Fireworks fly during fiscal court meeting

PRESTONSBURG — There was yet another round of verbal sparring in the long-running feud between the fiscal court and the jail last week, when Jailer Roger Webb and Lois Marshall, wife of Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall and an administrative assistant in his office, squared off over overdue, raises for jail deputies, during Friday's regular meeting of the Floyd County Fiscal Court. During his Jailer Roger Webb asked the court to address the need of several jail PRESTONSBURG There employees to have their probationary and one year raises put into place.

Judge Marshall initially stated that the matter of the jail employee raises would be discussed in closed session, though when questioned about the use of executive session, refented to discussing the matter in the open forum.

Executive, session allows for the court to discuss matters of pending litigation and individual personnel matters behind closed doors. The matter of raises for jail employees appeared on the surface to be one of policy, wherein jail employees are due incremental adjustments after periods of probation and again after one year of employment, and not a matter of individual personnel decisions that would justify the use of execu-tive session.

that would justify the use of executive session.

What touched off the confrontation between Lois Marshall and Webb was when Deputy Jailer Michael Fishbaugh said he had asked Marshall about the raises, and her response had been that 'there wouldn't be any raises."

Lois Marshall then stood up in court and said, 'Tm' sorry, I've never seen you, sir."

After, a short discussion, the court decided if in fact the raises were due to the employees, they should be enacted. The motion was made by Magistrate Hattie Owens and, seconded by Magistrate Magistrates and seconded by Magistrates and Judge Marshall though only symbolically, voted aye for the measure to adjust the jail employees wages.

Judge Marshall then spoke to Deputy Fishbaugh. T don't think you were speaking to Mrs. Marshall.

Moments later, as the jail deputies left the courtroom, Lois Marshall followed them into the hallway and a heated discussion ensued. Marshall stated emphatically to the deputy that he did not speak to her. "I don't do payroll." Marshall said.

Deputy Fishbaugh, retreating toward the back, saying simply, "I wouldn't have made it up, ma'am." Marshall then stormed back into the courtroom, exclaiming, "I'm sick of people lying about me."

Knott judge requests continuation of bail in vote-buying case

HAZARD - Knott Coun-HAZARD — Knott Coun-try Judge-Executive Randy Thompson will report to a federal prison next month unless a judge rules that he can remain free while a fed-eral appeals court considers a request for a new hearing.

Thompson and three others, John Mac Combs, Phillip Champion, and Ronnie Adams, were convicted in 2008 of using public funds to influence the general election of 2006, during which Thompson was first elected county judge. He won a second full term in office in 2010.

Thompson and the others appealed their convictions, which were recently upheld by a three-judge panel in September. Thompson is now requesting a new hearing with a federal appeals court, though his request has not yet been ruled upon, and as of press time no new hearing has been scheduled. Thompson recently, received notice from the U.S. Marshall's Service that he is to report to the Federal Cor-rectional Institute in Lewsi-rectional Institute in Lewsi-burg, Pn. on Nov. 6.

In a request filed Friday, Oct. 19 in U.S. District Court, Thompsons at-torney, Kent Wesberry of Louisville, notes that his client has remained free for a number of years after he was indicted on federal vote-buying charges in 2007, and has proven that he is not a flight risk, even after his conviction. Wesperry requests that Thompson remain free on the same bond until a ruling is issued on their petition for a new hearing.

In the event that a new hearing is declined or his request for an extension of bail is denied, Wesberry requests that Thompson remain free until at least the

The political divide provides gridlock for the nation

If there was one thing that the political rhetoric following Monday night's presidential debate indicated, it's that our mation is deeply divided. Of course, that isn't anything new, as a study released in June by the Pew Research Center as a study released in June by the control illustrates.

2. "Americans values and basic beliefs are more polarized along partisan lines than at any point in the past 25 years," the study reads, and anyone paying attention to the debate on the national scene can attest to that.

In other words, if Democrats are for it, you can rest assired that Republicans are against it, and the reverse is also the control of the control o

In othet words, if Democrats are for it, you can rest assired that Republicans are against it, and the reverse is also true.

A quick flip of the channels following Monday's presidential debate, from the conservative mouthpiece that is fox News to the ultra-liberal views being spouted over at MSNBC, gives us a good indication of the state of our national politics. You're either for us or you're against us. And if you're a moderate, there's no room for you in the conversation at all. You can be either a Harry Reid or a Mitch McConnell, but dare not be an Arlen Specter.

According to the aforementioned Pew study, Americans are now more deeply divided along partisan lines than any other measure, including race, gender, and class. These divisions are the largest with issues such as the environment and the social safety net said at present there seems to be not a result, our political system remains in a perpetual gridlock as lawmakers approve measures based on party lines, and kick the can down the road on major issues like the budget to avoid having to make a decision.

