COUNTY CLEANUP PLAN SLATED TALK SUBJECT

ROUND-TABLE DISCUSSIONS SET AT DRIFT

Landscaping Promoted by Quicksand Speaker; Cooperation Is Asked

A countywide dinner meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 6:30 at the Drift grade school to bring together citizens of the county and representatives of state government to plan a clean-up and beautification program.

State government will be represented by Robert Montgomery, deputy commissioner of the Department of Conservation, Mrs. Quinn, of the same department, and Department of Highways personnel.

In announcing the meeting Mrs. R. V. May, president of the Community Development Council here, said the program will not be one of speeches but instead will take the form of a round-table discussion of problems and ways to solve them.

Prestonsburg's individual clean-up campaign is being coupled with plans for beautification beyond the mere clearing away of debris and other accumulations. R. L. Shepherd, of the Eastern Kentucky Resource Development Project, Quicksand, Kentucky, conferred with about 20 persons at the Regional Library here Monday on landscaping as a beautification move. Mr. Shepherd offered suggestions on landscaping at the library, the high school and the municipal building. He later conferred with private homeowners and met with the directors of the Kiwanis Club that evening.

The clean-up effort here was emphasized last Wednesday by a parade sponsored by the community Methodist Church group.

Mrs. May in a radio talk this week suggested simple ways in which clean-up can be effected. Anybody, she said, can sweep a sidewalk, trim shrubbery and paint garbage cans. She suggested those living on alleys get with their neighbors and concentrate on clean-up.

MISS McCORMICK CROWNED QUEEN OF MUSIC FESTIVAL

Miss Brenda Patton, retiring music festival queen, assists at the coronation of her successor, Queen Patricia Ann McCormick, at the grade school here Saturday.

Patricia Ann McCormick, 17, Prestonsburg high school senior, was named queen of the 28th annual musical festival held here Saturday. The new queen was crowned in front of the grade school building before one of the largest crowds ever to attend the event.

Brenda Patton, retiring queen, placed the crown on Miss McCormick in a late forenoon ceremony. Miss McCormick is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. McCormick, of Allen, and Miss Patton is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Patton, also of Allen.

Recognition was made to several bands for their outstanding performance, it was announced by

This Town-- That World

Sunday is Mother's Day—in case you sons and daughters have forgotten.

Put three words together if you want to draw a guffaw from the blase, know-it-all set, these days. No words in the language claim less respect from some because the insincere, the pseudo-patriotic politician and the eye-rolling hypocrites have used them so loosely. But we still maintain these are good words: "Mother" . . . "Home" . . . "Country."

Haven't seen a boy playing marbles, this spring. It may be so because I haven't got around to the right spot, but time was when boys and marbles were as synonymous of springtime, and as numerous, as robins and dogwood.

It may be that boys, these days, are too busy kicking up the dust to get down in it at marbles, but the fact is, there aren't many places for them to play the game, any more. Baseball, basketball and the more strenuous sports claim youngsters peel off hard-won lawns to provide a ring. The youngsters can't play where an automobile can possibly travel, except at risk of life and limb.

Time was when the yard (not lawn) of most homes had a place for marbles. And if this wasn't available, kids drew a ring in the road and played with never a care. An occasional horse or wagon would come along, but nobody was in a hurry, death did not come rushing down on youngsters amid a screeching of brakes. There weren't even any germs in that dust. If there were, we were immune to 'em.

Times do change. Who would have thought marbles would give way to bowling, ante-over to basketball and shinny to hockey? That sigh you heard is for the good, old days before the airplane had come to stay.

WRIT THREAT ISSUED HERE

Unauthorized Hauling Of Garbage, Complaint; City Ordinance Cited

Complaint was being received this week by Prestonsburg officials that certain Prestonsburg householders and businesses who were refusing to pay the garbage collection fees were utilizing a dump on Abbott Mountain alongside U. S. 23.

A member of the Prestonsburg City Council, in commenting on the complaint of garbage dumping on the mountain, said that the Council was seeking compliance of residents on the requirement to allow only city employees to collect and transport garbage.

He stated that warrants would be procured in the near future for the offenders.

The city ordinance that the Council charges is being violated, reads:

"Section III, Item 2. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to transport garbage or any refuse over the streets and public ways of the City of Prestonsburg, except those authorized by the city officials in charge of garbage and refuse collection."

The ordinance, voted by the Council April 5, provides a $10 to $100 fine for violation and each day is considered a separate offense.

MARTIN HEARS BOMB THREAT

School Is Dismissed After Telephone Call; Investigation Is Made

Floyd county had its first school bomb scare last Thursday when a telephone caller warned James Salisbury, principal of the Martin consolidated school, that the school building would be blasted that morning.

The caller, apparently a teen-age girl, told Mr. Salisbury a bomb had been planted in the school and that it was set to explode at 10 o'clock that morning.

When the pupils arrived at the school that morning a fire drill on the school grounds was ordered to claim their attention but news of the threat spread, and soon parents were arriving at the school to take their children home. A thorough search of the structure was made by officers.

Classes were dismissed for the day but were resumed on Friday. Superintendent of Schools Charles F. Clark said the lost time will have to be made up.

Identity of the caller is still being sought, Mr. Clark said. He is (See Story No. 6, Page 3)

Church Buys Property For Expansion Purpose; Church Growth Is Noted

The First Church of God has purchased the W. E. Jackson property which joins land already owned by the church in the Porter Addition here.

The church plans to remodel the first floor of the Jackson home for use as a parsonage and to utilize the four large rooms on the second floor as a Sunday School Annex.

This additional property will give the church needed room for the rapidly expanding Sunday School classes, and it also increases the footage owned by the church fronting the highway to 165 feet, with parking space for more than 100 cars.

MELVIN MAN GUN VICTIM

Mrs. Little Is Charged In Father-In-Law Death; Bonds Set At $25,000

Mrs. Ruby Little, about 35, of Melvin, is in jail here, with a total of $25,000 in bonds asked for her release on charges of slaying her father-in-law and the wounding of a sister-in-law.

Mrs. Little is accused of firing a blast from a shotgun into the backs of Andy Little, 74, and his daughter, Mrs. Maggie Little Sammons, last Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Little, a former deputy sheriff and onetime town marshal of Weeksbury, died shortly afterward at 3:30 p.m. Mrs. Sammons is at the McDowell Memorial hospital, where she is expected to recover.

Johnny Little, about 45, son of Andy Little and husband of the woman being held for the shooting, was released from jail here Monday under bond of $5,000. He was charged with "assisting to murder."

The shooting, officials said, apparently was an aftermath of several months of "misunderstanding" over a garden plot owned by the elder Little and adjacent to the home of the younger Johnny Little and his wife had begun work clearing the garden for planting, and his father and sister had gone to his home, reportedly to stop this operation.

Testimony heard at the examining trial held here Monday before Trial Commissioner Harold J. Stumbo claimed the father and daughter had walked to within a few feet of the front door of the Johnny Little home, but following an argument, were walking away when Johnny and his wife Ruby turned back into the house. They were from 60 to 75 feet from the house when a revolver shot was (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

SCHOOL BUILDING JOBS AWARDED TO PARTNERS

The Floyd County Board of Education awarded the partnership firm of Astor Meade, Romeyn Dyer and W. R. Kendrick two construction projects in the school system at the Board's regular meeting Saturday evening. The two projects are the construction of four additional classrooms at the Prestonsburg high school and the installation of a sewer lift station and feed lines at Wheelwright high school.

