WIND FANS FIRE TO DESTROY HOME AS OWNER VISITS

Fire of undetermined origin was aided by wind Wednesday to totally destroy the home of Mrs. Julia Frisbee located on the Mayo Trail near Greenwade's garage. Damage was estimated at $2,000. Practically nothing was saved. For a time wind caused the raging flames to threaten nearby houses, but spectators report the prompt arrival of the fire department coupled with the fact that the home burned to the ground in little over 20 minutes, prevented further damage. Mrs. Frisbee, who was visiting at Tram when the fire occurred, shared her home with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Collinsworth, also of Prestonsburg.

Graduation exercises for 192 seniors from 10 high schools were held Tuesday night in the Prestonsburg gymnasium at the inaugural county-wide commencement exercises. To strains of music by Director Jesse Elliott's Betsy Layne Band, the gray-robed seniors filed into the gymnasium and took seats in sections roped off with their individual school colors. Sections were also set aside in the galleries for visitors. After the invocation was pronounced by the Rev. A. C. Harlowe, Circuit Judge John W. Caudill gave a welcoming address. The commencement address was then delivered by Mark Godman, high school supervisor.

The complete program of events follows: Processional by the Betsy Layne band; invocation by the Rev. A. C. Harlowe; music by the band; welcome to graduates by Judge John W. Caudill; vocal music by glee clubs of Prestonsburg, Martin and Wayland; the Commencement Address by Hon. Mark Godman; special music by Mrs. Kathryn Frazier; Advice to Graduates by Supt. Memories Of Long Ago Recalled By Aged Citizen

Memories of Civil War since faded. At that time days, of steamboats paddling Floyd county evidently had no printed tax receipts. The third is a shipping bill issued by D. H. Carpenter of Catlettsburg for merchandise shipped up the Big Sandy on the Big Sandy on the steamer Preston to the mouth of Mud Creek. Dated in 1890. This piece of paper, printed in the old style of type used in that period, is as yellowed as the others. And it is evident that some perhaps now long-forgotten, shipping clerk, made an error in itemizing the merchandise of this one shipment. In totaling up the poundage of the cargo the clerk made an error showing a shortage of more than 100 pounds. As it was written, however, the bill required 90 cents in payment for the freight on merchandise weighing 215 pounds. Johnson was born in Floyd county May 11, 1845. He says that most of his life has been lived in Kentucky. In the Civil War days of 1866, when the names of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis were on the lips of every one, Johnson was married to Martha Caudill, the daughter of Jesse and Nellie Caudill. Most of their children—now middle aged citizens—reside in Floyd county.

In speaking of the delay in surfacing the Left Beaver road, Mr. Justice added, "You just can't do every thing at once." Mr. Justice said that part of the delay was caused by winter. He in

Guitar-Strumming Cards Practice Up on Victory Theme

MORNING among the Mudcats: "I wonder," said the reporter, "if any of the Cards are up." "You wonder!" There was infinite scorn mingled with baffled rage in the hotel clerk's voice. "Ask some of those guys there. Ask—" There was a pause while the clerk sought to soothe another sleepy-eyed gentleman who had come down the stairs, tooth brush in one hand, suit case in the other.

The reporter glanced at the horde of other similarly attired and irate gentlemen galloping through the lobby. Now and then one of them would collapse exhausted on a lounge. A moment later tired eyes would close in grateful slumber. The reporter wished he had been built in the Richard Harding Davis mold so that he could get a line on such unseemly doings in the lobby of a great hostelry at the unearthly hour of 9 a. m.

"Okay." The clerk's voice had lapsed into that sad, sweet resignation which comes to men who have encountered the worst and have resolved no longer to combat it. "Go on up. Where? Just get on the elevator and use your own judgment. That'll be them."

The reporter did and it was. But even then he was surprised. It scarcely seemed, even judging from the increasing tempo of the advance warnings all the way from the first to the twenty-first floor, that all that noise could be made by a mandolin and three guitars. He hesitated in the doorway. After all if the Gas House boys could take on a 250-pound journalist before dinner what chance would a little gee have —

Impelled by a blind loyalty to his masters

The swartly gentleman in cerise pajamas waved one languid hand while energetically to pick energetically at his mandolin with the other paw. The unshaven and hairy chested gentleman made a similar gesture of greeting with a flatfish foot. It was not that he meant to be impolite. Even Pepper Martin has difficulty keeping up with the conventions when standing on his head playing a guitar.

Would you mind playing something soothing," asked the reporter. "I—"

Frenchy Bordagaray patted his cerise pajamas. "We'll give you our theme song," he offered. They did.

"We are mad cats, tough as wild cats, Our ears are made of leather And they flap in windy weather. Gosh all hemlocks We're as tough as pine knots. We're from Oklahoma, can't you see."

"Nice song," the reporter interrupted by crashing a bureau to the floor after the forty-ninth repetition of the verse. "Got it all over those things Berlin and Gershwin do. Those birds handicap themselves by sticking to a special tune."

"Shucks." Pepper Martin, who had been trying to introduce a variation by playing his guitar with one hand while hanging from outside the window ledge with the other, chinned himself back into the room. "I can write 'em with one hand tied behind my back. I can— Say, I think that's Frisch rooming below here. You gotta treat the manager right. I'm gonna serenade him." He disappeared over the window ledge again.

"Well," remarked the reporter after a while. "It looks like you've lost a good guitar."

"Tut, don't mention it," said M'sieu Bordagaray. "We can get plenty more of them. There's a music store that feeds 'em to us. This Bob Weiland he's up there now getting a left-handed guitar. That'll get us some place. What I say is there's not a club in the league that couldn't use a good southpaw and—"

The phone rang. Pitcher Bill McGee practiced playing the mandolin with one hand while picking up the receiver with the other. "Zut," he screamed. "Canaille. Bourgeois." He slammed down the receiver and began playing the mandolin with both hands so as to catch up with the others.

"Probably the hotel complaining again," said the ever polite M'sieu Bordagaray. "Those travelling salesmen haven't any appreciation of art. They always want to sleep and—"

A hand and then a head reappeared on the window ledge. "Wasn't Frisch at all," announced Pepper Martin.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

YOUNG Lee Handley's hitting and fielding undoubtedly have helped Pittsburgh's Pirates this season, but his most important contribution seems to have been neglected by the public commentators. I refer to his fine clear voice, which he is not afraid to raise in whoops of encouragement and protest. Before he enlisted some elan into the outfit, Pittsburgh pitchers used to have to look around every few seconds to make sure they had a team on the field with them.

Just to prove that there is a common denominator for all of us, Glenn Cunningham, who holds the indoor and outdoor records for the mile, looks like a knock-kneed stenographer when running for a subway train in New York. Sometimes he doesn't even make it and gets sore like the rest of us, too. For instance there was that day recently when a Grand Central guard accomplished that which Gene Venzke has been trying to do for years with scant success—closing a door in front of Glenn's flushed face.

