Topsoil May Wash Away In Few Years

W. P. A., Here They Come

You'll soon meet them, W. P. A.

Within a few days the girls and boys composing the senior class of Prestonsburg high school will step to a platform to receive diplomas emblematic of four years study. Four years spent in the study of "facing life better qualified."

They'll be clad in white flannels and frothy frocks. Smiles will be on their young faces. And in their heads will be a smattering of the arts and sciences and the platitudes of the pedagogues: "Education conquers the world," "A graduate is fitted for industrial and business leadership."

Don't laugh, W. P. A. Don't laugh because you know that here in Prestonsburg there is no industry to receive these youths. Don't laugh because you know only one-fifth of them will be fortunate enough to go on to college or receive jobs at once: so-called white collar jobs that pay less than a ditch-digger earns.

It is not their fault that they do not have lucrative positions waiting for them; that they cannot all go to college. The fault lies with the section in which they are reared; with the parents and their parents, whose offspring they are; in the lack of initiative that sees industry established in neighboring counties instead of at home. It's not their fault, W. P. A.

Oh, you won't see the majority of them-but you'll be the grim ogre in the back of their heads. A grim spectre haunting their pride—the cause of a few leaving home seeking jobs for which college graduates are better qualified; the cause of a few joining the C. C., -the cause of bums: of men without jobs.

You see, W. P. A., here they receive no vocational training. Their heads have been trained but

And not only this town, but many other towns, are demanding trained hands more than they do trained heads; are demanding more than a high school graduate for the job which requires a trained head.

Education is God's greatest gift, but it's a painful gift for one in a town of non-existent is Don't treat them too harshly, W. P. A.

No Fairy Tale

Once upon a time there was an automobile driver who hailed a passing motorist and said,

"Hey, mister, what about loanin' me a gallon of gas? I wanta drive down the road a ways and run over that kid of yours."

Not having a gun handy, the motorist merely returned a prompt and emphatic "No!"

Then there also was the occasion when probably the world's most warlike nation came to our shores, begging for helium gas. But, said this nation, this gas is to be used in the interest of science. We're not thinking of trouble; don't want to bomb your cities, kill your women and children. We're not like the motorist; we just want to fly back and forth acress the Atlantic with passengers and commercial shipments.

And, being trusting souls, we haven't yet said, "No."

Powerful lobbyists hovering around Washington would have us believe that we should sell helium to the Germans who must depend upon this for their future in the air with giant Zeppelins. They emphasize the dear cause of Sciencenot the science of wholesale murder but that which has a capital S. The United States has never had any success with its dirigibles. Let Germany, somebody who can operate them, have the helium, they argue.

But they breathe nothing of the facts. They fail to state that a Zeppelin can transport fifty or a hundred times more death-dealing substances, and can cruise over a far wider range, than can the largest airplane. They do not admit that Germany as a nation exists with the toast, "Der Tag," always in its consciousness.

Without helium, the German Zeppelin is a failure—as much a failure as our dirigibles have been made through sabotage. Carrying hydrogen, they are highly inflammable and vulnerable to attack; with helium, even machine gun bullets may cause them no great damage.

We have helium; Hitler does not. Let him otherwise do without. Can it be possible that Der Fuehrer's scientists have found substitutes for foodstuffs and the materials from which clothing are made and yet cannot find a satisfactory substitute for a substance he needs for war?

Can we spare some gas? The Zeppelins are "clean out," and our children are playing peacefully in the streets. Can we?

Write or wire your Senator and your Congressman your answer-TODAY.

Lovely, But Rare

Here and there as one drives through the mountains of Southeastern Kentucky a patch of crimson clover-red clover is a different cropblazes under the May sun, in full bloom.

Where crimson clover is planted soil, which, of course, may need additional renewal such as lime or phosphote provides, receives great refreshment if the clover, well grown, is turned under with plow or disc.

Corn planting on mountain declivities where a wagon cannot be used at gathering time because it would turn over and roll down hill, will never be less than ruinous to hills that should forever bear timber, unless terracing becomes a feature of tillage.

In valleys much of the land was highly fertile when farming began. But even in the richest coverlands soil renewal is needed after years of crop production. Patches of crimson clover are beautiful, and highly useful, but rare.-Louisville Times.

