MILK ORDINANCE TO BE EFFECTIVE ON NOVEMBER 15

Buyers Must Meet Requirements,
Says Health Department and Sanitary Inspector

SUPPLY MUCH IMPROVED.

On November 15 the "City Milk Ordinance" passed by the city council some time ago will go into effect, according to M. V. Clark, sanitary inspector, and Dr. Marvin Ransdell, director of the Floyd county health department.

After this date, all milk sold within the limits of the city of Prestonsburg must have the grade of that milk supply placed upon the cap of each bottle of milk, the grade to be determined by the rules and regulations laid down by the State board of health, and supervised by the local health board.

In order to give all local dairymen every possible chance to meet the necessary requirements for the production of the highest grade of milk before the effective date of the ordinance has been put off from time to time. This time has been well spent. A vast improvement has been made in most all of the milk supplies, which might not otherwise have been accomplished.

When this ordinance goes into effect next month, it is believed that there will be three sources of grade "A" milk produced locally.

This ordinance is one advocated the nation over, and when once established, no one would ever think of giving it up.

Milk is one of our most important articles of food and, no doubt, can be the most unwholesome when not properly handled.

After the effective grading date, here are some of the things that every person may be sure of regarding all grade "A" milk produced and sold locally:

1. All cows have been tuberculin and abortion tested.
 2. Cows are being housed and being cared for in an approved dairy barn.
 3. Milk is being handled in an approved milk house, where nothing else may be kept or stored.
 4. All utensils are being sterilized by an approved method.
 5. No open toilets on premises.

After attending National Board meetings of the General Federation and State Board Meeting of all Kentucky's leading club women, Mrs. Wickliffe will have a wealth of club material to club women an affair to miss. The newly appointed chairman of American Citizenship, Mrs. S. A. Ooms, of Maytown, will outline her program as she gave it before the recent State Board which met in Louisville Oct. 1. This program met with so great response that the radio chairman asked that it be broadcast soon.

Final Returns in Nation- Wide "Grass Roots" Vote

New York, Oct. 22— Voters, 1,000,000 of them, residing in small towns and rural America, have registered a straw vote preference for Landon, with this result:

As between the three leading candidates:
Landon	594,183 (58.0 per cent)
Roosevelt	382,842 (37.4 per cent)
Lemke	46,848 (4.6 per cent)
Between Landon and Roosevelt only:
Landon	594,183 (60.8 per cent)
Roosevelt	382,842 (39.2 per cent)

The above standings are the final results in a nationwide Presidential straw vote poll conducted by some 3,000 weekly newspapers located in states throughout the country. Publishers Anticaster Service and The American Press, located here, served in the capacity of national straw vote headquarters to tabulate the national vote of state by state returns.

The 13 states wherein Roosevelt leads at the conclusion of the poll are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas and Utah. So comes to a close the weekly newspapers' most successful Presidential poll.

Bridge Destruction Seen As Passing Of Landmark

The whir of a winch, the wheeze of a blowtorch and the thundering roar of crashting steel denotes activity around the First street bridge once again, but not the activity that marked the "big day" in the life of the span that once was Prestonsburg's gateway to the "beyond" of neighboring communities and on to the outside world. Less than 12 years ago the noises of hundreds of clattering boards, whining steel rods and vibrating bridgework was the sign of business to merchants of romance to the younger generation of news to the "mooey", and of visitors to an almost isolated township, walled in by the inaccessibility of roads.

Meeting the train was a great event in the everyday life of Prestonsburg then. After a puffing, snorting engine had managed to wend its way by crag and bend with a magnificent (at least, it seemed as such) line of 11 or 12 coaches to halt momentarily at the town's entry it was usually greeted by most of the town's population en masse. Four trains ran daily—two "up" trains and two "down" trains; the "down" trains kept the merchants and lawyers busy and the "up" train kept society and gossip of a populace busy! The train that ran at night was most popular, as no social function could compete with it in gathering a crowd and many a good housewife excused herself from supper dishes to be among the local "400" that was usually present.

A merchant in business here stated the other day that in the two hours between the morning trains then he did more business than he does all day long now!

The bridge that linked us to our neighbors was built in 1907 by two sons of twins, A. J. and W. H. May, of Prestonsburg, and Lon and Ed Rogers, then of Pikeville. Later, J. M. Weddington bought an interest in this enterprise known as the Prestonsburg Bridge Company. It was operated as a toll bridge and sold to the county in 1912. Andy Stephens was toll keeper during the time it was operated as a toll bridge.

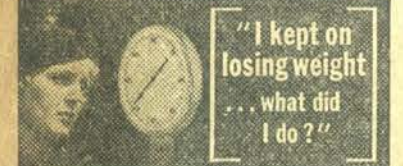

In contrast to the steam hoists used to erect the bridge, the H. L. Mayo Engineering Company are using heavy electrical hoists. It speaks the difference between two generations. The old bridge gave way to the two modern bridges erected in 1927. Its girders, denuded of the high regard in which they were held, will be used in some other construction job.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about Salad Mixers de Luxe.

LANSING, MICH. — About once in so often you meet the man—it's always a man—who knows how to make the perfect salad dressing, and on the slightest provocation does so. The trouble with this party is when you get him off salad dressings he's practically a total loss.

Nevertheless, a decent salad dressing—and a decent salad—are boons to humanity. The right commingling of astringent, bitterish green things with a smooth, bland dressing—there you have something. But often we are confronted by a monstrosity featuring whipped cream, nut kernels, sweet cheese, preserved fruit, even marshmallows or pickled ginger.

Such an atrocity is never a salad. Put a crust on it and it might pass for pie, but would be very low-grade pie.

Concerning Mr. Earl Browder.

HAVING been discouraged by a perhaps overzealous police force from speaking in Indiana, Earl Browder, one of the almost countless candidates for President, now threatens suits for false arrest.

Now, in Russia any man publicly advocating doing away with the existing national system and substituting some other system therefore would find himself in jail—or even in a worse fix—before he could say Jackovitz Robertsonoffski.

