YEAR NUMBER 37 Prestonsburg, Floyd County, Kentucky, FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 1936 $1.50 PER YEAR

OFFICE OF R. A. TO CLOSE MARCH 31ST

WORK REMAINS FOR COMPLETION OF WORK IN THIS COUNTY

STATEMENT MADE

County offices of the Emergency Relief Administration in the city hall building will close Tuesday, March 31st, as announced this week by Mrs. Prater, county relief administrator. Termination of the work of the KERA office was completed this week there were no cases not assigned to work in the employable classification of these have been receiving emergency grants, some clothing and some have received no aid to them being contingent on available funds.

There also were 133 unemployable cases who have been receiving relief. Definite means of aid for these cases are not in effect with the closing of the relief office, but social security and other plans eventually provide for their welfare. It was stated that commodity disbursements will continue under the Works Progress Administration. Carl Horn is commodity clerk.

Miss Prater, head of the local relief administration, this week issued the following statement:

"Now that no further funds are available for the KERA program our office will be closed March 31st."

With the termination of this work we wish to thank our teachers, county officials, merchants, and other social-minded citizens for their splendid co-operation given us.

Without your unselfish assistance it would have been impossible to carry on. It is true that a great many errors have been made, some of them expensive ones. However, it is hoped that enough good has been done to justify the existence of the KERA in this county.

"It will probably interest you to know that food and clothing will be available for our needy families under the WPA project for Commodity Distribution."

BALLISTICS EXPERT GLO MAN DIES OF OLD MINE HURTS AID MAY BE ASKED

REVOLVER OWNED BY ACCUSED MAN AND LETHAL BULLET TO BE EXAMINED, PLAN

Sheriff M. T. Stumbo planned this week to send to a Cincinnati, O., ballistics expert Henry Adkins' revolver and the bullet found beneath George Lewis' head for tests to determine if the bullet which killed Lewis was fired from Adkins' weapon.

Adkins Monday waived examining trial, and remains in the county jail where, unless the amount of bond is fixed and executed, he will await action of the grand jury which convenes here the first Monday in April. Slaying of Lewis took place two weeks ago on Ivel Creek as the victim was en route up Ivel and across the mountain to his home on Daniels Creek. Adkins, who is alleged to have left the Marco Trail at Ivel with Lewis, en route to their neighboring homes on Daniels Creek, denies guilt of the killing.

125-Year-Old Watermill Sold to Town of Martin

One of the last water-mills in this section, the 125-year-old mill at Martin, passed from the ownership of the Frazier family to that of the town of Martin last week, and shortly the old landmark will be destroyed, The Times learned Saturday.

The town paid Will S. Frazier, grandson of the mill's founder, $200 for the dam and equipment. Because the pool of water created by the dam formed a breeding place for mosquitoes and prevented Beaver Creek from cutting a channel and thus providing against floodwaters, officials of the town purchased the mill. They plan to remove the dam soon.

The mill is known in this county as the "Alex Crisp Mill," since Alex Crisp, now of Allen, operated it for almost half a century. It was constructed by "Buck" Frazier, the first of his family to come into this section, The Times is told. Buck's Branch, which empties into Beaver Creek at Martin, was named for him.

RESIDENT ISSUES MESSAGE TO PEOPLE

The following message to the people of the country was issued a few days ago by President Roosevelt in behalf of flood sufferers over a large part of the United States:

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES:

"Flood waters raging throughout the states have driven 2,000,000 people from their homes, with every indication that this number may be materially increased within the next 24 hours. In this grave emergency the Federal Government is turning to our great relief agencies; the American Red Cross, for food, clothing, shelter and medical care.

To enable the Red Cross to meet its immediate obligation and to continue to carry the burden of caring for these unfortunate men, women and children until their homes are repaired and they can return to normal living conditions, it is necessary to raise a minimum relief fund of three million dollars be raised as promptly as possible.

As President of the United States and as President of the American Red Cross, I am, therefore, urging you to contribute promptly and most generously so that sufficient funds may be available for the relief of these thousands of your home-fellow citizens. I am confident that in the face of this great need your response will be as immediate and as generous as has always been the case when the Red Cross has appealed to your agent in the relief of suffering.

WANTED! A NEWSPAPER
By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON
(In the Publishers' Auxiliary)

Malcolm, Iowa, wants a newspaper, and the committee in charge of locating the right man insists it must be a good newspaper that will command the respect of the people of the community.

For many years Malcolm was a prosperous, progressive town, and still is. For many years Malcolm had a newspaper and a good one. It was published and edited by Mr. E. R. Doty. He produced not only a good newspaper but a prosperous one. Under Mr. Doty's direction the newspaper enjoyed an excellent circulation coverage of the town and its surrounding farms. Its content provided a coverage of the local news of the community and also a amount of high quality feature including interpretations of national and world events, good fiction and popular departments. It was the satisfying kind of newspaper that filled the needs of the people and left no place for an extensive circulation of outside publications.

The result was that the business that belonged to Malcolm was not attracted away from the town, and the merchants and the town were prosperous. Then, Mr. Doty having accumulated a reasonable competence, and feeling that he had earned a rest, sold the paper. The new owner did not believe, I am told, in providing anything more than local news, and not much of that. He cut down on the quality, the variety and the quantity the newspaper had been providing. People began taking other papers and these papers carried the advertisements of merchants outside of Malcolm. This advertising attracted business away from Malcolm.

Within two years after Mr. Doty sold his paper it was through, but that was not all. Several business houses had closed because of the trade that had been attracted away from the town, and the bank just closed up—all for the lack of a GOOD newspaper.

Now the business men of Malcolm have got together—all of them—and are out to rejuvenate the town. While a new bank and some new business houses have been arranged for, one of the things that is most greatly desired is a newspaper. But the business men insist it must be a good newspaper. They want a satisfying newspaper, one that will make it unnecessary for any large proportion of the people to buy daily newspapers that will attract business away from Malcolm.

He made the plane in short order and got the dead policeman to the cabin by way of the wing. Leaping off, he rushed back at top speed to meet Lillith. He had to go all the way to where he had left her.

She had slung the showshoes on her back, floundered through the first drift, and collapsed. When he came up, she was rubbing snow on her bared ankle. She looked up at him, white-faced with pain and despair.

"I tried, Alan. I can't even walk," she said. "Go back. It's all my fault. Hurry and save yourself. Maybe I can—delay him."