Comments From The Capitol

The campaign took a definite turn last week when Governor Chandler attacked the President in a speech at Lawrenceburg. It has long been rumored that Dan Talbott and Bob Humphreys were spending many sleepless nights worrying over the effort to keep the Governor from taking this step. The Governor said in his speech at Lawrenceburg last week, "When Mr. Roosevelt was running for President, he told you the depression was caused by President Hoover allowing the country to go in debt to the extent of $5,-000,000,000. If being in debt $5,-000,000,000 caused the depression, then what about the $42,000,000,000 we have now?"

With the Lawrenceburg speech the battle lines are definitely drawn and the siege guns will start firing. The campaign seems to be Chandler and his state debt pregram against Barkley, Roosevelt and the federal spending program.

The farmers have been suffering from a shortage of farm labor because of the WPA spending program, which uses labor which the farmers need on projects, so Governor Chandler intimated. But in the same speech he denounced the fact that the WPA maximum wage in Kentucky is the minimum wage in surrounding states.

The special session of the General Assembly will be called about the last of this month, the reason for the delay being the extra time required to draft the bill on the proposed legislation that deals with the modernization of state institutions for the treatment of the insane inmates.

Senator Barkley appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee last week requesting additional sums be appropriated for use in the forestry service and for tobacco grading administration. He asked that a total of $10,000,000 be provided for the forestry service and pointed out that this would enable the service to acquire 128,000 acres in the Eastern Kentucky region known as the "Breaks of Sandy" for the Jefferson National Forest Reserve. Rumors from Washington have it that Barkley will be busy in Washington until the early part of June and will have to confine his active part in his campaign with week-end visits to Kentucky. It is said that the House and Senate will not adjourn until the first week in RANDOM SHOOTS-A delegate from the N. Y. World's Fair called at the capitol last week, extending an invitation to the people of Kentucky to visit the fair. Kentucky has appropriated $35,000 for an exposition at the fair. Texas State Auditor King was in Frankfort last week, at the request of the Governor of his state. He came to study the Kentucky financial system set up by the Re-Organization Act. Mr. King said the next session of the Texas Legislature will be asked to enact a law embracing the Kentucky system. Unde the expert guidance of Commissioner Martin, Kentucky's taxation and financial set-up has gained national recognition. The states of Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Indiana, Ohio, and West Virginia have studied it, in an effort to model theirs along similar lines. Governor Fred P. Cone stopped for a brief visit at the capitol last week, on his way to the Derby.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

AFRAID OF THE DARK

If darkness itself is no longer scary, I wonder what about noises of the night. Sounds are so much more obvious at night that many superstitions and fears have grown up around them. Owls hooting have frightened many a weak-nerved person, especially screech owls, with their quavering, despairing notes. It used to be the custom to burn an old shoe to run away such purveyors of gloom. I do not know whether owls have a keen sense of smell or not; if they do, the old shoes are very effective. Larger owls are seldom associated with bad luck except the barred owl when he gives his almost human shriek. Bad luck, even death in the family, is portended by owls. Probably no sound carries farther and sets more nerves tingling than the howling of dogs. It has been believed in all ages that dogs could see and hear things that our coarser ears and eyes could not take in. Hence it is feared that dogs sense the presence of invisible things, especially evil spirits. Aside from any superstitious fear associated with it, the howling of dogs awakes in many of us a primitive feeling that allies us with the most ancient of days. Some people I know would scold the dogs when they began to howl and would thus force them into silence; others feared to disturb them, and let them howl on.

Indoors there are sounds that have made many a head of hair stand on end. Certain beetles in the walls have acquired the very unjust name of "death-watches" because of their clicking sounds. On cold nights the furniture and the walls themselves pop and crack, making many a child and superstitious grown-up fear that spirits are walking abroad. The fire often makes a sound that is usually interpreted as treading or "tromping" snow. Some fearful ones read this as a bad omen, connected with sickness and death rather than snow. Flying squirrels can create a weird impression when they scamper around in the "loft" and suddenly reappear in another place, as if they, too, were spirits. Squeaking mice, out for a bit of food, have many times frightened people who in daylight would have faced a panther.

In the night we seem to lose much of the fine bravery that civilization has built up. We revert to the days when primitive man feared, and rightly so, the woodland inhabitants that might devour him in the darkness. In spite of our increasing knowledge of our surroundings, we still shiver at the sounds that ought to be enjoyed or ig-

Louisville Editor Believes "Poor Mountaineer" Could Enlighten City Dwellers

(By TOM WALLACE)

I accepted an invitation from the University of Kentucky to visit Carcassonne Community Center in Letcher county, Southeast Kentucky, near the Virginia line, to have a glimpse of work which is being done there, seven miles, and two mountains, from the railroad and nearest improved road.

