

This Town— That World

Illinois advertises itself as the "Land of Lincoln". Where does that leave Kentucky, land of his birth?

KENTUCKY Kentucky is something more than the "Dark and Bloody Ground," and its greatest products amount to a lot more than the traditional "fast horses, beautiful women and bourbon." Consider its people, the heritage of greatness that is neither Mountains nor Blue Grass but is human beings. The list of great names is long. In the country's darkest hour, when it had two presidents, both were products of Kentucky soil—Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis. . . . And what state in these United States of ours can match Kentucky's song, "My Old Kentucky Home"?

SAID LINCOLN Speaking of Lincoln, consider this advice culled from the great volume of Lincolniana amassed by historians: "Stand with anybody that stands RIGHT. Stand with him while he is right and PART with him when he goes wrong." "Better give your path to a dog than be bitten by him in contesting for the right. Even killing the dog would not cure the bite." "Quarrel not at all. No man resolved to make the most of himself can spare time for personal contention." And beat this for an argument against slavery: "I never knew a man who wished himself a slave. Consider if you know any good thing that no man desires for himself."

HOME MISHAP KILLS WOMAN

Floyd Native Claimed By Fall in Louisville; Graveside Rites, Sunday

Mrs. Rose Ann Hall, 39, Floyd county native, was found dead in Louisville Wednesday of last week at the foot of a stairway at the home of a neighbor where she had gone to stay the night. The Jefferson county coroner ruled death was due to a skull fracture.

Homicide Detective Jay Davis and Paul McHugh, who investigated the death, reported that Mrs. Hall had gone to the home of Mrs. Alma Ferguson on Seventh street. Mrs. Ferguson was accompanying her and both were mounting the steps. Mrs. Ferguson told the detectives that the woman landed in a setting posture and she thought she had gone to sleep. Mrs. Ferguson threw a blanket over her and went to bed. The next day she checked to find the Floyd woman was dead.

from Third to the Strand Theatre line and then skirt around that property to connect with Lake Drive.

The Municipal Housing Commission here last Saturday filed with the Housing & Home Finance Agency application for advance planning funds for a low-rent public housing project.

The application envisions a project of 100 units. Construction and acquisition of property for such structures—duplexes, single units or multiple unit housing—would entail the expenditure of about a million dollars, it is estimated. Bonds issued for such a project, it was explained by Clifford B. Latta, executive director of the urban renewal project, would not constitute a liability of the city but would be retired by rental of the properties.

Mr. Latta also said that urban renewal portion of the program here is being planned not merely as a community beautification move but also to provide parking facilities that would take all parking off Lake Drive and open that main thoroughfare to traffic and lessen congestion.

The Martin Municipal Housing Commission last Friday accepted the offer of the Urban Renewal Administration of $15,100 in advance planning funds and named W. W. Burchett, Prestonsburg attorney, its executive director. Planning funds, if a community fails to carry out its urban renewal program, do not constitute an indebtedness against the community. The Martin commission also employed the firm of Scruggs & Hammond, of Lexington, Ky., and Peoria, Ill., as planning consultant. The same firm represents the Prestonsburg Municipal Housing Commission, and one of its representatives will discuss planning and designing of the Prestonsburg project at the commission's meeting tonight (Thursday).

The Martin Municipal Housing Commission is composed of Lawrence Keathley, chairman, W. J. Reynolds, Jr., vice-chairman, Mayor Denzil Halbert, ex-officio member, Dr. G. C. Collins and Dr. Frances Sherman.

If the low-rent housing program is put into effect here, units provided would be for only those with low incomes, widows and the disabled. Thus modern housing would be made available at a cost of $25 to $40 a month, it was explained.

DOG DAZE
A note running to this effect was in the typewriter on my return to it Wednesday afternoon: "A friend called to say that your dog has become confused by the sunshine, think it's spring and has let his fancy take him 'way down to the Porter Addition where his thoughts are running to love, and not lightly. Indicates he's yelling, 'Amor, Amor,' so loudly that, being deaf as the proverbial adder anyhow, he can't hear approaching traffic and is in danger of getting himself knocked halfway home... Suggest that as soon as you can get the car from your No. 2 son you go get him."

THE MOOCHER!
This one comes via the South Seas. The shipwrecked sailor had fallen into the hands of a savage who had a taste for blood. It seems, and this chief would daily stick his prisoner with a dagger and drink the—ugh!—blood. This went on for some time, and the sailor became more and more piqued as well as pricked. Finally he lodged his protest:

"Now see, here, chief, you can kill me, cook me, and eat me but I just want you to know that I'm getting sick and tired of being stuck for the drinks!"

Although Floyd county led all other Kentucky counties in the number of essays entered, it was a 17-year-old Ohio county high school senior who won out over 31,425 other Kentucky students to capture top honors in the 1958 soil conservation essay contest.

His essay was judged best from a record number written by grade and high school students in 118 Kentucky soil conservation districts. The 31,426 essays surpass by 3,000 the number entered in the 1957 contest and represents the largest participation of the contest's 15-year history.

Prizes totaling $3,250 in U. S. Savings Bonds were offered as an incentive to Kentucky students.

Miss Virginia Carol Peerey, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Peerey, of Monticello, won second prize and will receive a $75 bond.

The contest is sponsored by the newspapers and radio-television station in cooperation with the conservation association and the State Department of Education.

Besides receiving the Savings Bond awards, the three state winners and their parents and teacher will be guests of honor at the 21st annual Farm Award Luncheon in Louisville next Saturday. At the luncheon they will meet with the winners of four other contests of the farm incentive program sponsored by the newspapers and radio-television station.

Something Wrong — Somewhere

It is only natural that those who reside in communities served by rural roads complain when promises of stone or gravel surfacing are forgotten, or broken. County Judge Stumbo says the complaints are numerous and forceful. He also says an attempt has been made to place the blame on him for neglect of these routes, and at the same time he emphasizes the point that the blame rests squarely upon the shoulders of the Rural Highway Department.

The Times has no desire to champion the cause of either official party to the dispute but it does not hesitate to agree with the people that they are not getting that road maintenance that the rural highway program promised in this county when the contract between the fiscal court and the Rural Highway Department was signed. In fact, we have never been satisfied with the program. It sounds great on paper, but the sound belies the results.

