SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

NOVEMBER 21, 1957

This Town— That World

Well, things are back to normal around here. Bob Harlowe has just breezed in—"breezed" is the correct word, I believe—to inquire, "When will the paper be out?" Did it with malice aforethought, too.

CRAZY, MAN!

Wednesday was opening day for fall hunting. I was among those foregoing the lure of field and wood, but still I envy those hardy souls who can get up a covey of birds in level land, climb a steep cliff, locate the birds again in the worst locust and briar thicket imaginable, take a swat across the nose from a tree-limb just as the birds come up, then have the fortitude to pick their way back down that particular mountainside and scale another on the opposite side of the valley that is just as rough.

Fishermen have on occasion been suspected of being daffy—some wives have been caught perusing catalogs for extra-strong butterfly nets—because they ventured out in bad weather to have a go at the finny tribe. But I still say they aren't as crazy as the duck hunter who will wade into a blind before daybreak and sit there shivering for hours, waiting for a stray mallard or so to wander over.

It's fun being crazy, sometimes.

EVIL DAYS BEFALL US

Now that the Court of Appeals has gone and ruined that law which permitted the owner of stray livestock to collect from the railroad company if said livestock happened to wander along or across railroad tracks occupied by moving trains, you can just about put the good, old days down as gone for good. Reminds me of the report of a certain horse-trader who showed up swearing that he had the sorriest loss in the county. "So dad-blamed lazy I couldn't get him on the tracks in time for the 10 o'clock shifter," he explained.

CONTRACT AGREEMENT ENDS LABOR DISPUTE

MONTH-LONG LAYOFF ENDS HERE TUESDAY

Workers Gain 13c-An-Hour Pay Increase in Contract Covering Two-Year Period

Striking workmen of the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company returned to work Tuesday morning—exactly one month after they had walked off their jobs.

They returned to work after their local union of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers had voted in a meeting at Allen on the preceding night to accept the recommendations made to both the union and the company by a panel committee of the Federal Conciliation Service. The action returned 283 men to work.

Terms of the contract are not fully known, but one big item is an across-the-board raise of 13 cents an hour in wages. The contract is for two years.

The new pact became effective with the Oct. 15 expiration of the old contract, and the new contains a provision which gives either the union or the company the right to reopen negotiation of wages by proper notice 60 days prior to Oct. 15, 1958. It also gives the union the right to use its economic strength if such a renegotiation of wages should result in disagreement.

Lawrence K. Ketchum, secretary of the local, said seven new employee-members have been gained by reclassification of workers.

Another recommendation accepted by company and union specifies that transfer of tool-dressers and drillers of the company shall be subject to provisions of the grievance procedure. Company and union accepted statements made by each other across the bargaining table relative to a reasonable limit on operating crews doing repair work and to the displacement of employees for any reason. What the intent and applications of these statements are, however, was not defined.

The ninth and tenth explosions to rip gas lines of the company during the strike occurred last Wednesday and Thursday nights. Before that a company official had been quoted as saying gas losses to such blasts had cost the company more than $100,000.

Settlement of the strike followed long parleying here and conferences in Cleveland and Huntington.

$150,000 SET FOR BUILDING

Board Trying To Reduce Crowded Conditions with Added Classrooms, Said

"We are trying to reduce the crowded conditions that exist in many of our schools in this county," Superintendent V. O. Turner said this week in pointing out that the Board of Education had already committed $150,000 this year in capital outlay to new classrooms or for additional classroom facilities.

Under construction now is a new classroom at Home Branch, two new rooms at Tinker Fork, two rooms with a lunchroom and inside toilets at Drift with the same being built at the Harold school, inside toilet systems at the head of Prater school. Finished is a classroom at the head of Branham's Creek school to make a two-classroom unit where one had existed before.

All of this local construction was in line with the heavy upsurge of school construction in the state reached the all-time high of $31,687,395 for 1956-57, up from the figure of $14,491,597 last year. This heavy outlay was due to the $400 per classroom allotted under the Minimum Foundation Law for building purposes.

In addition to the work finished or under construction in this county this year the Board of Education renovated several schools from capital outlay of flood damage last January. Schools receiving such work were Cow Creek, Allen, Betsy Layne, Martin, Harold, Cliff and Banner.

SUPREME COURT GETS 162-YR. LAND DISPUTE

Claim of the Taylors of Richmond, Va., to thousands of acres of Eastern Kentucky land under the 162-year-old Haskell patent is finally before the Supreme Court of the United States for decision.

This became known last week when Alexander H. Sands, of the Richmond law firm of Sands, Marks & Sydnor, wrote Commonwealth's Attorney Burnis Martin: "It has been suggested by the clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States that I should notify you that the case was duly docketed there on Nov. 12, 1957 and has been assigned the number, 611."

The case before the Supreme Court apparently is that which originated in the Floyd circuit court in 1955 in which George T. Taylor and his three sisters sought redocketing of a former suit and to void the court's judgment of May, 1941 by which the similar claims of the Pen-Ken Oil Corporation and others were dismissed. That suit was dismissed on the grounds of laches.

neglected to press and establish their claims, and the Taylors in the 1955 motion sought to be admitted as parties defendant.

Joining Taylor in this move two years ago were his sisters, Maude Taylor Montgomery, Marie A. Leitch and Julia M. Taylor, all of Richmond, Va. The court judgment they attacked at that time was rendered in 1941 on a suit filed by John Allen, then Commonwealth's Attorney, attacking Pen-Ken's claim. The Pen-Ken claim was based on the same patent as the Taylor's. Circuit Judge Edw. P. Hill in the 1955 action dismissed the Taylor's motion on the grounds of laches, a legal term applying to inexcusable delay.

The history of litigation arising from the old Haskell patent and claims of heirs to lands conveyed by it is long and devious. In 1907 a suit was filed by the Wolcott heirs seeking title to a vast territory covering parts of Floyd, Knott, Pike and Letcher counties. The Wolcotts lost that case under provisions of the Kentucky Tax Act of 1906 which specified

JUDGE OKEHS BALLOT PROBE

Two Martin City Council Boxes Opened for Check; Contest Suit Is Planned

Circuit Judge Edward P. Hill in an order entered Tuesday permitted the opening of the ballot boxes for John Possum and New Martin precincts for inspection of the precinct stub books so that defeated City Council candidates there and their attorneys might procure a correct list of all persons who voted in the Martin city election.

The stub books had been locked in the ballot boxes by the election commissioners following the vote count, and losers in the Martin election, D. M. Hutchinson, Roy Ratliff, Everett Tackett and Chiles C. Stanley, filed a motion for entry of the boxes, Nov. 14.

Joe Hobson and Marshall Davidson, Prestonsburg attorneys who represent the four candidates, have inspected the stub books, and Mr. Hobson said Wednesday afternoon that a contest suit is being prepared. The contest action, if filed, will name as defendants W. G. Goff, Charles Pinson, Haskel Frye, Sr., and John H. Turney, who on the face of returns were the winners in the Council race.

FLOYD NATIVE FOUND GUILTY

Mrs. Browning Gets Four Concurrent 3-Year Terms On Counts of Embezzling

Mrs. Hazel Rachel Browning, 30, of Amherstdale, former teller of the Bank of Man at Man, W. Va., was given four concurrent three-year sentences Tuesday morning by Federal Judge Harry E. Watkins for embezzling bank funds. Mrs. Browning is a native of Betsy Layne.

Judge Watkins made the four sentences concurrent, or total of three years imprisonment. The judge recommended the Federal Reformatory for Women at Alderson, W. Va., as the place of confinement.

Mrs. Browning, a petite brunette and a mother of two children showed no sign of emotion as the sentence was imposed.

She had pleaded guilty to a four-count federal indictment charging her with embezzling $31,774.27 from the bank, where she was a savings teller.

Probation Officer Lindsey C. Yost, who gave Judge Watkins a lengthy report on Mrs. Browning, revealed in the report that although Mrs. Browning was indicted for taking $31,774.27, the actual shortage at the bank is $42,000.

The amount of actual shortage was determined, Yost said, by certified public accountants in a detailed audit of the bank's books. Mrs. Browning could have been sentenced to a maximum of five years imprisonment and a fine of $5,000 on each count of the indictment against her.

Since her arrest, she has insisted all the money she took from the bank "is gone."

Potter Is Detective With Kentucky State Police in This Area

Sgt. Chester D. Potter, commander of the Pikeville district state police post, has been named to the crime detection branch of the police organization, it was learned here last week.

Potter and State Detective E. L. Cornett will handle crime detection work for this district. Formerly a resident of Prestonsburg, Sgt. Potter with the end of this year will have been a member of the state police 10 years. He is a brother of Bill Potter, Prestonsburg policeman.

HUNTER FOUND BY SEARCHERS

Crabtree's Body Found In Woods; Heart Attack Believed Death Cause

Body of Denver Crabtree, 67 years old, well-known Prestonsburg man, was found in the woods on Sang Factory hollow, across the river from here, shortly before 9 o'clock Wednesday night.

A jury empanelled by Coroner James J. Carter held that there was no evidence of foul play and that death resulted from a heart attack.

