted to hire Newsome to a part-time position, with no benefits, to finish the FEMA work. However, as county treasurer David Layne pointed out to the council, any worker who draws more than 80 hours from the same entity, must be paid overtime.

Goble, however, said that because County Clerk Chris Vaughn's office, where Newsome is a full-time employee, is a fee office, that rule does not apply.

Judge Marshall did not immediately return calls Tuesday regarding Newsome's hiring.

Other bills that came into question were those by HMC Service Company for building maintenance performed on the jail. According to the claims list, HMC Service Company was paid $8,059.89 for work performed. Marshall said that the number was actually $24,000 but that it had been broken into three payments.

When asked why Marshall was using a company based out of Louisville, with its closest office in Pikeville, to perform maintenance on the jail, he said they were "only people qualified to work on the boiler situation."

Goble said the work done on the jail was commonly performed by Randy Rice and Tony's Electrical and Heating, two local outfits. Goble also said that their bills normally ran around $2,000.

"That's a big figure," Goble said of the $24,000 spent on jail maintenance to HMC. Magistrate Warren Jarrell asked to look at specific bills related to the company and then reported to the court that they were paying the company regular rates of $89 an hour, and an overtime rate of $139 an hour, per person. "And they always send three people," Goble said.

"These people have come when I asked them," Marshall said. Marshall told the court members that when situations arise at the jail, he has to act quickly and decisively. "This what I get calls on."

The court also reviewed bids on the Martin Community Center floor project. The court voted to accept a bid by Jarrell Contracting for $62,000 for improvements to the basketball floor in the center. Magistrate Warren Jarrell abstained from the vote, he said, due to a family relationship.

Court members voted that the remaining $38,000 of the expected $100,000 to be provided from the legislature, be given to the Floyd County Senior Citizens. According to the resolution, the funds for the Martin Community Center project will be released, as they become available.

Judge turns in county vehicle

County Judge Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall returned his county-provided vehicle and says he will now use his own vehicle and fuel, at a savings of $15,000 to $18,000 a year.

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

With the fiscal court facing a budget shortfall, County Judge Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall has decided to turn in his county-provided vehicle to save money.

"Because of the financial condition of our county, and in good consciousness, I did not believe that the taxpayers of this county should have to provide for me a very expensive vehicle, plus fuel and auto insurance," Marshall said.

"Therefore, I am turning this vehicle back to the dealership after one year to save our county thousands of dollars," Marshall said, from now on, he would use his own vehicle and pay for his fuel out of his own pocket. He estimated the move would save the county between $15,000 and $18,000 a year. Marshall also challenged other county officials to do likewise.

But Magistrates say they've been leading the way all along.

According to Magistrate John Goble, Marshall was the only elected county official driving a new vehicle for which the court was still having to pay.

"It was a rental, that's why he turned it in," said Goble. When asked why the Judge hadn't leased the vehicle, Goble said, "because we wouldn't pass a lease."

According to Goble, the Magistrates all drive older, paid for vehicles including his vehicle: a 2003 GMC with 190,000 miles, Ronnie Akers 2003 Toyota Tundra with 168,000 miles, Warren Jarrell's 2003 Toyota Tundra with 190,000 miles, Hattie Owens 1997 Chevy with 190,000 miles.

Goble says Marshall has had two vehicles since taking office: a 2007, Chevy Tahoe and a 2010 Chevy Tahoe.

BSCTC diesel tech program receives national recertification

HAGER HILL - The Diesel Technology Program at Big Sandy Community and Technical College (BSCTC) was recently recertified through the National Automotive Technicians Education Foundation (NATEF) and The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE). BSCTC's Diesel Technology Program has been certified since 1995 and was the first in the State to acquire this recognition. The program is accredited in the following areas: brakes, diesel engines, electrical/electronic systems, gasoline engines, HVAC systems, power trains, preventive maintenance, and steering and suspension.

To achieve this coveted recognition, the school's diesel training program underwent rigorous evaluation by NATEF. Nationally accepted standards of excellence in areas such as instruction, facilities and equipment were used. "This is great news for automotive-minded young people and their parents," said Donald Seyfer, NATEF Chair. "Because this program increases cooperation between local education and industry leaders, it gives added assurance that BSCTC's graduates will be employable. As a result of the quality education provided by BSCTC, the motoring public will benefit since better repair technicians will join the work force." Upon completion of the evaluation, NATEF recommended that BSCTC be re-accredited by the ASE. ASE is a national non-profit organization which tests and certifies repair technicians, in addition to accrediting automotive training programs.

