Johnson had gone to Ward Hollow to visit a former employee, and apparently died after suffering a heart attack on his return trip. His body was found by Mrs. Sara Jane Dowdy near her home, Coroner J. Fred Miller said.

Officers, Serving Capias, Find New Evidence of Liquor Law Violation

A capias issued for the arrest, of John Branham, of Martin, on a mandate of the Court of Appeals from a liquor sentence had been affirmed, resulted, Saturday, in new trouble for Branham.

When Deputy sheriffs Scott Compton and Ed Ambruge arrested him on the capias in the old case, he had in his possession a case and 12 half-pints of whiskey, they reported. The penalty in the original case was a fine of $50 and a 60-day jail term.

Raid by Sheriff A. B. Meade and deputies extended through the weekend and, until Monday, when 14 half-pints of whiskey and four cases of beer were found in the home of Lark Hunt at Hunter by Deputy Sheriffs B. L. Shurgill, Frank Parsons, John Hobson and Frank Crum.

Saturday night, Sheriff Meade and deputies raided the VFW Club, at Lackey, where they confiscated six cases of beer. They did not arrest the club operator.

Friday night, George Waddles and A. E. Stone were arrested when a search warrant uncovered five half-pints of whiskey in Waddles' car and two cases of wine in his home, at Garrett. Stone confessed using the car for the purpose of selling intoxicants. Sheriff Meade said. The arrests were made by Deputy Sheriffs Frank Crum, John Hobson and Sanford Reffitt. Stone was fined $30.50 and given 30 days in jail by Magistrate M. C. Wright.

Magistrate Wright also imposed a $50 fine and a 30-day jail term on Arton Martin on his conviction, Saturday, of possessing whiskey.

Others jailed here within the week included: Joe I. May, possessing whiskey; Billie Hinton, cold check; Pete Carroll, breaking and entering a storehouse.

Smallwood following and Johnson following the three.

"I went down there and argued with him," Johnson testified. The two men returned to the house, and after Smallwood had pushed Johnson into the room Johnson wrung the revolver from the other's hand. Before Smallwood released the weapon it discharged, however, and so when Smallwood "headed up" as if shot in the brain" members of the family thought he had been hit, Johnson explained here this week.

There the deputy constable and Spanish-American War veteran lay until around 11 p.m., Johnson said, refusing to permit anybody to move or examine him.

Asked if Smallwood was conscious while lying in the floor, Johnson said he was. "He wanted his gun," Johnson explained. "He said, 'You have got my gun, the best friend I ever had.'"

Johnson said it did not occur to him at any time to hurt Smallwood. He added that his daughter asked him and her mother to "pray for his (Smallwood's) soul."

Mrs. Johnson said her daughter had just finished baking pies when events leading up to her fatal wounding began. She said Smallwood "seemed like he couldn't realize he had shot her." He remarked, she continued, "If I have shot Helen the rest of us will go with her." Her statement in the main coincided with her husband's. She said Smallwood had his revolver in his hand when he called to her, that her daughter "was in there talking to him" when she heard the shot. She supported the wounded girl as they walked into the road, some distance from the home, calling to young Mollett. She could not remember if she alone carried the girl back into the house.

Mollett said he had known Helen Johnson about three months. The day the girl was shot, Tuesday, of last week, he had accompanied Mrs. Johnson and Helen to Prestonsburg, and had returned home with them. After dark, he continued, Smallwood entered, first going to Mr. Johnson's room, then entering the dining room and announcing he was going to make a change. "He told me," Mollett stated "I was sorry and wouldn't work, because I came up there every night. She held up for me and said if he didn't like the way we were doing he would be the one to leave."

Thereupon Smallwood pulled his revolver, at the same time saying, "You don't believe I will do it," Mollett said. Mollett added that that was when he ran, leaving by the kitchen door and running around the house. He heard the shot, he testified, when about halfway around the building.

Victim of the shot is survived by her parents, four brothers and one sister, Bobby Gene, Donald Gene, William David, Emaline and Everett. Funeral rites were conducted Saturday from the home at Melvin of her grandfather, D. J. Mullins, and burial was made in the family cemetery on Riley's Branch, Green's Funeral Home directing.

Floyd Soldier's Job Is Ticklish Business Of Patrol Missions

Shown here against a rugged mountain background in Korea are Pfc. Richard Harmon (holding carbine), son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Harmon, of Wayland, and Herman "Red" Roberts, also of this county, both members of the 179th regiment, 45th infantry division.

Pfc. Harmon has been on almost every patrol sent out by his company, and one of these ventures into the Korean No-Man's Land was the subject of a recent feature story in Stars and Stripes.

The patrol—Harmon, four others and their leader, Sgt. Leon M. Whitaker—left their company area about 4:30 a.m., and before day-break had taken concealed positions only 300 yards from a demolished village which was two miles deep in No-Man's Land, lying between two fingerlike ridges. They hid in the underbrush.

Sgt. Whitaker tells the story: "About 11 a.m., there was rifle fire and a short burst from an automatic weapon. It must have been a signal, for the firing had hardly stopped when smoke started coming from what we thought were enemy bunkers all around."

"We knew our positions weren't known, or they'd never have started those fires. So we just decided to stick around and see what we could see."

"It wasn't long before the Americans knew the enemy was around. On the opposite ridge, within easy view without the aid of field glasses, they saw three Chinese soldiers emerge from one bunker and go into another. Then only about 125 yards from where the six patrol-members lay, an enemy soldier stepped from a bunker and threw out a pan of water."

