

This Town-- That World

Only three weeks ago we were hearing confident predictions that there would be no real summer this year, and from one or two oracles—I may have been in this latter group—was heard the confident claim that the seasons had not turned around. That was after those frosts, the nights of May 26 and 27. . . . Now we're too busy mopping brows to wag our tongues.

JUST IMAGINE!
Did you ever stop to think what would result if we all set ourselves to the task and had the power to build the world, all over again, have and new? It's doubtful if we'd ever get more built than Rhode Island. It would all end up in a squabble and a worse mess than ever, with all of us, as usual, talking a big deal, most of us doing nothing, and some tearing down what a few had built.

"A friend who wants to improve the quality of this column passes on an appropriate quip which he read somewhere. It runs to this effect:
"Drive right and more will be left."

When sickness strikes me, as it surely will, I must never complain if my friends do not visit me. I have failed so many who are sick that it would be no more than I deserve.

A first-time visitor to this section negotiated some of our mountain roads, then announced, "Now, I know where that fellow got his inspiration for 'There's a Long, Long Trail A-Winding.'"

GOBLE, HALE FILE MOTIONS

Asking Hill To Vacate Bench for Case Trials; Affidavits Submitted

Both contestees in Floyd county's two election contest cases—Dan Goble and Henry C. Hale, Democratic nominees for Jailer and Sheriff, respectively—have asked Circuit Judge Edward P. Hill to vacate the bench for trial of the cases on their merits.

Judge Hill last week acceded to Goble's request and certified the case to the Court of Appeals for a special judge. But he denied the motion filed by Hale, and Tuesday afternoon was studying an amendment by Hale to his original motion and supporting affidavit.

Affidavits of Goble and Hale in support of their motions coincided in certain parts, notably in the contention neither could expect a fair and impartial trial because they were friends of Governor Combs and because Judge Hill is opposed to the state administration and the Governor.

Goble's affidavit pointed out that he asked Judge Hill during the primary campaign if he would help him in his race and that Hill replied, "Yes, I'll help you just like you helped me in my race."

Judge Hill pointed to this statement in vacating the bench in the Hale-Goble contest case, noting that he did not know why he gave such answer. He said Goble had been a staunch supporter of his in an election following the one in which he had opposed him and that he had a high regard for Goble. He added that the statement appeared to be legally sufficient reason for him to vacate the bench.

Goble and Hale also said Judge Hill had made statements, from the bench and in public, to the effect that the May 23 election was full of "crooked work" and other irregularities, and that statements of like effect had been spread by radio, television and newspapers. Goble added that a private meeting attended by his primary opponent, Lawrence Hale, and others was held on the matter of absentee ballots at Judge Hill's home on June 1.

He also alleged that Judge Hill, about four or five years ago, presided at his trial on an assault and battery charge and later, after a conviction and sentence of $100 fine and 10 days in jail had resulted, Hill "admitted to this affiant that he, the presiding judge, had failed to give instructions in behalf of this defendant."

Henry Hale's affidavit supporting his plea for a special judge claimed that Hill had made statements, the effect of which was "that this affiant was not

LESLIE SUIT WOULD ANNUL ABSENT VOTE

Nomination of Hale For Sheriff Contested; Is Second To Be Filed

The action filed in the Floyd circuit court last Wednesday afternoon by David B. Leslie, contesting the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Henry C. Hale, seeks to annul all the absentee votes cast, on the grounds that parts of the election law are invalid and in violation of the state Constitution.

At the same time Leslie's petition attacks the ballots cast by a large number of absentee voters, the handling of the ballots by the County Clerk and the Election Commission, and alleges widespread fraud in certain precincts.

The suit does not specifically accuse the contestee of violation of the Corrupt Practices Act. Leslie led Hale in the tabulation of the vote cast by voting machines by 23 votes. Cancellation of the absentee results would leave him the winner.

Contestant's action, prepared by Atty. Joe Hobson, maintains that KRS 126.010 through 126.330 are invalid and in violation of the Constitution. It points out that the absentee voting law forbids a voter, if sick or disabled, to vote, even though he is in the county, and yet permits others to vote if they make an affidavit that they expect to be absent from the county on some business or duty.

Leslie claims the Election Commission should not have counted any absentee ballots because the statutes require the County Clerk to keep these ballots in a secure and substantial place, under guard; that the commissioners did not attempt to count the absentees before certifying the remainder of the votes, all in violation of mandatory provisions of the absentee voting law. The suit also claims the commissioners failed and refused to give candidates and their attorneys the opportunity to examine the outer envelopes used by absentee voters and declined to permit the contestant and his attorney to examine the inner envelopes.

WATERSHED PROGRAM IS URGED AT MEETING

Sixteen mountain counties joined forces at a meeting in West Liberty last week to mobilize support for passage of the Small Watershed bill soon to come up for action in Congress.

Known as HR-5513, the Small Watershed bill was introduced by Rep. Carl D. Perkins of Kentucky's Seventh district. It would authorize a change in cost-benefit ratio formula which Perkins claims is not workable in hill terrain.

Thus far, all Small Watershed projects proposed in Eastern Kentucky, except one, have failed to qualify under the present formula, though many projects in richer and more level counties have been qualified and built. The Perkins bill also would authorize an additional appropriation of federal funds to finance the program in the depressed areas of the Appalachian region.

SURVEY NOTES BUYING RISE

Family Income Increased Slightly Over Year '59; $38,672,000 Available

Special to The Times
New York, June 12 — In Floyd county, the business year 1960 proved to be more vigorous than was expected, the final figures show. Personal incomes and consumer buying locally measured up well against activity in other areas.

Although the year was not conducive to record-breaking, what with the recession and unemployment to contend with, the local market was relatively strong.

The figures bearing this out have been released by Sales Management in its new, copyrighted "Survey of Buying Power," which covers every section of the United States.

Beaten Man Refuses To Name Assailant

Howard Perry, Prestonsburg painter, was hospitalized here Tuesday afternoon after he reportedly had been beaten by an unidentified man while the two were on the railroad tracks across the river from here. Chief of Police Bill Potter said Perry declined to name his assailant.

SAFETY DAY DATE IS SET

First Aid Contest To Feature Events Scheduled by Inland

The eighth annual Safety Day of the Inland Steel Company's coal mining operations located at Wheelwright and Price, Kentucky, will be held Saturday, at the Wheelwright athletic field.

A first-aid contest between teams representing the mines and the Price preparation plant will be the principal feature and will start at 1:30 p.m. Nine teams composed of mine workers will compete for the Inland championship trophy and the right to represent the company in the Big Sandy district contest in September.

In addition to the championship trophy, which will go to the winning team, individual trophies will be awarded to all members of the three leading teams. These three teams will be entered in the district contest, which is sponsored annually by the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Mining Institute.

The annual Safety Day is promoted each year by the Inland Steel Company with the cooperation of Local Union No. 5899 and District 30, United Mine Workers of America, the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals, the U. S. Bureau of Mines, and local and national coal operators' associations. A number of men who are engaged in safety endeavors in the coal mining industry have been

LABOR FORCE AREA NAMED

Prestonsburg-Paintsville Eligible for Assistance, Perkins Wires The Times

The Prestonsburg-Paintsville labor market area was one of the first Kentucky areas to be designated as eligible for assistance under terms of the newly enacted Area Redevelopment Act, Congressman Carl D. Perkins announced last Friday.

"Other areas will be added, but the early designation will assure some projects in your area," Perkins wired The Times.

Ten economically hard-hit Kentucky areas are among 144 communities declared depressed areas.

The Kentucky areas—covering 32 counties—are Corbin, Hazard, Hopkinsville, Madisonville, Middletown-Herlan, Morehead-Grayson, Paducah, Paintsville-Prestonsburg, Pikeville-Williamson, W. Va., and Ashland-Huntington, W. Va.

The Commerce Department in Washington made the announcement Friday after a daylong meeting with representatives of the 50 states.

Representing Kentucky at the meeting with Commerce Secretary Hodges were Bruce Kennedy, commissioner of economic development, and John Whisman, administrative assistant to the Governor for depressed areas development.

The communities on the list are thus officially designated as major areas of chronic and substantial unemployment. They become eligible for $400,000,000 in federal loans and grants under the new federal program.

Under the act, communities are first required to devise plans to revive the local economy before they can apply for the federal aid.

In Kentucky areas where industrial development has lagged or is nonexistent the new federal-loan program is not expected to provide much help.

However, Kentucky officials supported the legislation—a major part of President Kennedy's program—in the belief that it is at least a first step toward later Congressional action that will be of more benefit to Kentucky.

Martin, Caudill Charged By Police In Morgan-Co.

West Liberty, Ky., June 8 — A state representative from Floyd county has been charged with drunken driving after his arrest near here.

State police said Ben Martin, Drift, a representative from Floyd county, was arrested Wednesday night while driving along U. S. 460 a mile west of Index in Morgan county.

His companion, Johnny Caudill, Prestonsburg, a magistrate in Floyd county, was charged with public drunkenness.

AIRPORT SKIRTS SNAG, ONLY TO HIT ANOTHER

The Prestonsburg-Paintsville airport skirted one snag this week, only to get hung on another.

A change was made in the location of the airport in the Blockhouse Bottom section, across the Big Sandy from East Point, to avoid affecting the site of pioneer Harmon's Station to which Jenny Wiley fled in her escape from her Indian captors. The airfield location was originally planned to include this part of Blockhouse Bottom, but plans only recently approved provide that the field will stop short of the farm of Mrs. Douglas Galbraith, of Paintsville, which includes the Harmon Station site.