A similar situation has arisen in perhaps many other counties of Kentucky. In one, Elliott county, the Rural Highway Department went on record in the matter. After Elliott County Judge Davis had complained to Mack G. Walters, commissioner of rural highways, that no stone had been spread in the county, Walters requested and received from George H. Hailey, director of the Division of Rural Highways, a letter claiming:

1. Elliott county itself delayed the program through failure of the fiscal court to sign a contract. Although the district engineer met with the court as early as March 25, last year, the contract was not signed by the court till mid-August.

2. Only two counties in the state—Elliott and Boyd—had caused such delay.

3. Requisition for stone was made Sept. 17 but bids on the stone were rejected, a better price was procured, and finally on Jan. 21, 1959 the stone was ordered out.

4. If the court had cooperated and (wrote Mr. Hailey) "set up the program in April, May or June like most other counties, the stone could have been placed on the roads before September 1st."

Only Boyd and Elliott delayed the Rural Highway Department, according to Mr. Hailey. That leaves Floyd county in the list of 118 counties that did cooperate. Floyd county's fiscal court signed the contract on April 2, 1958, to be exact.

And lo! September 1, the date Mr. Hailey says the stone could have been placed on Elliott county roads if its magistrates and county judge had acted promptly, is long past.

It follows, then, that something of a more mysterious nature is wrong in Floyd county. What that "wrong" is, the people are entitled to know.

Many elephants are among the hundreds of trained animals that will be seen at the Memorial Field House in Huntington when the Big Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus stops for two days in the Big West Virginia City. It is scheduled for afternoon performances at 4 p.m. and night shows at 8 p.m. in the Field House Tuesday and Wednesday, February 24 and 25. It is the same circus that plays Madison Square Garden in New York City each year. Reserved seats range from $1.50 to $3.50 with children under 12 years at half price.

ally or through documents), and the last of the factors (price per pound, weight, yield, etc.) needed to determine the total purchase price must be available.

Applications for payment under the 1958 program must be filed with the county ASC office not later than April 30, 1959.

Last year, under the 1957 program, 21 Floyd farmers received payments for shorn wool, and 13 were paid for unshorn lambs and yearlings.

Social Security Points
Outlined By Thompson
For Operators Of Farms

Self-employed farmers may use an alternate method for figuring their earnings from their farm. Thomas B. Thompson, district manager of the Pikeville Social Security Administration office and James Tackett, agent with the Pikeville Internal Revenue office reminded farm operators today.

Tackett pointed out that self-employed farmers may figure their earnings for social security in several ways. (1) If your gross income from agricultural self-employment is not more than $1800, you may count as your net farm earnings either your actual net or two-thirds of your gross income; (2) If your gross farm income is more than $1800, and your net farm earnings are less than $1200, you may use either your actual net or $1200; (3) If your gross farm income is more than $1800 and your net farm earnings are $1200 or more, you must use the actual amount of your net earnings.

Tackett added that use of the option enables farmers with gross income as low as $600 to obtain social security protection for themselves in their old age and for their survivors in case of death. However, he emphasized that regardless of the way in which you figure your net earnings, you must have net earnings of at least $400 (from farming alone, or in combination with other SE earnings) in order to get social security credit for the year.

In addition to the revised optional method, the law provides social security coverage to some farm owners who receive cash or crop shares from tenant farmers. If the farm-landlord under his agreement with his tenant, materially participates in the production or management of production of the farm crops raised on his land, this income may be reported for social security purposes.

Tackett reminds farm operators or farm owners who paid as much as $150 in cash wages to any farm worker in their employ during 1958 that they must file an employer's tax and informational return for such farm employees. They must also report each farm employee who worked for them on 20 or more days during 1958 regardless of the amount of those wages if they were figured on a time rather than a piece rate basis.

For 1958, the social security tax rate is 4 1/2% (2 1/4% each for employer and employee.) This tax applies to cash wages paid to a farm worker up to a total of $4,200 in the year. The tax amount must be entered on Form 943 (Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees) together with the total amount of cash wages paid to the farm worker. It is required that the farm employer do this and file the return with the District Director of Internal Revenue at Pikeville. For 1959, the social security tax rate will be 5% (2 1/2% each for employer and employee). For 1959 and years thereafter, this tax will apply to cash wages paid to a farm worker up to a total of $4,800 in the year.

Tackett points out that when a farm employee meets the 20-day a year test the farm employer should count only days for which the employee works for cash wages figured on a time basis. However, if the worker meets this test, the farm employer must pay social security taxes on all cash wages paid the employee during the year (whether on a time, piecework, or other basis.)

Farm employees include household workers if they are employed on a farm operated for profit.

Bureau to Collect
Information on Work

Information on the work experience of the nation's population during 1958 will be collected by means of special questions to be asked in the February Current Population Survey, according to Supervisor Robert A. Yerkey, of the Census Bureau's regional office at Cincinnati, Ohio, which will participate in the survey.

The special questions will provide information on the number of persons who worked during the year, number of weeks worked, amount of time lost during the year because of unemployment and disability, and related items. Information on farm wage workers will be collected also in the February Current Population Survey. This will show the number of persons who did farm work for cash wages in 1958.

Questions on work experience will be in addition to the regular inquiries on employment and unemployment which are asked each month in 330 "sample" areas throughout the country. Information will be collected locally during the week of February 16 by Mrs. Wilma L. Taulbee, of Malone, Kentucky.

Chicago—According to Commerce Clearing House, 17 of the 31 States that levy income taxes have started withholding the tax at the employment source. Of these, 10 States provide for deduction of the taxes from all wages paid within their respective jurisdictions.

CHEVY'S NEW HI-THRIFT 6

More miles are back in a gallon of regular-grade gas—up to 10% more—and Chevy's new Hi-Thrift 6 engine puts them there. It also gives you more "git" in the speeds you drive the most.

Here's an engine that always seems able to coax extra miles out of a tank of regular-grade gas. In fact, if you're one of those drivers who keep tab on things like gas mileage, you'll soon see for yourself that this new Hi-Thrift 6 gets up to 10% more miles a gallon.

Another thing you'll like about this 135-h.p. 6 is the extra pep it gives you for passing and climbing hills. This is due to higher torque at normal speeds.

It may be hard to believe anything that looks and moves like this '59 Chevy can be such a stickler for economy. But—whether you pick the Hi-Thrift 6 or a vim-packed V8—this is just one more reason Chevy's the car that's wanted for all its worth. Stop by your dealer's and see.

Now, Miss Salyers, having been honored by the National Committee of Boys and Girls as one of those selected to represent this country, would like to go to northern Ireland. But $825 must be raised locally, and there is not much time. She is expected to report June 3 in Washington, D. C., for an orientation course.

