FLOYD TO GET BUILDING PLAN

For County Hospital; Painting To Be Seen During Sesqui Fete

Floyd countians will get their first glimpse during the Sesquicentennial celebration here of what architects have dreamed up for the $1,200,000 hospital proposed for this county.

This was announced Wednesday as it was learned the federal government has approved the fee of Otis & Grimes, Louisville architects, for drawing plans for the structure. An oil painting of the architects' conception of the hospital will be displayed here during the Sesquicentennial.

The architects also have completed plans for the building.

Before the federal and state governments will appropriate their two-thirds of the cost of the hospital, however, the county must issue bonds for its one-third, or, roughly, $400,000. These bonds can be issued only on a vote of the people, and the matter will be submitted to a vote at the November election.

SUSPECT LIST RISES TO SIX

In Looting Attempt At Bosco As Three Arrested Saturday

Arrest of three men Saturday by Constable Adam Martin and his deputy, Junior Conley, brought to six the number of those accused in the attempted looting last week of the F. P. Hayes and Son store at Bosco.

Jailed Saturday were J. R. Hancock and James E. Fitzpatrick on a charge of breaking and entering, and Billy Hancock as aiding and assisting. With the trio when the officers found them at the top of a mountain in the vicinity of Garrett was young Afton Martin, who was booked for carrying a concealed deadly weapon.

The Wiley brothers, Chester and Gorman, who were arrested last week in connection with the case were released Monday when their father posted $1,000 cash bond for each. Martin was also released under bond. Henry Allen, who was jailed with the Wileys in the attempted break, told officers he was drunk, did not leave the car in which they drove to Bosco and knew nothing of robbery plans. He, too, was admitted to bail.

The attempted store burglary was one of a series of crimes of the sort at Bosco, and authorities will undertake to learn if those arrested in this case are guilty of the breaks into the store of W. A. Estridge, the homes of G. W. Bailey and Chester Allen and the attempted hold-up of Buck Patrick, merchant.

SLAYER DIES FOR MURDER

Robbery-Slaying Netted $419 For Electrocuting Martin County Man

Columbus Webb, the Martin county man who was held in jail here for a time after he had been captured as the robber-slayer of his neighbor, Elijah Davis, explained his crime in the electric chair at Eddyville last Friday morning.

Warden W. Jess Buchanan said the only special request Webb made on the day preceding his electrocution was that he be permitted to talk to a minister.

Webb was convicted at the first term of the Martin circuit court at which Circuit Judge Edward P. Hill, Prestonsburg, presided. Later, the Court of Appeals voided the verdict because a transcript of the record failed to show that the indictment contained the information that the crime was committed "against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth," as required by state constitution. This omission, it was later shown, was the result of an error made in copying the record, and so Webb lost his chance for a new trial.

The Martin county man killed Davis, it was claimed, in a robbery which netted him $419. He admitted the slaying but sought to implicate Mrs. Davis as his accomplice.

Receives D.D.S. Degree From U. of Louisville, Commission from Army

Jack Salisbury, Prestonsburg, was graduated, June 13, from the University of Louisville with the degree of Doctor of Dental Science. Dr. Salisbury, a veteran of World War II, thereupon entered the army as a first lieutenant and is now stationed at Fort Knox. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Salisbury.

Relatives attending the commencement exercises in Louisville were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Salisbury, Sr. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Salisbury, Jr., and Mrs. C. W. May.

SCHOOL NEED IS LOCAL AID, PATTON SAYS

Vocational Branch Here Could Make High School Unique in Nation, Claim

Prestonsburg high school, with the full facilities of the Teachers' branch of the Mayo Vocational School available, could occupy a spot wholly unique in high school industrial training, if sufficient local interest is shown.

This statement was made by James L. Patton, director of the Mayo Vocational School, Paintsville, last Thursday in a conference with Leon Cook, principal of the Prestonsburg high school, B. F. Reed, drift coal operator, and George A. Abner and Carsie Kidd, instructors at the vocational training school here.

The local interest needed would be shown by the City and County Boards of Education and Floyd county industry, and would be represented by their financial support in the sum of $5,000. Mr. Reed strongly indicated industry's $2,500 contribution would be made available. Each Board of Education would contribute $1,250. The remaining $10,000 expense would be borne by the state and federal governments.

Mr. Patton said the set-up here could be made unique because no other high school in the country would have facilities for such specialized and diversified industrial training. During the past school year, the Prestonsburg branch school offered training to high school pupils in machine shop work, mining science and welding. A course in electricity is proposed for the next school year, with yet other training.

JAIL SOLDIER IN DYNAMITING

Meade Says He Left Weeksbury Saturday Before Home Blasted

The home of Joe Hager, Weeksbury miner, was dynamited Saturday night, and held in jail here, accused of setting off the blast, is Albert Meade, a soldier on furlough from a Georgia army post.

Meade was arrested and jailed here Tuesday afternoon by Deputy Constables E. H. Hatfield and Cain Blackburn.

The soldier, who had been visiting relatives at Weeksbury, claims he left there Saturday, prior to the time of the blast, for his home on Long Fork of Shelby in Pike county.

The dynamite charge ripped out a large hole in the floor of the back porch, tore away a part of the kitchen ceiling and burst windows of the residence. None of the Hager family was hurt.

Meade, it was said, is a brother of Mrs. Opal Wright, who was shot and killed at Weeksbury, in 1948, by Esalona Hager, wife of Joe Hager. Mrs. Hager was acquitted of a murder charge at the January session of circuit court here.

And Still More Attractions Planned for 'Sesqui' Throngs

Even more attractions to interest the thousands expected here July 1, 2, 3 and 4 for the Floyd county Sesquicentennial celebration were announced this week.

Among these will be an outdoor art exhibit by a local artist, Mrs. W. P. Mayo, and an arts and crafts exhibition in the high school building.

Mrs. Mayo's exhibit will be shown in the garden of her home on Maple avenue, and will include pictures in several mediums—oils, watercolors, pastels and charcoals. Her subject matter, too, will be varied, with scenes from the Texas bluebonnet field, the mid-west wheat fields, the Kentucky mountains, beavers on Beaver Creek, and wild flowers of the hills, including the wahoo, largest of all wild flowers in America. Character sketches will include "The Truck Comb," "Woman Swinking a Pipe," and others. Paintings of several local persons also will be included in the exhibit.

Mrs. Mayo, a native of Texas who studied art under private teachers at Commerce and San Marcus, Texas, has been entering jury exhibits at Louisville, Dallas and Birmingham.

Teachers' Committee Confers With Hall; Talk Budget, Pay

An Executive Board committee of the Floyd County Federation of Teachers this week said County Superintendent Palmer L. Hall "was very cooperative in giving us the information which he had at his disposal" when the committee called on the Superintendent here last Thursday.

Questions discussed were: The budget for the coming year, amount of the anticipated equalization fund and the portion of that fund to be allocated to teacher salaries, the building fund, sick leave, teacher tenure and teacher placement for the coming year.

The Executive Board committee is composed of Otis D. Spurlock, Otha Howard, Claude P. Prady, Sherrill Frazier, Walter Frazer, Gerald Leslie. Next regular meeting of the Floyd County Federation of Teachers will be held at Martin high school, Saturday, July 8, at 3:30 p.m.

NAME MUSIC TO COUNCIL

As Smith's Successor In Ward 2; Building Code To Be Enforced

Marvin Music, Prestonsburg oil and gasoline distributor, was appointed by the City Council at its meeting Monday evening to succeed on the Council C. H. Smith, of Ward No. 2, who recently moved to Lexington.

Mr. Music's, a leader locally in the Big Sandy river canalization movement and in the Junior Chamber of Commerce, has accepted the appointment.

Though enacting new ordinances, the Council resolved to see that one previously enacted is enforced. This is the building ordinance which provides that no new structure may be erected within the city limits without a building permit granted by the Council. In the future, Mayor Curtis Clark said, any building erected without a permit and detrimental to the community will be torn down, regardless of ownership or cost.

The Council received numerous inquiries relative to licensing of booths at which refreshments and the like may be sold during the coming Sesquicentennial. Mayor Clark pointed out that the city is not issuing licensing for such businesses; instead, has placed these concessions in the hands of the Sesquicentennial committee, with the revenues derived to be received by the city. The Sesquicentennial committee, it was said, will charge a fee of $50 for commercial booths and $25 for booths operated by churches or other groups for other than private profit.

The Council learned that the three water sprinklers installed here and in West Prestonsburg for the enjoyment of children this summer have drawn much favorable comment and the idea has been so well received that Paintsville has sent a representative here to study the system.

Carl Riffe and Glenn Weygant, of Ashland, were here last week on business.

George Martin Harris, 68-year-old nightwatchman here, died at 1:15 a.m. Wednesday at Prestonsburg General Hospital of injuries sustained, shortly after dusk Sunday, when he was struck by an auto driven by John P. Schroeder, bookkeeper for the Stansifer Motor Company here.

