

This Town— That World

A few more days like the last three or four, and at least one Eastern Kentucky town is going to be introduced to the old Spanish custom known as the siesta.

Suggested reading for weather such as this: "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates," some of the Jack London tales of the North or Curwood's, with the snow up to here. Or the Bible, especially for us who find the heat too, too much and would avoid it.

If things aren't hot enough to suit you, we recommend a meeting of the City Council as a good spot to warm up.

Every time we print a story such as that of Ken Howard, the near-blind youngster from Gunlock who showed those with perfect eyesight but unaided vision he could do as much or more than they, we wonder how many fine minds and potentially great people have lived out blighted lives in this area. It's then that we think of Eastern Kentucky as one great, sprawling "Country Churchyard."

This is what, in other days, was known as "shirt-tail weather." Reminds us of the story the late Irvin Cobb liked to tell of the scene down in the Deep South as he looked from a train window at daybreak, one morning. Alongside the tracks at a whistle stop was a party of men, mounted on tall foxhounds, looking like a posse in search of a criminal. As he wondered what was up, an elderly gentleman of the community boarded the train and came into the crowded coach, finally finding a seat alongside the Kentuckian.

"Why the posse?" inquired Cobb. "Are they looking for somebody to lynch?"

"Nope," replied the oldtimer. "Hiram Jones' boy Ed is 18 today, and they're tryin' to ketch him to put briches on him."

I am not—I will not—mention that certain sport that I have a weakness for. No, not this week. It is too hot. It is too disgustin'. Now, say that this column has degenerated into a—column!

SLAIN WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN JOHNSON-CO.

SEARCH MADE FOR HUSBAND IS FRUITLESS

The macabre discovery Wednesday noon of a Johnson county woman's body, buried in a cedar chest, caused an alert to be issued to all peace officers over the Tri-State region to be on the lookout for her missing husband.

Cedar Chest Coffin Contains Body; Auto Find Compounds Puzzle

The case took on the aspects of a double-barreled mystery as the recovery of the husband's automobile from the Ohio River at Worthington led authorities to wonder if, perhaps, he may also be dead.

The body found Wednesday was that of Mrs. Virginia Salyer Cantrell, 44, wife of Henry Cantrell, of Sitka, who had been missing since last October 5. Heavy road machinery was taken, Wednesday morning, to the Cantrell farm on the Red Bush road, 13 miles from Paintsville, by State Trooper Jack Music, State Detective E. L. Cornett, Lt. Lykins of the State Police and Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. Hazelrigg, of Paintsville. Their attention was centered on an area of newly cleared and filled ground which was approximately 30 by 50 feet. The fill made in the area rose about four feet above ground level.

The work of excavation took little time. The blade of a bulldozer hit wood, at a depth of seven feet, uncovering the chest and its grisly contents. Some of the woman's clothing had been piled atop her body, which was in such condition that the cause of death was not immediately determined.

Mrs. Cantrell's burial-place was about 25 feet from the burned trail. See Story No. 5, Page 5

HIDDEN TAXES TAKE BIG BITE

The index, so-dubbed by the New Jersey Taxpayers Association, goes behind the taxes that most people know they pay for Federal, state and local government and adds to it the huge indirect taxes that are hidden in the price of virtually everything we buy.

It develops that for every $100 in the form of direct taxes paid, there is an additional $60, roughly, that goes for these hidden taxes. This is pointed out by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit body that watches spending and taxing by all levels of government.

In Floyd county, on the basis of the foundation's study, it adds up to a surprising $1,340 a year for the average local family.

The hidden taxes are not the luxury taxes with which everyone is familiar. They are the five percent of the cost of a refrigerator, which has been incorporated into the price because the manufacturer had to pay that amount in selling it to the distributor.

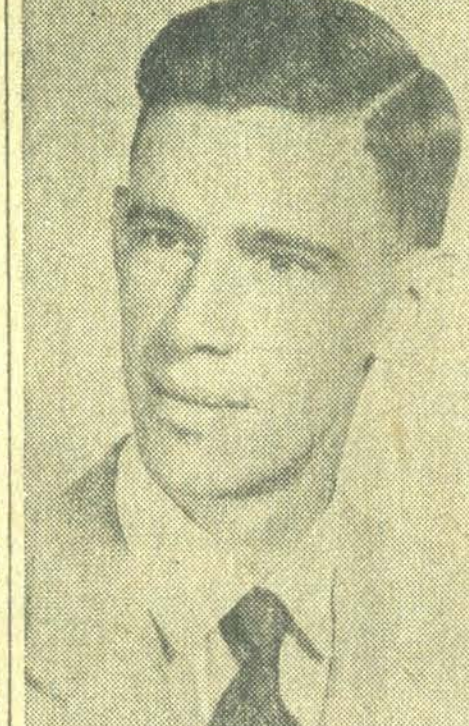

They are the several cents included in the cost of a pack of cigarettes, over and above the visible taxes, passed on to the customer by handlers, who had to pay them in the form of transportation taxes, license fees, gasoline taxes, inspection fees and the like.

They are the $711 in taxes actually paid on a $3,000 car, although the buyer thought he was paying only $345. The rest went for Federal excise taxes on the radio and heater, the weight tax on tires, dealer's telephone tax, license and title charges and so on.

In Floyd county, with gross family earnings (before income taxes) averaging $4,360 in the past year, $1,340 went to the tax collectors, on the basis of the Tax Foundation study.

As to the county as a whole, local residents paid an estimated $12,730,000 to keep the wheels of government turning. It came out of a gross income of $41,420,000.

Camp Meeting Slated With Rev. Jack Tarr

The first service of the Eastern Kentucky First Church of God camp meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., Friday, July 9, it was announced this week.

The Rev. Jack Tarr, pastor of a church at Hope, Ky., will conduct the evangelistic services. Thirteen churches, among them the Prestonsburg First Church of God, are sponsoring the meet. Meals and lodging are free, it was said.

FLOYD BUDGET SLIGHTLY CUT

Fixed Salaries Increase Over Last Year's Budget As County Revenues Less

Floyd county's spending during the fiscal year 1959-1960, which began Wednesday, will total $199,573 as compared with $200,170 the preceding fiscal year, the budget adopted Monday by the Budget Commission and approved the same day by D. M. Magill, local state finance officer, shows.

Heaviest increases in spending during the new fiscal year will be on general government, which includes all official salaries. The new budget calls for $79,875 to be spent in this area of service, as compared with $66,305 the preceding year. The increase was necessary to meet magistrates' salaries of $9,600, the $3,000 salary of trial commissioner for the county judge and $2,400 salary of the assistant county attorney.

For county highways $51,373 will be spent in the new fiscal year as compared with $61,100 last year. The $9,000-odd drop, however, comes from a reduction in the amount budgeted for the road fund's floating debt, other items such as rights-of-way, labor and machinery repairs standing almost unchanged.

TB PROGRAM GIVEN 'TEETH'

Finishing Touches Given Plan To Treat Patients Under Confinement Act

A new tuberculosis program for Floyd county was given the finishing touches at a meeting held Wednesday of last week, in the offices of the Floyd County Health Department.

This was the second of such meetings. State representatives attending the meeting were: Dorothy T. Magallon, M.D., director of the Division of TB Control; Thomas Layton, chairman of the State Tuberculosis Hospital Commission; Jerry Stapleton, social worker, Ashland District TB Hospital. Local representatives were: County Judge Henry Stumbo, County Attorney Robert S. Wellman, Myrtle Hardwick, president of the Floyd TB Association, and the health department staff.

These constituted a TB screening committee. Eleven recalcitrant or walk-out patients from TB hospitals, of the 68 TB patients now listed on the Floyd county roster for supervision, were studied and listed in order for first legal action under the TB Compulsory Confinement Law. These patients have walked out of TB Hospital against advice so many times that the director has refused to take them back again, making other disposition necessary. In February this year a section of the Louisville TB hospital was turned into compulsory confinement quarters. Here patients committed by court order will be kept behind locked doors until they are declared inactive and discharged by the hospital medical director.

The representative of the Ashland district TB hospital said that some of the 11 might be given another chance in the Ashland hospital with the understanding that if they walk out against advice again, or become unbearable disciplinary problems, they immediately will be committed to confined quarters in the Louisville hospital.

The representative of the State TB Hospital Commission gave assurance that beds in the compulsory confinement section of Louisville hospital would be made available. See Story No. 8, Page 2

THINKS ARSON BLAZE CAUSE

Meadows Home Destroyed Near Recent Blast Site; Owner Visiting In Ohio

A Bull Creek home in the vicinity of the residence which was blasted by dynamite, July 13, was destroyed by fire before daybreak Wednesday, county officials were told.

Joe Meadows reported the fire here. The home destroyed was that of his son, Dennis. He said that fire broke out in the home, the preceding day, but that it was extinguished before spreading throughout the house. The occupants were visiting in Ohio at the time of both blazes, he said.

Meadows expressed the belief the fire was of incendiary origin. It was the fourth such incident to occur in a radius of a mile in the Bull Creek neighborhood in the last two years. First, the automobile of Silas Derossett was dynamited. Later, a barn owned by Frank Derossett, father of Silas, burned. Then the June 13 dynamiting of the Frank Derossett home and of a car owned by his daughter, Mrs. Joan Weldon. Authorities have been unable to solve any of the cases.

State, Federal Help Asked on Pollution; Hearing Set for Firms

The pollution of the Big Sandy River by coal washer waste, that has killed most of the fish and other marine life was brought to the attention of state and federal agencies by Mayor Ralph Preston, of Paintsville, and C. R. Cooper in Frankfort and Louisville last month.

Mayor Preston has been advised by Louis F. Birkel, executive director of the Commission which held its regular meeting in Frankfort on June 9, that the Commission had directed the ten coal companies to appear for a hearing on the question of pollution. Four of the companies are in the Big Sandy basin. See Story No. 4, Page 3

Aged Blairtown Man Is Victim Saturday Near Pike-co. Home

Jackson Mayo Weddington, 84, of Blairtown, Pike county, was a victim of drowning in the Big Sandy River near his home, Saturday afternoon. The body was recovered from the stream four hours later near where he had fallen from a boat.

The aged man lived alone but was looked after by a daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Thomas, who resided in an adjoining house. It was not known why he had gone to the river. His absence was noted soon after he left the house and a search instituted at once. He was alone at the time of death.

REGIONAL PLAN GROUP ISSUES AREA ATLAS

"Eastern Kentucky presents the anomaly of poverty in the center of prosperity," according to "Eastern Kentucky Economic Atlas," published in the Regional Planning Commission.

Located just south of the greatest industrial complex in the world, America's Middle West, within one day's drive of 50,000,000 people this region is years behind most areas of the United States in economic development. In an area larger than seven states and with a population greater than nine states, Eastern Kentucky sits in isolated grandeur in the center of the Eastern United States." So reads a paragraph from the Commission's analysis.

The booklet discusses eight different segments of the economic situation in the region. These are population and the labor force, transportation and communications, water resources, mineral resources, agriculture, forestry and timber, tourism and utilities.

ARTS, CRAFTS, HYMNS FEATURE GATHERINGS

Floyd county had its arts and crafts exhibit and annual hymn service over the week-end as interesting contributions to the chain of events along the route to Cumberland Gap National Park and the dedication of that historic spot next Sunday.

