Akers Trial Begins Wednesday; Murder Charges Dismissed

Testimony of the prosecution witnesses was being heard in the trial of Hillard Akers charged with the fatal wounding of A. G. Turner, mine foreman at the Jack's Creek Coal Co., near Wheelwright Jct. on September 20. The court adjourned until Thursday with a number of witnesses yet to be heard. Previous to the Akers trial the court on Wednesday tried Joe Elam, age 22, indicted that morning by the grand jury for robbery. Elam was caught coming out of J. W. Campbell's store at Garrett with six dollars in one hand and a broom in the other near 11:30 p. m. Tuesday night. The next morning he was sentenced to four years in the state reformatory before 10:30 a. m.

COX TRIAL

A Floyd county jury heard the trial of Charlie Cox on the charge of murdering Asa Motley, in a day and night session Tuesday. The case was tried once before in the Wolfe county circuit court at Campton and, with a Clarke county jury empanelled to hear the case, the result was a hung jury. The Commonwealth was then granted a change of venue because the defendant was related to the county judge, the sheriff and the circuit clerk of Wolfe county.

According to the evidence presented in the shooting terminated a card game in Hazel Green. The victim was on a week-end visit with his wife's relatives when the slaying occurred on May 16. The defense claimed self-defense. Witnesses swore that Motly was unarmed.

Johnson claims that the shot was accidental, it is said. Jonsen told authorities that Kelly "was trying to make me take him to Wheelwright Junction. The Blackcats accounted for their thirteenth win at the expense of Virgie on the preceding night with a score of 24-16.

TEACHERS MEET HERE FEBRUARY 6

Last Meeting in Paintsville; Dr. Braden in Address to Teacher Gathering

The Big Sandy school executives and teachers, in their January meeting at Paintsville Thursday night, Jan. 14, selected Prestonsburg as the site of their next meeting on February 9. According to the Association rule, a meeting is held each month in a different place each time.

The organization is composed of teachers and school officials from Pike, Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, Johnson and Morgan counties. Approximately 200 teachers attended the Paintsville meeting held in the M. E. Church, North, located on Main street.

Principal speaker of the evening was Dr. Arthur Braden, president of Transylvania College, Lexington.

Dr. Braden spoke of man's speed in producing inventions and the fast pace in which the present generation is living. He said, "Man is inventing with such speed that he may become endangered of being consumed by the speed of his own invention." He cited reckless driving of automobiles along the highways as a good example.

One of the points stressed by Dr. Braden was, "Man must school his character" in reference to the vast number of inventions of destruction or those that might be converted, such as airplanes, into machines of destruction. "Man must teach himself to want to derive the good benefits of his inventions and abhor its road uses," he said.

Ishmael Triplett, superintendent of city schools here, announced Thursday that the meeting here will be devoted to discussing the forming of a new high school curriculum that will enable a high school student to choose his profession and go to work immediately after graduation.

'Blackleg' Trial Postponed New Indictment Returned

Approximately two hundred men in the indictment of syndicalism are still at large were here Monday to witness the trial of Troy Cole whom the prosecution elected to try, first, of the twenty-three charged with 'Blackleg' activities or whippings.

Cole was to be tried on the charges of "Confederating and Banning," "Criminal Syndicalism" and "Breaking and Entering."

Monday morning the grand jury returned an additional indictment against him and a trial.

Continuation of the "Breaking and Entering" charge, court Attorney W. R. Prater, Salyersville, one of the defense counsel in the famous Mills cult murder at Inez sometime ago, was here Monday in his half of Carl Hall, he stated. Mr. Prater said that Carl Hall took a list of 93 names of unemployed men who were not getting due consideration for jobs on relief works and in a short time obtained work for about 80 of this number. This, Mr. Prater explained, was the beginning of the unemployment league in Magoffin county. The record of Hall's ability to place the men in work presented a very one that was not a large. LEGISLATURE MEET ENDED SAT., JAN. 16

Sales Tax Bill Passed; Convert Funds to Use

One of the bills by the legislature was the bill sponsored by Senator Joe P. Tackett of Prestonsburg, it is said, enables the fiscal court to transfer their sales tax funds into a special road and bridge fund.

Previous to the passage of this measure, the various counties of the state were experiencing difficulty in putting the surplus into use, in a legal manner, where it was needed the most. This county had approximately $42,000 in its fund but was instructed, that it could be used to pay interest or maturities on voted or bonded indebtedness only.

The bill turns the money loose so that it might be placed into the aforementioned fund and money, in the road and bridge fund in a number of counties, it is said, can be legally transferred into the general funds. Warnings were issued from Frankfort regarding these transfers on Wednesday.

GRAND JURY ADJOURNS; REPORT 138 INDICTED

Expressing the thanks of the court to the grand jury, Circuit Judge John W. Caudill, dismissed them after they had made their final report Wednesday.

Addressing the jurymen he said, "I hate to say that our boys of the present day are worse than boys of the old days but there has been too much petty thievery and misdemeanors going on." Continuing, "The best way to combat this crime is to be an example to our boys and live as our fathers did."

Again thanking the jury for their work they were dismissed.

The grand jury, according to the report, returned 138 true bills in nine days and heard the testimony of 187 witnesses. Among these was a voluntary manslaughter indictment against Noah Newsome and one charging him with assault and battery. Also was the wilful murder indictment against Bill Johnson and another indictment charging Johnson and Ed Gearheart jointly with murder.

POISON FATAL BETSY LAYNE MAN DIES IN PIKEVILLE

Tells Clerk Poison is for Abortion On Mules

A Betsy Layne miner, Jesse W. Fillinger, 54 years old, it was stated to The Times, at the Jefferson Hotel in Pikeville just before 6 p. m. Tuesday.

Someone, whose name wasn't obtained, heard some noise and groans and notified the porter. An investigation resulted in finding Fillinger on the bed. They didn't touch him, it is reported, but called an undertaker. By his side was a bottle that had contained poison and an envelope addressed to his wife at Van Lear, Ky. The envelope contained no message.