For reply, Garth swung her up across his shoulders and headed again for the plane. There still might be time. He put all his strength into another burst of speed.

They came to the glacier stream, with no sight or sound of the pursuers behind them. Garth lifted the girl from his shoulder and set her on the front edge of the monoplane wing. He grasped hold to vault up beside her.

A bullet fanned the girl's pain-whitened cheek. Another bullet struck the wing edge between her and Garth. He jerked her down off the wing. The firing ceased. But the angle of the shot in the wing edge told Garth the direction from which it had come.

After murdering Constable Dillon but before starting to trail Garth, Huxby must have sent one of his men running along the foot of the tundra slope to take possession of the planes. Garth had outrun the miner. But the man had come within easy rifle range and clear view of the plane—at least of its upper parts.

Garth did not hesitate a split second. He carried Lillith to the mooring tree and slashed the line with his knife. Then, taking the girl pickaback, he set off up the stream bank.

His one backward glance showed him that the plane was drifting out into the lake. But, the cross-wind had died down. The lessened stream current could be counted upon to carry the plane out beyond reach before it was stopped by the skim ice.

The rifleman up on the edge of the tundra was off to the right of the stream. Garth knew he had a thick screen of spruce trees and scrub all the way to timberline. As he climbed, the man above began to yell and halloo. Garth had no doubt that the fellow was shouting about the outrift of the cabin plane.

Before long, other yells came from the lake shore. They were followed by rifle shots. It was easy to guess that one or more of the pursuers had sighted the plane and opened fire, on the supposition that Garth was hidden in the cockpit. The shouts of the man above told that he was running downhill, probably to let the others know he had kept the fugitives from getting aboard.

Garth moderated his rush. Even so, his steady uphill slogging brought him near timberline before the four men got together down at the lake shore. From the sudden stoppage of the firing, he knew the fourth man had explained the situation. Yet he did not quicken his climbing pace.

For the first time since leaving the plane, he spoke to Lillith: "Try holding out farther from my neck, Miss Ramill. We're safe enough now. We're climbing faster than they can wade the drifts."

With less than a hundred paces, Garth saw a whitish pall surge out from the down-rolling clouds on the western mountain side. A snow-spitting wind-gust whooshed against the tundra slope. He turned sharp to the left and headed uphill towards the foot of the glacier. Before he had covered another hundred paces, the air was thick with snow.

Fortunately for Lillith, the storm was only an early autumn blizzard, not a 30 or 40 below zero gale of the subarctic winter. The rabbit-fur under-suit inside the buckskins saved her. Though greatly chilled, she was only slightly frostbitten when Garth reached the brink of the lateral moraine, a little below the foot of the glacier.

He went out across the rock-strewn gulch bed. Within a few moments Lillith suddenly found herself out of the wind and snow and the white gloom of the storm. She could not see. Her elbow rasped along a smooth wall. Then she was placed upon a ledge.

A match flared in Garth's upraised hand. The light glistened and sparkled on ice walls. She was in the mouth of the cave, up inside the glacier-stream tunnel. The rock floor was heaped with the caribou meat. At the side of the entrance lay the pothole stone that Garth had made into an Eskimo lamp.

He pointed to an outspread caribou skin. "Crawl in on that. Then rub your face and pound yourself." She scrambled to the skin mat, her teeth clenched on her lip to keep from crying out from the pain of her ankle. Garth had struck another match and held it to the moss wick of the stone lamp. A third match was necessary before enough of the frozen fat was thawed and melted to feed the wick. But, once started, the flame heated more and more of the fat.

Lillith had already rubbed her frost-bitten cheeks and nose into a glow.

He laid his belt-ax on a hind-quarter of caribou, and smiled at her in the growing light of the wick.

"Chop off a shank or two. We'll need bone spits," he said. "But first warm some of the other skins and wrap them around you. Also put more fat in the lamp. I'll be gone two or three hours."

Over near the far end of the glacier front, he found a drift with a four-inch crust packed by the drive of the wind during the previous snowstorm. He went at it like an Eskimo, slashing out big domino-shaped blocks with his knife.

After he had gathered a high pile of the blocks on a fairly level spot just beyond the drift, he started to cut others and lay them edgewise in a circular wall around the pile. Two feet up he began to lean the blocks inward. By the end of three hours, he stood in the blackness of a snow beehive, half a foot higher than his head and over seven feet across at the floor level.

For the First Time Since Leaving the Plane, He Spoke to Lillith.

Low down in the wall he cut a hole. There was little more than space enough between the igloo and the glacier front for him to crawl out. He circled around the snow dome and the big drift, through the thick swirl of snow, and recrossed the stream.

In the cave he found Lillith fur-bundled and hovering over the lamp, as she broiled thawed caribou steaks on a shank-bone spit. He picked the girl up in her skin wrappings, and carried her out and around to the igloo. A second trip fetched the rest of the skins, the lamp, and enough meat for a starter.

While she went on with her cooking, over the re-lighted lamp, he cut more blocks and built a low entrance tunnel from the door to part way around the curve of the igloo wall. When he backed in, he blocked the mouth of the tunnel with a snow slab.

The inside of the igloo was already so warm from the lamp heat that the inside of the dome roof was beginning to soften. But Garth knew there was no slightest danger of it falling in. As fast as the snow melted, the moisture was sucked outwards. It met the cold of the outside air and froze hard.

In a little while the igloo would be a dome of solid ice strong enough to hold the weight of a bear. The interior was both warmer and drier than any tent, or any hut of wood or stone. The caribou skins made even the snow floor comfortable.

The girl had a stack of caribou steaks broiled for him. He sat down, without a word, and began to eat. In the midst of the meal the smoke and heat became so stifling that he had to cut a two-inch ventilation hole in the roof.

All the time he gave no sign that he perceived the look of misery in Lillith's eyes. But when he had eaten his fill, he spoke a sudden order: "Bare your foot."

She obeyed, tensely silent. He looked close at the swollen ankle in the lamp-light and felt it with his finger tips. Easy as was his touch, Lillith gasped with pain. But he smiled his relief. "No broken bone or dislocation; only a sprain. You'll soon be all right. Start packing it with softened snow. Keep it as cold as you can without freezing."

At that, all her pent-up emotion burst out: "Oh, how you must despise me! Get you into this frightful danger—then go lame! A helpless, useless drag on you! That beastly coward—he'll hunt you out . . . murder you like the poor policeman. And all my fault!"

