Democrats send message to Obama

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

The very few Floyd County Democrats who bothered to go to the polls Tuesday gave a vote no confidence to President Barack Obama on Election Day, expressing a preference for "Uncommitted" over the incumbent president by nearly a 2-to-1 margin.

Of the 1,530 votes cast in the Democratic presidential primary, 972 went to "Uncommitted," compared to 558 for President Obama.

Statewide, however, the result was almost the exact opposite. With 97.5 percent of the vote counted, Obama tallied 58 percent of the vote, compared to 42 percent for "Uncommitted."

On the Republican side of the ballot, presumptive nominee former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney cruised to a victory over Rep. Ron Paul and two withdrawn candidates, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich and former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, both in Floyd County and statewide.

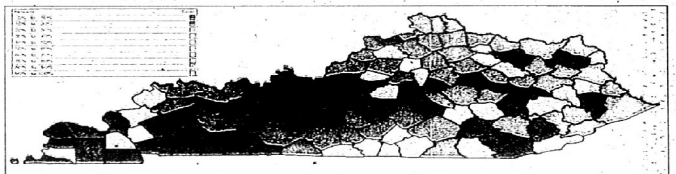

In Floyd County, Romney took 156 of the 228 votes cast, compared to 33 for Paul, 16 for Gingrich, 15 for Santorum and 8 for "Uncommitted."

Across Kentucky, the percentages were nearly identical, with Romney taking 67 percent of the vote, compared to 12 percent for Paul, 9 for Santorum, 6 for Gingrich and 6 for "Uncommitted."

In the only race with anything at stake on the ballot, the Fifth District U.S. representative contest, Kenneth S. Stepp, of Manchester, held on to a slim lead against his Democratic primary challenger, Michael Ackerman, by 1,264 votes. If the result holds, Stepp would take longtime Republican incumbent Rep. Hal Rogers in November.

Tuesday's ballot held little interest for voters, with less than 14 percent turning out across the state and less than half that percentage voting in Floyd County. In the Fifth registered Democrats cast votes across the district.

Floyd County had the eighth-lowest voter turnout in the state, Tuesday, and was one of 43 counties in which less than 10 percent of those eligible voted. Only one county in the state — Clinton District — saw more than 40 percent of its voters go to the polls.

In Floyd County, only 1,849 of the county's 29,808 voters went to the polls, although 705 voters were precluded from voting Tuesday, due to being registered independent or with a third party. Under the state's closed primary system, only Democrats can vote in the Democratic primary, and only Republicans can vote in the Republican primary.

Without factoring in independent and third-party voters, Floyd County's voter participation rate rises from 6.20 percent to 6.35 percent.

Martin raises fine for shooting

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

MARTIN — City council members were all present Tuesday night when they voted to add teeth to a 1946 gun ordinance.

During the Tuesday's meeting, council members all agreed that the $10 fine for discharging a firearm in Martin city limits, as per Ordinance No. 33 (1946), needed to be raised.

According to the ordinance, "no other person other than those duly authorized by law shall be permitted to discharge firearms, within the City Limits of Martin, Kentucky."

The ordinance goes on to state that parents or guardians of minors violating the ordinance will be held responsible. The penalty as it was written in 1946 is a $10 fine. The ordinance states that should an offender fail to pay the fine, they will be confined in the jail or "at hard labor" until said fine and costs are satisfied.

"The only change we're going to make is to change the fine of $10 to a larger fine," said Mayor Thomasine Robinson.

Councilman Bobby Dings said that many people do not know about the ordinance, and that he himself had shot his gun inside the city limits. Dings asked that the first offense fine be low or possibly a warning since many people are not aware of the ordinance.

Growing Hope

Women's treatment center growing fourfold

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

PRESTONSBURG — There will be room for a little more Hope in the Mountains, when the women's treatment facility completes its current expansion.

Hope in the Mountains is a 90-day treatment program that offers drug and alcohol counseling to women, as well as counseling to victims of domestic violence.