VISION MEANS MORE THAN EYESIGHT . . .

'59 "Mr. Cumberland College" Is Student Who Can't Read

A young man from the "head o' Licking" who pleaded vainly for admission to several colleges before he was admitted to Cumberland College, at Williamsburg, was graduated recently with the institution's two highest awards—although he cannot read nor write.

The Cumberland student body voted him Mr. Cumberland College of 1959 and he was the recipient of the T. J. Roberts Award voted by the students and faculty upon the basis of his leadership, scholarship and service to the cause of Christian education.

The honor student is Ken Howard, 25, who compiled a 2.4 standing in the field of history and political science. He absorbed his knowledge of those subjects by listening to lectures and took his exams on the typewriter.

Ken Howard cannot read, he can't write with pen or pencil, he must learn by listening—because he is almost totally blind!

Howard, who became partially blind when a mere babe, entered the Kentucky School for the Blind, Louisville, when he was seven. He stayed there ten years, learned Braille and typing. From there he went to Magoffin Baptist Institute, was named valedictorian of the '57 graduating class and earned the Kiwanis Citizenship Award.

It was tough, too, for Ken, but back then he had the beginnings of a grim determination to get an education. Education at Louisville broadened his vision and he decided that, some day, despite his blindness, he would enter the diplomatic service. That is his goal today.

"Some blind people think that rehabilitation means ability to operate a little stand," he said. "Some blind live by carrying a little tin cup. I want none of that. At college I found out I could do as good or better than others. Other students couldn't seem to understand it but they accepted me very well. I proved that being blind doesn't necessarily handicap a man."

Howard had to come home from Louisville on account of illness in the family but he soon applied for admission to Magoffin Institute, was admitted and by hard work See Story No. 1, Page 6

FISH FRY SET TO GET FUNDS

Jenny Wiley State Park To Be Site Of Gathering Of Waterfield Supporters

One of eight fish fries scheduled at as many points in the state to raise funds to pay off a reported deficit of $180,000 in the campaign fund of Harry Lee Waterfield, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, will be held at Jenny Wiley State Park (Dewey Lake) next Tuesday at 5 p.m.

The first will be held Monday at Morehead. Almost $500,000 worth of tickets have been printed for sale to state workers and friends of the lieutenant governor.

It has been estimated that, if each of the 18,000 state workers buys a ticket, the amount raised would add up to $450,000, besides the total raised by sale of tickets to political friends of Waterfield who do not work for the state.

Waterfield said he considered it "silly" to suggest such a potential figure, in view of the fact that a 100 per cent response is unthinkable.

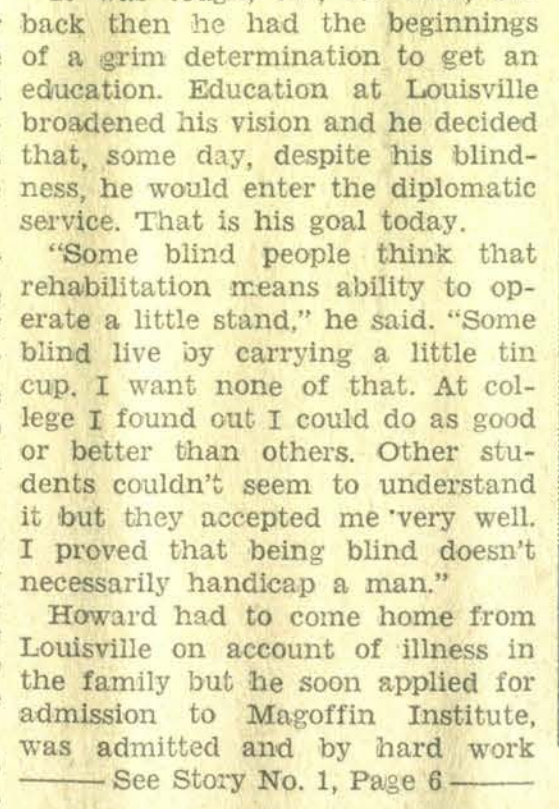

He said he had given no thought to what disposition would be made of any money collected in excess of that needed.

"We will keep a complete record of everything," he said, "and when we are through it is likely that an audit will be made."

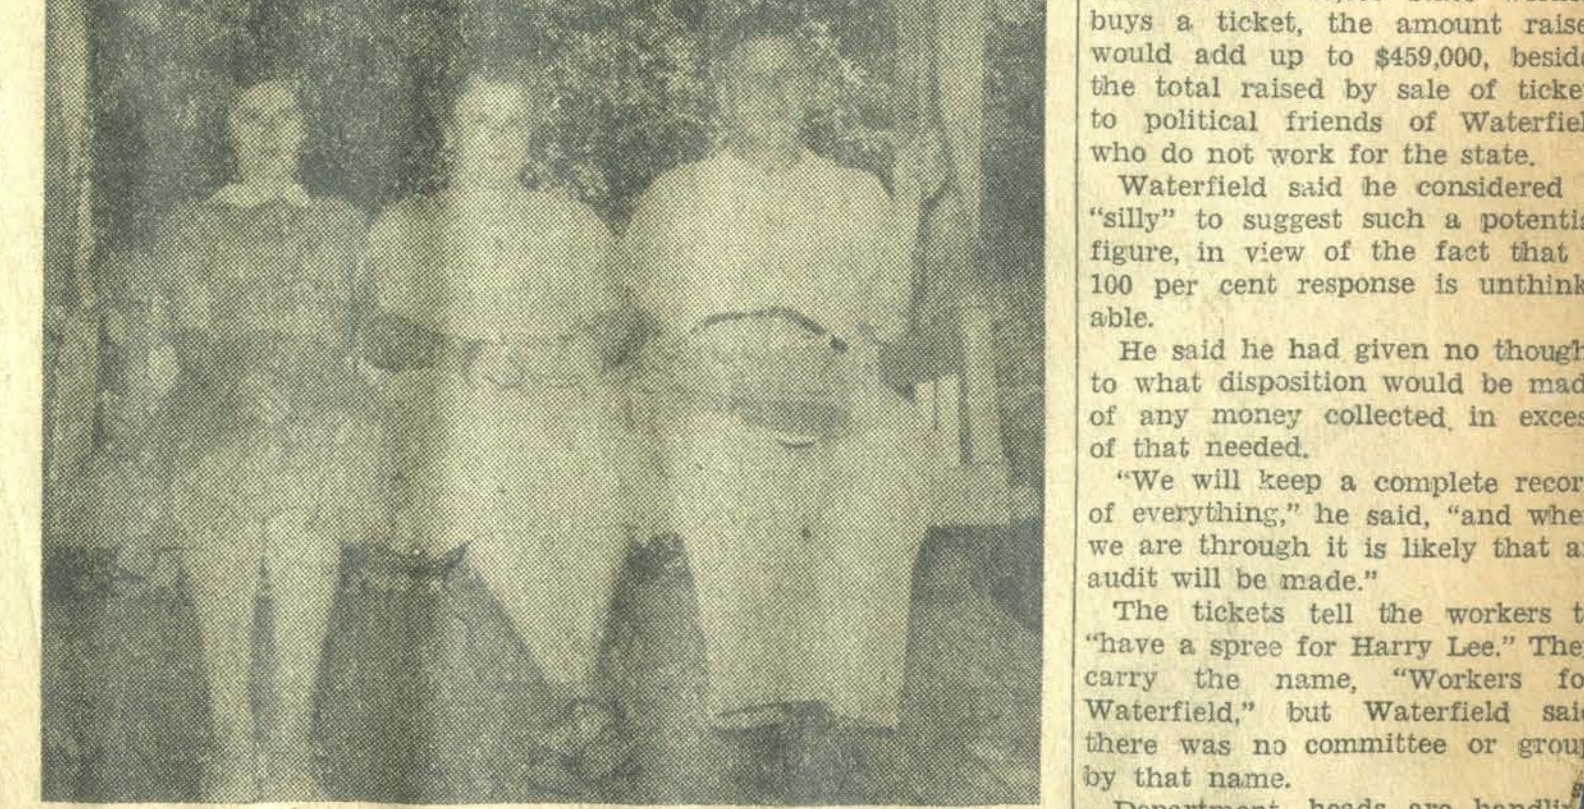

The tickets tell the workers to "have a spree for Harry Lee." They carry the name, "Workers for Waterfield," but Waterfield said there was no committee or group by that name.

Department heads are handling their sales as they see fit, mostly passing them down the line division heads.

Magoffin County Judge Ray E. Brock said recently he had received See Story No. 2, Page 6

KEN HOWARD

Blind Ken Howard, of Gunlock, Cumberland College honor graduate, sits in the swing at home on "head o' Licking" with his widowed mother, Mrs. Maudie Howard, and his sister, Lucy, who is also partially blind. Ken holds a copy of Reader's Digest printed in Braille.

Attention All Parents Student Guidance: How Does It Work?

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on student guidance. Others will appear in subsequent editions of this newspaper.

By Dr. Edward C. Roeber

Have you ever thought about why you are working in your present occupation? Perhaps it was an accident—or you may have carefully planned it to the last detail.

Accidents may have worked well for some of us. But most parents are not willing to have their children's success or failure be an accidental thing. In order to increase the probability that vocational success will depend upon some rhyme or reason, student guidance leaders for more than fifty years have been developing ways in which to help students plan and develop careers. Because it is a difficult task to help students make plans and carry them out, guidance counselors cannot be sure of success in every case. There is no doubt, though, that their work greatly improves the chances for satisfaction and success in life.

The professional guidance counselor is interested in helping your child learn how to plan for himself rather than be dependent upon someone else to make his plans for him. He also recognizes that career planning and development cannot be settled in a short period of time but, for almost everyone, is actually a lifelong process. New experiences change our interests, attitudes, goals, and eventually may affect our vocational plans.

It is important that we fully understand what is meant by the word "career." Research indicates that most of us work in a series of occupations, some related and some unrelated to our final occupation at the time we retire.

Bob White, for example, may have begun as a car washer, then worked in numerous auto service stations as an attendant, before becoming an auto mechanic and eventually the owner of a small auto repair shop. All of these kinds of work represent Bob's career. In his case, his occupations were definitely related to each other.

Roger Smith, on the other hand, did many odd jobs around his neighborhood and worked part-time at all sorts of jobs while getting a medical degree. Most of the early jobs were not related but depended upon circumstances and accidents. After getting his degree, Roger became a doctor in a small community; but after a serious illness, he became a doctor at a university health service and later director. Not too many years passed before he became director of research for a national drug firm. What will he do next? It is safe to guess that it will have something to do with medicine, but in what capacity? Whatever he does, Roger's career is the complete array of all his occupations.

It is important that parents realize that a pattern of occupations, or a career, cannot be predicted with certainty. Two children may be alike in most ways but react quite differently to the same experiences at school or eventually at work. In the same way, two students, who are very much alike, may find economic conditions affecting their chances for jobs in different ways.

The key to understanding vocational guidance rests upon an understanding of these lifelong careers. The target for vocational guidance becomes a series or pattern of somewhat related occupations rather than a single occupation, a mere speck among the 40,000 or more kinds of employment in the world of work.