Garth shook his head. "You take too much of the credit, Miss Ramill. So far as regards Constable Dillon, the result would have been the same if you had stayed at Fort Simpson."

"But—but you can't get away!" Garth's smile hardened. "Neither can you. Now tend to your ankle. I'm going for meat." He dressed and crawled out into the storm. When at last he came back in, he had brought nearly half of the caribou meat from the ice cave and stacked it around the igloo. He had also set up blocks of snow-crust to shape a drift of new snow in a certain way.

He unrolled the thawed wolverine pelt and showed a big hank of catgut. With his knife he started to shape caribou skins for parkas and trousers. Lillith's eyes brightened. She softened a length of catgut in the melted lamp-fat, and asked for a needle.

All the remainder of that day of death and storm, both of them piled awl and buckskin needle and catgut thread. Neither was an Eskimo seamstress. But their stitches, though coarse, were strong. By nightfall they finished the first caribou-skin suit—waistlong sock-leggings, and parka with hood-front fringed with wolverine fur.

After another meal of broiled meat, Garth went out and climbed the lateral moraine to gather a quantity of caribou moss from between the snow-drifts on the wind-swept tundra.

When he returned, Lillith lay asleep on one of the uncut skins. She had sunk down, completely tired out. Garth covered her over, blocked the roof hole with a chunk of soft snow, and spread his own skin mat on the other side of the lamp from the girl. He lay down on it and snuffed out the light.

CHAPTER X

The Bedeviling. Lillith opened her eyes as Garth finished his hasty meal of lamp-seared meat and fat. He explained about the plane. Her hands clutched together till they whitened.

"You—you'll be careful?" "Never fear. I'll come back to look out for you. The storm has blown out. Clear sky, and about 10 below zero. Keep treating your ankle, and work on your suit."

"But—how long?" He handed her the knife, but took the belt-ax. "If I'm not back soon, it will not be till late afternoon or after dark. They may turn out early, like myself, to have a look at their plane. In that case, I'll have to hide-out all day."

"You'll freeze?" That won a smile from him. "This is an Eskimo rig. I've sat in one for hours beside a seal hole, at 40 below zero. Finish your own suit, and crawl out to enjoy the frost. Only, be careful of that ankle. When outside, keep close to the igloo, and duck inside if you see anyone else than myself."

She flung out her hands. "Oh, if only I could go along to help! I'm so afraid he'll find you. All those guns—he and his men—you, empty-handed!"

Garth met the almost frantic outburst with a look of cool irony. "Do you take me for a chechaheo? Mark this—that scoundrel Huxby is the man who's in danger."

With the assurance, Garth crept out through the tunnel, shoving his snowshoes ahead of him. Snow had continued to fall after the wind had died down. That meant easy tracking. In the dim starlight, he had to guess at the covering of his trail to the stream channel.

During the night, the last dwindling flow had choked the channel with anchor ice, had flooded over the snow, and frozen solid. Garth took off his snowshoes and crept across the glare ice without leaving any marks.

On the other bank, he plowed a heavy trail up into the ice tunnel, and brought from the storage cave one of the remaining legs of caribou. He left the meat atop the moraine, and started down the tundra as fast as he could travel by starlight.

Dawn was graying over the east mountain wall of the valley when he neared the lake. He crossed over the frozen ford and went to peer at the three-seater plane in the growing twilight. It stood much higher than he had left it.

A close view showed that the engineer and his men had managed to raise the craft above water by cribbing logs under the shattered pontoons. The top logs of the crib brought the bottom of the floats level with the thickening skim ice. Long poles had been set to brace the wings against the wind gusts.

Garth swung aboard. As he expected, all the food had been taken away. So also had been the breaker points from the magneto. Huxby no doubt had figured that the canoe builder might repair the floats with rawhide, and run away with the three-seater. To talk the engineer, in turn, Garth helped himself to the breaker cam.

He jumped back on the bank, and munched eastwards along the shore in the dim grayness. At first, thickets of alders and willows cut off all view of the lake. He did not trouble to seek an opening until he had covered a half mile. There he came to a remembered stretch of partly open bank.

Though the gray dawn had grown a little less faint, he peered for several moments without sighting the cabin plane. It seemed as if its pontoons must have been saved through by the sharp-edged sheet of ice, so that the aircraft had foundered in deep water. But then he made out vaguely a white shape against the white of the snow-covered ice. A short dash brought him close to the grounded plane. It lay in shallow water, surrounded by freezing slush. The blizzard had hit the lake hard enough to break up the sheet ice and crack it into pieces too small to grind through the sides of the pontoons.

The plane had been driven across into this corner of the lake, along with the sludge. The shoreward-slung tail was only a biscuit toss out from the solid bank. Garth hastened to fetch small trunks and pieces of rotted logs from the down timber under the nearest trees. By tossing out chunks of log on the snow-covered sludge and bog, he was able to make a slender footbridge with pairs of trunks.

The last extension proved touch and go. Cross pieces and stringers drove down under his weight into the sludge-filled water and the mud beneath. But he had made a dash of it. His hands clutched hold of the rudder before he could sink.

He climbed upon the tail, ran forward to the cabin, and swung inboard. The frozen body of Constable Dillon lay on the floor where he had placed it. He buckled the cartridge belt with its holstered pistol about his own waist, took the keys and handcuffs from Dillon's pocket, and climbed out to scramble forward into the cockpit.

The side of the cockpit had been pierced by several bullets. But when Huxby fired at the drifting plane, in his attempt to kill the suppo-den fugitives, he had aimed with great care to avoid damage to the instruments and controls and the motor. After removing the breaker points from the magneto, Garth ran back to the tail of the plane. Here came the greatest of his risks. The bridge poles had risen to the surface again, but the outermost cross legs remained embedded in the mud under the water.

He let himself down sideways. As his moccasins touched the slender trunks, he let go of the rudder and leaped. Though the ends of the poles shot downwards, his swift dash carried him up their sharp slant to the next pair of trunks.

The rest of the improvised bridge was fairly firm. A single misstep anywhere along it would have landed him in deep bog; but he had done far too much canoeing and rough-ground running to lack balance or sure-footedness.

Safe back on solid ground, he at once stepped into his snowshoes and headed straight away from the shore into a dense growth of spruce. There he circled to the right towards the glacier gulch, keeping well back from the lake.