Mr. Crabtree had died while hunting, and relatives said he had expressed the hope that when death overtook him he would be in the woods. His faithful hunting dog crouched beside him, its head on his shoulder, those who found the body said.

When he failed to return from hunting at supper-time, his wife became alarmed and called Prestonsburg police. Policemen Bill Potter, Wesley Howard and Kelly Frazer headed a search party and combed the woodland across the river from here after having been told by Mrs. Crabtree where her husband had planned to hunt. Coroner Carter said the victim apparently had sat down, then slumped over. The stock of his loaded gun lay in his left hand.

A native of Lawrence county, O., Mr. Crabtree was a son of Ezra and Emily Susan Crabtree. He was a retired miner and had resided in Prestonsburg many years. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Cynthia Layne Crabtree, one son, Roe Crabtree, South Bend, Ind., four daughters, Mrs. Bruce Bowling, Oceola, Ind., Mrs. James Ed Alley, Cincinnati, O., Mrs. J. L. Meade, Prestonsburg, Mrs. Sam Keel, South Bend, Ind., and an adopted son, Tommy Joe Crabtree, Prestonsburg. He also leaves five sisters, Mrs. Ada Aduy, Sciotoville, O., Mrs. Ruedy Mullins, Marion, O., Mrs. Adeline Burns, Ironton, O., Mrs. Nell May, Columbus, O., and 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral rites will be conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday from the Freewill Baptist Church here, and burial will be made in the Gearheart cemetery under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

KY. BAPTISTS HONOR 2 HERE

Combs Is Named College Trustee; Rev. McMillen On State-Wide Committee

The General Association of Baptists in Kentucky, meeting in Harlan last week, named the Rev. Ira McMillen, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Church here, to a committee of 15 ministers and laymen to study the entire state program of the church, and at the same time elected Judge Bert T. Combs, of Prestonsburg, to a trusteeship of Campbellsville College, Campbellsville, Ky.

Dr. W. R. Pettigrew, moderator of the Association, said, in announcing appointments, that he considers the committee to which the Prestonsburg pastor was named to be "the most important ever named in the history of Kentucky Baptists." The committee of 15 will employ a professional firm to carry out details of the study.

Judge Combs, who recently became a member of the local church, received a part of his education at Cumberland College, Williamsburg, Ky., then a two-year Baptist-operated college.

NEW MARKET HELD LIKELY

Groundwork Being Laid For East Ky. Feeder Pig Sale; Morehead Meet Set

Ground work was being laid this week to establish a feeder pig market in Eastern Kentucky. While mostly in the study and planning stage it was considered as highly probable addition to the agricultural facilities of the section, according to Robert M. Jones, county agent.

A meeting of hog producers is scheduled at Morehead, Friday, Dec. 13, to decide if a feeder pig sale for this section would be feasible and profitable. University of Kentucky specialists have already visited two feeder pig sales in Missouri and noted the setup for such sales in that state. Farmers have their own cooperative marketing there and buyers from all over the corn belt paid an average of seven cents per pound above the St. Louis market for that day.

Jones pointed out this week just what is considered a feeder pig. "Farmers usually refer to them as shoats or a pig which needs an additional feeding period to reach market," he said. "This could be from weaning to 100 pounds or more," he added. The county agent noted the advantages of more pig litter and a feeder pig market. "Hog producers in the county are already in the feeder pig business. Most pigs are sold to neighbors to be fattened for home butchering. Due to the limited amount of corn on most farms this is a

Court Names Attorneys To Represent Him; New Bond Also Is Required

Trial of Jerry Shell, of Cliff, on a charge of murder in the shotgun slaying recently of Kelse Vaughan, was continued Monday till Dec. 2, after Shell's attorneys, Paul E. Hayes and Barkley J. Sturgill, had withdrawn from the case.

Bert T. Combs and Jarvis Allen were named by the court to represent him. Judge Hill sustained a motion asking that the written statement procured from Shell by representatives of the Commonwealth be produced by 1 p.m., that day. He also sustained a motion for more satisfactory bond, since the home of his brother-in-law, one of his bondsmen, has burned since the original bail was executed.

The manslaughter charge against Kelly M. Hamilton was continued till Jan. 14, and the involuntary manslaughter trial of Lewis Patton was set for Jan. 13. Three defendants were penned last Friday when they entered pleas of guilty to charges of breaking and entering. Bill Smith and Jim Miller were given two-year terms, and Charles Hall one year.

Three defendants were fined $100 each within the week. Names of defendants and charges against them are: Earl Osborne, drunk driving; Clarence Huff, assault and battery; Herman Isaacs, drunk driving, pleaded guilty.

Bill Begley was acquitted of a falsifying charge. Among the several cases dismissed were 13 alleged possession of liquor. Some dismissals recommended by Commonwealth's Attorney Burnis Martin when no witnesses appeared for their trials were not granted by Judge Hill who pointed out that the cases should be investigated and that processes should be issued for witnesses before dismissal action is taken.

P'BURG WATER PLANT TESTS SET FRIDAY

Original Deadline Set For December 10; Firm Is Ahead of Schedule

Barring unforeseen complications, Prestonsburg's new water plant will go into operation about Dec. 1, Frank Phelps, engineer for the Howard K. Bell Co., Lexington contractors, said Wednesday.

Filter gravel and sand were being poured this week, and the first water will be pumped in a test of the new installation Friday. Normally, a week to 10 days will be required for final testing of all the varied mechanisms, Mr. Phelps said. That done, service will start immediately. Completion date was originally set for Dec. 10.

The plant, which has a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons a day, is of the same size as the Paintsville plant which also was installed by the Lexington firm. The plant here is so constructed that its capacity may be doubled by addition of another filter and a second settling basin, and connections for that contingency have been installed.

The plant is a "push-button job," operated electrically. A gleaming-white concrete building houses chemical rooms, the manager's office, supply rooms, the filter system control machinery. The structure is entirely fireproof.

An unusual feature of the new system—one of which is said to be exclusive with Bell—is construction of the plant so that af-

RAPE VERDICT IS LIFE TERM

Pike Trial Jury Convicts Ferrell in Mass Assault; 8 Others To Face Court

PIKEVILLE—A Pike circuit court jury Friday convicted Carl Ferrell, 22, of rape and fixed his sentence at life in prison.

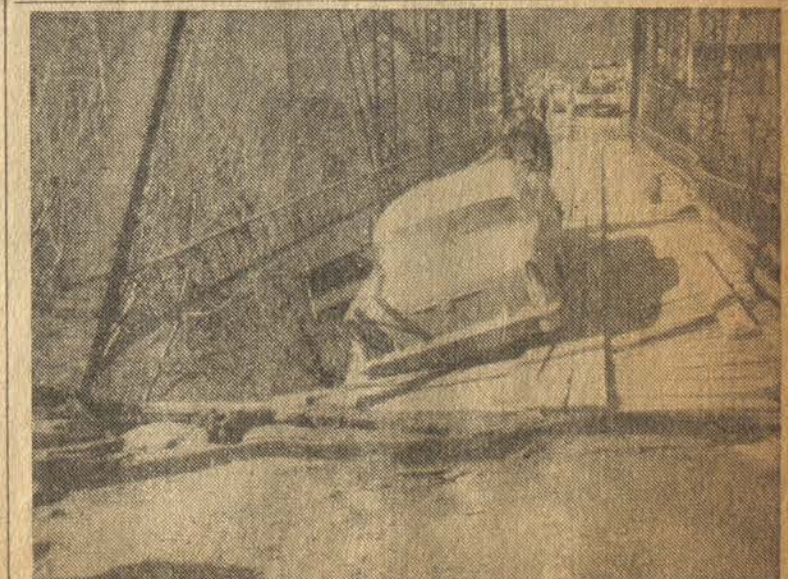

Commonwealth's Attorney J. A. Runyon had requested the life sentence without parole. The jury, however, recommended no such ban on parole.

Ferrell was the first of nine men and boys to be tried in the alleged rape of two teen-age sisters at Freeburn last August 18.

The jury deliberated 51 minutes. Ferrell was visibly shaken by the jury's decision. Mrs. Gladys Spurlock, 19-year-old expectant mother who brought the charges, remained impassive.

Mrs. Spurlock's sister did not attend Friday's hearing. Ferrell is also charged with raping the sister, but was not tried on that count.

Circuit Judge F. Pierce Keese said eight other men and boys would be tried "at future terms of court." The next term is in March.

The weight of years and of Billy Fannin's auto were just more than the old bridge at West Prestonsburg could stand on a recent Sunday. Out came the I-beam, the bridge sagged dangerously, and it is now considered a big rebuilding job. The span crosses Middle Creek on the old county road along the south side of the stream.

Tax Cuts Are Popular But Not Always Right

Governor Chandler has announced that he will give high priority to tax-cutting legislation when the General Assembly convenes next year. Which, of course, will not be protested by the general taxpaying public.

But The Times is not convinced that this is the thing to do, although tax relief generally would be welcomed by everybody.