Another contract was awarded to the Diversa Development Corporation, of Prestonsburg, for the labor and materials on the relocation of the lines of the Inland Gas Company on the property of the projected Middle Creek elementary school. Diversa's low bid was $6,250. Meade, Dyer and Kendrick's successful bid on the classroom job was $28,480 and on the Wheelwright project was $28,850.

Other actions of the Board follow:

1. Employed Charles A. Hinch & Co., Cincinnati, as fiscal agents of the Board to handle the bonds necessary for the construction of the Garth Vocational School and the projected 22-room Wheelwright elementary school building.
2. Accepted the resignation of Edith Peters, Allen elementary teacher, and granted leave of ab-

PARK COTTAGE JOB AWARDED

To Vanhose & McGuire; Lodge Completion Seen By Mid-Summer by Akers

The firm of Vanhose & McGuire (Clyde Vanhose and Tom O. McGuire) is low bidder on the construction of 10 vacation cottages at Jenny Wiley State Park. It was learned when bids were opened Tuesday.

The Prestonsburg firm's bid was $106,000. Foundation work on the cottages is already under way at the expense of the Division of Parks. The contractors will do all other work, including plumbing and wiring.

Each of the cottages will have two bedrooms, a living room, bath, dining room-kitchen combination and porch. These, unlike those first constructed near the boat dock, will be single units.

The additional 10 cottages will be constructed along the mountain-side under construction. A road from the lodge to the cottage sites has already been built.

The lodge and all living units under construction by the firm of Akers & Akers are under roof, work is well advanced on the swimming pool for guests, and the entire project is now scheduled for completion by August 15, it was said this week.

AUXIER CHILD AUTO VICTIM

Second Child Injured By Plunging Automobile; Mrs. Clark Suffers Shock

An 11-year-old Auxier child was fatally injured and her younger playmate was slightly hurt late Tuesday afternoon when they were hit by an auto driven by a woman who had never before driven a car.

Dead is Betty Jo Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Glenn Powers. The injured girl is Judy McKenzie, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude McKenzie.

The Powers child died shortly after arrival at a Paintsville hospital. Her playmate suffered loss of teeth but was not seriously hurt.

Sheriff Henry C. Hale and deputies investigated the tragedy but did not fix the responsibility for the death. They said they learned that Goodin Clark, his wife, Goldie, their son-in-law and their three children were riding in an auto they had bought the preceding day, with Mrs. Clark driving. The tragedy occurred near the end of the street in Auxier which parallels the river and at the end of which is a sharp curve.

Mrs. Clark was taken to the Paintsville Clinic suffering from shock. Her husband was quoted as saying the children were playing in the street, that his wife out the auto to miss one and hit the others. The car was then run into a yard between two nearby homes. (See Story No. 4, Page 6)

Community FD Slates Fund Raising Dinner To Pay for Equipment

The Community Volunteer Fire Department, of Allen, in an effort to raise funds to pay for equipment, is sponsoring a chicken supper Saturday, May 19, at the Allen grade school building, it was announced this week by a member of the volunteer personnel.

The fire department, organized to offer protection to Allen, Dwale, and any other community in Floyd county without service of this kind, recently bought several thousand dollars worth of fire fighting equipment and paid approximately one-half of the purchase price. The balance is still outstanding and the department has 90 days in which to raise the remainder.

Tickets are on sale at various business firms and by individuals. It is pointed out that regular meetings of persons interested in the fire department meet every Friday evening and the public of the area is invited to attend.

COLLEGE SITE PLANS TALKED HERE MONDAY

Faculty Housing Needs, Utility Services To Be Ready, Visitors Assured

Four representatives of the University of Kentucky saw the proposed site of the Prestonsburg Community Junior College Monday for the first time, and they pronounced what they saw good.

The visit of the U. K. representatives to the site was more than a mere visit. They studied it from every angle. And their conference with a committee of Prestonsburg citizens was equally intense. They talked buildings, utilities, housing for faculty members, high standards planned for the institution.

The 40-acre expanse of the site, its location and contours and its accessibility to highways and urban facilities apparently met all requirements.

Representing the University were Dr. Frank Peterson, vice-president (administrative), Dean Robert E. Shaver of the College of Engineering, C. R. Hager, director of the extension class program, and Engineer Fairis. They conferred with R. V. May, W. J. Reynolds, Jr., Mayor George P. Archer, Burl Spurlock, Tom G. Dingus and Norman Allen.

Financing of architects' plans for the college have been made available by Governor Bert T. Combs. The work of collecting on pledges made toward purchase of the site is under way and a deadline for redeeming of pledges has been set for May 15, since the option on the site will expire next month and a deed to the property is wanted for presentation to the U. K. board of trustees at their June meeting.

Make Good on Pledges, Finance Group Urges

Members of the college finance committee this week urged those who have pledged contributions and who have not redeemed their pledges to do so at once. They have asked each individual or firm pledging contributions to take or send their check to their bank.

"With action now assured on the college, and that apparently a thing of the immediate future, surely those interested a few weeks ago in a college to serve this and neighboring counties will be interested, especially now to help us get together the local contribution on the site," a spokesman said.

Dr. Peterson pointed out that homes must be available for from 10 to 20 faculty-members and their families, and inquired if desirable living quarters can be built, if they are not otherwise available, the cost to be amortized through rental income. Burl Spurlock and Mayor Archer, representing Prestonsburg's two banks, assured him the homes will be available by the time they are needed.

The mayor, in reply to a query from University personnel, assured them water, gas and sewerage will be ready for the school.

Peterson explained, in discussing the need for attractive homes, that the University will be sending here some of its top people and that it is necessary, in order to hold such talent, to offer them good living conditions and attractive surroundings.

"This," he said of the proposed college, "will not be the ordinary junior college. It will be a part of the University, the University's highest standards will be maintained, and the young man or woman leaving college here at the end of two years can enter, fully accredited, any college—the University, a state college, Harvard or any other."

"I was reasonably sure that the call was a hoax but our concern for the welfare of the hundreds of children at Martin gave us some anxious moments.

"We had six men on the job very early that morning who worked with the State Police, Martin Policeman Reed and other officers as well as county officials to check all possible places a bomb could be hidden. They, of course, found nothing. . . . Police, both local and state, are still investigating possible suspects.

"We could have all our schools disrupted constantly by such calls, and credits possibly could be lost through time missed. I would like to ask all people who have telephones to help prevent the use of their phones for such calls, because the very lives of all our children may hang in the balance."

FILM STAFF SLATED HERE To Microfilm Records Of Historic Interest In Prestonsburg Area

The University of Kentucky librarians will send two of its staff to Prestonsburg for the two days of May 21-22 to microfilm any historical records the general public will present for this service. It was announced recently by Herbert Finch, field representative.

Mr. Finch, who was in Prestonsburg recently to take possession of the Harkins family papers for the University, said that the records could be brought to a place designated by the Floyd County Historical Society and the papers will be returned the same day. Charles Hinds and others microfilmed papers of the Mayo family here two years ago for the University.

Finch pointed out that fire, flood and other disasters often destroy important historical records and microfilming by an institution like the University will preserve them. In the University, the microfilm would always be available for the use of Kentucky students and scholars.