"Mountain of Hellfire"

Emits Ammoniacal Gases

Over a great area on the frontier between Baluchistan and Persia everything is dead. Not a bird, beast, or reptile, not even an insect, survives. They have been gassed by the "Mountain of Hellfire"—as the Persians call the volcano of Koh-i-Tafatan. The crater pours out dense clouds of ammoniacal gas which destroy every living thing and even burn up all plant life, says Tit-Bits Magazine.

This is the only mountain which produces this particular gas, but not the only one which exudes poison gas. In 1912 the volcano of Katmai in Alaska exploded, producing the biggest crater in the world, which is now known as the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes. Here sulphurous gas streams out from rifts, and it is death to approach one of these deadly vents.

The Sakura Shima volcano in Japan blew up in 1914 and overwhelmed the city of Kagoshima. The loss of life was over 70,000, and a great number of these people were suffocated by pestilential gases which rushed up from earthquake fissures a long way from the mountain itself.

Before the great Chilean earthquake of 1857 poison gas rose in the floor of the Bay of Payta and killed enormous quantities of fish and crabs. They floated on the surface and were washed up on the beach, forming a wall-like line three to four feet high and twelve miles long.

The most ghastly disaster of recent times was the destruction of the beautiful city of St. Pierre by a cloud of gas and dust flung out by Mont Pelee. Within a matter of moments 40,000 people were blotted out.

Dockside Slangage

"Luters," scurfers," and "tosher's" are among the quaint nicknames given to the workers in London's dockland. A "luter" is a man who clears mud from the beds of barges, a "scurfer" is one who scrapes away the crust from the insides of ships' boilers, and a "tosher" is a waterman who searches for stray bits of floating timber or dredges for a wet haul of coal. A coal boat that ducks her funnel when she passes beneath the bridges is known as a "flat-iron," a vessel belonging to the Steam Navigation company is called a "Navy," and the river police are humorously dubbed "Lord Trenchard's Navy."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

I AM NOT INSULTED

There was a time when the writer of this column considered himself and all his people insulted whenever a daily newspaper or a magazine published some colored and colorful account of life in the Kentucky mountains.

That time, fortunately for my blood pressure, has passed. As age grows upon me I grow more philosophical—or, mayhap, less pugnacious—and so I no longer take insult when I read in my newspaper or magazine that we hill-folks still adhere to the customs and speech that were the height of fashion in the days of the good Queen Bess.

What of it, if they do talk about us? They know not what they do. Not that they are harming us. Unwittingly—being not as wise as they think—they are endowing us with a romantic mantle that long since has slipped from unworthy shoulders.

Take away our Chaucerian speech, our Elizabethan ballads, costumes and customs, deprive us of our heritage of good, old Anglo-Saxon blood and all the wealth of tradition behind us—take away these and we have nothing except the material things, which are common property.

Every spot in the nation seeks advertising, these days (see California and Florida for shining and smashing examples.) And this talk of our old customs, our outmoded speech, our "strange" and romantic land is not only the finest type of advertising for us, but it also is free!

Let the boys and girls write about us. Exercise of their imaginations hurt us not at all and give the ordinary person something he wants to read about. Who but us would want to read about the fine schools and churches we have, the miles of paved highway we travel, the wonderfully developed resources that are ours?

Let them tell the wonderful story of the Kentucky mountains of the John For era. It is primitive and beautiful. I shall not be insulted. Let them tell the story and bring tourists in to see us.

Then let us, if you and I and all of us will, show them the finest in Kentucky mountain tradition. When the disillusioned visitor comes to our door, let us show him the old-time hospitality and really and unaffectedness that is our heritage.

Let us show him that to be a traitor is not to be a mere "double-crosser" but actually a traitor with no other word to describe him; that true hospitality is not the smart social duty but is real "clowniness," and that to be "clever" you don't have to be "smart," as society folk have it. Let us show him—and let us try hard to get back to that good, old mountain trait—that a man's word is as good as his bond.

No, I am not insulted when they relegate me and mine to those dear, dead days when a moonshiner had a code of honor as lofty as that of the elite of "furrin parts."

THE TIDE OF EMPIRE

Explaining the spirit of aggression that has seized the Japanese people under the rule of the military party, Frederic J. Haskin points out that—

Japan is the most thickly populated nation in the world, not even Belgium and Holland exceeding its population in density.

The kingdom of Japan has 85,000,000 people inhabiting 260,000 square miles of territory, with the average farm containing only 2.5 acres, with each of the 2,000,000 families subsisting on the mere garden plot of one-fourth acre of land.

The Japanese former cherishes land which the American agriculturalist would scorn, since acreage is so dear and demands for a livelihood are so difficult to meet.

In brief, these paragraphs explain something of the motive behind the Japanese imperialistic attitude. Yet they do not explain the folly of war.

Marx is a poor real estate agent, Japan will learn. It would be much cheaper—in money, lives, morale and all resources, both material and spiritual—for the nation in need of territorial expansion to make outright purchases of possession instead of resorting to armed force under some flimsy pretext in order to acquire land.

Nor do the facts above-recited show why Japan must resort to a policy of iron-and-blood to acquire new territory while Holland and Belgium, almost as thickly populated, remain shining examples of the spirit of goodwill among nations.

Why Lincoln Grew a Beard

Told by American Guide

An eleven-year-old girl promoted Mr. Lincoln's beard in the midst of the 1860 presidential campaign and proof of her success along this ultra-modern line of endeavor may be seen by any visitor to Washington, D. C. The little girl was Grace Bedell, whose home was Chautauqua County, N. Y. The episode was brought to the attention of the writers who are preparing articles on the Capital for the American Guide, the government's forthcoming travel handbook.

In 1860 Mr. Lincoln was clean-shaven and more than a trifle gaunt. None of his masculine supporters guessed that his rather emaciated appearance would have any effect on the voters—all male in those days—but the ladies had a better understanding of popular psychology.