But, with that obstacle out of the way, Burl Spurlock, member of the Prestonsburg-Paintsville Airport Commission, ran into another when he resumed negotiations with the Williams heirs, Bristol, Tennessee, owners of approximately a third of the land the airstrip will require. They are not interested in selling, and so a new condemnation action must be filed in Johnson county.

But Mr. Spurlock and others were encouraged by the prospect of early action. The State Aero-

MUSIC TELLS LODGE PLANS

Contract Award Date Scheduled for July 20; Amphitheatre Postponed

Contract on construction of the lodge at Jenny Wiley State Park is scheduled to be let July 20, Marvin Music, secretary of the Kentucky Parks Board, said here this week.

The project has been delayed by failure of the architect to complete acceptable plans, it was said.

The timetable now set up for the project follows:
Completion of plans, June 19;
invitation to bidders, June 29;
awarding of contract, July 20.

A work order is expected to be issued within 10 days of the date the contract is awarded, Mr. Music said.

Because the 35-room motel-type lodge will not be completed till 1962, the work on an amphitheatre at the park for the showing of the Jenny Wiley pageant will be postponed till next year, it has been learned.

The only new park lodges not let to contract, or ready for contract, are those at Jenny Wiley, Falls of Rough and Buckhorn. The latter is expected to be let September 1, although Buckhorn reservoir was impounded only this year.

Herrick Is Elected Jaycees' President; Officers Installed

Calvin P. Herrick, of the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, was recently elected president of the Prestonsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Roy Ramsey as head of the Jaycees.

Herrick and other new officers were installed June 1. Other officers are:

Vance Mitter, vice-president; James Salyers, secretary; John Sturgill, treasurer; J. R. Spurlock, Delano Stumbo and John G. Heinze, directors.

CLERK OFFICE BREAK MADE

Election Records Held Not Object of Burglary Of Courthouse Office

The Tuesday night break into the office of Circuit Clerk Henry Stephens had no connection with absentee ballot records stored in the office vault, was the theory expressed Wednesday morning.

This belief was based on the fact that no attempt was made to force open the vault door or to enter by way of a window in that part of the office. It also was pointed out that the cash register in the main office was open and that this apparently was the point of interest to the burglar or burglars.

Entrance was effected through a front window which opens onto the courthouse porch. Apparently, an attempt was made to open another window by breaking a pane, then turning the catch, but a window air-conditioner blocked entrance there. A pane in the window nearest the hallway also was broken, the window catch turned and the upper section of the window was swung out, permitting entrance.

Only 12 cents was in the cash register, and that was not taken. No other item is believed missing from the office.

State Police Detective Chester D. Potter and his brother, Prestonsburg Chief of Police Bill Potter are investigating the break.

Glass of the front door of the new section of the Ben Franklin Store here was broken Friday night, but police said nothing was taken. The Collins Grocery Store at Lackey also was entered the same night at Lackey. The haul there was reported at around $150 worth of stock.

SENATE OKEHS HOUSING BILL

Kennedy Scores Win In Legislative Battle; Act Will Assist Region

President Kennedy scored another legislative victory Monday when the Senate passed his $8,140,000 housing bill with few changes.

The bill bulges with various housing programs. Beneficiaries include moderate-income families who want to buy homes, cities that want to clear slums, and colleges that want to build dormitories.

The Senate passed it, 64 to 25. The bill now goes to the House, where the Banking Committee has approved a similar bill. House leaders, cautiously optimistic about its chances, expect the bill to come up for House debate next week.

The bill is the fourth of Kennedy's five major legislative proposals to clear the Senate.

Kennedy has signed two—depressed-areas and minimum wage—into law. A third, public-school aid, is pending in the House. The fifth, medical care to the aged, may not be considered until next year.

The housing bill, as passed Monday, included much of a key program aimed at moderate-income families. Under the program, families in the $4,000-to-$6,000 class would be able to make a down payment no higher than $555 and get a 40-year mortgage on the purchase of a $15,000 home.

As originally proposed, no down payment was required. But this was lost in some legislative maneuvering last week.

Besides the moderate-income-family program, a second principal new feature in the bill, broadening of the home-loan-improvement program, was retained without substantial change.

It would permit such loans to be made up to a limit of $10,000 with a 20-year repayment period on homes that are at least 10 years old. Present ceilings are $3,500 and five years.

The new money authorizations include:
$2,500,000,000 for urban renewal for slum clearance grants over the next four years. Of this, $50,000,000 could be used for grants for demonstration projects on city mass-transit systems.
$1,500,000,000 for college dormitory loans over the next five years.
$1,200,000,000 for direct home

ACTION TAKEN AFTER PROBE OF ABSENTEES

Hill Extends Time Nine Days for Jury To Continue Probe

The special grand jury investigating the May 23 primary election and events leading up to it produced four indictments naming five men in a report Wednesday morning to Judge Edward P. Hill.

Those indicted and charges alleged against them are:

Arnold Maggard, of Lexington, director of the Kentucky veterans' bonus, false statements to obtain an absentee voter's ballot.

John May, Langley, former Floyd magistrate, bribery.

Robert Wright and Robert Martin, bribery.

Junior Martin and John May, interfering with a qualified voter to vote his absentee voter's ballot.

The false statement alleged against Maggard, a former resident of Langley, involves the affidavit in which he allegedly stated he had been a resident of the county six months and the precinct 60 days prior to the election.

May is accused of paying Lula Prater, an absentee voter, $10. He and Junior Martin, in the other indictment in which he was named, allegedly took the ballot of James E. Fitzpatrick on the pretext of getting it notarized, then of failing to return it to Fitzpatrick and themselves voting it.

Robert Wright and Robert Martin are accused of bribing an offering money to Paul Kendrick for his vote. Minutes of the grand jury noted that Kendrick said he refused the offer.

The grand jury asked an extension of its session, and Judge Hill granted it nine days to be used at the jury's discretion.

Prior to submitting the indictments the jury had voted, Chester Patton, foreman, remarked:

"We're having trouble getting witnesses before us. Some are in Knott county, some in Johnson and two have moved to Magoffin. One in this county is hiding and the Sheriff can't locate him."

It was at this juncture that the extension of the time was asked and granted.

Some of the hard-to-get witnesses will be brought before the grand jury, with no bond allowed for a delay in their appearance.

There followed a discussion of legal questions involved in the probe. One was: Has the County Clerk or any deputy clerk violated the statute in issuing absentee ballots? Judge Hill cited the statute providing for an inspection at 2 p.m. on the 14th day before the election of absentee ballot applications by candidates, press, radio and television, pointing out that the purpose of the statute is to afford opportunity for applications to be challenged. No such inspection was made here, but it was pointed out that the Court of Appeals in a Louisville case had held the statute unconstitutional and impractical because of the large number of applications filed there.

For Fishtrap Reservoir;
Flood History, Area Need
Talked To Subcommittee

"Damage to the Big Sandy valley in the years past resulting from recurring floods has run into hundreds of millions of dollars," a joint statement of Big Sandians presented to the House Appropriations subcommittee at Washington Tuesday of last week, pointed out.

The valley group consisted of George Ramey, director of Mayo State Vocational school, Paintsville, Floyd County Judge Henry Stumbo, Cy Cooper, manager of the Paintsville Water and Gas Company, Attorney Harold Stumbo, Prestonsburg, and Floyd County Attorney Robert Wellman. Congressman Carl Perkins also appeared before the committee. They were pleading for an additional appropriation for Fishtrap Reservoir.

The present budget provided $1,780,000 for construction work at Fishtrap but the area group seeks an increase of this amount to $2 million as suggested as economically desirable by the Army Engineers.

"It is needless to state that this area has had one of the highest insured unemployment rates in the whole country during the past 10 years and there is no earthly way that industry can be attracted to the area to diversify the economy which has been based on coal in the past until this valley has an adequate flood control program," the statement said. "We mean a flood control program that will protect the cities of Pikeville, Prestonsburg, Paintsville, Louisa, Catlettsburg and dozens of other communities between these cities."

The group's statement to the subcommittee was short, giving as reason that "since a member of this committee has been in the area and personally observed the great need for the reservoir we feel that enough has been said."

Judge Stumbo commented that a member of the subcommittee from New York complimented the Big Sandians on their statement and said: "If statements like these had been presented by people from my own state we would be able to get things done in New York."

Of Bevinville, Dies;
Rites Held Last Week

Mrs. Geneva Reedy Page, 82, of Bevinville, was claimed by a heart condition at home, Thursday of last week at 10:45 a.m. She had been ill three months.

Mrs. Page was a native of Dickinson county, Va., a daughter of James and Sarah White Reedy. Her husband, name unavailable, preceded her in death.

Surviving sons and a daughter are Oscar Page and Luther Page, both of Bevinville, Levi Page, of Kite, and Mrs. Martha Hall, Pine Top, Knott county. A surviving brother is Marion Reedy, Garrison, Ky.

Funeral rites were conducted Thursday of last week at the family cemetery at Kite, ministers of the Regular Baptist church officiating. Burial was made under the direction of Merion and Call Funeral Home.

Conley-Isbell Vows Said

The marriage of Miss Rebecca Conley, daughter of Mrs. Frank Conley, and the late Mr. Conley, and Mr. Charles Joseph Isbell, was solemnized Sunday, June 4, at the Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church. Mr. Isbell is the son of Mrs. Ruth Isbell, of Prestonsburg, and the late Samuel L. Isbell.

The bride's brother, the Rev. Franklin Conley, pastor of Vine Run Baptist Church in Elliston, Ky., performed the double-ring ceremony before an altar banked with white gladioli, stephanotis, roses and candelabra. The final prayer was by the pastor, the Rev. Ira McMillen.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Earl Conley, of Bowling Green. The organist was Miss Marilyn Ivey, of Georgetown College, with vocal selections by Mrs. Ira McMillen.