The Harkins family papers, Finch said, will be classified and indexed for study by students. He was of the opinion that the papers of this family was one of the greatest acquisitions on Kentucky history in recent years.

The original papers, consisting of 140 cartons, were assorted and classified by a member of the Floyd County Historical Society and reduced to nine boxes of valuable historical memorabilia. The papers cover a wide range of subjects but will be particularly valuable in any study of Eastern Kentucky land titles, early mining efforts, logging and oil and gas developments.

Short Stemmed Easter Lily On Market This Spring
A new short-stemmed Easter lily will be seen on the market during the spring holidays. The Georgia lily, one of the most widely used Easter lilies, is normally a long-stemmed plant that's unwieldy when grown in a pot; it's blooms are usually sold as cut flowers. USDA's Agricultural Research Service has found that Georgia lilies grow shorter stems when treated with the chemical phosphon, making a compact lily that is ideal as a potted plant.

EFFICIENT AGRICULTURE

The efficiency of American agriculture is one of the most amazing success stories of our time. The average productivity per farm worker has more than doubled in the past 20 years. In fact, productivity has gone up more in the past 20 years than in all recorded time prior to 1940.

In 1900 each farm worker produced enough food and fiber for himself and six others. In 1940 each farm worker produced enough for himself and ten others. Today, he is producing for himself and twenty-five others.

The main reason for this progress in agriculture lies in government and industry research, education and the hard work and ingenuity of farmers.

If our population reaches 230 million by 1975, as predicted it would require an additional 200 million acres of cropland if yields remained the same as they were in 1956. We don't have an additional 200 million acres of cropland. This is not alarming, because "know-how" is keeping ahead of the population expansion. Greater efficiency will make it possible to feed 230 million more people from the same total acres now being used for farming.

What has this efficiency meant to the public? First of all the farmers are making less money today, percentage wise, than 10 years ago, but the consumer is getting more food at less cost per hour of labor invested. The consumer has fared much better than the farmer, because of the advance efficiency of the farm.

Spring flowering shrubs should be pruned as soon as they quit blooming. Remove from one-fourth to one-third of the old stems, cutting them back to within two inches of the ground. Do this all season as shrubs finish blooming.

COAL LEADERS SEEK RIGHTS

Coal Firm Chairman Urges Congress Pass Proposed Legislation

Coal industry leaders are urging Congress to give coal equal right to compete with other fuels by granting coal pipelines the right of eminent domain—the same right now enjoyed by oil and natural gas lines.

In opposition to coal pipelines two Kentucky leaders — Senator John Sherman Cooper and Ex-Governor A. B. Chandler—have appeared before the Senate committee holding hearings on the proposed coal pipeline legislation. Both argue only the "big" producers would benefit and that this means loss of business, if not the elimination, of small mines.

George H. Love, chairman of the board of Consolidation Coal Co., Pittsburgh, told the Senate Commerce Committee that pipelines can cut coal delivery costs—particularly to electric utilities, the coal industry's biggest customers. The savings will accrue to the power companies and their consumers, he said.

Coal pipelines can not only prevent further erosion of coal's markets by gas and imported residual oil, but could make coal from vast deposits in the West "attractive to areas that have never considered coal as a basic fuel for power generation," Mr. Love said.

The Commerce Committee resumed hearings May 1 on a bill proposed by President Kennedy to grant coal pipelines which are subject to Interstate Commerce Commission regulation the right of eminent domain—the right to go to court to obtain right-of-way, at a fair price, when a property owner will not agree to allow the line to cross his land. Mr. Love said this right is particularly essential to allow coal pipelines to cross railroad rights-of-way, since many railroads have indicated they are unwilling to grant such permits to coal—though they allow them as a matter of course for pipelines moving other fuels.

Mr. Love emphasized that the coal industry does not seek the right of eminent domain for a purely private pipeline.

"We in the coal industry are well aware of the fact that we can never expect to construct an interstate pipeline through the exercise of eminent domain unless we are willing to make the services of that line available to those coal producers who are in a position to use its facilities," he said. "The coal pipeline is simply another form of transportation, and as such it should and must be capable of serving all producers—both large and small—who can utilize its facilities, and it should and must treat all users alike under rates and terms that are subject to regulation by the appropriate governmental agency."

F. Stillman Elfred, chairman of the board of Peabody Coal Co., St. Louis, said the future of coal is tied to low-cost transportation—whether by pipeline, integral train, high voltage transmission or improved waterways. He urged Congress to give coal the same right it gave natural gas, Peabody's chief competitor in the 24 states where it sells coal.

Mr. Elfred said natural gas produced in Canada as well as the United States is displacing coal in the Midwest.

"It would be a great injustice to permit a line marketing a foreign fuel—to use the right of eminent domain and at the same time deny that right to a pipeline transporting American-produced coal," he said.

A. L. Lynn, vice-president of Island Creek Coal Co., Huntington, West Virginia, said the bill would not build a pipeline but would assure that coal would not be denied the use of a pipeline where that mode of transportation would deliver coal cheaply and competitively with oil and natural gas.

"If West Virginia coal is to compete with other forms of fuel, it must have available the lowest cost means of transportation, whether it be railroad, river barge, or pipeline, and it must not be denied such opportunities," Mr. Lynn said. Mr. Love's company has developed and operated a 108-mile coal pipeline in Ohio since 1957, delivering 1,300,000 tons a year. He said a new process allows coal slurry—a mixture of crushed coal and water—to be burned directly in a boiler.

"In effect, we now have a new fuel—coal slurry—that can be transported, stored and handled in the same manner as fuel oil," he said.

He denied that the coal industry devised the pipeline as a means of taking business from the railroads. He said coal lost to competing fuels, now or in the future, will never ride the rails.

"We have no desire to take a pound of traffic from the railroads," Mr. Love said. "But we do have an intense desire to protect pipeline eroded by competition from the coal industry from being completely eroded, and we know that reductions in delivered costs are essential if this erosion is to be stopped... The railroads have more to fear from a further decline in coal prices than from a continued..."

to fear from any proposed pipeline."

Mr. Love said the coal industry welcomes the railroads' efforts to compete by reduced rates, and added, "Before any pipeline is built, the railroads will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether the use of their services is more desirable and more economical."

He said a few railroads have indicated interest in the pipeline, and said, "We are quite agreeable to working with them to our mutual advantage."

MENTAL ILLNESS MOST COMMON

Lexington, Ky.—Emotional or mental illness is the most common illness in the U. S.—yet many people feel it is something shameful that should not be talked about. This is not true and such an attitude can cause much needless worry and suffering when mental illness strikes, according to Mrs. Mary Browder, UK Extension family life specialist.

JAIL ESCAPEE IS ARRESTED

Chaney Breaks Jail At Hindman; Adkins Awaits Extradition

Darryl Stratton, suspected leader in the jail break which resulted in four prisoners gaining freedom, here April 9 was arrested by Sheriff Henry C. Hale and deputies Tuesday afternoon near Ivel and returned to the county jail.

Stratton was found hiding in a cedar chest at the home of Carl Stanley, Sheriff Hale said.

Another of the four who escaped — Noah Adkins — is in Columbus, Ohio jail awaiting extradition to this county.

A third, Corbett Chaney, was arrested last week and lodged in the Knott county jail at Hindman. Sheriff Hale and Jailer Lawrence Hale went to Hindman Saturday to return him here but on their arrival learned that he had escaped about two hours earlier by bowling over a turnkey in a dash for liberty. He had not been recaptured Tuesday.

