Conley, Pardoned After Conviction in Lackey Officer's Murder, Blamed by Defense

CONVICTS TO PEN

Cash Triplett, charged with the murder of Constable Bev Scott at Lackey in April, 1933, received a four-year penitentiary sentence Wednesday at the hands of a jury of the Floyd circuit court.

Thus has the law, to the present, disposed of the slaying of Scott in which Mont Conley was first given trial and sentenced to a 21-year term in the pen, then was pardoned by Governor Laffoon when Triplett was represented as having stated that he killed the officer.

In the trial here this week, however, the defenss threw the burden of blame entirely upon Conley's shoulders. The Commonwealth offered testimony claiming that Triplett fired one shot after Scott pitch ed into a ditch alongside the railroad tracks below Lackey, and that the defendant had pushed the constable, ordering him to run, shortly before he was killed.

Judge J. F. Stewart, of Ashland, presided as special judge during the trial, Circuit Judge Judge John W. Caudill being defense counsel. Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall conducted the prosecution.

Motion and grounds for a new trial were overruled by Judge Stewart, who gave Triplett till the last day of the September term of the Floyd circuit court in which to file with the court of appeals his bill of following their arrest last week lett as sureties, pending action shoulder to such an extent that

Searching Out the Hidden Enemy

It is estimated that 9,000,000 children in the United States under 15 years of age are infected with the germs of tuberculosis. One of the most important weapons used to protect them is the tuberculin test, which shows whether any tubercle bacilli are in a child's body. The boy above is receiving the test; which is harmless and painless. If the test is positive the child's choat should be X-rayed to be certain no harm has been done in the lungs

Jean Thomas, founder of the American Folk Song Society, appeared at the Unique Theatre here Thursday, April 4, with the silent film of the American Folk Song Festival held each year on the second Sunday in June at "Traipsin' Woman' cabin on the Mayo Trail in Boyd county.

Recently, Miss Thomas as spokesman for the Kentucky mountain people who participate in the festival, presented a print of the film and complete set of disc records of the music and ballads .constituting the Festival to the Library of Congress, Division of Music-The presentation took place in the auditorium of the Library of Congress before an erudite and appreciative audience. Representatives of Washington papers and the Associated Press were present and gave full publicity to the event. At that time Miss Thomas gave excerpts of her lecture on balladry, as she did also here in the showing of the film. Appearing with Jean Thomas on the program here were Edith Fitzpatrick James, who played the dulcimer and sang many lovely old ballads; Tex Vanderpool, who sang without accompaniment a rare ballad, entitled "The Cherry Tree Carol," which tells the story of the flight of Mary and Joseph into Egypt. FOUND-SOMETHING NEW

To Alvin F. Harlow, author, and the Saturday Evening Post, in which his article appeared, the mountain people of Kentucky owe a debt of gratitude.

For, of all the articles written in magazines of national circulation, Mr. Harlow's is the first we have ever known to present the Kentucky hills and their people to the reading public as they really are.

Mr. Harlow-is he mountaineer or philanthropist?-has painted us as a people of noble blood heritage, in the original simple, virile and independent, but with the passing of the years deteriorating into a people dependent upon what we moderns term civilization-work on the railroads, employment in and about the mines-a craving after the things ready cash will buy and a departure from the homespun products of the home which constituted a livelihood to our forefathers.

The author paints us as a people gifted with a natural amount of talent, a fondness for nature and the places wherein we are not crowded into the helter-skelter life of the workaday world. He shows us to the world as a people who are not unlike other people basically-individuals normally loving and hating, coveting and giving-though handicapped by natural barriers and lack of opportunity.

All this in marked contrast to those featured articles of other magazines depicting us as maving among us individuals who never heard of Washington or Lincoln All this in direct contrast to the work of other writers, they who indite those desperate "potboilers," dependent upon flighty imagination for the false color they need to make their scrivelings interesting.

The mountaineer of the old days with his heritage of fine Anglo-Saxon blood, his customs, speech and song handed down to him from the days of Chaucer, with his independence and scorn of little things as natural to him as the air he breathed, was an individual far superior to us of the hills who have felt the taint of modernity.

His sympathy for the people of whom he writes causes Mr. Harlow to violate the tradition of the writer dealing with us mountaineers to the extent of quoting Cecil J. Sharp, of the Stratford-on-Avon of Folklore, who came to the mountains from England to gather old Chaucerian and time-honored English ballads, and who generously said of us:

"I'd like to build a wall around these mountains and let in America is here."