Kentucky needs the $2,000,000 this tax reduction would eliminate. It needs it for teachers. The state is still far behind other and more prosperous states as the competition for qualified teachers mounts. Kentucky education can never move ahead without proper instruction, and it is obvious that Kentuckians have not made the financial sacrifices necessary to get and hold good teachers and enough of them.

For this reason, we suggest that the $20,000,000 surplus now in the state treasury be earmarked solely for teachers' salaries and that the present taxes stand to continue to support education as well as other essentials of government.

If the Governor has an idea that a tax cut in 1958 is the thing to do for purely political reasons, he should be aware of the fact that most Kentuckians are not forgetting that whatever cuts are made will merely eliminate those tax increases he imposed after he became Governor.

One tax that was cut out of existence may be revived by the General Assembly when it meets next January. This is the state pari-mutuel tax on Keeneland race track, and it should be restored. Governor Chandler threw his weight behind elimination of the tax at the 1956 Assembly session, but he has indicated that he will make no such fight to prevent the tax from being restored.

His excuse for supporting exemption of Keeneland was that he thought the racetrack tax was punitive on a non-profit organization that had operated for years without taxation until Governor Wetherby created such a levy. That excuse sounds lamer than a lame duck's alibi for losing the election. We have always understood that the better, not the racetrack, foots that tax bill.

The Keeneland tax and those others now existent should be collected until Kentucky has safely drawn away from its far-back position in the educational race.

Ohio Cities Get Help

Floyd county towns and practically all other Kentucky municipalities stand in need of street improvements which few are able to finance.

To begin with, initial street-paving or surfacing is usually done at the expense of property-owners, but once that work is done maintenance expenses are expected to be met, and should be met, by other sources.

In Ohio, we read, municipalities are hard pressed, just as they are in Kentucky. But there is a difference. Those city governments get regular financial "shots in the arm" from state funds.

Soon, a news dispatch says, gasoline tax money amounting to $2,852,185 will be distributed to Ohio cities for street purposes, and this year the state will apportion more than $42,000,000 in all for streets and highways over the state.

We mention these facts to point up Kentucky's needs in the same field. It has become more and more apparent that city streets are used by the general public, that a sizeable part of the gasoline tax fund is derived from mileage put on city streets, that streets no longer serve only those who live on them or only those who reside in the corporate limits of the town or city. Consequently, street improvement and maintenance are becoming more and more a concern of the state.

That fact Ohio has accepted, Kentucky might well do more thinking along the same lines.

TO THE PEOPLE OF FLOYD COUNTY:

Although I was defeated in my first attempt at election to public office, I am grateful for the loyalty of relatives and good friends in all parts of the county, and I wish there were some more personal way in which I could say, "Thanks," to each of you.

My opponent, Mr. Hays, and I started our campaign off as friends, and I am glad to say that neither of us said or did anything that would mar that friendship in the least.

Sincerely,
V. A. SMILEY

ter the water leaves the intake well piping till it reaches the clear, last "stop" before entering the service mains, it moves entirely by gravity.

One of the chemicals to be added in the treatment of Prestonsburg's water supply is fluoride, the tooth preservative.

The plant provides for movement of the water from the river to the consumer in this way:

From the intake well at the river's edge to a quick-mix basin where lime, alum, carbon, chlorine and fluoride are fed to it; from there to a flocculator basin where machines with eight-inch paddles keep the water stirring, mixing in the chemicals; then outside the plant to the settling basin, here passing into and out of a series of troughs from which the water is carried to the filters. From the filters the water flows into the 100,000-gallon clear well which is buried and sealed 10 feet underground. Then from that point into the lines to serve customers or to the 397,000-gallon storage tank on the mountainside across U. S. 23 and overlooking the plant site.

An example of care taken to gain absolute purity of the water is seen in the fact that, in addition to chemical treatment, the filters consist of five layers of gravel, with 30 inches of a special sand at the top.

Hoppers used in the settling basin are inverted pyramids. To clean them, Mr. Phelps said, all that is necessary is the turning of a valve. Hose may be used to wash down the settling basin, but force of suction will clean the bottom of the basin completely, he said.

"We have even built in the cracks in the concrete building," Mr. Phelps quipped. He explained that the "cracks" were left for expansion, that these will not be visible and will prevent the cracking that is inevitable in concrete buildings if such precaution is not taken. He also quoted a competitor as saying the plant structure is the best job of concrete work he has ever seen.

But, the engineer, added, as new and modern as the plant is, it will not remove the offensive odor and taste of water at times such as last fall when this water condition caused concern. He explained that only a costly aeration system can guarantee that corrosive effect of water here is caused, he believes, by acids in the Big Sandy.

County Alert for Killer Of North Carolina Police Continues into This Week

Floyd county authorities, including Prestonsburg police, were alerted last week to be on the lookout and to check motels and hotels for Frank Edward Wetzel, killer of two North Carolina state policemen. The alert locally continued through Monday night of this week.

The fugitive was believed to have been traced to Boyd county where a man driving a brown-and-white Ford auto was believed to have been the killer. The car he was driving bore Kentucky license number K78-009. Another report had him in Whitesburg driving a two-tone '57 Mercury.

The twin-murder suspect is 36 years old and is an escapee from a New York mental hospital. He is described as being 5 feet, 10 inches tall, having wavy, brown hair and blue eyes and as speaking rapidly and in a loud voice.

Stray Livestock Hit By Trains Cut In Value By Court Ruling

Stray livestock isn't as valuable as it once was, and you can't blame this drop on Benson, either.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals last week held unconstitutional the 1893 law that obligated railroads to prove a lack of negligence on their part when a cow or mule made fatal connections with one of their trains.

A $200 damage suit involving the death of a mule brought about the ruling. Such damages given Mrs. J. F. Faulkner in Whitley circuit court were reversed.

The appellate court opinion was based on two grounds suggested by the defendant Louisville & Nashville Railroad:

1. Changed conditions brought about by motor-vehicle travel on public highways make the old law unconstitutional because it is class legislation denying railroads equal protection of the law.

2. The statute was impliedly replaced by the present law making it unlawful to permit animals to run at large.

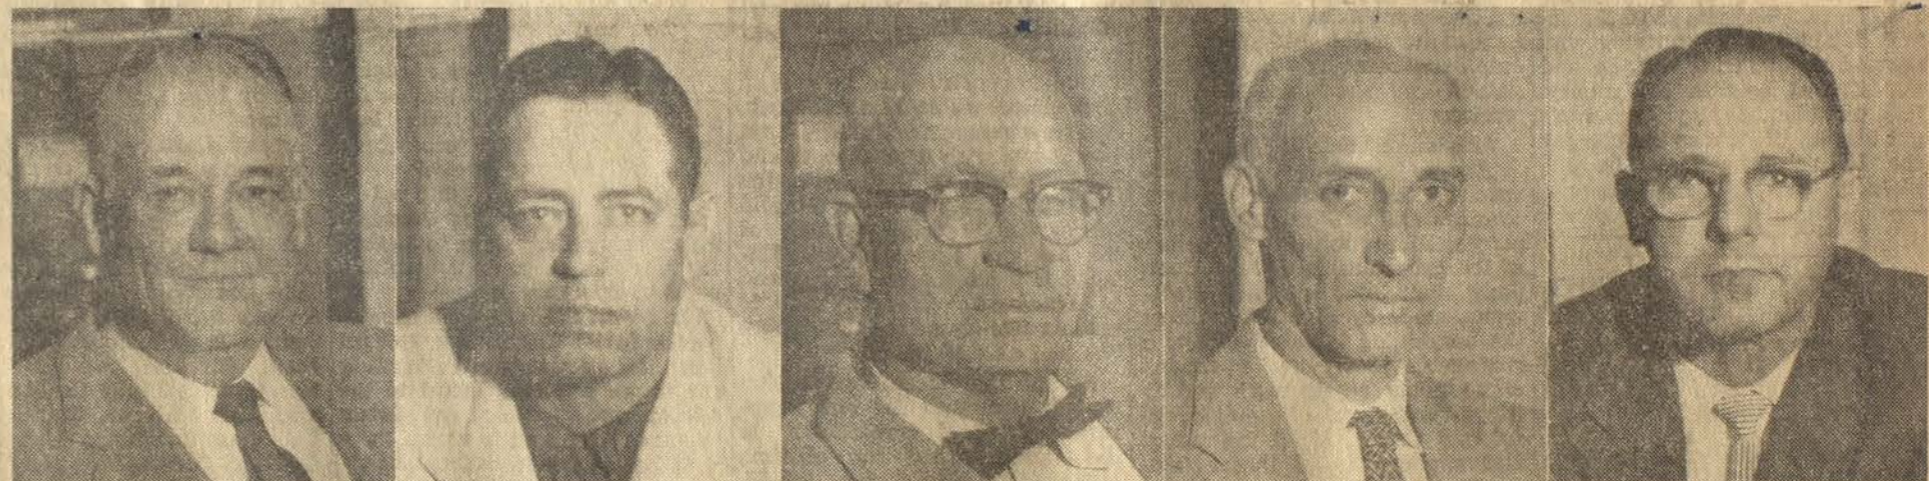

Following their organization Nov. 10, 1775, U. S. Marines first served as a unit aboard the USS Cabot in December 1775. They were paid approximately $7.00 per month and equipped with musket and cutlass.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.
Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