The elderly man suffered a compound fracture of the leg below the knee and possible internal injuries. Dr. George P. Archer, of the hospital staff, said, He lapsed into a coma on the day following his injury and never regained consciousness. It was held possible a blood clot may have caused his death. There was no visible head injury.

Schroeder was arrested, shortly after Harris' death, by Chief of Police Epp Lafayette on an involuntary manslaughter warrant sworn out before Magistrate J. E. Harris by Frank Harris, stepson of the victim. He executed $5,000 bond.

Mr. Schroeder told officers he was blinded by approaching cars as he was driving out of Prestonsburg, en route to Lancer, in a drizzle of rain, and did not see Mr. Harris until he had drawn within 15 to 20 feet of him. Harris, he said, was walking on the highway, going in the same direction. He estimated his speed as 20 to 30 miles an hour, and said he made every effort to stop his car and avoid the tragedy.

Schroeder added that the accident was witnessed by Elza Bowling and Willard Alexander and their families. "They will verify what I have said," he remarked.

The victim, who was born in Prestonsburg Dec. 21, 1881, was a son of the late Kelse and Miriam Gearheart Harris, and was widely related in this county. His wife, Nola Gose

This could develop into the Case of the Crying Children. The fact that tearful children were found within 40 feet of a moonshine still on Blue Branch of Jack's Creek, late Saturday afternoon, may lead to the still-owners who were conveniently absent when the officers arrived, although the fire was going strong and the pot was a-brewing.

The 60-gallon outfit, complete and full of mash, with nine full 60-gallon barrels, all sheltered by a shed and tarpaulin, was destroyed.

Well-grounded in the speech and expressions of the Kentucky mountaineers, Stewart will handle the interviews in this state. He plans to interview Kentuckians during spare

Shades of the flying saucer and pennies from heaven! June 14, Phillip Ray Clark found a balloon with an attached card on the farm of his grandfather, R. B. Clark, of Harold. So what, you say? Well, it seems the card stated that the balloon had been sent up in Chicago on June 11, at a picnic. Now, three days as the wind-driven balloon flies between here and Chicago is doing about as well, comparatively speaking, as the evanescent super-powered saucer.

And the pennies from heaven may not be too far-fetched either. The card went on to ask that whoever found the balloon return it along with his name and address for a prize that may be awarded.

Ah! This age of modern miracles.

BEAUTY SHOW PREVUE SET

Floyd County Beauties To Compete at Martin For Title of Princess

Floyd countians will have an opportunity to pre-view part of the "Big Show" on Monday night, June 26, at the Martin Theater, Martin, Ky., when the beauties from Floyd county will compete for the right to represent Floyd county in the Floyd County Sesquicentennial Beauty Contest.

The contestants will be picked by a panel of five judges. Their titles will be "Princesses of Floyd County." Many prizes donated by merchants and business men of the county will be awarded.

Handbills advertising the contest and application blanks were distributed last week among the various towns and communities. Miss Betty Martin, executive director of the Sesquicentennial Beauty Contests, reported that many girls have expressed an interest in the contest and indicated they would apply. Applications may be mailed directly to "Beauty Contest," Prestonsburg, Ky., or left at various places throughout the county.

The two princesses chosen will compete with princesses from 14 other counties. The winner will be the Floyd county Sesquicentennial Queen, who will represent this part of Kentucky in the Miss Kentucky contest. Miss Kentucky will compete in the Miss America contest at Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Miss Martin reported that every county of the 15 which comprised the original Floyd will send princesses here to compete for the title of Sesquicentennial Queen.

Woody Burchett, John Paul, Jack and Freddy Francis are vacationing at Camp Leconte, Elkmont, Tennessee.

Among those introduced at the exercises were B. F. Reed, an official of the Turner-Elkhorn Coal Company which donated the ballpark lights, and E. R. Price, general manager of the Inland Steel Company mines at Wheelwright. These companies sponsor league baseball teams in their communities. Reed also is president of the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Operators' Association.

Others included Floyd County Judge Henry Stumbo, who played on the Drift team for seven years as a catcher, and former State Senator J. Woodford Howard, Prestonsburg, who played fullback on the U.K. team with "Fats."

Everything went along fine on the dedication agenda until game time of a scheduled Elkhorn league game between Drift and Wheelwright, two top-flight rivals in the job.

The lights were turned on and before the two teams could take the field—the lights dimmed, then went off. It was explained that the blackout was caused by a short circuit somewhere along the power line and the game was called, even before it started, on the account of darkness.

BOOTLEGGING DEFENDANTS HIT BY ACT

Six Suits Filed, More On Way, Burchett Says; To Play No Favorites

The long-threatened crackdown on owners of property used in the illegal sale of whiskey came last Friday as County Attorney W. W. Burchett filed five suits to close, confiscate and sell buildings and other premises so seized.

The County Attorney declared, Monday morning there will be "several more." All the present crop of confiscatory actions are expected to be filed by week's end.

"I'll not know until I check with all the Magistrates on bootlegging convictions exactly how many suits there will be," he said. "Since we started this, I expect to file against everybody who has been using property in the bootlegging business. We will play no favorites."

Persons owning property leased to others who are bootlegging will be warned of plans for confiscation, Mr. Burchett said. "After that, if they continue to permit bootlegging, suits will be filed."

The official added confiscation has been strongly urged by enforcement officers as a deterrent to bootlegging. Sheriff A. B. Meade commented: "This action simplifies things."

The petitions in equity, filed in circuit court with the Commonwealth of Kentucky on relation of W. W. Burchett, County Attorney as plaintiff, asked that the five defendants be enjoined and restrained from operating or maintaining property or premises for the purpose of selling or permitting the illegal sale of whiskey; that the property and application blanks were distributed last week among the various towns and communities. Miss Betty Martin, executive director of the Sesquicentennial Beauty Contests, reported that many girls have expressed an interest in the contest and indicated they would apply. Applications may be mailed directly to "Beauty Contest," Prestonsburg, Ky., or left at various places throughout the county.

Storms Bring Death, Damage to Section

Rain, hail and wind this week resulted in one Eastern Kentucky death, heavy property damage and the abandonment of numerous homes as floodwaters threatened.

Two-year-old Bobby Blevins, of Rush, Boyd county, was drowned when he fell into flooded East Fork, Monday, while playing with his sister and two brothers.

In this county hail cut a mile-wide swath, east to west, in the Garrett-Lackey vicinity, Sunday afternoon, beating gardens and corn crops into the ground and smashing windows. At Lackey, wind tore loose the porch of the home.

Monday, Martin county was hit by a tornado which destroyed a seven-room home and uprooted scores of trees. The same day, radio station WPKE and the state area police shortwave radio station at Pikeville were temporarily incapacitated by wind damage.

Gov. Clements' Speaker At Ball Park Dedication

More than a thousand persons heard Governor Earle C. Clements as the principal speaker on a program Friday night which highlighted the dedication of the new $12,000 lighting system at the Drift baseball park.

The Governor, who was affectionately known as "Fats" when he played on the University of Kentucky football team 35 years ago, was introduced by State Senator Doug Hays, McDowell, who recalled the prowess of "Fats" as a Wildcat grizzer.

Governor Clements discussed athletics, sportsmanship, citizenship and good roads.

Sportsmanship, he said, is essential to good citizenship, and "athletics, properly played, means much to a community because it means so much to the kids of a community."

Turning from athletics to transportation, he said Kentucky's road-building progress "will continue this year and even more next year. And in six years the state should be out of the woods on highway transportation."

The dedication was planned elaborately in every detail. A highly decorated truck, fitted up as a speakers' platform, was placed along the first-base line. The opposing teams ceased warming up and the Prestonsburg High School band played "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" as the Governor's party arrived at the park.

But there was a slight delay because the Governor was arrested as he drove up. It was a put-up job, of course, and the charge against him was entering Floyd county without wearing a beard and not possessing a shaving permit.

The arrest was made by State trooper B. J. Music, who quickly explained what it was all about. The beard business is one of the preliminaries to the Floyd County Sesquicentennial celebration which will begin July 1 in Prestonsburg.

Among those introduced at the exercises were B. F. Reed, an official of the Turner-Elkhorn Coal Company which donated the ballpark lights, and E. R. Price, general manager of the Inland Steel Company mines at Wheelwright. These companies sponsor league baseball teams in their communities. Kangaroo Court Sentences Beardless at First Session

Edward L. Allen, Prestonsburg attorney, has been designated by the court of Appeals to preside as special judge in the trial of several Pike circuit court civil cases in which Circuit Judge E. D. Stephenson has been disqualified. Mr. Allen began the docket of special cases today (Thursday).

"It's war," ruled the kangaroo court, "on beardless gents and cosmetics-wearing ladies found without proper credentials authorizing such."

So you better get your permits, or the kangaroo court will getcha if you don't watch out. This court—brainchild of the forthcoming Floyd county Sesquicentennial celebration—saw its first action last Saturday when it set up a special session on the corner of Court street and First avenue. It delivered verdicts with blitzkrieg speed, and at the adjournment of the first session, several leading citizens found themselves under penalty.

bare-faced offenders, must wear a petite apron over his clothing from the noon hour of conviction until "sundown" of the same day.