PIKEVILLE - Peter Zajac, D.O., FACOFP, has received his designation as a Fellow of the American College of Osteopathic Family Physicians (ACOFP) during its Annual Conclave of Fellows Award Ceremony at the ACOFP 49th Annual Convention & Scientific Seminar in Kissimmee, Fla.

Zajac is an associate professor of Family Medicine and director of the University of Osteopathic Medicine (KYCOM) Clinical Skills Training and Evaluation Program. He also provides clinical services through KYCOM's affiliation with Pikeville Medical Center, including patient care and supervision of family medicine residents.

The honorary designation of Fellow is bestowed upon candidates who have contributed outstanding national and local service through teaching, authorship, research, or professional leadership. Your tax dollars at work

Sandy Miller Hays
Agricultural Research Service

It's not often that we get to play with the real-world fruits of our tax dollars. I mean, the Department of Defense probably isn't going to let us personally fly a Stealth bomber, and the Department of Health and Human Services probably isn't going to let us play with any of their high-tech instruments.

But the Agricultural Research Service (ARS), which is the chief scientific agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has a real database that you can play with to your heart's content (and perhaps even to your heart's benefit). It's officially called the National Nutrient Database for Standard Reference, thankfully shortened to "SR" in most discussions.

The SR database includes more than 7,900 foods, and provides nutrient-composition values for every one of those foods. It's super-easy to use; just go online to: <http://www.ars.usda.gov/ba/bhnr/ndl>

Then scroll down to and click on "Search the database online," and on the next page that appears, click on "Start your search here."

My favorite personal experience with the database involved a call from a newspaper reporter who wanted to know the nutritional makeup of bison—yes, we're talking bison, not buffalo. I figured finding the inside dope on cornflakes would be a piece of cake (no pun intended), but bison?

With some trepidation, I went to the database and typed in "bison," and to my amazement, the database basically responded, "No problem! You want to know about bison top round? Bison ribeye? Bison sirloin? Wild bison? Grass-fed bison? Cooked or raw?" (Talk about your conversational ice-breakers: "Oh, by the way, did you know that four ounces of raw grass-fed bison contains 18 milligrams of magnesium?")

The SR is available online and you can also download it for free to a personal computer, a business computer, a hand-held device or even a mobile phone—one of the "smart phones" (which I'm not smart enough to operate, unfortunately).

The scientists of ARS' Beltsville Human Nutrition Research Center say there are hundreds of free and for-fee "apps" for the iPhone, iPod Touch, Android, Windows Phone 7, and BlackBerry hand-held devices. There's no intellectual property restriction on the database, which is updated annually, so academic, non-profit, commercial and other governmental scientific communities are encouraged to download it.

If you really want the lowdown on your favorite breakfast cereal (or bison patty), you should definitely consult the SR, because it has a lot more inside information than the nutrition label on a commercial food product's packaging. Each nutrient's breakdown for each of the 7,900 food entries in the SR can include about 140 nutrients and other dietary components, whereas your typical food package label reports on approximately 15 nutrients.

Lots of folks are already availing themselves of the informational goodies in the nutrition databases. For example, as part of First Lady Michelle Obama's "Let's Move!" initiative to help fight childhood obesity, a contest to develop "Apps for Healthy Kids" software was launched. The "Healthy Kids" competition motivated American entrepreneurs, software developers and the public—of all ages—to use the food nutrient data in a fun, engaging way through tools and games to encourage more nutritious food choices. One of the runners-up in the "Tools" category downloaded SR to create a website/tool online at www.Papayahead.com. That one follows a "freemium" business model, which provides basic, useful features for free, but also offers premium features for a fee.

If you'd like to check out all the creativity that sprouted from the contest, go to <http://apps-forhealthykids.com>. Talk about more fun than the proverbial barrel of monkeys; you can see the first- and second-place winners, as well as "honorable mentions," in the Tool and Game categories, and if you scroll down and click on "View All Applications," somebody may have to eventually use a crowbar to pry you away from your computer! (I confess, I was mesmerized by "Smash Your Food"—a pizza slice squished in a vice is not a pretty sight.)

By the way, the contestants were required to commit to providing the winning submissions free of charge to the public for a one-year period, so get in there and have some fun. Forget what Mom always said; this is one time when it's just fine to "play with your food!"

The Agricultural Research Service is the chief in-house scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. You can read more about ARS discoveries at <http://www.ars.usda.gov/news>.