It was learned that Fillinger was in Pikeville Monday evening, as he was seen talking to some man in a Pikeville restaurant.

Subsequent investigations revealed that, on Tuesday morning he had entered Rathiff's drug store at Pikeville and asked for carbolic acid. The clerk, as is customary on such queries, demanded why he wanted it.

"I want it to treat cuts and briar scratches on some mules," he replied, it is said.

He purchased 4 ounces of carbolic acid and left the store. At about noon he registered at the hotel and started to his room. He was not seen again until he was beyond resuscitation.

Mr. Fillinger was originally from Ironton, O., before residing in this section.

The body was removed to the Johnson county Thursday. Funeral and burial services are to be conducted at Hager Hill on Friday, Jan. 22, at 2 o'clock.

Known survivors are his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Donald Michels, Van Lear, Ky.

DEFINITE PLANS FOR LEFT BEAVER ROAD ANNOUNCED

Middle Creek Road Planned and Paving Work to Start

Mayor A. C. Carter announced this week, after he and Dr. W. L. Stumbo had just returned from a visit to the offices of Robert Humphreys, state highway commissioner, and Mack Galbreath, federal engineer located at Frankfort, that they have definite assurance that "Left Beaver road" link will be completed right away.

Mr. Humphreys told Mayor Carter and Dr. Stumbo that work would be started on the four miles of incomplete road between Wheelwright Jct. and McDowell early in the coming summer.

Assuring them of federal aid, Mr. Galbreath said, "We will match the state's share of the cost in building the Left Beaver road with Federal aid."

While in the conference with Mr. Galbreath, he told them, in regards to the "missing link" in the Mayo Trial at the upper city limits of Prestonsburg, "We are ready to put up dollar for dollar with the state to complete the paving from the pavement above town to the corner of Mayo Trial and Third street." There by eliminating one of the roughest stretches of road on the main highway.

It was learned from Mr. Humphreys, that a road up Middle Creek is planned from Prestonsburg toward Salyersville and this work, present plans of the commissioner, will start sometime this summer.

Mr. Galbreath promised Federal cooperation in building the Middle Creek road.

Household Questions

Fish is sometimes broken through overboiling. If this happens, remove all skin and bone and flake it. Mix it with a sauce, and sprinkle it with chopped parsley, chopped hard-boiled egg, or breadcrumbs and cheese, and serve in fireproof glass dishes.

Never put soda and water into an enameled saucepan that has been burned. Although it will remove the burned particles of food it will make the pan more likely to burn again the next time it is used. Use salt instead of soda. Fill the pan with cold water, leave until the next day and then slowly bring to a boil.

Wash chiffons in a soap solution. No rubbing will be required, just rinsing up and down. Don't have the water too hot.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

International Fourflushing.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—When the German troops marched into the Rhineland, France was going to fight about it, but didn't.

When the Italians moved against Ethiopia, Britain was going to invoke force, but didn't.

When Russia poked her snout into the Spanish mess, there was going to be armed action by other powers, but wasn't.

When Japan began to nibble again at China, there was going to be intervention but all that happened was that the League of Nations chirped despairingly and then put its head back under its wing.

Somewhat, I'm thinking of the two fellows who started fighting and, when bystanders rushed in to separate them, the one who was getting the worst of it yelled:

"Five or six of you hang on to that big brute. Anybody can hold me!"

Curing Temperament.

A JUDGE back east rules that this so-called artistic temperament is not sufficient excuse for a so-called genius to beat up his bride.

I tried the stuff once—just once—but the presiding judge in my case was a lady. For years I'd been trudging as steadily as a milkman's horse, whereas being a practitioner of a creative profession, I said to myself I really ought to stage some temper tantrum just to make the family appreciate me. So I rehearsed my act and went downstairs one morning and put it on. So my wife looked at me across the breakfast table, and said: "I know what the trouble with you is. You're bilious. You'll take some calomel."

Well, what are you going to do when a beautifully staged emotional outburst is diagnosed, not as the promptings of a tortured soul, but as liver complaint?

You guessed it. I took the calomel, and, I pledge you my word, haven't had an attack since.

The Law's Delays.

ONCE a Massachusetts Supreme court reversed a felony conviction because the prosecution, in filing the record, stated that the crime was committed "on the fifteenth day of June, 1855" but failed to state whether the year was 1855 A. D. or 1855 B. C.

And ever since then on quibbles almost equally foolish—such as a misplaced comma or an upside down period—other high courts have been defeating the ends of justice and setting at naught the decisions of honest juries.

Science has gone ahead, medicine has taken enormous steps forward, but law still rides in a stage coach and hunts with a fintlock musket. Has it ever occurred to anyone that one reason for the law's delays is a lack of the thing called common sense?

Dinosaur Footprints.

BACK in 1858, a college professor discovered on a sandstone ledge in Massachusetts a whole batch of imbedded tracks of the dinosaur—familiarily known to geologists as dinah, just as among its scientific friends the great winged lizard is frequently referred to as big liz.

At the time, the discovery created no excitement—merely a slight shock of surprise to the old families upon learning there was something historic in Massachusetts antedating the Mayflower. For the naturalists figured those tracks had been left more than 150,000,000 years ago. And they were suffered to remain nearly eighty years more.

But here recently it develops that parties unknown have been chiseling Dinah's footprints out and totting them off. This would seem to indicate either that America is getting dinosaur-conscious or that dinosaurleggers are operating, or both.

So if a slinky gentleman should come to the side door, offering a prime specimen for the parlor whatnot, don't trade with him, reader—call the police. Next time he may come back with a dornick off of Plymouth Rock or the cornerstone of Harvard college or the name plate from Cotton Mather's coffin.