"It's about the strangest feeling I ever had," said Whitaker, "being right there within a stone's throw of the guys who are out to kill you—yet knowing they can't see you."

mitted to the Senate Public Works Committee on November 28, 1951, a recent review of the report on the Big Sandy River printed in House Document Numbered 294, 80th Congress. This review was made particularly with a view to revising the estimated costs and benefits of the proposed improvement in order to reflect current conditions. As a result of this review, it was found that the estimated costs of the project had increased greatly while monetary benefits had increased only slightly and prospective commerce had decreased, thereby resulting in an unfavorable ratio of benefits to costs. The Chief of Engineers concurred in the conclusion of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors that the proposed improvement is not warranted or advisable at this time. In accordance with the provisions of Executive Order No. 9384, the report was submitted to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget for review who advised the Secretary of the Army on August 6, 1951, that authorization of the improvement would not be in accord with my program at this time.

"I recognize your great interest in the proposed canalization of the Big Sandy River and its tributaries. I also appreciate the fact that such water resource development projects contribute to our economic growth and build our defensive strength. However, I know you will agree that, particularly during these times of restrictive budget limitations, only those civil public construction projects which are clearly justified economically, are shown to be required for the defense effort, and can be completed in time to assist our present mobilization program should be undertaken. In the absence of conclusive findings that the Big Sandy River project meets these qualifications, I do not feel justified in classifying the improvement as essential at this time."

Your Money Helps

DURING the past year, hundreds of residents of Floyd county received a wide variety of assistance from the American Red Cross—assistance provided with the help of money you contributed last year.

Whether it was aid to disaster victims, the solving of some urgent problem which had beset the family of a serviceman or a veteran, the recruiting of blood for the armed forces, providing coffee and a small gift for new recruits leaving for service in the armed forces, or any of the other services performed by the Red Cross, your dollars have been in there doing your share to relieve the suffering, comfort the ill, and as far as possible, make life more pleasant for the unfortunate.

When asked to make your contribution to the 1952 Red Cross campaign, think of the good your dollars help to do, then give accordingly.

There Should Be No
 "Deals" Pulled

LOUISVILLE newspapers and citizens have discussed at considerable length what has been described as a "deal" between the Commonwealth's Attorney there and the younger Torrance who with his father killed the lawyer, McCormick.

This is not to argue the necessity or the uselessness of the official's agreement to recommend a life sentence for the younger of the two killers in order to gain a confession and to find the corpus delicti; nor is it to ponder the merits of the case for or against capital punishment. The one case in which an agreement has been reached, or a "deal" made, is not important, per se, for all the sordidness and viciousness of the crime.

What is important is this: Is any court official anywhere justified in "dealing" as one man, one official, with the rights of the people?

It is rather common practice, it is true, for those representing the Commonwealth to agree with the defense on penalties when the latter expresses a willingness to accept a sentence stiffer even than the prosecution expects to result from a jury trial. That might be considered a "good bargain," and perhaps sound economy in view of court costs, but even that isn't the traditional "trial by a jury of his peers."

Then this situation often arises: A man is indicted of murder or some other serious crime. As time passes, those individuals interested in the prosecution for some reason or other lose interest. On occasion they may decide they don't want to prosecute. The question then is, Is the Commonwealth justified in dismissing the case?

We contend it is not. For that case is not a matter of John Doe versus Richard Roe, murderer. It is the case of the People against a criminal. And the People and the defendant are entitled to their day in court, with no "deals" pulled.

THE RED CROSS SERVES

When a serviceman is urgently needed at home for a personal crisis, his official channel of communication is the American Red Cross. The Field Director stationed at his base gets vital communication through to the family, and with the facts verified by the Red Cross Chapter at home, he is helped to obtain an emergency furlough if the military authorities approve. This is just one of many services the Red Cross performs for the servicemen with the help of your money.

John Hendricks of Knox county produced 6,958 pounds of tobacco on 2.9 acres, or an average of 2,399 pounds an acre.

TO THE EDITOR

SAYS HE SAW HEALING

Editor, The Times:

I have just been to Roanoke, Va., where Ora Roberts was holding a revival, and I saw almost all kinds of diseases healed just like you read of in the New Testament.

Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Lutherans and Roman Catholics came to be healed. The meeting was founded with crowds from several states.

About the healing of the sick—of course, a preacher is not supposed to have any sense, but the doctors of medicine said that the healings were real and one doctor at Roanoke sent his child to be healed.

1938 he was employed by the Floyd County Board of Education as band director for the county school system.

This work of Elliott's has been described as "a labor of love". He has been offered other jobs and more money outside Floyd county, still in the field of music. But this "furriner" has a loyalty to Floyd county as intense as any native son's.

To his job at Betsy Layne and later to other schools of the county Elliott, a strapping, rugged specimen whose build would qualify him for an end position on a football team, brought a missionary's zeal. He has had his ups and downs in the work; there have been the discordant notes; the music did not always blow soft and sweet.

There was the time, in his earlier days at Betsy Layne, when fire levelled the school. The precious band instruments were reduced to molten metal. But did Elliott despair? Instead, he and his boys and girls gave a modern version of the Phoenix story; the band arose from the ashes. They melted the fire-twisted instruments, and molded souvenirs which they sold to raise funds with which to buy new instruments.