When Van Mungo staged his one-man two-day rebellion last summer a Dodger director explained to me why the pitcher just had to quit on his teammates. It was "because Van is a fast ball pitcher and that Stengel makes him keep trying to throw curves when he's never had to throw curves before." Now National League players are explaining why Mungo is having such rare success this season. It is "because Van, who used to be nothing but a fast ball thrower, now has a swell and well controlled curve to fool you with." . . . Frank Keogh, international riding star, now is a patrol judge on metropolitan courses. . . . Rigan McKinney will not ride in any steepchases this year. He is on a world tour. Like Pete Bestwick, also on the sidelines, McKinney is said to have received retirement orders from the missus.

Walter E. O'Hara, who frankly styles himself as a promoter and not as a sportsman, pays all hospital bills for jockeys injured at his Narragansett park. There's no insurance gag either, the money coming right out of his own jeans. . . . The real name of Tony Malinosky, recruit infielder of the Dodgers, is Malimunus. . . . Tony, a Lithuanian, changed the name, explaining that he had taken Malinosky for short and did not notice until some time later that both names have nine letters. . . . Art Lasky, former heavyweight title contender, is trying to get a job as a referee in California. . . . Gilly Brack, hitting sensation of the National league, who several days this spring led the league in batting, works in a Louisville bat factory in the off season. When signed by the Dodgers he threw away the bats with which he battled .229 in the American association and designed twelve new models especially adapted for hitting major league pitching.

Ray Schalk Picks Best Athletes of Diamond

Ray Schalk, famous White Sox catcher of other days, says that Everett Scott, old Yankee shortstop, is the best bowler to come out of baseball; Carl Hubbell is a better pitcher than Dizzy Dean; Ty Cobb was the greatest player of all time, and Joe Jackson was the best natural hitter. . . . Ohio State athletes hold seven of the 15 Big Ten outdoor track records. Four of them belong to Jesse Owens. . . . They also stand as world records. . . . Mrs. Paul Bowser, wife of the wrestling impresario, was the woman wrestling champion of the world as Cora Livingston years ago. . . . Harry Kipke predicts that Minnesota's football team will be in a class by itself next fall. He gives his own Michigan eleven as good a chance as any other to finish second in the Big Ten. . . . The billiard cue was invented by Capt. Minguad, one of Napoleon's officers, while locked up in a Paris jail.

Ten years ago seven specialists told Freddie Steele, middleweight boxing champion, he would have to quit the ring because of a kidney ailment. . . . Because the sun was bad in Shibe park during the first game of a double-header Jim Dykes once tried to use outfielder's sun glasses while playing third base for the Athletics. . . . He tossed them away after losing a couple of pop fouls. . . . Soccer is the major sport in Shanghai. . . . The Shanghai Football association is affiliated with the Football Association of England. . . . All players in China are registered with the British group. . . . Johnny Baldwin, captain of Notre Dame's 1933 basketball team, is working for the American airlines. . . . Earl Brucker, the Athletics' slugging rookie, and Pid Purdy, the old Cincinnati outfielder, were the same age when they broke into baseball together. . . . Now Purdy is thirty-four and Brucker thirty-two, according to the Athletics' roster.

Wally Pipp, Lou Gehrig's predecessor at first base for the Yankees, is deaf in one ear as a result of having been beaned in batting practice by Charles Caldwell, rookie pitcher fresh from the Princeton campus. Earle Mack wishes his illustrious father would receive fewer invitations to be honored guest at banquets and parties when the Athletics are on the road.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"Murder on Soochow Creek"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HERE'S a tale from China, where life is cheap. They'll kill you for your shoes in that desperate, over-crowded, half-starved country. Or they'll kill you for nothing at all. I've seen Chinese killed by the dozen over there for no reason, as far as I could see, but just for the sake of killing. In no country in the world, except possibly revolutionary Spain, is death spread with such a careless hand.

Yes, life is cheap over there in China. Many a man has been killed for something that wasn't worth a Chinese dollar. But our Distinguished Adventurer of the day—Milton Weaver of New York City—saw the time once when his life wasn't worth two cents.

That was in February, 1932. Milt Weaver was in the United States Marine corps then, and the Marines were stationed in Shanghai protecting our nationals and the International Settlement during the fighting that went on between the Chinese and the Japanese.

Along the Shores of Soochow Creek.

Says Milt: "You probably remember the little dug-out we Marines built and all the warlike atmosphere that surrounded us along Soochow creek?" And Milt is right about that. I sure do. I spent a lot of time down there when the fighting was going on over in the Native City, and if I saw Milt I'd probably remember him, too, for I talked with a lot of those boys who garrisoned that dug-out and stood guard along the creek. Milt's adventure, though, is one thing I missed, and I'm glad Milt has given me a second chance at it—a second chance to put in on the wire and tell it to the world.

It was a cold morning—that one in February—and Milt was patrolling his post along Soochow creek. Outside the walls of the International Settlement a furious battle was going on between Japanese troops and Chinese soldiers. Refugees were seeking safety in the Settlement by the thousand, but they weren't allowed to enter at night. The patrols along the boundaries had strict orders not to let anyone enter before six a. m., but all night long terror-stricken Chinese refugees—many of whom couldn't pass the inspection at the bridges—kept trying to force their way through the patrols and get in behind Settlement walls.

At the Mercy of the Chinese.

It was about five in the morning when Milt saw a sampan, loaded with Chinese, making its way across the creek. Immediately Milt shouted to them to go back, but on they came until the nose of the boat touched the shore. Then Milt saw he was in for an argument—maybe even a little trouble. But if he'd known how much trouble it was going to be, he'd have sounded the alarm and called out the guard before he tried to do anything else about it.

As the boat touched shore Milt stepped aboard and began telling the coolie who ran it to turn around and go back. "I had to do this in sign language," Milt says, "because the coolie, apparently, didn't understand English. The coolie appeared to be doing what I told him. He was trying to swing the boat around when a small tugboat came along and rammed into his sampan. At the same time it pushed the sampan out into the middle of the stream, making it impossible for me to jump ashore again."

And then, all of a sudden, the demeanor of the Chinese in the boat changed. A few seconds before Milt had represented authority, with a guard of soldiers at his call. Now, out there in the middle of the stream he was alone—helpless—and darned well those Chinese knew it. They began swarming toward him, babbling, gesticulating, threatening.

Milt saw what was coming—saw that he had one chance to get away, and that was to jump aboard the tugboat. He turned toward it, and then a thing happened that put him completely at the mercy of the occupants of the sampan.

As he turned toward the tug, a puff of smoke, full of fine bits of coal flew straight in his eyes. He was blinded!

It was only for a few moments, but during those few moments of blindness Milt experienced the worst fear of his whole life. The natives, seeing him helpless, rushed him—and a man that gets mobbed by a crowd of Chinese natives has darned little chance of getting out alive.

Desperate Fight on the Sampan.