The man accused of trying to shoot Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson in January, pleaded not guilty, Friday, and was ordered to undergo a state psychiatric examination. Greg Little, 35, of Water Gap will be examined at the Kentucky Corrections Psychiatric Center (KCPC) in La Grange. Little's attorney, David Williams, from the Pikeville Public Defender's office, asked for psychiatric testing "based on information regarding (Little's) mental state."

Residents of Prestonsburg's Richmond No. 4 voting precinct will soon be able to buy alcoholic beverages in their own district, thanks to last week's special-option wet/dry election. Mother Nature displayed her poetic side as heavy rain descended intermittently on those who entered and exited the polls at L & H Used Cars on South Lake Drive, on Saturday, April 25. The formerly dry precinct was voted wet by a small but deciding margin. There were 82 "yes" votes, and 74 "no" votes, as only 156 of the precinct's 398 registered voters turned out for the wet/dry election. The polls were open from 6 a.m. until 6 p.m.

The Floyd County Board of Education approved payments for a major renovation of the Betsy Layne High School gym, Tuesday, even though that project was rejected for funding by the state Department of Education. The payments approved, the project's architect, Paul Hoffman, however, have been put on hold until the project is approved by the state Department of Facilities Management.

April is National Math Month. To celebrate, students from Maytown, Osborne, Duff, and Martin elementary schools won prizes, played games, and competed against each other in written examinations and quick-recall events at Allen Central High School's 8th Math Day gala, yesterday. Joyce Watson, who has taught at Allen Central for the last 17 years, founded the event in 1985, before any other school in the region even had an academic team. Watson said yesterday that she began the program, both because she felt that it was important for schools to put more emphasis on mathematics, and because she felt that the students who excel at academics didn't receive nearly the amount of recognition that they deserved.

Researcher discusses correlations between mining and health problems

by Brashear
Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues

The scholar who has done the most to connect mountaintop removal coal mining with public health issues explained and defended his work last week during a lecture at Morehead State University.

The studies by Michael Hendryx and his colleagues at West Virginia University have become controversial because they show correlations between coal mining and public health, not that mining causes health problems. Showing the relationship between two separate things (correlation) showing that one thing causes another is causation.

Hendryx said factors that have the most impact on public health are really basic things, including education, income and poverty. In Central Appalachia, which includes Eastern Kentucky, upper East Tennessee, the southern half of West Virginia and southwest Virginia, those factors are all lowest in places where the heaviest mining occurs. His initial analysis found that mortality rates in the coal-mining region of Central Appalachia are 97 percent higher than in the rest of the region.

Deadline to apply for Kentucky elk hunt approaching

Times Staff Report

FRANKFORT - The deadline to apply for Kentucky's hunt of a lifetime is fast approaching.

Hunters have until midnight (Eastern time) April 30 to apply for a Kentucky elk hunt. The quota hunt drawing for an elk permit is open to residents and non-residents.

Kentucky will issue 900 general quota hunt permits this year, an increase of 100 permits over the 2011 season. Kentucky's elk herd is expected to surpass 10,000 animals by fall.

While there's no sure thing in hunting, Kentucky does offer phenomenal odds for hunters.

"Kentucky's success rate for hunters is higher than you'll see for wild elk practically anywhere else," noted Tina Brunjes, deer and elk program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "If hunters put in a little effort, they will see elk. If they put in a little more effort, they will take an elk."

Last year, 93 percent of bull elk hunters using a firearm were successful. Even when using more challenging archery equipment, 68 percent of hunters took their bull. Thirty-seven percent of cow elk archery hunters were successful in 2011, but the success rate climbed to 73 percent for cow elk hunters using a firearm.

Brunjes said 2012 will be a superb season for hunters wishing to put the highest quality meat on their family's table. "We had no real winter and no shortage of groceries for the animals," she said. "We should be set up for big, healthy animals coming into the hunting season and a lot of them."

Kentucky has more elk than all the states east of the Mississippi River combined. The state's 16-county elk restoration zone encompasses more than 4 million acres, nearly twice the size of Yellowstone National Park. More than half a million acres are open to public hunting for elk in Kentucky.

Hunters can select from among four different elk permits: Firearms bull, archery bull, firearms cow elk or archery cow elk. While hunters may apply for two different permits, they can only be drawn for one of those permits. Each application costs $10.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife will issue 135 permits to hunt a bull with a firearm through the general quota hunt this season. The department will issue 90 bull archery permits, 265 cow elk archery permits and 410 cow elk gun permits. A separate youth-only drawing will allow five young hunters to take a bull or a cow.