Elmer G. Sulzer, U. K. director of radio work at Carcassonne Community Center, was engineering the first annual Kentucky Listening Center Directors and piloting visitors. Listening centers serve families who do not own receiving sets, and whose members are willing to come to the radio till the radio comes to them.

Mr. Sulzer gave me typed directions as follows: "On State Road Fifteen, eight miles west of Whitesburg, turn south on Seven to Blackey, passing through Blackey to a point a mile and a half beyond Blackey where the road turns up a "Gander is five miles up this road, from the state road. The road is passable for automobiles except in wet weather.

"Don't be discouraged if your car won't make it. The walk is delightful. Don't bring much luggage and you will not have much to carry." It was raining softly, but steadily, when I reached Blackey. There I parked and set out afoot. After leaving the creek bed the road to Gander climbs a mountain in hairpin, rather than serpentine or horseshoe, curves, descends to a valley higher than the Blackey level, climbs again and reaches Gander, near a ridgetop.

The rain continued. I had loaned my raincoat to a companion who had not brought hiking clothes, and who donned overalls bought at Blackey.

The walking was hot work, on an increasingly slippery earth road. The rain did not penetrate my leather jacket or my heavy khakis, but the sweat of honest toil during the skyward climb came through everything inside the jacket, including a sweater which I wore, instead of carrying it, hoping to get to Gander with something dry.

We passed on the muddy wagon road a few boys and girls who were walking up from Blackey to the conference, and over the forest trails which converge at Gander came more boys and girls, men and women than one would have believed would have braved the rain to hear discussions of problems of communication and culture.

Older men and women were dressed conservatively. The girls and boys wore the sort of clothing one sees almost everywhere nowadays. Sheer silk, or maybe rayon stockings, rolled, were prevalent among the girls, some of whom used lipsticks and had tinted finger-

A girl, 16 or 17, a flashing beauty, dark haired, with high natural color, sat with her head resting upon the shoulder of a justly proud youth, while one man from the lowlands spoke under the title "University Programs for the Mountains," another under the title "Preservation of Mountain Culture," a third under the title "Preservation of Mountain Wild Life."

Responses of highlanders, mainly young men and women who had gone to Berea, or elsewhere, to complete their education, were more interesting than addresses of vis-

In admirable English, with admirable taste, one young man scored trash in radio programs and columns of newspapers. He was for less of the elements of radio broadcasts and feature pages that are addressed to the mentality which Shakespeare had in mind when he referred to barren specta-

He advocated "more of the philosophy of life, not Kant or Hegel, but something which induces reflection," and less of supposed entertainment addressed to those who are believed unable to think.

A young woman-introduced as "born at the head of the last hollow leading from the last creek," in one of the nearby watershedswho had returned to her beloved highlands after equipping herself as a teacher, urged respect for, adherence to simplicity, retention of the best there is in mountain culture "even if some people do regard us as a zoo."

One mountain speaker almost duplicated the complaint of a metropolitan newspaper editor whose speech I heard at a convention breakfast in the new Willard Hotel in Washington a few days earlier when he cited success of "Time" as proving that many persons want less froth, more news, in alleged newspapers.

As I hoofed it down the trail-a shorter route to Blackey than the wagon road provides-to stream level and toward Blackey, where the Kentucky river is a shallow, crystal stream that skirts the highway, I wondered whether, since the lowlands had sent a mission to Gander, turn about might not be fair play.

Gander, or at least the mountain-torn educators who were heard there, might send a mission to the

If some of these clear-headed young people should come down from their plumed hills, along trails which run by tinkling brooks bordered by flame azaleas, broad-leaf magnolias, and fire-pinks, and give us the benefit of their opinions maybe they would benefit us more than a handful who will climb the mountain in the mud to air their

HURT WHILE CHAINED

Hopkinsville, Ky .- Geo. Waters, chained to a wheelbarrow while at work with a city work house crew, was hurt in an accident here today. Explaining that the historical "picture-on-the-wall" shooting was a frame-up, James says that he, his to get rid of Charles Bigelow, an outlaw who had been committing crimes and leaving indications that it was the work of the James boys. When Ford shot Bigelow, Jesse immediately rushed into the room and changed guns and other marks of identification with the slain man, and escaped into the hiding that was destined to outdo Rip Van Winkle. During his seclusion, James earned a quiet living as a dealer in cattle and race-horses, spending most of the time in Colorado, and passing under the name of "Jim Williams."

