Fi charges from deadly crash filed

Jack Latta
Staff Writer
PRESTONSBURG — Murder was not listed among the charges against the driver of a vehicle involved in a car crash that resulted in the death of 63-year-old Brenda Montgomery that were filed last week in Floyd County District Court.
James E. Mace, 22, was the driver of the 2000 Chevrolet Malibu that crashed into Jackson resident Montgomery and her passenger, Elsie Oakley, May 15, Montgomery was transported to Highlands Regional Medical Center, where she was pronounced dead by Floyd County Coroner Greg Nelson.

Assistant County Attorney Tyler Green said Kentucky State Police is still investigating the crash, and has not given his office any indication of if or when more charges may be forthcoming.

Police officials said, at the time of the accident, Mace was fleeing from sheriff's deputies who had spotted him and his passenger, Jonathan Crider, melting down copper at an old strip mine. Deputies reported losing track of the vehicle when they reached the main road. Moments later, Mace's vehicle would collide head-on with Montgomery's on Route 114.
The charges filed last week against Mace include two counts of first-degree wanton endangerment (police), receiving stolen property, first-degree fleeing or evading police, criminal trespassing, and tampering with physical evidence.

Mace is currently being held in the Floyd County Detention Center. His bond was initially set at $1 million, but was reduced to $100,000 during his arraignment Monday.
Kentucky State Police did not return calls seeking comment about the investigation into the crash.

Harold sewer project kicks off after 13 years

Jack Latta
Staff Writer
BETSY LAYNE — A number of state and local dignitaries were present Thursday at Betsy Layne Fire Department for the groundbreaking ceremony of a Floyd County sewer project nearly 13 years in the making.
The Harold sewer project has been in the development phase for what seems like an eternity to those involved, and many openly questioned whether or not the project would ever move forward.
Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley, acting as master of ceremonies, said the project had gone through several different drafts and locations. At one time or another, the project was supposed to be in Prestonsburg, then in Pike County, and now finally in Betsy Layne, near the Pike and Floyd county line.

The projected construction consists of a new 100,000 gallons per day regional wastewater treatment plant at Pike/Floyd Hollow and five miles or more of sanitary sewer trunk force mains that will provide service to 135 initial customers. Sewer lines will range from 1.25 inches to 12 inches in diameter. A small section of gravity sewer line will be constructed along Bobcat Boulevard along with a conventional lift station. The project will also provide service to some larger developments and public entities such as, the Betsy Layne High School, Betsy Layne Elementary School, Huddle House, and a few commercial strip centers in Betsy Layne. The total cost for the project: $3,705,944.
Big Sandy AED representative Sandy Runyon said the sewer project informally started with the beginning of the PRIDE project. Runyon said since that time, the project has been "on the shelf and off the shelf" for over a dozen years.

"I hope we can get this project in the ground before I retire," Runyon quipped.
Floyd County Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall says the project is "an opportunity for Floyd County to develop the way adjacent counties have." Marshall says businesses and industry often turn their nose up at the prospect of locating in Floyd County because of the cost of having to build their own wastewater treatment facilities.
Marshall says that six years of his tenure as judge have been spent trying to get this project off the ground.
State Sen. Johnny Ray Turner echoed Marshall's remarks, saying

City to light the skies July 4

Ralph B. Davis
Managing Editor

PRESTONSBURG — The city council sees no reason why Prestonsburg's annual Independence Day fireworks display should be held on any other day than the holiday itself.

During Monday's council, Mayor Jerry Fannin noted that the holiday falls on a Wednesday this year and asked council members when they would like to schedule the fireworks display.
"The Fourth of July should be celebrated on the Fourth of July," Councilman Harry Adams, and the others present quickly and unanimously agreed.

"The city has often moved functions such as the fireworks display or trick-or-treat a day or two, when they conflict with church and other events. Many local churches have services on Wednesday evenings.

Barring inclement weather, the Prestonsburg fireworks display will take place the evening of July 4, about a half-hour after dark. Skies should be nearly dark between 9 and 9:30 p.m.

Worth Repeating ...

A liberal is a man who is right most of the time, but he's right too soon.

— Gregory Nunn

Amendment 1

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Our View East Ky. must stop tilting at windmills

In Miguel de Cervantes' famous work, Don Quixote, the hero of the story dons a suit of armor and begins attacking windmills, which he believes to be ferocious giants. Don Quixote is clearly deluded, under the influence of his fascination with books of chivalry.

Over 400 years later, many in the Appalachian coalfields have also begun tilting at windmills, believing them to be giants that threaten our way of life. Unlike Don Quixote, there harbor no illusions that the windmills are anything but windmills. They represent, however, a shift away from coal-fired power plants in favor of wind, solar, natural gas and other technologies.

At last week's Environmental Protection Agency hearings in Pikeville, speaker after speaker talked about a war being waged against coal, with many forecasting certain economic doom for Eastern Kentucky.

Many said they were there to stand up for the coal industry, to fight against economic and environmental forces which are perceived as being allied against the Appalachian way of life.

Indeed, coal is important to Appalachia and its economic health for the foreseeable future, but it is becoming increasingly clear that we will one day live in a post-coal world.

Struggling to comply with environmental regulations, more and more power plants are converting to other fuels.