There's No Harm Asking Questions Nor Answerin' 'Em

THERE'S no harm in asking: Who held the featherweight championship of the world for eleven years?

What celebrated American sportsman was expelled from France when only sixteen years old?

Who were the two men who persuaded the Football Rules committee to adopt the forward pass? When? What major eleven first made the best-publicized use of the pass?

What wrestling match created one of the most enduring of all international sports controversies?

What was the youngest combination of golfer and caddy ever to win a national championship?

Can you name the infeld combination that had the greatest success for the world famous Old (Baltimore) Orioles?

Who was the American who won an Olympic championship in an event in which he never had competed previously?

What tennis player was ranked among the first ten during nineteen of the twenty years which elapsed between his first ranking and his retirement from major tournament play?

And probably there's even less harm in answering:

Johnny Kilbane. He won the title from Abe Attell on February 22, 1912, and lost it to Eugene Criqui on June 2, 1923.

Willie Hoppe, the billiard champion, who then was making the first of his very successful foreign appearances. The French government decided there was too much betting on billiard exhibitions. When the court ruled that such affairs were games of skill rather than of chance the government nevertheless advised all foreign players to take quick leave of the country.

Naturally this was merely a bureaucratic display of red-taped petulance and Hoppe has many times been France's honored guest.

John C. Bell of Pennsylvania and Paul J. Dashiell of the Naval Academy in January, 1906. In the Harvard game that year a Yale pass resulted in a 30-yard gain which reached the Crimson three-yard mark. From this point a most important touchdown soon was achieved. In 1907 two long forward passes largely contributed to a Yale victory after the Elis had trailed Princeton by ten points.

The Gotch-Hackenschmidt match in Chicago in 1908. After two hours Hackenschmidt walked out of the ring, thus relinquishing his world championship. He claimed that Gotch had almost gouged out his eyes and that the American was so well covered with oil that it was almost the same as trying to grapple with a "well-battered eel."

When Francis Quimet won the U. S. Open after the playoff with Vardon and Ray in 1913 he was twenty years old. His caddy, Eddie Lowery, was ten years old.

Doyle, 1b; Reitz, 2b; Jennings, ss; McGraw, 3b.

Robert Garrett of Baltimore. He was captain of the Princeton track team and decided to go to the first Olympic Games in Athens. Shortly before sailing he heard that discuss hurling—then unknown to American track and field enthusiasts—was to be included on the program. Since he was a weight thrower he had a friend fashion him a discuss which sketchedly resembled the one to be used in the games. Garrett practiced with it for a week or so and at Athens far outlasted the Greek champion, Paraskevopoulos, in his own country and at his own game.

William A. Larned. He was ranked sixth in 1892. From then on until he retired in 1912 he was ranked first eight years, second five years, third four years and fifth one year. The only year he missed out was in 1898. During that season he was helping the Rough Riders.

How Prospect Eluded Marchie Schwartz

Maybe it's not true but this is the tale they tell about one of the best prospects on Marchie Schwartz' Creighton football squad. He had to quit college because

If sailors were not barred from having flat feet until they become admirals Navy might have had better football luck last fall. Vic Botari, celebrated U. of California performer, did his best to enter the academy several seasons ago. . . Although a picture of John L. Horsemen with yearlings in their stables are racking their brains these days. About 5,000 horses are registered with the Jockey Club each year and the supply of pretty names is getting low. Incidentally you can't take second crack at one of the good old names until the original gee-gee has been dead at least five years. . . Note to J. G.—A horse named Budwiser won a few races as a sixteen-year-old at Hot Springs some winters ago. He was bred by Barney Schreiber, the St. Louis bookmaker. . . Note to N. T.—Jesse Owens' stunt of racing a horse is not new. In the old days of foot racing it was a common occurrence at county fairs. Also Andy Reese, who played baseball for the Giants a few seasons back, used to pick up winter money by sprinting against both horses and automobiles in his native Mississippi territory.

The Brooklyn Dodger strategy now is to get off to a fast start during the first month of the season. This accounts for the assembling of so many veterans who can frisk their aged props steadily for a week or two. The flop, even though the Eisenstadts, Bakers and Wilsons continue to improve as they did last season, will take place after the early season coconuts have been stored in the vaults. . . Danny McFayden claims that his pitching success last season was due to the fact he was permitted to try new things and thus developed curves which he never previously had suspected himself of possessing. . . Walter Hapgood, veteran minor league club president and business manager, has joined the baseball writing staff of the Boston Transcript.

STAR DUST Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

THERE was a rather funny reaction to an interview that Edward G. Robinson gave a reporter for an Italian newspaper some time ago. He praised the work of Frank Capra, the director, who is Italian by birth, saying that Capra refused to direct gangster films.

He remarked that he thought it was because Capra did not want to make pictures which showed his own people in a bad light. When the storm burst it hit, not Capra, but Robinson. Seems the Italians thought gangsters were something like senators—an American institution of which Americans were proud!

The long discussion over which actress would play the mother role in "Stella Dallas" has been settled at last. It goes to Barbara Stanwyck, who seems a bit young for it, but of course there's always make-up. And anyway, the part is to be rewritten to fit her.

At the moment the "Gone With the Wind" pursuit of a heroine is still raging, but no doubt that will be settled in the same way—some attractive, dependable actress whose screen work is known to the public everywhere will get it.

Phil Baker, who has long been one of radio's favorite comedians, has learned a lot from what has happened to other men like him when they consented to make a picture. And he is profiting by what he has learned. He knows that, when the picture is released, the comedian's part may have been cut and cut until there is practically nothing left of it.

Both Samuel Goldwyn and Paramount want him to do his specialty in pictures, but he had held off, even to the extent of refusing $12,000 to do his stuff.

The very funny Ritz Brothers, who can be relied upon to send movie audiences into gales of laughter, encountered something that was not so very funny, to them, when they had to learn to skate for "One in a Million," the Sonja Henie picture that's all about skating, with Miss Henie doing five big numbers. The brothers simply could not learn to skate. They couldn't even stand up on skates. Finally the difficulty was solved by having special skates made for them.