On another occasion thieves looted his auto while he was attending an educational meeting in Louisville. Several instruments in their cases and a suitcase containing band music were taken. The thieves were captured in the Cincinnati bus terminal and the instruments recovered, but the cases and the valuable collection of music had been jettisoned during their flight and were never recovered.

All such issues he met with the determination which is typical of his character. Although friendly and always forbearing, he is not in the habit of dodging issues. When the wet-dry question arose, a few years ago, and brought on an election, Elliott, who cares nothing for the limelight, was in the thick of things as an advocate of the dry cause. His interest in prohibition continues, unabated.

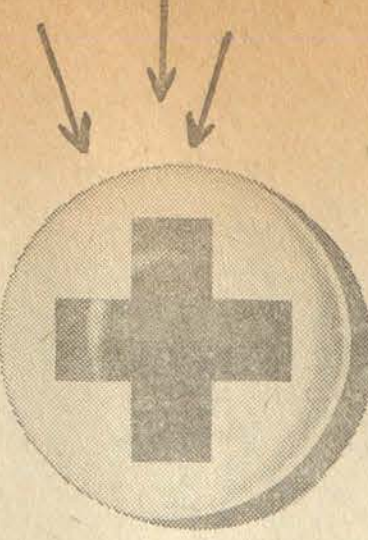

Along with his teaching of music he has brought to thousands of Floyd county youths counsel in the matter of living, by precept and example showing youngsters the better side of life. Of those who have won music scholarships and other honors under his guidance and those of his students who themselves have become professional musicians or band directors he is proud, but his greatest pride is in those who have learned this deeper education.

Except for two years spent in World War II as a medical corpsman, during which time the band work in the county was discontinued except in those schools which have their own directors, Elliott's service in the schools of the county has been without interruption. Many servicemen who returned from the far-flung theatres of war were restless, and some found things back home tedious and left to escape boredom. But Jesse Elliott returned straight to Floyd county, to his work. He was married to a Floyd county girl, Kelsa Gearheart, of Betsy Layne, in 1946, to become even closer to the people among whom he has found so many friends.

Elliott's is a fulltime work. Five days' regular schedule in the schools, then all those special events—music festivals, sports gatherings, and the like—and for Sunday his church and Sunday school. It is but natural that he is a devout Methodist and active in the work of that church. His father, Asbury Elliott, whose parents emigrated from North Carolina to Indiana in 1830, was named for Bishop Asbury, early Methodist minister and founder of Asbury College at Wilmore, Ky. His maternal great-grandmother—this has nothing to do with his religious connections—was a first cousin of "Mad" Anthony Wayne, Revolutionary War hero.

Jesse Elliott's story has not often been told. A few years ago, Harrison Elliott (no relation), who himself is a music director and a former Floyd countyman, wrote an excellent article for The School Musician telling Elliott's story. But one thing Jesse Elliott objected to strenuously about the article. It's title referred to him as "Band Pioneer of the Backwoods."

Jesse, you see, resents this "backwoods" stuff as keenly as you or I.

SYMBOL OF MERCY

The Red Cross is the symbol of mercy.
 Who made it that? You did!
 You made it the symbol of mercy by enabling the Red Cross to provide quick and sure relief for the victims of storms and floods and earthquakes and epidemics and accidents and war.
 You, we know, will keep it America's symbol of mercy by giving again this year, when your Red Cross worker calls.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

In the 1930's a little South American rodent called the nutria was imported to this country for experimental fur farming. They did not do well in captivity; unkept eventually began to exceed their sales value. So in 1940 about 50 pairs were set free in the Louisiana marshes, where they were later joined by others which escaped.

If ever immigrants took kindly to a new country, it is the nutria. They have flourished and now thrive in Louisiana, Texas and Washington where discouraged fur farmers also freed them. Maryland recently released them in an experiment. They are in New Mexico, Mississippi and Alabama. A few pioneers have even gotten as far as Michigan, Ohio, Iowa and western Canada.

Some people consider them a less than perfect acquisition for our wildlife world because like the muskrat, they dig into irrigation canals, small dams and levees. Corn, vegetables, rice and alfalfa crops are occasionally raided. However, Fish and Wildlife Service specialists say that the price paid on the market for pelts—$3.50 to $4.50 each—will automatically keep the nutria population in full check.

To keep them under control though will take a lot of trapping, according to Outdoor Writer Will Barker. A nutria has two or three litters a year and the young, before 12 months are out, produce families of their own. This rapid reproduction has made it possible for the annual catch to grow from 436 taken in the 1943-44 season to between 35,000 and 40,000 in the open season of 1950. It's easy to see why Louisiana conservation officials estimate that in about ten years the nutria may be worth $15 million a year to that state's fur trappers.

Although primarily trapped for their fur, nutrias can be eaten. Properly prepared, the pink meat has a pleasing flavor. It is served in restaurants in South America. Relatively little is known about

KENTUCKY

ON THE MARCH

By EWING GALLOWAY

As the 1952 session of the General Assembly draws to a close you can say this much for it: It may have started some projects without first figuring out where the money is coming from, but our boys in Frankfort can't be accused of giving an imitation of what I like to call the Washington Squanderbund. From Governor Wetherby down to the youngest and greenest member of the legislature, the Frankfort crowd were close enough to the folks back home to realize that Kentuckians are fed up with public extravagance. They are much closer to back-home sentiment than members of Congress.