Demand is highest for the bull firearms hunts. Cow elk archery hunts are in the lowest demand, meaning this permit offers a hunter the best odds of being drawn.

Hunters may only apply online. Visit the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website at fwy.gov for more information and to apply.

Hohnstein eliminated in ISC semifinals

Times Staff Report

LINCOLN, Neb. - A slow start was the difference on Saturday morning as University of Pikeville bowler Lucas Hohnstein was eliminated from the USBC Intercollegiate Singles Championship. Hohnstein fell to Joe Steiner, a junior from Midland University 195-181 in the semifinals of the tournament.

as the game progressed and I gave Lucas a chance to get back in it."

Hohnstein said the setup, with a jump-packed arena featuring not only seating behind the bowlers but also along the lanes, wasn't the major issue. "All year long it's so loud when we're bowling," he said, referring to the packed action both on the lanes and in the venues. "Then you get here and it's so quiet. I don't think anybody's used to bowling in complete quiet like that."

Steiner, the anchor bowler for Midland and a native of North Conway, N.H., started out like a house afire with four straight strikes and five in the first six frames.

Meanwhile, Hohnstein was open in frames 2, 4 and 5, and after a split in the fifth frame caused him to leave a pin behind 129-65.

Things changed after that. While Hohnstein was able to double in 6 and 7, Steiner struck in six and then had splits in frames 7-8-9 to open the door.

"The lanes started carrying a little more, and I was able to adjust," said Hohnstein. "Before I was coming in weak and it hurt, and then Joe started doing that and I had a chance."

When Hohnstein struck in the ninth, Steiner again opened and needed a 20 count to insure the win in the 10th. He left two pins standing, but picked up the spare. With Hohnstein needing him to leave two pins to give him a chance to win or one for a tie, Steiner blasted a strike to secure the win.

"Joe absolutely deserves it, 100 percent," said Hohnstein of his competitor. "I've seen him bowl all year and when the pressure was on, he stepped up. I'm not even talking about the strike (on the fill ball). He had to spare in the 10th and that shot is tough for a right-hander. He deserves the win." Steiner, meanwhile, raved about his young competitor. "Lucas is a very good bowler and did a great job today. I left him an opening and he took advantage of it. "He'll be back here again. I'm sure of it."

Georgetown takes twinbill from Bears

Times Staff Report

PIKEVILLE - The University of Pikeville baseball team dropped a pair of Mid-South Conference games on Friday, falling to Georgetown College 3-0 and 5-3 at Johnnie LeMaster Field. The finale of the three-game series is set for Saturday at noon.

On the opener, Georgetown posted three single-run innings in the first four frames and held on there.

UPIKE posted six hits in the game, including a pair from catcher Luke Wright who singled and doubled. Pat O'Brien doubled while Chris Morford, Jake Partin and Jason Rosen all singled.

Starting pitcher Kyle Robertson went 7-1/3 innings. He allowed a lot of traffic on the bases, with 10 hits and seven walks but only two of the runs were earned. Cody Clark finished the game, allowing a hit and recording a strikeout.

In the second game the Tigers broke open a 3-2 tie with a pair in the top of the sixth and held on for the win.

Trailing 3-0, the Bears evened the count with three in the top of the fifth. The Bears loaded the bases with left fielder Adam Overbay and third baseman Jason Rosen opened the inning with singles; O'Brien delivered the first run with a sacrifice fly, with Wright plating Overbay on another. Rosen scored to tie the game when Morford delivered a two-out single.

But a two-out rally in the top of the sixth was the difference. Senior Chris Wood delivered senior Dylan Grandon with a single for what would prove scored an insurance run on a bases-loaded walk.

Fultz pounded out three of Pikeville's nine hits from the nine-hole in the lineup. Rosen had the game's only extra-base hit with a double, while the Bears got singles from Overbay, O'Brien, Morford, Partin and Andrew Hitchcock.

Senior Chris Noble went the distance for the Bears, giving up nine hits over seven while recording two strikeouts.

Annual Coin Show Opens to Public

BY DAVID MORGAN
STAFF WRITER

This year the annual International Coin Collectors Association will open its doors to the general public. The coin show is a unique opportunity for anyone that has coins, whether it's a single coin or an entire collection. They can meet with and sell directly to the collector's club. Admission is free and there is no obligation to sell. The types of coins the collectors are looking for include silver dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes dated 1964 and before. Actually, the half dollars can date all the way to 1970. The government used silver to make most U.S. coinage until 1965 when they started using cheaper clad. Silver coins made before 1965 are made with 90 percent silver and are worth many times their face value because of today's high silver market. Recently, silver has been trading for about $32 per oz. Five years ago, silver was just over $4 per oz. This dramatic increase has raised the price of these silver coins dramatically. Therefore, people that have these coins are selling them to take advantage of the record high prices. During this event, those who have coins they wish to sell will be able to do just that. Unlike selling your coins at a pawn shop or one of those traveling "we buy anything" sales, this show is operated by collectors who pay much higher prices.