"They came at me with bamboo sticks," says Milt, "trying to push me overboard into the filthy waters of the creek. I knew I was doomed if I let them get me into the water, for once I was in it they would push me under and hold me there until I drowned. I blew my whistle for help. I had a pistol in a holster at my hip, but I couldn't see to shoot it. But I also carried a baton—like a policeman's nightstick—and I began swinging it around my head as best I could."

Milt says he doesn't know how he managed to stay on his feet all through the hullabaloo. He could feel bamboo poles poking at him, and he could feel that his own stick was doing some damage, too, for every once in a while it came in contact with something that felt like a coolie's head. But little by little he was being forced back toward the edge of the sampan.

Milt was getting desperate. Another step or two and he'd be overboard. He was thinking of drawing his pistol and firing blindly into the mob, when suddenly he heard English voices on the bank, mixed in with the native shouting and cursing.

That stopped the coolies. A minute before, Milt had been a lone, hated foreign devil. Now he was backed by authority again. They put the boat back to shore, and Milt was helped ashore by English policemen and a few of his own pals, the American Marines. They gave Milt first aid treatment for his eyes, and for the cuts and bruises he had received, and Milt says he was mighty doggone glad to get his feet back on the ground of the International Settlement where good old American, British and French law and order were in force and life was worth more than a couple of plugged Chinese pennies.

Marshal Foch's Tomb

The tomb of Marshal Ferdinand Foch in the chapel of St. Ambrose in the Invalides is in the form of a memorial above a marble sarcophagus. It was designed by the sculptor, Paul Landowski, and consists of a group of eight poilus, who bear on their shoulders a bier covered with laurel branches on which lies the effigy of the marshal in his uniform of war days. On three sides of the base are reliefs showing the armies of his command. On the fourth side are the dates of his birth and death.

Indians Married on Trial

Indians usually married on a trial basis. The man was expected to provide the home and provisions while the squaw was to cook and raise the maize and vegetables. If each performed his duties well, the marriage became permanent, but if one or the other fell down on the job—well, they just separated. For example, if the wife failed to have the meals ready when hubby came in from a hunting trip, all he had to do was to walk out, and in so doing he was a free man again. And vice versa.

Confederacy Anxious to Supply Home for Davis

WHEN President and Mrs. Davis reached Richmond, May, 1861, arrangements were made for them to occupy as the White House the large mansion built by Dr. Brothbrough, then owned by J. A. Seddon. The city council bought and furnished this splendid home on the corner of Clay and Twelfth streets, and asked the privilege of presenting the house to President

Davis as the city's testimony of respect for his official and personal character.

The committee appointed by the Provisional Congress, according to a writer in the Washington Star, refused to receive it, because it said, the Confederacy, and not one city, should bear the expense; so they offered either to buy or to rent it. The house and furniture cost $42,894, and during his stay in Richmond President Davis occupied this house, now the Confederate museum.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Eliminating Food Odors—A small quantity of charcoal in a container on the top shelf will help eliminate food odors from the refrigerator.

Season Lightly—Be careful when doubling a recipe not to double the seasoning. Use it sparingly at first, then add more if needed.

Eggs in Potatoes—Bake potatoes. Cut off tops, scoop out centers and season with butter, salt and a little pepper, mashing thoroughly. Half fill shells with potato mixture and drop a raw egg, salt, pepper, a little grated cheese and one teaspoon butter in each. Put back in hot oven for four minutes to set egg.

Glazing Liquid for Cookies—A mixture of two tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth cup of milk makes a good glazing liquid for cookies. Apply on the surface of the dough with a pastry brush before baking the cookies.

Hole in Tablecloth—If a small hole is burnt or worn in an otherwise good white tablecloth, it can be "mended" most effectively by stitching a motif in fine crochet over it and cutting away the spoiled fabric underneath. Add one or two more motifs so that the necessary one does not look odd. This is certainly more decorative than an obvious darn!

Rhubarb and Figs—To one pound rhubarb, after peeling and cutting, add half pound good figs, cut into small pieces. Place in a saucepan with a very little water and about a dessertspoon golden syrup or sugar and gently stew till tender. Serve with a rice or sago mold or hot milk pudding.

Keeps Cauliflower White—A tablespoon of sugar in the water in which cauliflower is cooked will keep it white.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JOSEPH'S READINESS FOR SERVICE

International Sunday School Lesson for June 4, 1937

Golden Text: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings." —Proverbs 22:20.

With this lesson we begin the story of Joseph, which comprises one fifth of Genesis. It is the ideal story of the old testament, as Joseph was its ideal character, of whom no evil was recorded. The narrative is well told, the various actors skillfully portrayed, and the underlying guiding hand of God well established.

Joseph and Benjamin were the two sons of Jacob by Rachel, his early sweetheart and favorite wife. Joseph's boyhood was spent in various places, as Jacob migrated with his herds and tribe to Succoth, Shechem, Beohel and Hebron, the latter claiming the distinction as one of the oldest towns in the world. It was near Hebron where the early story of Joseph is unfolded.

Genesis 37 relates the details surrounding the family life of the patriarch Jacob and the bickerings and jealousies which existed between the 10 sons of three different mothers and his two sons, Joseph and Benjamin, sons of Rachel. Joseph suffered because he was his father's favorite just as Jacob had suffered because he was the favorite son of his mother, Rebekah. The gift of a special coat by his father, as a mark of his unusual affection brought Joseph no benefit but rather increased his peril from the hatred of his brethren.

Another circumstance soon added to the hostility and envy of Joseph's brothers. The boy was a dreamer, apparently with a divine prophetic meaning and he was not old enough to keep his dreams to himself, but related them to his brothers. Each indicated that Joseph would be superior to his own family and that all of them, even his father, Jacob, would eventually bow themselves before him.

Joseph's brothers, intensely irritated with him, determined to put him out of the way and seized upon the first opportunity to do this. Sent by his father to visit his brothers while they tended their flocks far from home, the brothers plotted to throw him into a dry well and leave him there to die. Reuben, more humane, suggested rather that they sell him to some traders passing by and thus it happened that Joseph was taken to Egypt and sold as a slave to Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh.

So faithful and diligent was Joseph as a slave that he was soon advanced by Potiphar to a position as overseer of his household. A raise accusation, brought by Potiphar's wife, caused him to be thrown into prison and while there he interpreted the dreams of Pharaoh's butler and chief baker. When Pharaoh had a dream which his wise men could not interpret, the butler remembered Joseph and Pharaoh had Joseph brought before him to explain the dream and so impressed was Pharaoh with Joseph's interpretation, that he selected him as the wisest man. "One in whom the spirit of God was" and placed him as grand vizier, second in authority only to himself in Egypt. He was to put into execution a constructive plan of preparation against the approaching famine of which God had warned Pharaoh in his dream.

So for seven years the river Nile overflowed and the harvests were unusually good. Joseph rode throughout the country seeing that the grain was properly harvested and the surplus safely stored against the time when famine should come, and the crops failed and, shortly, all Egypt was in distress and need. From the royal granaries Joseph sold the life-preserving grain, first taking gold, then livestock and, finally, the land itself in payment. Pharaoh became the owner of practically everything in Egypt.