Thomas Hereford, also charged with "beardlessness," was greeting customers at his store modeling a pink bonnet, trimmed with a blue ribbon which ties under the chin.

Another merchant, Dan S. Nesler, wasn't picketing. His penalty involved wearing a sign on his back stating that he is not wearing a beard. Another offender, attorney Robert Wellman, under sentence, completed his masculine costume with a few articles of feminine attire.

The judge of the court is attorney Burriss Martin, and when in session he intends to be "bewigged, berobed, and benosed," b'gosh. The accused accept his ruling—often prejudicial—without benefit of jury or appeal.

Members of the court's "police" force included Mayor Curtis Clark, businessman Bill Biggers, jeweler Clifford Wright, and assistant Fire Chief Vernon Blackburn. Biggers was chief.

Action, however, was not without its leniency. Two young women, Miss Ruby Calhoun, of nearby Water Gap, and high school graduate Miss Gertie Faye Thomas, were picked up for "undignified application of cosmetics."

Judge Martin turned them loose without penalty with the remark, "They're just too darned good looking."

Another case brought a delayed judgment. Attorney Alex Spradlin, a Kentucky State parole officer, was picked up for having no beard. He happened to be carrying a gallon jug.

Upon sampling the contents of the jug, Judge Martin accepted it as vital evidence in the case, and promised, "if able," to return a verdict "sometime in the future."

NICE GOING, FELLOWS!

The enthusiasm with which Prestonsburg's new Mayor, Curtis Clark, has tackled his job has been the subject of much favorable comment locally, but none has paid him tribute such as Thomas Hereford, his opponent for the office, accorded him last week.

Said Mr. Hereford: "The people certainly made no mistake when they elected Curtis over me. He's doing a great job—a better job than I would have given, for I certainly could not have done the office the time he does."

If that isn't news when an election-loser in Kentucky has that to say of his erstwhile opponent, then I don't know news when I see it.

Strikes me both gentlemen are to be congratulated—the Mayor for doing a good job; Mr. Hereford, for forgetting petty politics and recognizing the fact.

THIS IS CUTTING IT TOO FINE

I sometimes wonder what they're trying to do to this institution of marriage.

Time was when a Kentuckian could meet a gal, be smitten by her charms, attempt to make an impression on her, succeed, pop the question, be accepted, hustle off and get a license, then tie her away to the preacher, justice of the peace or somebody, and get hitched—all in the matter of an afternoon, with time yet to milk the cows and maybe lay the cornerstone for their dream house.

But, sad to relate, times are not what they used to be in old Kentucky.

It isn't enough, nowadays, for the girl to be coy and lead her poor goof around by the nose for months, before getting married. No, now, even after she has got around to saying "yes" as she intended to, all along, foregoing a long engagement and dispensing with the business of announcing the betrothal don't help much.

There is the matter of blood tests. And there are those three days for the marriage license application to be exposed to the public gaze before the necessary papers are issued.

And, lo! now the Attorney General's office comes forth with more bad news. Sundays and holidays, it says here, don't count at all in that three-day waiting period.

And that, I maintain, is drawing it pretty darned fine. As if three days—any three days, dog days, Sundays, holidays, or even ember days—aren't long enough to wait at a time like that when the parties concerned are willing—yea, anxious—and in a day like this when all is uncertainty. The Japs bombed Pearl Harbor on a Sunday, and there were a lot of things done during the recent war on holidays which upset the plans of thousands and perhaps the destinies of millions.

Sundays and holidays not to count? It's just putting the custom of getting married under too much of a handicap. Especially when you consider that, right here in Kentucky, if all parties were agreed and court officials didn't mind extending themselves as a favor to those concerned, a divorce suit could be filed and disposed of in an hour or so, with time out for a hand of canasta.

Both parties to the suit pleaded negligence on the part of the other as having contributed to the wreck. Allen will appeal the decision, it was said.

3 GOLF CLUBS TO VIE SUNDAY

Estimated 60 Pikeville, Wheelwright and Beaver Valley Players to Meet

An estimated 60 golfers are scheduled to participate in the season's first three-club match for this section at the Beaver Valley Golf and Country club at Allen Sunday, officials of the host club announced Tuesday.

In addition to members of the host club, the match play will see action of representatives of the Wheelwright and Pikeville clubs. The Beaver Valley greens and approaches are reported to be in excellent shape for the match.

One club official told The Times that an unusual amount of interest is being shown already in the match set for Sunday and that this year had seen more golfing at the Allen club than ever before.

Sunday's play will mark the second time Beaver Valley players have tangled in inter-club competition for the year. They recently lost to Wheelwright there in a two-club match.

Construction of the temple of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) church in Salt Lake City was begun in 1853 and completed 40 years later.

REPORTS OF LAMPREY EELS ARE UNVERIFIED

Paducah, Ky., June 21—Although numerous catches of lamprey eels have been reported in the Tennessee Valley, none of the eels investigated so far have been anything more than harmless fresh water eels, W. L. Sturtevant, TVA director of information, said here last night.

Sturtevant said the fresh water eel, which sometimes attaches itself to but does not harm fish, is difficult to distinguish from the deadly lamprey eel, so much in fact that only a biologist can tell them apart.

ANTIQUES MAY BE IN ATTICS

Sesqui Committee Invites Families to Exhibit Heirlooms

Now is the time for all Floyd countians to dig in and clean out their attics, suggested Mrs. E. R. Burke, chairman of the Window Decoration Committee of the Sesquicentennial celebration, this week.
People have been known to find priceless antiques, first editions, great-great aunt Esmeralda's wedding dress, and other various and sundry unsuspected family heirlooms of historical moment.
Discovery of objects d'art in these stock-piles of once useful but now antiquated possessions comes on rare occasions, but perhaps there is an old flintlock rifle, a well-worn Blue-Back speller, or an old legal document signed by one of Floyd county's early leaders that would go to make up an interesting exhibit to be displayed in the coming Sesquicentennial celebration.

The Window Decoration Committee of the Sesquicentennial invites anyone who has clothes, furniture, firearms, or any other articles pertaining to the early period of Floyd county to exhibit them in one of the Prestonsburg store windows during the four-day period of the celebration. These exhibits may be made up by one family, or by two or more individuals who wish to pool any articles they have to make up an exhibit.

Free window space for these exhibits is available in the following stores: The Leader, Firestone, Arrowood's, Wright's Jewelry Store, I. Richmond Co., the Ben Franklin Store, and several others.
Anyone interested in these exhibits may contact Mrs. W. C. Rimmer or Mrs. N. M. White, Jr., at their homes by phone or by letter.

Kentucky Asks Bids On Highway to Sandy Breaks

An improved road to the Breaks of Sandy on the Kentucky-Virginia border is in sight at last.

Kentucky called for bids Monday on its section of the route, from Elkhorn City to the Virginia line. Virginia has promise to have its part completed by December 1, about the time the Kentucky part is finished.

The route, leading to a mountain-top view of the gorge where Russell Fork of the Big Sandy river breaks through into Kentucky, is almost impassable now in rainy weather, except by jeep or mule.

Leaders on both sides of the border have urged improvement as the first step in their plan to get the government to establish a national park there.

P'BURG'S WIN LOOP FEATURE

Prestonsburg's victory over Allen, 13-3, here Sunday provided the biggest surprise in Big Sandy baseball league play over the week-end.

Although out-hit, 10-7, by Price, Henry Clay edged the Left Beaver boys, 3-2.

Hustling Prestonsburg jumped on to the offerings of Dale, young Allen pitcher, and collected five runs on six hits in one and one-third innings. Bill Goble, Jr., winning pitcher, contributed to his victory by whacking a round-trip clout in the third inning.

The game between Martin and Indian Creek was fairly close until the ninth inning when the "railroad town" boys routed the Indian Creekers out of their tepees with eight runs and full steam ahead to victory. Wilson was the winning pitcher.

Interested $2,500 Worth?

EVERY twelve months or so, we are reminded that Prestonsburg has a vocational training school. Rest of the time, we, as do 99.99 per cent of the other residents of Floyd county, remain dismally unknowing, and so little caring, about the institution.

That's putting it bluntly, but it's true. Not that The Times isn't interested in every institution which teaches our people the way to a better future, or that all Floyd countians of good sense and goodwill aren't interested. The school itself is partially to blame for this state of affairs, since it offers little in the way of publicity and has been silent as to its needs. It hasn't demanded attention as it should.

Now, however, Mr. James Patton, head of the parent Mayo Vocational School at Paintsville, sets us thinking with a newsworthy statement. Said Mr. Patton:

"If sufficient local interest is shown, Prestonsburg's could become unique among the high schools of America, since no other high school in the country would be offering the wide industrial training which would be a part of the curriculum here."

Interested now? Would it be worthwhile for a Floyd county high school, or all the county's high schools jointly, to offer specialized vocational training such as no other school of the kind in the land can boast?

Would it be worthwhile for your sons to leave high school in this specialized, mechanical age with a knowledge of how to do things instead of a mere theory about things?

