Second—That to place upon the citizens an official duty so violently at variance with his aesthetic taste and habits, might intrigue him from that strictly and impeachable highway of life which has been a glowing inspiration to the youth of Carter county—beckon him down the White Mule Trail into a confusing wilderness of copper worms.

Third—That the Senate of the Commonwealth of Kentucky dares not create an office so fraught with tragic possibilities, believing rather, that it is preferable for the seductive whistle of the still to still be still and stay still, than one, lured by the phantoms of political patronage, should shock the dignity of this Assembly with fatuous babblings and bibacious barter.

Adequate Highways Yet Are 10 Years Distant

Washington, D. C., July 23—Kentucky's highways won't meet the demands of 1950's traffic for over 10 more years at the current rate of road construction expenditures, the president of the oldest good roads organization reported this week.

Tactfully, Kentucky's motorists face an even worse highway picture, Col. E. R. Needles, president of the American Road Builders' Association, declared, because substantial increases in traffic volume, weights and speeds—state registrations of motor vehicles were up 123 percent over 1948—are doing much to invalidate all-out efforts to overcome state highway system deficiencies reported by a Congressional committee to be $408,058,283. During the present year, new highway construction on that system is expected to reach the $38,000,000 mark. Col. Needles, a New York consulting engineer, cited a 42 percent rise in Kentucky traffic fatalities in the first four months of this year as one of the "high costs" of an inadequate highway network provided for the state's 693,000 motor vehicles.

"Kentucky's highway prospects, as unpleasant as they may be, still are better than the average number of years needed to overcome deficiencies on all the nation's highways, and are brighter than prospects in five of the six states which border it," Col. Needles reported. "At the present rate of expenditure, and if no additional deficiencies appeared in the interim, it would be 1966 before the nation's highways would be adequate to its needs of 1950. In Illinois, it would be over 34 years at the current rate of expenditure; in Indiana, over 11 years; in Ohio, 35½ years; in West Virginia, 18 years; in Virginia, nearly 6½ years; and in Tennessee, almost 13 years."

Good roads, he said, are vital to all residents of Kentucky because, whether they use the highways or not, the cost of highway transportation enters into everything they eat, wear or use since all such items travel by highway at least once before they reach the consumer. If roads are bad and highway transportation costs rise, the consumer thus must pay that added cost in the price of what he buys.

Kentucky stands eighth among the 48 states in the matter of time needed to replace deficient highways at the current rate of expenditure, Col. Needles said. The number of years ranges from North Carolina's slightly more than one and one-half to Rhode Island's 60.

By HENRY P. SCALF
Authority for knowledge of the first Methodist sermon in the Big Sandy valley comes from an old book, called "The History of Methodism in Kentucky," by A. H. Radford, published in Nashville, Tenn., 1868-1870. It has been quoted liberally by writers on Big Sandy, some neglecting even to credit the author. Radford had access to some interesting old church records and his work is filled with tidbits of church history. Below is a quotation from Vol. 1, 3, pages 405 and 406:
"The first appearance of the Sandy River Circuit in the Minutes is in 1809, when Benjamin Edge is appointed to it, with James Ward, then in the strength of his manhood, as the Presiding Elder.
"Cornelius McGuire, a local preacher, preceded the itinerant in this rugged field, and was the first to plant the standard of Methodism in the Sandy Valley. He came from Tazewell county, Virginia, previous to the commencement of the present century, in a company of seventy-five others, and settled on the Big Sandy river, scattering from where Pikeville now stands to the mouth of Johns Creek, a distance of 35 miles. This latter place is where Daniel Boone erected a small fort, and is known by the name of Blockhouse Bottom. The first class in this region was organized by Mr. McGuire at the house of Henry Stratton, in 1798, and consisted of Cornelius McGuire and his wife, William J. Mays and wife (Mays was from Fluvanna county, Virginia). Henry Stratton and wife, and some of the Lanes, Johns, and Auxiers.
"Henry Stratton was converted through the instrumentality of Mr. McGuire. They settled on the same bottom, 10 miles above Prestonsburg. Impressed with the importance of religion, and with a high regard for Christian people, Mr. Stratton one night, while Mr. McGuire was praying with his family, thought he would get near enough to hear him, and while making the attempt, he was seized with conviction, and rushing into the house, fell upon his knees and cried for mercy, until he was most powerfully converted. Henry Stratton, after living a life of usefulness, died in triumph.
"Cornelius McGuire continued to nurse and water the vine he had planted until the Conference of 1809, when he became the bearer of a petition to the Bishop, requesting the appointment of a preacher to that field, and that year "Sandy River" appears for the first time in the list of appointments, in charge of which Benjamin Edge is placed."