Probably after having heard a good deal of talk on the subject at the sewing circles and elsewhere in her village, Miss Bedell wrote Mr. Lincoln on October 15, 1860, the following letter:

"Dear Sir: My father has just come home from the fair and brought home your picture and Mr. Hamlin's. I am a little girl only 11 years old, but want you should be President of the United States very much so I hope you won't think me very bold bold to write to such a great man as you are. Have you any little girls about as large as I am? If so give them my love and tell her to write to me if you cannot answer this letter. I have got four brothers and a part of them will vote for you anyway and if you will let your whiskers grow I will try and get the rest of them to vote for you. You would look a great deal better for your face is so thin. All the ladies like whiskers and they would tease their husbands to vote for you and then you would be President. My father is going to vote for you and if I was a man I would vote for you but I will try to get everyone to vote for you that I can. I think that rail fence around your picture makes it look very pretty. I have got a little baby sister she is nine weeks old and is just as cunning as can be. When you answer, address your letter direct to Grace Bedell, Westfield, Chautauqua County, N. Y.

"I must not write anymore answer this letter right off. Goodbye, Grace Bedell."

Mr. Lincoln saw the point and started in immediately to raise a crop of whiskers, though he felt rather ashamed of himself for doing it, as is indicated in the reply which he sent his youthful girl advisor on October 19:

My dear little Miss: Your very agreeable letter of the 15th is received. I regret the necessity of saying I have no daughters. I have three sons—one 17, one nine and one seven years of age. They, with their mother, constitute my whole family.

"As to the whiskers, having never worn any, do you think people would call it a piece of silly affectation if I were to begin it now? Your very sincere well wisher, A. Lincoln."

These letters are now on display in a little cabinet at the Lincoln Museum.

SHOWER FOR MRS. BURCHETT INTERESTING SOCIAL EVENT

One of the outstanding social events of the season was the miscellaneous shower given March 17 by Mrs. T. B. Sturgill and Mrs. J. B. Clarke, honoring Mrs. Woodrow Burchett, nee, Miss Norcie Sturgill.

The home of Mrs. Clarke was artistically decorated for the occasion with flowers and in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. At the appointed hour, the guests began to arrive and the earlier part of the evening was spent in telling Irish jokes with Mrs. Oscar P. She was assisted in the unwrapping of them by Misses Jane Hamilton Clarke and Winifred Sturgill.

At a late hour the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. E. P. Hill, Jr., Mrs. B. F. Combs, Misses Zena Dare Daniel and Gwendolyn Sturgill, served a delicious salad course. The attractive favors were shamrocks adorned with hats and apples. Those invited were:

LOITERING WOMEN HERE ARE TABOO

Health and Police Officials Join in Drive Against Immorality, Unhealthy Conditions Here

Prestonsburg no longer is to be a sanctuary for lewd women. Chief of Police W. A. Will, declared last week when he and other city policemen, working in co-operation with the Floyd county health department, began rounding up women on loitering charges and either lodging them in jail or taking them before health department officials for examination, with specific instructions given alleged loiterers as to what they may expect as a penalty for future violations.

Eight women were in the county jail here Tuesday afternoon after having been arrested on loitering charges. Approximately 20 others were taken to the health department offices for examination. These steps were taken, it was said, in conjunction with the drive undertaken by the health department, the city council and the police department to clean up Prestonsburg insofar as possible by removing certain menaces to the health, physically and morally, of the town.

The city council recently enacted an ordinance requiring all restaurant-operators to undergo an examination every six months and all restaurant-employees to undergo such tests every 30 days. This ordinance will be enforced to the letter, Dr. Marvin Ransdell, director of the county health department, said Monday.

"Prestonsburg is no longer to be the gathering place for the riff-raff of this section of the state and even other states," officials have announced. Loitering, which, associated with unbecoming conduct, has for months tended to make this place a center of immorality, will no longer be tol-

Veteran Marshal of Town of Allen Resigns Office

Garfield Wright, veteran marshal of the town of Allen, last week handed his resignation to the board of town trustees, effective March 31.

Mr. Wright said he is resigning because of his age. He was 74 years old, Feb. 8. "I am at the age now when I can't get around like I used to, and I can't stand being up at all hours, night and day, as an officer often has to do," he explained.

When Policeman Wright handed his badge of office he will have 35 years of police service at Allen together, his service as a policeman has extended over 35 years. A fearless officer, Mr. Wright has a colorful career and is well known throughout Eastern Kentucky. The board of trustees at Allen to name Melvin and Joe Laferty to succeed him, it is

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 124:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New Song. JUNIOR TOPIC—Coming Home Rejoicing.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Thanksgiving for God's Care.

I. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:1-14).

It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send this letter to the captives in Babylon (vv. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vv. 6, 7).

1. The length of the captivity (v. 10). Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive, among which Daniel was found.

2. Recovered by God (vv. 10-14). God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices. He assured them that when his purpose was accomplished he would visit them and convince them of his good purpose toward them. Their captivity he would turn away, gather them from all the nations, and bring them into their own land.

II. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra 1:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4).

a. This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). What God has promised he will do; he never forgets.

b. By divine initiation (v. 1). "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus." How this was done we do not know. Possibly Daniel brought to his attention the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12). Every impulse to do good in all men is caused by the Lord. It may have been that Cyrus only saw his own action as a piece of statecraft—the creation of a buffer nation between his kingdom and that of Egypt.

c. The content of his proclamation (vv. 2-4).

(1) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.

(2) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v. 3). He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord God.

(3) Lead assistance (v. 4). Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go. Many, no doubt, had lost their material spirit and therefore did not desire to go. All such were to lead friendly assistance in silver, gold, and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vv. 5, 6). The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing and ready to go. The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.

3. The royal favor (vv. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. Now to have 5,400 of these vessels returned to their owners and sent back to Jerusalem to be put to their original use, met a hearty response by the Jews.

III. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ps. 124:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1). They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.

2. Their laughter and singing (vv. 2, 3). They not only recognized this as the favor of the Lord upon them, but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.

3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4). They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting him for fruitfulness of the land.

4. Sowing in tears (vv. 5, 6). The seed which they were to sow in the land was so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow as they brought with them the sheaves of the harvest.

Monotony

Whether we are rich or poor, we all have to fight against monotony—doing the same thing over and over until it loses interest.

We can fight monotony with variety, and one way to do this is by making a wise use of leisure. If we wish to avoid the feeling that we are merely machines, we must become interested in many things.

Patience

Patience is bitter, but its fruit sweet. Rousseau.

Chevrolet's high-compression valve-in-head engine gives economy without equal!

FOR ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION

The Chevrolet engine is the most economical automobile engine produced today, because (1) it is a six-cylinder engine, and (2) it is a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine.