The fourth man who figured in the break here, Dean (or Kermit) Castle, surrendered shortly after fleeing the jail because of a leg injury suffered in the jump from the second-story catwalk between the jail and courthouse. He later was convicted and given a two-year pen term.

The Coal Pipeline—Boon or Bane?

The National Coal Association and larger coal producers are urging the passage of legislation to give coal pipelines right of eminent domain such as is already enjoyed by those competing fuels, oil and gas.

Senator John Sherman Cooper, Ex-Governor A. B. Chandler and representatives of some of the smaller mines are contending that the cheap pipeline method of transportation will be injurious to smaller coal mining operations and may literally put them out of business.

The two points of view, at wide variance as they are, are very interesting. Even a superficial study of the matter raises several questions.

First of all, what is fair and just for the nation and the coal industry as a whole at a time when the United States needs to have in readiness its full production strength and also when coal is struggling to keep its head above the water?

What will happen to the coal industry in an area such as Eastern Kentucky where only a few highly mechanized mines remain and where individuals are investing their money, time and efforts in small operations?

Is it fair to coal to be denied the right of eminent domain which its competitors, oil and gas and even electricity, have long enjoyed? Legal condemnation of rights-of-way for oil and gas lines and payment of court-directed sums to landowners have long been accepted for these fuels. Why not for coal?

Will coal pipelines be made available to smaller producers and at a rate they can afford to pay?

And, if they were offered pipeline transportation of their product, could smaller operations finance a plant or plants to convert coal into the slurry (a mixture of coal and water) that can be piped from mine to market?

Because the major coal reserves of the United States lie west of the Mississippi River, would the pipelines projects conceived by big operators turn to these mainly, leaving areas such as this which are already far along in development to face ruinous competition?

Can the federal government afford, on the one hand, to create by favoring large mining interests what might amount to a monopoly; and, on the other, can it discourage private initiative by refusing these rights?

The railroads oppose coal pipelines as a matter of self-defense, as they have fought other means of transportation, notably waterways. The self-defense instinct is natural, and the rails cannot be condemned overmuch for trying to protect their huge investments; but these same railroads permit pipelines for oil and gas to cross their rights-of-way, and so again the matter of plain justice and fair play comes into question.

The advances of a fast-moving age are difficult for us, and the considerations and questions arising in situations such as this are so many and baffling that we doubt if any answer satisfactory to every disparate part of this country can or will be found.

Merely from the local point of view, we would say: pipeline transportation of coal may add to the miseries of Eastern Kentucky, and the federal government should be a party to it. But we, frankly, cannot honestly say this is right or that is wrong—for we do not know.

Perhaps the answer we all should seek would go back to our initial question: What is good for the United States as a nation in a wonderful, perilous age?

It's Here—Let's Keep It!

The strawberry processing plant promised berry-growers of Floyd and adjacent counties is here and ready for the season soon to open.

The plant-owner has kept his commitment to the growers. Now, it's their turn to supply him the product of their crops in volume sufficient to justify the effort and expense which he has put into the undertaking.

Here is a steady, reliable market for Eastern Kentucky strawberries. In the long run, it will pay growers to sell to this market which can be depended upon. If they do not and if the plant does not receive berries in sufficient volume to supply its outlet for the processed berries, it follows that the plant cannot remain here. It must be located near a source of adequate supply.

It's this simple: We said we wanted a strawberry plant. We want all kinds of plants, for that matter. We have one. And now there is a duty on the part not only of strawberry growers but of business interests in general here and over the county to encourage this new business to stay with us.

Juveniles Arrested By Allen Officer; Trio Hidden In Building

HONOR BOUND
I have pledged to the fund to help purchase a college site here. My pledge will be made good before May 15, even if it is high enough to cause some discomfort and though I may have to make a pledge to my banker to pay four months after date.

If I didn't believe in this college venture, I could use that money elsewhere. I could well spend it for my family, my church or on my business. But I do believe in it, and I'm not being noble about this, either. I am not unaware of what the college will mean to the thousands of youngsters over the years, to their parents, this town, this county and all Eastern Kentucky. But I also am aware of what it can mean to me. I have a youngster ready for high school next year. Four years later, barring unforeseen turns of the wheel, he will be entering college. One year of college here at home, and I will have saved more than what I am giving toward buying the site for that college.

Besides all this, I am honor-bound to honor my pledge.

WITH POSTOFFICE HELP

How do the folks at the postoffice know that mail addressed by Bob Harlowe to N. K. (Ink) Allen belongs in my box? Well, I'm glad they do, for an envelope so addressed this week brought the following:

WHAT IS A FISHERMAN?

A fisherman is half man, half boy with hooks in his hat, worms in his pocket and a grin on his face, carrying equipment that smells like fisherman's wharf in August. He can get up at 4:30 in the morning without setting the alarm, yet he can never get to church on time and he seldom makes the office before 9:30.

He is a liar in old clothes who wouldn't be caught dead with a spot on his tie, but wipes his hands on his pants after digging worms and jumps on his hat to make it look seasoned.

He is a man who can remember in what stream he used what fly, the exact spot where he caught that big one five years ago, but can't remember to mail that letter in his coat pocket.

Sometimes he is a bashful guy who, altho he never enters a general conversation, will talk to anyone who will listen after a fishing trip and usually repeats at least twice the story about the big one that evaded him because some dope upstream sneezed.

He's the same old miser, who buys meat supposedly for his dog and takes it home for his wife to make stew with, that blows his whole salary for a new spinner, chatters the Queen Mary for a fishing trip and feeds the fish better bait than he ever ate in his life.

While fishing, he's on the same level with bankers and bums but back at the office is the same old drudge in the wrinkled, gray suit that jumps every time the boss buzzes him.

Some species are so dumb about fish that they think a Big Mouth is an extrovert—a Rainbow is what has a pot of gold at the end—and a Northern Pike is a main road to Canada, but he's got heart and is as eager as the proverbial beaver.

But usually, he's a lovable guy, with a pipe in his mouth. A liar sometimes, an optimist always, and, despite a few gross exaggerations, he's closer to God and all He offers than at any other time—he is a Fisherman.

When two juveniles were arrested at Allen shortly after Friday midnight following a break into the Sandy Valley Hardware officers learned the two had in their possession the means of entering and looting practically every business place in the town.

A key-making machine had been stolen several weeks earlier, and one of the two told Chief of Police G. L. Gray where the key-maker could be found. It was then learned the youths had made keys to open between 40 and 50 locks to buildings in Allen and vicinity.

They did not use one of the new-made keys, however, to enter the hardware building. They went through a window, and while they were doing this Gray, his son, Jimmy Delano, and Police Judge Chester Porter were watching. Arrested within a matter of minutes, the two were jailed here and charged in juvenile court with breaking and entering.

Grant Arnold was taken before the U. S. Commissioner after he had been arrested on Sizemore Mountain, near Minnie, and jailed here last Wednesday on a moonshining charge by ABC Agent C. A. Flanery and Deputy Sheriff Joe Wheeler Lewis. Arrested by Sheriff's deputies and transferred to federal custody on a charge of violating his federal probation was Jim Marsillet, of West Prestonsburg.