The Floyd County 4-H Council and boys and girls of Floyd 4-H clubs will help all they can. But their resources are limited, and they will need help, it was pointed out this week by County Agent Robert M. Jones.

"Reba Joyce is a girl any part of America would be proud to send as a representative to a foreign country, and Floyd county should be particularly proud that one of its own has been honored in this way," Jones added.

Miss Salyers is a home economics major at Berea College. Winner of many county and district 4-H awards, she won second place in the 1956 Courier-Journal Achievement Contest and was one of two to go from this county to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

Climaxing their unit, "Foods for Special Occasions," members of the home economics III class of Prestonsburg high school were hostesses at a reception for the two student-teachers from Morehead State College. Prestonsburg high school has been selected as one of the two off-campus departments for college student teaching of home economics, and Miss Janet Sue Boyd, Williamsport, and Miss Phyllis Ann Bowling, of Carr Creek—both seniors—have been sent here by Morehead State for this work. Miss Hazel Irene Hill, home economics teacher at the high school here, is the supervising teacher.

In addition, Solter asked liquidated damages of $18,154, plus another $10,000 as a reasonable fee for his attorney, Dempsey A. Cox, of Creech & Cox, Ashland.

Last September, Special Boyd Circuit Judge S. H. Rice, Irvine, ruled in favor of Solter, awarding him $16,089.36 for wages due, plus an identical sum for liquidated damages, plus $10,000 for attorney fees—a total of $42,178.72.

On September 11, a notice of appeal was filed.

Rules of the Court of Appeals provide that the record of a case on appeal must be filed in Frankfort within 60 days, but that time extensions may be granted provided total extensions do not exceed 110 days.

On November 4, attorneys for the employers were granted a 58-day time extension "to and including January 5, 1950."

But the maximum period of 110 days authorized by court rules expired December 30, and attorneys for the firms failed to observe the mistake.

The record in the case was filed in Frankfort, January 2. The following day, counsel for Solter asked the appellate court to dismiss the appeal because it was not filed within the time limit authorized by law.

The Court of Appeals, after examining the record and considering arguments of both sides on whether the appeal should be allowed, sustained the motion to dismiss it.

Waterfield To Open Headquarters Feb. 21, Is Leary Announcement

The formal opening of the Harry Lee Waterfield campaign headquarters will be held Saturday, February 21, at the Watterson and Sheraton-Seelbach hotels, Louisville, Campaign Manager Joseph J. Leary announced this week.

Leary said a "nice delegation" is expected from every Kentucky county. Several counties, he added, have said they won't be able to hold their delegations to anything less than 100.

Headquarters, Leary said, will be prepared for any number of persons this time. He explained that the Waterfield organization was caught unprepared this past Saturday when attendance at the Collegians for Waterfield rally climbed above the 900 mark after only 500 persons had been expected.

many shad had been eliminated, and that better fishing was experienced that fall. Further treatments were made each year of this lake until fishing last year was at a new high since treatment was started.

Carter pointed out that all shad cannot be eliminated in these treatments and that it is necessary to carry out the project from year to year. By these continued treatments, he says, fishing should improve from season to season.

Carter's report showed that in 1955 fishermen averaged one fish every two hours. Similar cards, which are compiled by a check of the fishermen encountered on the lake, showed that during 1953, the average catch was a fish each hour and that larger fish were being taken.

The Director of Fisheries believes that fishing in this lake for 1959 should be better than for last year and he is continuing his work and checks on the lake to determine, as far as the Department can, that fishing will continue good in this small but important lake.

Tuesday's freakish winds—gusty whippers of the devastation that struck St. Louis a day earlier, killing 20 and causing millions of dollars' damage—injured two Floyd women and caused minor property damage. Mrs. Polly Frasure, 77, suffered a broken hip when felled by a gust while she was on the porch at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morton Adkins, of Langley.

She was taken to St. Mary's hospital, Huntington.

Mrs. Henry P. Scalf, of Prestonsburg, suffered neck injuries Tuesday morning when wind ripped off sheetrock ceiling of a classroom of the Dwale school where she is a teacher. She was knocked down by pieces of the ceiling, and other plaster sheets were blown onto her. Seats of pupils in an adjoining room were turned around by force of the wind, it was said. Mrs. Scalf is at home here and is believed not to have been seriously hurt.

Ishmael Sparkman suffered a broken leg when run over by a shuttle buggy in the mine of the Ellis Sexton Coal Company at Hueysville last Wednesday. He is in St. Mary's hospital, Huntington. In the Prater Fork Coal Company mine, near the same place, James Caudill suffered a back injury and lacerations while coal was being blasted.

Ky. Mine License Deadline Feb. 15

Frankfort, Feb. 9 (SpL.) — Feb. 15 is the deadline for mine owners in Kentucky to apply for 1959 state licenses, the Department of Mines and Minerals reports.

Application and annual report forms supplied by the agency must be filled out and returned by mine owners with $15 in certified or cashier's check or postal or express money order, payable to Kentucky State Treasurer, to cover the license fee, the department added.

An up-to-date copy of the mine map, certified by a registered engineer, must accompany the license application, the department said, unless such a map has been filed within the past six months.

The annual report form must be completed and sent to the department, it said, even though the mine is not to be relicensed in 1959.

HEART FUNDS AID RESEARCH; OTHER SERVICES BENEFIT

According to a report by the Kentucky Heart Association, the Heart Fund dollars that Kentuckians contributed last year to fight heart disease are currently being used to provide a well rounded program in three important areas of activity: research, health education, and community service.

Research grants are listed as: $15,300 for continued support of the Chair of Heart Research at the University of Louisville Medical School; $29,177 for nine separate research projects—one to the University of Kentucky and eight to U. of L.—to help find the causes and cures for heart disease; $10,350 to support training grants and scholarships for medical students interested in heart research.

In addition, $12,000 is being used to maintain a statewide series of local heart clinics for medically indigent children and adults; the development of two projects—one in Louisville and the other in Lexington—to provide "open heart" surgery facilities in Kentucky for the first time have received $12,000; the statewide Artery Bank to supply Kentucky surgeons with "spare" human arteries for use during operations to replace damaged or diseased arteries was allocated $1,800; the statewide Rehabilitation Center, where heart patients are taught how to live and work normally after heart attacks, has received $1,000.

Free educational literature was sent on request to heart patients, physicians, nurses, teachers, hospitals, schools, colleges, libraries, civic organizations and women's clubs, at a cost of $4,500.