No matter who wins the presidency a couple weeks from now, these types of divisions have to be healed in order to move the country forward. We simply can't continue to turn our backs on our fellow Americans just because there may be a disagreement. Government has an important role to play in ensuring opportunities for the citizenry and the security of the nation, but that work will never get done as long as our party affiliation gets in the way of what's right. You don't have to always agree, but you should very well be willing to listen and discuss without acting like someone just stole your lunch money.

It's time for our elected leaders to grow up and act like adults should. It's only the future of our nation at stake.

HRMC service was wonderful

I took my son, William Winston Ford III, to Highlands Regional Medical Center on Sunday, Aug. 12, and again on Sept. 9, entering through the emregnery room. We had the very best care and service there in the emergency room.

Then, following numerous tests, he was admitted to the hospital. I cannot tas. In every area of care — doctors, nurses, aides, those from the lab for blood, persons delivering food, housekeeping and even the pastoral service — we could not have asked for more.

We filled out the survey about our stay, but I feel I must give a little history of Name and the service in the service was admitted to the hospital service — we know the was about 3 years old, before much was known about autism. As his mother, when something goes wrong, it really tears me up, as I feel it is my responsibility to protect him. I never leave him alone at the hospital. A family member is always just how great the staff at HRMC is. I would be hard-spent to believe you could find another hospital, as great and respectful to a patient as they are.

First, I would like to make some comments about some things I have read the last few months in The Times.

I think that you, Janet, would stand 'tall' in the eyes of the people of Eastern Kentucky, if you took on your husband's name. I understand the power of the Stumbo name in political reasons in the power of the Stumbo name in political reasons. Grimes expands efforts to protect election integrity FRANKFORT — Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes, Kentucky's Chief Election Official, is rallying forces to prevent vote fraud in the Nov. 6 General Election. Tuesday, members of the Kentucky Election Integrity Task Force, headed by Grimes, met in the State Capitol to coordinate efforts to protect the integrity of the election. As part of Grimes' initiative to broaden the approach to combating election fraud, West Virginia Secretary of State Natalic Tennant, who is confronting similar issues in her state, also attended the meeting.

ing similar issues in her state, also attended the meeting.

Because there are federal races on the ballot, in addition to the offices of Secretary Grimes and Attorney Seneral Jack Conway, the United States Attorney's offices in the Eastern and Western Districts are members of the Task Force. In addition, as a result of meetings with county clerks across the state and observations from past elections, Secretary Grimes is expanding Kentucky's traditional defenses against vote fraud. Among other things, Grimes invited the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Kentucky Commonwealth Attorneys Association, Kentucky County Attorneys Association, Kentucky County Clerks Association, Kentucky State Police and Kentucky State Police and Kentucky Democratic and Association, Kentucky State Police and Kentucky Democratic and Republican Parties to join the Task Force.

"The need to preserve the integrity of elections is not specific to a particular county or state," said Grimes, "and we welcome input and cooperation from all officials who share our commitment to protecting the right to vote. By bringing new members into the task force, we gain not only feet on the ground on Election Day, but also fresh ideas and perspectives on how to ensure, our elections remain free and fair." KSP to drivers: Be on the lookout for deer

Autumn is in full swing in Kentucky decorating its landscape and roadways with vibrant, colorful foliage. These fall colors serve to remind drivers that they will see an increase movement of deer an increase move likely to encounter these animals on or near roadways.

Spokesperson for KSP, Sgt. Rick Saint-Blancard says motorists need to take extra precautions when driving during fall months.

"It is extremely important to recognize this everpresent risk, especially at this time of year when near ly fifty percent of all collisions with deer occur," says Saint-Blancard.

"Last year, we had 2,938 deer related collisions in Kentucky with three of those being fatal collisions, adds Saint-Blaceath National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. (NHTISA), there are approximately 1 million deer related vehicle crash-see sach year that kill nearly 200 people, injure over 10,000 and result in over $1 billion in vehicle damage. Saint-Blancard offered the following tips for drivers:

Be extra cautious in the early morning and evening hours. Deer are most active during these low-light periods when humans see worst and reaction time is slow.

Stay alert when driving through a known deer-crossing zone. If you see the stay alert when driving the stay are the stay and the stay are stay and the stay and the stay are stay and the stay deer crashes occur on busy highways near cities.

Use high beam headlights if there is no oncoming traffic. High beams will reflect in the eyes of deer on or near the roadway, providing increased driver reaction time.