HOW PEOPLE LOOKED

When I was younger, I spent much time trying to picture how certain great men have looked. Though I had seen pictures of many of them, I still made more mistakes on my guessing than I would have, probably, if I had never heard tell of the men. Of course, we have been brought up on the tall, vigorous George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. Fortunately, in Lincoln's time there were cameras to show his height as compared with some of the shorter, more compact-built men of the time. But right there we come to the end of our line. Some other tall ones, by contemporary accounts, were Thomas Jefferson, "Long Tom," who would look short on a basketball team now; Daniel Boone, who was just average as a fairly tall man; Andrew Jackson. But we have had our share of short ones, too: Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin. Somehow, I spent my most un-rewarding guesses when I tried to figure out the stature of literary men. Wordsworth, of all things, did not look poetic; he was tall and thin and stooped. The vigorous James Russell Lowell was short, stocky, weak-eyed. Hawthorne did not look like a writer of mystery stories; he was not thin and eagle-eyed but good sized, a handsome man, with a face like that of successful business executive. I suppose that our folkishness refuses to believe that people seldom look their parts. When I was a very small child, one of my uncles dug up some old tintypes of Mother's parents and had some pictures made from them. I was completely flabbergasted when I saw the long awaited pictures; the two old people were stiff, homely, anything but the great people I had supposed them to be. Of course, I was just a child and was not a good judge of what anyone was supposed to be, but I was strangely like lots of people who refuse to accept facts when they are dealing with famous people or relatives.

changing world, we might also find that some of the great-great ones were astonishingly like you and me, neither very fine-looking nor hideously ugly. Folk-minded people refuse to find common denominators in viewing their heroes. Paul Bunyan, though an exaggeration and a very modern one, has many of the same characteristics that my elders, my teachers, my Sunday School teachers, and a great many of my textbooks found in the great and near-great of other times. Every society must have its myths. Its great men must be supermen, not homely, plain people like the rest of us. I can recall how much some people suffered, half a generation ago, when truth-tellers who wrote history admitted that Franklin was rather pudgy, that Washington's false teeth did not fit well, that these so-called great ones were not great because they had these very common characteristics. Even the de-bunkers could not help thinking that a really great person is somehow removed from the simple ways of the rest of us. With thinking people, however, it does us good to know that our heroes looked very much like us, had some ornery habits, used language not always impeccable, but, in spite of all these earthy things, saw a greater world ahead than any that had yet been realized. I wonder sometimes whether we may not have dressed up the saints a bit too much; they may not have looked their parts any more than did little Napoleon or gawky Abraham Lincoln or homely old Socrates.

Ways To Provide Better Education

The quality of education in the United States is determined at the local level—in each community. To provide better schools, therefore, each community must look first to its own practices.

A first step is to make sure that the people of the community understand and appreciate good schools. Progress is unusual except when it is supported by public understanding and approval.

A second step to better schools is careful selection of members of the board of education. Representing the people, they determine school policies and exercise direct control over most phases of the school program.

A third step, which the School Board must take for the community, is employment of the finest professional staff. Only competent professional teachers and administrators can help a community to appraise its needs and point the way to better schools.

Fourth, the community that would better schools must be willing and able to pay for them. Some communities that have the resources are unwilling to support good schools. Other communities could not support good schools from their own tax resources irrespective of their desire to do so. But every citizen can, and should, use his influence to assure the optimum level of local school support.

Genuine cooperation between school and community is another requirement for school progress. Chances for it will be found in the work of the Parent-Teacher Association, in service on school advisory committees, and in day-to-day contacts between school and home.

Finally, the way to better schools for many communities lies in the direction of shared responsibility for school support, with greater participation by state and federal governments.

Central School Supply Is Successful Bidder On Classroom Orders

Central School Supply Company, Louisville, was successful bidder to furnish each Floyd county classroom with a minimum of approximately $25 worth of supplies for the current school year, it was announced at Superintendent V. O. Turner's office this week. Low bid was $9,825 for 440 of the 472 classrooms in the county. The remainder of the classroom orders will be placed as soon as they are turned in to the superintendent's office, it was said.

The orders now placed will provide for 120 rural schools and 20 consolidated schools. Each teacher's order will be shipped separately to the county superintendent's office and will be picked up by the teachers from there.

The program to provide classroom teachers with supplies as envisioned by the Minimum Foundation Law was initiated by the Board of Education last summer and direction of the program in its last stages has been under Clem Martin. It is planned to expand the amount allocated to each classroom next year, it was said.

Cut-Shin and Hell-fer-Sartain are both confluents of Middle Fork of the Kentucky River near Dry Ridge.

WOULD DODGE THE FIDDLER

Ingrid Bergman, we learn, has expressed the wish that the world would consider her as an actress and let her private life alone. For that we do not blame the errant Miss Bergman, but getting credit for the good and having the bad forgotten just doesn't happen to be the way the game is played.

And why should it be? There are two columns in the ledger, you know. There is crime and also there is retribution. To get right down to it, there are decency and indecency, and the actress made her choice. Now she has her comeuppance, for all her histrionic ability, and that's that, whether she likes it or not.

Splendid actress that she is, Miss Bergman could have made a greater contribution to the world as a decent, loving wife and mother than all the emoting she has ever done or will ever do.

DISCONCERTING NEWS

News from Dewey Lake Monday afternoon made this desk more uninviting than usual. The report said that John Ward, of Sugar Loaf, had just checked in with three bass weighing 2½, 3 and 7 pounds.

I agree with all statements—and several such have been made—to the effect that any time a man lets business interfere with his fishing, he's either getting old or just plumb ornery.

WOMAN, 66, WOUNDED

Mrs. Amy Martin, 66, of Hunter, is in the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin, with wounds in both legs from shotgun pellets. The shot was accidental, it was said. Her wounds are not serious.

During the 1956-57 term 746 new classrooms were built in Kentucky and 219 were built or leased on a temporary basis. The outlook for this year, 1957-58, is for the construction of 750 more classrooms.

Turner pointed out what was accomplished last year in new construction or remodeling. Four classrooms were built at Betsy Layne, one on Left Toler, the Warrick schoolhouse on Bull Creek was rebuilt, three extra classrooms were remodeled and provided at the Prestonsburg grade school and two at Martin, one being a new classroom for exceptional children. Four new classrooms were also built at McDowell.

Finance officers and building engineers at the State Department of Education believe that the $31,000,000-a-year level of building will be sustained in the state for at least two more years. Their belief rests on the factors of a great pressure for more classrooms in order to get full benefits of the Minimum Foundation Law and to the leveling off of interest rates on revenue bonds to between 4 and 4½ per cent.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE is the way we Dodge dealers feel about competitors' efforts to match the Swept-Wing 58. They lowered the roof some, but left the sides high. Their windshields got smaller while ours got bigger. So much for styling. Then, for another important comparison, take ride. Here's Dodge with Torsion-Aire suspension that just about everybody admits is the greatest advance in sway-free, dip-free, silent going that any car offers. So what do these other cars do? They borrow an air suspension system that's been used in buses for two years! (Costing well over $100.00 extra.) And most of 'em still don't have push-button driving—much less Dodge Torque-Flite—the proven automatic transmission. If you're a little disappointed in the '58 version of your car, come on in and see our Swept-Wing 58. The others are catching on—but we've already caught up.

FOOD NOTES

Cranberries add so much to a menu in the way of color and flavor that they are a natural at holiday dinners. But with their ease in freezing, they have become deservedly popular at any meal throughout the entire year. In muffins, nutbread, breakfast ring, in meat loaf or with ham slices, as well as in the traditional relishes, jelly and pie, cranberries have a special place. Whole fresh cranberries may be quick-frozen for convenience, or when the price is favorable. (The peak fresh season is from September through December). Pick them over, removing bruised fruit or stems, but do NOT wash. Place the berries in freezer boxes or bags as directed, filling container to the top, but do not crowd. Seal and place directly in freezing unit. Defrosting is not necessary for cooking.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

Putting an outboard motor up for the winter is simple says Willard Crandall, Boating Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. Modern motors may be complex wonders, but essentials and fundamentals of putting-away have changed little.

The simple, basic routine for storing an outboard motor for the winter starts with removing all gasoline from the engine by disconnecting the remote tank and running the motor as long as it will go. If the tank is the built-on type, drain it, then run the motor till it quits. Or if running isn't practical, at least drain the tank. And it's best to drain the carburetor and fuel lines too.

Next, stand the motor on its skeg, take out the spark plugs and ground their wires on the motor. This is so the coil won't be damaged when the motor is pulled over, which is done next. Also, the powerhead is turned and tipped back and fourth. This should get all the water out of crooks in the cooling system where it could do harm by freezing. Then put a couple of teaspoons of oil in each cylinder, the same oil you mix with the gas is okay. Put back the plugs, and pull the starter over a couple of times to distribute the oil.