Another $6,000 was invested in heart examination equipment to key hospitals in the state, for use by all interested physicians.

Other activities, for which no cost estimates were given, included heart examinations, hospitalization and operations for medically indigent children and adults in the state, at no cost either to the patient or to the Heart Association; refresher courses for doctors, registered and practical nurses, laboratory technicians and other medical personnel, in the latest heart disease treatment methods.

All activities are financed out of the 75 per cent of the total Heart Fund contributions retained annually in Kentucky.

According to the report, also, more than half of the remaining 25 per cent of the funds sent to the American Heart Association, or at least $44,000, went to support other research grants locally and nationally. Of that total, $29,100 was returned to Kentucky to finance other heart research grants at U. of L.

Continued financial support for these and other program activities is being sought, during the Heart Fund drive throughout February, by the Kentucky Heart Association and its local chapters and committees.

Communities Share In Company Profits, Kiwanians Are Told

Coal companies are sharing their profits with their communities by building better churches, roads and recreation centers, by the financing of scholarships for students and contributing liberally in taxes to the counties in which they operate, James H. Phalan, chief of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals, told members of the Beaver Valley Kiwanis Club at Wheelwright, Monday evening.

Phalan discussed coal mining for profit and the 1958 mine safety record in Kentucky. He said 65,480,000 tons of coal were mined last year in Kentucky with only 49 fatal accidents, or 1,336,000 tons per fatality—the best record in 75 years. The 49 mining deaths were the lowest in 45 years. Mining fatalities in 1957 numbered 61 for an average of one death per 1,242,228 tons of coal mined.

Roof falls, the speaker pointed out, was the No. 1 killer in coal mines. This source claimed 40 lives in 1957 but was out to 29 last year.

Next Monday evening, Dr. Rupert W. Powell, of the staff of the Miners Memorial hospital, McDowell, will be the speaker, and on the following Monday the club's guest-speaker will be H. D. Hayes, Paintsville, district manager of the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

WHEELWRIGHT

CLUB HELPS TEEN-AGERS

The executive committee of the Wheelwright Woman's Club recently brought to the community of Wheelwright and vicinity an outstanding cultural program of music.

Mrs. Chalmer Frazier, of Prestonsburg, brought about 40 of her singing group to Wheelwright for the program. This group is called the Patsy-Teenagers and their presentation was made possible through the cooperation of James Camicia, of the Princess Elkhorn Coal Company. Mrs. Camicia accompanied Mrs. Frazier and the young people to Wheelwright on the chartered bus.

The program consisted of spirituals, semi-classic and popular music to Mrs. Frazier's accompaniment.

For this program the Woman's Club, led by Mrs. Earl Willis, vice-president and program chairman, held the meeting in Community Hall, and because of the cultural qualities of the program held open house for the other civic organizations and all who desired to attend.

At the conclusion of the program the hostesses, Mesdames Waldo B. Cummings, G. F. Leatherman and Mrs. Cora S. McHone, served refreshments to Mrs. Frazier, Mrs. Camicia, the Patsy Teenagers, Club members and several guests.

During a short business session plans were laid to serve a foreman's banquet, to raise money for special projects of the club.

Several women of the club, voiced the desire to enter the Vogue Sewing contest, and the Community Achievement contest was discussed.

AN EARLY BIG SANDY STAVE MILL AT MOUTH OF BEAVER CREEK

Staves used in the manufacture of barrels were early split from choice white oak trees in the Big Sandy valley and sold to buyers, chiefly at Cincinnati. The staves were split out by the woodsmen, usually 18 to 36 inches in length, and the buyer bought them at the creek side. They were then thrown into Beaver Creek and floated down to the mouth where they were finished at the mill.

This was a wasteful method of transportation and was soon abandoned as many staves washed up on the banks. Many farmers retrieved them to use in furnaces while making molasses. Too, the boom at the mouth of Beaver broke under the press of a freshet in 1910 and thousands of staves escaped into the Big Sandy River.

The picture above is of the stave mill set up by the Cincinnati Coopers Company at the mouth of Beaver Creek shortly after the railway came. A "Captain" Lynch was general supervisor of the operations. When the raw staves were finished by the mill they were shipped by railway to market.

The First National Bank presents these pictures in recognition of the rich historical heritage of a region.

Management and Labor Now Agree On Alcoholism

By J. COLLIS RINGO
Executive Director Kentucky Commission on Alcoholism

There is increasing concern about alcoholics as ill people and alcoholism as a health problem, concern by management about it as an economic problem and concern by labor leaders about it as an employment problem.

At the fourth annual Alcoholism in Industry Conference in Chicago in the spring of 1958, Leo Perlis, director, AFL-CIO community service activities, pointed out some pertinent facts regarding organized labor's interest. He summarized:

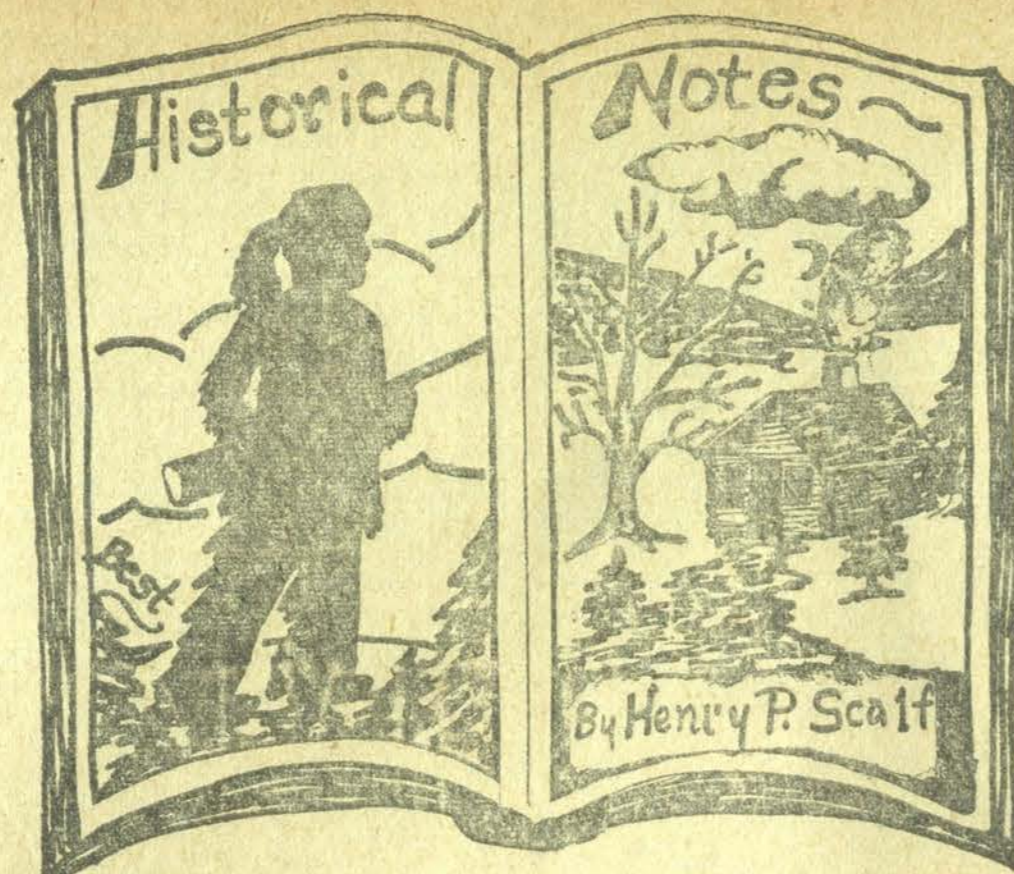

"Dealing with the problem of alcoholism has a prominent place in the on-going AFL-CIO community service program. Thousands of union counselors across the country have been trained to recognize alcoholics and refer them to proper agencies. "The AFL-CIO community service activities is planning a joint labor-industry symposium on the problem involving participants from both labor and management who have conducted such programs. "A pamphlet on the subject has been produced and distributed by the thousands by the AFL-CIO-CSA. "Close working relationships are maintained by the AFL-CIO-CSA with other national agencies in this field."

Perlis pointed out that for many years management was inclined to ignore labor in dealing with the problem drinker and that labor had arbitrarily defended him without regard for the fact that sheltering and protecting him is a deservice. Today, management and labor recognize a mutual responsibility. A program of early detection with corrective measures worked out jointly, a program to which both parties can give unqualified support is advantageous to all the principles involved, particularly the affected employee.

Whether or not a complete solution is possible is debatable. It has already been demonstrated that a substantial percentage can be and are being returned to useful employment. Understanding of alcoholism as an illness . . . a treatable illness . . . is essential to the success of any rehabilitation. It can and will be accomplished when this concept is accepted by the abstainer, the normal drinker and the alcoholic.

WAR IN TENNESSEE

William Jones, Unionist, after writing his wife Christmas Eve, wrote no more until January 9, 1864. He had intended to write New Year's Day but had no paper and stamps. He was stationed in early January at "Camp Near Newmarket, Tenn."

He implored his wife to write, particularly did he want to learn if she received the last money sent her. He had received two newspapers a man brought from her.

"I have seen a great deal of war since I left home but I feel that it is about over. There is no prospect of a fight here at present. I understood today that Longstreet has offered to surrender on conditions but that they will not be given."

"The Second Ohio that was attached to our brigade went to Ohio on furlough, they having reenlisted for the war."

"The Rebs are coming into our lines and giving themselves up everyday. The Proclamation of the President I think will bring the war to a close more than anything that has been done yet . . ."

"At a fight we had at Dandridge, the day before Christmas Gus Smith and Sam Lashure were taken prisoners. I heard since they got away but they have not come to camp. I have never yet gone into a fight without offering up a prayer for the protection of my little old woman in case anything befalling me. So far He has heard my prayers. So you see the prayers of the wicked do some good . . ."

"I think the mails will be more regular by way of the Tennessee River. We have been lying here idle for a week. We are about 20 miles northeast of Knoxville. I think the cavalry will be sent to Kentucky to winter as there is not enough forage for the horses here. . . . I will send this as a soldier's letter for want of a stamp."

Two days later, Jan. 11, Jones wrote again from the same place to quiet the fears of a neighbor that her husband was killed.

"I received a letter from Mrs. Mayer. She has heard that Phil was dead and she is much distressed. . . . I have just written to her setting her mind at rest as I saw Phil on the day she wrote, alive and well. He is not with the regiment. He is orderly for the paymaster McDowell. I suppose Phil is home by this time."

"I am writing this in a church, the headquarters. Before commencing I set dinner to cooking. I am boiling beef bones and making coffee. I was called off while writing the above to act as sergeant of the picket. Therefore, it is now the 13th of the month."

"I have just eaten dinner. I had beans, coffee made of rye, waffle cakes and boiled beef. I bought me a waffle iron so you see I am living fat. The government finds us flour and corn meal and we cook it ourselves. We draw coffee and sugar but not full so we make it with rye . . ."

He noted that one of the two men captured, Gus Smith, had returned to camp but the other, Lasure, had not.

Two weeks later Jones was at Knoxville where he found an opportunity to write. The letter was dated Jan. 25, 1864.

"I have just come here with a lot of prisoners—90 that we captured about 40 miles from here. 20 of the 7th Ohio was detailed to bring them to Knoxville."

He had received a letter and some newspapers from Mollie that he had read over and over but he quickly reverted to his belief that the war was about over.

"The prisoners that we brought in with a few exceptions acknowledge that they are whipped. I talked with two from South Carolina and slave owners. They are willing to come back into the Union again. I think the struggle is about over."

Feb. 3, 1864, Jones was at a "Camp Near Marysville, East Tennessee." From there he wrote his wife that he had been on the "go" so much lately that he hadn't received any mail. A batch of mail came to Knoxville but there was none for him. He had sent her a "letter by hand," evidently meaning he had given it to someone to deliver personally.

"We are now taking ourselves to some place where we can have communication. We are eating up all the forage as we go to keep the Rebels from getting it. We are now back of Knoxville on the road to London. There is some talk of our going to Nashville to guard the road from there to Louisville but as far as I am concerned I don't believe anything until I know it. There is one thing certain, the horses cannot live in Tennessee unless near a railroad . . . We have had a great deal of fighting since I came to the regiment but thank God for answering the prayers of those I left behind for I believe there is many a secret prayer goes up for the gray-haired little old rascal that left all was dear to him in this world to put down this Damnable Rebellion.

"The country here is pretty well cleaned out now so there is not much for any army. I am well and living fat. Just now it goes by spells. Along back we had nothing but what we got ourselves by pressing a mill and grinding our own wheat and corn and forage for meat and other things."

He adds to the letter, Feb. 7, that the mail came and no letter. He chided his wife that the last letter he received was dated Dec. 17.