Those that install costly clean-coal technology are suddenly freed to buy cheaper, high-sulfur coal from Illinois, Pennsylvania and out west, which provides no benefit to our region.

And coal's share of the energy-production pie chart has begun to shrink.

Accounting for 49.7 percent of U.S. electricity production in 2005, coal's share of that market had fallen to 44.9 percent by 2009, before a slight rebound of about a half-percent in 2010.

While it is important that Eastern Kentucky maximize the benefit it derives from the coal industry for as long as it can, it is even more important that our region begins to prepare for a future in which those benefits are marginal or nonexistent. Coal isn't dead, yet, but it's becoming increasingly clear that it is in failing health.

Unfortunately, some of those who pledge their support for the coal industry have adopted a militant stance against diversification.

They wrongly assume that supporting coal means they must be against everything else. However, the true picture is not black and white. We can, and must, have both.

Even in boom years, Eastern Kentucky has remained behind the rest of the country in terms of poverty, infrastructure, technology, health and education. The lesson, then, is clear: Over-reliance on a single industry is not good for any community. It creates a system in which natural market variance has exaggerated consequences. Even if coal were to suddenly enjoy an unexpected resurgence during its best years in history, our region would continue to struggle.

Yes, Eastern Kentucky must support coal because of its importance to our region.

But in the long run, Eastern Kentucky must do a better job of supporting itself, by pursuing alternative avenues of economic development.

Coal is immensely important to our ability to survive and thrive in these tough times, but it doesn't have to be the beginning and end of our region, unless we choose for it to be.

Recalling the gilded age

Donald Kaul
OtherWords

Organized labor, liberals in general, and President Barack Obama in particular got their heads handed to them by the good people of Wisconsin, with a little help from the Vast Right Wing Conspiracy.

The state, once home to Fighting Bob LaFollette — the father of the progressive movement — has now given us his photographic negative: union-busting Scott Walker, father of the regressive movement. The election, an attempt by a liberal coalition to recall Walker two years after he'd been elected governor, wasn't really that close. Conservative commentators have been sent into a mass gloat.

"Obama's goose is cooked," crowed Sarah Palin, to the accompaniment of chorles from the conservative commentariat.

I don't know about that. If I were her — a thought that fills me with a revulsion I cannot fully express — I wouldn't cook my geese until they were hatched. Or something like that.

Let's look at the possible interpretations of the election.

Interpretation No. 1: Obama's goose is cooked.

Hardly. A curious phenomenon of the Wisconsin vote was that exit polls showed that 18 percent of the people who voted to retain Walker also said they'd vote for Obama in November. Go figure. Obama, shrewdly as it turns out, really didn't engage himself in the Wisconsin election. Other than a single tweet offering his support for Walker's Democratic opponent, he sat it out. Die-hard liberals (with the emphasis on die) criticized him for it, but he and his advisers apparently figured the recall was a losing proposition and didn't want to be identified with it. Not heroic perhaps, but probably wise.

But maybe not. Sometimes it's better to have fought and lost than never to have fought at all.

Interpretation No. 2: The election demonstrated the power of outside money to turn a local election.

You might think so, since Walker outspent his opponent by at least a 7-1 margin, thanks to the Supreme Court's removal of the lid on campaign spending by corporations and unions. (You know how everybody's favorite oxymoron has always been "military intelligence," or perhaps "jumbo shrimp"?) I've got a new one: "The Supreme Court."

And yet those pesky exit polls showed that 60 percent of the voters had made up their minds before May, when the big money really started to make itself felt. So again, who knows?

Interpretation No. 3: The election is a sign that most people think unions, particularly public service unions, have gotten out of hand and need to be brought to heel. You may be on to something here. Surely the results can be interpreted as nothing less than a massive repudiation of unions and their members. The recall was triggered after Walker and the Republican legislature voted to strip public workers of their collective bargaining rights, once an unthinkable development in a relatively liberal northern state like Wisconsin. The voters — 53 percent of them at any rate — said "right on, Guv."

The unions have to take a share of the blame for this — they got greedy. They negotiated salaries that often were higher than private companies pay for similar work, they got very generous health insurance plans, and they arranged for fat pensions that could be accessed at a young age.

The American people will accept greed from the Vast Right-Wing Conspiracy and its Wall Street cohorts — they don't see that as their money, even though it is, indirectly. But they won't take it from their next-door neighbors. They get jealous.

Mark Twain co-authored The Gilded Age, a book about the excesses at the end of the 19th century — when the rich had it all going their way. They lived like kings while the average stiff scratched out a living.

It was a time of weak unions, low wages, and little (if any) government regulation. Does that sound like the Republican Party platform or what?

The Usual Eccentric Wright men can't jump

Will E. Sanders
Creators Syndicate

My best friend Dave Cabeen was all set to graduate this spring from Wright State University with a degree in something I should probably know, but don't remember. That is, until he received a university correspondence that stopped him dead in his collegiate tracks like a stereotypical college dean in a 1980s comedy movie.

As a result of a college error, the notification read, Dave was to hold off on the champagne because he was a half credit short. For graduation.