"Joseph's 13 years of trial crowned with sudden prosperity, may give all of us a lesson of patience," says Alexander Maclaren. "Hindrances are helps. If one of Joseph's misfortunes had been omitted his good fortune would never have come. If his brethren had not hated him, if he had not been sold, if he had not been imprisoned, he would never have ruled Egypt. Not one thread in the tapestry could have been withdrawn without spoiling the pattern. We cannot afford to lose one of our sorrows or trials. There would be no summer unless winter had gone before. There is a bud or fruit for every snowflake."

Joseph was a real leader but is there a "gift of leadership? People who step forward in an emergency are said to have a "gift of leadership" but the gift of leadership is only a willingness to do the things that must be done. Each one who says to another, in a hearty and honest way, "Lend me a hand and we will get the thing done," trusting to mutual help and suggestion to carry it out, may be a leader, and his success when the thing is done argues no special gift above the others who have silently helped him, it is in the thought that leadership lies, and it is by doing things ourselves, and not in waiting for others to do the perfectly obvious thing to be done, that we may become leaders of men." — Youths Companion.

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

To some housekeepers the baking of rolls is beyond their kitchen program, yet rolls are one of the most popular breads. They are acceptable at breakfast, dinner or supper. Make up a batch of dough, cover it tightly and store it in the refrigerator—sometimes for as long as a week. Then it is only a matter of minutes before it is shaped and set to rise.

Cheese Rolls

- 1 cup hot water
- 1-4 cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1 yeast cake
- 2 tablespoons lukewarm water
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 2 1-2 cups grated cheese
- 3 1-2 to 4 cups flour

Combine the hot water with 1-4 cup of sugar and the salt. Cook until lukewarm. Meanwhile soften the yeast cake in the lukewarm water and add 1 teaspoon of sugar, then stir into the first mixture. Next add the well-beaten egg and grated cheese and as much flour as can be stirred into the dough without kneading—about 3 1-2 to 4 cups. Toss dough on a lightly floured board, knead until easily handled. Then form pieces of dough into balls 3-4 inch in diameter by rolling the edges of each ball until the top is smooth. Place 3 balls in each section of a greased muffin tin, cover, let rise in a warm place until double its bulk. Bake in an oven 425 degrees from 12 to 15 minutes. Remove from oven and brush with melted fat. This makes two dozen cloverleaf rolls or one large loaf of bread. If preferred, this dough may be brushed with melted fat and stored in the refrigerator.

Cornbread Rolls

- 1 1-2 cups flour
- 2 heaping tablespoons of shortening
- 1-4 teaspoon soda
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 3-4 cup cornmeal
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 egg
- 1 egg
- 1-2 cup buttermilk

Sift together all dry ingredients and then cut in the shortening. Beat egg, add milk, then combine with other mixture. Scatter meal on the rolling board, roll dough 1/2 inch thick, cut as for biscuits, brush top or rolls with melted butter and fold over as for Parkerhouse rolls. Put in greased pan and bake in oven 425 degrees until done.

Wedding Rolls

Scald 1 1-2 cups milk with 2 tablespoons of butter, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 1-2 teaspoons salt. Cool to lukewarm, then add 1 yeast cake dissolved in 1 4 cup of lukewarm water. Whip in 2 1-2 cups of sifted flour, beat well and set aside until very light. Then fold in 2 well beaten eggs and 2 tablespoons of melted butter, beat gradually, adding flour until stiff enough to knead—about 2 1-2 cups. Knead thoroughly, make into a loaf, brush with melted butter and set in a sheltered place. When ready to mold, knead lightly, roll out in a sheet 1-4 inch thick. Cut in small rounds, brush with melted butter and fold in pocketbook style. Place on a buttered tin and bake in an oven 425 degrees for 25 minutes. Brush with egg and milk, slightly sweetened, and return to oven to dry. These rolls require no butter when served.

Fruit Buns

Scrape two good sized potatoes and let boil in 1 pint of water until soft. Drain, saving the water; put potatoes into a mixing bowl, add two ounces of butter and 1-2 lb. of sugar, mashing and mixing the whole thoroughly together so that the hot potatoes may melt the butter and sugar. In 1 cup of potato water blend 1 yeast cake, add 2 cups of flour, sifted, with 1 teaspoon of salt, and enough milk to make a rather thick warm blace until double in bulk. When risen, add 1 cup each of floured raisins and currants, with addition of enough flour to make a very thick batter. Drop into greased muffin pans, let rise until again light, and bake in a hot oven. These buns may be eaten either hot or cold, with butter.

LIFE CAN BE GLORIFIED ANYWHERE

There are, no doubt, inhabitants of Prestonsburg who yearn for the day when it becomes a great metropolis, noted for its industrial concerns and favored by financial powers not now possessed.

There are others inclined to sneer at life in a small place, where there is no collection of night clubs, hostilities and resorts of amusement. They feel cheated that it presents them with no current opportunities to get in the social swirl and have a gay fling.

People who think along these lines might as well stop long enough to discover what life means to the individual anywhere and ponder on the discrepancies that exist in any modern city where a huge gap separates the top from the bottom.

Men and women may delude themselves for a time in the belief that life is what they get out of it, but, sooner or later, if they amount to anything at all, they realize that what one gets depends entirely upon what one contributes. Here, in Prestonsburg, despite the absence of complications, is an opportunity for service which challenges the powers of any individuality. There is no necessity for imitating Columbus in the search for new worlds.

Social and economic problems exist under our noses and we pass them up because of their very familiarity. We of this locality seldom stop to ascertain what they are. The art of human cooperation can be developed here as well as anywhere and no intelligent person would contend that we have set any illuminating example to mankind in general.

One of the great tasks of the race today is to evolve an educational process that will qualify boys and girls for a richer and fuller life as they mature and advance into a complicated world of conflicting forces. What have our "best minds" done with this problem? We have in our midst many boys and girls growing into men and women, condemned to follow our pattern largely because we haven't had sense enough to teach them better.

Business opportunities abound anywhere if the go-getter combines energy with superior service in his line of work. There are amazing examples of commercial and industrial success, that developed from modest beginnings in small towns and cities. The metropolitan areas when all factors are weighed, offer no more, although confused thinking sometimes leads us to believe the contrary. What some people mistake for glittering fortune is often only the stealthy and unworthy accumulation of cash through the operation of doubtful rackets that prey upon massed population. It is not to be confused with real success in life and those who play that game understand it better than others.

If success in life means the gradual development of financial stability, the acquisition of culture and the great wisdom of righteousness applied, then Prestonsburg is as good a place as we know of for the individual to live. Elsewhere, the scene might be changed, the factors may vary and the forces be different but the basic fundamentals remain the same. Life, in final analysis, is simple: it can be glorified anywhere.