"We're building a structure that is big enough to hold 30 more women," director Renee McCoy said. McCoy says the treatment facility currently only has room for 10 women. The first person walked through Hope in the Mountains' door in March 2008.

Since then, more than 170 women have passed through its halls.

"We're very excited that we're going to be able to serve more," McCoy said. "We're all challenged to meet the need."

According to McCoy, the facility, which is located off Watergap Road, works with many women who are sentenced to rehab treatment through Drug Court.

The facility also offers a garden, which provides a therapeutic outlet for the women in treatment. The garden is operated in partnership with St. Vincent Mission and Grow Appalachia.

When asked if the center tries to help women re-enter the world by finding them jobs and places to live

McCoy said, "We try as best we can. So many of them live away from here."

McCoy says the center tries to establish living arrangements for the women when they leave, and that they contact the various housing authorities to try to aid the women as they try to begin their new life.

"We do link them to the community resources of where they're going to," said McCoy.

One of the tragic aspects of Eastern Kentucky's drug epidemic is the number of children born into it. Hope in the Mountains offers a place for pregnant women and provides transportation and support through their many medical appointments.

Three charged in Kentucky-Florida pill pipeline

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

PIKEVILLE — Three men who alleged operated an interstate "pill pipeline," which authorities say was responsible for selling 200,000 pain pills last year in Pike County, have been arrested under a federal drug conspiracy indictment.

The arrests include two Pike County men, Kenneth Lee Gannon, 53, of Alex, and Russell West, 42, of McVeigh, along with a Florida man, Jermaine St. Clair Littles, who also goes by the alias "Black," 32, of Clearwater. All three have been charged with a single count of conspiracy to distribute oxycodone under a federal indictment handed down April 30. The indictment had remained sealed until Wednesday, after all three men were in custody. "More than 200,000 Oxycodone pills were sold in Pike County over the past 12 months by these individuals," said Keith Napier, Big Sandy Task Force Manager for Operation UNITE, which investigated the case along with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. "They were getting pills delivered on almost a monthly basis."

Former jailer candidate arrested

Jack Latta
Staff Writer

PRESTONSBURG — A candidate in the 2010 jailer race was arrested last weekend, after Kentucky State police received a report of domestic violence.

Stanley Lee lost his 2010 bid to unseat Jailer Roger Webb. Webb captured 66 percent of the vote.

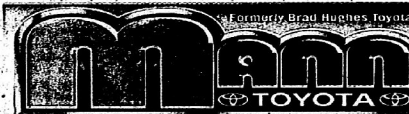

On Sunday, according to police reports, Stanley E. Lee, 44, of Martin, was arrested before dawn, after police received a call from a victim advising that her live-in boyfriend was assaulting her and had "beat her head in."

According to the statements made by the victim in the police report, she was intoxicated, after she accompanied Lee to the "Holiday Inn" to drink and socialize with friends. The alleged victim told police Lee became upset because, according to the police report, she had "information on her 'baby daddy' on her new cell phone and that the subject is very jealous of that person."

The report states the victim had an obvious contusion on the right side of her forehead.

Lee was transported to the Floyd County Detention Center, where he then advised the officer that he

Pill

At an average of $40 a pill, officials estimate the men were responsible for $8 million in drug traffic in 2011.

Officials say this particular case is noteworthy due to a new wrinkle in the Kentucky-Florida prescription narcotics trade — delivery.

"This is an unusual case not only due to the quantity of controlled substances involved, but the fact that Florida residents were delivering to Kentucky," noted Dan Smoot, deputy director of UNITE. "We know that there are thousands of Eastern Kentucky residents going to Florida to purchase prescription pills, but in this investigation Florida was bringing the drugs to us."

Investigators were led to the men, thanks to numerous anonymous tips from residents in the Belfry area.

Using the tips, police were able to investigate several undercover drug buys and execute search warrants.