THE NARRATIVE

CHAPTER L-David Ransdell, approaching New York on the liner Europa, re-ceives a succession of radiograms offering him $1,000, finally $20,000, for an ex-clusive newspaper interview divulging the mission that brings him from South Africa. Ransdell, noted aviator, has been secretly commissioned at Capetown by Lord Rhondin and Professor Bronson, the astronomer, to fly across the Mediter-ranean to the fast liner, with a large case containing photographils instructions are to deliv traveling them to Dr. Cole Hendton, in New York Tony Drake calls at the Hendron' apart-ment. Ransdell arrives and Eve Hen-dron, with whom Tony is deeply in love, introduces Tony to Ransdell.

CHAPTER H .- New York newspapers publish a statement made by Hendron and concurred in by sixty of the world's greatest scientists. The prepared state-ment says that Professor Bronson has discovered two planets, which must have broken away from another star or sun and traveled through interstellar space for an incalculable time, until they came to a region of the heavens which brought them at last under the attraction of the sun. The statement ends: "Their previ-ous course, consequently, has been modious course, consequently, has been modi-fied by the sun, and as a result, they are now approaching us." The result of the inevitable collision must be the end of the earth. The approaching bodies are referred to as Brouson Alpha and Bron-don Beta, the latter being the smaller-about the size of the earth.

CHAPTER III.--"It's going to be doomsday, isn't it?" Tony Drake asks Eve. "No, Tony-more than doomsday. Dawn after doomsday," she tells him. She explains that the first time the Bronson Bodies approach the earth they will not hit it, but the second time, one, Bronson Beta, will pass, and the other will hit the earth and demolish it. To devise means of transferring to Bronson Beta, so much like the earth, is what is occupying the minds of the members of the League of the Last Days.

CHAPTER IV .- Hendron tells Tony he is to be a mamber of the selected crew of the projected Space Ship which Hen-dron plans to build, with the idea of landing on Bronson Beta, and the scien-tist advises him to gain a knowledge of agriculture and proficiency in manual arts and elementary mechanics. Tony rounds up suitable men and women to build the ship at a cantonment Hendron established in northern Michigan.

CHAPTER V .- Hendron has not Deen CHAPTER V.-Hendron has not been able to find a metal or an alloy which will withstand the heat and pressure of atomic energy to be used in propelling the Space Ship. The night before Hen-dron and his immediate party are to fly to Michigan the lides rush through the streets of New York.

melt. That by itself would have lifted him above every other man in the camp. Not above Hendron in authority; for the flyer never in the slightest attempted to assert authority, Ransdell became, indeed, even more retiring and reserved than before; and so the women of the camp, and especially the younger ones, worshiped him.

"We now come," Hendron said, "to the last stage of this remarkable flight. They had been flying for three weeks, sleeping little and living on

"On the way to St. Paul they were forced down on a small lake, and It was there that Ransdell noticed the unmelted metal in a flow of magma. They investigated a tongue of molten metal after an arduous and perilous journey to reach it. When they were sure of its nature they collected samples and brought them back to the plane. Repairs to the oil-feeding sys tem were required; they took off on the day before their return, and reached the vicinity of St. Paul safely.

It was in St. Paul, less than two hundred miles from here, that they received the injuries with which they returned. St. Paul was in much the same condition as Pittsburgh, except that it had undergone the further decay occasioned by two additional weeks of famine and pestilence. They landed on the Mississippi river near the shore, late that night. Almost immediately they were attacked, doubtless because it was believed they possessed food. The last words in James' diary are these: 'Boats have put out toward us. One of them has a machine gun mounted in the bow. Ransdell has succeeded in starting the motors, but way of St. Paul and Milwaukee,

When Eve walked with Ransdell, as she often did, Tony became a potential killer. In reaction he could laugh at himself; he knew it was the hysteria working in him-his fear and terrors at facing almost inevitable and terrible death, and at knowing that Eve also must be annihilated. It was these emotions that at . moments almost broke out in a demonstration against Ransdell.

When Tony was with Eve, she seemed to him less the civilized creature of cultured and sophisticated society, and more an impulsive and primitive woman.

Her very features semed altered, bolder, her eyes darker and larger, her lips softer, her hair filled with a brighter fire. She was stronger, also, and more taut.

"We're going to get over," she said to him one day.