I was a gallery spectator in both houses a month ago and what impressed me most was confusion—confusion which may not have been as bad as it seemed. There were bills enough in the 1952 session to keep the Assembly busy twelve hours a day for twelve months, if all these measures had been taken seriously. I couldn't help recalling the late Al Smith, who was one of New York's best governors and one of the Democratic party's poorest runners for the presidency.

When quite young Smith went to the legislature, and before the session began he took time to study the constitution thoroughly. That, he figured, was the best way to qualify himself for the Albany job. The session had hardly started when Smith realized that somebody ought to head off a lot of bills before they cluttered the work of committees.

When a fellow member would introduce a bill that wasn't constitutional, Al would interrupt with, "Mr. Speaker, I beg the gentleman's pardon, but his bill is contrary to section so and so of the state constitution, and I suggest that he withdraw it." In scathing scores of bad bills Smith won distinction in the legislature and started himself on a very useful public career.

The revisions and legislative research bureaus in Frankfort are performing a fine public service. How the legislature got along without them for more than a century is hard to imagine. The duties of these two bureaus is to furnish data to members of the assembly and the governor's office on proposed legislation. But, of course, they do not prevent scores of bad bills from being introduced.

Revisions and research will aid in the framing of two changes in the statutes that your correspondent has publicized in advance—taking traffic and other small penal cases out of courts in which judges are financially interested in their own decisions, and making liability insurance compulsory. When the 1954 Assembly convenes these two measures should be ready for passage. Unless voted on in the last days of the current session, the compulsory insurance measure will go over. And I'll lay a good sized bet it will pass in 1954. The insurance companies have only a mercenary motive for fighting it, and that's not going to be enough.

their living habits. But it has been discovered that the nutria occupies a habitat niche not used by other animals. It prefers deeper and fresher water than the muskrat, and eats the coarser marsh vegetation passed up by other marsh dwellers. Even in well-stocked waters, the nutria has never been seen to eat fish, nor has it shown any inclination to eat the eggs of waterfowl nesting in the same area.

Woodland Management Is Owner's Responsibility

By R. L. JOHNSON, Soil Conservation Service

(Ky-20392) 1. Woodland affords many benefits. All sizes of trees. Many little trees show this woods is not pastured. Lumber in big trees.

(Ky-30344) 2. Woods that needs improvement cutting.

(Ky-30344-A) 3. Same woods after improvement. Crooked trees, undesirable species, grape vines, dead wood removed. Usable material salvaged. Remaining trees have more room to grow.

(14-862) 4. Improvement cutting has been done and "wolf" trees removed, giving room for desirable young trees to grow.

(14-862-C) 5. Same woods five seasons later. Note excellent growth of young trees and complete ground cover.

(OH-10027) 6. "A" represents first 16 years' growth. "B" represents increased growth during the next 16 years, after release by improvement cutting.

The greater part of the earth's surface of Floyd county is covered with woods, most of which is owned by farmers. Some owners derive good income from their woods, many do not. Many acres have been damaged by fire.

Wood products as a continuous crop offers excellent opportunities for returns to owners from those lands not suited for grain, hay, pasture or row crops.

Good land use demands that land produce what it ought to produce, and do so to the limit of its capacity. Woods, then, should produce good lumber, posts, and fuel, and should be kept producing them continually for use on the farm, and for sale. Such management is the individual owner's responsibility. Burning the woods reduces its capacity to produce; pasturing is the enemy of trees. Protection against fire and livestock is the best insurance for a continuous flow of useful and profitable products from the woods.

Unfortunately, in grazing or browsing by livestock, the most valuable timber-producing species are eaten first. Consequently, the pastured woods is largely taken over by weed trees or less desirable species.

Floyd County Historical Notes

By HENRY P. SCALF

Collective local history is regional, state, even national history. The movement of a family is but an item in immigration but the collective movement of families, especially in early America, became part of our westward expansion. A study of any of our early families shows them moving westward, sometimes laterally, oftentimes directly but inexorably the attraction was towards the setting sun.

We recall the Elliott family of Southwest Virginia of which Judge John M. Elliott was a distinguished member. John Lyle Elliott, the father, mathematician, scholar and prominent in the early affairs of Morgan and for whom Elliott county was named, emigrated to East Kentucky in 1836. We do not know from whence this Elliott family had come to Southwest Virginia, but it is presumed from the evidence of other branches of the family that it came up from North Carolina. In 1830 one Jesse Elliott of Perquiman county, North Carolina, with his two brothers, their names unknown, started westward. Jesse settled in Miami county, Indiana but the other two went to other states, one to Ohio, the other to Kansas. They were early settlers in those states. The next generation of Elliotts grew to adulthood and moved westward.

The Elliotts of Floyd and Pike, we are informed, came from Virginia. In the later period of immigration into Kentucky, after the log cabin development period was over, Elliotts from North Carolina came to Big Sandy. The difference in spelling of the name is noted. Western branches of the family preferring Elliott or Elliot and the Big Sandy family writing it Eliot.

In the Licking Valley Courier, of last week under the heading of "In O' Morgan", occurs the following interesting bit of lore on Jesse James:

There is an old barn on Stacy Fork, three miles from the post office, that has an old feed box hewn out of a poplar log, in which Jesse James left $30 as "boot" in a horse trade with J. T. Wells. When Jesse James and his band rode through Morgan county about the time of the War Between the States, they came down the creek and stopped to trade horses with Mr. Wells. He did not want to trade, but Jesse decided he would trade anyway, and took a bay mare and left his bay horse and the $30 in the feed trough. The barn and trough are now owned by V. C. Burton, whose wife is a granddaughter of Mr. Wells.