Mr. Justice said that the Wayland Lackey road would soon be surfaced, and that bids for concreting of the graded stretch in Prestonsburg would soon be received by the highway department. Speaking of the agitation aroused on Left Beaver by the current road controversy, Mr. Justice emphatically stated, "I was going to surface the roads regardless of what anyone said, as the funds appropriated last fall, undoubtedly prove."

Assistant District Engineer A. S. Karsner of the Highway Department, told The Times that Floyd county had received more money than would be actually due if the highway department's funds had been apportioned equally among all of Kentucky's counties. He complimented Mr. Justice for his work.

Amounts allotted by the highway department for work on Floyd county's roads to be done in the future exclusive of the present work on the Lackey road through Martin, are:

surfaced, $180,000; Lackey Wayland road to be surfaced, $11,182.51; Martin Clear Creek road to be graded and drained, $60,000; surfacing of Clear Creek Wheelwright Junction road, $40,000; concreting of the Pikeville Prestonsburg road in Prestonsburg, $15,000.

Assistant District Engineer Karsner left with The Times a list of the itemized expenditures for road work in Floyd county during the past seven years. Lack of time and space does not permit us to print it this week. Interested readers may see it at The Times office.

Keeping his own wardrobe up to date is task enough for an entertainer, but Edgar Bergen has to outfit two, himself and "Charlie McCarthy."

Edgar Bergen

Charlie, Bergen's dummy on the new Sunday night variety hour, has a top hat and tails outfit, a tweed suit, a Boy Scout uniform and an aviator's costume, and is the best dressed dummy in radio.

When a program moves to Hollywood, the usual course is to put another band on the show. Not so with the recent move of Grace Moore. Vincent Lopez also journeyed to the coast to continue on the Saturday night CBS broadcasts starring the lovely soprano.

Julie Benell

Julie Benell, who recently made her debut on M. H. H. Joachim's Tuesday night series, "Your Unseen Friend," is an actress of considerable courage.

She turned down offers of leading roles in no less than six Broadway productions — because she felt them unsuited to her talents. Radio called, and she has already appeared on several well known programs. She is now heard regularly on "Your Unseen Friend."

J. Anthony Smythe

Last to say goodbye in New York to Rudy Vallee on his recent trip to England to broadcast his Thursday Varieties from the coronation were the autograph hunters. First to greet him in Southampton were more autograph hunters — with a different accent.

Clarence Muse, radio and screen baritone, claims that his fan mail shows people prefer sad and mournful numbers in the winter, and gay ones in summer.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is one of the calmest broadcasters. She has a perfect memory. After one reading of the script, she recalls certain lines that she wants to change, inserts anecdotes to illustrate points. She thinks a regular weekly program is a "lot of fun." She writes the script for her Wednesday night NBC program herself and dictates it to her secretary.

John Nesbitt, commentator of the NBC "Passing Parade," often writes thousands of words on a topic before he gets five hundred which suit him for his broadcast.

Listeners who follow the fortunes of Pepper Young's Family will be interested to know that Jack Roseleigh, who plays the part of Father Young on the NBC broadcasts, is highly regarded in the theatre. He was chosen to play the lead in a new Broadway play and is continuing on his radio program as well.

Lum and Abner, the radio comics, when visiting smart Hollywood cafes, often slip into the Arkansas drawl they use on the air to create the impression that they are still country boys.

Although she was too busy earning money for her singing lessons to attend college, Lucille Manners is a top favorite with college girls throughout the country. Recently, a University of Missouri sorority celebrated "Lucille Manners Day." The entire meeting was given over to Lucille and her Friday night concert program — and the soprano sang a request song for the group of co-eds.

FORMER CITIZEN OF ALLEN SLAIN

Oke Smith, Well Known In This Section, Is Accidentally Slain

Oke Smith, 42, former resident of Allen, died at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville, May 28, of a bullet wound inflicted by his wife, with a pistol she thought to be unloaded.

Reports here state that in order to frighten her husband, Mrs. Smith removed the magazine containing five shells, from the stock of an automatic pistol. Not knowing that the barrel of the weapon still contained a cartridge, she pulled the trigger.

According to Pike County Judge A. O. Stump, Smith was shot after ordering his wife's sister out of the house and starting into his wife's room to thrash her. His wife then attempted to scare him.

Mrs. Smith was placed under guard at her own home Saturday night. It is reported that her examining trial will be held June 4. Burial of Mr. Smith was made in Kettle, W. Va.

DEATH INTERRUPTS SWIMMING PARTY AS YOUTH DIES

The swimming excursion of eight youths at Midas, this county, was interrupted by death Monday, when one of the party, Hernel Patton, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lopez Patton, Hueysville, was drowned in the waters of Right Beaver Creek. His companions unable to save him, Hernel was dead upon arriving at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin.

Besides his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Lonzo Patton, Hernel is survived by one brother and two sisters. Funeral services were conducted at 3 p. m. Wednesday at Hueysville. Burial was made under the direction of the Ryan Funeral Home of Martin.

News For Floyd County Farmers

Blucher Allen Has a Good Vetch Crop, Says County Agent

Hairy vetch, a winter cover crop, sowed on the farm of Blucher Allen, Salt Lick Creek, this county, has reached a height of four feet and is now ready for mowing for hay or to be plowed under. County Agent Isbell announced this week. He added that "vetch hay is superior to alfalfa in feeding value," a quotation from Henry and Morrison's book, "Feeds and Feeding."

At repeated trials at the Jersey experiment station a corn crop following vetch gave a 25 per cent increase. Vetch should be sowed in September or October with winter oats or rye as it will not support itself if planted alone, due to its vine type of growth.

Its main points of superiority over oats or rye as a cover crop are (1) vetch is a legume and therefore stores nitrogen in the soil for succeeding crops; (2) it makes a hay of first class quality; (3) vetch increases crop yield 25 per cent or more. Rye will prevent a reduction of crop yields, but will not increase them; (4) in the event of a late, wet spring, rye may reach maturity before it can be turned under, and therefore, seriously affects the succeeding crop's growth. Hairy vetch under similar conditions will decay rapidly. Rye can resist a slightly lower temperature in winter, but few failures of vetch are traceable to this trouble. Vetch seed must be inoculated when sown.

M. E. CHURCH WILL HAVE ANNIVERSARY

Local Church Plans For Program To Be Held June 27

The Methodist Church of Prestonsburg will observe the twentieth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the present church building, on June 27. The program will center around the history of the local church and particularly emphasize those things pertaining to the erection of the present edifice.

Mr. H. D. Fitzpatrick has contributed a page from a ledger giving the record of plans for a Sunday School picnic on the Fourth of July, 1874, just a few years after the close of the war between the states. On this occasion members of the bar and ministers were invited to make "spread eagle speeches" while a committee of the women were appointed "to arrange the grub and tables in style." Many people will want to see this record and attempt to identify the members of the committee.

Book of Golden Memories

One feature of the anniversary will be the dedication of a beautiful memorial book known as "Our Book of Golden Memories." This will contain a memorial record to deceased persons, giving the date of birth and date of death together with a twenty word epitaph. Those who enter the record will also be recorded and will be asked to make a contribution to a memorial fund to be used as the board of stewards directs.