"Yes," igreed Tony. No one now openly doubted it, whatever he hid in his head. "How do you-" he began, and then made his challenge less directly personal by adding, "How do you girls now like the idea of ceasing to be individuals and becoming biological representatives of the human race'after we get across?

He saw Eve flush, and the warmth in her stirred him. 'We talk about it, of course," she replied. "And-I suppose we'll do it."

"Breed the race, you mean," Tony continued mercilessly "Reproduce the type-mating with whoever is best to insure the strongest and best children for the place, and to establish a new generation of the greatest possible variety from the few individuals which we can hope to land safely. That's the program. "Yes," said Eve, "that's the pur-

For a minute he did not speak, thinking, his hands (lenched; then: "Would you care

"Care, Tony?" she began, her face flooded with color. She checked herself. "No one must care; we have sworn not to care-to conquer caring. And we must train ourselves to it now, you know. We can't suddenly stop caring about such things, when we find ourselves on Bronson Beta, unless we've at least made a start at downing selfishness here."

"You call it selfishness?"

"I know it's not the word, Tony ; but I've no word for it. Morals isn't the word, either. What are morals, fundamentally, Tony? Morals are nothing but the core of conduct required of an individual in the best interests of the group of which he's a member. So what's 'moral' here wouldn't be moral at all on Bronson Beta."

'D-n Bronson Beta! Have you no feeling for me?"

"Tony, is there any sense in making more difficult for ourselves what we may have to do?"

'Yes; d-n it," Tony burst out again vicinity of St. Paul, supplied Hendron "I want it difficult. I want it imwith more than the necessary amount of the new metal, which could be mapossible for you!" chined but which withstood even the Wanderers from other places began discover the camp. While they

"What saves us for the time," Tony eported to Hendron on his return, "is that they're not yet united. They are gangs and groups which fight savagely enough among themselves, but in general tolerate each other. They want to get in here. They want to get us-and our women.

"They talk about smashing in here. They'd soon be killing each other in here, after they wiped us out. That desire-and hate of us-is their sole force of cohesion. If they get in, we'll see something new in savagery."

The attack began on the following night. It began with gunfire raking the barriers. A siren on top of the power house sounded a wholly unnecessary warning. "Women to cover! Men to arms!"

Tony, directing the disposal of his men, longed for the moon-the moon, shattered by Bronson Alpha, that survived tonight only in fragments too scattered and distant to lend any light. The stars had to suffice. The stars and three searchlights fixed on the roofs of the laboratories nearest to the three fronts of the encampment.

One blazed out-and instantly became a target for a machine gun in the woods. For a full minute, the gleaming white beam swung steadily, coolly back and forth, picking out of the night men's figures. Then the beam tipped out. The machine gun In the woods had got the light crew first, and then the light itself.

Other machine guns and rifles, firing at random but ceaselessly, raked the entire camp. Tony stumbled over friends that had fallen. Scientists, great men, murdered in mass!

A defending machine gun showed its spatter of flashes off to the right; Tony ran to it, and dropped down beside the gun crew. He had to have a shot at them himself. Outside the wire barriers there was silence, and it alarmed Tony far more than a continuance of the surrounding fire.

The two remaining searchlights blazed out, one sweeping the woods before Tony. The glare caught a hundred men before they could drop; and Tony savagely held the trigger back, praying to catch them with his bullets.

Machine guns were spitting from the woods once more, and both lights were blinded.

A rocket rasped its yellow streak into the air and burst above in shower of stars. Unquestionably a signal! A second rocket rasped up and broke its spatter of stars. Now the camp held its fire and listened. It heard-Tony heard-only a whistle, like a traffic whistle, or the whistle that summoned squads to attacking order A third rocket went up.

"Here they come!" some one said; and Tony wondered how he knew it. Soaked in perspiration, Tony glared into the blackness of the woods.

Now machine guns in the woods were sweeping the camp enclosure. The fire radiated from a few points; and as it was certain that the attackers were not in the path of their own fire, but were in the dark spaces between, Tony swept these with his bullets.

The gun bucked under his tense fingers. Anguished yells rewarded him.

Shouts drowned the yells of the wounded - savage, taunting shouts.

dron wants to see you. Tony. At the ship. I'll take over here for you. Good luck !' Tony found Hendron inside the Space Ship, and there, since its metal made an armor for it, a light was burning. Hendron sat at a table; it was now his headquarters.