"I have enough money as I have sold my watches, one for 5 dollars and the other for 22 dollars and there will be four months due me after this month . . ."

Feb. 8 he wrote of getting a new coat or jacket but "my pants are pretty badly worn. Today I patched up the pockets. Oh, how I needed a wife. My thread is all gone. I want you to send me a few threads in a letter . . ."

He had procured a newspaper, the Commercial, and read news of many back home.

"I see there is some smallpox down here. There is some here in the hospitals. They are vaccinating the whole army. I don't think I need to be as it took on me when I was young. I have heard of no deaths here yet. The only thing I am troubled with is lice. The whole army is lousy. I skirmish for them three times a week."

Inmates at Kentucky State Reformatory, LaGrange, are learning how to "win friends and influence people."

Seventy-eight of the inmates earned graduation certificates from the Dale Carnegie course. One course has been completed at the reformatory, one almost completed and a third begun. Participants total 133 inmates.

Says Welfare Commissioner Charles Alphin in his annual report: "It is to be noted that this course has been of tremendous value to those participating—said value an aid toward regaining self-confidence for the successful association with their fellow men."

EPIGRAM FOR CHANDLER

The other day, Gov. Albert B. Chandler arrived punctually at a meeting and talked with others there while awaiting some who were late. As minutes passed and several of the participants glanced anxiously around for the tardy ones, Chandler, whose time usually is apportioned to a long list of appointments, chatted without concern. Finally the latecomers arrived. Chandler remarked amiably, "It used to be that procrastination was the thief of time. Now, it seems, the thief is punctuality."

Tidbits Of Kentucky Folklore

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

It has been so long since my own hood thus invaded. Pants were largely home-made in those days and fit in various ways; new pants were likely to be large enough to allow for shrinkage and the boy's growing. The next season or two those pants got smaller as the boy got bigger, until the Texas cowboy and his tight pants was in no way different from us boys. Just about the time the skin-tight pants could not stand another washing without positively shriveling up, our voices had changed enough for us to wear our first longies and feel that we had arrived at manhood.

Every farm boy I knew longed for the day when he could ride a horse unwatched and unattended. Sometimes the getting to this great day involved some hair-breadth escapes from falls and horse hoofs. Father or Older Brother helped in the first futile attempts to ride a perfectly gentle nag. I was chagrined that I could not mount my steed without getting on a stump or a pile of wood; my legs were short, then and now. By and by I did manage to put my foot into the stirrup and climb on, with an inner feeling of being equal to the world and all its problems.

Wearing short pants was a disgrace, so far as I was concerned. Little boys were marked off from grown ones by the length of trouser legs. If a fellow attempted to put on long pants too early, he had to lick some big boys who did not want their sacred precincts of grown manhood thus invaded. Pants were largely home-made in those days and fit in various ways; new pants were likely to be large enough to allow for shrinkage and the boy's growing. The next season or two those pants got smaller as the boy got bigger, until the Texas cowboy and his tight pants was in no way different from us boys. Just about the time the skin-tight pants could not stand another washing without positively shriveling up, our voices had changed enough for us to wear our first longies and feel that we had arrived at manhood.

Maybe it was unfortunate for me that I never tried to chew tobacco, a habit that was a real mark of being a big fellow. Many a boy that I knew would try again and again to chew his quid like a big man, and get sick. I have drawn up many a bucket of water from the school cistern to pour on the head of some boy who could not take his tobacco at first. Or it might be that he was trying his hand at rolling and smoking a cigar. Tobacco down my way was none of this dainty stuff that is a first cousin to tissue paper; it was he-man tobacco, dark stuff that made the user of it know that he had come in contact with the real article. It is thinkable, then, that some boy who had never tried it might find himself pretty sick for some hours after making an effort to be a big man.

Another mark of being a big fellow I failed to achieve was that of owning a fine horse, fine in the view of Fidelity and such remote places. The horse-ride-and-saddle tradition was alive down to my time, but my steed was a little red mule that certainly did not make its owner envied by the other boys. Maybe that is one reason why I preferred to walk, then and now, unless the distance was forbidden. But the boys who had the saddle or harness horses enjoyed their exalted position and let the rest of us know how insignificant we were. For a year or two a boy might be contented to ride his horse to church and picnics and candidate speakings; the thrill of having envious eyes turned toward him was reward enough. But a natural step was to get a buggy for that fine horse and a girl to ride in the buggy. Right there my growing up came to a dead stop. I left home before I ever acquired a buggy; I sold my mule to go to school on the proceeds; and I was thirty-six years old before I owned a vehicle of any kind, a T-Model Ford. It was too late to triumph over the other fellows, since most of them had long had their own jalopies. I missed my chance to be big.

James Not Certain To Back Bonus Bill In Present Form

Tom James, the Prestonsburg man who has been named to a 11-man committee to campaign for the passage of a veterans' bonus in Kentucky, said last week that he is not certain he will back the drive for a bonus.

"I certainly will not support it in its present form," James asserted. "I will not be for it if it means imposing a sales tax on the people to provide the money to pay it."

James is a former vice-commander of the Kentucky Department, American Legion. Kentuckians will vote next November on a proposal to pay World War II and Korean War veterans $500 for service overseas and $300 for stateside service.

Pioneer Army Was Ambushed At Blue Licks

Frankfort, Feb. 10 — The Blue Licks Battlefield State Park, on US 68 between Maysville and Paris, is the site of the last battle of the American Revolution.

Here 182 pioneers engaged 500 Indians and Canadians on August 18, 1782 and were defeated. In the spring of that year, British Capt. William Caldwell had collected nearly 1,000 Indians and whites in southern Ohio and raided the weak settlements in the Kentucky Blue Grass. With him was the notorious renegade, Girty.

After his forces were reduced somewhat by quarrels, Caldwell struck the little outpost of Bryan Station near Lexington. The stout opposition of men, women and children inside the fort delayed Caldwell. As volunteers gathered to help the small stockade, Caldwell's army lost heart and retreated toward the Ohio River.

At Blue Licks, the reinforced garrison from Bryan Station under Major Todd overtook Caldwell. Hot-headed Major Hugh McGary spurred his horse and dared the Kentuckians to follow him in an attack on the Indians and Canadians. Outnumbered about three to one, the Kentuckians were ambushed and cut down, losing 60 men in about 15 minutes. Todd and Daniel Boone's son, Israel, were among the killed. Boone escaped by swimming the river.