The bride wore a traditional floor-length gown of imported chantilly lace, designed by Alfred Angelo, fashioned with Sabrina neckline, of handclipped scalloped lace, with handrun seed pearls and sequins, long lace sleeves tapering to Calla points over her wrists. Her bouffant lace skirt, worn over bridal hoops, was caught up in front with tulle ruffles, lace-edged, falling in the back into a full chapel train. A handmade queen's crown of tiny seed pearls and swiss crystals secured her bouffant veil of imported silk illusion. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Donald Harrington, wore a street-length gown of powder-blue rose-point lace, fashioned with rounded neckline, tiny cap sleeves, fitted bodice and full circular skirt with back bow and streamers of satin. She wore a matching satin headband with a deeper blue veil, and short white gloves. Her flowers were a cascade of carnations dyed to match her veil.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Watt Curnutte, Jr., of Catlettsburg, Miss Phyllis Brandenburg, of Wilmore, and Miss Barbara Isbell, of Louisville. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant in powder-blue with powder-blue veils and carnations. The flower girl, Miss Helen Ann Francis, a niece of the groom, wore a white dress of daron trim with lace. Her headband was white satin and she carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Mr. Maurice Isbell, of Lexington, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Hubbard Francis, of Prestonsburg, Mr. Clifford Todd, of Louisville, and Mr. Freddie Francis, of Richmond.

The mother of the bride wore a beige lace dress with matching accessories, and a corsage of yellow rosebuds. The mother of the groom wore a beige shantung dress with matching accessories, and her corsage was also yellow rosebuds.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Church Annex.

After the reception, the bride and groom left for Washington, D. C., where Mr. Isbell is employed this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Isbell will reside at 5406 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY SPONSORS PAGEANT AT GARFIELD PLACE; BASED ON CIVIL WAR MEMOIRS

Rehearsals for the pageant, "The Proud Heritage," to be presented here next month as a part of the Civil War centennial observance, are being conducted here weekly under the direction of James Salisbury and Miss Linda Sue Stephens.

Tentative date of the presentation has been set for July 30 but it may be necessary to advance the date until such a time as a group of soldiers from Fort Knox can appear. The Fort Knox contingent, consisting of 11 each of Blue and Gray soldiers, are now in training and the commandant there has agreed to their appearance at Prestonsburg.

The play, to be held on the grounds of The Garfield Place, depicts incidents from Col. James A. Garfield's campaign here in 1862. All of the events portrayed are from newly-discovered memoirs of Union veterans and have never been published. The play is sponsored by the Floyd County Historical Society, headed by Robert Wellman, president.

Forrest Gregory, Prestonsburg, will play the part of Col. Garfield, with leading parts assigned to other local residents. Approximately 30 persons are scheduled in the cast.

Historic characters in the pageant, besides Garfield, are Major John F. Stewart, afterward a noted Big Sandy jurist; Capt. John C. Collins, of the Union army who later migrated to Kansas; Capt. James H. Davidson, Unionist; Pvt. Nelson Boggs, of Lawrence county, who was killed at the Battle of Middle Creek; Pvt. William Boggs, his brother, who successfully pledged with Garfield to be allowed to bury his brother on Big Blaine Creek; John M. Burns, Elliott's partner, who escaped by night from the Burns home, now called The Garfield Place; and Andrew Jackson May, a Civil War Confederate leader.

Music direction will be by Mrs. Carlos Haywood, Prestonsburg teacher. Mrs. Edith F. James serves as research consultant.

The Garfield Place, which was commandeered by Garfield as headquarters while he was here, is now occupied by Mrs. Claude P. Stephens. The Kentucky Historical Highway Marker committee erected a marker on U. S. 23 near the home last summer.

W. T. Bradley Victim After Long Illness

William Terrill Bradley, Sr., 79, died at his home in Catlettsburg after a long illness.

Mr. Bradley was born February 17, 1882, at Whitehouse, a son of the late Millard and Alice Ward Bradley. He was a retired manager of Glo-Gloria Coal Co., Whitesville, West Virginia. He was a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, Hampton Lodge 235, F. & A. M., B.P.O. Elks 942.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Lottie Price Bradley; four sons, William T. Bradley, Jr., Catlettsburg, Edward B. Bradley, Ashland, Cecil H. Bradley, Charleston, West Virginia, and Leslie W. Bradley, Fayetteville, West Virginia; two daughters, Mrs. Lewis P. Stephens, Ashland, and Mrs. Gene Fuller, Catlettsburg; 12 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted last Thursday from the Kilgore-Collier Funeral Home by the Rev. Marlon Duncan and the Rev. Willard Wilcox. Masonic services were held at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, at the funeral home. Burial was made in Rose Hill Burial Park, Catlettsburg.

"HAYLAGE" TERM DESCRIBED

Lexington, Ky. — Ever heard of "haylage?" It's a new wrinkle in forage-handling, says the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service. It is made from forage mowed and allowed to dry in the field to a moisture content of about 50 per cent before stornig,

TO FLOYD COUNTY TEACHERS:

Many of you are having anxious moments because the Board majority has refused to act on the Superintendent's recommendations for employment for the next school year. You needed to make financial arrangements in order to go on to summer school and I feel that I should do everything possible to enable you to make those arrangements by assuring you that you will be employed next year. You have heard me say publicly that any certified teacher who taught in our system last year was automatically employed for the next school year unless you had been notified to the contrary before April 1st. I can tell you with authority that NOT A SINGLE TEACHER WAS NOTIFIED THAT HE WOULD NOT BE EMPLOYED FOR THE NEXT SCHOOL YEAR.

After all that has happened this year, you must be aware of the fact that no one is more interested in your welfare and your security than I am. My responsibility in making nominations was not taken lightly. It would have been so easy for me if I had been able to recommend each of you for the position of your first choice, but the fact is that we had over forty applications in one of the consolidated schools for 22 positions, and eight applications for two positions in a rural school. The statement that 60 teachers had been arbitrarily transferred to less favorable positions is emphatically not true. Many of the changes in last year's placement were requested, and I have been informed that 95% of all teachers were pleased with the recommendations.

I wish I had the financial ability to loan each of you the money you need for summer school expenses, but since that is an impossibility, I can only tell you that you may rest assured that I shall stand on my recommendations. The Board majority has the privilege, by law, of certifying my recommendations to the State Department, if they are ready to charge that any or all of you are mentally incapable or morally unfit for your positions. The State Board's decision will be final, and historically, they have upheld the superintendent's appointments. I have been reliably informed that in the event the county board majority does not act on my recommendations and fails to certify my appointments to the State Board, that you may be put to work next year in the positions you have been recommended for by your Superintendent regardless of the board majority's actions.

I deeply regret that the board majority has taken the course of action which has led to this uncertainty. You may rest assured that this situation is not my fault nor of my making. John Stumbo and Bill Blair voted to employ you at the regular June meeting and they are just as concerned about the matter as you or I. We shall continue to fight the battle for the best schools possible for the children regardless of any and all pressures.

We wish you a pleasant and profitable summer.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES CLARK, Superintendent

The Governor Cracks Down

The gamblers, bootleggers, pimps and madams of Newport and Campbell county do not own Kentucky and the Governor's office, after all!

Governor Bert Combs last week dispelled the deep-seated and not unfounded suspicion that the vice lords of that Northern Kentucky area were sacrosanct. He cracked down by ordering oyster hearings for four officials of the vice-ridden city and county.

Much of the credit for the action taken by the Governor rightly belongs to the Newport Ministerial Association which has fought a long and often dishearteningly losing war with crime there. But without a Governor who is willing to lend an ear to citizens of the higher type and who is unwilling to close his eyes to the activities of the underworld, all their efforts would have gone for naught, as had been the case during previous state administrations. And so it is that those who do not subscribe to the theory that money and political power and might make right must, in the final analysis, give the Governor the credit for whatever good that may come out of the situation, even as his predecessors must share the blame for the rotten mess that was permitted to accumulate there.

The Times hails Bert Combs' action. It will hail the day, too, when the state's highest authority steps in at other points where local government makes abject surrender, or crawls in the bed with, the forces of outlawry. The Times is aware of the fact that no Governor should want to usurp the rights and the authority of local government or to remove, willynilly, city or county officials named by the local electorate; yet this newspaper is as keenly aware of another truth, and that is that too often local government fails to be government, and city and county officials disgrace the very people who honored them. So thinking, we urge the Governor to keep an eye on other trouble-spots around the Commonwealth and to give deepest consideration to the pleas of good, law-abiding citizens when they complain that they must have help outside their own city or county.

Now that he has taken his stand, we trust Governor Combs will literally "shoot the works"—that is to say, make the fight so hot on the Northern Kentucky underworld that they will be driven out, leaving behind to face disgrace only those who are found guilty of having connived with them.

There are political overtones to the situation, true. If the vice-lords and their underlings remain in Newport and Campbell county, they will wage war as only they know how to wage it against the Governor and all others who have opposed them. Which is another good and sufficient reason for smoking out the whole gang of rats.

Campaign Promotes Hire Of State's Unemployed;

Frankfort, Ky., June 12 (Spl.)—Kentucky, by proclamation of Gov. Bert Combs, is participating in a nationwide campaign to reduce the number of the unemployed.

Noting that Kentucky has about 126,000 unemployed, Combs called on businessmen "to cooperate in this campaign by listing all possible job needs with the nearest State Employment Service office and by hiring the people they need now."

The campaign is being conducted in Kentucky by the Department of Economic Security's Employment Service through its 25 local job placement offices. The nationwide drive was initiated through the U. S. Employment Service by Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg.