To Publish Church History

A small Magazine is to be published giving the history of the church as nearly correct as can be secured from records and verbal accounts. Material for this must be in hand by June 10. Those having records or information to contribute will please call the pastor.

Sunday, June 27 is also to be made a home-coming day and people are urged to write their friends to visit them for this occasion. Plans will be made for an "all-day dinner" to be served at the church.

LOCAL KIWANIS WILL ATTEND THE NAT'L CONVENTION

The Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club will join with 1,912 other clubs in the United States and Canada to observe "All Kiwanis Night" June 21 at the annual convention of Kiwanis International at Indianapolis, John W. Caudill, president of the local club, announced Wednesday.

COAL OPERATORS ELECT DIRECTORS

Following the meeting, J. D. Battle, a guest of the association, and executive secretary of the National Coal Association, Washington, D. C., gave an address in which he discussed all matters pertaining to the coal industry in the Big Sandy district.

Mr. Battle said that indications were strong that a divisional office of the National Coal Commission would be established in Ashland, which would be of great importance to the Big Sandy valley. This office would serve the high and low volatile fields of the south. A social gathering of the officials and their guests was held at an informal dinner at the Henry Clay hotel after the association had adjourned.

QUESTION: What makes muffins stick to the pan?

ANSWER: There are several causes for muffins sticking to the pan. It may be that the pans are not well greased. Or, there may be too much sugar in the recipe. Always use a tested recipe and measure accurately.

QUESTION: What makes a butter cake dry?

ANSWER: Too much flour or too much sugar may cause a butter cake to be dry. Always use a tested recipe and measure accurately. Beating the egg whites until they are too dry or baking the cake at too low an oven temperature for too long a baking period may also cause dry cakes. The Hotpoint heat and moisture-controlled electric oven accurately maintains the desired temperature and humidity.

QUESTION: How much grease should one put on the griddle when making griddle cakes?

ANSWER: Ordinary griddles should be greased lightly each time the batter is added. However, with the new griddle pan of the Hotpoint range (which also serves as a drip pan in the broiler) one needs only to grease it lightly at first. It is not necessary to grease it between "tryings."

QUESTION: What is the best way to remove an angel food cake from the pan?

ANSWER: Allow the cake to cool (inverted) until lukewarm, about 1 hour. Then cut around the edge and tube, invert, and tap on the bottom of the pan briskly, or if necessary, slip the hand between the cake and the edge of the pan and loosen it gently with the fingers.

SHAWLS

Several years ago I heard a good actor give several readings from Abraham Lincoln's writings. In order to make the readings more effective, he dressed in clothing that was stylish at the time of the Civil War. The long shawl that he wore in lieu of an overcoat attracted more attention than any other feature of the performance. Few of us had seen a man dressed in a shawl or two that had been worn by earlier men, if a man were to appear on our streets today with a huge shawl around his shoulders, we would call the health physician and see what new mental aberration had developed in our town. But there was a time when such a wrap was quite as stylish as the traditional raccoon coat of the Eastern Colleges still is.

And there were shawls for ladies, too. Every old lady of my earliest memories wore a shawl folded over her shoulders in the cold weather. I have known some old ladies who had no other winter wrap. These shawls varied greatly in size, but most that I saw were black or dark in color.

The shawl that I recall with most pleasure was the one that had wrapped the babes for a big family. It was white with occasional black threads and could be folded until it would fit the snug little bundle popularly known as the young hoperui. Since it had kept 10 children warm, it must have been made of good material. Long after the youngest was grown, the old shawl was still good, and when I last saw it, it was serving in the place of a blanket for the eighth or tenth grandchild.

Isn't it strange that about a generation ago we suddenly decided that what was done was all wrong? We painted over the wood carvings, utterly ruined the old Seth Thomas clock with varnish or paint, sold the beds we had inherited, and allowed to disappear without leaving a trace just about every distinctive thing that our ancestors had prized and had slaved to acquire. Then we gradually learned how foolish we had been. Now we run to sales and gather spider webs in attics to see old things that only the moneyed can afford. One of these days, though some of our descendants will start rummaging for the front porch settees we used to make of the headboard and footboard of a discarded bed. Who knows but that a reconditioned T-model Ford may come to have the same kind of value as that we now associate with walnut and cherry furniture and old-fashioned mirrors?

FIRST BIG SANDY STEAMER ARRIVED HERE 100 YEARS AGO

One hundred years ago, last week, the first steamboat ever to enter the Big Sandy river arrived at Prestonsburg with a load of spring merchandise, a letter written at that time by a citizen of Prestonsburg states.

The century-old letter continues, "The doubt that has heretofore existed, that the Big Sandy river could be navigated by steamboats was put to the test when the first steamboat ever to enter the river arrived at this place. The captain said he found no obstacles in the river and his trip was a safe and pleasant one. At the completion of the voyage the citizens of this place engaged the boat for a trip up the river."

Conquest of Typhoid

Typhoid fever is a preventable disease that can and should be stamped out. Each year about 44,000 persons in the United States and Canada have the disease and about 4,400 die of it. The average duration of sickness is eight weeks.

To Prevent Typhoid

Be sure that you use pure water, pasteurized milk, or milk from hygienic dairies, and clean food that is protected from flies. If you are living in, or expect to visit a school where the disease still exists, be vaccinated and have all members of your family vaccinated.

Typhoid vaccine is made from dead typhoid germs.

The vaccine is injected under the skin in the upper part of the arm, in three doses, usually at weekly intervals. A slight redness soon appears at the point of injection, but disappears in a few days. In some cases a slight headache and tired feeling follows, lasting about a day. In very rare cases these signs may extend over several days, but the vaccination has been proven to be harmless.

Typhoid Germs in Water

If the contents of poorly constructed privy vaults and sewers, and human discharges left on the ground drain into water systems, they may infect the latter with typhoid fever germs. These germs may be taken into the body with drinking water or with water used in preparing uncooked foods. Many typhoid epidemics are caused in this way. Where there is an efficient system of water purification, typhoid fever has greatly decreased.

A sanitary toilet, for the safe disposal of human waste matter, should be provided for every unsewered rural or urban house. It should be constructed according to the specifications of the board of health.

Typhoid Germs in Milk

Typhoid fever germs often get into milk through carelessness or lack of cleanliness upon the part of those who handle it. Flies sometimes infect it when it is left uncovered. When milk is pasteurized—heated to 145 degrees for 30 minutes—typhoid fever germs are killed. Use pasteurized milk, and keep it covered in a cool place.

Many a vacation will be come lost between the planning and the scheduled time of departure.

"Up so late, big brother? How come?"

He turned from his introspective thoughts. "Lo, Kezzie. I waited up for you. After midnight again? . . . I'll have to look after you a bit."

If Kezia was annoyed she restrained herself. "Sorry. If I'd known you were waiting, I'd have come sooner."