Really? Isn't that like being a half penny short for a pack of gum? Just look the other way and move on to the next customer. By the time the university told Dave all of these late-breaking developments the deadline for registration had expired. This wasn't a problem for Dave because Wright State University (as I call it) just made him pay a $250 fee. If I did something like that to Dave it would be called extortion and I would make lots of new friends in prison.

So Dave groveled, and who can blame him? I certainly don't. He begged and pleaded with Wright State until he was blue in the face, but it was all for nothing. "Please," Dave implored, "can't you take just a single, transferable credit from the college of the Air Force, where I have 20 credits?"

"No, we hate the military, especially veterans," the university stated. "Too bad you aren't a non-Caucasian, single mother over 40, because then we would let you graduate, pay for it exclusively from public funds and have a few bucks left over to dole out some welfare checks, too."

Dave's initial dilemma was not attaining a higher education began more than a decade ago when he decided to enlist in the United States Air Force in order to qualify for the GI Bill. Dave almost paid for college with the GI Bill — almost. It ran out last year.

That's always burned me up. Dave didn't almost serve in the Armed Forces, he isn't almost a veteran and he didn't almost go to Afghanistan and the Middle East — and this was back when those wars were almost supported by the nation. I was surprised state colleges offered half credit classes to begin with. How hard can a half credit class be? I bet some of the courses a person could choose from would include Eating and Breathing 101, Going to the Bathroom Without Making a Mess, and Blinking.

Sadly, there also is another course Dave can take as a graduation requirement: basketball.

Dave is confused and that's understandable. Shooting hoops isn't something his future job will entail. His future boss isn't going to ask him, "Hey Dave, once you finish those harvest reports would you mind taking a few foul shots for the company?"

At this point in his life I think Dave has learned all he is capable of learning about the game of basketball. What more is there to teach Dave concerning basketball that he didn't learn after 13 years of public school gym class?

Of course this raises a very realistic concern for Dave: What if he fails basketball and is prohibited from college graduation? Can you imagine having a few free throws standing in the way of a bachelor's degree? Forget the Final Four, that's real pressure.

It's a very real possibility, you know? At 35, Dave has as much business on a basketball court as I do in a female restroom. Most of the students in his basketball class will be half his age. It pains me to envision Dave's tall, lanky and pasty body huffing and puffing up and down the basketball court in an attempt to keep up with the more redeeming qualities of youth in order to graduate.

Of all the basketball obstacles Dave will need to overcome, the hardest challenge is one he can't avoid. Dave is white.

History has proven a white guy playing basketball looks exactly like a white guy trying to dance to the "Macarena" at a wedding reception. It can be done, but a white guy doing either looks out of place. Don't believe me? When was the last time you witnessed a white Harlem Globetrotter?

Mandatory motor vehicle insurance notices starts

FRANKFORT — As mandated by the Kentucky Legislature, uninsured motorists across the Commonwealth will begin receiving notices this month that registrations for their personal vehicles will be canceled if they do not obtain required insurance or show proof of existing insurance.

Registered owners of personal vehicles shown to have been without insurance for more than 60 days will receive the notices. The owners will have 30 days in which to obtain or present verification of coverage.

"It is against the law in Kentucky to operate a motor vehicle without insurance," said Commissioner Sharon P. Clark, of the Kentucky Department of Insurance. "Vehicle owners who abide by the law are too often victimized in crashes involving uninsured drivers. The Legislature recognized that this was unfair and mandated this new enforcement initiative."

The mandatory insurance initiative is aimed at plugging an enforcement gap that enables drivers to skirt the law by dropping coverage once their vehicles have been registered. It will be administered by the Department of Vehicle Regulation, of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

Though simple in concept, the mandatory insurance initiative required extensive technology and testing. Working together, the Department of Insurance, of the Public Protection Cabinet, and the Department of Vehicle Regulation, of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, conducted a pilot enforcement program that grew to include eight Kentucky counties — Anderson, Ballard, Boyd, Bullitt, Christian, Laurel, Pike and Pulaski.

Each month, insurance companies licensed to do business in Kentucky submit to the Department of Vehicle Regulation the vehicle identification numbers (VIN) of the vehicles their policies insure. A database compares the VINs with those of vehicles registered to Kentucky owners.

Vehicles for which there is no corresponding personal insurance policy are identified, and owners are notified that if they do not obtain insurance or provide proof of insurance within 30 days, their Kentucky registration will be canceled without further notice.

Based on results of the eight-county pilot program, the two Departments estimate that 30,000 to 35,000 uninsured notices will be issued each month. Each notice will identify the vehicle in question by make, model, license plate number and VIN. A notice will be issued only once per individual case.

If a notice has been generated in apparent error — such as in cases of a mismatched VIN or a commercial vehicle erroneously listed as a personal vehicle — the notice instructs the owner to contact the county clerk or the Division of Motor Vehicle Licensing to get the matter resolved. However, owners who fail to take necessary action will be subject to citation for driving without valid registration.

"It is vitally important that vehicle owners who receive an uninsured notice follow the instructions on the notice and contact their county clerk or the Division of Motor Vehicle Licensing," said Tom Zawacki, Commissioner of the Department of Vehicle Regulation. "They may also have to contact their insurance company, but that should not be the first step. They must take action. The notice cannot be ignored."

The Transportation Cabinet has a wealth of information about the Mandatory Insurance initiative on its website; <http://transportation.ky.gov/Mandatory-Insurance/Pages/default.aspx>.