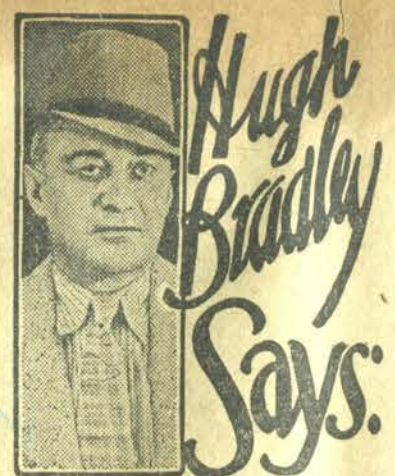

Cruelty to Animals. LATELY a dog was tried before a judge for biting a boy. And another judge was appealed to, that he save an elephant condemned to die. So some one proves that, through many centuries, animals were accused of high crimes—dogs, rats, pigs, oxen, roosters, storks, also ants, spiders, snakes, grasshoppers, dolphins, locusts, gadiflies, eels, and, being convicted, were burned, flayed, hanged, destroyed by slow torture.

Some so-called prognosticators go so far as to say that in their present condition the Giants will be lucky to finish in the first division next year. That five-run Yankee blast off Fitzsimmons in the final game proved he needs plenty of rest between starts.

Newspapers Vs. Spellbinders. IN MY reportorial youth nearly every newspaper, big or little, was bitterly partisan. We distorted facts and editorialized in news stories when dealing with the accused opposition. Otherwise we'd have been traitors to a sacred cause.

Currency Juggling. BEING frightfully smart to begin with, I know as much regarding currency juggling as the next fellow—which is precisely nothing at all.

Yanks Are Tops But Giants Rate Medal for Valor

PLENTY of people will tell you that the world champion Yankees are going to stay on the top of the baseball heap for some years to come—like their predecessors of the Ruthian age. And it looks as though plenty of people are going to be right.

The boys from the Yankee stadium are young and healthy. There's hardly a creak in a carload of them. The only spot where age insurance might be in order for Joe McCarthy is at second base and even the supposedly fading Tony Lazzeri drove in 111 runs during the American league season and had a batting average of .287.

Only Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey among the other regulars are older than twenty-eight. Dickey is a year under thirty, while Lou tops that age by three years.

So the Yanks can give Old Man Time a race for his mazuma for a few years at least. Incidentally Marse Joe doesn't have to be ashamed of the trades he made last winter when he decided to strengthen his club.

But on the other hand, the vanquished Giants need a lot of overhauling. Last June owner Stoneham said they wouldn't do. But the rest of the league by being woefully weak made a liar out of him.

While the praise for the World Series is being handed out, though, don't overlook the Giants. They did a magnificent job considering what they had to work with. Colonel Bill Terry battled as desperately for a lost cause as did that ancestor who fought for the Confederacy.

On paper the Giants were woefully outclassed by the Yankees, just as they were supposedly outclassed by two clubs in their own league—the Cubs and Cardinals. But they made a daring start by winning the opening game behind Hubbel's pitching.

That left one game to go for the Yanks to sweep the series. Even that didn't stop the Giants. Terry rallied his veterans and behind the lion-hearted pitching of Hal Schumacher, won the fifth game.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: ON PHILADELPHIA'S Sansom street the gossip is that Coach Harvey Harman will get the gate in his Christmas sock no matter what happens to Penn's football team this fall.

Joe Whitney won $8,000 from the Guests (Winston and Ray) when his Greentree team won the National Open polo title. He made one $1,000 wager while riding down the field three goals behind in the fifth period.

Friends Wonder Why Landis Ignored Stark

North Carolina fans are so vexed at Dr. Graham, the State university president who wishes to give free, public and limited aid to football players, that they may ask the legislature to investigate him.

Rutgers players (who performed in a practice affair against the Lions) say that Columbia's football team is being overrated in the papers.

Three-year-old Skippy Bartell was the most energetic of Giants' rooters. He was always fighting to get out there on the field and help the old man play shortstop.

His booking agent shortly will announce that Jesse Owens has changed his mind again and really will turn pro.

Germany is building four giant airships to transport its Olympic team to Japan in 1940 in three days instead of three weeks, the boat schedule.

Puttering Around the House— Time-Wasting Work of Putting Away Things Others Have Used

WHEN a family is orderly, no one has to do much puttering about. When the members are not particular where they put their things, it becomes the undesirable duty of some person to spend much time in just this very thing, puttering. Hours are wasted daily in such trivialities as gathering up newspapers spread about, picking up and putting away gloves, hats, scissors, thumbtacks, pencils, etc.

Left-Over Jobs. No person wants her time frittered away doing the left-over jobs of others. Nobody enjoys having a person puttering around, either.

Remedies Suggested. Mothers can teach their children to put their playthings away when through with them. This is the first step to take.

Adults should consider how to break themselves of the repetitive habit of leaving work they should do, to be completed by others.

hensible habit of leaving work they should do, to be completed by others. If they really determine to stop this bothersome fault, they will decrease the necessity of puttering about by the person who heartily dislikes the work, but who, for the sake of order prefers to do it rather than have disorder around.

Household Questions

It is better to water evergreens and shrubs well a few days before transplanting. They will be transplanted more successfully if full of moisture.

Cover small delphinium plants with excelsior or pine boughs before putting on dried leaves. They do not pack or stay damp as leaves do.

When ironing ecru linens always iron on the wrong side. Ironing them on the right side makes them look faded.

To polish a table that has become spoiled by hot dishes, apply a few drops of essence of peppermint with a clean cloth and rub briskly.

A teaspoonful vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

For Russian dressing, mix two tablespoons of chopped dill pickles, two tablespoons chopped ripe olives, two tablespoons chili sauce and one tablespoon of catchup to one-half cup of mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce or vegetable salads.

Never allow cold water to run into an aluminum pan while it is hot. If done repeatedly the rapid contraction of metal will cause pan to warp.

Salad dressings made from fruit juices and mixed with chopped dried or preserved fruits make delicious fillings for sweet sandwiches.