Slogan of the drive is: "When they work, you profit. Hire now!"

NURSERY PLOT WEED CONTROL

Lexington, Ky.—Treating nursery stock at a commercial nursery with weed control chemicals reduced weeding labor costs considerably. That's the report of J. W. Herron, University of Kentucky Experiment Station weed control specialist. He says the treated plots used 42 percent less labor when crews went in for hand-weeding in the spring.

COCCIDIOSIS CONTROL

Lexington, Ky.—Control of Coccidiosis, a parasitic disease of poultry which costs raisers $50 million annually, may be in the offing. Two USDA research parasitologists recently were able to induce hatching of the coccidial cysts in the laboratory by treating them with enzyme and bile.

Other violations alleged include these:

There were 112 absentees counted for Hale who were in the county on election day; 112 did not vote their absentee ballots but gave the ballots to other persons who voted them for Hale; such fraud and bribery existed in Magisterial District 2 that it is impossible to determine how many legal absentee votes were cast, if any, for either candidate; 13 absentee ballots were cast for Hale, then mailed to an unknown person who in turn mailed them to the County Clerk; 22 persons applied for absentee ballots and voted for contestee without any reasonable expectation of being absent from the county; 47 made applications for ballots and voted them for Hale without any reasonable business or duty requiring them to be absent from the county; 41 voted for contestee in such a way that the official taking the acknowledgement knew how they voted; 77 voted by absentee ballot for contestee who were in the county, and 11 voted who had not resided in the county six months prior to the election.

It also was alleged that in Middle Creek precinct 43 persons voted for Hale after the 5 p.m. deadline for closing of the polls; that 29 voted in Rough and Tough and 25 in Jim Banks precinct after closing time. The suit claimed fraud and bribery in all three precincts were such that it is impossible to determine how many legal votes were cast and asked that the entire vote in all three should be thrown out.

DEWEY HUNT SEASON SET

invited to attend and participate in the Safety Day activities.

Ambrose H. Mandt, commissioner of the Department of Mines and Minerals, and J. S. Malesky, district supervisor of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, Norton, Virginia, will serve as chief judges. Other officials and inspectors of these organizations will judge the work of the teams during the contest.

Among those invited to take part in the proceedings are: Charles Ferguson, safety director, U.M.W. of A. and George Trevorrow, safety director, Bituminous Coal Operators Association, both of Washington, D. C.; C. E. Beane, president, District 30, U.M.W. of A.; J. M. Thornberry, president, Local Union No. 5099; Joseph H. Lyons, secretary, and Arlie Webb, safety director, Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Operators Association; George Parry, district supervisor, and Tom Mark, engineer, U. S. Bureau of Mines, Barboursville, Ky.; Robert Dickson, safety director, Kentucky River Mining Institute, Hazard; Willard Stanley, district inspector, Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals; V. W. Buys, Mine Safety Appliance Company, St. Louis.

The Safety Day program is designed to promote safety and the prevention of mine accidents. The members of the competing teams have been undergoing intensive training during the past few weeks in preparation for the contest, and it is expected that the competition for championship honors will be keen. Inland employees, their families, and the general public are cordially invited to attend.

The ceremonies will include a presentation of watches to 14 employees for 25 years' continuous service with Inland Steel Company. The Joseph A. Holmes Safety Association will also present certificates of honor to three employees for outstanding safety performances.

Arrangements have been made to hold the event in the Wheelwright high school gymnasium in case of rain or threatening weather.

DEWEY HUNT SEASON SET

Quail Hunting Permitted For First Time In Area; Deer Season To Conform

The Dewey Lake game refuge will be opened to quail hunting this season for the first time, the Fish & Wildlife Resources Commission announced this week.

Hunting for deer and squirrel in season will be continued there this year, as before.

The squirrel season in the refuge will open August 26 and continue through September 4, while the quail season will begin November 16 and continue through November 26. The deer season there will conform with the statewide season, opening November 8 and continuing through November 11.

A split season on squirrels with different hunting dates in the Eastern and Western sections of the state was again decreed by the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission at a meeting held June 10 in connection with the League of Kentucky Sportsmen's convention at Owensboro.

The state is divided, as it was last year, with the first season in the eastern section opening on August 26 and ending on October 31, and with a second season opening on November 16 and continuing through December 8. For the western part of the state the first season will open on August 15 and continue through October 31 with a second season opening on November 16 and continuing through November 27. Counties in the eastern tier are: Lewis, Rowan, Menifee, Powell, Estill, Jackson, Rockcastle, Pulaski and Wayne and all counties lying eastward. The remainder of the state is designated as the western section.

Four new counties were opened to deer hunting by the Commission, bringing to 41 the number in which deer may now be hunted. Opened for the first time were Owsley, Wolfe, Menifee and Bath. In three counties which were open last year, Breathitt, Perry and Knott, the season was reduced to two days—November 10 and 11. For all other open counties there will be a four-day season opening on November 8 and continuing through November 11. The archery season for all these counties opens on October 1 and continues through October 31. Deer of either sex may be harvested by both the archery and gun hunters during their designated seasons.

The deer season also was set to conform with the statewide season on the following wildlife refuges and management areas: Dewey Lake, Bernheim Forest, Pine Mountain, and the Ford Area.

A squirrel season opening on August 15 and continuing through October 15, and a dove season opening according to federal regulation and closing on October 15 for the Ballard county and Zellner Peal Management Area also were announced.

The legal take season for furbearers opens on November 16 and continues through January 14. A shake-out season for raccoon and opossum will open on October 17 and continue through November 15, while a training season, during which no coons or opossums may be taken, will open on September 1 and continue through October 16 and re-open January 16 through February 28. The grouse season will open on December 1 and continue through January 29.

The season on quail and rabbits was decreed at a previous meeting of the Commission, with the season opening on November 16 and continuing through January 14.

The Commission agreed to set a dove season to conform with federal regulations. The length of the season has not yet been set by federal officials, but it is anticipated that for Kentucky it will open on September 7 and continue through October 30. The second season will open on November 6, if additional days are granted by federal officials.

Former Johns Creek Man Dies At Salineville, O.;

Lacy Durbett, 74, of Salineville, Ohio, but formerly of Buffalo Creek, this county, died June 7 following a long illness. A former farmer and timberman of the area, he moved from this county several years ago.

His wife, Euka Blackburn Durbett, preceded him in death. The body was returned to this county to the home of his brother-in-law, Ambrose Roop, of Tram.

Funeral services were conducted Friday, at 1 p.m., from the Roop residence and burial was made in the Boldman cemetery under the direction of Baker Funeral Home.

TO PRESENT SHOW

The Prestonsburg high school athletic department will present a western-style horse show on the football field at 2 p.m., Sunday. Several prizes and ribbons will be awarded to the various contestants by the Ashland Cherokee Horse Club.

Floyd countians wishing to enter may contact the Cherokee Horse Club in Ashland. Joe Burke, local businessman, is the envy of every golfer in the area after firing a hole-in-one on the Paintsville Country Club Course. The agile Burke, using a First Flight ball and club (a 3-iron), hit a perfect shot on No. 6 for a 208-yard hole-in-one, the feat of a lifetime. Witnesses were Bill A. Spradlin, his partner, and Dr. James Archer, Paintsville.

Little League baseball opened its 1961 season on the local athletic field, Monday night. Play in the Floyd county Babe Ruth baseball league begins tonight (Thursday). Construction work has begun on the new Prestonsburg high school athletic field. It is expected to be completed by the first game with Loyall high, September 1. Carl Ray Fraley, Wayland automobile dealer, won the 20th annual Harlan Invitational golf tournament recently with a score of 206 over the 54 holes, par 204. He bested Linville Cain, of Hazard, by one stroke after Cain took

For the Floyd county population as a whole, incomes were at a high level in 1960. Local residents had, in the aggregate, a total of $38,672,000 available to them for discretionary spending, after payment of all income taxes.

In terms of the individual family locally, this was at the rate of $4,345 per household, an average derived by dividing income by number of households. The 1959 rate was $4,127.

With that much buying power in their hands, the stage was all set for a big increase in consumer spending. As it turned out, the gains were selective—registered by some lines and not by others—as the recession intervered and all-people's buying plans.

Many would-be purchasers put off their spending, especially for the big-ticket durable items, such as automobiles and furniture, to a later date. Most of the gains that were made were in food, clothing and other non-durables, as well as in the service businesses.

Overall, the results were good. Floyd county's retail stores had sales in the year amounting to $20,264,000.

The survey shows, for each community, just how much money was spent in its retail stores as compared with the amount that its residents could have spent. It does this through a "buying power index," a weighted figure that takes account of population, income and sales.

Floyd county is listed with an index of .0127, indicating that it is capable of producing that percentage of the nation's total retail business.

Since less than that was attained last year, .0092 percent, the conclusion is that the full buying potential has not yet been reached.

SO WE SAY . . .
Some of us use up a good deal of lung-power declaring how thankful we are to God for all our blessings but we merely give tongue, seldom if ever do anything to show our gratitude. We're, most of the time, a bunch of overgrown babies. Babies, you know, learn to cry for things long before they're able to express thanks for them.

MAKE MINE GOLD!
Mrs. Elizabeth Rusel Smith, treasurer of these United States, has come up with an idea to spend more money on money. She has proposed currency in colors: the $1 bill would still be a greenback, but those of higher denomination would be in different colors. Says the object would be easier identification . . . Somehow, I am not in a mood to swoon over this idea. My eyesight isn't what it used to be, but if the time ever comes when I can't spot a Fifty at a hundred paces, I'll quit.