This show isn't just for silver coins either. They are also interested in gold coins, paper currency, nickels and pennies too. The United States government started minting coins in 1793. If those early coins are in good condition, they can be worth big money. For instance, a 1792 silver dollar could be worth as much as $20,000 if it's the right one. Compare that to a common wheat back penny from the 1960's—still collectible but only worth a few cents. Old paper currency can be worth a lot too. A common silver certificate is only worth a couple of bucks but an 1890's $20 bill in excellent condition could be worth thousands. This event is a place you can learn about the coins and paper currency that you have and a chance to sell directly to collectors.

NEWS IN BRIEF STAFF REPORT

Mary Childs was amazed at the value of the coin collection she had taken to the local coin collectors' show. Mary's uncle had collected coins throughout his entire life. Harry was 12 years old in 1965 when he took an interest in coin collecting. Going through his father's pocket change became a daily ritual.

That's around the time when the government stopped using silver to make coins and started using the much cheaper clad. Harry was intrigued by the silver coins—they were colder to the touch than the newer clad coins and they sounded different when they clanked together. Harry thought these silver coins would eventually be taken out of circulation and may be worth something more than face value some day. He was right. Through the sixties and much of the seventies it was not uncommon to find these silver coins in pocket change. However, when they made their way back to the mint, they would be replaced with the newer clad coins. The silver coins would be melted down and gone forever.

Harry accumulated quite a collection over the years. The silver coins he collected were not very rare—in fact, they were pretty heavily circulated and had common dates. But in the past 4 years, silver has risen to record high prices. Currently, silver is trading for around $33 per oz. That makes coins dated 1964 and earlier worth many times their face value.

Uncle Harry was right—these coins were worth keeping. Harry enjoyed collecting these coins throughout his life and now he could do something special for someone close to him. Harry never had children of his own, but was very close to his brother's only child, Mary. Mary had worked hard and was very independent. She took out student loans to get through college and had recently graduated. She had just landed her first job and was starting to build a life for herself. Harry decided to give his coin collection to Mary and have her sell it to pay down her student loans. At first, Mary didn't accept the offer because she wanted to do things on her own, but Uncle Harry was pretty persistent.

After separating the coins by denomination and type, Mary loaded up the coins and headed to our coin show. After a short registration, Mary was seated in front of one of the coin experts. The volume of coins Mary brought in prompted the collector to summon the help of two additional collectors. After counting all the coins and totaling them up, the offer was made: $37,996.00. Mary had to ask the collector to repeat the offer again. She started crying tears of joy and said "SOLD!" Neither she nor her uncle had any idea that his collection was worth that much. The student loans would be paid in full, with money left over. It was a good day for Mary...a very good day!

Click & Clack Talk Cars

In this case, converter replacement is worth it

Tom and Ray Magillozzi
King Features Syndicate

Dear Tom and Ray:
I love your show. I recently got a 2001 Audi A8L that now has 130,000 miles on it. The only other owner was my dad, and he took extremely great care of the car. Recently, the check-engine light has been coming on, saying that my catalytic converter's efficiency is too low. My mechanic tested it and said the level is just barely above what I need for the car to pass its emissions inspection. He said to wait as long as I can to replace it, but that some people choose to get rid of their cars at this point because the repair is $5,200 and the bluebook value of the car is only $6,000. So, what should I do? Keep the car and pay $5,200 to replace the converters when the time comes, or sell it now, while it is still passing its emissions tests? — Patrick

TOM: You have to relocate to somewhere with no emissions testing, Patrick. Have you considered the Democratic Republic of Congo?

RAY: A lot of people don't realize that when you buy a high-end car, it's not only the parts and service are "premium," too.

"But the price you get sounds like a high even for Audi. This car uses two catalytic converters. According to our sources, the converters themselves cost about $1,900. You buy them from Audi. Then you probably should replace all four oxygen sensors, at about $200 a pop. And then add labor. Still, I don't see why they charge you more than about $3,500 for this job. So I think the estimate you get is high."

RAY: No, that $3,500 is cheap! But if someone offered you this car, right now, with new catalytic converters, for $3,500, you'd probably buy it, right? After all, what's your alternative? You could sell it for $6,000 and get what? A 2004 Dodge Caravan?