Ticks emerging earlier than normal this year

LEXINGTON — Typically ticks begin to appear in late spring and early summer as warm weather sets in, but this year, cases of the annual pest were reported three to four weeks earlier than normal, said agents with the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service.

"I've been receiving calls about ticks well over a month already from homeowners, farmers and hunters," said Kenny Perry, Graves County agriculture and natural resources extension agent.

"I'm seeing them earlier than before and expect them to be a problem this year," said Charles May, Perry County agriculture and natural resources extension agent.

The early appearance of ticks is likely due to the weather earlier this year.

"Winter survival was probably higher due to the mild winter, and the tick season started earlier because of the warm spring," said Lee Townsend, extension entomologist with the UK College of Agriculture.

Townsend said the two most common ticks in Kentucky are the lone star tick and the American dog tick. The adult female lone star tick has a white spot on its back. The male is entirely reddish-brown. The American dog tick is reddish brown with mottled white markings on its back. Both tick species are most active during April through September throughout much of Kentucky. All developmental stages of the lone star tick feed on humans, but only the adult stage of the American dog tick does.

Neither tick carries Lyme disease. Infected American dog ticks can transmit Rocky Mountain spotted fever. Fortunately, the incidence of disease is very low in this state. Researchers are studying a possible link between the lone star tick and Southern Tick Associated Rash Illness (STARI) and human ehrlichiosis. Individuals who experience flu-like symptoms within two weeks of a bite or exposure to a tick should see a doctor and report any exposure to ticks.

Like Perry and May, Richard Whitis, Pulaski County agriculture and natural resources extension agent, received some very early questions about ticks and tick identification. They were due to the blacklegged tick, a species only occasionally found in Eastern Kentucky before this past winter. Unlike the other two ticks, adult blacklegged ticks are most active in November through April. The blacklegged tick is most commonly found in the Northeast and north central states.

Blacklegged ticks look very different than American dog ticks and lone star ticks. Blacklegged ticks have a reddish-brown body, dark head, long mouthparts and dark legs. Males have a dark plate that covers their whole body while females have a dark plate that only covers half of their body.

The blacklegged tick is the main vector of Lyme disease in the Northeast and north central United States. While this tick also occurs in the Southeast, the risk of Lyme disease is very low across the region. This appears to be due to a major difference in feeding activity by immature stages of the tick. The tiny nymphs, which are the important stage for transmission of Lyme disease in the North and Northeast, do not appear to feed on humans in the South, Townsend said. Only adults have been found on humans in Kentucky. Since it is a new tick to the state and has potential human health implications, individuals who suspect they've found a blacklegged tick or nymph, should send a sample to their local office of the UK Cooperative Extension Service for identification.

Individuals can take several precautions to protect themselves from ticks. Wear light-colored clothing so ticks are easier to see. Use repellents containing DEET or Picaradin or clothing sprays with the ingredient permethrin. Please note the Environmental Protection Agency warns not to put DEET containing products on children's hands or near their eyes or mouth and to never put them on infants younger than two months.

Keep lawns next to woods or bushy areas mowed. When individuals are working outdoors, hunting or hiking, they should inspect clothing, themselves and pets regularly for ticks. Ticks generally crawl around the body for an hour before attaching to feed, so careful inspection is important, Townsend said. Avoid common tick habitats including grass, weeds, brush and forested areas as much as possible.

the project has had its ups and downs. "But you've got to have water and sewer to bring in industry," Turner said.

Hubert Halbert, who has been chairman of Southern Water for 11 years, said this was a day he thought would never come. "Ultimately, however, 'Everything fell into place,'" Halbert said.

Also on hand for Thursday's groundbreaking were Magistrates John Goble, Hattie Owens and Warren Jarrell; representatives from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development office, Tom Fern and Vernon Brown; and representatives from Summit Engineering, Drains Unlimited and HZO Construction. Drains Unlimited and HZO won the contracts for the project, and will be responsible for the construction of the pipelines and plant, respectively.

Contracts for the $3 million in projects were signed in May, and Thursday's groundbreaking is the beginning of construction of a new sewage treatment plant at Pike-Floyd Hollow and sewer lines extended to 135 customers in Betsy Layne and Stanville, initially. Phase one of the project is only the beginning of a much larger effort to extend sewer service to 1,000 customers throughout the southern U.S. 23rd corridor, from Mare Creek to the Pike County line.

The two projects will begin simultaneously and are expected to be complete in as little as nine months.

KSP officials say that the preliminary investigation indicates that 43-year-old Donnie Gibson, of Pinetop, went to the Spring Branch residence of his daughter to confront her 25-year-old boyfriend, Dillon Cornett.

According to officials, an altercation was initiated by Gibson while inside the house. Cornett then allegedly obtained a firearm and shot Gibson.

Gibson suffered a fatal gunshot wound and was pronounced dead at the scene by the Knott County coroner.

No criminal charges have been filed at this time and the investigation is ongoing. KSP Det. Clayton Stammer is in charge of the investigation.

Movies from the Black Lagoon 'Erik the Conqueror'

Tom Doty
Times Columnist

Fans of Viking flicks will get a charge out of this Nordic-themed action extravaganza that should come with one of those horn hats that they favor.