"The DEA's commitment to East Kentucky has made it possible to identify not only the street dealers but also the mid and upper level suppliers," Smoot said. "We hope this continued partnership will result in many more investigations of this type."

In addition to finding over 1,000 pills on Gannon and West, police also seized nearly $12,000 in cash.

Gannon and West were arrested Tuesday by agents with UNITE and the DEA, as well as officers from Kentucky State Police, and lodged in the Pike County Detention Center. Littles was arrested earlier this month and is being held in a Florida jail.

Each man faces up to 20 years in prison and $1 million in fines, if convicted.

had scratches from defending himself. Lee reportedly requested that he be surrendered to the Floyd County Sheriff, instead of being housed in the detention center, because he was a former federal law enforcement officer.

Lee was later released from custody on a $5,000 surety bond. His next scheduled court date is June 6.

shooter who didn't know there was a law against it?" said Dingus.

Dingus said in the event that someone accidentally shoots himself, that it shouldn't be necessary to fine them. "They've learned their lesson," said Dingus.

Council asked police Chief Brian Baldwin what he thought would be a suitable fine for breaking the city's gun ordinance. Baldwin recommended making the fine for a second offense steep enough that people would not ignore the ordinance.

Council members voted to amend the ordinance to allow a fine of $100 for the first offense, and $500 for subsequent offenses.

Also during Tuesday's meeting, Mayor Thomasine told council members that she had spoken to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and that nine more houses are scheduled to be torn down soon, as part of the city's redevelopment project.

MSU instructor's film explores tobacco use in Appalachia

Kentucky Educational Television will air the documentary film "Tobacco in Appalachia," starting in June. The film was directed and produced by Morehead State University instructor Steven Middleton.

The film describes risks linked with tobacco use but shows how much it means to families from the Appalachian region.

It's all in the WRIST.

Revolutionary idea gets heart patients back on their feet fast!

The experts at King's Daughters are taking a new approach to cardiac catheterization - through the wrist. Called radial access, this advance allows patients to get back on their feet - literally - and back to their lives with less discomfort and fewer complications.

It's all made possible by the latest technology, advances in miniaturization, and, of course, the forward-thinking cardiologists at King's Daughters.

If cardiac catheterization is in your future, ask your cardiologist about radial access.

Richard Ansinelli, M.D., Ghassan Dattaji, M.D., Vaughn Payne, M.D., Edward Ha, M.D., Richard Paulus, M.D., and Sriharsha Velury, M.D.; at the forefront in radial access cardiac catheterization.

Gov. Steve Beshear

We've held off modernizing Kentucky's tax code for several years now, not wanting to jeopardize the beginning stages of our recovery from the global economic recession.

With the recovery taking firm hold, however, the time has arrived to move our tax system into the 21st Century. Led by Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson, the 23 members of the Governor's Blue Ribbon Commission on Tax Reform have been meeting for several months to familiarize themselves with the strengths and weaknesses of our tax system, to look at other states and to examine the dozen studies and evaluations of Kentucky taxes that have been performed since 1982.

Now it's your turn to weigh in. Beginning next Tuesday, the commission will be holding meetings around the state to hear what Kentuckians think about our tax code — where it needs to be changed, where it must be improved.

Meetings will be in Paducah, Bowling Green, Louisville, Highland Heights (On Northern Kentucky University's campus), Prestonsburg and Lexington. For locations and times, look on the web site, <http://governor.ky.gov/taxreform> under "public meeting schedule."

If you can't make it to a meeting, you can still voice your opinion by clicking on "public comments."

Whether you're a teacher, a small-business owner, a college student, a steelworker or a part-time short-order cook, we want to hear from you. We need to hear from you. I could easily have put the task of modernizing Kentucky's tax code solely in the hands of economic experts. But this isn't an academic, esoteric exercise set up to posit theoretical arguments about ideal tax structures.

It's an exercise that recognizes that the power of taxation is a living, breathing, mechanism with tangible impact on people's lives — both those who are taxed, and those who use services funded by those taxes.