EX-COLONEL FLOWERS
Well, this gal April Flowers has done her bit for good, ol' Kaintucky, after all. By getting a Kentucky Colonelcy and letting the press know that she is a member of the "ancient and honorable" order, she helped us all realize just how ridiculous "honors" can become when they become so commonplace that any Tom, Dick, Harry or floozie can be honored as much as the most revered citizen. There are literally thousands of Kentucky Colonels. Most of them are worthy people, but you'll probably find some of the Kunt's in the pokey. Which points up the fact that the good, old Kaintucky custom should be shelved or there should be more discretion used in showering these blessings around the Commonwealth.

Now that April has had her commission and lost it more quickly than she ever shed her skirt, I confess that I got one of these things, once upon a time when the Majority Leader caught both the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor out of the state.

qualified for the office of Sheriff." The statement also claimed that on at least one other occasion the regular judge had failed to give him a fair and impartial trial. He pointed out the case of the Lick Fork Coal Company against him, stating that "the judge of this court came to this affiant's home and discussed this case and told this affiant that he had decided said case wrongfully with the intention of keeping down trouble, indicating that this affiant was of quick temper and capable of doing physical violence."

The second affidavit filed by Hale in support of his motion was heard Tuesday afternoon. In this it was set out that J. Ervin Sanders, one of Hale's attorneys in the contest action filed by David B. Leslie, had withdrawn from the case and that Burnis Martin had been employed as of last Saturday to assist Paul E. Hayes as Hale's counsel in Sanders' stead. With Martin an attorney representing Hale, it was contended, Judge Hill could not give Hale a fair trial because of the "great and bitter animosity between affiant's counsel and the presiding judge." Both men were credited with making disparaging remarks about the other during the election campaign in which they were opponents for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge.

PERKINS ASKS NEW AID LAW

Youth Employment Plans Embodied In Legislation; Introduced Last Week

Congressman Carl D. Perkins sponsored the Administration's "Youth Employment Opportunities Act" upon its introduction last Wednesday in the House of Representatives.

Perkins is chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor Management Relations of the House Committee on Education and Labor. He said that hearings on the bill will begin immediately and that Secretary of Labor Goldberg has been scheduled to be the first witness in behalf of the program.

In introducing the legislation, Perkins said that the gathering mass of unemployed and frustrated youth throughout the nation is one of the most explosive problems facing our nation today. He pointed out that, "of the 5 million unemployed, almost one-third are under age 22 and nearly half of these have not held jobs since leaving school." Mr. Perkins indicated that the situation would be further aggravated by the flood of students expected to enter the labor market in June and July of this year. Secretary of Labor Goldberg has estimated that five million students will be seeking employment this summer.

"This is the first time," Perkins said, "that the Youth Conservation Corps has been supported by the White House." Long an advocate of programs to provide employment and more creative opportunities for our youth, the sponsor praised the Administration for recommending the program.

The legislation, to be called the "Youth Employment Opportunities Act of 1961," will provide programs for the training and education of young men between the ages of 16 and 22, in addition to establishing a "Youth Conservation Corps." The act, Perkins said, would also provide for financial grants and training assistance to state and local governments for the employment of young men on publicly administered or publicly owned projects or facilities.

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) introduced the bill in the Senate.

Said Judge Hill: "I don't believe the Clerk or any deputy is subject to indictment unless they conspired to get ballots out."

He referred to the report that one deputy clerk acknowledged a number of absentee-voter applications. "If you find he was appointed only a few days before the time to do this, then you have something to go on," the judge advised.

Commonwealth's Attorney Hollie Conley told the court he had spent considerable time searching for statutes governing certain irregularities and that he had enlisted the help of other attorneys here. Then he asked Judge Hill about the penalty for an attempt to buy a vote and also the law governing a deputy clerk who signs an application for an absentee ballot without himself seeing the applicant sign.

The search for the law governing such cases continues, with Judge Hill joining it. Then the question was asked, "Should a sick person who is in the county and votes by absentee ballot be indicted?"

Hill replied, "I don't think we should indict on a technical point of law when there is no intent to violate the law." He told of the case of a man who has heart disease, confined to his home, and who telephoned him he had voted and mailed to the County Clerk his absentee ballot. He wanted to know about the law. "I told him to go ahead and vote. I am, technically, guilty of encouraging that man to violate the law. But in his case and others there was no intent to violate the law. . . I know, 'ignorance of the law is no excuse,' but we ought to be reasonable."

The sixth day of the jury's probe into the election ended Wednesday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Hollie Conley issued a public invitation: "If anybody knows anything that is legal evidence, that is what this grand jury wants, and we more than welcome them."

Approximately 75 persons have been quizzed by the jury, which is headed by Chester Patton, of Allen. It admittedly has been a tough job. Some witnesses are difficult to find, and attachments have been issued for several after they had failed to answer summons.

DISTANT PASTURES GREENEST, KENTUCKIANS TELL TOURISTS

Most people are convinced of the truth of the saying, "Distant pastures are greenest," but not so many are aware that a great number of people are unable to see the "pasture" which lies just across the way.

Not long ago a speaker here told of going to Pineville, Ky., with his wife and of pulling into a certain place of business to inquire about a good place to eat. He reported that he was told he would have to drive to another town, several miles away, to find a good restaurant.

"My wife and I plan to spend the night here; could you tell us if there is a good show to see?"

"No good movies here—you'll have to drive to ————"

"But," said the visitor, "what about 'The Book of Job' that's showing here?"

"Oh, that!" remarked the other in belittling tones. "Yeah, it's running, but it's a religious show—you wouldn't want to see that."

A week earlier, I had asked a restaurant cashier in Hopkinsville about Kentucky Lake, one of the largest man-made bodies of water in the world, and only 35 miles away from Hopkinsville. She thought it attracted a lot of visitors, but she never had been there, since she works late and goes to a lake in Michigan on her vacation. She had no idea of prices, how many parks there are on the lake or the type facilities available.

It has been said that the tourist dollar knows no home—that it passes through more hands than any other spent in a community. Nevertheless, many people, including businessmen, do not understand this. The manager of an automobile-accessory business in Lexington recently told me that he doesn't realize a penny from tourists, even though at that very time one of his workers was fitting a new tire on an automobile with Ohio license plates.

The Battle of Mill Springs, January 19, 1862, was fought only nine days after Col. James A. Garfield smashed Confederate Gen. Humphrey Marshall at the Battle of Middle Creek, near Prestonsburg. The battle was fought five miles west of Somerset, Ky., and the site was a key Confederate location on the Southern defense line extending from Cumberland Gap to Columbus, Ky.

Gen. Felix Zollicoffer, Confederate leader of 8,000 troops, was killed at Mill Springs. The Unionists were commanded by Gen. George H. Thomas. The battle, a Union victory, resulted from the early struggle of both sides to control Eastern Kentucky and the approaches to East Tennessee and Southwest Virginia.

LETTERS

TO THE EDITOR

SUGGESTS CANDIDATES PAY TO CLEAN UP THE MESS

EDITOR, The Times:

We are all aware of the law which has been passed enforcing a $300 fine on persons who litter our highways. This is a good law and should help to keep our state clean, but we are overlooking the conditions that exist in some of our school buildings and grounds on election day. This condition, which confronted the teachers and students of the Clear Creek school on Wednesday morning was almost indescribable. There were whiskey bottles, beer cans, cigarette butts, tobacco juice on the floor and walls and literally pounds of campaign literature in the building and on the grounds.

The P.-T.A. members of the Clear Creek school are very much concerned with this condition, because we have worked hard and take personal pride in the condition of our little three-room school building. We not only lost a day of school on election day, but also another half day was lost in cleaning up this mess in and around the building the next morning. A shovel had to be used to clean the litter out of the hall and porch. The hall walls had to be partially scrubbed to clean off the tobacco juice, footmarks and pencil marks. The rest-rooms were in a terrible condition and the toilets stopped up.

We, as a P.-T.A. group, have contacted the representative of the 97th District and asked him to introduce a bill in the next General Assembly, requiring every candidate who registers to pay $1.00 to each precinct in the county, in addition to their regular $1.00 registration fee, which in our county would be $35.00 since there are 34 precincts. This money would be put in the school treasury and used to clean up, repaint and repair the damage done to the building. This extra fee might also help to eliminate some of the unqualified and insincere people who register for the sole purpose of the publicity and of being "bought off" by their opponents.

The opinion was expressed on election day that the candidates should be responsible for the clean-up of the building and grounds. Some of the friends of the candidates agreed and contributed $1.00 each on behalf of eight candidates. This $8.00 was put in the treasury and will be used to paint the walls. We are also wondering if there is some way of having all the campaign posters removed from the utility poles, fence posts, trees, etc., along the highways after the elections are over. Should these people who have posted them also be responsible for removing them? Does this come under the law of littering the highways?

CURTIS WALLEN, President
Clear Creek School P.-T.A.

Bagworms are beginning to show on some plants; they should be controlled immediately or they will eat all the foliage off the plant, never leave them on the ground, pick them off and burn them; control is to spray the plants with as the eggs will hatch. Another strong insect-killer.

Gov. Bert Combs (left) and Paul Hornung, professional football player for the Green Bay Packers, receive their polio shots from Mrs. Louise Bonfield, Bracken County nurse, in the Governor's office. Hornung, a native of Louisville, got his yearly booster shot while the Governor waited for the second of a three-shot series. Mrs. Bonfield volunteered to come to Frankfort and give the Governor's polio shots after a recent Kentucky Health Association meeting, when she discovered he had not taken them. The Governor received his first shot from Mrs. Bonfield three weeks ago. He pointed out that polio shows no respect for age or physical health, and urged all Kentuckians to see their family doctor immediately for their polio shots.