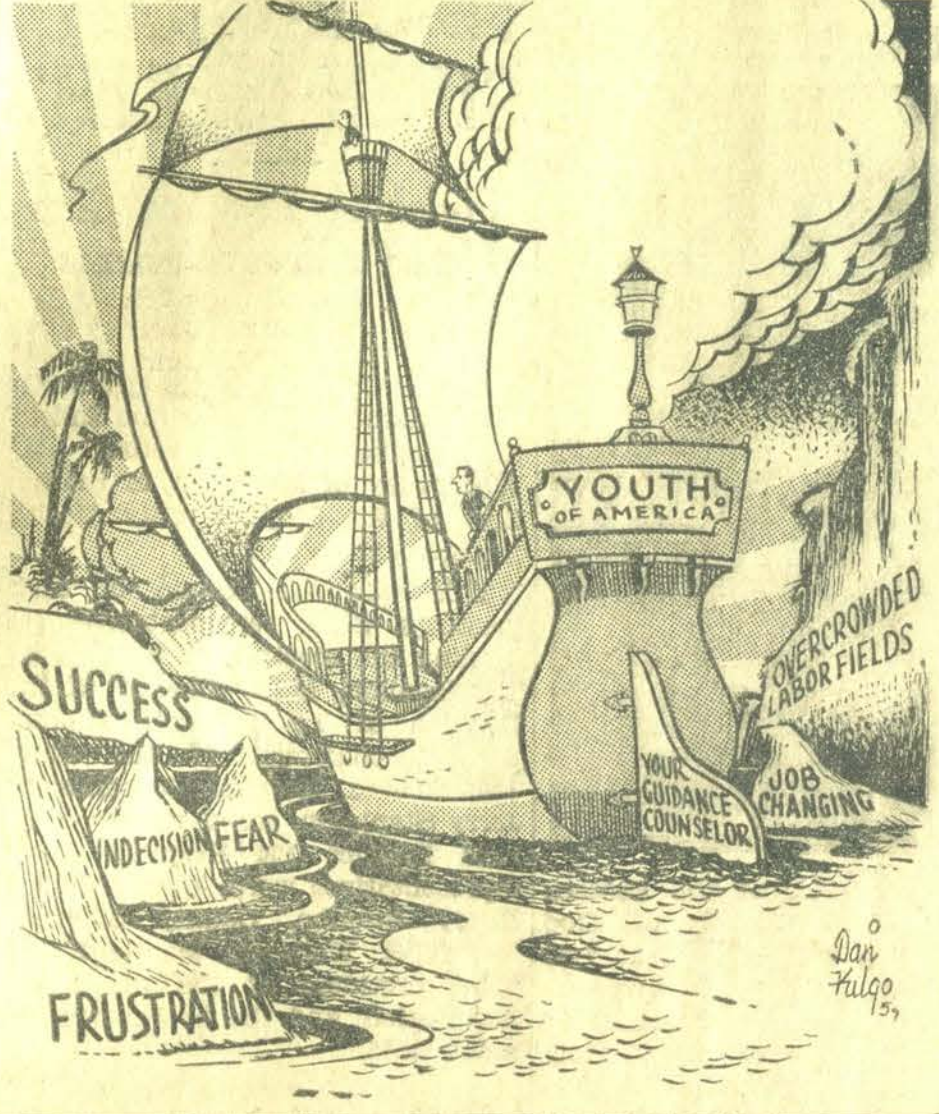

Vocational guidance begins with a child's many experiences and decisions while he is still in school. It can eventually influence his entry into the world of work. Vocational guidance can also follow and assist in his progress once he is employed, but it is most important in his student life.

In order to see more clearly just how complex adequate vocational guidance really is, parents might like to look at one example. Be sure to remember that this is just one example—and each child's planning is usually quite different.

An organized program of vocational guidance provides a counselor with special skills who could talk over the student's ideas as well as those of his parents. These discussions occurred many times during the high school year and especially at those points when critical decisions and plans were important. Whether to take college preparatory courses or not? What courses to take? Or what school activities might be beneficial? Periodically, the student's interests, abilities, aptitudes, and achievements were checked with tests of various kinds.

Records of school achievement, as well as other in-school and out-of-school activities were kept from year to year. An up-to-date collection of materials provided the student with all types of information regarding vocational schools, colleges, occupations, the armed services, school adjustment, etc.

He was exposed to many types of educational and occupational information through his regular classes, assemblies, home room, career days, college nights, the school paper, and other group activities. In finding an appropriate college, he was assisted by receiving information, filling out application blanks, locating a scholarship, and other such activities. If he had decided to find a job or go into the armed services, he would have found an equal amount of assistance provided through the vocational guidance program.

In addition, while still in school and after leaving school, this individual was contacted from time to time in an attempt to offer further assistance in planning, preparing for, and progressing in his career. Adequate vocational guidance requires special knowledge and skills. Take the above example and multiply him by a few million—you now can sense the size of the task ahead in guidance.

It is only good sense that a school which helps a student prepare for some career should help him explore, plan for, and help him progress at that career. Perhaps the years ahead will see less and less schools leave vocational guidance to chance.

able as needed for court-committed cases. Floyd county, because of its tremendous TB problem, is being given this special consideration at this time. "We of the Floyd County Health Department are very grateful for this special consideration. The County Medical Society, Board of Health, TB Association and county officials have pledged their full support." M. V. Clark, health department administrator, said.

Patients for first consideration were selected upon the basis of the danger they present to the public in the spread of their disease. Each patient will be visited by a nurse and given an opportunity to cooperate of his or her free will, if they fail to do this, they will be charged with neglectfully and carelessly spreading their disease, and upon conviction will be sentenced to six months in the compulsory confinement area of the Louisville TB hospital, Clark said. They will be treated and cared for, just the same as in the open section of the hospital, until they are considered inactive and free of communicating their disease to others. They will, of course, during such confinement be deprived of social privileges such as parlor hours.

Said Mr. Clark of the new program: "This is what we of the Health Department have been hoping and praying for. The next few years should see a considerable decrease in our TB load. We intend to enforce these regulations 100% and take full advantage of every opportunity offered us by the state. We solicit the support of every official, every organization or group of any nature as well as individuals in behalf of this very, very important program."

BETSY LAYNE

Mrs. Eliza Blackburn has been visiting her son, Clyde, and his family, in London, Ky., for several days.

The Betsy Layne Methodist Youth Fellowship, under the direction of Mrs. Edward Lykins, presented an interesting program Sunday evening, June 21, in the church basement. Two countries, Mexico and Hawaii, were discussed in particular. Each guest was presented an Hawaiian lei, handmade by the members, as they arrived. Topics on Hawaii were presented by Jeannie McCown and Cherry Blackburn. Topics on Mexico were presented by Janalyn George and Judy McCown. All members were dressed in appropriate costumes, and handmade exhibits from the two countries were displayed. After the program the guests were served Hawaiian punch and cake.

Ronnie Johns, of Louisville, is visiting friends and relatives in Harold and Betsy Layne. Walter Lynch, of Detroit, spent the week-end at his home here. The daughters and their families of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Layne are spending their vacation with their parents here.

Steve Hunter is convalescing at his home here after a recent tonsillectomy. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sargent and Patricia, accompanied by their son, Bill, and his family, of Paris, Ky., are on a vacation trip to Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. James George were hosts to a backyard picnic, Monday evening. Guests were Mrs. Elizabeth Spears, Boldman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spears and family, of Pikeville, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mullins, of Elkhorn City, Ronnie Johns, of Louisville, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Osborne, Mrs. Dockie George, and Mrs. Glenn Blackburn and family, of Betsy Layne.

Mr. and Mrs. Orbie Boyd have purchased the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Stratton. Daily Vacation Bible School is now going on at the Calvary Baptist Church and also the Freewill Baptist Church.

WEEDS Weed control in corn fields presents a problem to most farmers. They may be controlled by cultivation or by the use of chemical weed killers. A combination of the two methods would probably be best. 2-4-D has been used very successfully in the county. It will control the broad leaf weeds, but won't kill the grasses. Many people have made the mistake of waiting too long to spray. For best results spray soon after the corn is 4 inches high. Spraying at this stage will eliminate for the first cultivation, which is usually slow. Spraying with 2-4-D won't do the complete job. The corn should be cultivated 10 days after the spraying. The latest method of controlling weeds is a pre-emergence spray applied 2-3 days before corn comes up. This method will control grasses as well as the broad leaf weeds. This treatment is more expensive than the 2-4-D spray we are now using, but will control more of the troublesome weeds. Bill May on Right Beaver Creek has a demonstration on his farm results can check with Mr. May. spray. Farmers interested in this year, with the pre-emergence Calhoun, seat of McLean County, was known as Fort Vienna in 1788, when it was founded by Solomon Rhoades. Early settlers dug caves in a hillside for refuge during Indian attacks.

LONDON WRITER RECALLS LORE OF SOUTHEAST KENTUCKY HILLS

By HENRY P. SCALF

London, Kentucky, was a sleepy little mountain village when Logan Ewell came there as a youngster decades ago. It remained just that, for a large chunk of his life—a crossroads county seat town that went to bed with the chickens.

Nothing ever happened in London to startle the newspapers or jolt the placid existence of its inhabitants but much did occur that was of interest to Ewell in his "75 Years of Living," as he terms the story of his life in Laurel county and serializes it in the Sentinel-Echo. He writes as only a man with a cosmic philosophy can write.

London, today, is a thriving, almost model town, heart of an agricultural area and the envy of bigger places. Ewell watched it grow.

"London was a tiny little place resting in the shade of virgin forests which covered the hills surrounding the village," he writes of the place when he came there. "So close was the town to the forests that the gobble of wild turkeys, the tattoo of pheasant wings, the chirrup of squirrels could be heard on the streets and in the homes. The nights were filled with the cries of owls and now and then the shriek of a wildcat sent shivers down the spine. . . . Most of the people prepared for night and bed when the lowing of the cattle had ceased at dusk. Scarcely a man-made sound ever disturbed the night."

Maybe the reader doesn't think much ever could happen in a town like that but much did—plenty of it to Ewell and his friends. His boyhood playmate, George Campbell, produced a snowstorm in mid-summer.

He relates in his own inimitable style the story of the Renovators:

"In the 90's, and a long time before, people used feather beds, one, at least, as a mattress, and sometimes a smaller one as a blanket. They needed renovating every few years. This was accomplished by emptying the feathers into a large hopper made of lumber, with about three compartments. The feathers were emptied in the first one, where on a large fan operated by horse power fanned them fiercely for some twenty to thirty minutes. At the end of this time the feathers were all in the last compartment and considered thoroughly renovated. They were then placed in new feather ticks (bags made of heavy siffler material).

"The Renovators, commonly called renovators, were itinerant, coming to a community only once every three or four years. This equipment was cumbersome and very noisy. The Renovators made their headquarters back of the pine grove where George lived. They placed all feathers of one owner in the hopper at the same time. Some families had many beds.

"George waited until an extra large load was in the hopper and for the fans to get thoroughly in motion. He then went to the rear of the machine and opened its door, releasing the feathers.

"They ascended to the top of the pines, then spread, filling the air with swirling white 'snow,' through which it was difficult to see. The feather clouds were noticed. Some people ran to notify neighbors; some fell to their knees in prayer."