Person Can't Be Teacher And Deputy at Same Time, Keller Declares Friday

Frankfort, Ky., July 19 (Spl.)—A person can not be a school teacher and a deputy sheriff at the same time, Assistant Attorney General Owen W. Keller informed Estill Combs, Ary, chairman of the Perry county Board of Education.
He told Combs that while there is no statute prohibiting this, it is obvious that a person can't simultaneously fulfill the duties of the two offices.
Keller advised N. O. Kimbler, secretary of the State Teachers Retirement System, it cannot invest its surplus funds in road and bridge bonds issued by Harlan county. Keller explained the statutes permit the pension funds to be invested in four classes of securities and that county bonds are not included.

Who were these men that Radford states attended the first Methodist class in the Big Sandy? Of Henry Stratton we know very little. He was one of the first justices of the county, appointed for the new county of Floyd by the Governor in 1789. The Stratton genealogy has stymied family researchers for years and it has been only by the most patient piecing of evidence that anything like a true arrangement of their family tree appears. It is conceivable that Henry and Harry were one and the same person. The old house where the first church was organized has been in the Layne family for generations, they having acquired it from the Strattons. Years ago, it fell into such a state of disrepair that it was torn down, but it was always referred to as "the old Harry Stratton house." The slave quarters house Col. Harry erected for his slave domestics can still be seen now, falling to pieces. It was used for a lifetime by Moses S. Layne as a smoke-house.
Cornelius McGuire built a cabin near where Mrs. James Caldwell now lives, on U.S. 23 above Tom's Creek, but evidently his tenancy was short-lived, for tradition and other corroborative evidence indicate that he moved to Johns Creek soon thereafter.
William J. Mays was, the present writer thinks, William James Mayo. He was from Fluvanna county and we know he was here early. Radford, in copying the old record, could have misread the "o" for an "s" and thus changed the name Mayo to Mays.
The Lanes or Laynes were James Shannon Layne and his wife, Katy Hagar Layne. After James "Uncle Jimmie" talked to Moses S. "Saint" about this first Methodist meeting and said he was there, the writer heard Moses B. Layne, years ago, tell about his grandfather, James S., being at this church. That is not tradition, but the reliable statements of reliable people.
The Johns referred to was, without doubt, Thomas D. Johns, who married Nancy Layne, daughter of William S. Layne. They had married in Amherst county, Virginia, but followed their kin to the Sandy country. The Auxiers were, of course, Samuel Auxier and perhaps his wife and son, Nathaniel, Sr.
Col. Harry Stratton lived to be very old, died in either 1849 or 1850 at about 90 years of age. The old house that either he or Henry Stratton erected about 1795 and in which the first Methodist sermon was preached here, was built of hewn poplar logs and was two stories high. Moses S. Layne built a brick residence upon a point overlooking the old house and by the 20's it was falling to pieces. Soon it was razed completely. Its lifetime had spanned one and a third centuries.