A second moonshine still was destroyed Sunday in the upper Dewey Lake area by Sheriff Henry C. Hale and deputies, but the operator was not captured.

Others booked at the county jail within the week included:

Abe Shepherd, drunk driving; Ronnie Neeley, possessing moonshine whiskey; Herston M. A. O. drunk driving and no operator's license; Bruce E. Vanderpool, a. w. o. — all arrested by Sheriff's deputies; Jerry Harold Ousley, arrested by State Trooper Delmar Lafferty on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Choral Organization Admitted To Federation Of National Music Clubs

The National Federation of Music Clubs has notified Mrs. Edith F. James, director of the Jenny Wiley Chanters Club, that the folk singing group has been accepted into the national organization. The Chanters were recently organized as a club in order to meet the requirements of the National Federation. Notice of the acceptance of the Chanters was made by Florence M. Freeto, treasurer, of Pittsburgh.

The Chanters will present a program of folk and Civil War songs at Midway (Ky.) Junior College, May 17, Mrs. James announced this week.

Other officers of the Jenny Wiley Chanters Club are Mrs. Ethel Dickerson, president, and Margaret Ann Rowe, secretary-treasurer.

The Chanters, organized more than a year ago as a folk-singing group, has received wide acclaim for its presentations.

Another version of the tragedy claimed the children were playing in a yard when the car left the street and hit them.

The victim suffered multiple rib fractures and a punctured right lung.

Surviving are her parents and four brothers, Gordon, Carroll, Danny and Paul Dean. Funeral arrangements were incomplete Wednesday morning, but it was known the rites will be conducted from the Auxier Free Will Baptist Church. Burial will be made in the Walker Mayo cemetery at Lancer under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

Former Wayland Miner Victim In Tennessee; Was World War II Vet

Zollie (Bunk) Hobbs, former Wayland miner, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home near McMinnville, Tennessee, April 14, 1962. He was 54 years old.

He was a veteran of World War II, entering the service from Floyd county. Mr. Hobbs was highly respected in his community. He was elected magistrate of Grundy county, Tennessee, and held this office at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife, Edna Ward Hobbs, of McMinnville; his mother, Mrs. Gilbert Hobbs, Chattanooga, Tennessee; three brothers, Revis Hobbs, of McDowell, Noble Hobbs, of Pikeville, Joe Hobbs, of Chattanooga, Tennessee; and three sisters, Mrs. Trambie Turner, of Wayland, Mrs. Champ Gibson, of Langley, and Mrs. George Tabor Gault, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Lexington, Ky. — "To make the best better" is the 4-H Club motto and seems to be the motto of Janet Lee Kirby, too; she's been improving her 4-H tobacco project more each year she's been a 4-H member. This past year, her efforts really paid off, for she has been selected the 1961 state 4-H tobacco project champion.

Under the new formula enacted by the 1962 General Assembly for distribution of Kentucky's rural secondary road fund, one-fifth is divided equally among all counties, one-fifth among counties on basis of rural population, one-fifth on basis of rural road mileage, and two-fifths on basis of the rural area of each county.

fired, followed by the shotgun blast.

Johnny Little said he accidentally fired the revolver when he stumbled and fell.

Mrs. Little did not testify at the examining trial. State Detective Chester D. Potter in his testimony quoted her as having told him substantially this account of the shooting.

Her father-in-law came to within three feet of her door and "jumped on" her and her husband about the garden. She and her husband went inside the house. Her husband got his revolver and left the house by a rear door. She picked up the shotgun.

When she heard the revolver shot—caused, her husband claimed, by his stumbling—she thought a gunfight had started, and she fired the one shot.

A revolver was found in the elder Little's pocket after the body had been taken to the McDowell hospital, officers said.

The slain man was a native of Pike county and was a son of Jim Little. He had lived in the Melvin area almost all his life and, besides his work of years as a peace officer, he had been a miner. His wife preceded him in death. Surviving are six sons and two daughters, Wade, Willie Arlet, Johnny and Ersel Little, all of Melvin, Gomer Little, Biggs, Ky., Alice Little, Wales, Kentucky, Mrs. Virgie McCourt and Mrs. Maggie Sammons, both of Melvin. One sister, Mrs. Virgie Mills, Springboro, O., also survives.

Funeral rites were conducted Sunday from the residence, the Rev. Jerry Hall and others officiating. Burial was made in the family cemetery at Melvin under direction of the Merion Funeral Chapel.

The Church of God here has grown from a small group of ten persons in the year 1933 to its present large congregation under the leadership of the Rev. Moses Kitchens as its pastor.

The board of trustees also reported this week that in the planning stage is a tabernacle to be built soon to seat approximately 400 persons. This is planned to take care of the overflow crowd attending the Eastern Kentucky annual camp meeting, which is held each year in Prestonsburg.

WORK OF DR. SCOTT OSBORN TOLD IN FEATURE ARTICLE

Work of Dr. Scott C. Osborn, native Floyd countian who is professor of English at Mississippi State University, in the field of literature was recently featured by The Daily News, Starkville, Mississippi. Dr. Osborn is a son of Mrs. S. D. Osborn and the late Mr. Osborn, of Martin. The Daily News story follows, in part:

He is president of the American Studies Association of the Lower Mississippi, and this association's representative on the Executive Council of the American Studies Association. He is a member of the Bibliography Committee of the American Literature Group of the Modern Language Association.

He is also a consulting reader of the publications of the Modern Language Association of America, and literary book review editor of "The Mississippi Quarterly." He has written or edited four books, one of them his master's thesis, and another his doctoral dissertation.

In January he completed a contract with Twayne Publishers of New York City to write within the next eighteen months a 200-page book on the life and writings of Richard Harling Davis. This book is to be one in the Twayne United Authors Series now being published on over a hundred American authors.

Dr. Osborn's doctoral dissertation at the University of Kentucky in 1953 was on Davis, noted journalist, war correspondent, novelist, and playwright who died in 1918. His best known novel is "Soldiers of Fortune."

The achievements of Dr. Osborn are based on research—not scientific research leading to new inventions or better control of the forces of nature—but literary research, leading to truer understanding and enhanced appreciation of the lives and ideas of America's great teachers and writers.

His work comes under the heading of liberal arts research. His latest publication is "The New Freedom in American Literature, 1910-20," completing a trilogy of American literary history from 1890 to 1920 by the late, great English professor, Grant C. Knight of the University of Kentucky.

Last year Dr. Osborn's doctoral thesis, "Richard Harding Davis: The Development of a Journalist" was printed on microfilm and microcard by University Microfilms, Ann Arbor, Michigan. This 706 page document on microcards requires scarcely more library space than a small package of postcards.

Likewise, Dr. Osborn's master thesis has been printed on microcards. In this case the publisher is the University of Kentucky Press. The title of the thesis is "A Study and Contrast of the Bluegrass Aristocrat and the Kentucky Mountaineer in the Works of John Fox, Jr."

Dr. Osborn also edited "The Pedlar," a drama by Alphonso Wetmore, in 1955. This play was published by the University of Kentucky Library Associates.

He was interested in this play because it contains the earliest (St. Louis, 1821) known use of a Western character in drama or fiction, even antedating Davy Crockett and Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales. For this reason, Wetmore's play may be considered a great grand-daddy of the modern Western.

Dr. Osborn has published book reviews in the Journal of Mississippi History, the Journal of Southern History, the South-Central Modern Language Association Bulletin, the Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America, and the American Literature Periodical.