The film begins with an exciting battle sequence that is pretty heavy on the carnage for a swing 1960s movie. The Vikings are just about to pillage an English village (got my Doctor Seuss on today) when they are routed by the Brits. The Viking chief is mortally wounded and orders his men to evacuate his two little boys (apparently it was bring your kids to work week). The boys, Eron and Erik, are led to the boats, but Erik falls behind when their guard gets an arrow through his head.

The aftermath of the battle sees the English general, Ruthford, assassinate his own king in the confusion and then blame it on a nearby Viking, who is stone dead so he doesn't complain when they thump him with clubs for appearance's sake. Now the movie leaps ahead 20 years and tempers have reached their boiling point between the Vikings and the British.

Eron is now a top dog in the outfit and he wins the coveted role of War Chief by defeating the acting General in a duel to the death. Turns out he is a shrewd leader as he spares the other guy's life, claiming he fights too well to die before breaking bad against the enemy. In Britain, the Queen rebuffs Ruthford's advances and appoints Erik, whom she has adopted, to the role of Naval Commander.

Erik sets out to fight the advancing Vikings, unaware that Ruthford has a spy on his boat who plans to destroy it. The spy finds time to set a fire in the hold but can't escape because the Vikings attack at the same moment. The ensuing battle is well staged but ends when the fire breaks out. The British perish on their burning vessel but Erik makes it to land. Too bad it is the Vikings' home.

Eron sails on to England, where the Queen is handed over to him by the traitorous Ruthford. They take her back to their homeland. Erik winds up getting captured but escapes with the help of Eron's sister-in-law. Erik makes it to England and is determined to kill Ruthford, but Eron is there, too. Rather than lose an army, the leaders opt to duke it out in a no-holds-barred fight that abruptly ends when the men discover they share a tattoo that identifies them as being from the same clan. They make up like this stuff never happened and lay siege to Ruthford's castle. A lot of blood is spilled but at least they fill Valhalla with many brave souls.

Sword and sandal flicks don't get much better than this film. That's because it was directed by Mario Bava and he had a gift. This guy could spin straw into gold, folks. He got hold of mediocre scripts and filled them with exciting visuals that kept your eyes so busy that your brain never complains. He also ensured that his high standards would be met by doing many jobs himself, often acting as director of photography as well as handling the special effects.

Sure, this film relies on a lot of coincidences, but that's okay as long as we have a fight every 10 minutes. The battle scenes are beautifully staged with excellent lighting, dramatic music and a lot of sweat. It is also a polite film which ends abruptly and doesn't feel the need to repeat itself. Bava is better known for his horror flicks, like "Black Sunday," but his action movies were even better and are easy to find in collectible, and affordably priced, sets that feature lots of extras and commentaries by Bava scholar and "Video Watchdog" publisher Tim Lucas.

Best line: "She succumbed to her passion and gave away that which belonged to Odin." 1961, unrated.

We are back to our regular summer schedule - Open 7 days a week of modern detectives.

"Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" — Nobody believed that Guy Ritchie ("Snatch," "Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels") was the right type to bring back Holmes, but he did it three years ago and is back with an action-packed sequel. This time, Holmes must face a criminal

cutest kids

with a higher IQ and a lower calling, when he tangles with Professor Moriarty. Once again, the chemistry between Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law (as Holmes and Watson, respectively) is spot-on. This time, you also get a mustache twirling turn by Jared Harris as Moriarty. Great stuff.

"Ghost Rider: Spirit of Vengeance" — Nicholas Cage returns as the skull-faced rider of a flaming hell-cycle that vaults right out of the pages of Marvel Comics. This time, he is hiding out in Eastern Europe when he is called upon to save a child being menaced by Satan himself. This sequel is closer in tone to the comic series that spawned it, and that is a good thing.

"Superman vs. the Elite" — DC Comics may be slow to get live action flicks out there, but they are totally committed to making excellent animated features. This story is adapted from the comics and finds a new team of superheroes on the scene. They call themselves "The Elite" and they are catching crooks, despite some brutal methods and questionable ethics. Superman decides to investigate them further and must battle public opinion, as well as The Elite themselves, when he realizes they are bad news.

"Monster Brawl" — If all that action weren't enough for your man cave, then skip UFC this week and check out this flick, which mixes steel cage matches with monster movies. The monsters take each other on in no-holds-barred battles for a "pay-per-view" type of broadcast, and may the most beastly win. Fun stuff that answers a lot of bar room debates about what would happen when certain monsters meet in the squared circle. The roster includes mad mummy, Frankenstein's ferocious monster, and a Cyclops with an eye for torture.

Next week continues the testosterone festival with Nicholas Cage returning on a mission of vengeance in "Seeking Justice."

Jude named Kentucky Athlete of the Year

Times Staff Report

LOUISVILLE — Johnson Central High School standout J. J. Jude received the Dr. Rudy J. Ellis Sports Medicine High School Athlete of the Year award at the Kentucky Athletic Hall of Fame banquet in Louisville last week.

Jude, a two-sport athlete, set a Kentucky career rushing record in football. He also won back-to-back state titles in the 171-pound weight class in wrestling. He finished his career on a 170-match winning streak in wrestling. Jude also ran track and finished second in the state in the 200-meter dash.