"Who's hurt?" asked Tony. "Too many." Hendron dismissed this. "What do they think they are doing?" he challenged Tony abruptly "Getting ready to come again," Tony returned. "Tonight, probably?"

Tony glanced at his wrist watch; it was eleven o'clock. "Midnight would of Garrett, Ky., as a candidate be my guess, sir," he said. "Will they get in next time?" Hendron demanded. "They can-if they come on more resolutely. They can do more than they have done.'

him. "can scarcely do more. "Yes, sir," said Tony. "We used all the defenses we had; and they could have carried us an hour ago, if they'd come on." "Exactly," nodded Hendron. "And now we are fewer. We will be fewer and fewer yet, after they get in." "Yes, sir."

"However," said Hendron thoughtfully, "that will be, in one way, an advantage."

astonished by Hendron; yet he said, "I don't follow you, sir." "We will defend the enclosure as long as we can, Tony," Hendron said. "But when they are in-if they get in-no one is to throw himself away delayed as long as they can be; but when they are in, we gather-all of us that are left, Tony-here."

"Here?" "Inside this ship. Hadn't that occurred to you, Tony? Don't you see?

Don't you see?" straightened, the blood of hope racing again hot within him. "Of course I see!" he almost shouted. "Of course I see !"

"Very well. Then issue clothsfor arm-bands, so, in the dark, we will know our own."

"Yes, sir. But, Eve is safe?" "She is not hurt, I hear. You might see her for an instant. The women are tearing up bandages."

Tony found her in a room with twenty others, tearing white cloth into strips. At least he had one word with her.

"Tony! Take care of yourself!" "How about you, Eve?"

She disregarded this; said only: "Get back to the ship, Tony, after the fight. Oh, get back to the ship!"

He went out again. A bullet pinged on the wall beside him. The bursts of machine-gun fire sounded uglier; there were groans again, and screams. With his burden of machine gun cartridges, he returned to the post he had fought. "That you, Tony?" Jack Taylor hailed. "Cartridges? Great! We'll scrap those bimboes. H-1! Just in

CHAPTER VIL-Bronson Alpha collides with the moon and wipes it out. Ransdell and Eliot James, an English post whom Hendron has invited to join the colony, leave on an aerial recon-noissance, as the Hendron colony is in ignorance of conditions elsewhere. They safely, reporting almost universal destruction throughout the country, CHAPTER VIII .- Three weeks later, Ransdell, with Peter Vanderbilt, promi-nent New Yorker, selected by Hendron as a member of the party on the Space as a member of the party on the space Ship, and James, fly over a large section of the devastated country. They are at-tacked by a crazed mob and each mem-ber of the party wounded, but they re-turn alive, and Ransdell has found the metal Hendron needs for the Space Ship.

" 'The President then described the passing of the Bronson Bodies and their effect on the prodigious plains settlement on the night of the twentyfifth.

"""Throughout the district the earth opened up. Lava poured from it. On the western boundary of our territory, which extended into eastern Colorado, a veritable sea of lava and molten metal poured into the country drained by the Solomon, Saline, Smoky Hill and Arkansas rivers. A huge volcanic range was thrown up along the North Platte. Many if not most of our flimsily constructed buildings were toppled to the ground in utter confusion. However, for the first few hours of this awful disaster most of our people escaped. It was the hurricane which went through our ranks like a scythe. In this flat country the wind blew unobstructed. No one knows what velocity the wind attained, but an idea of it may be had by the fact that it swept the landscape almost bare, that it moved our stone buildings.

"" "This wind-driven scourge, which continued for thirty-six hours, abated on a scene of ruin, When I emerged from the cyclone cellar in which I had remained I did not believe that a single one of my countrymen had survived it until I saw them reappear slowly, painfully, more often wounded than not, like soldiers coming out of shell-holes after an extensive bombardment. Our titanic efforts had been for nothing. With the remnant of our ranks, we collected what we could find of our provisions and stores. In that hurricane my hopes of a united and re-formed United States were dashed to the ground. I now am struggling to preserve, not so much the nation, but that fraction of the race which has been left under my command; and I struggle against tremendous odds."

peat of the atomic blast Hendron had not waited for his explorers to recover. On the day after the reading of the diaries he had flown with an other pilot, found a source of the strange material from the center of the earth, and he had loaded the plane. Repeated trips had provided more than enough metal for the tubes of the atomic engines. The engine makers could not melt the metal by any heat they applied; they could not fuse it; but they could cut it and by patient machining shape it into lining of tubes which, at last, endured the frightful temperatures of the atom releasing its power.