The "sufficient local interest" Mr. Patton refers to is represented by five thousand dollars. Industry, it is certain, is ready to appropriate half of that amount as its contribution to the technical education of Floyd countians who later can find skilled jobs at home. That leaves $2,500 for the Prestonsburg Board of Education and the Floyd County Board of Education to supply. The state and federal governments, which hitherto have been carrying all the load, will pay the remaining $10,000 needed.

Are the school boards interested? Interested $1,250 worth?

The price is low. The vocational training school here has $100,000 worth of equipment which is now serving perhaps 50 pupils in the high school here. It could serve other boys from all the county's high schools.

The price is low. But the price we shall pay, if the proposal is not accepted, may be high. The State Vocational Department will not continue indefinitely to maintain the school here, in an atmosphere of almost complete disinterest.

The building and machinery here for the training of Floyd county youths will be moved away. The lot which the county owns will remain, of course, but that will be of no benefit to the schools or the pupils of this and coming generations.

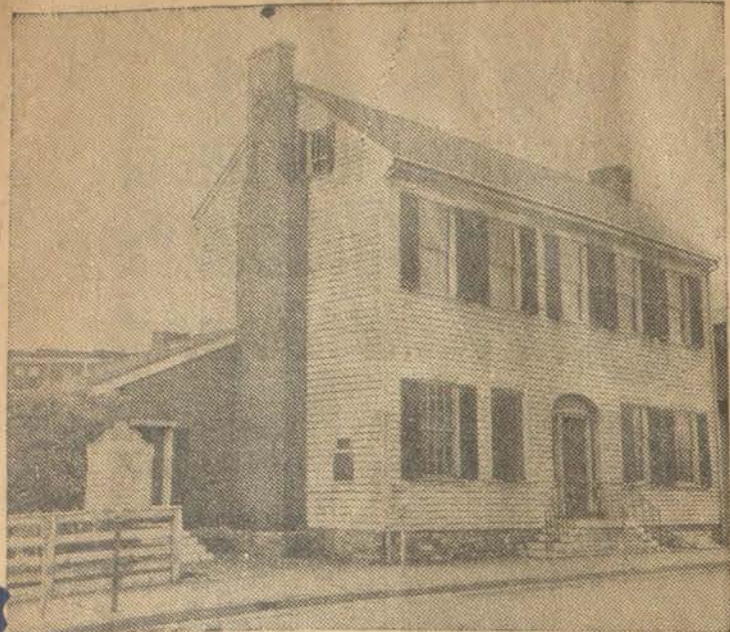

Free Music Clinics To Be Offered by UK

Two music clinics, one for string orchestras and ensembles and one for bands, will be held this summer at the University of Kentucky for the benefit of Kentucky high school musicians and their teachers. The string clinic, scheduled for July 24-28, will be under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Greene of the University of Michigan. Bernard Fitzgerald of the University of Texas will conduct the band clinic, set for July 31 to August 4. There will be no charge for either clinic and the University will provide housing for students and teachers free of charge. The programs are sponsored by the U.K. Department of Music.

Home of Dr. Ephraim McDowell in Danville where the pioneer surgeon performed the world's first ovariectomy on Christmas Day, 1809, was opened to the public on June 1, by the Women's Auxiliary of the Kentucky State Medical Association as a feature of the Kentucky Mid-Century Homecoming.

Louisville, Ky., June 20 (Sp.)—The famous old Danville home in which Dr. Ephraim McDowell performed the world's first ovariectomy on a Christmas morning 140 years ago was opened to the public Thursday, June 1.

Opening of the historic home is a feature of the Kentucky Mid-Century Homecoming, sponsored by the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce. Over one million former Kentuckians and their descendants are being invited to "Come to Kentucky in 1950" in connection with the year-long program.

Dedicated in 1939 as a state shrine, McDowell House was returned three years ago to the care of the Kentucky State Medical Association, present owners of the building. It has been redecorated and is being completely furnished in authentic furnishings of the 1790-1830 period by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Kentucky State Medical Association.

The old garden at the rear of the building has been replanted and landscaped by the Little Garden Club of Danville.

Mrs. James Todd Crawford rode horseback 60 miles over a buffalo trail from what is now Greensburg, Ky., to Danville. There on Christmas morning, 1809, without benefit of anaesthesia, she submitted to the operation which has been termed the cornerstone for all abdominal surgery.

The McDowell House is located only a block from old Constitution Square, where the convention which separated the Commonwealth from Virginia and wrote Kentucky's first Constitution met.

KENTUCKY

ON THE MARCH

Two men around 25 years old drove out from Henderson the other day and asked a farmer for work. The farmer didn't count the women and children in the jalopy, but guessed there were five. The farmer had no work for the men. Were they disheartened, downcast? They were not. They seemed to be rather pleased.

Well, how does that incident make newspaper "copy"? That's simple. The farmer didn't follow the car back to town, but he figured it was a twenty-to-one bet that they would go straight to the state handout office for relief.

Our newest handout law in Kentucky has upped the average pay to the jobless to $18. The maximum now is $24 a week for 24 weeks. How many will live on relief checks, side-stepping work as the handouts last? Your guess is as good as mine. Try guessing.

Vego Barnes, Commissioner of Economic Security, told the press the other day that Maryland and Louisiana, with a $25 maximum, are the only Southern states that exceed Kentucky's maximum. At a public dinner three months ago I heard Commissioner Barnes tell with seeming pride how many people his bureau was dishing out cash to. And he predicted bigger things for his office. A large crowd of notable Kentuckians cheered Mr. Barnes.

But there was a not so notable guy there who kept his hands on the dinner table. That was because I have been studying handoutism and its effects ever since the WPA started cooking up public work plans in the low years of the depression and ruining hundreds of thousands of men who hitherto had been used to earning their living at honest labor. Men willing to earn the pay they were getting were forced to become loafers, chiselers in order to stay on the payrolls. The worst bum in the crew usually set the pace. And work bosses were known to allow men to stay home most of the time and report only on pay day.

Since the depression politicians have used security from the cradle to the grave as sweet goo to catch votes. And they are going right along with it. When handoutism is going to slow down, nobody can figure.

Our politicians can take the money from those who earn their living honestly, and buy votes with it. That they are lowering the morale of labor, degrading men, women and children who otherwise might make good citizens, does not seem to occur to our officials at Frankfort and in Washington. And they don't seem to reckon where handoutism will end.

Don't get me wrong. The worthy in distress should be given public aid, always after their condition has been thoroughly and honestly investigated. Fraud in getting the dole should be made a felony.

In my humble opinion, the reason Kentucky ranks very low among the 48 states is that we are low in productive work. Productive work produces practically all wealth. And more money the state dishes out to its unemployed is attached to jobs, the sooner we will be unable to thank God for Arkansas. My philosophy was expressed just about perfectly by Tolstoy, the greatest humanitarian of all time. I have quoted the lines before and may quote them again.

"The more you give to people, the less they will work. And the less they work, the poorer they become."

Jest Among Us

The new school principal, recently arrived from Tennessee, was the dinner guest at the home of one of his pupils, and everyone was straining to properly impress him. Conversation lagged and the hostess groped for a subject that would interest the guest of honor. Geography seemed a likely topic so she fell to discoursing upon the family's travels around the country, mentioning several states that appealed to her. "There's one state I'd never want to live in, though," she said, "and that's Tennessee. Why, that's the worst looking—I mean it's—the I mean it's—" She sputtered to a reddened stop, and young Johnny, quick to sense that his mother's food was choking her, piped up, "Why, Mother, Tennessee's a good place. They make more fertilizer than any other state."

Tell a man long enough that he's a polecat and some day he'll start thinking he smells like one. Kentuckians have been told loud and often that their state is at the bottom of the educational head. It's sort of comforting, then, when something happens to show we're making progress. The 1950-51 edition of "Who's Who in America" carries the names of 92 University of Kentucky faculty and staff members, while the 1948-49 edition listed only 33.

I Smashed My "Glass Crutch"

By NORMAN BROKENSHERE

(Re-printed by special permission of The Christian Herald)

Son of a preacher, this well-known radio nouncer tells how, with the help of God, he overcame alcoholism

IT IS not possible to know how many people listen to my voice as I go on the air thirteen times a week, but of some I can be certain. My mother listens intently, and I imagine she pictures the mischievous boy she raised—and silently wonders. My wife listens, and the warmth in her heart tells her that the years of trial and hardship are over, that her long-suffering loyalty was not in vain. Radio friends listen and think, "He's back—I wonder where he was all those years?"

I know where I was, and the stark terror and shame wrapped up in every shattering memory keeps my soul on its knees. God was patient with me. He knocked too long before I let Him have a go at saving me from myself. But then much of the time I did not even hear the knocks. I was too dead—drunk.

It was in 1924 that I entered radio and began to make friends of people I had never seen. Hunched over their crystal sets, attentive to every vibration of the earphones, these new friends heard a voice that told them, "Here is a fellow who loves life and enjoys every minute of it!"

I did love life. It was sweet, and I had been given a good start. My father was a minister. We lived in the manse of various churches in Canada and the United States. Those early religious impressions that I thought, when I went out into the world, had dosed me to immunity, would one day be the only spar I could snatch out of the sea of despair.