Speaking of romantic stories, even the movies can't beat the one of Wallace Ford's long search for his mother and his finding her just before Christmas. It's about 38 years since she had to put him in an English orphanage, and Ford found her living in an automobile trailer, and the wife of a blind match seller. Now he is going to do all the things for her that he has planned during the long years when he was trying to find her.

Probably nobody will ever be able to explain why certain radio programs succeed, any more than motion picture producers can tell why some pictures smash box-office records and others that seem just as good flop terribly.

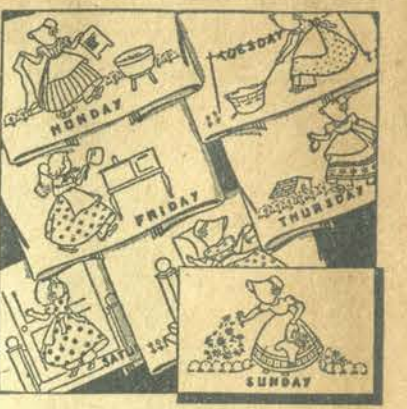

There is a delightful radio program that has been going well for considerably more than a year. It's called "Dot and Will." And so far no sponsor has bought it. Yet the company has actual proof that thousands of people listen to it.

Apparently a lot of old stories are to be re-made during 1937. "Ben Hur" is up for discussion—maybe with both Clark Gable and Robert Taylor in it. There was a time when, if three featured players were in a picture, it was advertised as having an all-star cast. Now the producing companies put several of their biggest stars into one picture and just take it as a matter of course, as do the audiences.

Odds and Ends. . . Hollywood is still regretting the death of Irene Fenwick, Lionel Barrymore's wife; theirs was an exceptionally happy marriage, and Miss Fenwick was very popular. . . Now that Bette Davis is back at work they are working her so hard that she barely has a chance to breathe, to make up for the time lost when she was battling with the company. . . "After the Thin Man" is just as funny as "The Thin Man" was, so don't miss it. . . And you'll surely want to see "Beloved Enemy," with Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne. . . And "That Girl From Paris" . . . Tilly Losch, who did a bit as a dancer in "Garden of Allah," may appear in re-makes of some of Greta Garbo's old pictures.

Lesson Text—John 5 1-6 71

GOLDEN TEXTThe very works that I do, bear witness of me, that, the Father hath sent me.—John 5 36.

After his talk with the Samaritan woman and two-day stay in Sychar, Jesus and his disciples went on to Galilee and from there to Cana, where he had performed his first miracle. There he was sought by a certain noble man, from Capernaum, to heal his sick son. After receiving evidence of the man's faith in his healing power, Jesus performed his second miracle, healed the boy and told the father that his boy would live. The father believed, went home and found that the boy had begun to get well the very hour that Jesus had told him that his boy was healed.

This brings John's account of the actions of Jesus down to this Sunday's lesson which tells of two other miracles which Jesus performed. Going down to Jerusalem to observe a feast of the Jews Jesus passed a pool by the sheep market. Because of certain healing qualities in the water of the pool, great multitudes of sick people—the blind, the halt, and the withered—gathered there that they might dip themselves in the waters and be healed.

Jesus beheld a man who had been sick for 38 years and who had become almost hopeless because he was unable to dip himself in the pool alone and no one offered to help him. Yet the mere fact of his being there testified to the desire that he wanted to be well again. In order to make him conscious of his own hope and faith Jesus asked him "Wilt thou be made whole?" The man then called Jesus' attention to the fact that no one was interested enough in him to assist him into the water.

Jesus told the man to help himself when he commanded, "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." The man, without hesitation or doubt as to his ability to do so, immediately arose, took up his bed and walked. Jesus passed through the crowd and entered the temple.

It so happened that this miracle of healing was performed on the Sabbath day, and when the Jews saw the man walking with his bed, or roll, under his arm, they informed him that he was breaking the Sabbath. The man answered that he who healed him had commanded him to take up his bed, but he admitted that he did not know who it was who had healed him. Later, when Jesus saw the man in the temple, he reminded him that he was now physically whole and to sin no more lest a worse thing come upon him. The man then knew that it was Jesus who had healed him and told the Jews this. Angered, the Jews sought to slay Jesus because he had done these things on the Sabbath day.

Making matters worse, Jesus, angered the Jews further by stating that he was doing the work of "My Father." This infuriated them so they sought to kill him even more desperately because he had not only broken the Sabbath but had also claimed that God was his father, making himself equal with God.

Jesus enters into a discourse with the Jews in which he points out the grounds upon which he bases his Messiahship, although he realizes that the Jews do not believe him and will not accept him. He ends by calling attention to the fact that Moses, whom they adore and trust, had testified of him and had written of him, but evidently they did not believe Moses, because they would not accept and believe him.

Jesus then left Jerusalem, and crossed over the Sea of Galilee, probably seeking rest. A great multitude, having seen his miracles and wanting to witness more, followed. Realizing the distance the people had come and with an eye to their physical as well as their spiritual needs, Jesus asked Philip where they could get bread enough to feed so many. Philip couldn't solve the problem, but Andrew furnished the information that there was a little boy in the crowd who had five barley loaves and two small fishes—so small an amount for so large a crowd, but enough for Jesus.

Jesus commanded the crowd—about five thousand of them—to sit down. He took the loaves, gave thanks, gave them to the disciples and the disciples distributed them to the crowd. He did likewise with the fishes. The fragments which remained, after they were all filled, were sufficient to fill 12 baskets. Convinced that Jesus was a prophet they were about to take him by force and make him a king, so he withdrew from the crowd and went into the mountain alone.