When he decided to return to public life, Jesse James obtained assurances in Washington that charges once in effect against him were no longer in force because there were no living witnesses. Betsy Layne and Maytown Demonstration Teams Judged Best Approximately 150 Floyd 4-H club members meeting here last Friday saw their representatives compete in Rally Day events judged by J. M. tor. County Agent Isbell was in charge of the program.

In the first event Betsy Layne's be the wanted man. girls' team, Gilva Lee Martin and Reba Stratton, were judged best with their demonstration of the selection, care and use of shoes. Maytown's team, the only other one entered, was composed of Lucretia Turner and "setting the breakfast table."

Mavis Gearheart, Betsy Layne, was winner in the style show, featuring clothing made by club members. Others in the style show were: Ruby Conn, Mary Alley, Eva Kidd, Bertha Miller, Reba Stratton, and Mavis Gearheart all of Betsy Layne.

In the boys' events, Maytown's boys with their demonstration of "culling hens for egg production" were judged best over two Betsy Layne teams, which demonstrated bean spraying and culling hens.

THIS AND THAT

By NOBLE HOBBS

At the invitation of a prominent business man of Prestonsburg I write this column and let it be understood All persons indebted to the estate at the outset that the writer has no about - WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH PRESTONSBURG?

Why is it that the various milliontimes there are several, in Floyd county, don't come to roost in the county where they are earned? The deceased. writer has for some time watched the efforts of the editor of The TIMES to A reserve of $400 remains in the arouse some interest in the citizenry

And so for a little while let's study the people of the mining camps, of which I am one and find no reason to be ashamed of the fact.

First, let's travel down to the fountain and filling station and see a crowd of our citizens off. It is the first of the month and the salary people have a pay day and they are off for a new Easter outfit or something else. Somebody yells to somebody, "Where to?" and the answer is hardly ever "Prestonsburg." Why?

Next comes Saturday night and another crowd gathers to leave town for a night of pleasure. They are the intelligentsia of the mine; they have money, but have no desire to end up in a bar-room brawl and perhaps they will go some place, drink a few bottles of beer, go to a show, eat a good meal in some first-class restaurant, dance a little and come home. Again somebody yells, "Where to?" and again the answer is hardly ever "Prestonsburg." Why? Third, let's take another look at another crowd, all leaving from the same town. This crowd is the one that it pleases some people to call the rough-neck crowd, but I wonder if they are roughnecks or is somebody day dreaming? We might point to the fact that only one murder has been committed in Wayland for the past 11 years and it is a matter of record that the defendant came clear. But, again, somebody yells, "Where to?" and again the answer is hardly ever "Prestonsburg." Why?

I suppose there are department stores in Prestonsburg that will compare with surrounding towns. I take it for granted that we could get a meal that would compare favorably with any to be secured anywhere in the Sandy valley. If I had an itch to dance, that could be furnished, and so on down the line. Then why, oh, why, don't we be loyal Floyd countians and get these things in Floyd county?

First, I don't think the business men of Prestonsburg have made the proper effort to get acquainted with all classes of labor in Floyd county. I say this because of the fact that I can point with pride to the fact that I know-one (count 'em) merchant in Prestonsburg and I met him through some church affairs. And I can't imagine the first class of people mentioned being any better acquainted in Pburg than I am because of the fact I never see them when I am in town

Goodwill Tourists To Stop In P'burg

(Continued from page one) their cities and counties and to offer them cooperation in all activities, which are in the interest of the advancement of our part of the state. We are interested in your good roads problems, in your artificial and natural resources, in the industries of your immediate communities, in the welfare of your people; and in tourist business, which all of us should work together to bring in greater volume to our section. Our second purpose in taking this trip is to bring together for closer acquaintanceship during the three-day period more than one hundred of Lexington's business and professional men whose civic interests are the same. We learn to know each other better on this train, and I feel that we make many friendships which last for life. This trip, too, is an outing and, in fact, a vacation for many of our business and professional men. We should like to have the business and professional men of every city which we visit on this trip to make up similar tours and include Lexington on their visit. You are always welcome in Lexington, but on this trip we wish to renew our invitation to come to Lexington, and enjoy those things which we have, and which we wish to share with you."