The versatile Jude was a two-time first-team Courier-Journal All-State selection in football and ended his career with 8,637 rushing yards. He broke the old record for career rushing yards set by former Fort Knox and University of Kentucky standout Derek Homer.

As a senior, Jude ran for 3,061 yards and 31 touchdowns to become the first Kentucky player to surpass 3,000 yards twice. He's only the sixth player to reach 3,000 in any season, doing it as a junior and a senior.

As a junior, Jude set a state record for yards in a game with 584 in a win over Woodford County. He finished that season with 331 carries for 3,258 yards — second in state history for a single season — and 31 TDs.

In wrestling, Jude made it to the state tournament six years and placed five times. He won the 170-pound title as a junior and senior and was a runner-up in a national wrestling meet during his sophomore season.

Jude also played some baseball for Johnson Central.

The productive Jude has signed to play football at Eastern Kentucky University.

Johnson Central High School graduate J.J. Jude has been named Kentucky Athlete of the Year.

Betsy Layne High School will be home to a new turf field in the 2012 football season.

Bobcats to play six home games

Steve LeMaster Sports Editor

BETSY LAYNE — The Betsy Layne High School football team will make a debut on its new turf field Aug. 24 against county rival South Floyd in the second week of the 2012 season. Betsy Layne will play a total of six home games on the hill during the upcoming campaign.

Betsy Layne concluded the 2011 season 7-4. "On offense, we lost four starters and on defense, we lost three starters," Betsy Layne Coach Jon Parsons said.

"We return a very young team. We currently have four seniors on the team. We also return another undefeated junior varsity group."

Quarterback Dylan Hamilton, wide receiver Tony Dirico, tight end Lako Daniels and running back Josh Salisbury are the top players returning for the Betsy Layne offense.

Defensively, Blake Spencer, Houston Hall and Payton Case are among the leaders back for the Bobcats.

"Our biggest strength is that four out of five offensive linemen return," Parsons commented. "Our biggest worry is that we're still a relatively young team."

Betsy Layne will open the 2012 season at Bracken County on Aug. 18. The Bobcats have additional home games scheduled versus Allen Central (Sept. 7), Leslie County (Oct. 5), Haman, W.Va. (Oct. 12), Shelby Valley (Oct. 19) and Jenkins (26). Other away games will put the Bobcats on the road for matchups with Knott County Central (Sept. 14), Prestonsburg (Sept. 21) and Paintsville (Sept. 28).

"Bright spots for us are the new turf field and six home games this year," Parsons added.

Beshear and Smith tour improved Kentucky Speedway infrastructure

Times Staff Report

SPARTA — Kentucky Governor Steve Beshear and Speedway Motorsports, Inc. (SMI) Chairman and CEO Bruton Smith toured expanded infrastructure that will streamline traffic flows for three NASCAR events that make up Kentucky Speedway's June 28-30 "Quaker State 400" weekend as well as future events at the 107,000-seat venue on Monday.

The State of Kentucky completed projects which expanded Kentucky Highway 35 to seven lanes, widened the I-71 ramp to Ky. Hwy. 35 to three lanes and constructed a pedestrian tunnel that will connect the massive new Ford Parking lot east of Ky. Hwy. 35 to Kentucky Speedway.

In addition to acquiring and engineering 170 new acres for the Ford Parking lot, Kentucky Speedway converted 50 new acres of previously unusable land to parking and added gravel aisles to 100 acres of previously all-grass parking. In total, the projects yielded parking for an additional 20,000 vehicles compared to 2011.

"I commend Bruton Smith and (Kentucky Speedway General Manager) Mark Simendinger and all the other people at Kentucky Speedway for the obvious improvements that have been made to this facility. Equally important has been their resolve to make the Quaker State 400 the showcase event it deserves to be," said Gov. Beshear. "Their investment and their resolve made it easy for us to also invest in roadway improvements to increase traffic capacity in the vicinity of Kentucky Speedway. We obviously have a great number of passionate NASCAR fans in this region. Kentucky Speedway is ideally situated to draw from those fans in Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee and even further, and we look forward to this race being a signature event for many years to come."

The speedway further contracted Veteran's Security and Patrol, Co. as its new parking management service and partnered with nationally-recognized engineering firm Stantec to create a simulation model which helped shape a new speedway traffic management plan by predicting numerous scenarios managers may encounter on event days.

Speedway Motorsports, Inc. (SMI) Chairman and CEO Bruton Smith and Kentucky Governor Steve Beshear toured Kentucky Speedway earlier in the week.

Kentucky Speedway complemented the infrastructure expansions by constructing a new overpass to its infield tunnel road which will allow a bolstered fleet of free guest trams to efficiently travel designated routes to gates and points of interest on race days. "We made a lot of promises to all of you and we're going to prove to you today that we have fulfilled all those promises.

"You're going to see a tremendous amount of parking that's been added. You're going to see a lot of camping that has been added. We look at Kentucky 35 as seven lanes and we'll be using all seven if necessary. You'll see a great tunnel that the

NASCAR drivers turn first laps on new Bristol surface

Times Staff Report

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Bristol Motor Speedway has witnessed the initial laps on its recently altered surface. On day one of a two-day Goodyear Tire test, Tony Stewart, Jeff Burton and Clint Bowyer circled the half-mile concrete oval on Tuesday.