If you earn an income or own property, this will have an impact on you.

Likewise, if you drive on roads ... live in an area patrolled by state police ... have a child or relative in the K-12 school system, a community college or a public university ... want the air you breathe to be clean ... use electricity ... access health care through Medicaid ... or use any other of hundreds of government services, then you have a vested interest in how our taxes work.

By listening to our citizens, we hope to understand not only their perceptions of how our tax revenue is raised but also whether they think those taxes are adequate to meet the needs of a state facing dynamic shifts in education, workforce training, early childhood development, aging and health care.

Kentucky's tax system served us well during the recession. But to prepare ourselves to compete in the future, we must — in a thoughtful and nonpartisan way — re-align our system with the principles of fairness and a 21st Century economy.

This commission has no pre-set notion of what changes need to be made. It instead has five overarching goals: A tax burden that is fair for different families and businesses. A structure that is competitive, ensuring that Kentucky continues to attract and retain jobs and investment. A system that is easy to understand and comply with. A system that evolves with the economy. And a system that provides adequate revenue for services that improve Kentuckians' quality of life.

The best tax structure strikes a balance between tax burden and return. By attending one of these meetings or weighing in on-line, you can help us find that balance.

We have done much in the last 4½ years to rein in government and cut spending. But we've also fought hard to preserve critical services.

That's because we realize that Kentuckians are not against taxes. They are against unnecessary taxes.

Nor are Kentuckians against spending. They are against wasteful spending.

And they're not against government. They're against poorly run government.

Improving Kentucky's tax structure is yet another way to ensure that government works for the people, not against them.

Beyond the Beltway Remembering Charles Colson

Donald Kaul
OtherWords

One of the great villains of Richard Nixon's villainous administration went to his final reward last month. Charles Colson was in full flower, it's hard to fully comprehend what a truly nasty piece of work he was.

For those who weren't around or paying attention 40 years ago when Colson was in full flower, it's hard to fully comprehend what a truly nasty piece of work he was.

He created or directed "political" operations that included burglary, arson, forgery, and the obstruction of justice. He did all of this out of the White House, where he was Nixon's Special Counsel. He and Nixon were a marriage made in Heaven (or Hell, whichever works better for you).

He was a 38-year-old Washington lawyer when he joined Nixon's team in 1969 and quickly became a presidential favorite. "When I complained to Colson, I felt confident that something would be done," Nixon later wrote. "I was rarely disappointed."

What kind of something? Oh, like setting up a burglary unit made up of a bunch of losers who had helped plan and execute the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba. Those were the guys who broke into the office of the psychiatrist who treated Daniel Ellsberg, the man who had released the secret Pentagon Papers that revealed the hoax that was the Vietnam War.

They also broke into the offices of the Democratic Party at the Watergate complex, and did it so ineptly that they brought the entire administration crashing down around their ears. Colson also had a plan to set fire to the Brookings Institution in Washington, then to send his gang, dressed as firefighters, into the building to loot confidential files. It never got off the ground, but Nixon was good to go with it. He was also the author of Nixon's infamous "enemies list," which the president wanted to use as a guide for IRS audits.

I think my favorite dirty Colson trick involved his response to the shooting of George Wallace, the racist Alabama governor who was running for president in 1972.

When Nixon asked Colson about the shooter's politics, Colson said, "Well, he's going to be a left-winger by the time I get through."

He proposed breaking into the would-be assassin's apartment and planting left-ist pamphlets, to which Nixon, leader of the world, responded: "Good. Keep at that."

Colson had left the administration and found God (he said) by the time Watergate caught up to him. After consulting his conscience, he copped an obstruction-of-justice plea on the Ellsberg burglary and spent the next seven months in jail.

Following his release, he went on to become an important figure in the evangelical community, of all things. He was heavily praised for establishing a ministry serving prisoners and ex-convicts, and earned 15 honorary degrees from colleges along with a presidential medal from George W. Bush. As governor of Florida, Jeb Bush restored to Colson the rights of citizenship he'd forfeited as a convicted felon.