Drain the lower unit, then completely fill with a fresh lubricant. Go over the outside of the motor with an oily rag. Store the engine upright to eliminate any possibility of water running in the powerhead. Choose a dry place, and fix the motor so it can't top-over or slip and rest on a propeller blade. A motor stand is good, of course. A heavy motor should be on one, or on some substitute—not resting on its skeg. If there will be any dust blowing around put a sheet or some such cover over the engine.

If the motor has been used in salt water, remove the propeller, and clean and lubricate the propeller shaft. Also, unless this was done after the last salt-water trip, flush the outside of the motor and the cooling system with fresh water.

That's all that is basically important in putting the motor away.

Vote of Confidence Given By Health Tax Approval, Health Commissioner Says

The eight counties which passed a public health tax, November 5, have given their health departments a vote of confidence, Dr. Russell E. Teague, commissioner of the State Department of Health, said last week.

"These counties have shown their appreciation in a practical way with an eye to the future," Dr. Teague said. Public health tax funds are used in the county where they are raised to provide for salaries and expenses of county health department personnel, operating costs of the health center, equipment and supplies.

Authorized in 1954 by the State Legislature, a statute permits any county not containing a city of the first class to create a public health taxing district and levy an annual tax of up to 50 cents per $100 of assessed property valuation. Thirteen counties placed the issue on the ballot this year. The eight counties bring the total to 25 now having a public health tax. The vote for or against the tax, with the maximum tax rate which can be levied in each county, was as follows:

County	Rate	"Yes" Votes	"No" Votes

She said she is unable to account for all of it.

Probation officer Yost said his investigation disclosed that her speculations at the bank began in 1954, when she used the bank's money to make good a $100 insufficient funds check by her husband, Aubrey Browning.

The bulk of the $31,774.27 listed in the indictment against her was stolen, Yost added, in the one-year period between June, 1956 and June, 1957.

"The bank officials are unable to understand how she could have spent all this money in one year," Yost said. "It's their opinion that she still has some of the money."

He added, however, that she has insisted otherwise. He said she claims she had only $800 when she left the bank and went to California.

Yost said she went to California with a married resident of Man who deserted his family to accompany her. This man, Yost said, told the FBI Mrs. Browning spent no money on him, declaring he "paid his own way."

Both Mrs. Browning and the man went to work for an aircraft manufacturer after reaching California. Mrs. Browning's children, a girl 6 years old and a boy 9, went to California with their mother and the man.

The original name of Detroit was "Fort Ponchartrain du Detroit." That was when the French held it in 1701.

John C. McNeil, Sr., 67, Former Wheelwright Man Victim of Heart Attack

John C. McNeil, Sr., 67 formerly of Wheelwright, died unexpectedly of a heart attack Saturday night in Cincinnati, Ohio, while en route to Pikeville, to make his home.

Mr. McNeil was a former resident of the Pond Creek area and Wheelwright, where he was connected with the Inland Steel Company. A certified public accountant, Mr. McNeil engaged in both public and private practice. He also was a free lance writer, contributing to Coal Age, Mchanization and other industrial publications dealing with machine accounting systems.

Born February 25, 1890, near London, Ky., he is survived by four sons, John C. Jr., Jean P., R. Starke and Walter H., a daughter, Mrs. Creed Oney, Jr., Bowling Green, Ky., a sister, Mrs. J. Walter Gibson, Cincinnati, and 11 grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife and a son, James W. He was a member of the State Street Methodist Church, Bowling Green, Kentucky.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Baptist church, Pikeville, at 2 p.m. Tuesday. Interment was made in Johnson Memorial Park, Pikeville, the Baker Funeral Home directing.

State Sells Bonds Worth $35,000,000 For Road Building

Frankfort, Nov. 18 (Spl.) — Plans for Kentucky's expanded road building program received a big boost when the state recently sold $35,000,000 worth of bonds to help finance the proposed construction.

Gov. A. B. Chandler thanked the two bidders for their "deep interest and confidence" in Kentucky, "both for myself and for the state." Bids were opened Nov. 12.

A 37-firm investment combine headed by First City Bank of New York and Blyth & Co. of New York was the successful bidder.

The bid was $35,000,350 at an average annual interest cost of 2.9676 per cent, just under 3 per cent limit set by the Legislature.

The bid was barely ahead of the second bid, submitted by a 47-firm combine headed by First National Bank of Chicago and Chase Manhattan Bank.

The other bid was for $35,049,010 at an average annual interest cost of 2.984562 per cent.

The bonds, to mature between 1959 and 1972, were the first offered for sale of the $100,000,000 issue authorized by Kentucky voters by a margin of about 6 to 1 at the November, 1956, election.

Both bid offers were described as better than those made for other comparable issues in the bond market during recent months.

A major factor was the bonds are Kentucky's first general-obligation debt. Money from the bonds can be used under the law only to match federal road construction aid. But use of bond funds for this purpose will release other state road-fund revenue which otherwise would have to match federal aid. These state funds then can be used to expand and expedite other road building.

FHA Loans Are Available For Construction, Repair Of Farm Houses, Buildings

Construction and repair of farm houses and other farm buildings may be financed by Farmers Home Administration loans this year, just as was done in 1956.

A total of $21,300,000 was borrowed by American farmers last year for the building, improvement or repairing of houses or other farm buildings, or to provide water for farmstead or household use.

The Farmers Home Administration does not compete with conventional or cooperative lenders, explained Mrs. Gladys Lickert, UK Extension home management specialist, but it does supplement the credit services supplied by other services. Loans are provided by FHA only when a bank or other lender cannot adequately serve the farm owner's credit needs at the present time.

FHA housing loans are made only to a farm owner, but he may use the loan to repair or build a house or other farm building for his tenants or farm laborers. The borrower must be an American citizen, and the farm large enough to produce a substantial part of the annual cash income of the operator.

Borrowers agree to repay the housing loans within the shortest time possible, and no loan schedule can be longer than 33 years. The interest rate is 4 percent. Loans cannot be used to buy land or refinance debts.

Loan applicants are cautioned against starting construction or incurring debts for work or materials before the loans from FHA are closed, Mrs. Lickert said. Once the arrangement has been completed, farmers may buy their building materials wherever they please and obtain building plans from any reliable source. The Farmers Home Administration has a limited number of plans which applicants may use.

During construction of buildings, the FHA makes periodic inspections to be certain that sound construction standards are followed.

that owners or claimants of Kentucky land must list such holdings for taxes and must pay those taxes on penalty of forfeiture of their claim. Neither the Wolcotts nor any other Virginia "heirs" had ever paid taxes on the land in question.

The Pen-Ken Oil & Gas Corporation suit in Pike county spurred the suit filed here by Commonwealth's Attorney Allen to rid Floyd lands of such claims. His petition attacked Pen-Ken's claim to 209,600 acres of land valued at more than $700,000 on the 1906 Tax Act, pointing to the undisputed possession of the land by private owners over a period of 143 years.

This was followed by the Taylors' move two years ago in seeking to void that judgment and to get into the act as new parties to the action. Taylor in his notice on Commonwealth's Attorney Burnis Martin at that time contended that he actively defended his title in the Pike county case and that the Commonwealth in the 1941 action "was wholly without warrant" in describing him as "an unknown defendant." He and his sisters claimed no process was served on them in the 1941 case here and that they knew nothing of it till October, 1954.

After the 1955 failure here of the Taylors they apparently sought relief in U. S. district court as non-residents of Kentucky, and, losing there, now have the case before the Supreme Court.

Taylor said here that he had no intention of attacking the rights of persons who have established title to land and have paid taxes on it. He said what he wants is a large acreage on which no taxes have been paid and are not now being paid and to which title has not been filed.

The case in the Supreme Court will be defended on behalf of the Commonwealth by Attorney General Ferguson.

The Haskell patent, basis of all this contention, was issued in 1795, shortly before the Kentucky-Virginia Compact. The land in question lay in what was then Russell county, Virginia.

ELDERLY COUPLE MAY DRAW SINGLE SECURITY-PAY CHECK

Elderly couples in the future may receive their monthly social security payments in a single check instead of separately, the Social Security Administration announced today.

Officials said the single-check procedure has been used on a limited basis in the last several months and has proved so successful that it will be extended to all retired couples during the next few months.

Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Marion B. Folsom said the change from separate checks to husbands and wives will save the social security system about $1 million a year.

Any beneficiary who for any reason objects to the combined payment will be paid by separate check.

The issuance of single checks to married couples began in September, 1956, for new beneficiaries. In the 10 months of operation, the new payment method reduced by one-half the cost of writing checks in these cases.

Beginning in January, 1958, the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance will extend the practice of issuing single checks to elderly couples who were on social security rolls prior to September, 1956.

No combination of social security benefits payable to a husband and wife will be made where they are not living together, or where part of the wife's benefit is based upon her own record of work under social security.

Currently, almost 11 million persons, including 1,700,000 elderly couples, receive monthly social security benefits. Mr. Folsom said the total cost of issuing checks is an increasingly important cost factor in the operation of the program. He pointed out that it costs over 5 cents to prepare and mail each check. It is estimated that the change to single checks for elderly couples could reduce the number of checks issued by 20 million.