"Jerry?"

She nodded and tossed her beret in the air, caught it. "Chasing dewy adventure out at Brierlands."

"Did you catch up with it?"

"Yes, but found it rather dull after I did. I used to have a better time—"

Hugh smiled. "You mean when things are new—?"

"You get such a zip out of them when they are new!" She sighed.

"But the boys look down on you unless you accept things with savoir faire. So you learn to do it whether you feel that way inside or not. Presently that is the way you do feel—the kick all gone!"

"To get nowhere—follow the crowd!" quoted Hugh. "I'd say you were missing youth, Kezzie, when you sacrifice the kick. But I'm an aged thirty, not competent to judge!"

Kezia stood over him, ran her fingers through his hair, twisted a lock between her thumb and finger.

"Got the toothache, Hughie?" she inquired softly.

"No worse than usual." A charred log broke in two, sent up a blue flame for a moment around the whitened edges. He rose, put the screen around the fire. "Time we were going to bed."

"Mother gone?"

"A couple of hours ago."

"Don't you want to sit here and talk to me?"

His left eyebrow lifted. "You can be sweet at times!"

His eyelids twitched a little as he gazed at the floor. "Kezzie, about Mother . . . she had a pain in her arm before she went to bed. I rubbed it with liniment. I'm sure you could make things easier for her. She doesn't look well; this has been hard on her. Won't you look after her a bit? See that she doesn't overdo? Your clothes, for instance. You really should see to them yourself."

"Yes, I will," promised Kezia.

"And if she could sleep late, have her breakfast in bed? Couldn't you get up and attend to the ordering and running of the house?"

She gave him a dazzling smile. "I'll do anything you say, darling. I know I'm careless, but I haven't meant to be selfish." She clasped her hands around his wrist, leaned her cheek against his sleeve.

"Good," said Hugh relieved. His opinion of Kezia ran through such infinite modifications. She was so incalculable, never twice alike. He felt a warming tender glow toward her.

"And if I do that for you, will you do something for me?"

"Name it," said Hugh without thinking.

"Will you get Jerry a decent job in your plant, something with good pay and a future to it?"

Hugh gave a short laugh, drew away from her.

"Please, Hughie—please."

"So you were bargaining? Weren't you concerned over your mother?"

"That goes without saying. But this means such a lot to me—you can manage it!"

"A soft job with fat pay?" Any job at all is scarce in a steel plant. As soon as we can manage it we take back our old men whom we laid off."

Kezia gave a deep sigh; her eyes swam in mist. "Oh, Hugh, you aren't going to let us down? I counted on you."

"Us?"

"Certainly."

"Don't you see he's using you to help himself along? He wants you to ask me, your brother, for a good position! Why doesn't he apply in the regular way—go state his qualifications to Kelly Burns who has charge of that?"

"Don't blame him. I thought of it."

"Does he know you're asking me?"

"Ye-es."

He gave a shrug.

"He doesn't want a soft job," she hurried to say. "He wants something with a chance at advancement—something he'll never get where he is. 'Speak to this Burns,' she coaxed, 'just speak to him! Won't you do this tiny favor for me, Hugh?"

He shook his head. "No, Kezia. He's lucky to have work—if you ask me. Tell him to take good care of the job he has!"

"You're heartless," she moaned.

"I'm going to ask Uncle John Renshaw," she threatened.

The monotonous days of November dragged by with a preponderance of leaden skies, of chill, of fog; church and club activities started up; orders slackened at the plant, started up on rush business, died down again.

Dorrie applied for a divorce on the grounds of incompatibility. Hugh thought he was all braced for it, but it came as a shock when the papers were served on him, and again when he stared at the newspaper and saw their names linked together in the public admission of defeat.

His mother made cheerful conversation when he felt like talking, served his favorite dishes at the table. She accepted him naturally without reference to his wife—just her son who had been away from home for a few years and had returned.

Dorrie's name never crossed her lips. Instinctively she knew the throb which accompanies a name associated with fatality, realized that Hugh's nerves had not grown the protective layer which would allow him to hear it without agitation.

She showed him some colored pictures of French villages in a magazine one night. "I have the wanderlust at heart, and I've always wanted to see France. Notre Dame, the Seine, the Place de la Concorde, the Bois de Boulogne—and I've kept up my school French by reading Anatole France and de Maupassant in the hope that I might go there some day. I've seen most of my own country—I had hoped that Europe would be my next adventure."

Hugh examined the pictures, not from interest, but from the wish to respond. "It's not impossible at all—you and Kezzie might go next summer. She'd like it."

"You're Heartless," She Moaned.

She shook her head. "I wouldn't leave you."

"Nonsense—why not? Satisfy your wanderlust, Fluvanna!"

Her eyes looked as if she were seeing distant things. "I won't plan ahead. Time has taught me the folly of that."

"Why not plan? Would it tempt you if I said I would try to come over and bring you home?"

"Even that would be leaving you—not seeing you for a while." She pouted; her voice became almost inaudible. "These days—are precious to me in a way you don't know about, Hugh."

CHAPTER XII

"You talked to him then, Beautiful?"

Kezia's face assumed an expression of silken discontent. "Mmm."

"No results?"

"None."

"Comments?"

"He crabbled about the men they laid off at the plant and had to take on as work picked up; he said you should go to Kelly Burns who hires them."

"Never mind. I expect you did the best you could. Providence wasn't willing! It is—or it isn't! . . . Shall we drive to Brookline? Too far? . . . Cold?"

"Not much." Kezia shivered.

"You might run up that window a bit . . . There—that's better."

"Your brother doesn't like me, but that," said Jerry, heroically, "doesn't keep me from seeing what a fine fellow he is! I hear it on all sides—'Hugh Marsh—a prince of a chap!'"

"Hugh is pretty swell."

The car crossed a bridge with a rattling of planks and made a rather chugging progress up a hill.

"Cousin Gavin probably would have taken you in his bank," said Kezia reflectively. "Didn't Lizzie say he would?"

"Once," admitted Jerry.

"Until I threw the cat in the electric fan!" teased Kezia.

"Woman," cried Jerry with vehemence, "I'll—kiss you!" He suited the action to the word swiftly.

"Now will you be quiet?"

"Like a micel!" She laughed and leaned possessively against his shoulder.

Jerry's voice came to her with seductive sweetness above the roar of the noisy engine. "It's you, gorgeous, I'm thinking of. I want to marry you, but how can we do it on twenty-five a week?"

"You're so practical."

"A fellow has to stop and think occasionally. I adore you, precious—too much to tie you up to poverty! Sometimes I think—"

Poor Lo's Revival.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Despite the blessings of civilization which we have bestowed upon them, including diseases, whisky, soda pop, and $2 overalls, the American Indians are increasing.

This should give our red brothers cause for worry. Suppose they got so numerous that we gave this country back to them?