Its six cylinders use less gas and oil—in fact, use the least gas and oil—for six cylinders are the most economical combination used in modern automobiles.

Every test proves it's more economical... Every Chevrolet owner knows it's more economical... And every person will readily understand these simple A-B-C reasons why it is more economical

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the advanced construction of the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressure stream oiling and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

If Russia Joined Japan Not Heroic Action

Lloyd George Hopeful England Still Safe

Editors talk about Asia, led by Japan, conquering the world. They might speculate on a union between Japan and Russia.

Arthur Brisbane

Improbable, you will say, truly, but if Russian-Japanese hostility could be changed into Russian-Japanese agreement a new world chapter might open.

You hear of Russia's "red army," 1,300,000 men, thoroughly armed, and 7,000,000 reserves.

You see photographs of Russia's amphibian tanks, mounted with machine guns, rolling over the land and swimming rivers; you read about intensive training of tens of thousands of Russian air pilots, parachute jumpers, etc., and see even the broad-shouldered young Russian women drilling with rifles.

Western Europe may have a problem closer at hand than Japan.

Our British cousins in the Revolution cheerfully let loose howling, scalping Indians on their cousins in the American colonies, and bolshevism might cheerfully turn Asiatic killing efficiency against western "capitalism."

You remember how cheerfully the great historian Gibbon predicted that, in the American war, "with firmness all may go well," because "Scotch Highlanders, Irish, Hanoverians, Canadians, Indians, etc., will all in various shapes be employed."

There is no reason why Russia of 1936 should be more squeamish now than England at the end of the Eighteenth century.

Lloyd George, who ought to know about Europe and war since he and old Clemenceau won the big war, tells Universal Service this present war is "off." France having learned that "even her most ardent friends in Europe shrink from war."

Lloyd George declares that peace "without derogating from the dignity of any of the powers" will be preserved, if France does not make it impossible.

Lloyd George says not 1 per cent of Englishmen would vote for war, and not 10 per cent for employing sanctions against Germany.

If enough rich Americans go to England to "escape kidnapers" the kidnapers may move over after them, as professional gamblers follow on big ships.

London police arrested Alfred Molyneux, thirty-one, trying to extort $1,000 from the Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow, offering to reveal a plot to kidnap her baby.

Police knew by the moderate price it could not be an American "snatcher" or confederate. Easily caught, the young man confessed he had invented the plot.

With "visibility cut to zero," street lights burning by day, not visible across the street, dust storms are blowing over parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico.

By such displays of nature's power, for which man's foolishness is responsible, fertile areas of the world have been changed to deserts.

A bill that would have limited work to five working days of six hours each, or thirty hours a week, is dead in congress for the time being. It would have given workers twenty-four hours off on Saturday and Sunday, eighteen hours off on every other day—eight hours for sleep, "ten hours for what we will." All that will come some day, but not by discouraging improved machinery.

An intelligent young man who fought well in the big war speaks of "the 2-to-1" advantage which modern methods give the defense over the attack. To let the other man or nation come at you, if you are prepared, has been wise in the past.

It might be different in future wars, if the attacker, with a couple of thousand airplanes, dropping explosive bombs and poison gas, should surprise the enemy. "Defense" would have no 2-to-1 advantage over that sort of attack.

Lloyds, the great English insurance concern, at first refused to insure against war at any price. Now Lloyds will insure, otherwise "bet," nine and a half to one against war within six months. Wall Street wanted that news and of course cheered up.

A mother of Fort Worth, Texas, offered her body to Chicago's Cook County hospital for dissection after natural death, if the hospital would provide a free operation for her son. The hospital declined the body, performed the free operation. Now twenty, all women but one, offer to sell their bodies, "delivered after death."

The governor of Mexico, in his state closed for a half, now permits a fight against violence, to wind up what you're so dif-

what Irwin S. Cobb thinks about:

High Collars and Adams' Apples

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.

The moot question of whether the east coast or the west coast is America's artistic center is one of the most mootful you ever encountered. Temporarily, though, it's being eclipsed by the burning issue touching on what the well-dressed man will wear around his goosle.

New York's tastiest dressers are encasing their pecks within high linen walls—the highest since Jericho, I hear—whereas Hollywood's defenders fight on for the rakish, not to say winsome, open-throated effect—in other words, 'tis a war between the shut-ins and the fresh-air fiends. Maybe you don't think this is important, but they do.

Today, typical champions of these clashing schools of thought met here face to face. Sunset boulevard's entry was unbuttoned so far down in front he practically was being served on the half-shell, and one and all had a fascinating view of his Adam's apple as it itched up and down, the same as a fox squirrel on a snag. Like a boy chinning himself on a board fence, Fifth avenue's challenger was hidden behind the tallest, stiffest, flaringst collar I ever beheld.

Kid Movie Actors Stampede

ACCORDING to honest estimates, exactly one child in 3,000,000 gets a chance to qualify as a child actor in the pictures—not an outstanding star, mind you, but just a reasonably successful juvenile performer.

These figures have been broadcast in a laudable effort to check the flood of hopeful parents who pour into Hollywood, seeking large salaries and fame for Junior or precocious little Doris, and finding, instead, only disappointment and heartbreak and finally despair and often destitution.

So I'm repeating the doleful warning. It won't do any good, grown-up vanity and greed and ambition being what they are.

Headaches From Economic Messiahs

ALBERTA, in Canada, produced an economic Messiah, a spouting John the Baptist of the dispensation, who came out of the wilderness with a lovely device called a "social credit system" which, among other pleasant things, guaranteed every adult in the land $25 a month for life.

So the voters overwhelmingly elected him as premier and from over the dominion flocked in thousands to share in the distribution. Now they're busted; the budget is a sieve; citizens are faced with ruinous taxes—and nobody yet has collected that twenty-five a month.

Industrial depression always spawns its self-anointed saviors who promise to restore prosperity by giving money they haven't got to people who haven't earned it. After a while, in spite of human folly, good times return.

Crystal Gazing in World Affairs.

TODAY we have a few fresh-laid predictions by good old Doctor Cobb, palm-reading, crystal-gazing, numerology (during income tax week) and ear washing.

France will save her face and Ethiopia will lose its pants.

The Rhineland, being German, will keep right on being German, as it should.

Although perhaps making some snoots at each other—for public consumption—behind the scenes Adolph H. and Benito M. will have many a hearty laugh together.