ADVANCING EDUCATION IN KENTUCKY

By ROBERT R. MARTIN
Superintendent of Public Instruction

The week of November 10-16 has been set aside as American Education Week in Kentucky by proclamation of the Governor. The observance of a time specifically designated to bestow recognition on America's schools gains added significance with each passing year.

If one attempts to isolate any single factor that has contributed more than any other to the development of the greatness of the American nation, it would be difficult to call that factor anything other than our system of education.

Education has occupied a unique position of influence on United States culture almost from the beginning of our constitutional history. It was the deep and positive faith in the ability of the American people to govern themselves that made it apparent to our early leaders that education for all the people was a necessary and potent prerequisite to the preservation of our republican form of government. It was evident to them that if our people were to have the power to rule themselves in representative assemblies, they must have every opportunity to make themselves intellectually capable of such a grave responsibility.

Public education has provided the American people with that opportunity. How well has it served that end? The history of our nation is the testimony of education's effectiveness.

We are today the most progressive nation in the world. We have seen that our system of public education has not only provided us with the ability to preserve the American way of life, but that it has enabled us to achieve the highest standard of living in all the history of the world within that way of life.

But even more than that—public education has taught us to respect the worth of the individual; it has helped us to learn cooperation and fair play; it has enabled us to prepare ourselves for vocations and professions; it has given us great men, great movements, and great ideas; it has created an atmosphere of understanding and a climate of accomplishment. And so long as public education is preserved, protected, and supported, we shall be able to do more and better things, and learn still more how to respect the dignity of men and the preciousness of freedom.

Never before has public education faced greater challenges than in this age. Our population is constantly and consistently increasing; our people are more mobile, and there are many questions being asked of the schools. What should be taught and with what methods? How are we to house increasing enrollments? Where are we to get the additional teachers we so desperately need? These and many other questions represent some of the challenges that face Kentucky schools and schools throughout America.

American Education Week is an opportunity for people to visit schools and talk with their teachers and school administrators. It is an opportunity to study at first hand, the status of education in each community. Schools will always welcome their patrons to visit but during this week of November 10-16, they extend a special welcome. National TV, radio, and newspaper coverage will focus attention on the schools of the nation. I urge every Kentuckian to familiarize himself with his schools and the tasks they must bear to the end that public sentiment may be further directed toward advancing education in Kentucky.

FHA Commission Says Second Mortgage Not Best Way of Financing

Don't rush into a second mortgage before exploring better methods of financing a home purchase, Home buyers may well profit by this advice given by FHA Commissioner Norman P. Mason, Washington, D. C. The FHA chief denounced the second mortgage as "an evil we thought FHA had banished long ago."

He described FHA as a time-tested system enabling Americans to buy their own homes with a modest equity investment. Second mortgages, he said, were among the weakness FHA was set up to eliminate from home financing practices that wrecked the mortgage market in the early 1930's.

Mr. O. M. Howard, director of the Louisville insuring office of the Federal Housing Administration, pointed out in connection with Mr. Mason's remarks that FHA, in its role of insuring lenders against loss on mortgage loans, permits no secondary financing.

"As Commissioner Mason has made clear," Mr. Howard said, "FHA's insurance make it possible for lenders to make high-ratio loans which permit low down payments. This plan keeps all the buyer's housing payments in one sum to be paid monthly until the home is fully paid for. There are no refinancing charges and no high interest rates such as are usual when second mortgages are used."

FHA does not countenance the use of second mortgages and limits the interest on the loan to 5 1/2 per cent. FHA is a method of financing which time and experience have proved to be successful—safe for home buyers, safe for the lender and safe for the economy of America. Mr. Howard urged lenders, brokers and builders to use FHA-insured loans for families of moderate means because it gives them the sort of payment plan they can safely meet.

"They seem to have forgotten the chaos multiple mortgages caused," he said, referring to those who engaged in "short-sighted" methods to make a quick sale.

WAYLAND

The November meeting of the Willing Workers Homemakers was held at the home of the president, Mrs. J. T. Spillman. The meeting was called to order by the president and a short devotional program on Thanksgiving was given by Mrs. Spillman. When the roll was called each member answered by telling one thing they were thankful for at this Thanksgiving time. The lesson project was given by Mrs. Dixie T. Higgins, home demonstration agent. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Tramble Turner, and the lesson will be on preparing holiday foods. Lunch was served to Mesdames M. M. Collins, W. T. Hatcher, Tramble Turner, Carl Stewart, Buford Rollins, Dixie T. Higgins and Mrs. Spillman.

Miss Ginger Spillman and Miss Phyllis Burnett were home for the week-end from Morehead State College where they are enrolled.

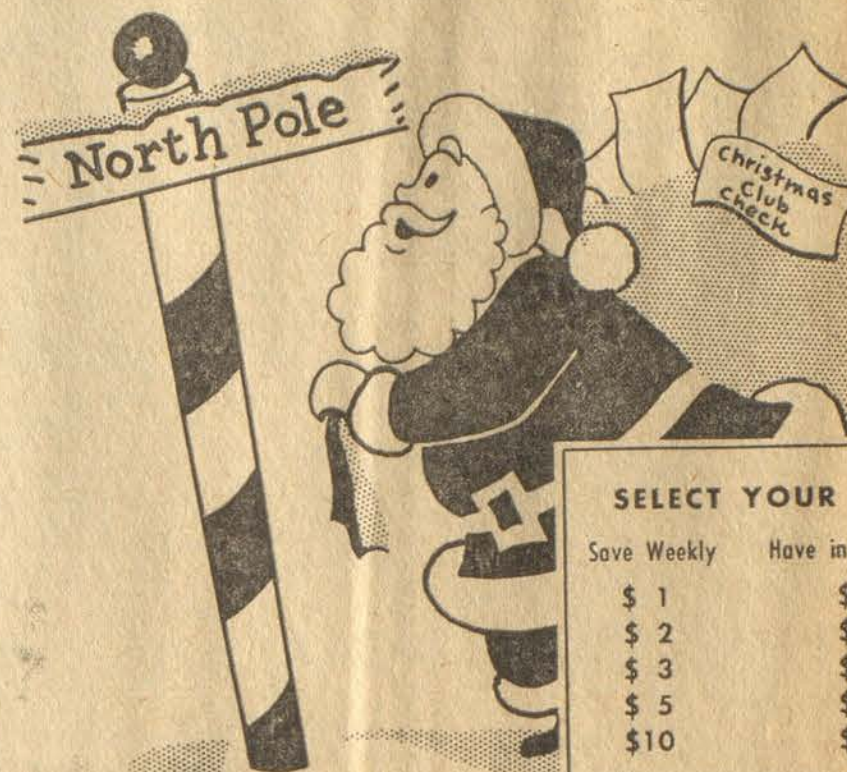

Dr. M. V. Wicker is recovering nicely from his illness and is able to have friends call on him at his home.

if your husband had to do this today . . .

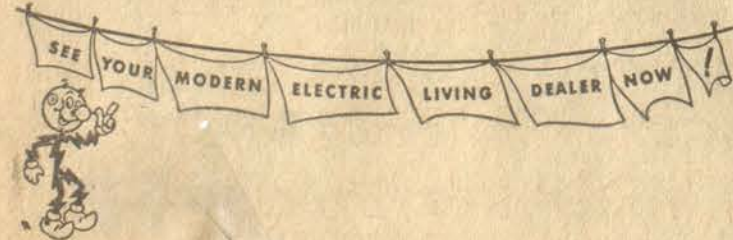

... guess what he'd do tomorrow!

Up and down, bend and stretch . . . that's the way it goes when you hang out the family wash the old-fashioned way.