The question has been asked, "Why did Jesus perform miracles?" While we would not presume to answer this question, we would point out that in every instance Jesus met the physical need of the person with whom he came in contact before he attempted to solve their spiritual problem. Well might we profit by the example of Jesus in dealing with those whom we would win to a belief in him. If the man needs physical bread bread should be given before we attempt to feed him the Bread of Life. If his body needs healing, it should be given treatment before we talk to him of the Great Physician who can heal the body as well as the soul.

SCHOOL BAND FEATURE FOR EASTERN STUDENTS

A band and orchestra school for Kentucky high school students, that will embrace art forms, nature and physical training, will be a feature of the first semester of the 1937 summer session at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, it was announced recently by John Lewis, Jr., director of the University bands, who will also direct the school.

The school will be of five weeks duration, coinciding with the regular first summer term. Special arrangements have been made to set aside portions of the regular residence halls on the University campus for the accommodation of high school students who will attend. College credit will not be allowed, but certain high school credits may be given by arrangement through the University High School.

All students attending the band and orchestra school must specialize on some wind or stringed instrument. Both beginners and experienced players may attend, as the individual instruction will be adapted to the skills and needs of each player. Daily lessons and practice periods will be set aside, as well as daily ensemble rehearsals. In addition to the conventional bands and orchestras, special ensembles of various types will be organized.

Besides the musical instruction, members of the band and orchestra school, will have special classes in other fields arranged for them. Edward W. Rannels, head of the department of Art at the University, will present a course correlating music with the visual arts and literature. A nature study course, involving work in botany, zoology, archaeology, geology and astronomy is also on the daily schedule.

DISCUSSES LIME BURNING

Farmers can burn limestone as cheaply as they can grind it, if wood is plentiful. So it is declared in a circular of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Ways to construct a lime stack, to build and burn a limekiln and to spread lime are discussed. Copies of the circular may be had from county agents or by writing to the college at Lexington.

SAFE SPEED PAYS WHERE ROADS ARE HAZARDOUS

We know that many highways are not yet as safe as they should be. They are too narrow, curves are too sharp, signs and signals are not standard, and so on. These when combined with inattention or ignorance on the part of the driver, often result in accidents. The careful driver however, rarely has an accident even on a defective highway.

Every motor vehicle accident occurs because a motor vehicle, or a pedestrian is "traveling too fast for conditions." Just prior to every collision there is an instant when, if a vehicle and pedestrian could be brought to an immediate stop, there would be no accident. It is necessary that the driver keep in mind the distance it will take him to stop at different speeds. More drivers, for example, even at the low speed of 20 miles per hour, a car with brakes in average condition, cannot be brought to a stop in less than 52 feet. This required stopping distance moves rapidly upward to 100 feet at 30 miles per hour; to 330 feet at 40 miles an hour, to 243 feet at 50 miles an hour and to 330 feet at 60 miles per hour. If brakes are in good condition, these distances are lessened.

The old saying that "haste makes waste" is especially true of motor vehicle driving. Too much haste on the roads does indeed result in a tragic waste of life, limb and happiness.

FLOYD COUNTY JURY

This trial engaged the services of about twelve attorneys of the best legal talent in the state headed by A. Floyd Byrd, Lexington, Ky., and Grover C. Allen, Jackson, Ky. The jury, after two hours deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty and a sentence of 21 years. It was reported, but not verified, that the defense would seek a new trial. On Monday, January 18 Bill Smith, of near Martin, Ky. was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary in connection with a larceny charge in the theft of a typewriter and adding machine from the office of the Martin Realty Co. The case is expected to be appealed, it is said.