Barber, of course, wired the Postmaster General the next day for instructions. Uncle Jack's rather irregular resignation stuck and Barber was stuck as postmaster.

"TO THE VICTOR BELONGS THE SPOILS"

By Judge Ed C. O'Rear

Republicans had been in power at Washington ever since 1860. There were not many of them though in Elliott county—seems not many yet. However, there was one uncompromising member of that party at Sandy Hook, Mr. Jack Spradling. He had a mill and a little store down on the Little Sandy at the edge of the town. He was postmaster at Sandy Hook and had been for years. He was stocky, square built old gentleman, hot tempered and outspoken. Being lame, he walked with a heavy hickory cane.

In the presidential election of 1884 between Cleveland and Blaine, the returns showed a close vote, depending on a few hundred to decide New York's vote and it would decide the election. There were no telephones then, and the mail came into Sandy Hook from Morehead by horseback carrier late in the day, after dark at that season. For several days the election was in doubt and everybody on tiptoe for news of the result, for instance, Rufus Vansant, attorneys Redwine and Jeff Hannah, Harry Weddington, George Whit, merchant Oppenheim, Dr. Williams, John Mannin and the Fannin boys. Finally, when the papers carried the news that Cleveland had won, Uncle Jack scanning them before distributing the other mail, first learned of the defeat of Blaine. He flew into a passion, and gathering up all the mail, stamps and other supplies of the office, stuffed it all in a canvas mail bag, muttering and denouncing everybody and everything. Then he shouldered the sack and carried it up on the hill to the store of John W. Barber, where a crowd had gathered waiting the mail. Barber was then chairman of the Elliott County Democratic Committee.

Uncle Jack stomped in and shouldered the bag of mail and all onto the counter, growling at Barber: "Here, take your d---d post office. I won't run under any Rebel administration." And out he stalked, having resigned as postmaster to the first of the opposition in authority, so he held.

Mrs. Nicholls, Wife Of Former Minister Here, Dies Mar. 15

Friends here learned this week that Mrs. C. H. Nicholls, wife of a former pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here, died suddenly at her home in Owensboro, Saturday, the day before she and her husband would have observed their 50th wedding anniversary.

Although she had been in failing health for several years, her death was a shock to relatives and friends. The Nicholls family resided here eight years from the late '20's till the early 1930's during his pastorate.

Surviving, besides her husband, are one son, Wendell Nicholls, of Owensboro, and two daughters, Ruth and Alma.

Leaders of homemakers clubs in Webster county made 25 fireside baskets at a training school.

Noah Martin of this town is a deputy sheriff of Napa county, California, it was learned here after his return from a General Electric Company sponsored trip to the Golden West. While in San Francisco, the host city, Lec Carillo, an actor entered the bus riding the eastern dealers and staged a hold-up, throwing the fear of danger and death to the "settlers' coming into the city. Martin, along with others, was made a deputy sheriff to assist in the capture of the "bandit".

San Francisco sought in every way to honor their guests. They were allowed to stop their bus on the Golden Gate bridge, an honor never before accorded anyone.

The contest of the Virginian-

Electric group of GE dealers was staged over a period of two months and Martin was pitted against some big dealers in Huntington and Charleston, winning easily the trip to California. He was accompanied by his brother, Elvie Martin and wife of Price. The Martins made the journey by automobile and took in such scenic places as Grand Canyon and Boulder Dam.

GIGGING TIME ON IN STATE

Season Began Saturday; To Extend thru April; Game Fish Protected

Frankfort, Ky., (Sp.)—The giggering season for rough fish for Kentucky in all streams except those listed below began at 12 noon, March 15, and will continue until midnight, April 30 (CST) by order of the Game and Fish Commission and the director of the Division of Game and Fish.

The streams in which no giggering will be permitted are Herrington Lake and Dix River and all tributaries in Mercer, Jessamine, Boyle, Garrard, and Lincoln counties; Tygart Creek and all tributaries in Greenup and Carter counties; Kiniconick Creek and all tributaries in Lewis county; Elkhorn Creeks and all tributaries in Scott, Fayette, Woodford and Franklin Counties; Red River and all tributaries in Jefferson and Oldham counties and Triplett Creek and all tributaries in Rowan county.

The giggering regulation was issued as an emergency measure due to an excess of rough fish in the streams in which giggering is permitted.

The regulation points out that all persons who participate in giggering must have a bona fide fishing license and that giggers may gig in all streams except those listed above only from the bank or while in the water. No boat, overhanging tree or platform may be used from which to gig, nor may a person gig, snatch, snag or grabble fish within 200 yards of any dam, nor within 700 yards of Kentucky Dam on the Tennessee River. There is no restriction on the size of the gig, nor the number of hooks on the snatch line, snag line or grabbling line.

Rough fish, as used in this regulation, means any fish other than black bass (largemouth, smallmouth or Kentucky), and crappie, jack salmon or walleyed pike, striped bass, sand pike or sauger, muskellunge, great northern pike, rock bass or goggle eye.

The regulation states that the limit of fish to be taken shall not exceed a total of 15 for any species, or 15 in the aggregate for all species during a 24-hour period. Each period shall start at midnight.