As my popularity grew in radio, so did my working schedule and my responsibilities. My work usually started about 8:30 or 9:00 in the morning. I had time off during the afternoon, then in the evening handled the dance bands and other out-of-studio broadcasts. At 1:30 to 2:00 in the morning I'd sign the station off and go home. Those were Prohibition days, when the late night spots were likely to be glorified speakeasies. In the early twenties, life in the big city took on a roaring sound; flappers and flasks, jazz bands and jingling cash registers, and withal a certain abandon that made the new generation look mighty hopeless to worried parents.

This was the setting in which I began to play a part that grew in splendor until, one sunny July afternoon in 1932, I was crowned "King of Announcers" in Bryant Park grandstand. While thousands of cheering New Yorkers made hubbub and cameras clicked, Mayor James J. Walker placed the crown on my head and put the loving cup in my arms.

It was a great day—and yet, less than a year later, I was to disappear from big-time radio. No fanfare this time. Just a notice, "Your services are no longer required."

In those days the word "alcoholic" had not come into popular usage. A man who drank too much was a "drunk," and the man who let drinking interfere with his business was just a fool. And I was a fool.

As I look back upon it, I cannot say just at what point I became an alcoholic. This I do know: drinking robbed me of almost all true happiness, even in the height of my popularity, and went on to drive me out of radio completely. Month after month, my miserable days were spent in trying to run away from myself.

It would be easy to say that I, a preacher's son, brought up in the best possible fashion, acquired bad habits because I was thrown among bad companions. But it's not as easy as that. I believe I was an alcoholic long before I took my first drink. I was one of a class of people who, mentally and physically are completely allergic to alcohol. And I am absolutely sure that the reason the disease called alcoholism is so difficult to diagnose and so hard to cure lies in the fact that it is a combination of mental and spiritual and physical illness. That is what makes it hard to explain to nice, normal people.

I am not going to put down here the sorrowful episodes of years of disgrace and ignominy—they are common to all alcoholics. If you have seen "Lost Week-End" or "Crack-Up," if you have read "The Glass Crutch" and other stories of drunkards, you can believe that they are not exaggerated. Rather, they do not tell the whole horror of the drugged mind and the exhausted body.

But perhaps I can give you some insight into the devouring cycle that repeats itself over and over again, a cycle which the alcoholic comes to know by heart, step by step, to the day, almost to the minute—and yet, over which he, for the time, has no control. Like myself, perhaps he has taken the Keeley Cure, been to Green Hill and other sanitariums where "cures" are given. Although he comes out healthy and hopeful, it is not long before he starts the same old routine. Slow and to a degree controlled at first, then faster and faster he whirls in the hellish spiral until there is no fight left. One day he sinks down exhausted—in a doorway, a hospital ward, or, if he is lucky, in his own bed.

Let's start a few days after he gets up and around again. He feels good, has lost a few pounds, and thinks, "Fine. . . . I was eating too much anyway." Now he'll go "on the wagon"—never take another drink. He'll make up for the awful things he's said and done, if they'll only give him this one more chance!

And he does feel pretty good—like a drowning man must feel when the water has been pumped out of his lungs and he has had time to realize that he has been saved. Long, patient days of nursing have given him a little added strength. And those close to him have persuaded him that everything will be all right. They have covered up a lot of indiscretions, made excuses, and now he is on his feet. He still has the job, and a complete set of wonderful resolutions.

As the days pass and he finds that he is accepted again and that his new way of life is making everyone happy, his step is light and his hopes are high. But all too soon the hours of great buoyancy and new horizons become just the daily grind. The great resolutions don't seem to be necessary any more.

Then the day comes when he takes another drink. No alcoholic can tell you exactly why he takes it. Maybe he becomes very sad, maybe he's too happy. Perhaps he wants to prove that he is a normal man among men, and if John can take a cocktail before dinner, so can he. But that "allergy" remains.

If it's at a dinner party, while the others are nursing their first cocktail, he's made an excuse to leave the table, and at a hidden bar or next door, he takes a couple of fast ones because he can't dawdle over a drink. Then, when the party breaks up, he doesn't call it a day like the rest, because now his world is bright. He no longer lives in reality. The first drink made the change, not only physical but mental. He has broken his vow that he would stay away from liquor. He has broken his promise to himself and his friends. His conscience is bothering him. He must cover it up, quiet it. That's why the two extra drinks while his friends are talking and laughing. He knows they'll talk about him, too—"Hope we haven't started him off again," they'll say. But he'll show them. He knows what he's doing this time!

The party is over, the rest are on their way home. They have a big day tomorrow. This occurs to him, too, but like that first jab of conscience, this also must be covered up. Let's forget about it—just a couple more in a side-street bar where there's nobody he knows. Four or five drinks later, he's hit up an acquaintance. He's slapping him on the back—things are going great. He's incensed when the bartender suggests he's had enough. Even when this new-found friend sneaks away, he doesn't realize that he's pretty sloppy and much too noisy. They're all crazy! Down the street there's a nice spot. . . .

And somewhere during the night the curtain drops—blackout! Habit and reaction or a helpful taxi driver or maybe a policeman gets him home. He is put to bed while the hearts of those who care for him die a little more.

After a heavy, restless sleep, he gets up, refusing to look back or ahead. He has one thought only, to get out to where, without criticism, he can have just a couple of drinks to stop the cold sweat on his forehead and the trembling of his hands. Just a couple of drinks will fix him up—and they do. Now he can go to work. He can cover up the breath some way, and maybe slip out at noon for two more to hold him through the afternoon. He makes it. Work is over and no one said anything. What a relief! Now he can have a few honest drinks, quietly, before he goes home. Just a few, and this time, he'd better take a bottle home so there won't be that awful morning again. But somehow or other, late that night, when he does go to bed, heavy in forgetfulness, the bottle is empty.

Each day is a little harder, a little more risky than the one before. Finally the body that has been nourished largely on alcohol for days cannot take it any more. He's come to the end of another cycle. Like a lost person in the woods, he has circled to behold his own footprints.

It has all happened to me.

I think no state of mind can be darker than the days or remorse of the alcoholic, knowing that he is beating down all the things he loves and undermining his own health and sanity. But I know there can be an end to the darkness, and a permanence to the brightness. The cycle can be stopped right side up. I have proved it!

After it became apparent to me that "cures" and sanitariums were only temporary respites in the wretched life I could no longer tolerate, I tried psychiatry for a year. I became "dry" while studying with a man who used the Peabody system of impressing truths on the subconscious mind, and thus changing habit patterns. Here, too, there was something lacking. After a few months, I felt again that I was a normal person and, therefore, could be what is known as a normal drinker. My first attempt was of course a dismal failure. I was in that old whirlpool again—worse than ever. By this time I knew in my sober moments that I must hunt for something to hang on to, something that would be with me always.

Religion, as such, had never occurred to me as a cure. In fact, in my guilty state of mind I generally steered clear of anything that smacked at all of the church. And yet, often when I sat down at the piano alone, I would find myself singing along with a tune that had stayed with me since childhood: "The old-time religion. . . . was good for our fathers. . . . it's good enough for me."

My father had taught it to me. What a struggle life had been for him! I can remember my school-days in Canada. He was the minister in Port Hope, with two outlying pulpits to fill on Sunday afternoons. Weekdays he taught in the country school—the little red schoolhouse I attended three miles away in Port Britain. He was raising and educating a family of four boys—and his church salary was $900 a year. I don't know what he got for teaching school; I know only that it was precious little. Yet he and my wonderful mother were sustained. It was the old-time religion.

In radio, I had made my father's yearly salary in a single week—and yet here I was teetering on the edge of hopelessness and poverty. By now I couldn't get a radio job of any kind. If an appointment was granted it was only to say, "I'm sorry, Broke. In my book you're one of the greatest voices that was ever on the air, but there's nothing for you. You know your reputation—why should I stick my neck out?"

It got to a place that even if I was given an audition I would either do so very badly because my self-confidence was so shaken, or I'd try too hard and be worse. In between, I would do odd jobs, when I could get them—neighborhood canvassing, house painting, factory chores, laying concrete blocks—trying to tell myself that I didn't want radio work, that I hadn't found my real vocation yet, but knowing down deep that I was a poor liar.

Twice I had been forced into personal bankruptcy. My circle of friends had dwindled to a select few who would arrange for me to occupy an unrented apartment until it was taken, or who would bring me to their country place for a week-end because they knew I was hungry. As for financial help—maybe a dollar or two, no more. They knew what I would do. As for jobs in radio—well, I was a great guy, but—

One day, as I was making the rounds of the agencies, I ran into a fellow I knew who had faced the same problem. He had drunk himself out of a good production job in radio, but once more he was happy and busy, directing in radio, better than ever. Perhaps this was what I needed; someone who really understood my problem. Someone who would not look upon me as an outcast, who would accept me as a man with a problem, and together we would try to work it out. He talked to me that way, and when he said he was going to a meeting where there were a lot of people just like us, I wanted to go along.