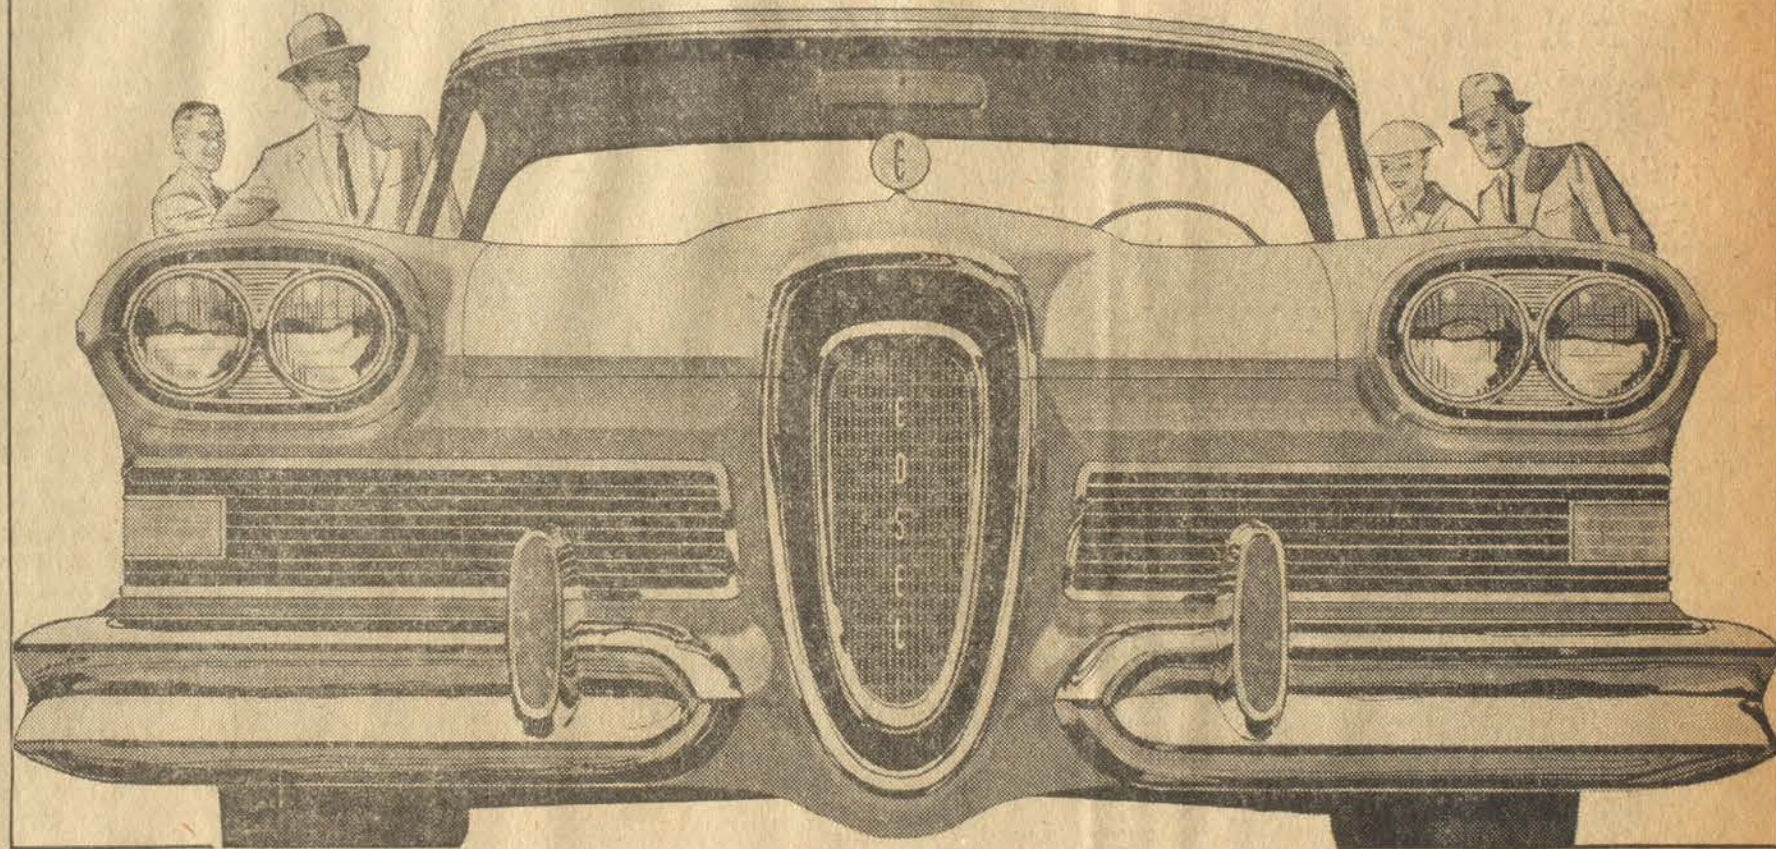

If your husband did these wash-day exercises just once—struggling with unwieldy baskets full of heavy wet clothes, hanging each piece up one by one—we'll bet he'd buy an electric clothes dryer.

Then, on wash days, there'd be no more unnecessary drudgery for you . . . no more backaches . . . no more clothespins to bother with . . . no more unsightly clotheslines. You'd just toss a washer load of clothes into your electric clothes dryer, set a dial, and they'd be fluffy dry pronto! And your family would save money on clothes, for you'd actually need fewer changes for children. With an electric washer and dryer, you can have clothes sparkling clean and dry—ready for use—within two hours.

If this sounds wonderful to you, see if you can get your husband to go through the wash-day lifting, bending and stretching routine just once. Odds are in your favor that both of you will soon be seeing your modern electric dealer . . . on your way to Living Better Electrically with an electric clothes dryer.

The one that's really new is the lowest-priced, too!

Compare! Car for car, Edsel gives you most—and is priced the lowest—of all 1958's medium-priced cars!

The elegantly styled Edsel is the newest looking car you'll see on the road this year. But more important to you as a car buyer, the Edsel is new all over. New all over means the already-famous power of the big, new V-8 Edsel Engines. It means the option of new Teletouch Drive, the most talked-about feature in years. It means the safety of Edsel's self-adjusting brakes. Even the first genuine contour seats. Yet, with all these important advances, Edsel prices are the lowest in the whole medium-price field! Compare—car for car. You'll find that Edsel is the value of the year. See your Edsel Dealer and prove it.

LESS CONFUSION
Some persons look upon the mass of rules and regulations issued by State agencies and boards as red tape manufactured to confuse the citizens.

Well, if this is so, Kentucky's public school laws and regulations of the State Board of Education are now "streamlined red tape."

State School Supt. Robert M. Martin announces that a new convenient version of the laws and regulations will be distributed in loose-leaf binders to local superintendents at a meeting of the Kentucky Association of School Administrators at Louisville, Dec. 12-13.

The task of growing, classifying and compiling the material was accomplished by the Department of Education in nine months under the direction of Gordie Young, technical adviser.

Martin said the regulations now can be kept current by sending officials a new page or pages on which the old content has been eliminated and the new content substituted. The chapters are arranged by related subjects and can be expanded without creating confusion.

SCHOOL LUNCHES
Superintendent Martin said our public schools last year served 46½ million school lunches. This total represented a 12 per cent increase over the previous school year. The cost varied from 10 to 30 cents, and might have been higher except for the program of the Agriculture Department's Commodity Distribution Division. This program makes certain food commodities directly available to schools, hospitals and other public and welfare agencies.

WILDERNESS ROAD
Here's an item from Fred J. Burkhard, editor of the Casey County News, Liberty:

The trail of the Wilderness Road is perhaps nowhere so clearly seen today as in Casey county near Middleburg. The trail runs through forest land that has been undisturbed by plow or erosion. The best informed person on the matter is Josh Wells of Middleburg, who is capable of outlining the trail for as much as 10 miles as it passes near Dunnville.

Charles Scott Was Soldier-Governor of Commonwealth
By CHARLES F. HINDS, Secretary-Treasurer, Kentucky Historical Society

In 1854 the Commonwealth of Kentucky reburied its fourth governor (1808-12). Major General Charles Scott, along with two other prominent Kentuckians, on a state-owned lot in the Frankfort Cemetery.

The funeral services were preceded by a military parade, represented by units of War of 1812 and War with Mexico veterans, a detachment of officers from the Louisville Legion, a militia company from Georgetown, cadets from Kentucky Military Institute, members of Odd Fellows and Sons of Temperance, students from Sayre's High School, Arbogast's and Plato's Saxhorn bands from Louisville, and a long line of citizens and visitors in horse-drawn carriages.

At the cemetery, Governor Lazarus Powell delivered the introductory address, followed by Colonel Thomas L. Crittenden, who gave the laudatory address in honor of Governor Scott. From 3,000 to 5,000 persons attended the services.

In contrast, however, to the pomp and public display of that 1854 funeral is a very small white stone furnished by the Kentucky Legislature to mark the grave of Scott which reads simply: "Governor Chas. Scott. Born in Powhatan County, Va., 1741. Died in Clark County, Kentucky, 1813." Even the birthdate is not considered accurate, most Kentucky historians now being of the opinion that he was born at least two years earlier.

His memory, today, is perpetuated chiefly in museums by two portraits owned by the Kentucky Historical Society, one by Harold Collins, in the Old State House, and one by Paul Sawyer, in the Old Governor's Mansion.

Time is a healer, but it is also the river of Lethe. Few of us can now recall the facts and rich stories associated with Scott's long military career, from Braddock's campaign in 1755 through Fallen Timbers with Mad Anthony Wayne in 1794, a career equalled only by Isaac Shelby, the first governor of Kentucky.

The War of 1812 broke out officially two months before Governor's Scott's term was up. True to the adage that "Old Soldiers Never Die," Scott complained bitterly that if it were not for a recent fall down the Mansion steps, he'd be far away from Frankfort at the scene of battle.

The Old Warrior died the following year (1813) in Clark County at "Canewood," his second wife's home.

Hatfield-McCoy Feud Recalled By Discovery

A recent rediscovery of the graves of five members of the McCoy family, killed in the famous Hatfield-McCoy feuds, has initiated a movement to seek a historical marker in a nearly forgotten mountain cemetery near the small community of Hardy.

This clash of two families, over a grievance which even today is not clearly understood, is recorded as America's most well-known feud. The story began on an election day on the Kentucky-West Virginia border in the early 19th century.

Stories of the origin of the feud are obscure. One is that while "Devil Anse" Hatfield and his clan from across the Tug Fork in West Virginia were carousing with the McCoy's on the Kentucky side, Hatfield's son eloped across the river with Randall McCoy's daughter. When a few months later, McCoy's daughter returned to her Kentucky relatives, a war of hatred and revenge began.