"George, seeing the terrible impact of his 'snow storm' on the residents, retreated hastily and unobserved to a nearby marble ground and began playing 'keeps.'"

"The Laurel seat, back in the 1890's, had an atmosphere all its own and Ewell now savors it with relish. He writes of the watermelon eaters, the rinds they left and the stray pen that wouldn't hold a bad man's Sand Splitter hogs:

"In the early 1890's the chief income of many of our farmers was from the sale of watermelons; often as many as ten wagon loads were to be seen on the streets around the Court House Square. Here they remained each day throughout the season.

"The practice of eating watermelons on the Court House wall was generally followed. The eaters threw the rinds on the streets; the many hogs and pigs feasted upon them day and night. They ate determinedly but could not keep up with the generous supply given them each day by the watermelon eaters.

"From September until March, great sacks filled with chestnuts—a now vanished delicacy in this area—were brought to town and sold in the Court House or in front of it if the weather was good, at 5 cents per pint cup. They also were consumed on the spot, the shells falling on the walks or the floor of the Court House hall. When one walked in this region, the shells crunched underfoot so that it was like walking through dry corn shucks.

"Naturally the people finally rose in their might demanding the city fathers do something about this sloppy nuisance. Prompt action came. They decreed no more hogs, cattle or horses should be allowed on the streets of the city. This terrible edict was extended to a vicious billy goat belonging to Dr. H. Melcon, as large as a yearling steer, with horns which could be sounded before the walls of Echo and who in his impudence assaulted several citizens.

"The officials decreed a stray pen should be built for the incarceration of all the aforementioned animals, there to stay until ransomed by their unfortunate and angry owners.

"On the College campus, then almost a complete woodland from the old railroad bed to no-telling how far down the Sublimity Road, lived a mighty man. Bad Andy Johnson by name, who owned nearly everything from Mill Street to the present home of Murray L. Brown.

"Running at large on this boundary was a large herd of 'Sand Splitter' or sometimes called 'Steel-yard' hogs. Contented enough until they found the watermelon rind, they thereupon moved toward, and into, town. One night they failed to come home.

"It was the first day of the operation of the stray pen. Some one told Bad Andy where to find his property. He came to town with a bucket of corn (for tolling the hogs home) and a chopping axe in one hand, and across his shoulder a 75 x 90 Winchester rifle.

"Bad Andy went to work with his axe on the stray pen, left no plank or post standing. He and his drove of hogs went home.

"The Council then decreed that the sellers of melons should require the eaters to deposit the rinds in the sellers' wagons, to be hauled by them out of town."

"The London writer, a son of Richard L. Ewell who was prominent in Laurel county, had an unusual opportunity through his father to learn much of the region. In Laurel county, as in all Eastern Kentucky, much of the life of the area centered around the county seat town of London. The court-house was heart and soul of life, for here great barristers plead or denounced, judges pondered weighty decisions, prominent men gathered and forensic displays featured many a day.

Ewell writes of the feudal and Republican leader of Clay county, Granville P. Philpot, friend of William Goebel, afterward assassinated while governor. Both served in the State Legislature.

"Mr. Philpot was unlearned in letters and politics. Mr. Goebel introduced for him such legislation as his district wished, also made any and all speeches necessary to the conclusion of the measures. The men were of opposite political faith.

"Mr. Goebel came to London for a speech in his candidacy for Governor. Considerable feeling prevailed in this district at the time for it was 'The Bloody 11th' and could readily be counted on for at least 40,000 Republican majority. The Democrats of the rest of the State did not like us, we did not like them. To be sure, this was mostly political hatred, nevertheless animosity was there and recognized.

"Granville Philpot rode his horse from some place in Clay county and stood beside Sen. Goebel on the speaker's stand. Mr. Goebel opened his address by saying:

"I have been advised not to appear in this hot-bed of Republicanism and I admit I thought about it as I left the hotel to come to this stand. I no longer have any uneasiness, for on my right hand is my friend, the valiant Granville P. Philpot, of Clay county."

"I have never witnessed more pride in one's fellow man than the pride that beamed from the eyes of Granville Philpot as he looked upon his friend."

Ewell notes the reverence people of Southeastern Kentucky held for Caleb Powers.

"Caleb Powers had been elected Secretary of State along with W. S. Taylor as Governor. It was from the office of the Secretary the shot was fired ending the life of William Goebel. After many trials, convictions and reversals, Powers was liberated by Gov. A. E. Wilson.

"He returned to his district to become its idol; was rewarded for his sufferings with the office of Congressman from the 11th. His picture adorned the walls of every Republican home. An old neighbor of mine named Frank Bengel, lived in a neat little log house, the walls of which held nothing of ornaments save a spot above the mantel in one room where a large sized picture of Caleb Powers looked down.

"I often visited this old man, who was a cripple, finding him smart as a whip and interesting in spite of his lack of any scholastic learning. Gazing at the picture of Powers, I said:

"Mr. Bengel, whose picture is that on the wall?"

"Come the prompt reply: 'Caleb Powers, Suh, the smartest doggoned man the mountains of Kentucky ever produced.'"

"Still pretending, I thought this over and said: 'Yes, I seem to remember him, didn't he get into some kind of trouble down Frankfort way?'"

"Well, yes, he was accused of killing Goebel on the streets of Frankfort," he replied.

"Do you think he did, Mrs. Bengel?"

"Don't know whether he did or not, Bill Goebel stole his office and if he killed him on the streets of Frankfort or on the streets of London, I shore never have felt hard toward him for it."

"This was the Republican view.

"Going back to the days of the Goebel-Taylor war: The times were tense. Feeling ran very high indeed. It was like a powder keg, with plenty of sparks flying, but none fell directly into the keg.

"To add insult to injury, the Republicans had to depend upon The Courier-Journal for all the news. No other paper had any circulation here at the time. Republicans would not believe what it printed but eagerly read every word of it, arguing with the Democrats and among themselves all the time. Their arguments were spiced with choice 'cuss words' hurled at the paper, the Democrats individually and the party in general.

"C. G. Steele, who held his paper in his left hand with the first finger of his right hand placed firmly on the last word he had read so that he would not miss a single word, while he argued with any and all, waving his paper up and down as he gestured with both his hands. "He never missed a word."

"One of Ewell's political reminiscences concerns the time he, a Republican, helped spearhead a Democratic procession in 1893. "To my eternal shame I participated in what appeared to me the most magnificent parade ever seen on the streets of London, as a Democrat, carrying a foul smelling coal oil torch. My eyes smelted from the smoke and the fumes from this horrid little bowl-like vessel. I attributed this at the time as noxious gases from the light I carried but know better now. It was the stench of Democracy assailing the delicate nostrils and eyes of the true-born Republican, led astray by the Democrats of London.

"Perhaps I should not be too harsh on the Democrats, they had to have Republican help or they could not have staged their parade. According to my memory, at this time there were only two Democrats in town, namely, R. M. Jackson and Joseph M. Young, and one who had not at this time moved from his Twin Branch home to London, the late James M. Pigg. These three gentlemen were good fellows. Jackson was the husband of my sister, Alice; the other two staunch family friends.

"So, when to make a showing, they appealed to the Republicans to help them out, they met a cheerful response. "A number of the little oil pots were provided. They were equipped with handles sufficiently long to enable the flares to be raised above the heads of those in the parade. A wagon was provided to lead the procession. It was drawn by four bay horses. In the bed of the wagon there was erected a four posted tower, some fifteen feet in height. On the four sides of the tower were the local artists' conception of crowing gamecocks with a lighted lantern to illuminate them. In the wagon was also two separate coops each holding a gamecock. They were placed opposite each other with a flare between them, in the hope they would be angered enough to crow, sending their eternal defiance at each other.

"They did very well for a few minutes, then became silent. Their eyes no longer issued defiance, they dripped watery tears on the floor of their coops. The horse sounds they made had a hoarseness similar to mine and, no doubt, caused by the same thing, the smell of coal-oily Democracy.

"As the wagon proceeded, the Republicans torch bearers fell in step behind. The twinkling lights were a sight to behold, the four horses pranced merrily along, the sound of their iron shoes on the rocky road drowned out by the coughing of the torch bearers.

"I have stated all in the procession were Republicans but three. Two staunch Republicans were assigned to drive the rooster wagon, accompanied by Joe Young, Jackson and Pigg assumed command of the ground forces. The parade formed. The two Republicans in the wagon were John Ewell, my brother, and Fern Moren.

"When they had reached the turn at Seventh Street, Moren said: "John, I've got my belly full of this Democracy—let's ditch her. Hold still a minute, I'll tend to it."

"Accordingly he drove to the railroad, his rooster tower hit the telegraph wires and came tumbling down.

"I have not since participated in a Democratic parade." Ewell details many biographical details about Henry M. Whitaker, Baron of Rockcastle River. It reveals much of mountain history of the period when Eastern Kentucky was an almost unbroken wilderness and of an area's strong men who lived like Saxon chiefs.

"I often think of Whitaker as 'The Baron of Rockcastle River' for, indeed, he was the ruler of some 25 square miles of this remote region, abounding in all of the natural resources of the county. Primeval forests stood unbroken through all this territory. Game of many kinds could be had for the taking, deer, wild turkey, pheasants, coons, wild cats, and 'possums.

"Hogs ran wild amidst the abundance of food provided by nature, such as chestnuts, white oak, and

Stapleton-Coffman Vows Solemnized in Texas

The First Methodist Church of Fort Worth, Texas, was the scene of the marriage of Miss Linda Loise Stapleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stapleton, of Martin and Pikeville, Kentucky, to Mr. Doyle George Coffman, of Boyd, Texas, son of Mrs. M. J. Vess, of Boyd, Texas, and the late Mr. Coffman.

The wedding took place on March 27 at 4:30 p.m. The Rev. John H. Basham performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a white silk dress with a chapel veil, and carried a white prayer book with lilies-of-the-valley. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Miss Marlyn Davis, from Louisiana, a classmate of Mrs. Coffman, was maid of honor. She wore a light blue suit with red patent accessories and a corsage of red rosebuds. Russell Hunn, of Denton, Texas, was best man.

Mrs. Coffman is a student at Texas Woman's University, Denton, Texas, majoring in Secretarial Administration. Mr. Coffman is a student at North State College, Denton, Texas, majoring in physics. He is also employed by the U.S. Civil Service Corps of Engineers, in Fort Worth, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Coffman are now residing at 918 Oakland, Denton, Texas.

chestnut oak acorns, wild grapes, huckleberries, wild gooseberries provided food well high all year 'round. The only problem was rounding the hogs up for slaughter in the fall penning them for a couple of weeks for corn feeding to harden their flesh.

"Cattle roamed the open forest, grazing upon pea vines, beggar lice, grass and herbs, waxing fat with no effort from the herder. Bee trees were plentiful. It cost only the effort of cutting them down to secure the finest of all honey (the sourwood) in large quantities. Pawpaws, hickory nuts and persimmons grew profusely. Sheep roamed the woodlands unattended, winter and summer, securing their subsistence from natural growth.

"This region contained giant chestnut trees, equally large poplars, white oaks, chestnut, oaks, hickory, walnut, pine and cherry of as fine growth and quality as any in Kentucky.