It was a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous in Forest Hills, N.Y. As I sat there listening to other men and women speaking openly of the years they had lost, of the problems they had faced, I no longer felt alone. By concerted effort and with the help of a Power greater than themselves they had been able to stay away from alcohol twenty-four hours at a time, until some had been happily sober for years, reinstated in society and back at their jobs with a new light in their eyes and a buoyancy in their steps.

I listened and watched, and I thought, I was happy here—happier than I could remember being for years, and when they got together afterward for coffee and cakes, I found myself among a group of people I could understand. Here there was no hush-nush. If you told of some awful thing you had done, they would top it by telling you of one of their experiences—and they could laugh about it! Here was a group of people who had been through the mill.

Three of these strangers offered a helping hand that night. One man who had been fired from an advertising agency and was making good now in a newsreel job, told me he would try to make an appointment for me with his boss. Another said it was a bad thing to be alone, and didn't I want to come home with him and his wife? Still another gave me three addresses in New York where I could get part-time employment.

And all these had been drunks! What was this warmth? What was the well-spring from whence came these friendly smiles and helping hands?

I had a long talk with the fellow who had brought me, "It's simple," he said, "We join nothing, pay no dues, come and go as we wish, but there is a great tie that binds us—the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

Here it was again: the old-time religion.

"What do I do?" I asked.
"It's simple. You want to stop drinking. Right here are a lot of people like you. First, we admit that our drinking is out of control, and that it is interfering with our lives. Then we admit that there is a Higher Power who can help us in our struggle for freedom and happiness. We decide to do without drink for the next twenty-four hours. Then we go home and read the book that explains the whole thing. We talk to others who have made it work—and then we come back to the next meeting."

"Later on, when we have found our footing and are feeling stronger, maybe we'll tell the others some of our experiences. By this time we have learned to rectify the wrongs we have done; we hold no grievances and take a square look ahead. Then, when we have really accomplished something, comes the most important step of all—we call it the 'Twelfth Step.' We go out and help the other fellow who needs help."

Here it was: the old-time religion, but used in a different way, Christ's fundamental method, "Go ye and preach the gospel."

Six years have slipped away since that night, six happy, redeemed, useful years. In the past two years my record tells me that I have worked with and helped scores of people in and out of my profession to find an end to their heart-breaking search for normal, happy living. The "cures," the sanitariums and even the man who brought me the Peabody method, all overcooked one big thing. A man needs something powerful to hold on to, no matter what the circumstances may be, in a crowd or alone. A.A. has it, in that "Power greater than ourselves"—God.

During the war, in order to help in the all-out effort for armament, I took what was called a refresher course in engineering, for I had studied it in college. This refresher course enabled me to brush up on a lot of knowledge that had lain dormant in my mind for years, and through it to be of service later as chief inspector of the parts department in a great airplane factory.

For me, A.A. was a refresher course in fundamental Christianity, in those truths a boy had learned in a Canadian manse, and that a timid, blustering young man had tried to forget.

To everyone who comes to A.A. or some other such organization, strength and progress are to be had in unselfish fellowship. Joined by faith in and reliance upon God, the individual and the group are tapping limitless resources for living victoriously.

No, there's no way of guessing how many people hear my voice on the thirteen broadcasts each week. But I can count the hundreds of letters, and I do, as I read the wonderful messages of "Welcome back!" And I know from reading those letters that my voice somehow tells them that I love life and am enjoying every minute of it, thankful to God it was given me to return to the work and friends I love so much. And now, knowing more of my story, maybe others will hear a message in some of the things I say over the air, and maybe they, too, will come to know there is a way out.

You see, there are at least three places in the Bible where it says, in essence: "The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God."

Sturgill, State's First As Collector of Taxes Seven Years in a Row

The Kentucky Department of Revenue noted recently when Ex-Sheriff Troy B. Sturgill, Prestonsburg, was given his quietus on collection of taxes for last year that he was the first Kentucky Sheriff to receive seven consecutive tax quietuses since state law prohibited a Sheriff from succeeding himself.

Mr. Sturgill's seven years in a row collector came about through a combination to fill the unexpired term of the late Dr. W. L. Stumbo in 1943, and his subsequent election to the four-year term.

Former Printer Man Dies Monday in Ohio; Was Last of Family

Ex-Sheriff B. L. Sturgill was notified here this week that his uncle, Tan Allen, a former resident of Printer, had died Monday morning at his home in Kitts Hill, Ohio. A retired farmer, Mr. Allen left this county about 10 years ago to reside in Ohio. He was about 80 years old. Born and reared in the vicinity of Printer, he was the last of the family of Joel and Florence Allen. He was a member of the Mormon Church and had a wide circle of relatives and friends in this county. His wife, Martha Roberts Allen, died three years ago.

Surviving are several children, none of whom reside in this county. Funeral rites were conducted at Kitts Hill and burial made there, Wednesday.

Mrs. E.P. Hill announced this week that a rehearsal of the Jenny Wiley pageant, one of the outstanding historical features of the Sesquicentennial, will be held on the playground here Wednesday, June 28, at 8 p.m.

For all these events and those previously announced Sesquicentennial leaders were preparing this week, ironing out last-minute details, preparing for the smooth handling of the big and diversified program over a four-day period.

Prestonsburg will don its "new look" for the Sesquicentennial, June 25, when gay decorations will bedeck the town. Ninety-five per cent of Prestonsburg's business men have subscribed to decorations, it was said this week, and unanimous participation in this program of beautification is sought.

The office building, it was said, will be in the Stafford Addition to Paintsville.

WAYL'ND CLUB TO COOPERATE

With Sesqui by Sending Beauty Princess, Giving Away Automobile Here

The Lions Club of Wayland last week announced its full cooperation with all those others who are working to make of the Floyd county Sesquicentennial celebration a success.

It not only is sponsoring a beauty contest in its community to select a princess to send here for the Sesquicentennial beauty contest but also will add to the Sesqui crowd on July 4 by giving away a new Chevrolet sedan here. The club originally planned to give the prize away at Lions Field, Wayland, but made the change to Prestonsburg in deference to the Sesquicentennial celebration.

New officers, elected by the Wayland club last Thursday, will be installed at the last meeting this month. These are: J. C. Wells, president; S. C. Berkeley, first vice-president; Robert H. Hicks, second vice-president; Quentin R. Terry, third vice-president; A. G. DeCoursey, secretary-treasurer; Ralph L. Gardner, tall-talker; Herman Harmon, liontamer; Noah D. Howard, greeter.

The board of directors: G. E. Evans, Jr., and Edwin Gibson, one-year holdovers; Tom Wallace and Ray Long, for two-year terms.

Old Laws, Not Recent Changes Causing Game, Fish Violations, In Floyd County, Says Officer

Slight changes in the fish and game regulations recently adopted by the State Department of Game and Fish are not affecting law enforcement in Floyd county so much as the lack of observance of the old laws, Bernard Baldridge, county conservation officer, said this week.

Baldridge, in arresting eight Floyd countyans for the offense cited in paragraph 12 of KRS 150.175 which specifies certain license requirements and reads as follows:

"A state-wide hunting license, which authorizes the holder thereof to take or pursue wild animals in any county of this state, with bow and arrow, gun, gun and dog, or to take wild birds with bow and arrow, or with gun, and to participate in a fox hunting party entered in hunting or pursuing red fox with dogs for sport; and to take any wild birds with either a hunting or fishing license, he said.

The only changes made by the state Game & Fish Commission are extending the open season on grouse

Occupational Licenses In State Must Be Had By July 1st Deadline

Frankfort, Ky., June 21 (Spl.)—State occupational licenses for the license year of 1950-51 must be obtained by July 1, Robert A. Thompson, director of the local relations division, Department of Revenue, announced yesterday.

Occupational licenses, applying to restaurants, ice cream or soft drink establishments, pool halls, bowling alleys, tobacco retailers, theaters, etc., are issued by the county clerk in each county and run from July 1 to June 30 each year.

It is the responsibility of the operators to obtain the proper license, Thompson said. There is a 20 cent penalty on operators who fail to obtain them by July 1. Some of the state fees, which do not include clerk's fees, are listed.

A $10 license is required for each restaurant serving hot food, hot drinks or both, to the general public and a $5 license for each retail outlet of soft drinks or ice cream.

For each billiard or pool table or bowling alley, regardless of size, where a fee is charged directly or indirectly, the license is $30 for the first table or alley plus $5 for each additional table or alley.

Each retail outlet for tobacco products must pay a $10 license fee and a cigarette wholesale license of $25.

Theaters must pay 20c per seat occupational license, and this means any building in which moving pictures, vaudeville, musical entertainment or plays are regularly given. Drive-in or open-air theatres are calculated on a basis of two seats for each parking space for a motor vehicle.

SENATE OKEHS KY. HATCHERY

$275,000 Bill Includes 50-a. of Rearing Ponds; Measure Sent to House

The Senate passed and sent to the House in Washington last Friday, a bill authorizing the spending of $275,000 to establish a U.S. fish hatchery and 50 acres of rearing ponds in Kentucky.