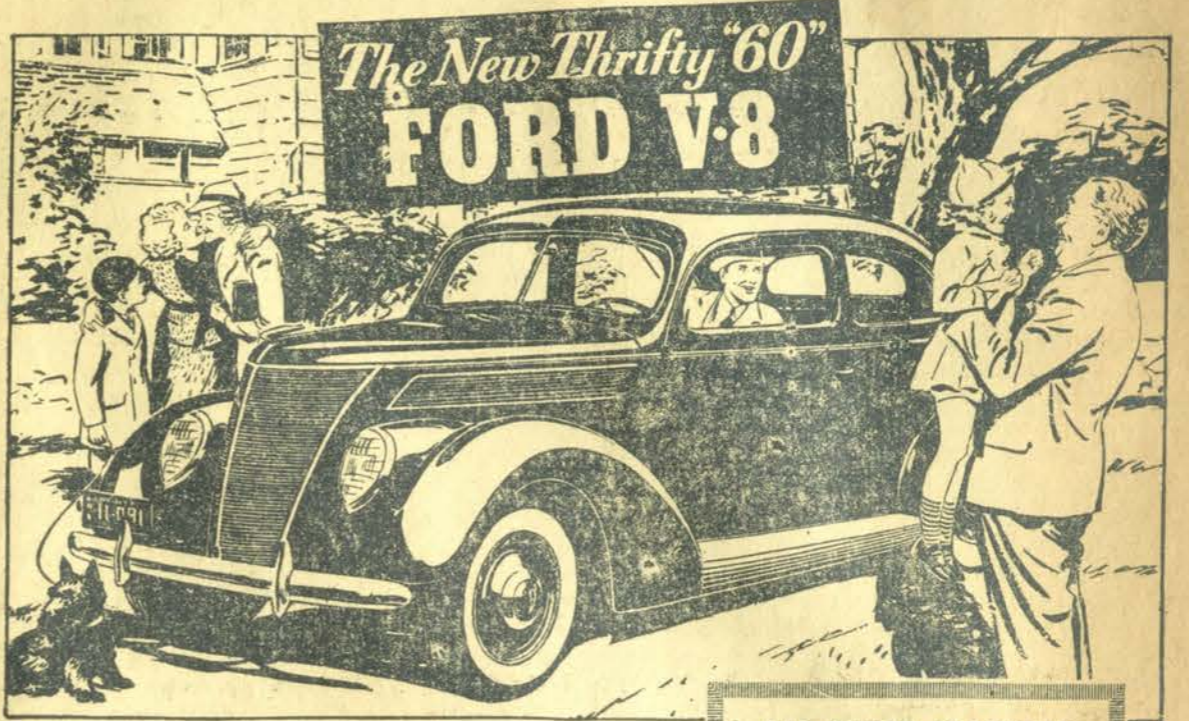

Murder Charges Dismissed
Each of the murder indictments against Fred Hall and Bill Hall, brothers, charging them with the fatalities of the two Newsome brothers, Robert and Estill, in a shooting scrape sometime ago, was ordered dismissed from the docket following a written request and directions signed by Minnie Newsome and Rosa Newsome, widows of the deceased brothers. Quoting the request, "We make this request after due consideration and of our own free will."
This term of court is scheduled to adjourn January 30. Murder trials set for the remainder of the term are Bob Collins, Jay Whitten, Ed and Rosa Hicks, Jimmie Caudill and Epp Lafferty. Court attaches stated that some of these will have to be tried at the April term. The Collins, Whitten and Caudill cases are tentatively set for Jan. 22. Ed and Rosa Hicks was down for Jan. 21. The Lafferty case is set for trial Jan. 28. The "Blackleg" cases are scheduled to begin Saturday with the trial of Noble Cole.

In describing the meetings of the unemployment league, Mr. Hall, father of Hall, stated that the organization had a committee to enforce order. Laws of the league did not permit profanity nor drunkards in their gatherings and, Mr. Prater and Mr. Hall further stated, "they maintained better order than most churches did in their gatherings."
Attaches of the Floyd county sheriff's office stated that they had been informed that German and Henry Risner were in Michigan. The other four men wanted in the indictment are ready to appear in court at any time, the sheriff's men stated.

Cave Bear of Ice Ages
 Scientists maintain that many of the "monsters" with which we struggle in our dreams are dim memories of the great beasts which roamed the earth when the human race was young. Among these ancient giants of the animal world was the cave bear of the Ice Ages, which was as big as an elephant.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

BY Gordon Wilson, Ph.D.
WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE
BOWLING GREEN, KY.

The Cornfield Philosopher.

From the very earliest times the English people have liked a rustic philosopher; our earliest poet, Caedmon, was reputed to have been an illiterate monk at Whitby, on the east coast of England, who retold in verse the stories of the Bible. Bede, the historian of Old English times, says that Caedmon's gift was divine, since he had no education no learning and could not even write his name. Ever since that time we have delighted to honor the wise man who somehow had acquired more wisdom than circumstances would seem to explain. Our earliest American philosopher of this type was the stage Yankee, an awkward but wise young chap from the hills of New England. Just before the Civil War we had many ignorant wise men who laughed at our social foibles: John Phoenix, Artemus Ward, Pertoldum Vesuvius Nasby, Mark Twain was a later product of this same tradition. Throughout his long literary career he drew on his knowledge of folk life: his greatest creation, Huckleberry Finn, is certainly a wise person who knows more than most his contemporaries.

The folk philosopher of every section hates sham and often, and often resorts to horse laughter to make all forms of hypocrisy ridiculous. In our own time no one has made more people laugh and think than Will Rogers. Until his death a few years ago, Abe Martin brought to us daily the thoughts and reactions of a Southern Indiana farmer. Ring Lardner created a whole folk grammar for his numerous characters, many of whom could be regarded as philosophers.

Probably the wisest rustic philosophers have not yet gotten into print. Sitting by some village stove today is a wiseacre who can ridicule sham as effectively and as picturesquely as any literary character we have ever known. You and I have quoted these rural wiseacres all our lives, conscious that what they may say in their own way is often the essence of wisdom. I can recall nothing funnier than the remarks I heard around the stove of the general store, nearly half a century ago. Few of the actual remarks would bear would bear printing, but the wisdom behind them stands out years after the philosopher has departed.

Efforts to convey the speech of the cornfield philosopher have usually resulted in unconvincing spelling. Nothing short of a recording device could catch the true tones of the philosopher. Nasan, drawing full of picturesque and often ancient language his sayings defy spelling and imitation. The literary characters that have been developed from this type are good, but they are still far below the reality.

Some of the wisest things I ever heard were said all unconsciously by people who were regarded as half-wits but who continued to say through a whole period of years things that probably were wiser than most of us could take in. Mark Twain's Pudd'nhead Wilson could be duplicated nowhere: his remarks were so much above the general level of intelligence that his neighbors considered him the half-wit. Pont Stone, dead now for several years, was a half-witted negro of our neighborhood who stumbled sometimes into profound truths, apparently as blissfully unconscious of his performance as a bird is of its song. His naive remarks would fill many a column of this length and would be well worth saving from oblivion. Your neighborhood has a wise man—actual or accidental—whose words should be preserved for other people to ponder.

Automatic Parachutes

The parachutes which have been made use of up to the present time require the passenger to throw it into operation by pulling a cord, which must not be done until entirely clear of the plane. This requires nerve, which is only acquired by practice. The occasional passenger might not be competent to carry out this program and the life-saving effort would be a failure. A new design expands into action automatically. This is done by a spring roller feature and the passenger has nothing to do but jump.

Restraint on Liberty

It is restraint which characterizes the higher creature and betters the lower creature; and from the ministering of the archangel to the labor of the insect, from the poisoning of the planets to the gravitation of a grain of dust—the power and glory of all creatures and all matter consist in their obedience, not in their freedom. The sun has no liberty, a dead leaf has much. The dust of which you are formed has no liberty. Its liberty will come—with its corruption.—Ruskin.