In washing painted woodwork use a pail of lukewarm water to which has been added about five tablespoons of kerosene oil. Wipe with a dry, clean cloth.

When whisk brooms have become worn, cut them down for sink brushes.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore BY Gordon Wilson Ph.D. WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE BOWLING GREEN, KY.

THE SMOKEHOUSE Armour, Swift and others may have a knack at saving all the pig, including the squeal, but they have almost destroyed a great institution, the smokehouse. The old smokehouse had left a fragrant memory. Literally, in some modern homes there is a special lumber room; we old timers made the smokehouse bear the burden—along with the loft, or attic, the loft over the buggy shed, and the large space under the corn-crib. Meat, of course, was the chief thing to be found in a smokehouse; that was its reason for being. But meat was not all. Soap grease in many a container, a barrel of two of lye soap, cured and preserved fruit, jars or cans of lard, sausage in sacks, sauerkraut in barrels or jars, and so on and on—there were the distinctive contents of the smokehouse. No hold of a sea going vessel ever held a more motley or useful array of things to eat and use. And everything had its odor: the rank, acid odor of soap grease, the alkaline smell of soap, the thick, rich odor of sauerkraut, and the indescribably fine smell of ham and bacon and smoked sausage. And, from the wood smoke that had been used to cure the meat, everything had in addition that true, smoky, smokehouse odor that every farm boy knows.

How often the smokehouse figured in the life of the people! It was carefully looked up every night to keep its treasures from being stolen. It was a sort of sign that the day's work was over when Mother began to wash the supper dishes, and called the youngest boy to see whether or the smokehouse was locked. When winter weather came on, nobody feared starvation, for the old smokehouse was at hand, stocked as for a famine. Even if coffee and sugar had run low, when the smokehouse was there for comfort to be had, the old standby was to be relied on.

Hog-killing was a huge event-house. It then assumed a position in the life of the old smokehouse. It then assumed a position worthy of a great institution. Long before daylight all arose heating water and ironing for the big day. We planned the scalding barrel and made a platform on which to scrub the hogs after they had been scalded, not even forgetting the grass sack over the mouth of the barrel to keep in the heat of the water and that added by the red hot irons. When everything was ready, the butchering began. You pale faced and bleemic ones must not feel that there was anything brutal about this event; it was just a necessary thing, the hurried and hurried. By the time the hogs were killed, some of the older men took some leaves from the fire and dashed them into the barrel. With sizzling and popping, and with the steam nose into the cold water air! Then came the scalding and scraping, followed by hanging up the heavy hogs. After these were thoroughly dressed, it was usually time for dinner. What we ate, the meat assumed a firmer condition, so that cutting out the pieces—a great art in those days—was greatly facilitated. During the afternoon the pieces of meat lay in the smokehouse, getting cold through and through, while the family busied itself with hard and sausage. The neighbors who had helped departed, carrying spare ribs, backbones, livers and hearts.

Rally Day exercises, held at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday, were in line with the cause of Christian education, the theme being "All Together to Learn and Do." Taking part in the exercises were: the beginners' class of Miss Dora Goble, Margaret Stephens, Dorothy Blackburn, Jane Carroll Hager, Belvair Friend, Alice Gray Burke, and James Goble. Offering for the day went for the cause of Christian education, about $10 being contributed by the Sunday School.

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

Apples are grown practically everywhere and are one of the least expensive fruits and were considered a valuable health asset before anyone thought of vitamins. They add variety and flavor to the diet, served raw, cooked as an individual dish or as a garnish for a platter. These recipes will aid you in serving apples often and in keeping the family appetite satisfied.

BREAKFAST APPLES

Wash and wipe 4 large tart apples, remove the cores and slice without removing the skins. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a frying pan; when hot, turn in the apples and cover immediately. Cook briskly for a few minutes, when delicately browned, turn over and brown on other side. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Serve hot with ham and eggs or sausage and griddle cakes.

APPLE GLAZE

6 or 8 apples. 1 1/2 cups sugar. 3/4 cup water. Juice and grated rind of 1/2 lemon. Cinnamon drops. Baked pie shell. Pare core and quarter apples. Cook slowly in syrup (made of sugar, water and lemon) until tender, but not mushy. Remove from syrup, drain apples and cook like jelly. For cinnamon flavor and red color add 1 tablespoon cinnamon drops. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Arrange cooled quartered apple quarters in baked pie shell or in tart shells. Pour enough syrup over it to glaze entirely. Place under flame for about 5 minutes or in hot oven for 10 minutes. Serve cold. If desired, top with vanilla ice cream.

APPLE CRUNCH

Fill a baking dish with peeled sliced apples. Sprinkle with tablespoon of cinnamon and the grated rind of 1 lemon. Add 2 1/2 cup of water and cover with the following mixture: 1 cup of flour and 1 cup of sugar blended with 1/2 cup of butter to a creamy consistency. Bake uncooked. Serve with a hard sauce made by blending until light, 1/4 cup butter, 1 cup confectioner's sugar and 1 tablespoon of buttermilk.

APPLE BETTY

Put in a buttered casserole a layer of apple sauce, then a layer crumbly made from toasted bread, stale cake, cobbler or Graham crackers. Repeat with apple sauce and crumbs. Top with a generous sprinkling of brown sugar, bits of butter and cinnamon. Bake until hot through. This may be turned into a refrigerator dish by using whipped cream instead of butter. Let stand over night.

APPLE DUFF PUDDING

2 cups flour. 1 cup milk. 1 egg. 3 cups sliced apples. 2 teaspoons baking powder. 2 tablespoons melted shortening. Salt. Mix into a batter and add the sliced apples. Put into a greased pudding dish and steam 2 hours. Serve hot with hard sauce.