ROAD BUILDING PROBLEMS FACING STATE, WARD SAYS

Problems facing Kentucky's future in highway building were outlined last week by Highway Commissioner Henry Ward in urging the Kentucky Better Roads Council "to stay in business."

Mr. Ward's statement was made at a meeting of the executive committee of the council in the Commissioner's office. The committee voted to continue as a civic agency concerned with highway affairs.

The council president, J. Stephen Watkins, has announced that a meeting of directors will be held to consider a plan of operation and to name officers. The organization came into being in 1956 to help promote the first $100 million bond issue needed to match funds provided by an accelerated Federal road construction program. It was re-activated in 1960 to distribute information regarding the need for additional funds for the same purpose.

"Without bond money, Kentucky's major highway program would be seriously curtailed," Mr. Watkins said. "Now, under the impact of other major problems and at the specific request of the Commissioner of Highways, it is felt that the Council has more work to do."

"There is a desperate need for public understanding of the road program and its problems," Commissioner Ward said at the conference. "Information should be disseminated by informed people outside the department itself. We are running into many major road blocks, some of which an informed public could help remove. Serious enough for present consideration are such items as more general knowledge of the provisions in our next budget. At least $10 million must be set up for debt service; approximately $8 million goes to agencies outside the department of highways and more than $30 million must be set aside for the growing maintenance load. Without bond money for new construction we would be facing serious setbacks."

Francis Thanks Voters

I have two purposes for making this statement.

First, I want to thank each voter who supported me in the recent campaign for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff. I shall not forget the kindness and courtesy extended to me in this, my first venture into politics.

Then, too, I would extend to the winner my heartfelt congratulations. I entertain no ill-feelings, and I hope that whatever of ill-will others may have as a result of this election will soon be forgotten.

Sincerely,
TRULY FRANCIS

FOOD STAMPS USE BARRED IN BUYING FOREIGN ITEMS

"There are some things in the retail stores that you cannot buy with food stamp coupons," Carl R. Horn, supervisor of the Floyd County Food Stamp Issuance office, said this week. He named tobacco, alcoholic beverages, pet foods, soap, paper products, household supplies or equipment.

"The coupon also cannot be used to buy coffee, tea, cocoa, fresh bananas, or any item where the package shows it came from a foreign country," Horn added.

Horn's comments were made in a mimeographed message to participating families. The booklet was being distributed this week. Horn points out in the booklet the tremendous agricultural production of the United States and that the purpose of the food-stamp program is to enable recipients to provide a better diet for their families.

"A new method of providing additional food assistance to families in need is being tried," Horn said. "Under the new method, the food-stamp program, you will be able to purchase additional food at your retail store. In this way everyone is expected to benefit. Your decision to participate in the program means your family will eat better and have better health. The farmer will be able to sell more food. The community will be helped by the added food buying power being made available to you and other eligible families."

The supervisor's message gave direction to the participating families on the use of the stamps, how change is to be made and what to do if the stamp book is lost.

"Treat your food coupons like food dollars for that is what they are," he concluded.

SHEEPHERDER WINS FAME

Frank O. Robertson, Western Writer, Publishes "A Ram in the Thicket"

How a half educated Idaho sheepherder drove himself to become one of the country's best known western writers is told in Frank O. Robertson's candid autobiography, "A Ram in the Thicket," condensed in the June Reader's Digest.

Robertson, who now lives in Springville, Utah, is the author of hundreds of magazine articles and books. In his story he relates the fascinating experiences of his tough-fibered family in its long battle against hard luck and hard times. "A few years earlier people would have called us pioneers, but by my time we were simply wagon tramps," the Moscow, Ida. born writer says.

Life in the mountain west of that time was a tough proposition, beset by natural disaster, man-made panics and violence in many forms. To this land in the 1880's came Robertson's erratic father and his new prairie school teacher wife. But for them the promised opportunities of the west never developed and their three boys, Chauncey, Obe and Frank grew up in poverty. Robertson's parents joined the Mormon Church after an all night scriptural battle between Mother and a visiting church authority. So highly was Mother regarded by the community that half its residents followed her into the new faith.

Five years after he started writing, Robertson was listed in "Who's Who in America." "With considerable pride I showed the impressive volume to Mother. She glanced through it, then remarked dryly, 'My, there's lots of other people in it, isn't there?' No one could shrink his hands more deftly."

STRAWBERRY TOUR

Last week Odgen Stewart, Robert Younce and County Agent Robert Jones visited the strawberry processing area of Tennessee. The purpose of the trip was to obtain a better understanding of the strawberry process market, so that we will be better prepared next year, when berries will be processed here in Floyd county.

The first market visited was at Celina, Tennessee. The buyer company has been operating a plant there for several years. Most of the berries come from Clay county, Tennessee, and Monroe county, Kentucky. The farmers delivering berries at the plant seemed very pleased. Several told us they were clearing above picking cost from $600 to $1,000 per acre.

Charlie Vaughn, county agent of Clay county, took the group on a tour of the Pea Ridge area of Clay county. This is a poor section adjoining Dale Hollow Lake. The growers had cleared new ground and were doing very good with berries, they were raising cucumbers, strawberries. In addition to strawberries and peppers. The families told us they didn't know what they would do without strawberries.

The next stop was in Portland, 70 miles East of Celina. Carl Abbott has run a plant there for 14 years. Judging from the attitude of his workers, he is well thought of in the area.

Prices for process berries started off at 14¢ per pound, but dropped to 12¢. The reason for this drop in price, was that Mexico is shipping berries already processed and frozen into the market area, at the price processors were paying the farmers. Those in the strawberry business were concerned over the Mexican berries. There was a move on to see what could be done about protecting our growers, who can't compete with the cheap Mexican laborers.

U. S. EGG GRADES
When you buy eggs at the grocery, you'll notice the shield-shaped "U. S. Grade" mark on most of the egg cartons. For wise buying, you should know what this means to you, according to Mrs. Frances Pitts, county Extension home demonstration agent.

Eggs that are sold under the U. S. Grade shield have been graded carefully by certain standards of quality set up by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The grader puts each egg to a rigid test. Under a candle light, he checks the condition of its white and yolk, size and condition of its egg cell, and soundness and cleanliness of its shell. Color of shell is not considered; this has no effect on egg quality or nutritive value.

Using these standards, the grader decides whether the egg is good enough to be graded and, if so, in which grade—AA, A, B or C—the egg belongs. Usually, the lower the grade, the lower the price. Which grade should you choose to best fill your needs?

Eggs graded "AA" or "A" are of highest quality and are noted for their attractive appearance and delicate flavor. Grade B and Grade C eggs are of lower quality but are just as nutritious as eggs of the higher grades. Grade B and C eggs can be used in cooking, where appearance and fine flavor are not so important, Mrs. Pitts notes.

An "AA" egg must have a clear, firm white and a well-centered yolk that is free of defects. Its air deep and must be practically regular in placement. To receive the "A" grade, an egg must pass almost the same test, although the requirements are not quite so rigid.

The white of a "B" egg must be clear, but may be slightly weak. The yolk may be off-center and slightly flattened and it may have definite but not serious defects. Its air cell must be no more than 3/8 inch deep; it may show some movement. Requirements that an egg must meet for the "C" grade are slightly lower than those for Grade B.

Remember that the main difference between the two higher and the two lower grades are flavor and appearance; eggs in all four grades are good for you, concludes Mrs. Pitts.

THANK YOU

PEGGY AND DAVID HEREFORD

Dear Friends:

I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks to each and every person in Floyd county who supported me in my race for County Court Clerk. It has been over five months since I began my campaign for the office and, as I stated before in this newspaper, the privilege of being able to talk and visit with you has been very rewarding to me and I consider the many friendships and close associations which I have gained to be a lasting victory, even if not at the polls.

I extend my sincere congratulations to Ollie Robinson for the very fine race which he made, and pledge him my support in the general election in November. To each candidate in the County Court Clerk's race I offer my congratulations for the clean race which was conducted.

Peggy and I hope that we will be able to come to see each of you who helped us so freely and give you our personal thanks.

Sincerely,
 DAVID R. HEREFORD

Several Bonus Checks Possible To Claimants Under Law, Lloyd Says

Frankfort, Ky., June 5 (Spl.) — "It's legally possible for one person to receive several Kentucky bonus checks," Adjutant Gen. A. Y. Lloyd, bonus administrator, said today. "A claimant might be the mother of several deceased eligible veterans," he explained. "If none of them happened to have married, she would be entitled to a bonus for each of them. And if she also happened to be the unmarried widow of an eligible veteran she'd qualify for that bonus, too."

So far no more than two claims have been paid to any one person, Lloyd said. Payment began in April.

Lloyd said the letters and phone calls that pour in on the Bonus Division are of every hue, from comedy to tragedy and from gratitude to vented spleen. Occasionally there's a really rough letter from some claimant who feels he's being discriminated against.

"The fact is that practically everybody in the Bonus Division is a veteran. We all work hard to make sure the veteran gets every penny coming to him under the law."

"The law sets $500 as the maximum payment for all service, but several veterans have protested vigorously because they couldn't draw $500 for each war they served in. We even had one man who was worried for fear accepting this bonus check might disqualify him from getting a bonus for the next year. Things to worry about!"

"Our biggest, most frustrating problem," Lloyd said emphatically, "is needless correspondence. Thousands of useless letters have necessitated the same number of fruitless answers and every day brings more."