"Over this region of plenty, Whitaker ruled with a rod of iron. The rod had a hole in the barrel and its cylinder held 45 caliber bullets. It is said that he abused his privilege. It was a hard country sixty years ago, when I made my first trip to the home of this feudal baron.

"Whitaker was the owner of several thousand acres of these lands; he was the agent of the Kentucky Lumber Company; he farmed the river bottoms to make the corn and the molasses for food for his many relatives and his large droves of mules and work oxen. To see his men and work stock come into the corrals and barns at night was like watching the dismissal of a circus.

"Whitaker told us (my father and me) that he regularly killed 200 hogs each season, scores of beeves and mutton, and also supplemented his meat supply with hundreds of squirrels, wild turkeys, coons and ground hogs. I cannot estimate how many people he fed; it was like a busy restaurant. The long table was filled two or three times for the supper meal. The description of the evening meal served by Cedric the Saxon to the Knight, Bois Gilbert and retinue, as described by Sir Walter Scott in Ivanhoe, could easily have been written of one of Whitaker's suppers.

"One thing he did not have that Cedric had was the casks of wine; however, a cedar bucket filled with moonshine, pure corn liquor, made in the old fashioned way, stood beside the water bucket on the stand on the Whitaker front porch. It was free to all.

"For years and years Whitaker was busily engaged in sawing lumber, making cross ties, peeling tan bark, having in his employ as many as 100 men at busy times.

"A wild country was this region, fearless men, inclined to quarrel, inhabited it. It is natural that such conditions resulted in many fatal fights. How many of these, if any, could be directly chargeable to Whitaker is not known. Of course he stood by his own! It was one of his characteristics that he was a true and faithful friend; that he was a most gracious host and a liberal neighbor.

"In the last years of his life he was hauled into court, held in the county jail to answer any possible indictments that might be returned against him for offenses alleged to have been committed long before, and with practically no convincing evidence against him.

"Confinement to Whitaker was as confinement to any other wild thing, for he was a man of the forest and the great outdoors. He cracked under the strain and died."

Attention, Taxpayers and Citizens — What Poor Man's Home Will Be Next?

We are the first victims of the Urban Renewal Ordinance passed in our city June 23, 1959. We are being uprooted and put out of our home to enable a few men to build an elaborate parking center in our town.

There is still approximately $2,000.00 indebtedness on the present meters. If our meters fail to pay for themselves during the peak of prosperity, how can these few men expect to pay for 64 additional meters with times as they are at present?

I think that if these men would apply the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," they would feel just as we do that a man's home is his castle, regardless of the type or the location.

Do we have to own two or more brick homes and operate two or more cars before we can live in Prestonsburg as free citizens and enjoy the rights of taxpayers?

Our soldiers fought and died to protect our homes, yet a few men try to take advantage of laws that were meant to help poor people.

It is our home being taken now but the next time it may be yours CITIZENS, DON'T STAND AROUND AND WAIT FOR YOUR TURN, ACT NOW! ATTEND THE COUNCIL MEETING TO BE HELD JULY 6, 1959 AT THE MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

BRITISH POLICE, UNARMED

Except in dire emergencies, Britain's 69,000 policemen are unarmed, says Richard Collier in the July Reader's Digest. So seldom is a bobby involved in gunplay that if he even draws a gun from its holster he must file a special report on the circumstances. In the past ten years, only one such report has had to be submitted. Yet Britain's homicide rate—less than one per 100,000—is among the lowest in the world.

June Is Designated National Dairy Month; Diet Concern Expressed

The nation will celebrate June as National Dairy Month, so you will be hearing much about the Milk Break.

In the middle of a hot afternoon or during the course of a breezeless, stifling evening, have a tall, cool glass of milk. The pleasure and refreshment will surprise you.

Too frequently milk is thought of as a "health" drink and a meal time supplement. It is thought of as a food rather than a refreshment. True, it is a highly nutritious product but it tastes good too.

Young people are ahead of their elders in the discovery of the refreshing qualities of milk. In several areas milk vending machines have been placed next to soft drink dispensers. Almost without exception the milk has out sold the soft drink machines. One vendor even reported that the milk machine sales topped the combined sales of the soft drink operations. He noted that prime users of the milk were teenagers late in the evening.

Elders concerned with diets and calories need not forego milk and milk products. A number of low-calorie milks are on the market that are flavorful and refreshing. These products when cold compare very favorably with the fine quality whole milk. The fat content is very low and therefore the caloric value is low. Any concern over fat in the diet can be eliminated by use of these low-fat milks.

When next you're thirsty on a hot evening, have a glass of cold milk. Its refreshingly good and cooling. Also there's no fuss nor muss in preparing it.

school auditorium Sunday afternoon were hymns dating back to the Fourth century and the Gregorian chant and including many of the well-loved songs of the church. Those hymns which represent some form of Plain Song were sung without accompaniment. Others were sung to the accompaniment of the reed organ, others to guitar and piano accompaniment.

The hymn sing was a continuation of an annual singing gathering initiated here by Mrs. Edith F. James.

As the Faith Baptist Singers of Martin sang "There Is a Light Guiding Me" a woman shouted her praise. Throughout the program the gathering listened with rapt attention.

The Chanters sang "Been a Long Time Travellin'" in memory of Lucy Furman, who, said Mrs. James, "came into these hills and helped to show us the beauty and Old World culture in our customs and songs and encouraged us to hold fast to our heritage." The song was Miss Furman's favorite.

"For the Kingdom" was sung by the Regular Baptist singing group and was dedicated to the memory of the late Smith Hicks, of Middle Creek. Mr. Hicks was described as the "mountain patriarch who extended hospitality on the Prestonsburg-Hindman road and around whose fireside the old told legends of the past and the young sang our old, old tunes."

Introducing Mrs. James, the Rev. Bob Martin pointed out that the annual singing gathering the Prestonsburg woman heads is held "to preserve the beauty of the folk-hymns and the uniqueness of the Plain-Song which is here in the Kentucky mountains as nowhere else."

The gathering was led in prayer by the Revs. Harold W. Dorsey and Ira McMullen, and brief histories were given during the program of these churches: First Methodist, Irene Cole Memorial Baptist, Community Methodist, New Faith Baptist, Freewill Baptist and Church of God. These sketches were given by Chalmer H. Frazier, Anna Martin, Rev. Charles Lake, Rev. Bob Martin, Clifford McKenzie and Rev. Moses Kitchen.

Taking part in the singing were the Madrigal Singers, some of the original Plain-Song Chanters organized by Mrs. James, the choirs of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Irene Cole Memorial Baptist, Community Methodist, Church of God and Freewill Baptist churches here, the Cow Creek Singers, the Regular Baptist Singers and the Faith Baptist quartet.

"We are not seeking to achieve the sensational," Mrs. James said this week in discussing future plans for the event. "Instead, we want to maintain a dignity that is in keeping with the beauty of the songs we sing. If all our people could only know how others appreciate their contributions to the religious music of the region, more would take part and thus would make this annual gathering more representative of the county or, perhaps, even of the whole section."

Song leaders were Paris Goble, Denver Sammons, Miley Prater, Johnny Lafferty, James Perry and Rev. Charles Lake. Choir directors were Mrs. Arthur Haywood, Franklin Moore and Edmund Burke. Mrs. James played the reed organ and at the piano were Mrs. Chalmer H. Frazier, Mrs. Luther Shivel, Mrs. Cora S. McHone, Libby Burchett, Mrs. George Brown and Mrs. Cecil Robinson.

Forestry Education Planned in Kentucky; Scholarships Provided

Forestry education is also being stressed in Kentucky, it was said here this week by H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., a member of the State Board of Education.

Planned for Kentucky youths are two-year forestry courses at the state's four colleges and the University of Kentucky. At the end of the two-year courses, students may transfer to North Carolina State to complete their work if the General Assembly at its next session provides funds for their education. The Legislature will be asked to appropriate $300 per year for each transfer student. Two scholarships in that field of study have already been provided by the Kentucky Forest Industries.

Heretofore, such training has not been available in Kentucky, it is explained. The value and the great potential of the state's forests, however, have caused educators, industrialists and officials to attempt the development of an education program of this type. "We need," Mr. Fitzpatrick said, "to get more high school students interested in the field of forestry."

STEAM Vs. GASOLINE

In a test of gasoline vs. steam-powered cars in 1907, at Ormond Beach, Fla., no gas-driven auto reached 100 m.p.h. A Stanley steamer, however, recalls John Carlova in the current Reader's Digest, got up to 197 miles per hour, and the speed was rising fast when it hit a slight bump. The steamer traveled 100 feet through the air before it returned to earth and broke apart. The driver, though, badly hurt, survived.

BELL PLANS NEW NUMBERS

Improved Phone System. Envisioned By Company; Cost To Be $60,000.00

Beginning December 5, all telephone numbers at Prestonsburg, Allen, Martin, McDowell and Wayland will have letter prefixes as part of Southern Bell's long-range plan to provide the Big Sandy area with the best telephone service in the world. The total cost of the central office equipment and outside plant to provide this improved telephone service is about $60,000.

The telephone numbers in these exchanges will be comprised of two letters and five numbers about December 5. This "numbering system" is called the 2-5 Plan and is being extended in this area to conform with the nationwide Bell System uniform number plan, H. D. Hayes, local manager, said.

"Even though the numbers will not be changed until December 5, we want our customers who print telephone numbers on letterheads, bills, advertising, and other material to know about the change far in advance," Mr. Hayes said.

The new numbers will not be assigned until early October. The closing date of the telephone directory is October 28. Changes in listings or yellow page advertising can not be made after the October 28 closing date.

The prefixes for the new telephone numbers are: Prestonsburg, TUCKER 6; Allen, Trojan 4; Martin, BUDDER 5; McDowell, FRANKLIN 7; Wayland, ELGIN 8.

After the change a typical Prestonsburg number will be TUCKER 6-9011. When dialing this number or any 2-5 number, it will be necessary to dial only the first two letters in the office name plus the five numbers. For example, to call TUCKER 6-9011, dial TU 6-9011.

In assigning office names it is necessary to select names that are easily pronounced and understood over the telephone. Mr. Hayes said that names of local significance frequently present spelling and pronunciation difficulties to persons living in other sections of the county.

The new system will allow for greater telephone expansion in the Big Sandy area, he said. It is an important step to putting into later service "customer long distance dialing." The long-range plan is for customers in this area to dial long distance telephones from their home or office without going through an operator.

John Adams Advocated Fireworks on Fourth; History Is Reviewed

Who put the fireworks in the fourth of July?

Much of the credit goes to John Adams, according to The World Book Encyclopedia. The Founding declared that Independence Day "ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward for everyone."

So, from that time forward, the birthday of the U.S. has been marked by brilliant explosions of color and noise. . . and the deaths and accidents that invariably accompany them.

Americans, however, got the idea for fireworks from Europeans, who got the idea from the Arabs, who merely copied the Chinese.

In 1223 A.D., when a Chinese city was besieged by Mongols, the defenders cooked up a batch of saltpeter, sulfur and charcoal and frightened their attackers with "arrows of flying fire."

Arabs were quick to copy these weapons, which probably were rockets. The Crusaders brought them back to Europe, where the Italians discovered that they made fancy exhibitions as well as formidable weapons.

By the time fireworks spread to England and France, figures and structures of wood and plaster had been added.