OCTOBER 27 DESIGNATED AS UNITED STATES NAVY DAY

Each year, one day is designated as Navy Day, in order that the people of the United States may pay a deserved tribute to past deeds of the U. S. Navy. This year, October 27 is Navy Day, and the Navy is holding open house for all our citizens thru out the world. In China, the Philippines, Honolulu, Panama, the West Indies, and all the seaports and shore stations in the United States, visitors are being shown every detail of the Navy's complex organizations. October 27 was selected as Navy Day because it is the birthday of the United States Navy. It was on this day in 1775, that the first resolution authorizing naval vessels, was introduced into Congress. This date is also the birthday of one of our greatest presidents, The late Roosevelt, who spent much of his life establishing a sound naval policy for the United States.

Those who live inland as you do are apt to forget that the nation has a navy. This is natural, for there is little opportunity for you to come in contact with anything pertaining to the Navy. If you do happen to think about it, you probably feel that the Navy is something which exists merely for use in case of war, and as the possibility of war is remote, you probably feel it is a waste of time to think about the naval forces of the United States.

Although the Navy is extremely important during war, it exists primarily to keep us out of war. Nations are a great deal like people. A man who is able and willing to protect himself is seldom called upon to do so, but the man or boy who will not or can not stand up for his rights is continually pushed aside. So it is with nations, as the actions of Japan, Italy and Germany with regard to some weaker nations, will aptly demonstrate.

The record which our navy has made during the wars this country has been engaged in, is one of which any citizen may justly be proud. The record it has made and the good it has accomplished during peace is even more impressive, although little is known of its peace time activities by the general public.

The Navy's role as a humanitarian agent is one which is never ending and, if measured in the lives and property which has been saved, is well worth the amount of money which has been spent to provide and keep a Navy. It is an acknowledged fact that the Navy's errands of mercy have saved more lives than its guns have ever destroyed. Air planes, pleasure yachts, fishing boats and so on are continually being lost at sea, and regardless what the Navy is doing at the time, enough ships are spared to thoroughly search for the missing craft. During earthquakes, hurricanes and similar disasters, the Navy is always the first to appear on the scene to render necessary assistance and remains until the local authorities are able to control the situation. Regardless of race, creed or color, whenever a community has been overtaken by some disaster, the Navy has been ready and has furnished invaluable assistance in restoring order, combating disease and providing food and supplies.

Navy Day this year comes at a particularly appropriate time. Now, never before should the citizens of the country give serious thought leaders with its citizens secure and in relation to other countries of the ranks of the nations of the world, world. All are familiar with con where we would be continually at the mercy of the stronger nations Far East today; and although every that are struggling to obtain a world intelligent person is against the leadership.

United States becoming involved in another foreign war, whenever such conditions exist, that some unforeseen incident that would involve us cannot be overlooked. Our entry into the last war was caused because Germany felt sure we would never fight because of our complete unpreparedness. Because of this belief, Germany kept on disregarding our rights until, if we were to maintain our self respect, we could do nothing else but declare war. As a result of that war, and of the efforts of certain far seeing officers of our government, notably Franklin D. Roosevelt, our country is no longer so badly unprepared to defend itself.

Navy Day has been set aside to bring the United States Navy to the people of the United States in order that they may think about it and decide upon its usefulness to the nation. To you, as the future leader of your community, it is particularly important that you give serious thought to the problem of national defense. Future security and happiness of the nation depends upon the condition and readiness of the Army and Navy of the United States. Upon you rests the decision of whether the United States will continue in its course as one of the world of the country give serious thought to the position of the United States prosperous, or retire to the road in relation to other countries of the ranks of the nations of the world, world. All are familiar with con where we would be continually at the mercy of the stronger nations Far East today; and although every that are struggling to obtain a world intelligent person is against the leadership.

Safety On the Highways

Seldom does a citizen take a long automobile journey without coming home with some story of danger as he tells how he narrowly escaped injury when another vehicle forced him off the road or barely averted crashing into his car.

The fact is that something must be done about highway accidents but nobody knows what should be done. Should high speed automobiles be outlawed? Few people agree that this would be the right remedy although most of them acknowledge that speeding is the cause of most accidents.

Of course, one way highways would cut down the accidents but cost of roads of this nature is prohibitive in many areas. Rigid enforcement of all traffic regulations would also help but too often the highway patrolman is not available because of the simple truth that he cannot be everywhere.

One contribution to safety on the highways, however, can be made by every motorist. You can obey traffic regulations, observe warning signs and drive courteously at all times. This is what everyone of us can do to aid in meeting a dangerous situation although the objection immediately comes up that all the care possible will not save a considerate driver from a fool on the roads.

The Campaign Is Closing

The campaign of 1936 is now in its final stages with both candidates and their supporters confident and most of its history completed. President Roosevelt and Governor Landon have travelled extensively through a number of states, where party strategy dictated major appeals and in less than two weeks the voters of the nation must decide who is to be the winner.

Naturally, there is much partisan feeling and men and women, under the stress of political battling, have become overwrought. They have made foolish charges and predictions. There has been some ill-feeling engendered but most of it will blow away with the count of the ballots. Luckily for the nation most of the dire prophecies will not come true, regardless of who is elected.

HOW TO AVOID FIRES

Now that Fire Prevention Week has passed and the people of this county have settled back with the conviction that after all, it was just another one of those kind of weeks, it might not be amiss to make a few reflections in the hope of saving some lives in this country during the coming winter.

Two-thirds of the fires that occur in this country blaze up in dwellings and are responsible for the loss of 7,000 lives, half of them children. Statistics show that there are eight major causes of fires in the homes: rubbish, defective chimneys, combustible roofs, defective heating apparatus, matches and carelessness of man and nature, is a task that facts and hot ashes.

Householders might keep the list in mind and by taking care in regard to these dangers avoid a fire which might cause death. They should remember that individual carelessness is the greatest menace to safety, whether from fire or other hazards and should not ignore safeguards to prevent fatal mistakes.

Let's Start Them Right

There was a day when every young American was assured that he had a chance to become President of the United States and if he failed, that, at the worst, he would probably make a million dollars.

The result of this teaching has probably been evil. The generations that have grown on such notions have been inclined to grab for themselves and get all that the law allows and some of the fruit that the law prohibits.