Upon seeing a deer, immediately slow down. Do not swerve — this could confuse the deer about where to run. It could also cause you to lose control and hit a tree or the confusion of the deer rather than runing off the moad or risking injury to other motorists.

Deer are often unpredictable, especially when faced with blinding headlights, loud horns and fast-moving vehicles. Don't expect them to stay where they are. They can dart in front of you at the list moment, stop in the middle of the road, cross quickly and return to the road or even move toward an approaching vehicle.

Hat trick pushes Cumberland past Pikeville

PIKEVILLE — In a match that doubled as both Senior Day for four UPIKE seniors and "Find the Cure Day" for cancer victims everywhere, visiting Cumberland defeated Pikeville 6-1 on Saturday.

The Bears were outshot 33-6, but were sunk mostly by a four-goal performance by Cumberland's Harry Mason. It was Sebastian Cortes, however who put the guests on the board first in the 11th minute when his shot from the right side of the penalty area clarged off the far post and back into the net.

net. Mason then needed a span of just three minutes to record a hat-trick, starting in the 22nd when he stole the ball in the box and shot low to the left corner. Mason's next goal came in the 24th minute after Tevonne Morris found him with a lovely lobbed pass to set him up from about 10 yards out. Mason took the ball on his own just 57 seconds of game time later to seal his hat-trick. UPIKE then took the chance to pull a goal back in the 28th minute after a foul in the Cumberland penalty box led to a penal-ty kick, which Mashing Johnson converted

In the second half, Cumberland coach Jeff Loucks granted his senior captain Neil Howard an opportunity to take a penalty kick in the 52nd minute, which Howard scored well to net for the first time in his four years as a starter. Mason nodded home from Etic Clark's corner eight minutes later to end the scoring.

Senior captains Sheldon Thomas and Eric Bowling were honored at halftime, along with fellow seniors Jody Grigsby and Colin Wolper. The Bears will have another chance to get their first win this season on Friday in Asheville, N.C., against Warren Wilson College, while the Bulldogs host Shawnee State Saturday.

Temperature drops and speedometer goes nuts.

Dear Tom and Ray:
I've had this 2001 Chevy Cavalier for almost five years. It's been a fantastic car. I take care of it, and it takes care of me. Here's the problem: Every year when the temperature starts to drop, my speedometer goes haywire. The outside temp only has to drop into the 40s for this to start. Morning, afternoon, evening—it doesn't matter. One minute I'm right on the speed limit, the next it's saying I'm doing 110 mph. I can be at a stoplight, and the speedometer still will read somewhere between 20 and 100 mph or higher. Deing the math on the interstate and side roads to calculate my true speed is really starting to irritate me. What could be causing this, and how can Ifx it?—Mary ticular symptoms.

RAY: I'm guessing you're going to have to get your instrument cluster repaired, or replaced.

ToM: Getting a new one from your Chevy dealer will cost you hundreds of dollars. But you don't need to buy a new one — after all, the rest of the car is more than a decade old.

RAY: I'd look for a mechanic who's willing to source one for you from a lunkyard of course, the detail of the car is the detail of the car is a fairly common complaint.

TOM: But your mechanic can at least get a warranty on the part so that if it turns out to be faulty, he can go back and get you another one. You'd still owe him for some additional labor, but not too much, since he'd be able to test the part before putting the car back together.

RAY: And given the age of the car, a used instrument cluster will take this car either into deep old age or until something much more serious breaks. Good luck, Mary.

ANSWER: One of nature's smallest creatures, the head louse upsets domestic tranquility with more revulsion than most health-endangering illnesses. Head lice bring no disease with them. They are tiny, only 3 'millimeters (1/10 inch) in length. They feed on blood and die within a day or two off the scalp. After feeding, lice have a reddish-brown hue. The mother louse glues louse eggs to hair, and those structures are called nits. They are only 1 millimeter (4/100 inch) long. The eggs hatch is not six to 10 days. If nits are more than a quarter of an ending the scalp of the scalp louse has already hatched, and the nit is no longer a problem. In an average life span of three months, the mother louse can lay up to 300 eggs.

Lice are not an indication of poor hygiene. Most of the time, they re introduced into a family by a child who caught them at school. They can infest other family members quickly. Transmission comes from direct contact with an infested individual and, less often, from contact with inanimate objects used by that individual, like hats, combs, brushes and bedding. You're not alone. Six to, 12 million Americans come down with head lice yearly.

Almost all people with head lice yearly.

It is linged in the reserve seven to 10 days after the first. Ovide (malathion) is used if lice linger after Nix or Rid. And should Ovide not work, the oral medicine Stromectol (ivermectin) is available.

A new medicine is Natroba.