TOM: Or, if the buyer finds out why your check-engine light is on, you'll sell it for $2,500 and get a '94 Caravan!

RAY: You also can research aftermarket converters. They're at people who actually rebuild converters and ship them to you. You can find these guys online. Of course, you don't know what kind of quality you're getting when you go that route.

TOM: We've had some rebuilt converters that worked well, and others that didn't do enough "conversion" to keep the check-engine light off (which means you can't get an inspection sticker). So you can save some money that way, but you're taking your chances.

RAY: Since this is still a nice car, and it's been well cared for, and you seem to enjoy driving it, I'd say bite the bullet and replace the converters. But shop around first and see if you can get a better price.

Easy fix for a time-traveling car

Dear Tom and Ray:
My car time-travels into the future. I have a 2004 Volvo XC70 station wagon (I know it's dowdy, but it's better than a minivan, right?) that for some reason does not keep proper time. I can set the clock to the correct time, and within days it will be running fast. Within two months, the clock is fast by 20 minutes. I can understand losing time because of a weak battery or something, but advancing in time? Any thoughts? OK, let me clarify that: Any thoughts pertaining to my question? I read that TOM: We actually do have a few of those, Lisa.

RAY: If you're the kind of person who is chronically late, you may have a spouse who is surreptitiously nudging your clock ahead in an attempt to get you to be on time.

TOM: Several of my ex-wives used to try that on me.
RAY: Oh, I don't think they wanted you to be on time. They were just trying to make the day of the divorce settlement come sooner!

TOM: Most likely, Lisa, the clock itself is faulty. And, unfortunately, the clock in this car is part of the instrument cluster.

RAY: And when you find out that in order to replace this clock, you have to replace the whole instrument cluster for $1,000, you'll embrace the time-honored solution for malfunctioning automotive clocks.

TOM: You'll go to the hardware store, and for four bucks, you'll buy yourself one of those stick-on digital clocks. You'll peel off the backing and slap it right onto the instrument panel, over where your current clock sits.

RAY: Now, it's possible that your entire instrument cluster is beginning to fail. If something crucial in the cluster stops functioning — like the speedometer — you may be forced to replace the whole thing at that point.

TOM: Or, if you're lucky, your regular mechanic will know one of the places that fixes these panels for a few hundred bucks, and he'll be able to send it out for you.

RAY: But I wouldn't bother just for the clock. Even if you're a Volvo owner and you're used to leaving the dealership with angst after seeing the estimate, that's a lot for a clock. Especially given the age of the car and the price of the alternative. Good luck, Lisa.

Assured The Future

Nationals' Rotation Best in Baseball

After three times through the rotation (and four starts for ace Stephen Strasburg), the Washington Nationals' rotation has been dominant. All five starters boast a WHIP below 1.00. While the numbers are staggering (1.82 ERA, 0.86 WHIP, two home runs in 98.2 innings, 1.06 batting average against), the success of the group isn't that shocking. All five starters have, at some point in their careers, been projected as top-of-the-rotation ace. Certainly, they will come down to earth and cough up a few bad outings, but the Nationals' plan to build around starting pitching is coming together nicely.

Ace Strasburg has been typed as a Hall of Famer since the Nats made him very rich as the first overall draft pick in 2009. After missing about 12 months recovering from Tommy John surgery, the fireballer is dominating again.

Ross Detwiler, who leads the staff with a 3.18 ERA, was the team's first round pick in 2007. The organization thought enough of Detwiler to promote him to the big leagues three months after he was drafted. Jordan Zimmermann was taken in the second round in 2007, and in four seasons of minor league pitching, he allowed just 182 hits in 232 innings. He was named the organization's Minor League Pitcher of the Year in 2008. He blossomed last season with a 3.18 ERA in 26 starts for Washington.

Gio Gonzalez was a first-round pick by the White Sox in 2004 and was subsequently traded three times before the Sox dealt him to Washington this winter. In two full seasons with the A's, Gonzalez was 31-21 with a 3.17 ERA and gave up 345 hits in 272 innings with 368 K's.

Edwin Jackson was once considered by Baseball America (2004) as the No. 4 prospect in baseball. The 2001 sixth-round pick of the Dodgers never turned the corner in the minor leagues, but his major league numbers have been much better. The ace, in fact, tossed a two-hit complete game against Cincinnati, then had a horrendous first inning against the Astros, before settling down. In fact, James Shields for the team lead in their loss for the Rays in their historic pennant-winning season in 2008, he was a part of the world champion Cardinals' staff down the stretch last season.