The same drivers completed the Goodyear Tire test on Wednesday. Goodyear mandated that the test sessions remain closed to the public and media. The drivers, however, offered comments to Bristol Motor Speedway officials following the session.

Stewart was the only driver among the three to attempt the high groove.

"Well, you've definitely lost the top groove," Stewart said. "Guys who run up there aren't going to be able to do that because it's pretty slick up there. There's going to be less room to race, that's for sure. We've gone from a three-groove track to two grooves and any time you've got less room to get around it can get pretty interesting."

"I'm one of the guys who likes that high groove so it's really going to change things for me. It'll change things for everybody though because when you take away room to race on a track this small with 43 cars... yeah, it's going to tighten things up."

Bowyer predicted a more than normal amount of action at the Bristol track.

"That outside line — the upper groove — is out of play now," Bowyer commented. "There's going to be a lot closer racing than we've had here in the past. I don't typically run up there, but a lot of guys like it and I can't see them going up there now. If they do... it's pretty slippery and they'll figure that out in a hurry."

"The closer we have to race just means something's going to happen. Is it going to make fans happy? Well, narrowing up the track means less room to get around so there's no question there's going to be closer action."

"I tell you what though... this place has always been — and will always be — far and away the best race we have. You wanna see a great race in the best atmosphere we have?

Just be here in August."

Burton was quick to compliment Goodyear for its work on the new tire.

"Goodyear is looking to bring a tire with more grip," Burton commented. "I really think they have found some stuff that is really promising. As for the track itself, I really can't imagine running up there in that top groove. I think it is going to force everyone more to the middle and bottom of the track. The drivers aren't going to be happy, but the spectators probably will because it is going to put more cars in a closer space."

"By taking away that groove, it is going to change your mind about going up there. I think it is going to be two grooves, unless Goodyear brings a tire with a lot of grip. If that is the case, you'll want to run around the bottom. Making the groove smaller is a good thing, it is going to put the action back to the bottom and middle of the track. What has changed is up near the wall, the bottom is the same. Tony experimented and tried out that top groove, and I know he won't be trying that again."

Some people liked the older track more than the new, they are going to like this. This takes the top groove out and brings it back toward the old track. Taking the groove out moves the track closer to what it used to be. Taking the banking out is what is going to make the difference. You won't run the top groove on a short track without more banking. There is no way you will run around the outside. If there is less banking on a short track near the wall, you are not going to go there."

"Every race track should look at the fan experience. The fans come to see action here because this is Bristol. That is why there are so many seats. This is why it is like a gladiator stadium. We always will walk a tight rope of what is in the best interest of the fan. The sport is under more scrutiny all the time. For us, it is a more constant conversation about changing. Some races are better than others. Some are phenomenal, some are sleepers. But all sports are like that. Not every NBA game is great."

"This track always has been different. Fans always want to see action here. That is why pressure is always put on this track."

Is this huge fish a trophy or a state record?

Lee McClellan
Kentucky Aflict

FRANKFORT — You bait a rod with a large minnow and let the offering dangle off the back of the boat as you enjoy a day of lazy floating on a river raft on your favorite reservoir, basking in the summer sun.

You hear the sound of movement coming from the boat and flick your head around to see the rod bent over double, straining to hold the weight. You quickly board the boat and release the rod from its holder. You apply gentle pressure to embed the circle hook in the fish's mouth.

The drag chortles as you bend into the fish and you can't move it at all. It continues shaking its head as it powers down into the depths of the lake. A surge of adrenaline hits as you realize it is likely the largest fish you've ever hooked. You double down the pressure on the fish, hoping the line doesn't snap.

After several runs, the fish begins to weaken. As it nears the boat, you finally see a mottled brownish head valiantly trying to shake the hook loose. Your eyes travel down the length of the fish and it is longer than any you've seen on your line. It is a huge flathead catfish.

The thought flashes through your mind: "state record." Could it be?

Unless the flathead weighs more than 97 pounds, it isn't.

"Despite the fact that it may not be a state record, they can still receive recognition through the Trophy Fish/Master Angler program," said Ron Brooks, director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The Trophy Fish/Master Angler program rewards anglers who catch a trophy fish or three trophy fish of different species. The program relies on honesty from the angler, but they must send a photo of the fish and a person must witness the taking of the picture. They must also complete the Trophy Fish application online at the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife webpage at fwky.gov. Click on the "Fishing and Boating" tab, then the "Recreational Fishing" tab, followed by the "State Record Fishes and Awards" tab.

"If they catch a trophy fish, they get a collector's hat pin that shows their fishing ability," said Jeff Ross, assistant director of fisheries for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "This program gives anglers an opportunity to demonstrate their prowess at catching big fish. It gives them something to strive for in their fishing."

The collector pin features a specific species for each year. The fish must meet a minimum length requirement to qualify for the Trophy Fish program.

"It is now for people to know those minimum lengths ahead of time," Ross said. "Some anglers file their catch or let it go without taking a picture and miss out."

The minimum lengths are listed on page 30 of the current Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide as well as on the "State Record Fishes and Awards" page on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife webpage.