In explaining the above-mentioned devices for taking fish the regulation points out that the word "giggering" means any instrument with two prongs or more, barbed or straight, of any size or dimension.

The words "snagging", "snatching" or "grabbling" as used in the regulation means any single or multiple barbed hook, or hooks tied on the end of a pole singularly or in gangs, but does not include the term "snag line" as used in KRS 150 pertaining to streams under lock and dam.

bring the hospitals to these mining communities, Dr. Mott said:

"Acute need for hospital facilities to help the UMWA Welfare and Retirement Fund discharge its obligations in certain coal mining communities has prompted this construction program.

"We are concerned with the quality of care provided beneficiaries as well as with its cost," Dr. Mott said. "The lack of proper facilities is shocking in some instances. The decision to embark on such a program was made only after exhaustive studies and with the realization that it was one of the most significant efforts yet undertaken by the Fund in behalf of the health and welfare of the people it serves."

Dr. Mott disclosed that E. Todd Wheeler, hospital architect-consultant, of Chicago, Illinois, also has been retained for assistance with planning. Mr. Wheeler has won special awards and recognition for his work in hospital planning.

He developed the plan for the 300-acre Medical Center District on Chicago's West Side, which already contains three medical schools and numerous hospitals and clinics. He has been a consultant in the development of numerous hospitals, both large and small, and several medical schools.

Hays Bill Planned To Aid Dr. Bentley Gets Senate Approval

The Senate has approved a bill of Senator Doug Hays, Democrat, McDowell, that would pave the way for G. C. Bentley, Pikeville, to practice dentistry legally in Kentucky. It now has gone to the House for action.

Bentley was a student at the University of Louisville in 1907, was discharged on the eve of graduation without a diploma. Later, he practiced the profession in Arkansas, then returned to Eastern Kentucky. The Bentley dental license has been before each session of the General Assembly since 1946.

The 1946 session passed a resolution authorized him to practice but the Courts held it invalid. The proposed law would license anyone who has practiced forty years and who, prior to that time, completed two years of work at a recognized college of dentistry.

Prestonsburg Native, Former Floyd Teacher, Succumbs at Berea, Ky.

George F. Neel, 72 years old, native of Prestonsburg, and one-time Floyd county teacher, died Saturday night at Berea, of a heart attack.

Mr. Neel was a merchant at Berea. He was a son of the late Dr. Henry Francis Neel who was one of Stonewall Jackson's men in the Civil War. A teacher in this county, much of the time on Johns Creek, from 1899 to 1907, he served as county examiner during the tenure as County Superintendent of the late H. F. Patton. He also was an instructor at Eastern State College.

Mr. Neel left Prestonsburg to enter the coal business in Harlan county, and in 1925 bought a farm near Winchester, a few years later going to Berea.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lucille Gaywood Neel, two sons, Samuel and Joseph Neel, and a sister, Mrs. Mollie Hatcher, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Pfc. Forrest Montgomery Eludes Communist Censor

Pfc. Forrest Montgomery, a prisoner of the communists in North Korea eluded the censors of his captors to cheer for victory in a letter to his parents, dated Dec. 24, 1951. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Darius Montgomery, of Middle Creek road, received the letter Jan. 1, this year.

After writing this he "thanked God that he had plenty to eat" and mentioned his cousin, Lawrence Bailey, who was also a prisoner in the North Korean POW camp: "Lawrence is doing swell".

But in order to cheer for victory he closed on the reverse side with "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year 1952" and drew flowered designs in the center. Offset, a little. He drew a giant letter V.

STATE MEET UNDER WAY

Floyd Net Fans Back Pikeville, Hindman, In State Tourney

Although Floyd county is not represented in the state high school tournament which began in Memorial Coliseum, Lexington, Wednesday night, many residents of varying ages were missing as the top 16 fives of the Commonwealth began firing away for the title.

Fans from this section were there to root for Pikeville, winner of the 15th regional tourney, and Hindman, the winner over in the 14th. Pikeville met Bagdad this morning (Thursday) at 10, and Hindman's first game of the state meet was with Newport, this afternoon at 3.

Martin, a team capable of extending Pikeville's smooth-working Panthers, fell in the first round of the regional, 75 to 69, despite Pete Grigsby's sensational performance with 27 points before fouling out early in the fourth quarter. Highly regarded Inez was no match for Pikeville as Billy Wheeler, Panther center, with 31 points led his team to a 77-64 victory.

Oil Springs upset a favored Betsy Layne five which was far off form in the semi-finals, but was never in the finals against Pikeville. The Panthers won, 77-54.

The Inez game cost Pikeville the services of Butcher, sterlilar guard, and the team enters the state below par.

Hindman, a perennial regional threat, and a regular visitor to Lexington at state tournament time, defeated Hazard for the right to make this year's trip for a shot at the state title.

Two Martin players, Pete Grigsby, and Ronald Tackett, won places on the all-regional team. Other members of the all-star five are: Wheeler, McCoy and Phillips, of Pikeville; Cassidy and Williams, of Inez; Conley of Oil Springs; Ingersoll of Phelps and Butcher of Meade Memorial.

A survey of telephone service is being made in Estill county to determine the needs and wants of farm people.