In 1520, when Henry VII met Francis I on the Field of the Cloth of Gold in northern France, the historic moment was celebrated by the appearance of a huge dragon that thundered across the sky breathing fire.

By the 1600's, fireworks had developed into such an art that two schools of thought had arisen to argue over methods of display.

The Southern school, centered in Italy, concentrated on building elaborate structures such as castles and temples, from which the fireworks were exploded. The technique of setting off the fireworks was shrouded in mystery.

The Northern school, influenced by the Protestant movement in Germany, thought the Italian procedure smacked of popery. The Northerners exhibited their fireworks before the show, for all to admire, and then made them the important part of the display.

er which she and her husband had occupied. The body was taken later to a Faintsville funeral home.

Cantrell, who formerly operated heavy machinery in road-building, had told neighbors that he had cleared the area near the trailer for a parking space. A well on the farm had been filled and cemented over, and this had led authorities to suspect that the missing woman's body had been secreted in it.

Trooper Music, however, continued the questioning of relatives and acquaintances of the couple. Convinced that Mrs. Cantrell had been killed, and apparently tipped off that she was buried in the "parking area," he and the others did not open the well but centered their attention on the long mound of earth thrown up on the isolated farm.

The aging and sick father of Cantrell, who lived on an adjoining farm, gave authorities permission to excavate for the body, "to quash rumors."

Discovery of the Cantrell automobile was made May 21, near Worthington, Ky. It was identified as belonging to the family by Loreta Cantrell, daughter of the Johnson county couple. She said she had ridden in the car with her father on May 14, leaving him near the Russell railway station, and that she had not since seen him. Miss Cantrell resides at Russell.

Motive for slaying of the woman was not learned.

Anderson Named Head Of Legion Department; Wright, Ramey Attend

Robert W. Anderson, of Louisville, was elected state commander of the American Legion at the final session of the Kentucky Department's 41st annual convention, Sunday. The convention was held at the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington.

Attending the Legion meet from Prestonsburg were delegates from Floyd Post No. 129, Homer Wright, Jr., and Willie Ramey. The convention approved Henderson as the site of its 1960 meet.

Anderson, 49, succeeds Kenneth Fern, Flemingsburg. He defeated William D. Chester, also of Louisville, in a roll-call vote. At Chester's suggestion, Anderson was elected unanimously by acclamation.

Anderson is chairman of the department's finance committee. He is a past commander of Portland Post 278 and has served as a counselor at Boys State the past five years.

L. E. McGuire, Post 76, Ashland, was elected chaplain of the Kentucky department. Virgil R. Gilliam, Post 26, Mayfield, was elected sergeant at arms.

Darrell B. Hancock, Lexington attorney, was re-elected national executive committee member Kentucky for a two-year term. He is a member of Lexington's Man of War.

Delegates approved a resolution to hold the 1960 state convention in Henderson.

A resolution seeking "full activation" of Veterans Hospital at Outwood was approved by delegates.

The resolution stated that the budget for Outwood for the 1960 fiscal year "is sufficient only to care for an average daily patient load of 88 and there are only 98 beds being activated in the entire hospital."

It said there are "still facilities (at Outwood) to accommodate a patient load of between 300 to 400. It is an ideal place for long-term patients and there are not sufficient beds in our general medical-surgical hospitals for this type patient."

Copies of the resolution will be sent to Kentucky's senators and representatives and national Legion officials.

Another resolution calling for establishment of facilities at Camp KySoc in Butler State Park as a memorial to the Kentucky department was adopted. The camp, first of its type in the state, was established by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children for physically handicapped youngsters.

A resolution to "assure continuance and expansion" of Zachary Taylor National Cemetery at Louisville was approved. The draft noted that the action was taken "to protect available acreage from being sold for subdivision or other purposes."

Delegates also approved resolutions pledging support to the Governor's Commission for The Education and Training of Mentally Retarded Children and for acquisition of land adjacent to Camp Nelson National cemetery.

Six general physicians have been added to the staff of the Pikeville Memorial hospital, it was announced last week by Dr. John Newdorp, medical administrator of the Miners Memorial Hospital Association.

The newly-assigned doctors will augment the Pikeville staff because of vacancies created by military and other service calls.

Dr. Armstrong already is on duty at the Pikeville hospital.

Dr. Frank G. Garbin, of Biloxi, Miss., a graduate of the University of Tennessee College of Medicine. He served his internship at St. Joseph hospital, Memphis, Tenn., and was in private practice before becoming a general medical officer in the U.S. Air Force in 1957. Dr. Garbin, who has been in Pikeville since May 1, had special training in general surgery and OPD clinic training in pediatrics and medicine.

Experts from several states met here Monday, June 15, to explore possibilities of forestry. The meeting was sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Regional Planning Commission. Assembling at Prestonsburg the group toured the East Kentucky area.

Shown here, at the La Dale Drive-In at Lancer, are sitting, right, Hamilton K. Pyles, U.S. Forest Service, Upper Darby, Pa., coordinator and leader of the tour, and Mrs. Pyles. H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., Prestonsburg banker, stands behind Mr. Pyles.

quately serve East Kentucky, airport service is limited and telephone service has 17 persons to each installation while in other states there are telephones for each three to five persons. Floyd county has 2,655 telephones but Harlan, Pike, Whitley and Bell have more. Boyd, an industrial county, leads the area nearly four times its nearest competitor, by having 13,961 telephones.

3. Water resources. East Kentucky uses much less water per person than the rest of the state. The 72 gpd used here is exceeded by all the regions of the state, the next highest user, the Western Coal Fields, using 110 gpd.

Seventy-nine percent of the water used for public supplies in the East Kentucky region comes from surface supplies and the same source contributes 96 percent of the industrial consumption. Water for industrial use is limited by poor, low flow characteristics.

In discussing floods in the area the Commission notes that "Every year millions of dollars in damages occur in agricultural and urban areas in the basins of the Cumberland, Kentucky, Licking and Big Sandy rivers."

4. Mineral resources. Kentucky is the third state in coal production and the eastern section mines 65 percent of the total. A 1957 breakdown for Eastern Kentucky shows that 183 rail mines produces 27,006,178 tons and 2,574 truck mines produced 18,404,677 tons.

Other mineral resources noted in the economic Atlas are clay, oil and natural gas, limestone, sandstone, sands, gravels and brines.

5. Agriculture. Kentucky's distribution for farm commodity sales for a recent year was divided 60 and 40 percent respectively between crops and livestock but for the 32 counties of Eastern Kentucky the figures were 71 and 26 percent with forest products accounting for the remainder. This condition in East Kentucky is not considered a healthy situation and wider diversification of agricultural production is advocated.

6. Forestry and Timber. Three fourths of East Kentucky is covered with forests and about one billion board feet of lumber is harvested annually. Relatively few local industries utilize the production and much of the lumber or timber is shipped out of the area.

7. Tourist attractions and facilities. "Eastern Kentucky, with its steep, heavily wooded hills and rocky bluffs, is a natural vacationland for tourists," the Atlas says. It points out that Cumberland Falls State Park is nationally known. The Breaks Interstate Park is in process of development and park and recreational facilities already developed are commented upon as contributing to a high tourist potential.

8. Utilities. East Kentucky has three major sources of electrical power. Kentucky Power Company, Kentucky Utilities Company and the RECC. The capacity of Kentucky Power is given as over 5 million kilowatts.

Natural gas is produced in 12 of the easternmost counties, and gas and oil explorations are constantly being carried out in the region.

was graduated as valedictorian in one year. In the summer after leaving MBI he tried for admission in at least two Kentucky colleges but they turned him down. He then went to talk to Dr. J. M. Boswell, president of Cumberland. He was readily accepted.

At Cumberland he early manifested qualities of campus leadership. He had been a Christian since the age of 12 and he threw himself into the cause of Christian education on the campus and in the community. He became an outstanding member of a gospel team sent to different Baptist churches in the area. He was elected vice-president of the freshman class and president of the International Relations Club. His playing the piano and singing have thrilled many people throughout Southeastern Kentucky.

At Magoffin Baptist Institute he had fired furnaces for his tuition and board but at Cumberland he had the MBI valedictorian scholarship worth $75. The Kentucky Baptists gave him $25 and the State Department of Rehabilitation contributed $100 each semester. In addition to this, an unnamed donor from North Carolina sent $50, and a friend of Magoffin Institute sent another $50. That got him through the first year and practically the next help put him through the next.

Howard discusses the difficulties resulting from his lack of eyesight at Cumberland. He learned from class discussions, lectures and by having students read to him. "I tried to get along as much as possible without asking students to read to me," he says. "I wanted to get along on my own."

Speaking of his handicap, he says: "I have so much to be thankful for that I can only praise God for His mercy."

At Cumberland Ken studied not only his favorite history and political science but took courses in public speaking, psychology, sociology and literature. He didn't get any mathematics for that is the most difficult science for a blind student to master. He demonstrated a complicated slate with a rule in which are rectangular holes through which a problem is punched in Braille. It is a cumbersome process but Howard notes that educators are working on improved methods.

In addition to the encouragement he received from his mother, Howard also has been encouraged by his sister, Lucy, who spent three years at the School for the Blind.

And what of the future? Howard says it will be what he makes it himself. He intends to enter some phase of governmental work, preferably the diplomatic service, where he can give full play to his interest in international relations. To further his education he has applied for admission this fall to the University of Kentucky.

It's a long way from the "head o' Licking" to Rome or Singapore or any of the places the United States government sends its career diplomats.

It was a long way, too, from the "head o' Licking" to honor graduation at Cumberland College but, although penniless and almost blind, Ken Howard made it.

LAMB SHOW AND SALE

Last Saturday, June 20, seven Floyd county sheep producers took part in the first East Kentucky Lamb Show and Sale at Flemingsburg, Kentucky. Participants were Greeley Dotson, Mitchell Dotson, Billy Merritt, Henry Hackworth, Scott Hill, Garland Martin and Puter Martin. Ninety-nine lambs were sold from Floyd county.

The sale drew 1,400 lambs from several East Kentucky counties. Prime lambs sold for $27.10, choice for $25.00 and good grade brought $24.00 per hundred weight. This was considered to be one of the best sales, sheep producers have had for many years.

The show was sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, East Kentucky Rural Development Committee and Farmers Stockyards. There was $750 in premiums.

Billy Merritt, of Bonanza, tied for third, for having the most prime lambs. Of his thirteen lambs, seven graded prime.

BREEDING EWES

With the outlook being that both hogs and beef prices are going down this year and next, sheep offers the biggest opportunity for the farmers, looking for a profitable livestock project. Sheep prices hold fairly steady, and don't follow as much of a price cycle as does beef and hogs. Many of the farmers in the county are more suited to sheep than any other class of livestock.

There are two flocks of western yearling ewes available here in Eastern Kentucky. One each in Morgan and Lawrence counties. They were brought in as lambs last fall, and are now being offered for sale. These will raise a lamb crop next year. Anyone interested in finding out more about these yearlings, contact our office.

There is also some interest in buying a car load of aged ewes from the west. These ewes will give two years profitable production on the average. Prices for these aged ewes will probably be around $12 per head, delivered. If anyone is interested, call the Extension Office, 2668, Prestonsburg.