It Almost Reads Your Mind!
Oh, how restful and easy and relaxing it is to sit at the wheel of a 1950 Cadillac—and cruise down your favorite highway!
Men write from all sections of the country to say that they drive their Cadillacs hundreds of miles each week—for the sheer joy of driving.
You'll never believe it until you try it—for it's an unbelievable experience.
The moment you get behind the wheel, you sense that something out of the ordinary is about to happen.
And then you're away—so quietly, and smoothly that only the objects along the road give you a sense of motion.
The great motor—so miserly of gasoline that a single tankful is usually enough for a full day's drive—sends back a thrill each time you touch the throttle. You ride as if on a magic carpet. And you hear only the soft rush of the wind—streamlining past like a lullaby.
And how easy it all is! The steering wheel seems to foresee the curves and turns. The big, powerful brakes are as soft as velvet. And the marvelous balance imparts a sense of security that puts you completely at ease.
Yes—it's a wonderful experience—which you ought to try for yourself. One hour at the wheel—and we're sure you'll feel—that it almost reads your mind!

Weeksbury Reinspection Report Announced Monday By U.S. Bureau of Mines

Washington, D. C., July 17 (Spl.)—A coal-mine reinspection report issued today by the Bureau of Mines commends the workmen and officials of the Weeksbury mine of the Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates, Coal Division, at Weeksbury, Ky., for generally good conformance with recognized safety standards. It also proposes a few further safeguards. The Floyd county mine employed 499 men and averaged 1,500 tons of coal daily when it was examined in June by Inspector Robert L. Cochran.

Blasting and electrical installations and maintenance conformed with the Federal Mine Safety Code, as did timbering at the close of the inspection. The inspector reported that loose haulage-way roof observed at several places was taken down promptly.

Ventilation was good, and the dry areas were rock-dusted to within 30 feet of the faces. Inspector Cochran advised, however, effectively allaying coal dust during cutting, and he said that not more than 60 men should be permitted to work in a split of air. He advised brakemen to stop getting on and off moving cars, and all the men to comply with the company's "no smoking" rule.

Other improvements completed during the inspection were applying additional rock dust in one room, equipping two locomotives with gongs, removing the trolley wire from contact with a cross bar and guarding it at a sending station, and providing overload protection for the trailing cables of two locomotives. Improvements completed between inspections included properly bonding the haulage tracks and switches, equipping four locomotives with rerollers and providing overload protection for the cables of four cable-reel locomotives, and adequately insulating the telephone wires where they cross the trolley wires.

As of May 10, there were 8,678,906 licensed radio sets in new Japan.

KENTUCKY ON THE MARCH

By EWING GALLOWAY

An acquaintance in a West Kentucky town told me the other day about a man suspected of collecting unemployment insurance in both Kentucky and Indiana. I passed the information along to O. B. Hannah, director of unemployment insurance, Frankfort. The district branch of service in this state will check on the suspect, then Indiana officials will be asked to cooperate. The source of the tip will be held in strict confidence.

Economy Security Commissioner Vego Barnes tells me about a claimant who announced on the day his fund dried up that he had found a job. A check-up revealed that the claim-taker had been employed all the time, whereupon the chiseler was punished in the county court.

Another claimant wore a taxi driver's cap to the insurance office. He had been driving a cab all the time he collected insurance. Turned himself up, as it were.

A claims taker recognized a saleswoman who had waited on her in a department store.

These are a few cases from a list of hundreds.

Since all the unemployment insurance money comes from employers and none from claimants, employers have a direct interest in exposing fraudulent claims, and more than half the tips to the service come from them.

Spite tips have been useful in many instances. Persons with a grievance of one kind or another are pretty apt to turn up a chisler collecting insurance while employed.

The department seems to be determined to run down and prosecute all fraudulent claimants, and Commissioner Barnes and Insurance Director Hannah invite the cooperation of all loyal citizens of the state.

Nobody should hesitate to sign his name to letters. The department is compelled by law to hold all letters or telephone calls in strict confidence. Anonymous tips also will be followed and investigated.

I would suggest that letters be directed to Director Hannah of the Unemployment Insurance Office, Frankfort. Telephone calls may be made to the nearest branch of economic security service. If all this were not a confidential matter I would award a tin star to all tipsters for helping to suppress fraud against the state.