Several smaller nations will get painfully crushed in the jam, as usual. England will positively not get crushed in any jam, also as usual.

Japan will discover the Chinese are responsible for the whole mess and grab off another slice of territory.

Gov. Hoffman Overlooks a Bet

IN THEIR efforts to impeach the prosecution's key witnesses, Governor Hoffman and the other attorneys for the defense in the Bruno Hauptmann case are overlooking a bet.

There was one person who testified most damagingly against the cause to which they have devoted themselves. Under oath, this person solemnly declared that, on a certain night, alongside a certain cemetery, he recognized the voice of the kidnaper, falsely bargaining for the return of a baby already murdered, as the voice of their client.

True, this individual has gone abroad since a trial jury and a high court decided the proof justified conviction. But his whereabouts is known. In accordance with the present campaign, why not fetch him back and attack his evidence as spurious—attack his credibility as an honest and a truthful man? The name is Lindbergh.

Smart Jacket Dress With Bows of Print

1834-B

Versatility is an engaging quality in this little two piece frock. Make it feminine with bows and a belt of bright print, or slightly mannish with round buttons and a narrow belt.

The hip length jacket with its cut-away effect and front panel are the dominating features of the dress. Notice how the gathers peep cunningly in back and front beneath the circular yoke. A simple skirt, but not too simple to be attractive. Individualism is attributed to the wide tailored pleats in the front.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1834-B is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch fabric plus 1/2 yard of contrasting material.

Our Failure in Character Is the Tragedy of Life

Life is given for wisdom, and yet we are not wise; for goodness, and we are not good; for overcoming evil, and evil remains; for patience and sympathy and love, and yet we are fretful and hard and weak and selfish. This is the tragical feature of life—that it is linked with so much failure in character. Are most of us considering success and failure in this high and eternal light? We ought to be.

MELVIN PURVIS AMERICA'S NO. 1 G-MAN

The Inside Story of
MELVIN PURVIS, formerly America's ace G-Man, who directed the capture of Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson, and many others. Mr. Purvis herein reveals the methods used in capturing criminals. Names have, of course, been changed. Today Melvin Purvis describes the capture of the "Barkus Gang"—which had just raided a bank in a small Illinois town. When the G-Men arrived there were no clues until...

THE SCRAM CHART, OR HOW AMERICA'S ACE G-MAN CAPTURED THE BARKUS GANG

WE DON'T KNOW WHICH WAY THEY WENT.

MR. PURVIS, DOES THIS MEAN ANYTHING? IT BLEW OUT THE WINDOW OF THAT GANG'S CAR AS IT SPED PAST MY GROCERY.

THE SCRAM CHART THEY WERE USING FOR A GETAWAY! YOU BET IT MEANS SOMETHING!

HERE'S HOW A SCRAM CHART WORKS: SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE THE ROBBERY, THE BANDIT CAR DRIVES CAREFULLY OVER THE ROUTE, PLANNED FOR THE GET-AWAY, SELECTING LITTLE-USED ROADS, EXACT MILEAGES ARE NOTED ON THE CHART. WHEN THE BANDIT CAR DRIVES UP TO THE BANK, THE MILEAGE GAUGE IS SET AT ZERO. WHEN THE CAR ROARS AWAY FROM THE SCENE OF THE ROBBERY, A BANDIT CALLS OFF THE MILEAGES AT WHICH TURNS ARE TO BE MADE... "3/10THS OF A MILE, RIGHT TURN... 2-1/2 MILES, LEFT TURN" ETC.

0-BANK
3/10-R.T. (RIGHT TURN)
2-1/2-L.T.
2-1/2-R.T. (BRIDGE)
2-1/2-B.L.-L. (BANK BRIDGE)

THE G-MEN SPEED AFTER THE BANDIT GANG!

MY HUNCH IS THAT WHEN THEY LOST THAT SCRAM CHART, THEY HAD TO CHANGE THEIR WHOLE PLAN OF GET-AWAY. I THINK THEY'LL KEEP ON THE MAIN HIGHWAY TO THE BORDER—AND I'M GOING TO HEAD THEM OFF! I KNOW A SHORT CUT TO THE CROSS ROAD... STEP ON IT AND WE'LL CATCH BARKUS YET!

AT THE CROSSROADS

THERE THEY GO! WE'RE TOO LATE TO STOP THEM!

TOO LATE, NOTHING! I'LL SHOOT OUT THEIR TIRES!

STICK 'EM UP, JOE BARKUS! WE'VE GOT YOU AND YOUR GANG DEAD TO RIGHTS THIS TIME!

WEST GARRETT

Work here at the Wells-Elkhorn Coal Company's mine No. 6 is showing very definite signs of slowing up.

Mr. and Mrs. Rock Patton and little son, Ronnie, of this place, were visiting Mrs. Patton's home, folks at Hueysville, near here, a few days ago.

and Mrs. Frank Wolfe, of this place, were visiting friends and days ago.

ley and Ruth Neil, all of this place, were visiting in Lackey last Sunday afternoon.

Several men from this place, employees of the Goose Creek Mining Company, whose mine is located just below here, attended the Union meeting at Hueysville Saturday.

"Uncle" Morgan Patton, who has been bedfast at his home here almost two years with injuries sustained in a fall, shows no improvement.

Edgill and Hillard Baldrige and Coley Martin, all of Hueysville, were in West Garrett on business Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, longtime residents of this place, moved a few days ago to George's Creek, below Paintsville.

BANKERS ARRANGING REGIONAL MEETINGS

Studying New Legal and Economic Conditions Affecting Bank Management

STRESS PUBLIC RELATIONS

American Bankers Association Sponsor of Meetings as Part of Nationwide Program of Banking Development

PHILADELPHIA.—Fifteen hundred bankers from fifteen eastern states met here in January in a two day conference devoted to discussions on legislative, managerial, operating and public relations problems of the banking business.

"It is the purpose of these working conferences to bring to association members and other bankers a thorough knowledge of the changes in banking laws and rules, provide discussion of better public relations so that there shall be greater cooperation and understanding between the banker and his customers, and to give opportunity for a survey of the problems incident to the Government's competition with our chartered institutions," Mr. Fleming said in opening the meeting.

To Help Government Quit Banking

The discussions at the conference showed that the bankers are ready to make it easier for the Government to relinquish many of its emergency financial services as soon as possible by demonstrating how their institutions are able to render full banking facilities to the public on sound lines.