The Watergate veteran was even invited to the Harvard School of Business to lecture its students on ethics.

I was never entirely convinced of Colson's transformation from thuggish rogue to saintly dog-gooder. In fact, his work with convicts aside, the case can be made that he did more harm after his release from prison than he did before he entered.

He was a key figure in forming the toxic coalition of Catholic and evangelical leaders to fight for laws banning same-sex marriage and abortion. In 2002 he signed a letter urging President Bush to attack Iraq in the name of "a just war." He didn't mitigate his zealotry; he merely learned to practice it legally.

Generally I don't believe in speaking ill of the dead. In Colson's case, however, I've made an exception.

The Usual Eccentric The other kind of illegal immigrants, eh?

Will E. Sanders
Creators Syndicate

So do you want to know what concerns me the most about illegal immigration? No? Fine, be that way, jerk. I guess I'll find something else to write about then.

Say, does anyone have an opinion on that bread-feeding cover Time magazine published last week? I don't see what the big deal is. This month's cover of Hustler has, like, three different sets up boobs on the cover. Nobody is complaining about that.

Well, well, well, so you do want to know what concerns me the most about illegal immigration after all. I was hoping you would come around.

Well, the answer is simple: illegal Canadian immigrants.

C'mon, don't act like they aren't out there — they are! And if you ask me, illegal Canucks are the real unspoken understatement (and hypocrisy) of the national immigration debate, err, debate — I meant to say debate. Yet illegal Canadian immigrants go largely unnoticed when compared to their southern counterparts.

At the risk of sounding like an intolerant bigot, I will make it perfectly clear. I can't stand illegal Canadian immigrants.

Take the other day for instance.

I was minding my own business at the grocery store and this couple from Quebec was behind me in line jibberjabbering in French. That upset me something awful, let me tell you. I am highly arrogant so naturally I figured they were talking in French about me (and why I was buying such a suspiciously high volume of garlic).

I whipped around, shot them a disgusted glance and said, "Learn to speak English or go back to your own country."

Since they were French they immediately surrendered, gave into my demands and fled the store in a blur of flannel and denim, presumably back to Ontario.

Oh, the garlic. I had heard garlic keeps illegal Canadian immigrants from sneaking into your house at night, sucking your blood and turning you into an illegal Canadian immigrant, too. I realize now that I was thinking of vampires.

What I would really like to do is join one of those militia outfits that patrol the southern border. Except I want to try and convince those disgruntled, old white guys with itchy trigger fingers to pull up their stakes and head north where the real problem is. Of course the only bad thing with that is most illegal Canadian immigrants are Anglo-Saxon, which makes them that much harder to discriminate against — unless they are speaking French or use the interjection "eh" to finish every sentence, eh.

Yes, we need soldiers posted at the northern border. It's harder walking across the street than it is entering America through Canada. Those crazy Canucks are so determined to live the American dream that they are even willing to go over Niagara Falls in crazy contraptions just for an opportunity at obtaining it.

If you ask me that's all the more reason to build a gigantic wall up there. Or maybe that's just the old-fashioned American xenophobia speaking. Either that or the garlic fumes are starting to affect my line of thinking.

But no, nobody cares about illegal Canadian immigrants. We are only worried about the Mexican ones, for some reason. Honestly, tell me, what was the last time you read an article in the newspaper about illegal Canadian immigrants ice-skating over Lake Superior and stealing jobs away from honest, hard-working Yankees?

Well it happened. To the entire state of Minnesota!

Sadly, most Americans only reserve their individual ire toward illegal Mexican immigrants, who they think are taking over the country. If that's true — if they are taking over the country — I can't help but notice a little bit of awkward irony.

On one hand now we know how the Native Americans felt. On the other hand at least these immigrants aren't doing it through bogus land treaties and infected blankets that kill our children and give us syphilis.