"If you catch three different species that qualify for a Trophy Fish, you can apply for a Master Angler Award and receive a special master angler pin," Ross said. "Anglers like to have goals. For some of us, it is catching a limit of keepers. For others, it's catching a fish that qualifies by length for a trophy fish and then getting three of them to become a Master Angler."

If you weigh your fish on hand scales and think you might have a state record, check the state record fish list on page 31 and 32 of the current Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide or on the "State Record Fishes and Awards" page on the department's website.

"What you do for trophy fish recognition wouldn't qualify for a state record," Ross explained. "The criteria for a state record are much more stringent."

First, the fish must be weighed on a scale certified for trade by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture such as at a grocery store, a feed store or a place that sells meats by the pound.

"The fish species must be confirmed by a fisheries biologist from our department," Brooks said. "Sometimes, we have hybridization issues. Many anglers confuse channel and blue catfish. Some of our state records had to be confirmed by genetic analysis."

The fish must be caught on pole and line from Kentucky waters. Fish taken on commercial gear, on a trotline or by gigning, snagging or hand grabbing (also called noodling) do not qualify for state record status. You may request a state record fish application by calling 1-800-858-1519 or get one from your fishery district biologist. You can print one from the "State Record Fishes and Awards" page on the department's website. The list of phone numbers for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife district fishery biologists is on page 31 of the current Fishing and Boating Guide.

The United Bow Hunters of Kentucky maintains the state record fish list for bowfishing. The current state record bowfishing list is on page 34 of the current Fishing and Boating Guide. Log on to www.kystatebowfishingrecords.com for more details.

If you catch a huge fish this summer, recognize your catch by participating in the Trophy Fish/Master Angler program. If your trophy looks like a state record, follow the correct steps to make sure you get recognition for your catch.

"It's been a lot of hard work by a lot of contractors. It's done. I'm very proud of it and delighted to show it to you today," Smith commented to assembled media prior to the tour.

Kentucky Speedway General Manager Mark Simendinger applauded the efforts made by Gov. Beshear and Smith following last season's "Quaker State 400" weekend.

"It is important to recognize the leadership Governor Beshear and Bruton Smith displayed through the past year to make these improvements possible. They continue their shared commitment to making Kentucky Speedway the best motorsports venue in the country," Simendinger said.

Reverse the tried and true: Take your dad fishing this Father's Day

Lee McClellan
Kentucky Afield

FRANKFORT— Anyone who's been inside a tackle store, watched a fishing show on television, browsed a fishing magazine or studied their state's annual fishing regulatory guide surely encountered the slogan "Take a Kid Fishing."

The meaning behind the slogan is a heartening message of introducing a youngster to the joy of spending time fishing. With hope, the youngster gets hooked into a lifetime of fishing and a time-honored way to reduce stress and increase enjoyment of life.

Many anglers got fishing fever from sitting along the banks of a farm pond with fathers, mothers, aunts, uncles and grandparents, dangling redworms under bobbers to entice bluegill. In the late afternoon, the fish cleaning board appeared and bluegill fried in cornmeal nado supper, along with potato chips, pork and beans and Dr. Pepper from a returnable bottle.

As adults, our careers and families take precedence over all other considerations and those fond memories of simple times at the farm pond fade. With Father's Day upon us, there is no better time than now to reverse the process and take your father fishing. Instead of going to the mall and buying a gift he does not need, buy your Dad his annual fishing license for Father's Day and take him fishing. This gift gives until Feb. 28, 2013 when annual fishing licenses expire.

A lot of us have lost contact with the landowners we knew growing up who had great, rarely fished farm ponds on their land. You got spoiled fishing such waters. You didn't need a boat to fish them well. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources operates the Fishing in Neighborhoods (FINs) program. This program brings great fishing at lakes across the state from Paducah to Kingdom Come State Park in Letcher County.

The fisheries division of Kentucky Fish and Wildlife heavily stocks these lakes with catfish in the spring and summer, trout in fall, winter and spring and monitors the sunfish and largemouth bass populations to ensure quality fishing. These lakes make great places to take your Dad fishing and rekindle old, good memories. Take along your kids, too. They'll have as good a chance to catch a fish there as anywhere in Kentucky.

Visit the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife page at fwky.gov and watch the banner in the top middle of the page. Click on the "Take Someone Fishing" tab. This page offers anglers a wealth of information on fishing in Kentucky.

The link to the information page on the FINs lakes is there, along with a series of columns written by the Kentucky Afield magazine staff detailing excellent Kentucky fishing opportunities. Here you will find a printable beginner fishing booklet, the current fishing guide and a page to print a certificate honoring a significant catch. The trout stocking schedule is on there as well.

The "Take Someone Fishing" page also includes a link to fishing and boating spots all across Kentucky under the "Find a Place to Fish or Boat" tab. This search page contains information about the Voluntary Public Access (VPA) fishing spots, in which Kentucky landowners receive payment for public fishing access on their land.

The most important link on this page is the yellow "Purchase Licenses Here" tab in the middle of the page. Click on this tab to buy your Dad his annual fishing license. You may also purchase fishing licenses at tackle stores, department stores that sell fishing equipment or by calling 1-877-598-2401.

So, avoid the ties, the socks, the after shave or an expensive dinner this Father's Day. Take your Dad fishing instead.