SYNOPSIS

Kezia Marsh, pretty, selfish and twenty, arrives home in Corinth from school and is met by her older brother, Hugh. He drives her to the Marsh home where her widowed mother, Zivanna, a warm-hearted, self-sacrificing and understanding soul, welcomes her. Kezia's sister, Margery, plump and matronly with the care of three children, is at lunch with them. Hugh's wife, Dorrie, has pleaded a previous engagement. On the way back to his job at the steel plant founded by one of his forebears, Hugh passes Doc Hiller, a boyhood friend whom he no longer sees frequently because of Dorrie's antipathy. Fluvanna Marsh awakens the next morning from a dream about her late husband, Jim, whose unstable character she fears Kezia has inherited. Soon Ellen Pendleton comes over. She is an artificially inclined girl who is a distant niece of Fluvanna's and a favorite of Hugh's. She happily tells Fluvanna she has become engaged to Jerry Purdue. Ellen fears that her father and mother, Gavin and Lizzie, will not approve the match.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"So then—?"
"I'm going to throw a big dinner, have them all this Friday night. Suit you?"
Hugh hesitated.
"You'd like it, wouldn't you?" she challenged.
"I'd like having them here of course, but I wish it were because you wanted them. Not a concession to my feelings."
Dorrie turned her head to one side and looked at the willow tree.
After a moment she said with slow sulkiness: "You'd better take it the way I do it."
He watched her with puzzled pain, watched her until he saw the coldness melt from her face, and another emotion come over her. She said in a faint voice, "You're worth a dozen of me, Hugh."

He was relieved. "What's brought this on?" he inquired laughing.
She shook her head. "Call it a mood."
"Forget it, Dorrie. You can be pretty sweet yourself!" He felt suddenly happy. She was chary with admissions of feeling. He never knew exactly how deep her feeling for him was. The occasional glimpses into her mind, when she grew introspective as tonight, were rare and accordingly precious.

The western light had entirely faded. The dusk ringed her around with magic. Her pale green dress shimmered like moonlight. A night-hawk wheeled restlessly overhead, uttering a raucous cry. Hugh, whose passionate feeling for her had never dimmed, felt her enchantment heighten, surround him with a mystical contentment, and yearning.

His eyes held hers. "You're lovely," he said on a breath.
"Thank you," she murmured, smiling.
The telephone tinkled inside the house.
"I'll go," said Dorrie, sliding off the chaise longue.
She never walked briskly, but when she came back she moved with more animation than was her wont.

"It's the Whitneys," she announced. "They want us to go out to Freeland Farms and dance."
Hugh gave a regretful look at the yard, bowered in bush and vine, at the moon, climbing now, a shimmering globe above the trees. "Sort of nice here," he commented.

She stood there, waiting for him to say more. The expression of her face was veiled, but he felt a vitality flow from her, a current of something indefinable.
"Do you want to go?"
"That's for you to decide," she answered almost coldly.

He took her attitude for reproach. He stretched his arms lazily. "Tell them, we'll go. Coming for us?"
"Yes. Can you be ready in ten minutes?"
He nodded. "But we won't stay late, remember! I have a job to hold down—if Cum hasn't."

She started for the house, then turned her head with her secret smile. "You always say that—we won't stay late, remember!"
"But we always do!"
She vanished in the rear door.

The Whitneys. Dancing. At least it wasn't bridge which had become so complicated lately with the new scoring and new systems which people quoted so confusingly.
Freeland Farms—always a crowd. The floor too small. But Dorrie wanted to go.
"Hugh."
"Coming." He rose from his chair reluctantly.

Cun Whitney was of medium height, florid, and with curly brown hair. He was cheerful, talkative, and had an amazing vitality. He was restless, liked to go places, be with people; he was full of visionary schemes for making money which he never followed through. He was an excellent salesman, succeeding through sheer charm of manner and enthusiasm, but had been out of work since the November before. He was thoughtful and kind to his friends, and when Hugh had been laid up with influenza the winter before, had sat up with him all one night.

Joan was small, with an olive complexion, straight black hair which she dressed severely, and great smoky gray eyes with thick-black lashes.

"Hurry up," she called as Hugh and Dorrie came down the walk, "we're simply bursting to tell you the news!"

"What news?" asked Hugh. "Did the old man come through?"
"Right the first time!"
"Congratulations!" cried Hugh, climbing into the car. "Wonderful," said Dorrie.

"He has a job with the Crescent people and starts work the first of the month!"

"You see how glad she is to be rid of me!" complained Cun. "Sick of having me underfoot around the house!"

"You weren't at home much! You went down town every day," flashed Joan.

"Will you have to travel, Cun?" asked Dorrie.

"More or less—several days a week. And they came to my figure!—which is important."

"We'll look after Jonny for you when you're away—take her around. Eh, Dorrie?"
"Of course."

Joan's elation gave a lilt to her quiet voice. "It's the most glorious feeling! Almost worth the agony of suspense for eight months to experience it. Although I must say Cun was marvelous about it—always cheerful."

"Always marvelous!" said Cun. "I was the one who was afraid—afraid of his—"

Cun, as he drove, looked back over his shoulder. "Go ahead and spill it. What were you afraid of? My sinking into bad habits?"

"Oh, keep quiet."
Cun laughed and nodded. "You see, no confidence in me at all!—and from one who knows me best! Anyhow we're here, and it's a grand night and we're all good fellows! I felt like a celebration and told her to call you up. I knew Hugh would curse. But a little night-life is good for you, you old stick-in-the-mud!"

"We're not to be out late!" called Dorrie, mockingly. "Husband's orders! Just before we started!"

They found a table near an open window at the Freeland Farms, an old country mansion which had been turned into a road house. The space for dancing was limited, and waiters zigzagged and retreated with their laden trays, to avoid the swaying couples. It was not so hot as Hugh had expected; a breeze came in from the west; the room had good ventilation, extending up two stories with windows near the roof.

Hugh saw Ellen Pendleton across the room seated at a table with Jerry Purdue. The drama of their preoccupation with each other drifted through the noise and cigarette smoke. Ellen's face was flushed, her eyes were luminous as she toyed with her food and listened to Jerry propound some theory. Isolation enfolded them in the midst of the crowd.