The bill was introduced by Senator Virgil Chapman and co-sponsored by Senator Garrett Withers, Representative Tom Underwood, Lexington, is sponsoring it in the House.

Chapman said the F. and W. Wildlife Service had not chosen a site, but reported it "had several good ones under consideration."

Need Is Cited

The Kentucky Senator said no other state, with the possible exception of Missouri, had greater need for such a project because of the great demand for such fish as bass, crappie and bluegills to stock its ponds, streams, and lakes.

Chapman said 120,000 ponds in Kentucky needed stocking and that new ponds were being dug at the rate of 12,000 a year. He added that the Wildlife Service estimated a one-acre pond should supply not only recreation but 300 to 400 pounds of food a year.

Chapman said the state has several small hatcheries but that the only U.S. hatchery in Kentucky now is located in the state fairgrounds, Louisville. The Wildlife Service has been attempting, without great success, to stock Kentucky waters by hauling fish from other states.

EMMA BEATS LOUISA, 7-6

Louisa, Ky., June 16 (Spl.)—The Floyd county community of Emma was well-represented here this week—so well represented, in fact, that the Emma Tigers trounced the Louisa Tri-State baseball nine, 7-6, Tuesday night.

There was no scoring until the third inning which saw Louisa cash in two runs on two hits and a walk. Emma asserted itself in the fourth with three runs gained on an error, three walks and one hit. Louisa tied the score at 3-3 with a run realized on two hits and an error in the lower half of the fourth.

The Tigers forged ahead in the top of the fifth with two runs on three hits and a walk. They added one run in each the seventh and ninth innings to account for their scoring.

Louisa made a strong bid in the last of the ninth. The losers scored three runs on three walks and an error.

B. Goble and A. Childers led Emma's hitting attack with three for five and two for four respectively. Joe Weddington, Emma catcher, scored two runs in two times charged at bat and Charlie Burchett tallied two in three trips.

Flying Saucers Are Real And Good News for U.S., Commentator Claims

The flying saucers are real; they are made not in Russia or in Mars but in the United States; and when the U.S. Air Force sees fit to release information on them it will be good news for Americans.

So declares Henry J. Taylor, well-known journalist and radio commentator, in the July Reader's Digest. The article is condensed from a broadcast.

The saucers development is "a big says, from small white disks 20 inches wide to big ones 250 feet across. Nearly all are round; some are flat and edged up like saucers, others are raised in the center like a pie. Some are guided, others are not. They emit no stream or light or smoke, have no indication of a propelling mechanism and no sound. They can stand stationary in the air, then dash off to right or left with increasing speed. Their function is an important military secret.

Nine out of ten reports of flying saucers are due to imagination or confusion, Taylor states. But several have been substantiated. Nine flying disks, sighted flying over the West Coast by United Airlines Captain E. J. Smith, were real. Five seen over the Cascade Mountains of Oregon were real. So were a 100-foot saucer observed over New Mexico in April, 1949, and a 250-footer sighted over Madisonville, Ky., on January 7, 1948.

The saucers development is "a big and expanding experimental project which has been progressing in the United States for three years," Taylor says. It has gone through three stages, reaching peaks in public observation in July, 1947, January, 1948 and April, 1950.

"A flaming, cigar-shaped object about a hundred feet long," reported over Montgomery, Ala., by two reliable Eastern Airlines pilots, was real too, the author states. But it was not cigar-shaped, nor was it a "flying saucer." It was a U.S. Navy experimental fighter, "a great jet airplane of incredible speed." Though nearly round, its extremely fast flight (an- other military secret) made it appear elongated and cigar-shaped to the human eye.

Chances of finding a flying saucer are slight, because most are made of material which disintegrates in the air. If you should find one, however, you will read the following message stenciled on it:

"Military secret of the United States of America (and a number). Anyone damaging or revealing description or whereabouts of this missile is subject to prosecution by the United States Government. Call collect at once. (Telephone number and address of a U.S. Air Base.) Non-explosive."

SPORTS AFIELD

The ability to recognize and read the sign of the red fox is the most effective method of learning about that elusive animal, and it's exciting sport, too.

Outdoor hawkshaws find sign reading more challenging when the snow is gone. Tracks may appear on most any ground surface free of vegetation, especially when the soil has been softened by rains or thaws.

The oval shape and the unusually small toe pads are distinctive characteristics reflected in the track. The mark of the heel pad does not project forward between the outermost toe prints as in the dog track, and the furry nature of the foot may be seen on good tracking surface. The largest track of a forefoot that I have found measured 2.8 inches long and 1.8 inches wide. The track of a hind foot is always smaller, and the mark of the heel pad is about half as wide as that of a forefoot.

The track arrangements for the different gaits are similar to those of the domestic dog, except in walking or trotting the tracks of the fox are an almost straight line.

Naturalist Tom Scott suggests that when studying fox sign, you learn to identify the sharp, penetrating odor of fox scent. Their droppings are also good sign. Typical droppings are usually in two to four segments, but there may be as many as nine.

Sign may be seen where the fox oeds down. The bed may be found almost anywhere from a high ridge to the depths of a weedy swale, often in a sunny exposure out of the wind. The circular bedding is about 15 inches in diameter.

Those who have preconceived ideas as to the great quantities of game taken by foxes will be disappointed at finding so few "kills" on the trail. So examine all prey carefully to become acquainted with characteristic feeding mannerisms of the killer.

You will find fox dens almost anywhere from gravelly knolls to temporarily dry marshes and from old woodchuck dens to dry drainage tile. A single family may use five or more different dens during the denning period from March through June. Except during breeding seasons, dens are only rarely used.

If you find pups try coaxing them to the mouth of the den. You can do it with a squeaking noise made by sucking with the lips pressed to the back of the hand.

Good Telephone Service Requires Increased Rates

Meeting Kentucky's needs for good telephone service is important to everybody in the state. That's why the following facts are important to you.

- 1 Southern Bell's Kentucky rates based on costs of two years ago
 Present rates are based on costs of providing service as of March 31, 1948. More than two years' experience has proved these rates too low to provide the good, improved and expanded service that Kentucky requires today.
- 2 Costs of providing service have risen sharply in past two years
 A general wage increase in February 1949 added $926,000 a year to our wage costs in Kentucky. Depreciation costs also went up. Employee pension costs went up. Social Security tax rates went up. Other costs also went up—and wage costs are going up further as a result of a shortening of wage schedules in May 1950. Speaking of wages—from 1939 through 1949, wage increases added $6,900,000 a year to our wage costs in Kentucky. The annual revenue from rate increases since 1939 is failing by $2,700,000 to cover this one item alone—to say nothing of all the other cost increases.
- 3 Telephone facilities cost a great deal more today
 One of the biggest reasons why revised rates are needed is the increased cost of new facilities required to provide good, improved and expanding service. To illustrate—present subscriber rates are based on our investment on March 31, 1948, when that investment averaged $204 per telephone, but facilities for each telephone added since that date have cost $325. Subscriber rates intended to provide only a reasonable return for a $204 telephone are, of course, too low for a $325 telephone—leaving an investment of $121 per telephone for which present rates provide no return at all.
- 4 Good telephone service calls for additional new facilities
 Added telephones increase the value of service for existing subscribers because they can reach and be reached by more people. Since 1945, we have added 116,000 telephones in Kentucky. Adding them, and improving the service in other ways, has cost $51,000,000 in new facilities. Further progress and development in Kentucky require a further improved and expanded telephone service, which in turn calls for large quantities of new facilities—$10,000,000 in 1950 alone, with continued heavy construction also needed for the next several years.
- 5 New facilities require adequate earnings to attract capital
 The money to pay for new facilities does not come from subscribers' payment of their bills, because this money covers only wages, taxes, maintenance and other day-to-day costs. Capital for new facilities must come from people who can be persuaded to invest their money in the telephone business in the hope of adequate earnings.
- 6 Earnings in Kentucky are too low to attract needed capital
 Our earnings in Kentucky today are too low to attract the additional capital needed. In the postwar period of insufficient earnings, we have been able to obtain needed construction capital because of investors' faith in the soundness and fairness of Kentucky and its institutions. However, actual earnings and not hoped-for earnings must of necessity be the basis of raising capital for future construction. Present rates must be revised in order to provide earnings that are adequate for the good, improved and expanding telephone service that Kentucky needs and that we are eager to furnish.

Betsy Layne Minister Lonesome Pine Leader To National Jamboree

The National Jamboree Troop of the Boy Scouts of America, Lonesome Pine Council, will hold their Pre-Jamboree Training Course at Camp Arrowwood, starting on Sunday afternoon, June 25. All Scouts and leaders going to the Jamboree will camp at Camp Arrowwood on June 25, 26 and 27, where they will take part in a training course to prepare them for the Jamboree at Valley Forge. At 3:27 p.m., they will board the train which will take them to Ashland where they will become a part of a special train carrying contingents from Cincinnati, Huntington and Pikeville to the Jamboree.