Jap Clover, Depression-Hit, Is Replaced by Broom Sedge

Common lespeeza, or Japanese clover has almost disappeared from Floyd county fields and roadsides and in searching for the reason for its disappearance a person is introduced, if he had no previous acquaintance, to the science of ecology. This science treats of vital balances in nature. The term was coined by Haeckel, a celebrated German biologist in 1878. Wells and Huxley says ecology is biological economics. So if you no longer see Japanese Clover on your farm you may put it down to the operation of the laws of nature coming under the science of Ecology.

Japanese clover was first seen in America at Monticello, Georgia in 1846. By 1850 it was a common enough plant in Georgia but it took the Civil War to accelerate its spread to all parts of the South. The Northern government had blockaded the Southern ports until little international commerce was carried on by the South. Since hay was a prime necessity for a horse-drawn army the leaders of the Confederacy began to import hay from Japan and other places in the Far East. The hay carrying ships had to run the gauntlet of the northern frigates but some of them would get through. The hay that did get to the southern armies was carried all over the south. Wherever it was fed to the horses ample lespeeza seed was deposited for its germination. These feeding places served as the nucleus of the wide-spread coverage of Japanese Clover in the south.

It will grow on an acid soil. This attachment for acid soil was the reason it settled upon rolling, sterile and sun-baked points. Here it grew, re-seeded itself and continued to exist until man took it upon himself, if unconsciously, to disturb the balance of nature. This he did in the early '30's, those dreary years of depression, when in order to wring a food supplement from the earth he found it necessary to plow up the lespeeza grown points and plant them in food growing plants.

The years preceding 1930 were not years of phenomenal population growth in the Big Sandy. There was still ample agricultural land for those who wanted to engage in this method of earning a livelihood. There were the rich coves and the bottoms. From these he could earn an agricultural competence. But came the Great Depression. The farmer had heretofore been able to earn from industry a welcome addition to his income. Now the opportunity to so earn the needed supplement was gone and he expanded his crop land. Another factor entered here also. This was the great number of those who had heretofore depended upon mining or mining dependent occupations for a living but now, in order to feed themselves turned to agriculture. This group, as a rule, plowed up and seeded the less desirable land. The lespeeza or Japanese Clover covered points were tortured with the plow and the depression hit and amateur farmer did not know he was now disturbing the balance of nature. For years this optimistic plowing and scarring of sterile hillsides went on and at the end of the Great Agony, when industry again was beckoning, common lespeeza or Japanese clover was practically extinct. It survived in only isolated places where the desperate and amateur plowmen disdained to cultivate.

When the plowing and scarring was over why didn't this common lespeeza return? It did not return for the simple reason that a virile, adaptable and wind-borne seed plant stepped in and colonized the naked soil before the slower moving lespeeza could re-assert itself. This was broom sedge. Today this pest is found on many a farm that had little or none years ago. Some haters of it even affirm it is losing its destitution for nitrogen and humus and is thus threatening their richest fields.

Today not enough Japanese clover seeded spots are extant to accelerate its recovery here in Floyd county. While the slow, but inevitable and inexorable laws of nature are moving along broom sedge will remain unless man either designedly or as a by-product of some unconscious action again disturbs the balance of nature.

S. L. Isbell, formerly county agent of Floyd county, is of the opinion, "that if broom sedge hadn't stepped in and covered the bare land Eastern Kentucky would have been a desert". So after all maybe broom sedge has a worthwhile purpose.

KENTUCKY ON THE MARCH

By EWING GALLOWAY

As you would expect, the opposition to compulsory liability insurance is strictly business. The companies say little or nothing about human rights. Their side of the argument as presented in a recent number of Business Week magazine is about 100 percent mercenary, while the proponents of compulsory liability insurance have no thought but to protect people who may be crippled or killed or orphaned by uninsured motor vehicles.

The companies fear compulsory insurance would cause state governments to try to press rates down.

Compulsory insurance might eliminate competition between private companies by forcing rates down till one company would get all the business. Then, too, it might make victims of accidents more claim conscious!

In states that have "responsibility" laws a large percentage of the cars are already insured. "Responsibility" means that the car owner loses his driving license until he satisfies a judgment against him for damages. So why, the companies argue, should a relatively small group be compelled to insure?

And, they say, car owners in Massachusetts, which has compulsory insurance, carry less protection than they do in other states.

Still another objection by the companies is based on fear the state will go into liability insurance business and drive out private companies by underselling them.

The foregoing are the main facts about the opposition of compulsory insurance. I have tried to be fair in boiling it down to fit the space.

Now let's look at the other side—the side of the people who have lost wives, husbands, children, or have been forced to spend the rest of their lives in wheel chairs or on crutches. Or children to be brought up in orphanages.

Every citizen of Kentucky is entitled to protection from physical or property injury when he ventures out on the public roads.

I can't help thinking of two persons in Webster county who were crippled for life and two who were killed outright in a crash with an uninsured car. The surviving cripples made no effort to get damages. The driver of the uninsured car had nothing.

Cases similar to the General Assembly who reads his local newspapers.

Also, every member of the Legislature now knows the privileges we granted to insurance companies in Kentucky carry responsibilities to the public. Their licenses involve more than just making money.

Their own arguments are an admission that only a small percentage of cars are uninsured. That minority is what we are concerned about. And if the owners of these uninsured cars asked for insurance, it is safe to say practically every one of them would get it. The private companies would accept their money with little ado.

It all comes down to whether the interests of private insurance companies mean more to members of the legislature than the right of every citizen to compensation for injuries for which they are not to be blamed.