It is about time that education include the idea that an individual attains satisfaction not by getting everything or the highest honor but by serving society in his or her place with distinction. The development of men and women into intelligent creatures, with an understanding of man and nature, is a task that most of us complete late in life, if at all. Maybe, by starting early with the youngsters, we could help them attain a greater goal earlier in life, and that we admit, is what life is intended to accomplish.

Same will apply to restaurants or any place that sells milk. Permits to be furnished by local health department.

THE TELEPHONE RATE REDUCTION

A comparison of the fundamental features of the Company's rate proposal which has been approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission

LOCAL RATE REDUCTION

From 80% to 90% of the Company's customers in Kentucky will find substantial decreases in their rates for local telephone service, beginning with November bills.

The total amount of the subscribers' local rate reduction is $516,000 annually.

Telephone service will be made available to many families who are not now telephone subscribers.

As a result of the reduction approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission on October 1st, the general level of exchange rates will be lower than at any time during the past ten years and, at most exchanges, the level will be lower than at any time since 1919.

The number of new telephone subscribers is increasing rapidly due to improved purchasing power, and this, together with reduced monthly rates and lower connection charges, should result in greater telephone value than ever before.

Existing subscribers will find many opportunities for increasing their facilities through the lower hand set charges and the elimination of monthly charges on jacks or wall outlets.

This reduction which the Company has proposed, and which the Commission has approved, reduces the Company's earnings on its investment in the State to an amount far below that which is necessary to produce a fair rate of return.

Only the strictest economies in investment and maintenance, made possible by the elimination of free service, together with the small amount of additional toll revenue which is expected, will enable the Company to build its rate of return nearer to the amount allowed by law.

ELIMINATION OF "FREE SERVICE"

The Company's toll rates, in effect since the establishment of the telephone business between most of the Company's exchanges in Kentucky, will be uniformly applied between all exchanges more than five miles apart, beginning November 1st.

The expense of furnishing long distance service, and the fact that its predominant use comes from a small proportion of telephone users, have required that a specific charge be made for each message. To impose the cost upon all users for the benefit of the few has been universally recognized as an inequitable practice.

The Wisconsin Commission held, in 1926 that the company giving flat rates has a right, as a matter of law, to establish a toll rate in lieu of free service between its exchanges in two cities a considerable distance apart.

The Kansas Commission held, in 1923 that the collection of a toll charge for calls from a suburban exchange to a neighboring city is the most satisfactory, as well as the cheapest for the subscriber and is fair to all.

Free service, in line with the foregoing, has been uniformly held to constitute unfair discrimination.

The Kentucky Public Service Commission Act, creating the Commission, requires the elimination of such discrimination.

This Commission accordingly has held that free service in Kentucky is a discrimination against many counties and cities in the State and against a majority of the subscribers; that it is illegal, in violation of §3952-32 of the Kentucky statutes, and that it should be abolished.

A clear understanding of the facts set forth in this comparison is, in the Company's opinion, essential to a proper recognition of the benefits accruing to the telephone using public under the order of the Kentucky Public Service Commission.

The Company is gratified that the way is now open for a more widespread enjoyment of telephone service and that this has been accomplished without litigation and the delay and great expense which would have been incurred.

Species of Arborvitae

There are five species of true arborvitae, known to the botanists as thuja, but more generally spelled thuya, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times. This is an ancient Greek name given to some resinous tree or shrub and its meaning is not understood. One of the best known species is Thuja occidentalis, erroneously called white cedar in some Eastern states where it is native. It is found in Canada, and south to North Carolina on the Eastern Coast and to Illinois in the Mississippi Valley. The normal type attains a height of sixty feet, with a slender pyramidal growth and straight central shaft which makes the tree a favorite with lumbermen seeking telegraph or telephone poles. Like the oriental species, Thuja orientalis, the American Thuja occidentalis has many segregated and named forms, at least fifty. Some of these are very dwarf, with two distinct kinds of foliage.

Early Steel Manufacturing

Kane's "More First Facts" says that steel manufacturing is claimed to have been accomplished in 1723 by Samuel Higley, of Simsbury, Conn., and Joseph Dewey, of Hebron, Conn., both of whom are believed to have converted small quantities of bar iron into steel. A slab of cast plow steel was rolled by William Woods at the steel works of Jones and Quigg in Pittsburgh in 1846 and was shipped to John Deere, plow-maker, of Moline, Ill.

First Doctor in Virginia Colony

The first doctor in the Virginia colony was Laurence Bohune, who arrived in 1610 and was killed in 1622 when the vessel "Margaret and John" was attacked by Spanish ships. There may have been doctors attached to previous expeditions but these cannot be considered to have practiced in this country. The first doctor in New England was Dr. Samuel Fuller, who arrived on December 21, 1620, on the Mayflower.

STEPHENS CHEER LEADER AT UNIVERSITY OF KY.

By James Goble

Leading cheers and 15,000 football fans and spectators, posing for a picture with a young Wildcat, or leading students in a victory march at the University of Kentucky's Stoll stadium at Lexington, are only few of the college activities of 20-year-old James Stephens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephens, Jr., of Prestonsburg.

As cheer leader for the second straight year at the University, Mr. Stephens, flanked by three assistants, cavorts on the gridiron of Stoll field on football days, leading songs and yells to inspire the University of Kentucky Wildcat footballers onward.

At other times the versatile Mr. Stephens is busily engaged in becoming one of the present-day undergraduates on the University campus. Ranking near the top among an enrollment of more than 3,000, as far as social affections are concerned, he fills many offices other than that of cheer leader.

In the field of drama, "Steve" is a member of the Stricker Literary dramatic society, and is connected with the Ginkgo theatre. He is secretary of Sigma Chi fraternity, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, and is associated with Delta Kappa Alpha. He is listed in the rolls of the select Inter-Fraternity Council, men's student government body, as an active member.

In the military department he is manager of the R. O. T. C. and varsity rifle teams and a second lieutenant in the Infantry Reserve, U. S. A. As a newspaper writer, he is associated with the staff of the Kentucky Kernel, campus semi-weekly publication.