He touched Dorrie's arm. "See Ellen with young Purdue?"
She smiled and nodded. "He looks the sort she'd fall for, lean and dark—with a way!" She explained to the others, "Hugh's favorite cousin with her young man."

"A cousin?" said Cun. "Alibi?"
Joan fanned herself with the menu. "Don't you know Hugh's related to all the Pendletons? That's Gavin's daughter, Ellen."

"I vow the whole town's a cousin to Hugh," said Dorrie languidly. "Hard to have any personal conversation. I never dare express an opinion of anyone I meet for fear of insulting a connection. Ellen is third or fourth in degree—what is it, Hugh?"
"About that. Great-grandfathers were brothers."

"Still they call it cousin! She studied art for a couple of years. Paints very well they say."

The Game of Life

THOSE who consciously brood on their sorrows were committed by Dante to the deepest pit of hell. They are in love with trouble. They like to gaze on shadows. When all comes to all, what we call the game of life is just what makes life worth living. Life's enemies are not cares and worries, deprivations and misfortunes. They are its greatest allies. Its enemies are the damp fogs of the spirit, where there are neither shadows nor light.
—Dr. Nansen.

With great wealth comes great want.

Good Breeding

Good breeding is the art of showing men, by external signs, the internal regard we have for them. It arises from good sense, improved by conversing with good company.—Cato.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt right into the delicate tissues, making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—night and morning. Murine may be depended on to relieve eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing 7 active ingredients of known value in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

Health Experts Find Food Poisoning Germ; It Is Same That Causes Boils

Human guinea pig experiments that helped to discover the germ that causes food poisoning were reported at a meeting of the American Public Health association in New Orleans. The germ has the scientific name of Staphylococcus aureus and is the same one that causes boils. The germ produces a poison which causes the sickness, notes the Kansas City Star's Science Service.

This germ was first found in custard filling sponge cake by Dr. G. M. Dack of the University of Chicago. Before his discovery, scientists had believed food poisonings were caused by other kinds of germs.

Cream puffs and other custard filled cakes are not the only kinds of food that harbor this germ, Dr. Dack pointed out in his report. The germs have also been found in many common foods such as cheese, gravy, doughnuts, milk, ice cream and meat sandwiches. Because these germs are always found in the air, it is extremely difficult to keep them out of food when it is being prepared.

Both Dr. Dack and Dr. George A. Denison of the Jefferson county, Alabama, board of health reported experiments in which they fed some of the suspected germs to human volunteers. Some of them drank the germs in a glass of milk. They all had typical food poisoning symptoms.

Some persons are more susceptible to this germ than others, the investigators also reported. Both scientists believe that food poisoning from Staphylococcus-infected food occurs much oftener than is suspected. Refrigeration of the food may help somewhat to prevent food poisoning, but it is possible for the germs to remain dormant or even to grow slowly while the food is in the refrigerator.

Harvard, Oldest College, Was Established in 1636

Harvard, founded in 1636, is regarded as the oldest college in continental United States. William and Mary was founded second, in 1693. Grants of land had already been obtained in 1619 for the establishment of a collegiate institution near Richmond, and a collegiate school was established at Charles City in 1621, states a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer. But the plan was frustrated by the Indian massacres of 1622. In 1660 the plan was renewed and in 1693 a charter was secured from King William and Queen Mary by Rev. James Blair, who became the first president of the college. Yale, founded in 1701, is third.

In the order of age, the other early universities or colleges are: University of Pennsylvania, 1740; Moravian Seminary and College for Women, Bethlehem, Pa., founded 1742; Princeton University, Princeton, N. J., 1746; Brown University, Providence, R. I., 1764; Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., 1769, and Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., 1776.

Cinderella's Slipper

Although the folklore of many lands contains the inspirational story of Cinderella's romance, the different versions are not legends but variations of a romantic and true incident in the life of Rhodopis, the "rosy-cheeked queen" of Egypt, who reigned 2,000 years before the birth of Christ. History relates, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times, that on a certain day in that distant past Rhodopis was bathing in the Nile when a strong gust of wind carried off one sandal and laid it at the feet of the Egyptian king, who was presiding over a court of justice almost a mile away. The daintiness of the sandal so impressed the king that he offered a reward for knowledge of the owner's name. Rhodopis claimed the reward, courtship followed, and soon she was queen of Egypt.

Belief in Witches

Belief in witchcraft persists even in London. A sect in the East End regularly brews "dragon's blood" to keep on good terms with witches. Others seek to propitiate the "wise women" by hanging a string of rabbit's teeth above their doorways. One little-known London treasure-house, the Cumming museum in the Walworth road, contains a wonderful display of witches' remedies, all collected from Londoners in the last few years. A spiral shell, one learns, because of its apparently unending nature, guarantees a long life if carried in the pocket; a donkey's shoe covered with cloth and hitched to the bedpost drives away nightmares, while a pig's tooth hanging in a little bag around your neck is a sure guardian against fits.
—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

LACKEY

school to college next year with great honor.

One of the teachers made this remark: "Nora Lee Wicker is almost perfect in Latin. She is almost perfect in all her classes."

She has made A's since she entered high school. If her lesson is difficult and there's something she is in doubt about, she always consults her teachers. If she makes below an A in a daily lesson she celebrates with a good cry.

To be sure, Nora Lee is making a brilliant scholastic record, but it is not this that makes her so universally loved by those who know her: it is, rather, her sweet disposition, her attitude of helpfulness, her quiet dignity and her modesty that make her stand out as a person of true worth among all her school mates and teachers.

GARRETT VS. LACKEY

The Lackey Lions defeated the Garrett Black Devils, 25 to 21 Saturday night, Jan. 16, at the Lackey gymnasium. Garrett and Lackey are two of the strongest teams in the county.