But the invaders, although winning this battle, left Kentucky and were later faced by George Rogers Clark who laid waste many Indian villages.

Today the park covers 100 acres, has a pioneer museum and picnic facilities. A granite shaft records the name of those who fell in defense of Kentucky.

SWIFT STORED SILVER ON JOHNS CREEK, SAID

By Rufus M. Reed

My good friend, R. B. Maynard, teacher and historian of Pike county, sends me a most interesting story his grandmother told him about John Swift, who is believed to have had a "silver mine" somewhere in Eastern Kentucky. Mr. Maynard's grandmother, who was Martha Anne Tumire before her marriage to Jared Maynard, and who was descended from the North Carolina Tumires and Setzers, saw the old man Swift, perhaps when he was close to ninety and was totally blind.

First I will say that I myself have found historical evidence that John Swift actually had a silver mine somewhere in southwestern Johnson county, perhaps on the waters of Little Mine Fork. Some of this evidence is, or should be, on record in the County Court Clerk's office at Faintsville.

A few years ago, I was called upon to make surveys and maps of two tracts of mineral lands lying around the mouth of Little Mine Fork, and on Big Mine Fork. These tracts were owned by Grace Williams, a widow, and C. T. Rule. Ben Rule now owns this latter tract, I believe. The Rule tract embraced all the land in "Hell's Half Acre." The Grace Williams tract was handed down from a patent in the name of Daniel Hager. I don't recall the exact date, but it was around the time of the Civil War, or maybe a little before. Anyway, one of the corners of the old patent, which is a common corner between the Rule tract and that of Mrs. Williams, calls for "a large rock where Swift's old furnace once set." I located this corner and the big rock was near the northern end of a line of high cliffs that form the rugged scenery of Hell's Half Acre. On looking closely at this spot, I could see some evidence that a furnace had once been placed there. This must have been common knowledge among the people of that day when the patent was issued. They must have known about "Swift's old furnace" and its location. For what purpose was the furnace placed there? It is the belief of some that Swift and Munday, his guide, carried the silver to the furnace and smelted it into bars. There is a gateway worn smooth in the line of high cliffs, which leads to the location of the furnace.

Some old citizens of that region say that Swift's Silver Mine was located somewhere on the fork ridge between Big and Little Mine Forks and its location was made known to him by the Indians. How did these folks get the name of "Mine Forks"? Insofar as I know, there are no coal mines on them. Here's the story, in part, as told to Mr. Maynard by his grandmother, and which happened when she was a little girl:

"About the time my grandmother was eleven years of age, her father moved with the family to Johns Creek and settled on what was later known as the Sol McGuire Farm, where the big dam now spans Johns Creek to form Dewey Lake. "Three of my grandparents came out of Germany and one of her grandmothers never did learn to speak English. Her uncle, Adam Setzer, became the ancestor of the Setzers of Floyd county. "While my grandmother and her family still lived on what is known as the Sol McGuire farm, on lower John's creek, in the year 1846, when she was twelve years old, she said two men came up Johns Creek one day, leading an old blind man, who later told them his name was Swift. They would lead this old man up the creek, past the house and be gone for hours and hours. Then they would come back down and pass on below the house and be gone a long time, then they'd come back up and pass by, on up the creek, as if searching for something. Finally they stopped by with the family and explained the reason for their strange actions.

"The old man Swift told the family that many years before he had found a silver mine somewhere in Eastern Kentucky and he and Munday, his guide, and one other man, had moulded the silver into dollars, each one a horseback load. They then had started back toward North Carolina when some Indians attacked them. This caused them to turn back and come through the Big Sandy and Johns Creek sections, trying to surround the Indians and make their way into North Carolina. "They had gone up John's Creek a number of miles (he couldn't remember how many), until they had come to large left hand fork (was that Brushy Fork?) and went up that fork to a low gap in the mountain. (This is believed to be Wolf gap, at the head of Wolf Creek). There one stream of water flowed east, the other west. And down from the gap a short way, they found a cold spring of water. Near this spring, they spent the night. During the night Munday's horse got loose and strayed off and they couldn't find him.

"Next morning, Munday, also had lost his silver, pleaded with the others to divide theirs between them and carry it on their horses for him, and he would walk. This led to a fight in which Munday was killed. He was buried with his portion of the money, in the gap of the mountain, between two large trees.

"Swift and the other man then went on home. The other man took pneumonia and died shortly after his hazardous journey.

"Now in his old days, when he was totally blind, Swift had come back with these two men to lead him, to try and find the money they had buried. It had been years since they had buried it and Swift had forgotten the lay of the country. According to a brief sketch of history, Swift's last known presence in Kentucky before the time he came back in his last days, was around the year of 1770. History also relates that Swift, while fleeing from the Indians, left a hoard of silver buried somewhere in the Big Sandy valley. History also tells us that some disease was beginning to affect his eyes as early as 1770. Around this time, he left Kentucky and said he was going to North Carolina to see a doctor. It was also reported that he left some maps and documents with a Mrs. Renfro in a little settlement in Tennessee.

"Many men have spent years searching for Swift's Silver Mine and his buried treasure. Some think the story is mostly legend, but there is plenty of historical evidence to lift it from the realm of legend to that of historical reality. Some man, some day, may find the silver mine, the location known only to Swift and the Indians"

PIKE BEARS TO CLOSE OUT HOME PLAY THIS WEEK

Pikeville, Ky., Feb. 9 (Spl.) — The Pikeville College Bears, who took their 20th and 21st victories of the season last week, will make their last appearances on their home floor against two West Virginia teams, Friday and Saturday nights.

The Bears will host the Concord College Mountain Lions, whom they have beaten twice this year, on Friday, and the West Virginia Tech Golden Bears, to whom they have fallen twice, on Saturday. The Tech game will be observed as Pikeville's annual homecoming.

Closing their season on the road, Coach Bill Daniels' Bears will play their last Kentucky Intercollegiate Conference foe of the season, Centre College, Monday night. They will wrap up the schedule with Kentucky State Tuesday night at Frankfort and Blinn College next Feb. 19 at Columbus, Ohio.

Garret Mullins and Paul Setser, who shared the scoring lead for the Bears with 18 points each Saturday night, managed to find the range over Berea's famed zone defense. Mullins dropped in nine fielders on 14 attempts and the Auxier sophomore sank eight of 13 tries. Setser was credited with keeping the Bears in the game for the first five minutes, hitting his first three shots from about 35 feet out.

