The Office of Emergency Planning has approved Floyd county's application for funds to finance repair of highway and bridge flood damage.

TOWN HALL MEETING HEARS CITY PROBLEMS

P'BURG NEARS A CASH BASIS, CITIZENS TOLD

Grant of $24,173 Forgiven As Work Progress Is Made

Prestonsburg's income, expenditures, gas and water bills, taxes, public improvements, law enforcement—these were discussed at Monday night's Town Hall meeting as city officials and employees exchanged ideas with citizens.

Mayor George P. Archer emphasized that his administration is moving on the theory that "it's not who's right but what's right" that counts.

These items of information were given during the session:

1. With the payment of the remaining $4,000 due on the city's old note, Prestonsburg will be on a current basis financially, perhaps for the first time in its modern history.

2. A survey made by engineers resulted in recommendations that 28 separate steps be taken to reduce the actuarial rating of the city to the sixth class, which would mean a saving of 20% in fire insurance costs.

3. Prestonsburg has been forgiven the preliminary $24,173 grant made it by the Home & Housing Finance Agency as a result of progress made on the sewerage project.

4. A grant of approximately $27,000, made by the Health, Education and Welfare Agency, is being used, starting in West Prestonsburg, to pay for the cleaning of existing sewers, repair of old sewers and street improvements.

The discussion of engineers' recommendations and the resolve to follow them evolved from a suggestion that water lines being laid might be smaller. It was pointed out that a 10-inch main to serve the Prestonsburg Community College, the new low-rent housing development and, eventually, all the northern section of the community, is being laid in accordance with these recommendations.

A four-inch high-pressure gas line also is being laid to that area.

The new water lines and reservoir will pay for themselves in reduced insurance rates in 10 years, city officials say.

Improvements would be financed solely by the water and gas system, it was said.

RIFLE SHOT KILLS CONLEY

Former Restaurant Owner Succumbs At Apartment; Fingerprints Are Taken

Doubt was expressed Tuesday that the rifle shot which killed J. E. (Eliza) Conley, 65, former Prestonsburg restaurant-owner, at his apartment here Monday morning was the result of an accident.

Conley's body was found on the floor of his apartment in the old Elizabeth Hotel by Bill Pepper Wills, who occupied a neighboring apartment. Officers and county officials found that he had died of a .22-caliber rifle bullet wound which entered his left breast.

Other occupants of the second-story apartments said they heard only a muffled sound such as the slamming of a door, about 10 a.m. The body was found about noon. Death is believed to have been almost instantaneous.

The weapon from which the shot was fired is an automatic. The safety of the rifle was off when officers picked it up, an empty shell lay nearby, and a loaded cartridge had been automatically thrown into the barrel.

In the absence of coroner James J. Carter an inquest was not held. State Detective Chester D. Potter photographed fingerprints on the rifle and took prints of the victim for the possible purpose of comparison. Prestonsburg police, County Judge Henry Stumbo, Common-

Allen Fire Department Says Protection Area Is Limited by Bureau

John L. Thompson, manager of Kentucky Inspection Bureau, Louisville, informed the Allen Community Fire Department last week in a letter that only if they purchase additional equipment can the department furnish protection outside the fire protection area.

This protection area was recently limited by the bureau to a distance of three miles from the station. A map of the area was required from the Allen group.

Thompson wrote the Allen Fire Department:

"In response to your inquiry of July 18, the ninth-class fire protection grading of your community is based on the fire department response being limited to an area within three miles by road from the fire station. If you will recall, this is one of the more important items that was discussed with me when the reduction in the fire protection grading was granted, and was also the primary reason for our requirement that a map of the protected area be submitted to this office."

"If your department desires to provide fire protection outside of the recognized fire protection area, it would be necessary for it to purchase another piece of fire apparatus. In view of the fact that we would not be able to grant credit for the response of the fire department beyond the present fire protection area, the fire apparatus would not necessarily have to be of the approved type. In the event that the fire department does purchase another piece of fire apparatus, for response outside of its fire protection area, particular attention should be given to maintaining an adequately trained crew within the fire protection area at all times."