Although his students may not know of his military career, Dr. Osborn entered the Army as a private in 1943. He was assigned to the Ordnance Corps and attended the Officers Candidate School at Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland. After graduation he rose to the grade of captain.

He is now a major in the Army Reserve, but few of his students know of his military rank or of his books. To them, he is just "Prof."

Telephone Talk

By BYRON SIMPSON
Your Telephone Manager

MOTHER'S DAY is just around the corner, and here's a last minute suggestion . . . wouldn't an extension phone be a nice way to remember Mom? Extension phones—like the pretty princess—put calls at her fingertips in the bedroom, kitchen, den or basement playroom. When the call's for her, she just reaches for the nearest extension and saves time and steps! Just call our business office, or ask any telephone serviceman about the variety of colors and surprisingly low cost.

COME TO THE FAIR! And I'm talking about the Century 21 Exposition in Seattle, April 21 to Oct. 21, 1962. This international show, set in some of America's most spectacular scenery, is the first world's fair held in this country since 1939, and is expected to draw tourists from all parts of the world. If a trip to the Exposition is in your vacation schedule, we'd like to invite you to see the Bell S stem's exhibit. In keeping with the Fair's theme—a preview of the world of tomorrow—the Bell exhibit will show modern communications equipment and a glimpse of what's ahead for telephone users.

WE GET a lot of strange requests, and one of the most unusual is the one from the woman who called the operator and said, "Will you please ring my telephone? My dog is outside and won't come in. He comes running when he hears the telephone." Ten rings later, she reported back, "Thanks a lot," she said, with the barking of a dog in the background. "He's in now." And that's just one of the many requests we answer every day. Customers sometimes ask us what they should use to clean their telephones. The answer: a damp cloth is all that's needed to keep the phone clean and shining! Soap-and-water treatment is risky since the water may get into the set and put working parts out of order.

A LONG DISTANCE CALL is the next best thing to being there in person . . . so keep in touch the easy, personal way . . . by Long Distance. Call often!

McDowell All Even On Season's Baseball With Games Last Week

McDowell high school's baseball team won two and lost three last week to even their record at 4-4. The victories were over Martin, by scores of 3-2 and 10-0. The shutout was a fine two-hitter by basketball star David Turner. Larry Simbo gained the other victory.

The losses were one to neighboring rival Wheelwright, and two to Auxier, this year's surprise team in baseball.

The Trojans continued their mastery over the Daredevils by defeating McDowell, 4-2, at Wheelwright. Smith and Fargo teamed up to pitch the Trojans to victory.

Auxier surprised McDowell by winning both games by scores of 10-8 and 4-1.

Allen No. 4 Hitter In Ohio Valley Loop;

Ray Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Allen, of McDowell, is currently the fourth leading hitter in the Ohio Valley Conference. He is the second leading hitter (.411) in the Morehead team that is 7-9 this season.

Allen, a two-year letterman, is starting in leftfield for the Eagles for his third straight season. He has 14 hits in 34 times at bat and has driven home 11 runs this season, which places him fifth in the O.V.C. r.b.i. department.

He is a graduate of McDowell high school where he participated in baseball and various social organizations. During the two seasons that Allen played, McDowell compiled a 22-4 record, and finished as runner-up in the regional tournament his junior year.

At Morehead, Allen is majoring in physical education and English. He is vice-president of the Collegiate Knights, a member of the Sigma Delta fraternity, and a member of the North Men's Dormitory Council. He plans on a coaching career after graduation.

All in all, this team event was a very happy occasion for all those who participated. This week, the singles and doubles event will be held at Lake Lanes, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

High bowler at Lake Lanes last week was Georgia Stapleton, 231; and Pin Princess was Janie Miller.

Which reminds me, girls, if you have done something you are proud of and you feel like you should have been mentioned in the column, speak to your house managers. They are the ones responsible for turning in this information; and, being busy, they don't always turn things in. So a word to them will probably straighten things out. We want you all to receive your just share of attention, but you will no doubt realize that we cannot possibly be everywhere at once.

Noticed that Ed Faulkner has won the all events in the West Virginia state tournament. We had a pretty good instructor, didn't we? Ed seems to be collecting quite a few prizes these days.

Summer leagues start June 4 at Lake Lanes and June 24 at Crown Lanes. You may enroll your teams by contacting Mr. Carter or Mr. Daniel.

The annual meeting of the Floyd-Pike Counties Women's Bowling Association Tournament is to be held Saturday, May 19, here in Prestonsburg. We will have election of officers, voting on two amendments, and also other items which will be of interest to you. This meeting is open to every member of the City Association. If you bowl in a league at Pikeville or Prestonsburg you are a member. It will be to your advantage to plan to attend the meeting and you will probably all receive notification in writing of the meeting, but it is like any election—if you don't bother to go and vote, you don't have any say at all in the selection of officers and rules. Make it a special point to plan to go to the meeting. The place hasn't been selected yet, it is rather a problem to seat 700 people but you will be notified, so for your own sake plan to attend.

There was an Executive Board meeting on April 29. Many things were discussed and decided upon. That's about all this week. Next week I will try to find out how much money was in the prize fund and give you a rundown on the amount the winning teams won, also the winners of the singles and doubles.

Metropolitan Conference Of University Professors Re-Elect Owens as Head

New York, N. Y., May 3 (Spl.)—At the spring meeting of the Metropolitan Conference of the American Association of University Professors, about 50 delegates and guests from colleges and universities in the New York area re-elected Prof. Curtis Owens as president of the Conference. They also sent him again as their representative to the annual convention of the Association, held this year in Chicago during the last week in April.

Prof. Owens, a graduate of Caney Junior College and a former principal of the Garrett consolidated school, has a number of relatives in Floyd county.

SPORTS CHATTER

By GORDON MOORE

One hundred twenty-five four-sport Eastern Kentucky youths, representing 17 Eastern Kentucky high schools, will begin qualifying events Thursday afternoon at 2 on the Prestonsburg track in quest of the regional championship.

The finals will be staged at 6 p.m. Friday, excepting the shot put and discus, which will be completed Thursday.

Belfry, Buckhorn, Jenkins, Jenkins Dunham, Elkhorn City, Oil Springs, Fleming-Neon, Hazard, Martin, M. C. Napier, Paintsville, Pikeville, Virgie, Prestonsburg, Dilce Combs and Whitesburg will battle for the crown currently held by the Hazard Bulldogs.

The regional run-offs will also serve as the official meet of the four-sport Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference. The school with the highest number of points at the end of the meet will be declared the 1962 champion.

Only the high jump record of five-feet, seven inches is expected to be broken by Pikeville's Maddox or Hazard's Perdue. Both have cleared 5-7 this season.

Hazard, Pikeville and Paintsville loom as the favorites, since Prestonsburg's team was riddled by disciplinary measures two weeks ago. Only hurdler Kelly Moore and Lonnie Prater are the Blackcat threats in the running events.

First and second place winners in the regional will qualify for entrance into the state track meet, which will be held in Lexington, May 18 and 19.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

The salt-water anglers of our Atlantic Coast are indeed most fortunate in having a coastline that is indented with many more bays and rivers than other coastal areas, says Robert Hall, Saltwater Fishing Editor for Sports Afield Magazine. The shallow-water bays, where the ebbing and flooding tides flow, create vast feeding grounds throughout the temperate months for many species of marine fish.