Before entering the University of Kentucky in 1934, Mr. Stephens was graduated from the Kentucky Military Institute at Lyndon, Ky., after winning among other honors, the distinction of being the best drilled cadet. Prior to his admission at the institute, he was graduated from the Prestonsburg graded schools in 1929. He will be graduated from the University with an A.B. degree in journalism in '38.

With feed prices high, many farmers are culling their poultry, keeping only the pullets that are early maturing, well developed, strong and vigorous. Fewer birds given better care are more profitable than large flocks poorly fed and housed.

Bindweed or morning glory came through the dry season literally with flying colors. This pest probably did better this year than in most normal seasons. Occasional cutting of the weed seems to encourage it, but constant cultivation tends to kill it.

INEXPENSIVE CUTS OF MEAT ARE EXCELLENT WHEN PROPERLY COOKED

If the homemaker uses inexpensive cuts of meat, can they be made appetizing?

It's all in how they are cooked, in the opinion of the Home Economics department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. The solution is in proper cooking and a clever use of seasonings.

Money saving cuts of meat are beef chuck, rump, flank, round or shoulder, shoulder and breast of veal or lamb, and shoulder of pork. The tougher cuts require moist heat and slow cooking, so braising is suggested for cooking round or chuck.

Season the meat with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and brown in a small amount of fat. Then place in a deep baking dish, surrounded with vegetables, add seasonings and brown onion slices and enough water to half cover the material. Cover closely and bake in a very slow oven from one to four 1 1/2 hours, until tender. It may also be cooked on top of the stove if care is used to keep the water below boiling.

Roasts should be cooked slowly, because it gives them a better flavor, a more uniform degree of doneness and less shrinkage. Tests made in the home economics laboratory showed that roasts cooked at high temperature shrank five times as much as the one cooked at a low temperature. It was also found that searing results in greater shrinkage despite the popular opinion to the contrary.

Meat is highly desirable in the daily diet; one third of a pound of boneless meat per normal adult is certainly not injurious. Meat is high in iron, phosphorus and copper, and in complete protein.

National Bank Growth
Comptroller of the Currency O'Connor announced recently that total deposits of the 5,374 national banks in the United States on June 30, 1936, the date of the last call made for statements of condition, aggregated $26,200,453,000. The figure is a new high record for national banks, exceeding by $1,340,998,000, or 5.39%, the amount reported as of March 4, 1936, the previous high record. The current figures show also that deposits increased $3,682,207,000, or 16.35%, over the amount reported as of June 29, 1935, the date of the corresponding call a year ago.

Approximately 200 persons attended the program given by the band at the close of the first of October. The band has greatly improved since last year and Mr. Elliott hopes to make it even better. Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Hatcher, Mrs. Zula Ruby and Emma Laddie, Misses Katharine Chandler and Virginia Hays were home for the weekend in Whitesburg, guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Louis. Mr. Louis will be remembered as the former principal of Whitesburg high. He is now principal of the Fleming high school, Fleming, Ky.

Mr. Howard made a business trip to Whitesburg this weekend. Miss Gail Slater is very busy with a deep cold. Both glee clubs joined in working her a speedy recovery. The senior class is having a party on Friday night. This year this high and mighty group of formal ladies bedsacks itself in royal blue and white. How is that for loyalty. A class that has the choice of any combination of colors, chooses the good old royal blue and white of old Betsy Layne high. The Home Ec Club program committee met and decided that the program for the year would be "Around the World With Home Home Economics."

LACKEY

The Mothers' Club met in Whitesburg, Sept. 30, at the home of Mrs. Merrill. The following members were present: Mesdames Chas. Seretan, J. E. Dwyer, E. M. McVee, E. M. Murray,

M. M. Collins, H. H. Hornsby, T. M. Hatcher, W. J. Hatcher, T. J. Chandler, Raymond Turner, Chas. Sturgill.

The Mothers' Club has been busy some time on a quilting project. They have recently completed a very beautiful quilt which they presented to Mrs. Thomas Hatcher, who is teaching in Lackey high school. They are now busy in work on another quilt which will be given to Mrs. J. E. Dwyer, of Garrett.

The following members of the Home Economics class, Lackey high school, paid a most educational visit to the Pikeville Bakery on Friday. Those in the party were Misses Cora Reed, Ina Walker, Thelma Hays, Laura Marie Hays, America Robertson, Norelle Martin and Rebecca Prater. Joe Dyer and Margaret Hopkins acted as chaperones for the party.

Miss Sylvia Prater, who is teaching sixth grade at Betsy Layne, spent the weekend in Lackey.

Misses Katharine Chandler and Virginia Hays were home for the weekend from Pikeville College.

Mrs. Thomas Hatcher, Mrs. W. T. Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. Beckham Combs and Mary Jeannette, spent Saturday in Huntington, W. Va.

The Lackey ball team, which gives promise of affording us some excellent playing during the season, will play its opening game Oct. 17, at 7:30 o'clock in the new gymnasium. The opposing team on this occasion will be Auslor. Immediately after the game at 8:30 there will be a pie supper in the school auditorium, to which every one is cordially invited.

Members of the Lackey high school and junior high met Friday, October 9. A delightful program was given by Charles Hughes. Following the program Cora Reed and Charles Hughes were chosen cheer leaders for the year.

BONANZA

Ellis Hale, high school principal here, has had the school radio reinstated. And the fact that Bonanza listening center No. 13 seems to have no effect on the programs being received.

Mr. Leeley's basketball team played a game with Hollie Branch team on the Bonanza court Thursday afternoon, and were defeated by a small margin.

County Agent S. L. Isbell visited school Thursday evening, last week, and met with members of the high school and advanced grades for the purpose of organizing the 4-H Club. Unusual interest was taken in the reorganization. Officers will be elected at next meeting.

Approximately 10 extra pens have been added to the number of NYA workers here, which program is being sponsored by M. A. Stanley.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Stepp, of Whitesburg, visited Mrs. Stepp's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Short, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Spradlin and family were guests of Mr. Spradlin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Spradlin, over the weekend.