All-Pros of the Week

Josh Hamilton, Texas
The Rangers' bats have been lively this season, to say the least, and Hamilton is leading the charge. Last week, he hit .462 with six 3-24 OPS. He had three home runs, 11 RBIs and scored five times.

Phil Humber, Chicago

As if a perfect game weren't enough, Humber put together two good starts last week, with a 0.63 ERA and an 8-0 record. He pitched the 24th perfect game in major league history, and now has one complete game in his career. In fact, that was the first time he had ever pitched into the ninth inning.

Freddie Freeman, Atlanta

The Atlanta Braves are hot. With Michael Bourn getting on base and running, Freeman is enjoying hitting with runners in scoring position. Last week, Freeman drove home 14 runs with his .478 average. He hit three homers and five doubles.

Cory Luebke, San Diego

Luebke has been one bright spot for the Padres this season. He won both starts last week, tossing 15 innings and allowing just eight hits and three walks. He struck out nine and posted an ERA of 0.60.

Leony Martin, Texas

The center fielder is ready for the big leagues, however, with a crowded outfield, the Rangers aren't ready for him. He's hitting .333 with three homers through 16 games at Triple-A.

Numbers Game

1 Career complete game by Phil Humber of the Chicago White Sox. The 29-year-old, who has been claimed off waivers twice in his career, had never pitched into the ninth inning before his perfect game against the Mariners on Saturday.

+52 Run differential for the Texas Rangers, who are 13-3 on the season. Texas has three one-run losses to the White Sox, Mariners and Tigers.

1,822 Hits by Boston's Carl Yastrzemski at Fenway Park, the most of any player in the stadium's 100-year history.

5,171 Games started at catcher by the trio of Jorge Posada, Jason Varitek and Ivan Rodriguez, who all retired since last season. They combined to play in 228 postseason games, including 48 World Series games, winning seven championships.

49 Age of Colorado's Jamie Moyer, who became the oldest pitcher to win a major league game with a victory over San Diego on April 17. Moyer tossed seven innings and allowed no earned runs to lower his ERA to 2.55. It was his No. 288 for the veteran left-hander.

Josh Hamilton

Weekend Fun

Pittsburgh at Atlanta
A.J. Burnett made his long-awaited Pittsburgh debut last Saturday, and an inauspicious beginning became an outstanding outing. Burnett loaded the bases in the first inning with no outs against the visiting Cardinals with a couple of walks and a single. He then retired 20 of the next 22 hitters he faced, one on a double-play to log seven shutout innings. After loading the bases, the efficient right-hander retired 15 of the 21 outs on three pitches or less.

Boston at Chicago White Sox
While the Red Sox were coughing up a 3-0 lead against the hated Yankees, Phil Humber of the White Sox was making history in Seattle by tossing a perfect game. The much-travelled Humber, who has twice been claimed off waivers, will make his next start at home against the struggling Sox.

Washington at Los Angeles Dodgers
The best rotation in the National League will take on the senior circuit's best offensive player in Matt Kemp as the Nationals visit the Dodgers. Ross Detwiler will get the ball for the opener on Friday night against the reigning Cy Young winner Clayton Kershaw. Stephen Strasburg will be on the hill on Saturday against Chad Billingsley, two lefties, Gio Gonzalez and Chris Capuano, will take the stage for the finale on Sunday.

Best Young Stars: Age 25 and Under

If you were trying to win a championship this season, would you rather have youthful talent? Or seasoned experience? Consider a roster of players age 25 and younger vs. a roster of veterans age 35 and older. Here's my 25-man roster of players who were age 25 or younger on Opening Day (April 4). Next week, I'll showcase the veterans.

CATCHER

Buster Posey, San Francisco
The former Rookie of the Year is hitting .361 and has allowed just three stolen bases in 80 innings behind the plate.

FIRST BASE

Eric Hosmer, Kansas City
Hosmer is the cornerstone of the Royals' future offense. Although he's struggling so far this season, Hosmer hit .293 with 19 homers after arriving in early May last season.

SECOND BASE

Jemile Weeks, Oakland
The rising star for the A's hit better than .300 and stole 22 bases in less than 100 games as a rookie last season. He should be the offensive catalyst for the A's for years to come.

THIRD BASE

Pablo Sandoval, San Francisco
Records show that Kung Fu Panda won't turn 26 until August, so he qualifies by a few months. Once he proved he could keep his weight down, he's kept his batting average up.