Bay fishing is a branch of salt-water fishing that appeals to all members of the family for healthful recreation in the open under a summer sun, where fishing success lies not in one's ability in casting, or having stout legs to stand the heave and haul of a sloping deck, but in knowing the channels and waterways where striped bass, kingfish, weakfish, croakers and fluke are found. Not all species are found in one particular area; some may overlap a given section of the coast, while others are rarely taken outside of certain limits.

In the last 40 years there has been a gradual change in the supply of some types of fish. Some have almost completely disappeared from certain localities, while others have become more plentiful. This fluctuation in the supply of marine fishes that visit the protective waters of the bays can be traced primarily to various factors that control the supply of food.

There is considerably more to fishing these inland waterways than just dropping a baited hook over the side of the boat and waiting until some stray fish strikes your hook.

There are many species of fish that inhabit the quiet waters of the bays from Cape Cod to the Gulf States. The scrappy, stubborn fighting redfish, the snook and the sea trout are perhaps the favorite fish to catch on spinning gear or baitcasting outfits in southern waters. These fish will readily strike a plug, spoon, or a bucktail jig and are delightful to catch on such equipment.

SPECIAL FEDERAL ASSISTANCE OFFERED "WAR ORPHANS"

Of more than 2,500 war orphans in Kentucky, 773 thus far have availed themselves of special federal assistance in obtaining a post-high school education.
The assistance—it might even be called a scholarship worth $110 a month for 36 months—is available under the Orphans Assistance program enacted in 1956, explained Olney B. Owen, manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Louisville, Kentucky.
Currently, 400 Kentucky orphans are receiving benefits under the law. Nationwide, 30,000 eligible students have started training, but even the 63,000 who have established eligibility are considerably below the known potential.
Mr. Owen explained that VA is concerned primarily with its responsibility for acquainting war orphans with their educational benefits.

peace-time veterans whose deaths were caused by the actual performance of military duties or resulted from extra-hazardous service.
3. Other eligible children have married and consider themselves no longer eligible. However, marriage has no bearing on eligibility.
4. Some children think their eligibility ended when the remaining parent remarried, particularly when they are adopted by the new parent. Neither marriage nor adoption affects eligibility.
5. Other children believe they can pursue training only at the college level. Actually, institutional training may be pursued for various occupations in the trade school and technical fields.
Mr. Owen pointed out that eligible ages are between 18 and 23 years but exceptions for reasons of physical disability or military service provide for earlier or later use of the benefit.

PRESTONSBURG C. & O. RAILWAY DEPOT
This picture of the Prestonsburg railway depot building was made in the first decade of the century, shortly after it was constructed.

Identified in the picture is the late Lack Shepherd, second from left on platform. Four of the station employees are shown on the right and a miner, probably from the Cliff Coal Company, sits for his picture.

The First National Bank presents these pictures of the region's past for your reading pleasure and in recognition of our historic heritage.

He said that the Regional Office in Louisville regularly writes the guardian or remaining parent when a possibly eligible child attains his 13th birthday. Posters have been printed for high school and college bulletin boards. More than a score of releases have been made in the past five years.

Yet, less than half of the estimated 2,500 eligibles have applied for the counseling service required by law and which VA urges be taken at the start of the senior year of high school. VA counselors evaluate and advise these students; suggest preparatory courses or how to make up deficiencies; and generally assist in matriculation into the school best suited to a pupil's capacities and desires.

Mr. Owen attributes the slow response to a matter of communication.
"It's hard to get something over to someone who doesn't know you are talking to him," he explained, citing several factors:

1. Many of the eligible young people just don't think of themselves as orphans while one parent is living. However, the law regards the child of a parent who died from service-connected injury or illness as an orphan even though the other parent lives.
2. Many believe their parents had to die of wartime injuries. That would be from December 7, 1941, to December 31, 1946, and from June 27, 1950, to January 31, 1955, the World War II and the Korean Conflict periods. Actually the law has been broadened to include

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

Kentuckians fought Kentuckians 100 years ago this week at Lebanon, Tennessee, where Col. John Hunt Morgan's Confederate cavalry command suffered its first defeat of the war. Having spent the night in the little college town, Morgan's men were surprised by the arrival before daylight of a Federal force that included Col. Frank Wolford's First Kentucky Cavalry and Col. Green Clay Smith's Fourth Kentucky Cavalry.

Wolford and Smith were both wounded, and for a time Wolford was Morgan's prisoner. When Morgan retreated at high speed in the direction of the Cumberland River, he took his prisoners along. Before long, however, he noticed that Wolford, who had lost considerable blood, appeared to be in danger of falling from his saddle, so he gave the Union officer his freedom. (The next year, Morgan would be Wolford's prisoner, and would be treated with great consideration.)

Arriving at the Cumberland, Morgan found the ferry on his side of the river. That gave him and those of his men who had fled with him a means of crossing the swollen stream before the pursuing Union cavalry caught up—but they had to leave their horses on the bank. Thus Morgan lost his famous mare, Black Bess, and never saw her again. At that time, Morgan had been in the Confederate service less than eight months. In the 28 months between then and his death, he necessarily had other mounts, but the legend of Black Bess was so popular that there have been many protests because the equestrian statue of Morgan on the courthouse lawn at Lexington shows him mounted on a stallion, and not on the mare that carried him in the early months of the war.

The Louisville Journal, reporting Morgan's defeat at Lebanon, said: "The report that Morgan is killed will, it is hoped, be fully confirmed; if he is not dead, however, it seems impossible that the can escape capture, as Gen. Dumont gave active chase to the flying rebels, and will not quit their tracks until all are hunted down."

Before the week was out, the Journal had to report that Morgan and his troopers had invaded Kentucky, had captured a freight train at Cave City and a passenger train two miles from there, and had destroyed 45 freight cars, three passenger cars and a locomotive. He permitted one locomotive, one passenger car and an express car to return to Louisville at the request of two passengers, M. B. Morrison and a Dr. Bush, both of whom, according to the Journal, had been "fellow townsmen and intimate acquaintances of John Morgan" at Lexington. It added that Morrison "speaks of Morgan's deportment in very favorable terms."

In an editorial the Unionist newspaper demanded: "How much longer are these raids of Morgan to be continued? Can no way be devised to put a stop to them? If this bold partisan leader can come almost to the bank of Green River, what is to prevent his making a dash some night into Louisville?"

EDUCATION IS GREAT HOPE IN ALCOHOLISM STRUGGLE

Education is the great hope as Kentucky rallies its forces to do battle with a formidable foe—alcoholism.

The state-supported program to combat the disease is designed to make communities feel that "this is our problem." Transfer of the over-all program to the State Health Department reflects the growing acceptance of alcoholism as a public health problem. The acceptance process took many years; it is far from complete.

"First we've got to get everyone interested," said Dr. Richard B. Holt, acting director of the Health Department's Division of Alcoholism. "It will take a sane, down-to-earth attitude in our communities for Kentucky's program to make progress."

That need explains the basic demand for education.

More specifically, education can serve as the key to help an alcoholic avoid a dismal and disastrous future. For if he recognizes the symptoms of early alcoholism and knows the effects of its chronic or acute stages, he can make a decision to seek help before his drinking becomes uncontrollable.