Sawdy pulled a moment at his mustache. "No hurry," he said reflectively. "It's early yet for him. If he's our man, he's got a pocketful of money to blow." He thought a minute further. "Look here, Scotch! Tell our boys over there at the bar to string out quiet and meet back of the barn. Watch your chance. Speak around to the hitch rack and get the sorrel down to the barn on an old feed-bill claim. I'll tackle Barney in the saloon and see what chance there is to gettin' him down there. Got a rope ready?"

"I have." McAlpin joined the men at the bar. Sawdy slipped the back door and, half a block down the alley, walked out into River street and down to the Red Front saloon.

But from the moment the big adventurer stepped out of the back door of one saloon and in at the front door of the other, a curious change took place. He had left Spotts' place sober—Sawdy was in fact a very moderate man. He strode into the Red Front reeling.

The bar was well filled. Sawdy saw at a glance that among the men lined up there were a number of town loafers who never drank except at somebody's expense. When Sawdy caught sight of Redstock with the loafers around him, inference was swift and correct. Barney had money.

The saloonkeeper, Harry Boland, foxy-eyed and alert at the head of the bar, saw Sawdy stagger in through the green baize; he watched the big fellow closely. Sawdy zigzagged back towards the loafers among whom Barney was holding forth.

Boland, a man of ripe experience in appraising all stages of intoxication, was suspicious, since Henry Sawdy was no drunk; Boland had never before seen him intoxicated. But Sawdy was an artist and did not make the mistake of the actor who plays the sober man trying to appear drunk. Sawdy was the drunken man trying to appear sober.

He greeted Barney gravely, then ordered drinks for everybody in Barney Redstock's honor. Having lingered over the round, Sawdy cast his eye approvingly upon the thirsty crowd, passed the forefinger of his right hand thoughtfully under each wing of his mustache in turn, drew from a vest pocket a gold double eagle, and made a general proposal.

"I'll match any man here for twenty-dollar gold pieces." It was a fairly safe offer, because he well knew all the loafers put together could not raise twenty dollars. But he had an object in view.

Barney, after some shilly-shallying, accepted the challenge. He asked Boland to lend him a gold piece. When Boland produced a twenty-dollar coin and tossed it out to Barney, it did not take Sawdy long to figure out that Barney had money and that it was in the keeping of the saloonkeeper. Sawdy, notoriously lucky at matching, lost out after several trials; he quit forty dollars to the bad. But he had Barney greatly inflated by his triumph, with the whole room crowding eagerly around the contestants.

After a round of drinks at Barney's charge, Sawdy brought the talk around to a fine-looking sorrel outside at the hitch rack. Barney claimed it. Sawdy wanted to buy it. Barney demurred—it wasn't for sale.

Boland heard the talk. He drew Barney to the rear end of the bar. "Sell it to him, you fool," whispered Boland. "Don't you see he's drunk as a fiddler? You can get twice what the horse is worth."

Thus encouraged, Barney stepped out of doors with Sawdy, followed by a little circle of the curious.

The horse was gone. This fact caused no great excitement; Sawdy suggested he had got loose and strayed up or down the street and that they take a look around to find him. The curiosity of the crowd weakened, and they re-entered the saloon, hoping for another chance to get a drink. Sawdy and Barney walked down the street together, wrangling as they went over the mischance and the merits of the missing horse. As the pair passed McAlpin's barn it occurred to Sawdy they had better look in and ask for information.

CHAPTER X

A hanging lantern lighted the barn gangway dimly. Sawdy's call for a hostler was answered by McAlpin himself, who, lantern in hand, ambled in his peculiar gait briskly forward.

"Hello, Mac," exclaimed Sawdy, waving like a tall tree in a number four breeze. "We're looking for Barney's horse," he continued gruffly—"got loose up the street just now—seen anything of a stray?"

McAlpin, raising his lantern looked at Redstock. "Why, yes, I seen a stray," he admitted sulkily.

"Was it a sorrel?" asked Sawdy with some hope.

"It was a sorrel, Sawdy; saddled and bridled. What about it?"

"It's probably Barney's horse. Let's see it. Where is it?"

McAlpin jerked his head back over his shoulder. "In the box stall. Your horse, Barney?"

"Sure, it's my horse."

"Right this way, Barney," returned McAlpin. "Put out your cigars, boys, and come along with me," he added, lantern in hand. He scuttled down the gangway, Redstock and Sawdy after him, stopped at the stall box, hung his lantern on a high gangway hook, unlatched the stall door, and pointed within. "There's your horse, Barney. Maybe I better give him a bit of oats before you go. . . . No? Water then?"

Redstock and Sawdy had stepped into the stall with McAlpin. The liveryman led the horse out. Redstock started to follow; Sawdy laid a hand on his shoulder. "Just a minute. I want to talk to you, Barney. We'll join you in a minute, Mac. Get out the black bottle. But leave the lantern."

"What's up?" asked Redstock, eyeing Sawdy closely, and always suspicious.

Sawdy was standing backed against one side of the box stall. "Barney," he said in confidential fashion, "I'd like to have just a little horse-to-horse talk with you."

"What'd you mean, horse-to-horse talk?" snapped Redstock.

"Just this: Do you feel just exactly right, leavin' your money with Harry Boland?"

"What do you mean?"

"Do you feel safe? I ask you as man to man, Barney, and an old friend, do you feel safe, leaving a roll with Boland?"

Barney fumbled mentally. "Why shouldn't I?" he countered bluntly.

"I'd hate to see you, after this trouble you've had, lose your money with Harry Boland," persisted the cowman. "I'll tell you honest—and you can tell the critter himself if you like—I wouldn't never leave five hundred of my money with Harry Boland."

"Never had it to leave, did you?"

"Well, no foolin', Barney, wouldn't do it. So that's what I say, as man to man—keep your money in the bank, not in a dive. Have you got a receipt for your money?"

"No."

"How much money are you leavin' with him?"

"None of your damned business, that's how much. I'm headin' up the street. Get out of the way."