The red-hot Bears poured in 34 fielders on 65 shots, an accuracy of 52.3 per cent, nearly double the ice-cold 21 per cent they hit in their last home game. After holding only a five-point edge 37-21, at halftime, they bucketed 11 of their first 14 shots in the second frame, and raced on to a 17-point winning margin, 81-64.

Berea's 6-foot-7 freshman center, Jim Dixon, took scoring honors in the game with 22 points.

The Bears' three leading rebounders were up in the air all night Saturday, taking from three to five rebounds each more than their averages. Mullins got 20 rebounds, Woods 17 and Butcher 14.

Held below a dozen points for this second game in a row, Butcher devoted much of his time to feeding teammates. He collected 12 assists in the process, breaking the team mark of 10 which he set in the first game of the season.

Charlie Francis registered 13 points, sinking five of six shots from the field and all three of his charity chances. Butcher and George Carroll totaled 11 points each, and Woods scored only seven points for the second game in a row.

John Waddell, who has played only briefly since undergoing surgery in December, went into the game long enough to hit one for one from the field and one for from the line for three points.

The Bears nosed the Union College Bulldogs 66-64 last Thursday. They hit their scoring low of the season against a team they had beaten by 15 points, 83-68, on its own floor at Barbourville, three weeks ago.

Firing away all night and barely holding their own, the Danielsens sank only 24 per cent on field goals in the first half, to the visitors' 44 per cent. They made good 25 of their 89 shots in the game for 31 per cent, while the Bulldogs wound up with 26 of their 57 tries for 46 per cent on the game. Union led 31-29 at the half.

Big Garret Mullins, Pikeville scoring leader with 18 points, hit seven of his 15 field shots and wrapped up 22 rebounds, and Paul Setser sank six of 13 tries and added two charities to total 14 points.

Union's Clyde Evans was eight points better than his 14-point average, dropping in 10 of 13 field tries and both of his two free chances for 22 points.

As the lead changed hands for the seventh time in the first six minutes, Union went ahead 11-10, and the Bears didn't lead again until four minutes of the second half were gone. Setser finally put them in front, 65-64, with a jump shot with 35 seconds remaining on the clock, and Mullins added the final point on a free throw with 11 seconds left.

In a preliminary, the Pikeville College Freshmen pulled up to a respectable 500 standing, and also took revenge for a former defeat, by trouncing the Union College B team 72-64.

The Bullpups had downed the Pikeville yearlings 87-77 Jan. 10 at Barbourville. The win Thursday was the fifth in ten outings for Coach Paul Butcher's Freshmen. Everett Horne notched 21 points to lead all scorers, as John Will Maynard got 14, Pete Campbell and Stanley Banks 11 each, Roger Meek eight, Buddy Roe six, and Tom Habermel two points.

The Bears' two big forward senior Garret Mullins and Sophomore Paul Setser, took up most of the Bears' scoring load last week as opposing defenses closed in on the headliners.

Mullins, the squad's leading rebounder for most of the last two seasons, averaged 18 points and Setser 16 points per game in last week's two KMAC clashes, with Union and Berea. Each shot at about a 55-per cent clip, Mullins making good 16 of 29 field attempts and Setser sinking 14 of 26.

Meanwhile Charlie Francis and George Carroll, another senior-sophomore pair which alternates in one of the guard posts, combined to convert 12 of their 13 free throws in the week's games. And against Berea the two midget turned in nine fielders with 12 shots.

Mullins raised his 14.7 rebounds-per-game average to 15.3 with two of his best nights under the boards, totaling 42 rebounds.

Bad nights against Union and Berea pulled the roof down on Vern Woods and Dennis Butcher, only last week the most accurate pair on the squad. With only 14 field goals between them on 48 flings, they fell on accuracy and on average scoring. Woods, the former leader percentage-wise, fell from 483 to 467 and yielded the top spot to Setser, who climbed seven points to 469 on the week's work.

Butcher, who rose to second for the first time a week ago, fell to fourth, below Mullins, as his season accuracy dropped from 467 to 455. Scoring suffered badly as Butcher, whose 23.0 points per game was 23rd in the national statistics of the NATA last week, flopped to 21.9. Woods, with the lowest scoring mean among the five high scorers, still fell from 12.0 to 11.5 points per contest.

Oil Springs and Sandy Hook high school, two 15th region powerhouses, will meet in the first round of the 60th district tournament in West Liberty, March 5. Thus one will be eliminated before the regional tournament.

In the first meeting of the district's five school representatives two weeks ago, the schools voted 3-2 to seed Oil Springs and Sandy Hook in opposite brackets. The two dissenting schools then asked that the minutes of the meeting be forwarded to Kentucky High School Athletic Commissioner Ted Sanford for an official ruling. Before Sanford could issue a ruling, another meeting was held and in the meantime Ezel high school changed its original vote and voted this time not to seed. Thus the vote was now 3-2 to draw for positions.

As a result of the second drawing Oil Springs (17-6) and Sandy Hook (21-3) emerged as first-round opponents.

Meade Memorial and Sandy Hook are rated 9th and 10th in the latest Kentucky high school state wide ratings and Oil Springs, Pikeville, Inez, Virgie, Martin and Prestonsburg follow in that order in the regional ratings.

Wildlife Agency Says It's Season For Jig Fishing

Frankfort, Feb. 9 (Spl.) — Jigging — a method of bass fishing — has spread like wildfire over the Commonwealth, says the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

From mid-December until dogwood buds herald the spring, one may find Kentucky fishermen in boats searching the banks of big lakes for monster bass.

All needed is a 10-foot cane pole, about three feet of strong line, a cork, a sinker and a hook. Most fishermen use a sculling paddle to pull the boat quietly along the bank.

If winter rains are sufficient to keep the water muddy, stringers will be filled to capacity, says the department. Clear water, however, does not stop jig fishing completely — fishermen merely go to deeper waters farther out or fish at night with glowing corks.

Low water temperature seems to bother the fish very little. Cold water makes him sluggish and slower to take the bait. Water temperature above 70 degrees causes the fish to seek deeper habitat and ends jig fishing.

Every impoundment in the Commonwealth is a potential big bass producer. Kentucky Lake, with miles and miles of stumpy shoreline, is a natural. The fish like to hide in waters with stumps, stick-ups and sunken logs. Lake Cumberland offers many ideal creeks and coves and probably yields host to more jig fishermen than any lake in the United States, says the Department. This type of fishing originated at Herrington Lake. Dale Hollow and Dewey Lake are equally as good as the other lakes and are proven bass producers.