It is strictly a case of private profits versus human rights.

STRIP-MINE, DOG LEGISLATION LOST FOR PRESENT SESSION

By TOM SMITH

Members of the Kentucky General Assembly hope to clear their desks of all major matters by Wednesday and then to devote the final two days of the 1952 session to detail incident to a sine die adjournment on Friday.

Monroe-Metcalf Representative Floyd Robinson explained his minority vote against a labor-backed measure requiring railroads to use specified safety equipment on cars taking employees to and from their jobs: Said he:

"There is not a railroad nor a labor union in either of my counties, but there are a lot of people down there who think the employer and not the employee ought to run their businesses."

Important remaining actions in the legislature in the final week is the approval of two constitutional amendments to submit to Kentucky voters in the November election. Of five considered by committee, the two favored are:

To allow the General Assembly to prescribe the methods for distribution of state school funds to local districts.

To provide for appointment of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of State, Clerk of the Court of Appeals, State Treasurer and the Commissioner of Agriculture.

The latter amendment if approved, would leave only the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Auditor and Attorney General the only elective state officers.

FULL-TIME POWER STEERING

FIREPOWER V-8 ENGINE

WHAT ARE TODAY'S FACTS ABOUT NEW CAR ENGINES AND POWER STEERING?

LAST YEAR Chrysler introduced its new FirePower V-8 engine, and America's first passenger-car full-time power steering. Both new ideas "took hold" in a big way.

Today, others are announcing "new engines" and "power steering" . . . but with some basic differences worth keeping in mind if you're buying a new car.

First: about "new engines." The fact is, a really new engine design happens only once in a great while. It did happen in the FirePower V-8. Its 180 h.p. was only incidental to its basic new design. Its key idea is a hemispherical combustion chamber, which makes even non-premium gasoline develop more usable power than other designs can get from premium fuel.

Only Chrysler engineering has so far mastered this design. Several cars do have some power increase, in terms of previous designs. The important fact is that FirePower is not a "warmed-over" engine, but brand new in performance, construction, and efficiency.

In power steering, too, there are basic differences.

Chrysler uses hydraulic power, always in effect, to do two things. First, it does 4/5 the steering work as you turn the wheel. Second, we've cut the amount of wheel turn needed by over 1/3.

Parking or cruising, you get more and easier control than ever before. In sand, snow, or ruts, the hydraulic power is always there to keep the front wheels from "steering back" at you. You get the same amount and feel of control all the time . . . full-time ease and full-time safety.

Actually, the differences, both in engine performance and in steering safety and ease are impossible to put in words . . . but just as impossible not to feel the moment you get into a Chrysler and drive it! Why not see your Chrysler dealer and do that, soon?

We "Went to Town" on Farm Telephones in 1951 . . .

Southern Rural Telephones Pass the Half Million Mark

THE number of rural telephones served by Southern Bell passed the 520,000 mark in 1951. More than 77,000 were added last year alone.

Even bigger things are planned for 1952, provided we can get the necessary materials. Many more Southern farmers are eager to enjoy the convenience and money-saving advantages of telephone service. We are working hard to fill their needs. And we expect to have another 82,000 rural telephones in service by the end of this year.

Meeting the needs of farm families is a big and costly job. But it's a mighty important job to us—because it's so important to the South's prosperity, in town and on the farm.

The State collected $15,569,307 from all sources during February, the Departments of Finance and Revenue announced. That brought the total to date during the eight months of the fiscal year to $118,512,459. This is an increase over the amount collected at the same date last year, $115,825,618. Income and property taxes were among revenue categories showing increases.

INVESTMENTS UP

Funds invested by the State also increased during February, records of the State Treasurer's office shows. An additional $300,000 worth of bonds was bought for the Teacher Retirement Fund and $119,196 was put in the county sinking funds. The teacher Retirement Fund now totals $21,400,000 and is the largest single fund invested by the State.

BY-PASS TO BE BUILT

Plans for a by-pass around Elizabethtown to relieve one of the most congested spots on US 31-W in Kentucky were announced by W. P. Curdin, commissioner of Highways. Curdin said 17,000 cars a day jam the business section of the city while passing through on the highway and predicted the figure would reach 23,000 by 1960 if nothing were done to divert some of the traffic.

STACKER NAMED

State Auditor T. Herbert Tinsley announced appointment of Sam Stacker, Adairville, as field auditor in charge of county audits in Western Kentucky to replace H. C. Griffin, Clinton, who resigned. Stacker has been connected with a chemical company in various capacities for a number of years.

FIRST TO BE CITED

Lookout House, near Covington, nationally-advertised gambling casino, became the first to be cited by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for violation of the new law specifically authorizing revocation or suspension of beverage licenses for permitting gambling on licensed premises. The citation was issued after State Police raided the premises, arrested eight persons for setting up and operating games.

PAYROLLS INCREASE

Kentucky's industrial payrolls for the final quarter of 1951 were more than double the corresponding figure for 1944—totals being $312,971,000 for the latter period compared with $153,965,000—according to figures released by the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board. SCHOOL TAX OPINION GIVEN

Attorney General J. D. Buckman held that fiscal court may fix a flat fee for a sheriff for collection of school taxes, but it must be based on actual collection costs and, in no event, to exceed four per cent of the total amount involved. The law as construed merely sets a ceiling on the amount to be paid, not a rigid figure.