"Many want to know why they haven't received their bonus while others who filed at the same time have. Invariably it is some unavoidable delay, maybe through correspondence with the veteran himself over some error or omission in his application. Or perhaps his claim required verification at a Federal records center. In any case the delay is held to a minimum. There has not been one single case of a claim being lost or misplaced by us. An inquiry about a slow claim simply adds further delay to the completion of that claim."

A tremendous number of Korean veterans seem not to understand the dates in the bonus law, Lloyd said. These dates are plainly set out in the bonus application:

"Korean Conflict means (1) the period beginning on June 27, 1950, and ending July 25, 1953, and (2) subsequent service until January 31, 1955, if the veteran was qualified for the Korean Medal."

To qualify for the Korean Medal, service in Korea is required. If the veteran did not serve in Korea between those dates he did not get the Korean Medal and Kentucky cannot legally pay him bonus money for that period.

"Veterans can save themselves and the Commonwealth much time and expense by consulting one of the veterans service organizations or Red Cross on bonus problems."

SINGS FOR HIS SUPPER

For years I have threatened to organize a Tommy Tucker Club, in memory of the boy so well known in the nursery rhyme who sang for his supper. This club will be open only to after-dinner speakers. Of the numerous suggestions that I have received about the club-to-be, the best one, and the only one on which we prospective members agree, is that all speaking at dinners is done "before" the dinner and not after. That will enable the speaker to eat peacefully after his talk is over and not swallow a few bites of something that he never tastes, in order to face the crowd and look pleasant. I sometimes wish I could see the good food that I have thus gobbled; on a more leisurely schedule, those steaks and salads and vegetables and desserts could be eaten in a more appreciative way. But the show had to go on, and on many occasions I have been the show. Singing for one's supper is a serious business; a speaker just must say enough to justify the price of his plate.

Recently it occurred to me that maybe some of our best talkers at Fidelity were unconscious members of the Tommy Tucker Club. Certainly they had to do something to justify themselves as guests, and very hungry ones, too. Most of those who ate at our house would never have to set a square meal for any of us except Father, who might have to eat while he was in a home doctoring somebody. Now, even the merest sponge must have felt that he should do something to pay his hostess and the family for his big meal. All our older visitors or chance callers who ate at our table had been connected with pioneering or with the Civil War; that gave them a perennial topic of conversation, and we children saw to it that we got all the yarns possible while the big meal was in preparation, or in the long afternoon while we were calming down after the desperate struggle to get enough to eat. I am referring to the feeling of the boys, who had to wait until the second or third or fourth table, depending on the size of the crowd. The Civil War, reviewed by some bearded old gentleman in the yard under the trees on Sunday afternoon, seemed a very fascinating picnic that these older boys had, way back before our time. It was too bad that it was necessary occasionally in that war to shoot up a few fellows to show that it was not really a picnic. Not many of our visitors had any obvious bitterness about it all; even the word Darnyankee was unknown at Fidelity. Mother, who had three Confederate soldier brothers, and Father, who had one, always said Yankee and Rebel, with no ugly suggestions attached to either word. Some of our visitors could sing; in that way they could have all sorts of music, indoors or out. But Sunday was Sunday at our Presbyterian house. With no organ or piano, we just reached out into space and grabbed a tune and sang long and loud. Everybody knew "all twelve verses" of church songs, both the more ancient hymns and the somewhat faster and more modern ones of later songbooks. Guest and host and everybody joined in on these free-for-all sings.

An occasional guest brought some trifle that he had made or had acquired and gave it to the children or the family in general: a small split basket in which we could gather and store eggs, a gourd for a long-handled dipper or a smaller one to dance on the floor, a hickory-bark whip for a small boy, or maybe a whistle made from hickory or willow. One hired man from a neighboring farm was a good whittler and loved to give the women where he would often eat a butter paddle of his own make or a potato-masher, laboriously whittled out of solid hickory. But nobody expected anything for the endless free meals that everybody around us served. To have offered pay would have been an insult; we weren't running a hotel; that necessary institution was in the village and was famous for its country ham and chicken dinners. So it must have seemed just natural to offer, like Little Tommy Tucker, a song or a yarn as a sort of exchange for a good square meal, cooked by the women of the family and attributed to the head of the house as a good provider.

Hale Thanks Voters

In deep humility I sincerely appreciate the high honor the voters have bestowed upon me in nominating me as Sheriff on the Democratic ticket. My wife, Penny, and I worked hard in this campaign, but the real credit for victory should go to the thousands of loyal Democratic workers who supported us.

I assure you that I had absolutely no connection with, or knowledge of, any irregularities, if indeed there were any relating to absentee voting.

I will realize the time, effort and hard work which a candidate puts into a campaign. Having myself lost a campaign eight years ago, I well know the disappointment of losing.

Let us now join together and work toward a great Democratic victory at the November election. Your grateful friend, HENRY C. HALE

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky
By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week, mail from the Confederate States had begun to arrive in Kentucky, the Confederacy having established its own postal system by an act of its Congress which went into effect June 1. Since Kentucky was still being served by the U. S. Post Office, that posed a question as to how mail originating in the South should be handled after it had crossed the border from Tennessee into Kentucky.

A first-class letter from any point in Confederate States territory showed that postage of five cents had been prepaid, but of course the five cents had gone to the Confederate States government and the U. S. Post Office, in the absence of a reciprocal agreement such as might have been reached with a friendly power, would not complete, free, the delivery of a letter on which the postal fee had been paid to the enemy government only.

The postmaster at Louisville announced that he had received a ruling from Washington that such letters should be delivered on a postage-due basis. The U. S. postal fee on a first-class letter was three cents. Thus a letter from someone in the Confederacy to someone in neutral Kentucky (or in any other state being served by the U. S. Post Office) cost the sender five cents and the receiver three cents. On the other hand, mail deposited in a U. S. post office or letter box, addressed to places in the seceded states and with U. S. postage prepaid, would not be taken to the border and turned over to the Confederate postal system for delivery, the Washington ruling said. Such letters were to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office.

The Louisville Journal, which said it had thousands of subscribers in the seceded states, announced that it would send their papers to Nashville "by private hand" and post them at the Confederate post-office there, if the postmaster would accept them and dispatch them to the various points in the Confederate postal system to which they were addressed. The border between neutral Kentucky and Confederate Tennessee was still open to civilians. If for any reason the proposed system broke down, the newspaper would keep a record of the unexpired subscriptions and hope thereafter to make good the time due each subscriber.

"And now," said the Journal, a staunch Union supporter in its editorial columns, "we hardly need say that, if we must part with our Southern friends, we do so with deep reluctance and pain." Members of the Louisville Battery, a Kentucky State Guard unit, voted to disband, declaring that they were "strictly Union men," whereas the officers of the State Guard battalion to which they were attached were "imbued with secessionist proclivities."

HOW TOADS AND FROGS SHED THEIR SKINS

Very few persons have ever seen a toad shed its skin, as they seem to do this quickly and in much privacy. A toad, or a frog, will shed the skin and then roll it up in a ball and eat it. Most all amphibians shed their skins about once each month and they swallow the shed skin.

When a toad makes ready to molt, it humps up in the back, the skin split down the middle and crosswise, and then the toad crawls out of the skin, which it rolls up into a ball and swallows, with much blinking of the eyes, as if it enjoyed the tasty tidbit.

Snakes go blind for a spell, when they are making ready to shed their skins, and we have a saying, "Snakes are blind during dog days," which is no doubt a time when they shed. Snakes molt the outer covering of the eyes along with the skin. Often you may find a rattler's skin, which seems almost a thing alive, with its glistening eyes shining in the skin as if very real.

Snakes turn their skins inside out as they shed them. The skin around the mouth is first loosened, and then it is pushed back over the head. The snake will then crawl through brushy places, or across rocks and chunks, to hasten the removal of the skin. Snakes shed from two to five times each year. The shed skin can be stretched out and is about a foot longer than the snake from which it came.

Hair and feathers on animals are really a part of the skin, and these are shed at intervals. Dogs usually shed their hair a little at the time, and all during the year. Fur-bearing animals shed their heavy coat of fur in the spring and grow a new coat in the fall. The wild birds shed their feathers slowly during the late summer, and are always able to fly even while molting. But ducks and wild geese shed all their feathers at once, and cannot fly until they grow a new set of feathers.

The insects, the spiders, and even the crayfish all shed their outer skins for new and larger ones.

Humans are continually shedding their skins, too—small pieces at a time. Some of our shed skin is blown away in the air; most of it is washed off when we bathe. The skin grows fast, especially in the young, and it is continually shedding, to make way for new skin.

Rattlers shed, the same as other snakes, except they do not shed their rattlers. The number of rattlers indicates the number of molts and not the age, as is popularly supposed.

Lizards also shed their skins, usually in small bits, starting with a split down the back. The "glass snake" sheds its skin all in one piece, as snakes do, but it does not turn the skin inside out, as do other snakes. The glass snake is really a lizard, not a snake.

The painted turtles shed the outer layer of the shields on their shells, leaving the vivid colors of the shell showing new and shiny. In the snapper turtle, new layers are added to the underside of these shields each year as the shell grows larger. Thus rings are formed.

10. THE CHANCE TO BUILD A BETTER COMMUNITY BY PUTTING YOUR DOLLARS TO WORK HERE

We don't believe you gain anything at all by driving long distances to shop at BIG CITY stores. Our local sources have merchandise that's just as good and costs no more.

But merely for the sake of argument, suppose you do save a few dollars on a time-consuming trip many miles from home. And suppose you don't even count the cost of gasoline and oil, car wear, parking fees, etc. Forget, too, if you like, the hazards of driving in today's heavy highway and city traffic.