UNITE Service Corps awarded Governor's Citation

PRESTONSBURG — Operation UNITE's Service Corps program received recognition for its excellent leadership and service during its end-of-year celebration held May 23.

"Because of your demonstration of integrity and ability, meriting our great trust and respect, we are most pleased to award (UNITE) this Governor's Citation in sincere appreciation of your outstanding services to the Commonwealth of Kentucky and its citizens," stated the citation, signed by Gov. Steve Beshear and Audrey Tayse Haynes, secretary of the Kentucky Cabinet of Health and Family Services.

Making the presentation was Eileen Cackowski, executive director of the Kentucky Commission on Community Volunteerism and Service (KCCVS) in the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services. "You have the trust of the commonwealth," Cackowski said. "You have proven yourself to be so incredibly good."

This is the second time in as many years that UNITE received this recognition — "a walk on water" accomplishment, Cackowski claimed, noting a recipient must be nominated based upon outstanding volunteer service to communities. "UNITE has always done a tremendous job," Cackowski said. "These UNITE members have a difficult task (because of home situations and the impact of drugs). I just think this program has done an incredible job."

"The credit of getting the governor's citation has to go to our members. They are the ones in the schools and who are making the difference," said Eugene Newsome, coordinator of the UNITE Service Corps. "I am very proud of what they have done."

"You may not realize it, but the best part of the kids' day is the time they get to spend with you," Phillip

Birchfield, principal of Mullins Elementary, told the AmeriCorps members during his keynote presentation. "In your job you don't always get to see the end result, but you are making an impact."

Birchfield, who oversees the second largest school in Pike County, noted that a vast majority of students come from economically disadvantaged or drug-impacted homes — two students had parents who died from substance abuse this past year.

Despite these obstacles, "never feel sorry for them," Birchfield stressed. "Build that relationship... with that child (and) educate them so they see a better life. That's what you're all about."

UNITE employed 28 full-time AmeriCorps members as part of its UNITE Service Corps initiative during the 2011-12 school year. These members taught the "Too Good for Drugs" and "Take 10" health curriculum, tutored students in mathematics, and helped establish or coordinate existing anti-drug UNITE Clubs at 35 elementary schools in 11 Eastern Kentucky counties. In addition, they provide hundreds of hours of community service.

This school year took the community service component to a new level, as members actively assisted emergency management officials in relief efforts following the March 2 tornado outbreak.

"Community service is an important part of the Service Corps philosophy, but the night the tornado hit our members were calling me at home to find out what they could do to help," Newsome commented. "We had members who were in search and rescue in Johnson and Magoffin counties, members that staffed the shelters, members who were assisting in food and clothing distribution, and some members who spent days assisting the National Guard loading and unloading supplies."

"It was amazing to see how they responded to help the communities that were hit," Newsome added. "They stepped outside the scope of their traditional AmeriCorps duties."

Special guests attending the celebration luncheon, held at the Mountain Arts Center in Prestonsburg, were KCCVS Program Officer Andrea Siedoff, KCCVS Disabilities Coordinator Lanny Taubee, KCCVS Administrative Assistant Linda Farney, and Pike County Safe and Drug Free Schools Director Marionette Little.

This was the fourth year Operation UNITE has received funding for the initiative through a grant awarded by the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCP).

The CNCP improves lives, strengthens communities and fosters civic engagement through service and volunteering. As the nation's largest grant maker in support of service and volunteering, CNCS engages more than five million Americans of all ages and backgrounds in service to their communities each year.

In exchange for a year of full-time service, members earn a Segal AmeriCorps Education Award that can be used to pay for college or graduate school, or to pay back qualified student loans.

Late May is a good time to catch catfish

ART LANDER JR.
KENTUCKY AFFAIR

FRANKFORT - Late May is a prime time to catch catfish from Kentucky's reservoirs, small lakes, rivers and farm ponds.