Already we are indebted to these original inhabitants for quinine, cocaine, cotton, chocolate, tobacco, corn, beans, squashes, pumpkins, grapefruit, huckleberries and hundreds of other remedial drugs or foodstuffs. Moreover, an eminent authority says the curative methods of the old medicine man had values which in many respects excelled what the white man has produced and suggests our scientists might well adopt certain aspects of the aborigine's plan.

What if we did that very thing and then, by the way of exchange, invited the tribesmen to take over such trifling problems as an unbalanced budget, our European debts, sit-down strikes and the younger generation?

Cleaning up the Stage.

HAVING lost their licenses, fourteen burlesque houses in New York won't ever get them back if the officials keep their word about it.

With this example to go by, authorities might next try the idea of cleaning up the legitimate stage there—the spawning-place and breeding ground of shows which filthy lines and flither scenes are freely offered to pop-eyed audiences recruited from what we call our best families. Poisoning the moral atmosphere of the theater appears to be the favorite sport of a new school of dramatists who, when they were little boys, had their mouths washed out with soap for using dirty words, yet never got over the habit.

The Fate of Beauty Queens.

JUST as the weather gets warm go the contestants won't catch anything worse than sunburn, that outbreak of annual monotony known as the beauty contest will stir the populace to heights of the utmost indifference. There will be no dress rehearsals beforehand. With beauty contests, it's the other way around.

And then when Miss Cherokee Stripp or Miss Clear View has been hailed as America's prize package of loveliness, she will, if she runs true to form, put her clothes back on and catch the next train for California with the intention of starring in the movies.

On arrival, she will be pained to note that none of the studio heads is waiting at the station to sign her up; also that practically all the starring jobs are being held by young ladies who, in addition to good looks, have that desirable little thing called personality. And next fall she'll be dealing 'em off the arm in a Hollywood hashery.

International Slickers.

RUMORS persist that the United States, Great Britain and France are preparing for eventual agreements on monetary stabilization, tariff and trade adjustments, price-fixing of essential commodities—and, believe it or not, brethren and sistren—a settlement of the defaulted foreign debts owed to us.

Maybe it's significant—or, if you want to be broadminded and charitable about it, merely a coincidence—that every dispatch from European sources on this matter lists the debts last. And, verily I say unto you, that's exactly when and where they will come—last.

I seem to see the big three gathered at the council table for the final session and La Belle France moving that, everything else having been arranged to the satisfaction of the majority present and the hour being late, the detail of those debts be put over to some future date. John Bull seconds the motion. Motion carried by a vote of 2 to 1, Uncle Sam being feebly recorded in the negative.

A Sense of Humor.

DAMON RUNYON, who, being wise, should know better, reopens the issue of whether many people have a sense of humor. This provokes somebody to inquire what is humor, anyhow?

I stand by this definition: Humor is tragedy standing on its head with its pants torn.

Lots of folks think a sense of humor is predicated on the ability to laugh at other folks, which is wrong. A real sense of humor is based on our ability to laugh at ourselves. You have to say, not as Puck did, "What fools these mortals be," but, "What fools we mortals be."

That's why few women have a true sense of humor. Usually a woman, even a witty woman, takes herself so seriously, she can never regard herself unseriously.

Dressed for the Occasion

"HI THERE, Mrs. Astorbilt, where are you going in that lovely summer gown?"

"Not very far, Miss Junior Deb, just down to the store to buy material for a play suit like yours."

"Well, Ma-mah, if you must copy my style, you couldn't find a better model because these shorts really fit, and the whole thing is a tailored job."

A Stylist Speaks.

"May I as Susie Sew-Your-Own interrupt you two with the latest word from my class in dress design? You, Sis, are a pre-vue of Miss America in proper sports wear while Ma-mah is modern to the minute with her raised waistline and filled bodice. I, in this morning frock, have what the book calls classic simplicity. Be that as it may, I couldn't get along without it, because it's so cool and comfortable."

Everybody's Happy.

"Thanks for the approval, Susie. Your clever dress would be a bright spot in anybody's kitchen, and now that you've got the swing of this sewing business there will be no stopping you. But even so, I must admit I'm a proud mother. You can go just as far as you like with this new hobby."

"Gee, Ma-mah, isn't it swell to be on such friendly terms with Fashion? I think good old Sew-Your-Own deserves most of the credit for arranging the introduction. Spring means so much more when one's clothes look the part."

"You're quite right, dear, but now let's run along. We have work to do."

DAISY FLY KILLER

"A quote from the Record"

The only record is the one you now hold in your hand—this newspaper Congress is in session. Claims and counter-claims about proposed legislation are being made. What our national legislators say is soon forgotten. Forgotten, but recorded!

The "record" is down in black and white—you hold today's record in your hand—it is this newspaper. This is a record that can't die—that can't be erased. For your newspaper is a record of fact.

Here is recorded exactly what was said and done by presidents and kings, by senator leaders and congressmen. More important, the newspaper interprets what it all means to you.

For this newspaper is edited especially for its readers. News of remote places is adequately covered and interpreted. Local events are reported fully. Thus, a newspaper is "tailored" for the people it serves you and your neighbors.

Now is a good time to learn how "the record" is kept—for you.

The article appearing in The Times recently concerning Tommie Scalf, an invalid for many years, was appreciated by persons of this community. Seemingly void of self pity, but full of desire to cheer others, we feel that "Tommie" has scattered enough happiness over these 11,000 miles over which he estimates he has traveled to deserve a new wheel chair, to say the least.

LOWER POWER RATE SEEN FOR RURAL KY.

State's Largest Utility Company Files New Rate At Frankfort

Cheaper rates for electricity throughout Kentucky's rural area may result from the schedule filed by the Kentucky Utilities Company in Frankfort in view of the fact that the company operates in two-thirds of the state, the Public Service Commission expects smaller companies will follow the lead of the state's largest by agreeing to new rates.

The new schedule will provide electric power to cooperatives at 1.2 cents per kilowatt hour. Gov. A. B. Chandler said that this action meant success to the entire electrification program throughout the state as the decision by this company removed the excessive cost of electric power.

Members of the Kentucky Public Service Commission were elated over the new schedule. Surveys in approximately 50 counties are now under way for rural electrification with adequate power at reasonable prices. The cooperatives will receive power from the state's largest utility company for 1.2 cents per kilowatt hour. This, however, is the wholesale rate. To this cooperative unit add a charge that will cover its own expenditures of distribution and operation.

Other companies ordered by the Kentucky Public Service Commission to put the new classification into effect are: the Ky.-Tenn. Light and Power Co.; the Ky. Light and Power Co.; the Lexington Utilities, the Louisville Gas and Electric, and the Union Light, Heat and Power Co.

SHOTGUN KILLS CURTIS JOHNSON

Continued from page one by Jarve McCoy. Cole then left the house by a rear exit. "Later that morning," Cole states, "I bit my horse to go to my uncle's house. From there I went squirrel hunting." Cole added that en route he met Curt Johnson. Cole stated that he fired at Johnson with the shotgun he was carrying after Johnson fired one bullet from a .38 special revolver within an inch or two of his head.