Bankers generally have recognized that in times of emergency the Government had to come to the assistance of the people where chartered institutions were unable to do so on account of such conditions, Mr. Fleming said.

On the other hand, he said, "we should survey all emergency lending measures of the Government to judge which of these activities can be properly and soundly taken over by banks and their respective communities."

"Confining the count only to the sections which affect practically all of us, I found there are forty-eight places where discretionary power is given," he said.

Bank Taxation and Solvency

Bank taxation was discussed by Charles H. Mylander of Columbus, Ohio, who declared that "the average American is vitally interested in taxation of banks because solvency may depend to a large degree upon the way in which the taxing power is exercised upon them."

To prove his point he cited earnings figures which showed that, in the year ended June 30, 1934, "for the United States as a whole, national banks used $14.89 out of each $100 of net operating earnings, before taxes, in payment of taxes; but in seven of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts the percentage of earnings used for taxes was above the average."

As an example of how far taxation can go, he quoted official figures showing that in 1934 a large number of small state banks paid on the average $34.20 of every $100 of operating profits for taxes.

WHEN BANK CROOKS SHOW PREFERENCES

The American Bankers Association reports that non-member banks suffer twice the percentage of burglaries and hold-up robberies as compared with members.

"Professional criminals often boast of having sense enough to dodge the far-reaching system of man hunting available to members, so long as there are other banks without this protection," it says.

FLOYD PERCENTAGE OF UNEMPLOYABLES LOW IN EAST KY.

Floyd county's percentage of unemployable persons responsible for families on relief was the lowest of any county in this section for the year 1935, figures released by George H. Goodman, Kentucky relief administrator, indicate.

Floyd county had 193 unemployable cases affecting 644 persons, or 1.5 percent of its population, as recorded by the 1930 census.

Pike county was third high in the state in the number of its unemployables. Pike had 400 unemployable persons affecting 1,201 of its population, or two percent of the entire population of the county.

Letcher county had 167 unemployable cases, affecting 630 persons, or 1.8 percent of its population. Other unemployable statistics for counties of this section are: Johnson, 127 cases, 370 affected, or 1.6 percent of population; Martin, 44 cases, 145 persons affected or 1.7 percent; Knott, 72 cases, 342 persons, or 1.6 percent of the total population.

Shelby, Simpson and Warren counties had the lowest unemployable percentage, which was 4 percent each. Wolfe county's percentage of 6.9 for its entire population was the state's highest, with Carlisle and Powell counties tied for second at 4.6 percent.

ESTILL

Last week's correspondence—Paydays at the Wells-Elkhorn Coal Company's office here are destined to be considerably smaller in the near future unless the mine gets back into its steady gait right away.

Several days have been skipped recently, and this is about the time of the year when a "slack run" so often hits the coal mines hereabouts. Naturally, everybody in this vicinity is hoping against hope that the slack-run season has not yet arrived; for Estill, like most other little towns in this region, is dependent upon the coal mines for its very existence.

Mrs. E. C. Osborne, of Norton, Va., who recently terminated a visit here with her husband, manager of the Wells-Elkhorn Coal Company's stores in this section, was no more than back home when she was called here by the illness of Mr. Osborne. He has been suffering from a severe cold or flu, but is somewhat improved.

Miss Dora Goble, one of the teachers in the graded school here, was visiting homefolks at Prestonsburg over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Castle, of this place, were visiting relatives in Paintsville over the week-end.

CONSTRUCTION

fallacy in the theory that low-type high-surfacing will suffice has been proved the weather which held this section in its grip last December until only a few weeks ago. In the thaw came the roads simply buckled and broke up like ice in a stream.

But it is not the intention of The Times to permit an argument with anybody about past highway construction methods as "shown up" by the recent freeze. What we are more interested in is the future. Present inconveniences and losses should make the needs for the future excruciatingly apparent.

These appear most painfully on trunk highways. The Mayo Trail and Route 80—in this county the Allen-Lacey highway—wherever unpaved are passable only at the driver's risk—which is great. Between Paintsville and Louisa and out on the road from Paintsville to Mt. Sterling these conditions prevail.

All of which points to the great necessity of paved trunk highways. Which puts "the finger" on that highly partial and unfair manipulation of highway matters which these years past has left a "missing link" in the Mayo Trail.

The new state administration promises a new deal in road matters, as in other affairs of paramount interest to the people. Such a turn of affairs is sorely needed and the promise Governor Chandler extends is, at least, very heartening.

From trunk highways branch roads radiate to reach out into the real Floyd county—out into the up-the-creek places, to farmers hemmed in by mud since the day the white man widened the Indian trail into a cleared space for his ox-wagon. Though it is beyond the state's resources to pave these roads at this time, the work toward making them fit for year-around motor travel should not be stopped. Aside from farm-to-market roads now under construction, attention of the Floyd county who knows his county or the stranger who inquires into the county's geography and possibil-ties cannot but be attracted to Left Beaver and Johns Creek, two of the county's richest sections, which to this day are in the mud. The work begun on Left Beaver is a good start, but a good finish also is needed, Johns Creek still hopes.

Talk of low-type surfacing for these roads, of course, brings us back to what has happened this winter to such routes. But such freezes are infrequent, and, if they were to be expected annually, what they would do to the roads would be as nothing to those who all these years have waded the mud or scaled hillsides when they traveled.

THE AMERICAN GUIDE

Through the American Guide, now in process of compilation, every community in the United States is offered the opportunity of getting valuable free advertising.

In Floyd county Mr. Sturgill, of Auxier, is The Guide representative. He is now working toward the assembling of all information dealing with Floyd county's history, resources, points of interest, interesting personalities, legends, transportation facilities—in fact, anything that would interest the stranger reading of or visiting Floyd county.

If you know anything or anybody of such interest it is to your own advantage and that of your county to report such information to Mr. Sturgill. This needs no further comment, since it should be evident that, if we are to attract tourists into this section, we must at least give them some idea of what they may expect when they get here. Other sections are availing themselves of this opportunity. We should do likewise. The service is free.

In order to assist Mr. Sturgill, the American Guide work as a whole and at the same time be of service to Floyd county, The Times invites its readers to submit through our office any material—in any form—which they think may be of interest. Address your letters either to The Floyd County Times or to Mr. Sturgill at Auxier.