"The water is warming into the 70s and catfish are about to spawn," said Gerry Bynak, assistant director of the Fisheries Division for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "Beginning in late spring and throughout the summer, catfish settle into daily patterns and feed as usual."

Kentucky's three most sought-after catfish species channel catfish, blue catfish and flathead catfish have slightly different feeding habits. Anglers must use the right bait, the proper rig and the correct presentation to catch each kind of catfish.

Fishing tackle is an important consideration. Many catfish anglers prefer a 6 1/2- to 7-foot medium to heavy-action spinning rod. They match it with a spinning reel spooled with 17-pound fishing line.

Circle hooks are growing in popularity among catfish anglers because most fish are hooked in the corner of their mouth. These hooks prevent catfish from swallowing the hook.

The channel catfish (Ictalurus punctatus) is the most widely distributed catfish species in Kentucky. It thrives in ponds and small lakes. Channel catfish have bluish-silver backs, silvery sides and a whitish belly. They rarely exceed 30 inches.

Anglers must fish their baits on the bottom to catch channel catfish. That's because channel catfish are scavengers. They cruise the bottom, using their super-sensitive whiskers to detect the odors of live and dead prey.

The basic slip sinker rig is the best choice for bottom fishing. Tie a No. 2 circle hook onto an 18- to 24-inch leader. Tie the other end of the leader to a barrel swivel. On the line from the rod, thread a 1-ounce sinker, then tie the line to the other eyelet of the barrel swivel. Thread a plastic bead onto the main line between the sinker and the swivel to help prevent the sinker from damaging the knot that connects the main line to the barrel swivel.

Fish won't feel any resistance when they pick up the bait since the line will slip through the swivel. Night crawler worms.

Ladycats edge P'burg for district softball title

STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

MARTIN - Betsy Layne edged Floyd County Conference rival Prestonsburg 1-0 on Tuesday at Allen Central's home field to win the 58th District softball title.

The Ladycats claimed their second one-run win in the postseason in as many days. Betsy Layne edged South Floyd 6-5 on Monday in the opening round of the district tournament.

Kennedy Bias scored the lone run for Betsy Layne in the seventh inning.

Betsy Layne hurler Brandy Morrow was the winning pitcher.

For Betsy Layne, Eddi Akers, Timera Thacker, Antonia Vance, Bias and Morrow had one hit apiece.

Mercedes Martin had the game-winning RBI for the Ladycats.

"This was what we had been working for all year," said Betsy Layne Coach Gloria Mullins. "It has been a long year but everything fell into place at the right time. I'm so proud of these girls."

Betsy Layne won in dramatic fashion, recording the game's last out on a tagout of a Prestonsburg baserunner in a rundown play between third base and home plate.

Both Betsy Layne (7-21) and Prestonsburg (11-17) advance to next week's 15th Region Tournament.

DRIFT - The Prestonsburg Blackcats took control of their opening round game in the 58th District Baseball Tournament against South Floyd early on Monday, pushing across three runs in the bottom half of the first inning. District tournament favorite Prestonsburg was dominant throughout the postseason matchup. The Blackcats scored four runs in the bottom half of the fifth inning to win 10-0 via the KHSAA Mercy Rule at Drift Park.

Senior pitcher Adam Crisp earned the win. Crisp, who worked all five innings, limited South Floyd to one hit. The Prestonsburg pitcher registered 12 strikeouts in an excellent outing.

South Floyd ace Jacob Crager, a junior pitcher, suffered the loss. Crager had four strikeouts in his season-ending appearance.

Leadoff hitter Grant Anderson led Prestonsburg at the plate. Anderson was 4-for-4 with two singles, a double and a triple. The Prestonsburg shortstop also had three runs.