The family too must understand the crisis thoroughly. With the understanding an alcoholic's loved ones often can begin to help him solve the problems that have ridled his self control and led him to seek the bottle for refuge. Sometimes this family understanding can make the difference.

A new school program has been proposed which would give Kentucky one of the most advanced school alcoholism education programs in the country. It calls for revision of old school laws pertaining to the teaching of alcoholism and a new requirement of four hours of instruction each semester in grades seven through 12. The curriculum would be broken down into three phases; one hour to study physical effects and one hour for psychological effects; the other two hours would be used to teach the social effects.

Attitudes of doctors too are vital. Only within the last two decades has alcoholism been widely accepted as a medical problem. Since the family physician is usually consulted first by a person with an alcohol problem, his counsel and encouragement can many times lend the patient enough confidence to face the problem squarely and eventually to conquer it.

Kentucky's young program has made a gigantic stride in this field of alcoholism education. Now junior medical students at the University of Louisville are being taught the psychological and physiological dynamics of alcoholism. It is the third medical school in the country to accept that course in its curriculum. Kentucky's new program provided the impetus that resulted in that addition to the U. L. curriculum.

Dr. Holt says he hopes eventually for the same type course at the University of Kentucky Medical School and for a 15-bed clinic at each of the two state medical schools.

Another idea which the alcoholism program in Kentucky brought to a reality is the rehabilitation work in Louisville's courts and jails. Dawes feels it is one of the basic activities.

Another goal, Dawes says, is to get a rehabilitation ward at each of the state's mental hospitals designated for treatment of alcoholics. A 45-bed ward at Western State hospital in Hopkinsville is currently the only separate state facility for alcoholics.

"While these wards and clinics are certainly important," says Dawes, "by far the greatest need is getting general hospitals in our communities to recognize the problem and provide close-to-home treatment. These people do not need to be in a mental hospital. They are just as sick as someone with pneumonia."

A committee of 100 citizens from many avenues of life has been formed by Dawes in Louisville to make these ideas go. That committee is greatly responsible for some of the major advances in Jefferson county, Dawes said.

Other committees are being formed—by Mrs. Mary Porter in Lexington and in Eastern Kentucky by Frank Layne, of Prestonsburg. Layne's committee will be made up of leading citizens from about eight counties in the Prestonsburg area. Personnel from Western State hospital are beginning to shape a program in Hopkinsville, too. All these programs are dedicated to the same purpose—alcoholism education and to work toward providing facilities for treatment and rehabilitation. Eventually the state program may expand to include research.

This same type of coordinated program has proved successful in about 80 communities over the country. While there is no formal tie-up between Alcoholics Anonymous and the state program, they have already begun working together to reach their common goal. Both Dawes and Dr. Holt believe that a united effort can accomplish far more good.

"The whole idea is very simple—to help communities understand the problem of alcoholism, how it is affecting that community, what it costs, if that cost is increasing and,

Too Many Patients Drives Doctor Away; White Claims Overwork

Dr. Norman White, who left Prestonsburg last year to practice at Millersburg, Kentucky, is leaving his last post. Reason given, according to a story in Tuesday's Lexington Herald, "overwork."

"The town's too big for one doctor and not big enough for two," he said. "I've been going day and night, butting my head against the wall."

White is not sure where he'll go next. He said he had contacted some medical school graduates in Central Kentucky to see if they'd like to have a go at the job. No takers, he said, so far.

Girl Scout Councils Plan Merger, Announced; 400 Troops In Combine

Nearly 8,000 Girl Scouts in Eastern Kentucky will be affected by a merger of eight present Girl Scout Councils and an extension of council jurisdictions to include 51 counties in Kentucky and one in West Virginia.

The first meeting of the organization committee was held Tuesday, at Donovan Hall, University of Kentucky.

Mrs. Edward P. Hill, Mrs. R. V. May and Mrs. J. R. Camelia represented the Sandy Valley Girl Scout Council on the committee.

The organization committee is charged with formulating the plan of organization, structure, services to girls and budget for the new council. It is scheduled to be completed by the end of 1963, in accordance with a directive of the national board of directors, Girl Scouts of America.

Mrs. R. B. Drukker, of Berea, and Miss Gloria Harris, national Girl Scout staff member, served as advisers to the committee. Councils affected by the change will be Burnside, Central Kentucky, Harlan, Lexington, Middleboro Area, Richmond, Sandy Valley and Somerset.

The action will combine 400 Girl Scout troops, and a total of 7,800 girls and adults.

Keep a dry board near your fuse box to stand on while you're changing fuses, etc. Be sure your hands are dry before changing a fuse, too. The combination of moisture and electricity can cause a bad shock.

Governor Proclaims Immunization Week; Dr. Clardy Comments

In proclaiming May 1-7 as Immunization Week in Kentucky, Governor Bert T. Combs joined with the Kentucky State Medical Association and other state organizations in urging all Kentuckians to check their own families immunization needs.

"This year is a more important year, we feel, in that the first compulsory Immunization Bill in Kentucky in this century was passed," Dr. Delmas M. Clardy, Hopkinsville, chairman of the KSMA Public Health Committee said. The mandatory smallpox vaccination law has been in effect over 60 years, he added.

The new law, which will become effective in June 1962, requires that all parents, guardians, and other persons having care, custody or control of any child under eighteen years of age, shall have the child immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis and pertussis within twelve months after birth.

Unless his religion forbids it, the law states, no child under eighteen years of age will be eligible to enroll as a student in any public or private elementary or secondary school without first presenting a certificate from a duly licensed medical or osteopathic physician stating that the child has been immunized against diphtheria, tetanus and poliomyelitis or that such immunization would be injurious to his health.

Dr. Clardy stressed, however, that not only school-age children, but adults and pre-school age children as well, should avail themselves of the vaccines which afford protection against these death-dealing diseases.

GRENVILLE CLARK WORKS FOR PEACE FOR AMERICA

Grenville Clark, an extraordinary lawyer whose efforts provided most of America's junior officers in World War I and who may have shortened World War II by three years, is using his towering legal talents in behalf of peace and disarmament.

Nearly 80 and little known to most Americans, Clark now lives in retirement on a farm at Dublin, New Hampshire, and maintains a steady correspondence with President Kennedy and other top leaders around the world. James Daniel reveals this in a May Reader's Digest article, "Grenville Clark and His Plan for Peace."

When President Kennedy heard it was in preparation, he wrote: "Grenville Clark was an effective force in securing our readiness for war when war was imminent—and most recently he has been a force in making disarmament a concrete issue. His example is one for which we can all be grateful."

Clark believes the world must agree to a system of world law, interpreted by courts of international jurisdiction and enforced by a strong international police force. Radical as these ideas once seemed, Clark does not believe they are one tenth as perilous as a nuclear arms race. Yet, until there is an alternative, he supports all defense measures, rejecting unilateral disarmament as sheer folly.

Born to a wealthy New York family, Clark graduated from Harvard Law School and went into partnership with Elihu Root, Jr. When war approached in 1915, he set up the Military Training Camps Association, through which 27,000 junior officers were trained at Plattsburgh, N. Y., and elsewhere. Clark rose to lieutenant colonel. In World War II, he and Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter maneuvered the appointment of Henry L. Stimson as Secretary of War, and Clark wrote the draft law reenacted by one vote in September 1941. Former Ambassador to Britain Lewis Douglas, says Clark shortened World War II by two to three years.