PRIMED-BURLEY TEST

Burley tobacco that was primed all the way to the top of the stalk, or which got two primings during the growing season, out-yielded the usual stalk-harvested burley in a test at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station last year.

STRAWBERRY BED RENEWAL

Farmers planning to keep their present strawberry plantings for the production of another crop of fruit, should renovate the patch after the harvesting season is completed this summer.

There are several different ways to handle the patch after the crop has been harvested. One is to clip off the old foliage immediately after harvest. This will reduce the leaf spot trouble in the patch. An ordinary farm mower may be used, with the cutter bar raised high enough so that the crowns of the plants are not damaged. After the foliage has been clipped, and especially, if the mulch is rather heavy, it should be raked up and removed from the field and burned.

It will be better to remove the leaves and mulch from the patch rather than incorporate it with the soil. When mixed with the soil, it will lower the available soil nitrogen supply and thus cause some trouble throughout the remainder of the season.

The matted rows should be narrowed to 18 inches wide. A light plow or a rototiller run along each side of the rows is a good way of handling the narrowing operations.

Rows that are heavily matted should be thinned with a steel garden rake. This can be done by raking across the rows.

After the rows have been narrowed and the plants thinned, fertilizing to aid further plant growth, to increase plant vigor, and to aid fruit bud formation for the next crop is desirable.

Well rotted manure can serve well in this way if it is incorporated with the soil.

If manure is not available, nitrate of soda or ammonium nitrate will do a good job used at the rate of 150 to 200 pounds per acre. Be sure to brush the foliage with a broom after broadcasting the fertilizer to prevent foliage burns.

Soils low in phosphorus and potash should have an application of 500 pounds per acre of a good grade of complete fertilizer. If this is done, the amount of nitrate of soda or ammonium could be cut in half.

Renovation practices should be started as soon as the crop has been harvested this summer because the growth and establishment of new runner plants will play an important part in the fruit yields which may be expected the following year.

Weed control is an important factor and cultivation between the rows through the remainder of the season is a necessary practice.

POTATO SHORT-CUT

This is the recipe that Claudena Lowe of the Maytown 4-H Club used in the state 4-H Demonstration Competition at 4-H Week.

- 1 large can evaporated milk (undiluted)
  - ½ tsp. salt.
  - 1 tablespoon grated onion.
  - ½ teaspoon dry mustard.
  - 2 cups (8 oz.) grated process cheese.
  - 5 cups of cubed cooked potatoes.
  - ½ cup cracker crumbs.
- Simmer milk, salt, onion, and mustard together in sauce pan over low heat about 2 minutes. Add cheese. Stir until thickened and smooth. Pour over potatoes in buttered casserole. Top with crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 20 to 25 minutes.

NOTE—Strips of bacon or wieners may be used to top this dish instead of the cracker crumb.

This recipe is easy to make, very inexpensive and very good.

University Honors Former Floyd Teacher

A Betsy Layne native and former Betsy Layne high school teacher was honored recently at the University of Kentucky, it has been learned here.

Billy G. Sargent, of Paris, Ky., who has just completed two years in the University's college of pharmacy, was selected as a member of Rho Chi, honorary pharmaceutical society, it was announced. Only eight members of a class of 60 qualified for membership by ranking in the upper 20 per cent of the class, with grades averaging at least B.

Sargent still has another year in the college of pharmacy. He is employed as drug clerk in the Bourbon County Hospital, Paris, and is working off his required internship at Glen's Drug, operated by Glen Culbertson, formerly of Prestonsburg.

A graduate of Betsy Layne high school, he attended Pikeville College for two years before becoming a teacher. He was graduated from Marshall College in 1952 with major work in mathematics and science, and taught in those fields in high schools for seven years.

His wife, the former Georgia Hall, is art supervisor of the Bourbon county school system. They have a daughter, Debra, 7.

"WERE THEY ALL QUEER?"

Several times, in my long years of talking or writing about Fidelity, people have asked me whether all the folks I used to know were queer. Now, I cannot answer that question directly unless I retell that story of the old Quaker who declared that everybody but himself and his wife were queer and she was a little queer. Of course, they were all queer as viewed by any modern standardization or dress and conduct. Living away back in the remote places, with few chances to touch elbows with people who knew more or cared more, it was natural for them to acquire some eccentricities. But, so far as we of that olden time were concerned, they seemed as natural as the horses we have known in the bigger world. There were so few of them in my acquaintances that I just learned more odd things about them than I know about the butcher, the baker, and the candle-stick maker of my later life.

The country store, the Fourth of July picnics, the Confederate reunions, the protracted meetings, and the procession of the sick ones to the country doctor, my father, brought people again and again into view. Country people, then and probably now, mingled a world of kindness with what the unknown world calls gossip. In that way everybody knew just about everything about everybody. We did not live under a bushel, in Scriptural phrase. My brother, for instance, knew every horse in the neighborhood quite as well as he knew its owner. When someone rode or drove down the "Big Road" a couple of hundred yards from our house, Ruthven Wilson could tell at a glance whether it was a close neighbor, some one from up the creek or out in the Flatwoods, or a stranger from far away, ten or twelve miles away at that. Somehow I never learned that strange skill, any more than I learned to spot someone's car and be ready to give the model and the probable price paid for it.

Here is another reason why many of my old acquaintances were queer: many of them were inbred; what had been a queer-ness in one branch of the family was doubled. And this intermarriage of rather close relatives had occurred on all social levels. Most of the oldest people I knew had been born in North Carolina and had come in huge family caravans all the way from there to the Jackson Purchase; many of the families were inordinately proud of this background and must have kept up some of their queer-ness because that was the way folks acted in God's country. My family, at least as far as Fidelity were concerned, was a set of lone wolves; for we had no relatives near us and could not call every third person we saw Cousin This or That. Naturally, we probably seemed queer to the closely-knit clans around us, where nearly everybody was some sort of cousin or in-law.

Of course, isolation probably had the greatest influence in making and keeping all us queer. We sometimes knew that we were queer, but most of the relatives who visited us were no better off than we in queer-ness, even though they lived nearer the county seat and were not at all hesitant to remind us of the big things they had seen or known. The area east of where the railroad was finally built was settled rather slowly, but after the first complete settlement, there was little changing of people. Members of big families by the dozen moved "out", but some of the original stock stayed, and few new ones came "in". Fidelity was a great drawing card for the former inhabitants, especially in the summer. They came on visits to the end of my days there and long afterwards, somehow eager to get back where everybody was queer. And I rarely live through a year without hearing from somebody who, though separated, even like me, by a whole lifetime from Fidelity, does not recall vividly the strange, queer days that we all knew and the strange, queer people who have lived on in our memories long after they have left the world.

ANNUAL RECC SHOW IS SET

Beauty Contest Planned At Cooperative Meeting; 4-Hour Program Slated

Preparations are underway for the big annual meeting and farm show of the Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation. The four-hour program of business and entertainment activities will be staged July 11 at the Co-op office grounds, Paintsville, according to Oran Hinkle, manager of the Big Sandy RECC.

Beauty contestants and professional entertainment will be featured in addition to the regular business meeting. Local beauties, 16 to 23 years of age, who are single and members of a co-op consumer's family, are eligible to compete in the beauty contest. The young lady selected by the judges will become "Miss Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation of 1959." She will also represent Big Sandy RECC in the state RECC beauty contest which will be held in Louisville at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, September 16. Applications for the beauty contest may be obtained from the Big Sandy RECC Office at Paintsville.

Five acts of professional entertainment will perform for attending co-op members and visitors. Kinko, a six-foot human pretzel, will tie himself in various complicated knots and cram his lengthy frame into a midget car for the audience's amusement. The Great Jarvis, a celebrated magician, will perform mystifying feats of illusion and deception. The comedy team of Tommy Hanlon and Nellie Clark, billed as "Two Crazy People," will add to the fun, and Misses Florine Oler and Nancy Miller, two lovelies who call themselves the "Happitones," will sing, dance and play musical instruments. Ken White will provide music with his electric organ.

Prizes will include electric irons, lamps, fans, skillets, toasters and many other valuable items.

Nancy Miller, of the Happitones, who appeared professionally with the Horace Heidt Show for three years, will dance as part of the five-act program to be staged at the annual meeting and farm show of Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation.

Alcoholism Can Be Treated, Director Says

By J. Collis Ringo, Executive Director Kentucky Commission On Alcoholism

People generally are willing to give "lip service" that "alcoholism is a disease" but actually have mental reservations about this pronouncement. This, unfortunately, is true of a number of physicians in spite of the fact that the American Medical Association has openly recognized alcoholism as a treatable illness.

Comparing alcoholism and tuberculosis is received with skepticism. Not too many years ago, families attempted to hide victims of tuberculosis. "Consumption," as it was then called, was considered as disgraceful as alcoholism is by many at present.

Brought out into the open by public education, tuberculosis victims now receive sympathetic treatment and attention. Tuberculosis in the individual is arrested and he (or she) resumes a useful place in our society.

An alcoholic is just as sick as a tubercular patient. Alcoholism can be arrested in a shorter time period than tuberculosis. Treatment can be just as effective. While the percentage of recovered or arrested alcoholics is pitifully small compared with the known number of alcoholics, these recoveries forcibly demonstrate that it can be done.

The symptoms of alcoholism are progressive. It takes an average of 15 to 20 years to progress from pre-alcoholic symptoms to late stages. When understood, they are as apparent as symptoms of any other illness, particularly in early stages.

The major block is mental attitudes. From earliest history the drunkard has been characterized as a wilful transgressor of the laws of nature and morality.

This false belief is gradually being disproved. Alcoholics drink compulsively. They do not want to drink excessively but due to either a mental or metabolic predisposition, are completely unable to control drinking behavior. Whether this predisposition is mental or metabolic has not been, as yet, established beyond doubt. Research in this field is continuing and the foreseeable future will provide an answer.

Regardless of why, alcoholism is definitely an illness. Acceptance of this fact, undoubtedly true, by physicians, by the public and most particularly by the alcoholic himself, creates a climate conducive to seeking and accepting available help.

Two Floyd-Co. Seamen Visit Oregon Festival

Portland, Oreg.—Ronnie Allen, seaman apprentice, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Allen, of Wayland, Ky., serving aboard the USS Taluga, and James M. Gibson, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Gibson, of Wayland, serving aboard the ocean minesweeper USS Impervious, visited Portland, Ore., June 10-17 during that city's 1959 Rose Festival.

Fourteen U.S. Navy First Fleet ships were joined by a U.S. Coast Guard ship and six Royal Canadian Navy frigates. In addition to participating in the festival, the 5,000 sailors saluted the opening of the Oregon Centennial.

Leading the parade of First Fleet ships into Portland was Vice Admiral R. E. Libby, USN, the Commander of the U.S. First Fleet aboard the heavy cruiser USS Helena.

Beaver Valley Kiwanians Hear Research Engineer; Describes Russian Trip

The Beaver Valley Kiwanis Club at its regular Monday evening meeting, June 22, had as its principal speaker, Michael O. Holowaty, chief research engineer of the Inland Steel Company, East Chicago, Indiana.

H. O. Zimmerman in introducing the speaker told that Mr. Holowaty was a member of an inspection team representing the steel industry which spent two weeks in Russia.