Five MSU baseball players earn conference honors

Times Staff Report
JACKSON, Tenn. - Five Morehead State University baseball players were selected to the Ohio Valley Conference's annual all-conference and all-freshmen lists Tuesday. Senior catcher Eric Bainer, junior closer Matt Duncan and sophomore utility man Nick Duff were selected to the second-team, and freshmen Aaron Goe and Duran Elmore made the all-freshmen squad. "All of these guys are deserving and I am very proud of them," said Morehead State Coach Jay Sorg. "Four of those receiving honors were underclassmen and our future looks very bright." Duncan broke the single-season saves record earlier this season after being named to the National Collegiate Baseball Writers' Association Stopper of the Year Midseason Watch List. He leads the OVC with 13 saves and ranks in the top 10 nationally. The Brownsburg, Ind., native is two saves shy of tying the single-season conference record held by Jacksonville State's Todd Hornsby. "Acting as the Eagles' primary backstop for the first time in his career, Bainer flourished both at and behind the dish. The Louisville native leads the club with eight home runs and is one of the team's top run producers. He caught 40 games for MSU this season and ranked among league leaders in throwing out potential basestealers. Duff made an impact at multiple positions for the Eagles during the 2012 campaign. The Rowan County native made six starts in right field, 10 in left, six at second base and 20 as designated hitter. He is tied for the team lead with 27 walks and ranks fourth on the club with a .322 batting average. As conference-weekend opening starter this season, Goe provided a valuable arm in the Eagle rotation. The Dry Ridge native leads the team with six wins and has allowed the fewest walks of any qualifying starting pitcher in the OVC. He tossed his first collegiate complete game last weekend versus UT Martin and paces the club with 88.1 innings pitched. Elmore led the Eagles with 16 stolen bases this season. He ranks in the top of the conference in sacrifices and is one away from tying the program single-season record held by former Eagle outfielder Travis Rima. The Danville native has elite speed and recorded five outfield assists on defense.

Fish

shrimp, chicken livers or scented chum are excellent baits for channel catfish. The blue catfish (Ictalurus furcatus) occurs naturally in the biggest rivers, including the Mississippi and lower Ohio. They also occur in Kentucky and Barkley lakes. Kentucky Fish and Wildlife biologists have successfully stocked these fish in smaller lakes around the state as well.

Anglers may confuse the blue catfish with channel catfish. The most obvious difference is the channel catfish has a rounded anal fin; the blue catfish has a straight anal fin. Blue catfish are bluish-gray with deeply-forked tails. Blue catfish tend to roam in loose schools. At night, dusk and dawn, they frequent the shallows; they move to deeper water during the day.

Popular baits for blue catfish include cut-up gizzard shad, bluegill or minnows. Anglers fishing small lakes use a float to keep bait suspended off the bottom. Anglers fishing in big rivers typically use a three-way swivel rig. Tie one eyelet of the swivel to the main line. Tie a two-foot leader onto a hook, and then tie this onto the top eyelet of the swivel. Finally, tie a two-foot section of line to the third eyelet and attach a weight. Anglers in big waters fish the edges of channels with this rig.

The third popular species in Kentucky is the flathead catfish (Pylodictis olivaris). It inhabits large rivers and reservoirs. Flatheads are brownish to yellowish on top and have a yellowish to white belly. They have wide, flat heads and triangular tails.

Flatheads commonly reach 36 inches in length and can live for 20 years. Adults are solitary and inhabit deep, sluggish pools during the day. They move onto rocky shallows at night, often locating around deadfalls, rock piles and stumps. They only eat live fish, crayfish, shiners, shad and sunfish are good baits to use.

Anglers use a modified slip rig for flatheads. Flat sinkers are used on this rig to prevent the bait from rolling. Foam floats attached to the leader keep the bait off the bottom. This prevents baitfish from swimming into cover and getting hung up.

Catfish in Kentucky are big, abundant and found in every kind of water throughout the state. For more information on where to fish in Kentucky, visit the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website at fw.ky.gov.

Remember, too, that June 2-3 are free fishing days in Kentucky. Anglers do not need a license this weekend. Dozens of Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's Fishing in Neighborhoods (FINs) lakes are being stocked with channel catfish in preparation for this weekend. Visit the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website for the FINs lake nearest you.