City Can't Be Charged For Using Tax Figures, Prestonsburg Judge Told

Frankfort, Ky., July 18 (Spl.)—A city can't be charged for the use of the county tax commissioner's assessment of city property, Assistant Attorney General Hal Williams declared recently in an opinion given R. W. Feller, Prestonsburg police judge, and Roy Melvin, Paintsville.

Williams explained that the 1949 special session of the Legislature empowered cities to pass ordinances enabling them to use the county assessment of their property.

But the tax commissioner cannot charge the city a fee for using his assessment, Williams said. If a city wants a certified copy of the city assessment in the county tax commissioner's office, it can ask the county clerk for a certified copy of it. The clerk can charge the city for the copying work, Williams said.

Home Accidents, Fourth Leading Cause of Death In Ky., Are Preventable

There's no place like home for having accidents—most of them preventable and many of them causing death and destruction. By exercising care and caution parents can keep their children safe from many of the hazards that result from negligence on someone's part. Accidents, Dr. Marvin Ransdell, county health officer, points out, are the fourth leading cause of death in Kentucky and much can be done to reduce the death rate from this cause.

That bottle of nail polish remover on the dressing table, a bottle of eye on the bottom shelf of the kitchen cabinet, or even a box of baking soda—such simple household articles as these may result in death for a small child if taken internally.

In recent months a baby girl died as a result of a dose of "medicine" given her by her three-year-old sister. The "medicine" was a bottle of hair waving solution, which the mother had left on the dresser. This happened in Kentucky, as did the case of the two small children—one just old enough to walk—who died of strychnine poisoning. While playing in the yard, they picked up some pieces of bread that had been coated with poison intended for stray dogs.

These three deaths and many others occurring throughout the state could have been prevented. Great care is needed when poisons are used. Containers should be placed on topmost shelves—never where a child might reach them—nor should poison be put on objects which a child might pick up. These precautions are particularly necessary now that it is the time of year to use insecticides, rat poisons, etc.

Boys and girls should also be taught not to handle articles in the medicine chest. Most poisons are labeled as such but small children cannot read the labels and, in addition, many non-poisonous products can cause illness or even death to a small child.

OHIO'S FIRST WIDOW GIVES VIEW ON WAR

Columbus, O.—Ohio's first widow of the Korean war came home and expressed support for the U.S. intervention which resulted in the death of her husband in a plane crash. "I guess our intervention was necessary," said young Mrs. Doris Sayre of Apple Grove, who landed here after a 7,000-mile evacuation flight from Japan. "Russia has gone far enough," she added. Her husband, First Lt. Darrel Sayre, died in the crash of his plane in Northern Japan on June 28. He had left the Yakota air base on a combat flight to North Korea.

Kentucky Crop Harvest Will See Decline

This year's harvest of most crops in Kentucky appeared to be headed for declines from last year, according to a report last week by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The report acquired added significance in view of the present war situation.

Of 16 different crops on which reports were received from farmers, the department listed only barley and alfalfa as showing signs of a slight increase over 1949 yields. Soybeans and lespedeza hay were even with last year's figures.

Twelve other crops were reported likely to fall below last year's harvest, according to present conditions. Heavy rains during June were blamed for much of the damage to crops.

The report said that much corn and tobacco were washed out or covered with thick layers of mud. It added, however, that much progress was made in replanting and weeding during the latter part of June.

The department said: "It is as yet too early for reliable estimates of tobacco yields for the coming year, but based on condition of the crop July 1, the Kentucky burley production is expected to be 320,000,000 pounds, about 14 per cent below the previous year." The estimated yields of all types of tobacco is down 11 per cent.

Hay of alltypes is reported within 1.1 per cent of last year in acreage planted.

Corn is estimated about 6 per cent below the 1949 harvest in acreage, but about 12 per cent lower in probable yield.

Washington—One-third of the $2,800,000,000 GI insurance dividend has been paid out, the Veterans Administration reported. It said it has mailed out 5,003,950 checks amounting to $889,769,708 in the 22 working days since the project started on January 16.