There will be a total of 60 Scouts and leaders leaving Pikeville on June 27. These include Scouts from all parts of the Lonesome Pine Council. They will be under the leadership of Scoutmaster Richard Wampler, Coeburn, Va., and the Rev. Robert Anderson, of Betsy Layne, Ky. Assistant Scoutmasters are Earl Acuff, Whitesburg, Sam Snow, Coeburn, Va., and Edward Dillon, field executive, of Big Stone Gap, Va. In addition to the boys leaving from Pikeville, five Scouts under the leadership of Arthur Crump, Council commissioner of Lonesome Pine Council, will take their Pre-Jamboree Training at Akron, Ohio, starting on June 24, and will be a part of the Region Four band.

There will be approximately 42,000 Scouts and leaders at the Jamboree at Valley Forge, which will run from June 30 to July 7. On the return trip Scouts from the Lonesome Pine Council will have an opportunity to tour the city of Washington and return home on July 9.

The National Jamboree is held approximately once every 12 years under the auspices of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America. The last Jamboree was held in Washington in 1927. The war prevented any such activity until the present time. Many important visitors, including President Truman and Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, will be guests at the Jamboree and will take part in the activities. Also, a feature of the Jamboree will be a visit by the National Executive Board of the Boy Scouts of America, just following their meeting in Philadelphia.

Business Outlook Good, Says University Dean

The nation's immediate business outlook is bright, Dr. C. C. Carpenter, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Commerce, said last week in an address before an audience of bankers attending the third annual Kentucky School of Banking at Lexington. Present conditions which lessen the hazards of severe future depressions, he said, are more efficient credit controls, more caution in business itself, a government policy committed to stabilizing employment, and slowly accumulating eligibility benefits under Social Security.

Holfield wrote Louis William Gorman, a Covington attorney, that Kentucky statutes forbid anyone filling two county offices at once.

Mayo Receives Degree From U. of Michigan

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The University of Michigan's 106th commencement was held Saturday in the Michigan Stadium, with Sir Oliver Franks, British ambassador to the United States, giving the address.

There are 4,388 candidates for degrees at this June commencement which will bring the total for the year to more than 7,000. Among those graduating Friday was Walker Porter Mayo, son of Mrs. W. P. Mayo, Prestonsburg, who received the Master of Science degree.

John Graham became the owner of the Preston survey of several thousand acres and other surveys which covered Prestonsburg and Floyd county, and Graham appears to have become the owner of the townsite. It was laid off into lots and a public square, where the first courthouse was built about the year 1800, which was destroyed by fire in 1808, and a deed from John Graham to the Magistrates of Floyd county was made to replace a former deed to the public square in 1808. (This deed is shown on record in the office of the County Court Clerk.)

The square began at and including the lot where E. P. Arnold's funeral parlor now stands and extends on Main street, including the Auxier hotel, Elizabeth Apartments and offices which is second floor to Kroger's and Western Auto Store, Odd Fellows hall, second floors to Scott's Store, the Combs Building, Hughes Building and the First National Bank, to what is known on the plat as River Street, leading down to the river where the old bridge stands and across the street and including a fifty-foot lot where the New Dixie Cafe is now located and where now is the Griffith Jewelry Store, Main Street extended from the new bridge at Dr. Callihan's residence ad parallel with the river, the River Street and down the river passing the residence of Mrs. James Goble (which street is now broken off into the river) to a street to the residence of Mrs. Maggie Leete known as Lower Cross Street, and extending east to the hill at the foot of the cemetery at Trimble Branch. At the upper end of the city from Doctor Callihan's there is a street now known as Graham Avenue, running east to the hill. A street known as Second Street ran from the residence of W. H. Layne to the residence of Mrs. Maggie Leete. The remaining street was Center and was known as Main street and now known as Court street, running from the corner at the Bank Josephine to the Baptist Church where it stopped. The land back of these streets on the north and west and east of Big Sandy was farm land and, above and below, in recent times has been laid off into lots and new streets added and, last and best of all, is the new boulevard of the Mayo Trail, blazing its way to all points east, west, north and south.

Sketches History of P'burg, Sesquicentennial Host City

(Ten days more and Prestonsburg will be host to the 150th birthday party of the original Floyd county to all the thousands of the present Floyd and those of the other counties which comprised the original mountain empire from which was created 14 other counties. The following excerpts from a paper read by Mrs. Grace D. Ford before a convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1933, is appropriate, since it pertains to the history of this, the section's oldest town and the seat of the Sesquicentennial celebration.—Editor.)

The population of Prestonsburg, from official and unofficial data, is about three thousand; it is a city of the fourth class of five churches and two banks.

It was laid out in the year 1797, and was only a station as they were then called. This was Preston Station, founded by Colonel John Preston and John Graham, his surveyor, and in whose names a large portion of the lands of Floyd county were granted under Virginia patents in 1781; early settlement of Kentucky and the admission into the Union.

John Graham became the owner of the Preston survey of several thousand acres and other surveys which covered Prestonsburg and Floyd county, and Graham appears to have become the owner of the townsite. It was laid off into lots and a public square, where the first courthouse was built about the year 1800, which was destroyed by fire in 1808, and a deed from John Graham to the Magistrates of Floyd county was made to replace a former deed to the public square in 1808. (This deed is shown on record in the office of the County Court Clerk.)

The square began at and including the lot where E. P. Arnold's funeral parlor now stands and extends on Main street, including the Auxier hotel, Elizabeth Apartments and offices which is second floor to Kroger's and Western Auto Store, Odd Fellows hall, second floors to Scott's Store, the Combs Building, Hughes Building and the First National Bank, to what is known on the plat as River Street, leading down to the river where the old bridge stands and across the street and including a fifty-foot lot where the New Dixie Cafe is now located and where now is the Griffith Jewelry Store, Main Street extended from the new bridge at Dr. Callihan's residence ad parallel with the river, the River Street and down the river passing the residence of Mrs. James Goble (which street is now broken off into the river) to a street to the residence of Mrs. Maggie Leete known as Lower Cross Street, and extending east to the hill at the foot of the cemetery at Trimble Branch. At the upper end of the city from Doctor Callihan's there is a street now known as Graham Avenue, running east to the hill. A street known as Second Street ran from the residence of W. H. Layne to the residence of Mrs. Maggie Leete. The remaining street was Center and was known as Main street and now known as Court street, running from the corner at the Bank Josephine to the Baptist Church where it stopped. The land back of these streets on the north and west and east of Big Sandy was farm land and, above and below, in recent times has been laid off into lots and new streets added and, last and best of all, is the new boulevard of the Mayo Trail, blazing its way to all points east, west, north and south.

The courthouse square was abandoned in about the year 1890 and laid off into lots, now occupied as before stated and the new courthouse was built in 1890.

The railroad was extended to Prestonsburg about the year 1902. From that time it became a center of activity in the coal business; and at one time within the corporate limits there were four coal mines giving employment to a large number of men with payrolls running into thousands of dollars. It is a fact that more miners owned their homes which they acquired from their work in the mines than any other section of the country, but, unfortunately, due to the over-production of coal and the strong competition in the Northern fields, these mines have all been abandoned. But Prestonsburg by being strategically located and the county seat, is the beneficiary of the large and rich coal fields of Beaver Creek.

It was thought that the abandonment of the mines was the end of its future. Yet no sooner had the mining begun to lag than natural gas was found within the corporate limits, and these first wells were the nucleus to the wide development of natural gas all around Prestonsburg and in Floyd county.

Previous to the discovery of gas, which was accidental, this industry had been ignored because of the suspicion that this was an oil field, as oil had been struck in the Beaver country, but the striking of gas in Prestonsburg turned the tide of oil development into a gas field.

President Garfield when here during the Civil War made his headquarters in the old residence now owned by Mrs. Maggie Leete. General Garfield commanded Union forces at the battle that took place on Middle Creek in the Civil War and he became interested in oil just after the war. It was President Garfield and his associate, Mr. Bussis, who purchased what is now known as the Garfield or Harkins Addition to Prestonsburg, and they in a crude way drilled three wells near the mouth of Middle Creek. These wells produced some oil, but not in sufficient quantities. Years later, Guffey and Galey drilled oil wells in the same vicinity.

IN CASE YOU DIDN'T KNOW—

It's Against the Law To Join in Fox Chase Sans Hunting License

It is against the law to fox-hunt without hunting license, and eight Floyd county men became painfully aware of that fact this week.

They were arrested this week on warrants sworn out by a Mud Creek man and will be given trial, June 26, in county court. The defendants are Ray Allen and Columbus Lawson, of Harold, Willie Tackett, Rufus Reynolds, Ernel Isaacs, Milford Reynolds, Berry Tackett and Perry Jones, all of Teaberry and vicinity.

Arrested by Conservation Officer Bernard Baldrige on the better-known offense of squirrel-hunting out of season were Taulbee, G. W., Walk and Garnard Derossett, all of the Bull Creek section. All except their two-weeks-old daughter, Mary Jane, were fined $27 each in county court, Tuesday.

The law provides, it was pointed out in connection with the fox-hunting case, that a license is as necessary in pursuing game as it is in hunting and killing it.