The problem of the engine for the Space Ship was solved. This transformed the psychology of the camp. And now there ensued a period of frantic impatience for the return of the Bronson Bodies! For the camp, in its new hysteria, had become perfectly confident that the Space Ship must succeed in making its desperate journey. The camp was resolved-that part of it which should be chosen-to go.

Tony kept on at his work, tormented by a torture of his own. Together with Ellot James and Vanderbilt, Ransdell had now recovered from his wounds. For his part in the great adventure the pilot would have become popular, even if he had not also proved the discoverer of the metal that would not were few in number, it was possible to feed and clothe and even shelter them, at least temporarily. Then there was no choice but to give them a meal and send them away. But daily the dealings with the desperate, reckless groups became more and more ugly and hazardous.

Tony directed the extension of the protection of the camp by a barrier of barbed wire half a mile beyond the buildings. There were four gates which he sentineled and where he turned back all vagrant visitors. If this was cruelfy, he had no alternative but chaos. Let the barriers be broken, and the settlement would be overwhelmed.

But bigger and uglier bands continued to come. It became a commonplace to turn them back at the bayonet point and under the threat of machine guns. It became unsafe for anyoneman or woman-to leave the enclosure except by airplane.

Rifles cracked from concealments, and bullets sang by; some found their marks.

Ransdell scouted the surroundings from the air; and Tony and three others, unshaven and disheveled, crept forth at night and mingled with the men besieging the camp. They discovered that Hendron's group was hopelessly_outnumbered.

Tony's machine gun was overheat-Ing. A little light came from somewhere; Tony could not see what it was, except that it flickered. Something was burning. Tony could see figures at the wire barrier now. He could not reckon their numbers, did not try to. He tried only to shoot them down. Once through the wirethat wire so weak that he could not see it-and that thousand, with the thousands behind them would be over him and the men beside him, they would be over the line of older men behind; then they would reach the women Tony's lips receded from his teeth. He aimed the gun with diabolic care, and watched it take effect as wind affects standing wheat. The attackers broke and ran back to the woods.

Men went in pairs to the tops of the buildings and through loopholes began sniping at those who moved in the territory around the buildings. Every one was "overmastered" by the same sort of rage which had possessed Tony. The reason for their existence had been to them a high and holy purpose. They defended it with the fanaticism of zealots. They could not know that the flight of their planes to and from the Ransdell metal supply had indicated to the frantic hordes that somewhere human beings lived in discipline and decency. They could not know how for weeks they had been spied upon by ravenous eyes. They could not know that nearly ten thousand men, hungry, desperate, most of them already murderers many times over, armed, supplied with crafty plans which had been formulated by disordered heads once devoted to important, intelligent pursuitshow these besieged them now, partly for spoils, but to a greater degree in a fury of lust and envy. They had traveled on broken roads, growing as they marched. It was a heathen horde, a barbaric and ruthless horde.

The siege relaxed to an intermittent exchange of volleys. At his machine gun station, Tony, suffering acutely from thirst, with six of his comrades lying dead near by, fought Intermittently.

Reinforcements came from the center of the camp-Jack Taylor and two more of the younger men.

"Hurt, Tony?" Taylor challenged him.

"No," replied Tony. "Who's killed

Pd say Here they com "Listen !" yelled Tony. "If they get in, delay them but don't mix with Estate, M. V. Allen, Deceasedthem; each man tie a white cloth on his sleeve-and retreat to the ship!" And he issued the strips he had brought with him. From the buildings reinforcements arrived-six men with guns slung over their shoulders, and bayonets that caught a glint from the firing. They carried another machine gun.

One of the new men produced a Very pistol. His private property, he explained, which he had brought along 'for emergencies."

"It's one now," Tony said simply, and took the pistol from him. He fired it: and the Very light, hanging in the air, revealed men at the wire everywhere, A thousand men-two thousand; no sense even in estimating

Tony again claimed the machine gun. He made a flat fan of the flashes before him as he swung the gun back and forth. He was killing men by scores, he knew; but he knew, also, that if the hundreds had the nerve to stick, they were "in."

They were in ! "Fall back! Fall back to the shipfighting !" Tony yelled again and again, He did not need to tell his men to fight. The trouble was they still wanted to fight, holding on here,