Mr. Holowaty used slides to describe his visit. He stated that in research and technology Russia is making tremendous strides. On the other hand, he pointed out that the same progress had not been made in living standards. He said that his party was permitted to visit most places with the exception of individual homes. He also pointed out that there was no objection to their taking pictures. He expressed the feeling that our big battle with Russia will be one of economics rather than bombs and missiles.

A Pictorial Review of East Kentucky

(No. 51 in a Series)

The Daniel Boone Inscription in Magoffin County

The inscription, "D. Boon 1776" carved on a beech tree, was discovered by the Rev. Billy Willis, of Magoffin county, in 1890. The tree stood on a ridge between the Burning Fork of Licking River and Mason Creek, about one and a quarter miles from Salyersville.

Rev. Willis stated that the tree was found while hunting and that moss almost covered the carving. He cut the tree down in 1894, sawed out a block that had the carving and preserved it. This picture was given to the historian, William Elsey Connelly, in the 1920's. Whether or not the historian ever thought it genuine or not is not known.

A carving of "D. B. 1775" on a rock near Eastern, this county, may also have been an authentic Boone inscription but historians are skeptical of both. There is no known way to establish their authenticity.

The First National Bank presents these old pictures in recognition of the colorful history of our region.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

The Allen-Martin Woman's Club held its final meeting before the summer vacation, June 1, at the home of Mrs. German Vance. The new president, Mrs. David Marrs, presided. A short business meeting was held before the program and it was announced that the club had received a certificate for being an 85% honor club at the recent state convention of Woman's Clubs held in Louisville. Lawrence Keathley spoke briefly to the members on the subject of the proposed incorporation of the community known as Dinwood into the city limits of Martin. The program theme of the meeting was "Youth Conservation," with Mrs. Emmett Tackett as leader. She introduced the speaker of the evening, Darrell Luxmore, a junior in Martin high school, who spoke on "The Youth of Our Community." He noted the absence of any "gang" element in the young people of Martin and emphasized the need for some sort of wholesome recreational facilities for the youth of our community. The club members were interested in the young speaker's remarks and several questions were directed to him following the talk. The hostess, Mrs. Vance served a dessert course to the following members and guests: Mrs. David Marrs, Mrs. William Martin, Mrs. Johny Hall, Mrs. John P. Sammons, Mrs. Emmett Tackett, Mrs. John W. Hall, Mrs. Russell Laven, Mrs. Charles Marshall, Mrs. J. D. Adams, Mrs. John Sherman and Mrs. George Laven. Guests were Mrs. W. J. Reynolds and Adele Hall.

In Kentucky, a "high school horse" is one suspected of being able to read because he wins most often when the odds are high.

KELLY J. DAY WRITES

Sometime ago Kelly J. Day, Pikeville businessman, wrote for information on the Battle of Middle Creek. He was sent a copy of Historic Floyd, the Sesquicentennial booklet that contained a chapter on that battle. He writes: "I remember hearing my father talk about the Battle of Middle Creek when I was a boy. That was the chief topic I wanted to read about. I wondered and still wonder if the story about Garfield camping in Pikeville and living in the old Bowles home in 1862, at which time, the story goes, they had a flood about equal to the flood we had in January, 1957, is true. I shall read this book tonight and see if I can confirm some of the things I have heard. The story goes that Garfield was taken from the old Bowles home, which has been torn down and the space is now a small park in Pikeville."

KALIEBE WRITES THESIS

A letter from Jon Kaliebe, 145 Iota Court, Madison 3, Wisc., asks for sources on Eastern Kentucky during the Civil War. The letter, dated February 28, notes he is "a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin and I am writing my MA thesis on the military campaigns in Eastern Kentucky during the Civil War." "Due to the lack of some materials up here at the Historical Library, I wrote to the University of Kentucky about certain primary sources that they may have. I inquired concerning Eastern Kentucky newspapers dated from approximately 1860-1861.

also about personal correspondence, diaries, and government publications of this period. Mrs. Hammond Dugan, Associate Archives and Special Collections Director, informed me that the library carries only Lexington newspapers and very few, if any, diaries and letters.

"Mr. Charles Hinds, former secretary of the Kentucky Historical Society, suggested that I might get in touch with you concerning the above information. I would greatly appreciate any enlightenment that you may have to offer me. I plan to come to Kentucky during the spring recess, March 27-April 6, and would like to know where I should go to get the most available resources.

"I am particularly concerned about the military movements in Eastern Kentucky after the expulsion of General Humphrey Marshall beyond the battles of Middle Creek and Pound Gap."

Mr. Kaliebe did come down to Kentucky, visited many spots in this region, went to the Floyd County library and did some reading. He is now working on the thesis. It will probably be a contribution to Eastern Kentucky history.

WISCONSIN AGAIN

Another letter from Wisconsin is from Warren S. O'Brien, professional photographer and writer, who is interested in Eastern Kentucky and is planning a book on the Cumberland River section. Mr. O'Brien's business address is 304-306 N. East Avenue, Waukesha, Wisc. He writes about Boone and makes an inquiry.

"Can you tell me if 'Boone's Rock' is still standing near his old camp on Station Camp Creek? I read that he carved on a rock there 'Squire Boone, 1770.' Are you near Lulgabrug Creek? You know, we have the Draper Papers at the Historical Library at Madison, Wisconsin. I have seen several pages of letters Boone wrote about Lulgabrug Creek and a map."

ANENT MARK TWAIN

A letter from Mrs. B. J. Bolin, Columbia, Ky., reveals a bit of the enthusiasm of the researcher. And so she should! She found an interesting bit of history.

She writes: "Have you seen the latest book on Mark Twain, entitled, 'SAM CLEMENS, OF HANNIBAL'?" If not, get one and you will find that Mrs. Ruth Burdette and myself collected the data for the first three chapters. We, also, found the marriage of the parents of Mark Twain here in our courthouse. We were surely proud of it. Had been trying to find it for years. You see, Mark Twain's ancestors came to Adair County. His great-grandfather, Col. William Casey led the gang!"

Mrs. Bobbitt Wants Pictures

Mrs. Matella C. Bobbitt, librarian of Pikeville Free Public Library, writes:

"We have made a scrap book of your articles. They were handled so much that we had to do it to preserve them. After I had cut out most of the material to be used and thrown away the rest of the paper I discovered in one of them a picture of the Haffields. I almost missed it as it seems to be an ad of the First National Bank. Hope that I did not discard others.

"This one is 'No. 16' (in a series) and I am wondering if there is any possibility of obtaining copies of the other pictures in the series. Does the bank have a complete set available? They would be such a wonderful addition to our Kentucky Room. Please see if you can find me some. Most of the Pikeville people have lost their treasures in the way of records, pictures and books that I am having a time building this collection."

Does anyone have a few of these pictures to share with the Pikeville library?

Roop-Foster Wedding Solemnized on June 6 At Sharpsburg Church

The wedding of Miss Nira Roop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Roop, of Wayland, and Mr. Owen H. Foster, son of Mrs. William Foster and the late Mr. Foster, of Sharpsburg, Ky., was solemnized at 7:30 p.m., June 6, at the Sharpsburg Christian Church. The Rev. Richard Davis officiated at the double-ring service.

The candlelight ceremony was performed before an altar banked with white gladioli, fern, white chrysanthemums and tapers in candleabra. Mrs. Stella Van Arsdale played a program of organ music.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Elvie Martin, of Lexington. She wore a bouffant dress of white lace and tulle over taffeta. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was caught to a crown of tulle and pearls, and she carried a white orchid surrounded with stephanotis on a white Bible.

Mrs. Robert Sutton, of Mt. Sterling, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a aqua-blue silk dress styled with a fitted bodice and full skirt. Her head piece was a bandeau of aqua silk petals holding a short veil and her colonial bouquet was of yellow roses.

Mr. Rex Rawlings, of Sharpsburg, served Mr. Foster as best man. The guests were seated by Robert Sutton, of Mt. Sterling, and Eddie Grimes, of Sharpsburg.

A reception was held at the church, with Mrs. Elvie Martin and Miss Betty Jo Jewell, of Lexington, serving.

After a trip to the Smokey Mountains, the couple are residing at 640 Mitchell Avenue, Lexington. The bride, a graduate of Wayland high school, is employed in the office of Dr. Robert M. Sirkle. Mr. Foster was graduated from Sharpsburg high school. He attended Morehead State College and is employed by the Kentucky Department of Highways.

Six-Second Workout Makes Muscles Grow, German Scientist Says

Tighten any muscle for just six seconds a day—every day—and that muscle will start to grow as fast as it can.

This recent discovery, says the July Reader's Digest, is the secret of an exercise routine which can keep you trim, without gadgets, or expense. The exercises take literally no time; you perform them in the "lost" odd moments, as you wait for a traffic light or service in a store, sit in a car or stand in line.

The theory behind this is a German discovery that muscles can grow only so fast, no matter how much they are stimulated by exercise. The stimulation they actually need is tiny: six seconds a day is enough.

Show-business stars know this secret. Hugh O'Brien, TV's Wyatt Earp, unobtrusively presses one fist into the other palm as he stands talking. It is a habit which keeps his forearms and biceps powerful. Jane Powell, Frankie Laine and other singers have a sitting-down exercise derived from yoga. They slowly pull in the stomach, sucking the diaphragm up and up, until the whole abdomen is flat from groin to chest. Then they slowly let it out again. The result: taut stomach muscles, good posture. Dave Garrow habitually holds an umbrella or golf club out in front of him, heavy end out, flipping it up and down. This tightens torso muscles.

Try these: drying after a bath, loop the towel around the back of your neck, pull hard on the towel ends and push back as hard as you can. Do the same at the small of your back and at the toes, six seconds at each point. Dressing, stand on one foot while you put on the shoe and tie the laces. While you stand waiting in a line, teeter on your toes. Each of these takes a few seconds; but repeated faithfully every day, they will make you stronger, slimmer and peppier, the Digest says.

The article, "Six Seconds for Exercise," is by Keith Monroe.

SQUIRREL SEASON

The Kentucky Division of Fish & Wildlife Resources has established dates for the 1959 squirrel season. This year the season will open August 29 and continue through November 28, three months. There will be no split season as in the past. The bag possession limits will remain the same as last season, six per day or a possession limit of 12 after two or more days of hunting.

There will be no squirrel season in the Dewey Lake area, but deer hunting will be permitted for the first time for a three-day period, beginning December 4.

The open season on rabbits, quail and grouse will open November 20 and continue through January 18, and the bag limits for all species remains the same as in the past. The bag limit for rabbits is eight per day; for quail, 10; for grouse, two. Possession limits after two or more days of hunting will be double the bag limit for these three species.

West Liberty stopped Liberty, 6-4, Sunday to trail leader Owingsville by two games, and Paintsville lost, 5-2, to Beattyville to drop four games off the pace.

Former Prestonsburg Black Cats all-sports athlete Paul Phillip Hughes, who spent last season at Greenbrier Military Institute, will attend Transylvania College on a full athletic scholarship, instead of accepting a football scholarship at the University of Kentucky.

Hughes, 1958 winner of the Prestonsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce Reatherford-Salyers Award, will do pre-medical work at the Lexington school.

Auxier's Red Sox are continuing their surge in the Prestonsburg Little League race as they romped to their tenth consecutive win without a setback Monday.