The feud outlived all those who saw its beginning and though there were peaceful interludes, an argument over a trivial matter as the number of notches on a hog's ear would start another series of killings.

On one occasion an old man of the Hatfield clan stood alone against the McCoy tribe and when he died cursing his enemies, his guns were empty and his body riddled with bullets. Later after three McCoy's had stabbed a Hatfield, a party of Hatfield's surrounded Randall McCoy's cabin and set it on fire with the McCoy's trapped inside. On that night a Hatfield shot a young McCoy girl to death. Historians say it was a great day for the McCoy's when this Hatfield was hanged, many years later, before 6,000 spectators. He was the first one of the few feudists hanged legally.

The courts were never effective in handling the feud because the participants lived in two states and both states frowned on extradition of their citizens, since each side laid blame on the other. Also many of the sheriffs and judges were kin to participants.

The feud finally was controlled with the coming of the coal mine industry to east Kentucky and the pressure exerted by mine operators.

POLLIE NUNNERY LOAR

Pollie Nunnery Loar, born May 5, 1875, departed this life November 14, 1957, at the age of eighty-two years, six months and nine days. She was the daughter of Tom and Rebecca Maynard Nunnery, who preceded her in death. She leaves to mourn her passing, her loyal and devoted husband, James H. Loar; one son, J. A. Loar; two daughters—Mrs. Dixie Caldwell and Mrs. Sadie Stratton; one brother—Dude Nunnery; one sister—Mrs. Lou Crum; thirteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Floyd county has suffered a great loss in the passing of this good woman. A seat in the Christian Church has been made vacant, for God has called His child to a better home. However, the good life she lived and the splendid example she set as a Christian wife, mother, homemaker and neighbor will live on through her influence on those who were privileged to know her. Her great mother heart is reflected in the following lines, as she anxiously looked for her children:

"The Watcher"

She always leaned to watch for us; anxious if we are late, In winter by the window; in the summer, by the gate. Her thoughts were all so full of us; she never could forget, And so I think that where she is, she must be watching yet. Waiting for us to gather home, anxious if we are late, Watching from Heaven's window; waiting by Heaven's gate. The following poem is so fitting as her faithful husband lingers a few more days with us:

"Should You Go First"

Should you go first, and I remain —to walk the road alone, I'll live in memory's garden, dear, with happiness we've known. In spring I'll wait for roses red; when faith the lilacs blue, In early fall, when brown leaves fall, I'll catch a glimpse of you.

Should you go first, and I remain—go first, and I remain—to finish with the scroll, Each thing you touched along the way will be a hallowed spot. I'll hear your voice, I'll see your smile, though blindly I may grope.

The memory of your helping hand will buoy me on with hope.

Should you go first, and I remain—to finish with the scroll, No lessening shall creep in, to make this life seem dull. We've known so much happiness—we've had our cup of joy, And memories—one gift of God, that death cannot destroy.

Should you go first, and I remain—one thing I'd have you do, Walk slowly down that long, lone path—for soon I'll follow you.

I want to know each step you take, so I may walk the same, For some day down that lonely road, you'll hear me call your name.

The family also wants to thank each and everyone for the kindness which were shown to them, and for the wonderful food and flowers.

PRIORITY SEEN FOR TAX CUTS

Chandler Believed Set To Back Tax Reductions; Racetrack May Be Taxed

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 7 — Governor Chandler put high priority Thursday on tax-cutting legislation in the 1958 General Assembly.

And he hinted he would not insist too strenuously on preserving the Keeneland race track's parimutuel tax exemption, which he supported in the 1956 legislative session.

He forecast smooth sailing for all of his projects with a Legislature "more substantially on my side than the last one."

He said in an interview that he is "not quite ready" to talk about his legislative proposals generally but that his budget bill will be the first to be introduced in the 1958 session.

The proposal to lop $2,000,000 off the tax burden carried by Kentuckians will be close behind. A treasury surplus standing today at more than $20,000,000 will allow the cut, the Governor said.

In response to questions, Chandler said he anticipated efforts will be made to reimpose the state's parimutuel tax on Keeneland race course, near Lexington.

The bill that exempted Keeneland, a nonprofit track, was a subject of stormy debate in the 1956 session.

Chandler suggested that his support of the exemption bill has not to date been fully explained. "All I desired," he said, "was to see Keeneland restored to the position under which it operated for 20 years before Wetherby put the tax on it."

Keeneland was made subject to pari-mutuel taxes under Chandler's predecessor, Lawrence Wetherby. Its tax amounted to about 4 per cent of the betting it handled.

Chandler said he would not "put up the same fight" if a strong effort is made next year to reinstate the tax.

He said he made a fight two years ago because he thought such a tax was punitive on a nonprofit organization that had operated for years without it.

CATS LICK OLD RIVALS TO POST 8-2 RECORD

Prestonsburg high school's Black Cats last Saturday night ended their 1957 season with a 12-0 victory over their arch rivals, the Paintsville Tigers, and in so doing they posted a record of eight victories and two losses—their best record since 1954.

Coach John Griggs' boys lost little time in scoring on the visitors. Although their timing was off because of a long lay-off due to flu, the Cats worked the option play well, moving the ball goalward on sweeps or passes, depending on the situation facing the quarterback as he rolled out. The first Cat score came on a pass from Paul Phillip Hughes as he started out on an end run, saw oncoming tacklers, then passed to Joe Jack Harris from the four.

The extra point was kicked, but Prestonsburg was penalized, and the second kick failed.

The second and last Prestonsburg marker came in the second quarter on a sweep by Hughes from the 1. Prestonsburg had kicked to Paintsville's 5, and on the Tigers' first play they were thrown back to the 1. On the next, they fumbled, Bobby Gene Howell recovering for the Cats. Then Hughes went over on the first attempt. The kick for point after was blocked.

Thereafter, Prestonsburg settled down to play possession ball, with the defense shining and permitting the Tigers to threaten little. At the outset of the game Paintsville moved the ball well but was halted well outside scoring range as the Prestonsburg defense fathomed the attack.

Offensively, Paul Phillip Hughes at quarterback was outstanding. Starring defensively were Bobby Howell, Wayne Dixon, Henry Hughes, Rudolph Allen, Tom Harmon and "Red" Minix.

Bobby Gene Howell was named "Player of the Week" for his performance. Howell has won the honor twice this season.

Eight Black Cats—seven of them members of the starting eleven—played their last high school football game Saturday night. These are Paul Phillip Hughes, Tom Harmon, Joe Jack Harris, Wayne Dixon, Rudolph Allen, Bob Lucas, Glenn Anderson, and Bill Herald.

These eight represent the loss of three of the four starting backs, the center, both guards and the left end.

In his first year as coach here Coach Griggs turned out a team that was defeated only by Jenkins and Hazard and which ranks third in the Conference.

NEW COACHES IN CAGE JOBS

Six Basketball Mentors, Least Changes in Recent Years, Named in Region

Basketball coaching changes in the 15th region for the 1957-58 high school season have been the fewest in recent years, with only six new mentors in the schools.

In the 58th district (Floyd county) "Copper-John" Campbell, highly successful mentor at Wayland high for ten years and the tutor of fabulous "King Kelly" Coleman, resigned to enter private business. He has been replaced by Gene Frazier, ex-Maytown high cager, who graduated from Morehead College.

In the other Floyd county change, at Wheelwright high, Don Wallen, a former Wheelwright all-star athlete and more recent-

E.K.M.C. LOOP MEETS THURSDAY

The annual fall meeting of the ten-team Eastern Kentucky Mountain four-sport conference will be held in Pikeville, Thursday night at 7 p.m.

Election of officers for the 1957-58 year will be held and the all-conference football team will be chosen at the meeting. Jenkins high will be awarded the championship for the 1957 football season, succeeding Pikeville.

Another item for the group to consider will be the status of Hazard, which has been in the loop for two years but has never been able to schedule more than five football games. To be eligible for the loop crown, six must be played.

OIL SPRINGS, AUXIER, FLAT GAP, GARRETT

Five cage teams—Ashland high, Ashland Holy Family, Maysville, Clark County and Olive Hill—have been named to play in Ashland's third annual holiday basketball tournament. . . Four fifteenth region teams are under consideration for the remaining places. . . Undefeated Oil Springs, Flat Gap, Garrett and Auxier are eyeing a berth in the field.

EARLY POWERS

Garrett, Oil Springs and Betsy Layne appear to be the early cage powers in the 15th region. All have won four games without suffering a defeat. Carroll Burchett, six-foot, four-inch senior forward, has returned to Flat Gap high to play until January, when he becomes ineligible by reaching his 20th birthday.

Burchett first entered the University of Kentucky, but later decided to return to the Johnson county school to earn an additional 1½ credits for his high school diploma.

Prestonsburg's closing football record of 8-2 is the best the Black Cats have registered in the past three seasons. The 12-0 triumph over Paintsville, Saturday night, was most impressive, considering the fact that the game had been postponed more than two weeks.