But don't overlook these things: What you buy here can be in your home in a few minutes—no waiting several days for delivery. And if the merchandise doesn't give full satisfaction, any needed service or adjustment of the purchase can be made without shipping the items back to the BIG CITY or being forced to make a second trip yourself.

Why drive scores of miles looking for trouble? Shop right around the corner and be safe and satisfied.

Most unusual feature of construction of Kentucky Power Company's Big Sandy Plant near Louisa is the cooling tower now taking shape. It is the first of its kind in the western Hemisphere. The electric crane that moves on its own circular track is shown lifting concrete. Starting with a thickness of 18 inches at the top of the columns, the concrete will taper to a thickness of 5 inches at a height of 27 feet above the top of the columns. The Marley Company, of Kansas City, is contractor for the reinforced concrete tower that will rise 320 feet above ground. With a diameter of 245 feet at the base, the tower will taper to 140 feet at the top. The 72 supporting columns will allow air to pass into the natural-draft tower to cool the water for the power plant's condenser. Construction of the $39-million power plant started in August 1960. Upon completion in late 1962, the 265,000-kilowatt Big Sandy Plant will use about 750,000 tons of coal each year from Eastern Kentucky mines.

BROAD MED CARE PROGRAM IN EFFECT, POWELL SAYS

Frankfort, June 1—Broader regulations for the state's medical care program went into effect today, Commissioner of Economic Security Earle V. Powell announced.

The changes, recommended to Powell by Governor Combs' Advisory Council on Medical Assistance, will mean more services to the needy recipients and more liberal conditions for druggists, doctors, dentists, and hospitals participating in the program.

An original restriction limiting care for "acute, emergency and life-endangering" conditions only, has been completely lifted for drugs and physician's services, however drugs will continue to be limited to those on the State Health Department's approved drug list.

Hospital care will continue to be affected by the "acute, emergency and life-endangering" clause, which includes maternity care, and dental care will tend to be limited to treatment of acute infection and relief of pain, Powell said.

"The removal of this conditional restriction will provide the greatest increase in the services recipients can receive from their doctors," Powell said. "We feel that people should see their doctor early in their illness rather than wait until the condition has become severe. Many people are in need of medical care, but their condition may not be diagnosed as 'life-endangering.' I am sure many more recipients will be able to take advantage of the program without this limitation."

Eligibility requirements for persons 65 or older who do not receive public assistance were also liberalized. Single persons may now be approved for aid if their annual gross income is not in excess of $1,200 and their personal property is worth not more than $750. The previous limit was set at $1,000 annual income and $500 for personal property.

Married persons are eligible now with an annual gross income of not more than $1,800 and personal property amounting to not more than $1,000. They were previously limited to an annual gross income of $1,500 and personal property worth not more than $750.

People over 65, not on the state's public assistance rolls, may also receive drugs and dental care under the program's new regulations. They were previously limited to physician and hospital services.

Public assistance recipients—the aged, blind, dependent children, and disabled—have been receiving care under all four categories since the program's inauguration in January.

Another regulation effective today will allow hospitals to receive payment for six days of care, instead of the previous maximum of three days. Records of the medical care program's first five months of operation showed that the average hospital stay for patients treated under the program has been approximately seven days.

Maximum payments to dentists have been doubled under the new regulations. Where payments were previously made up to a maximum of only $8.00 per month per patient up to $24 per year, they have now been raised to a maximum of $16 per month to $48 per year. Powell said this will allow the recipients to receive a great deal more care than they have been getting under the program.

"Most of the new regulations have been put into effect to provide more service and to encourage more participation in the medical care program," Powell said. "In the category for people over 65 not on public assistance, there has been a very slow response. We had estimated 87,000 people would be eligible in this category, but during the first five months of operation fewer than 1,000 applications were made. I believe the new regulations we filed today are liberal enough to bring more of these people into the program and provide them with the medical care they need."

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY AWARDS 1,294 DEGREES

Academic degrees for 1,294 students were awarded Monday morning at the University of Kentucky's 94th commencement ceremonies. The degree candidates included 35 for doctor's degrees, 214 master's or professional degrees, and 945 bachelor's degrees. Seventeen foreign countries, 30 states, and 112 of Kentucky's 120 counties were represented on the list.

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, president of the University, delivered the commencement address and awarded honorary doctor's degrees to Gov. Bert Combs and Dr. Forest Huddleston, professor of micro-biology and public health at Michigan State University.

Hugh Morris, chief of the Louisville Courier-Journal's Frankfort news bureau and a Presbyterian layman, delivered the baccalaureate sermon at 4 p.m., Sunday, in Memorial Coliseum.

Floyd counties who received advanced or professional degrees were: Laura Collins, Prestonsburg, master of arts; Gordon Hopkins, Wheelwright, master of science in mechanical engineering; Raymond Cook, Bypro, master of arts in education.

Those from this county who received bachelor's degrees are: Hugh Cannon, Melvin; Judith Turner, Langley; Robert Bowling and Benine Moore, both of Garrett; Thomas Baldrige, Rose World and Samuel Morris Isbell, all of Prestonsburg; Larry Gibson and Thelma Conway, both of Wheelwright; Robert Centers and Annetta Handshoe, both of Hueysville; Inez Owens, Bozysville; Judith Stewart, Allen; Joyce Triplett, Lackey; and Shirley Vanderpool, McDowell.

Farm Talent Contest Voted At Conference Of Farm, Home Store

Members of the advisory board of the Prestonsburg Farm & Home Store and the farm home advisory committee voted at their annual meeting planning conference held recently to hold a Farm Talent Round-Up Amateur Contest this year as one of the highlights of the local Southern States annual membership meeting to be held on July 21. The meeting will be held at Prestonsburg grade school at 7:30 p.m. (EST).

This contest — which is being sponsored by Southern States Cooperative in cooperation with the Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour television show — offers an opportunity to the winning act at the local meeting to compete for an expense-paid three-day trip to New York, plus a $100 cash award. While in New York, the act will also appear on the Ted Mack show.

The contest is open only to amateurs who are 12 years of age or over on July 17, 1961. They must be members of the immediate families of a farmer or a Southern States patron. Neither professional entertainers, employees of Southern States Cooperative or its retail outlets and members of their families, are eligible for the contest.

Talent acts desiring to enter the contest should contact Mrs. Henry Wright, Bonanza, chairman of the local Talent Round-Up committee or Agency Manager Ogden Stewart. Other members of the Farm Talent Round-Up committee are: Mrs. Joe Arnett and Mrs. J. K. Pitts, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Gladys Conn, of Dana.

All committee members have extra contest entry blanks.

Gov. Combs Proclaims State Foster Care Week; Mrs. Campbell, Worker

Governor Bert Combs has proclaimed the week of June 11-18 as Foster Care Week in Kentucky. During this week, the Kentucky Department of Child Welfare is working toward creating a better understanding of the foster care program in the hope of attracting more couples to foster parenthood.

Foster care provides temporary homes to children who have been deserted, abandoned, neglected or orphaned. These children have generally had little, if any, normal home life. If foster homes are not available then they must be placed in institutions.

In order to meet the growing need for foster homes in every county of the State and to avoid institutional care for many dependent children, the Child Welfare Department estimates an additional 150 approved foster homes are required.

The child welfare worker for Floyd county is Mrs. Irene Campbell.

Kentucky In Top Ten In Highway Building,

Kentucky ranked among the top 10 states of the nation in highway-building activities during the first quarter of 1961, Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward announced today.

In addition, Kentucky placed first among the states in the number of individual contracts executed during that period for projects financed without the use of federal funds, Ward said. In this category, Kentucky had 139 contracts calling for the expenditure of $2,929,000 to improve 172 miles of roads.

On federal-aid construction projects, Kentucky awarded contracts calling for the spending of $16,434,000. That gave Kentucky a total of $19,363,000 in contracts for 214 miles of roads, the commissioner said — placing it tenth among the nation for the period of January, February and March.

These figures were obtained from statistics released by the U. S. Department of Commerce through the Bureau of Public Roads, Ward said.

Interstate Highway System projects took up $13,276,000 of the total spent on federal-aid projects. Of this total, $11,948,000 came from the federal government, under the formula by which the U. S. pays $9 for each $1 put up by the state.

"Kentucky was able to climb into this enviable position among the states by reason of the fact that we were able to match surplus federal funds that had accumulated to our credit by applying receipts from the bond issue approved by the voters last November," Ward said. "We are continuing the award of highway contracts at a rapid rate during the second quarter. When we add the contracts that we are letting for construction of the East Kentucky Turnpike, there is a good chance that we will rise even above tenth place in this period.

"We believe that road-building provides an economic shot-in-the-arm which Kentucky needs," the commissioner continued. "That is why we are seeing to it that any funds which are available to the Department of Highways are put to work."

"We have the needs, the plans and the ability to proceed with projects. What we really need most of all is additional federal funds, for the rate of our spending must be geared to the annual availability of money provided by Congress."

let's shed a little light!

... on rural electricity and rural electric co-ops. First, what are they? They are user-owned electric power cooperatives . . . organized and built by their farmer members. What is their main purpose? To bring electric power to rural communities at a reasonable price. Are co-ops government owned or supported? No. The user-owners borrowed money from the government, at a set interest rate, to build and equip their lines. This money must be repaid within 35 years and every Kentucky co-op is up-to-date on payments.

Are co-ops tax-free? No. Rural Electric Co-ops, singly and collectively, are among the biggest taxpayers in Kentucky and the taxes so collected are used for the benefit of all Kentucky . . . not just farm communities.

And here's another important point: Kentucky's farmers originally built their rural cooperatives for one purpose only . . . to get the electric power they could not buy elsewhere! Out of their cooperation has grown a force powerful enough to keep Kentucky's prosperity growing.