"Don't get sore, Barney. I'm meanin' the best for you. Just wait a minute an' I'll walk up the street with you—gettin' kind of thirsty myself. Did you hear, Barney, about Bill Denison's place gettin' burned down?"

"I heard about a fire out that way—what about it?" demanded Redstock.

"Why, nothin'—nothin' at all. But, Barney, this is why I wanted to talk to you: There's folks here in town that don't know you as well as I do, are mean enough to say you know a lot more about that fire than you want to tell. I claim they're wrong—what'll I tell 'em?"

"Tell 'em to go to hell."

"Suppose they won't do it, Barney?" asked Sawdy calmly.

Redstock shuffled angrily. "Look here, Sawdy. You can't bunk me any more. If they don't want to go to hell, you go for 'em."

With this suggestion, Redstock started again for the stall door. Sawdy's hand came down a bit heavier on Barney's shoulder. The slippery fellow tried to jerk away when Sawdy's fingers sank deep into the coat and shirt of his victim. "Barney," he protested solemnly, "I don't like to see an old friendship broken up by thoughtless words."

"A hell of a friendship," snorted Redstock.

"Barney, I want to be friends with you. What's the facts about that fire?"

With a volley of oaths, Redstock tore loose from Sawdy's grasp, backed hurriedly away, and tried to spring over the side wall. Sawdy was too quick. He jumped to him, caught him by the arm, and slammed him halfway across the stall. Barney landed on his hands and knees, sprang to his feet, and faced his old-time acquaintance with wicked eyes. In the dim light of the lantern, high in the gangway, Sawdy caught the flash of the blade of a knife—lying, Mexican fashion, in Barney's right hand.

Both were quick. Redstock, smaller and lighter, could strike and spring like a wildcat, but he faced a foe who, though larger and heavier, was esteemed among his fellows as one hard to corner. Sawdy held the door side of the stall with his back to the light. He could see Redstock's eyes flashing green. Redstock wanted to get close enough to Sawdy to cut him and jump through the door; but he feared the terrific grip of the cowman's fingers on his wrists before he should get the knife into play.

Sawdy carried his gun—Redstock had left his own with Boland—but he disdained to use it on a partly unarmed man. It was no part of his program to get himself embroiled with the law by shooting the criminal; what he and his cronies wanted from Redstock was information.

It took only an instant for Sawdy to perceive that he could not safely hold his stand in front of the stall door. The lantern light was too uncertain—he could not follow Redstock's eyes—part of the time he could hardly follow his jumpy steps.

In a moment, both men, one big, the other small, were jumping about the stall like boxers stripped for the ring. But Sawdy, though big, was the fastest on his feet among the cowmen that rode the Gunlock ranges. He had little alcohol aboard, was naturally as quick as a flash, and knew he was facing the most dangerous man with a knife along the Spanish Sinks. Ten youthful years spent among Mexican bandits, together with a lean and jumpy physical make-up, had given Barney Redstock the name of a mean man with a knife, and Sawdy had no intention of adding to the outlaw's reputation as a killer, if he could help it.

The fight was in the lap of the gods. A misstep or a foot slip might end it any second. Sawdy was hoping his comrades secreted out in the corral would hear the scuffle and come in. But he was just stubborn enough not to call for help.

Barney, enraged at his plight, was breathing hard, and wind was too precious to waste in words. This silent struggle for the one slight advantage that would end the fight went on to the music of jerky breaths and nimble footing. It was soon a question as to whose wind would give out first—Sawdy, heavier, was at a disadvantage in endurance. While they feinted and jumped about, his foot slipped.

Barney saw the opening. He lunged forward. Sawdy instinctively whirled sidewise and threw up his knee to save his stomach. The savage thrust of Barney's knife caught the calf of his leg. As the cowman went down, his fingers gripped Barney's wrist. With a mere twist of the deadly grip learned long ago in Panhandle knife fights, he snapped like matches the two bones of Barney's forearm.

The wiry outlaw screamed. He was through; the rear gangway doors were flung open, and the confederates came running in from the corral.

From the darkness of the box stall came only the swish of hard breathing and the oaths and cries of Barney. Lefever grasped the ball of the lantern and threw the light rays within.

"Henry!" he yelled in alarm. "What's a-matter, pard? What's wrong?" He unlatched the gate of the stall as he called and hastened inside with Scott and Page at his heels. McAlpin ran down from the office. It was a moment before Lefever could make out just what was happening on the floor, as Barney, half choked, writhed under the remorseless grip that closed his windpipe. Sawdy, spread out on his stomach, lay, a huge bulk, with one arm over his antagonist. Only his heavy breathing indicated life. "Henry!" exclaimed Lefever. "What the hell's happened?"

"Nothing's happened yet, John. Look at my leg. Where's his knife?"

"God a-mighty! It's in your leg, Henry."

Lefever started to draw it out. "Hold on, John! Don't touch that till you get a tourniquet on. Who's here?" His heavy bloodshot eyes turned on Scott. "Bob! Look-see whether he's slit an artery or a vein. Hold the lantern there, John."

Scott found blood spurting from the wound. He fashioned a tourniquet from a thong of rawhide.

"Get up and get Carpy, quick!" muttered McAlpin to Page. "What your moomin' about? Henry is bad cut. Run, Ben!"

Turning to the prostrate cowman while Scott twisted the tourniquet, McAlpin, gripping Redstock, gave orders to Sawdy; the liveryman always took the stage. "Henry!" he shouted, in his excitement. "Lay right where you are. Don't stir till Carpy comes. Why didn't you call for help?" he thundered at Sawdy.

"Ain't never learned how yet," retorted the wounded man majestically.

Carpy reached the box stall ten minutes later.

The doctor held up the lantern. "Hell's bells!" he exclaimed to McAlpin and the hostler. "Don't leave the man lying in this dirt. Henry,"—he knelt at Sawdy's head—"what have they been doing? Who stuck you?"

"Doc," declared the notorious bachelor, "you might say I stuck myself. Sew me up and send the bill to my father-in-law after I get married, will you?"