SHORTSTOP

Starlin Castro, Chicago Cubs
The Cubs' rising star may look lock-audacious at times, but he led the National League in hits last season, and he covers a lot of ground at short.

LEFT FIELD

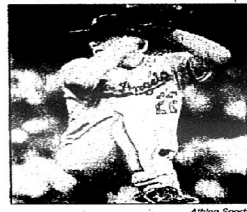

J.D. Martinez, Houston
Astros fans can look forward to Martinez hitting in the No. 3 hole for several more seasons. He was Houston's Minor League Player of the Year in 2010 while at Double-A, and hasn't been overmatched in the bigs.

Andrew McCutchen

Stephen Strasburg

Clayton Kershaw

CENTER FIELD

Justin Upton, Arizona
A thumb injury has derailed Upton this season. The right fielder missed just three games last season, hitting 31 homers and stealing 21 bags.

RIGHT FIELD

Justin Upton, Arizona
A thumb injury has derailed Upton this season. The right fielder missed just three games last season, hitting 31 homers and stealing 21 bags.

STARTING PITCHERS

Clayton Kershaw, Los Angeles Dodgers
There's no surprise that the reigning National League Cy Young winner would lead this rotation.

Stephen Strasburg, Washington
It appears that he has completely recovered from Tommy John surgery. Now if the Nationals will just turn him loose, we could see just how good the flamethrower can be.

Felix Hernandez, Seattle
King Felix turned 26 just after this season started, although it seems like he's been Seattle's ace since Ken Griffey's first tour with the Mariners.

Madison Bumgarner, San Francisco
After the first three spots in our rotation, the choices get much tougher. Bumgarner pitched through a tough luck last season, with just three runs or less of support in 16 of his 33 starts.

MAJOR LEAGUE

Jaime Garcia, St. Louis
In a major-league close call, Garcia is chosen over Yu Darvish of Texas and Ivan Nova of the Yankees. Garcia won 26-15 over 60 starts in 2010-11 and had a postseason experience.

BULLPEN

Matt Moore, Tampa Bay
We're going with a traditional 10-man pitching staff and we like having a left-hander who can eat innings and miss bats.

Jeremy Hellickson, Tampa Bay
Moore's teammate is the right-handed version of our long man.

Aroldis Chapman, Cincinnati
Officially, Chapman is only 24. He also throws 100-mph gas for multiple innings, from the left side. Valuable asset!

Neftali Feliz, Texas
Developed as a starter in the minors, then converted to one of the best closers in the game. Feliz has returned to the rotation this season.

CLOSER

Craig Kimbrel, Atlanta
Kimbrel was lights out last year until he ran out of gas late in the season. Manager Fredi Gonzalez plans to take it easy on Kimbrel this season.

ATLANTA BRUINS

BENCH

Matt Wieters, Baltimore
We won't lose much when one of the best catchers in the game subs for Posey.

Elvis Andrus, Texas
Due to his experience, Andrus gets the bench spot over Dec Gordon of the Dodgers.

Carlos Santana, Cleveland
With the same birthday as Hernandez, Santana barely makes it eligible. The switch-hitter can hit and gives us a third emergency catcher.

Billy Butler, Kansas City
The hitting machine really doesn't have a position, but he can rake.

Austin Jackson, Detroit
Jackson is proving what a complete player he can be. We love his speed and defense off the bench.

Giancarlo Stanton, Miami
A quick glance at his split stats shows that he has much more power going by Mike than Giancarlo.

Brett Lawrie, Toronto
We need another infielder and Lawrie plays the game with the kind of gusto and confidence we like.

Inter Mountain Cable

April 26, 1980

Lefty Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies pitched his sixth one-hitter, defeating his old team, the St. Louis Cardinals. Carlton, who never pitched a no-hitter, threw the first of his six one-hitters in 1968 as a member of the Cardinals.

April 27, 1983

Houston's Nolan Ryan struck out Brad Mills of the Montreal Expos (and current Astros manager) to presumably break the all-time strikeout record held by Walter "Big Train" Johnson of 3,508. Since then, baseball historians have credited Johnson with 3,509 whiffs, so Ryan didn't actually break the record until his next start in New York against Mookie Wilson.

Numbers Game

1 Career complete game by Phil Humber of the Chicago White Sox. The 29-year-old, who has been claimed off waivers twice in his career, had never pitched into the ninth inning before his perfect game against the Mariners on Saturday.

+52 Run differential for the Texas Rangers, who are 13-3 on the season. Texas has three one-run losses to the White Sox, Mariners and Tigers.