"We hope that we have fully advised you of the situation. (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

TB DETECTION IS IMPROVED

Dr. Stewart Lauder Says Recorded Increase Shows Better Methods Are Used

The recorded increase in the number of tuberculosis cases in Kentucky is a good sign, Dr. Stuart Lauder, director of the Tuberculosis Control Division, State Department of Health, told health workers from 12 Eastern Kentucky counties last week at a district meeting held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

It's good, because it means that better methods of detecting the disease are being employed, he explained. Hitherto, poor detection methods and inadequate reporting of cases resulted in a deceiving but apparently good t.b. record.

Approximately 30 persons attended the meeting which had for its main purpose a review of the t.b. program. The afternoon session was devoted to the new tuberculosis register being installed in each health department of the district. The sanitarium section emphasized resort and camp sanitation.

CLASSROOM TEACHERS, OTHERS ARE EMPLOYED

The Floyd County Board of Education, at its regular meeting Saturday evening, employed 39 teachers for unfilled positions and named 44 substitute teachers. The Board voted also to accept the resignations of the following teachers: Aileen Reynolds, at Betsy Layne, Phyllis Prater, Garrett high school, Nola D. Allen, McDowell elementary school, Chaddie Hardwick, Maytown high school, Thomas Hardwick, Martin high, Valois Pitts, Melvin school, Hade Durbin, Patricia Durbin, Phyllis Hall, Mary Auker Hale and Rose Worland, all of Prestonsburg high school, Dillard Prater, Wheelwright high, James A. 5 ASK $23,100 OF COAL FIRM

Say Dam Construction Caused Flood Damage; Bus Firm, Driver Sue

Five owners of property lying on the Hoge Newman Branch, or near it, in the vicinity of Hi Hat, have filed suit in circuit court here seeking to recover a total of $23,100 from the Hi Hat Elkhorn Coal Company.

The complaint alleges carelessness and negligence on the part of the coal company in the construction of a dam, two or three years earlier, to impound the waters of the Slick Rock Branch, a tributary of the Hoge Newman Branch. As a consequence, it is contended, the dam broke on or about March 10, this year, sending an "unprecedented" volume of water onto the property of the plaintiffs, Laura A. Hayes, Fred V. Hayes, Annabelle Newman Kelly, Ted Newman and Freeman Newman.

Domages claimed and amounts sought by each plaintiff follow:

- 1. Business-type frame building owned by Laura A. Hayes demolished, $7,500; loss of topsoil, $1,000.
2. Stone building in which Laura A. Hayes has life estate and in which Fred V. Hayes has the remainder, flooded, with plumbing in basement destroyed, $1,000.
3. Dwelling of Mrs. Kelly flooded, damage to house and furniture, $5,000.
4. Fixtures and stock of Ted Newman's restaurant damaged $4,000; loss of profits while stock and fixtures were being restored, $1,000.
5. Dwelling of Freeman Newman and furniture damaged, $2,000, auto damaged $1,500, loss of use of auto, $1,000.

CONCESSION TRANSFERRED

Group of Five Acquire Riding Facility; Other Entertainment Offered

The horseback riding concession at Jenny Wiley State Park has been acquired by the Jenny Wiley Riding Academy, Inc., which is owned by five Prestonsburg men. Stockholders are Estill Lee Carter, C. J. McNally, Homer Neely, Jr., Roger Colvin and Randall Honeycutt.

The concession, which was temporarily operated by Sheriff Henry C. Hale, originally included 10 horses and three ponies, but two more horses have been added.

The pony ring to provide riding enjoyment for younger children was completed last week. Stables, corral and office building have been completed for several weeks.

Two bridle paths have been cleared, leading into the nearby hill and providing a splendid view of forestland and lake. One of these provides a ride of about 30 minutes; the other, an hour.

RC CLOSES, OPENS DOORS

Public Need Too Great For Permanent Closing, Miss White Announces

The Red Cross just couldn't quit. Floyd Chapter closed its doors here for two weeks when it appeared that public financial support was consistently being denied it.

"But there were too many calls for help," Miss Ella Noel White, chapter executive secretary, said. "In some of these cases there was no help available from any other source, and you just can't close doors under such circumstances," she added.

Since then, some progress has been made on the Red Cross fund drive—not much, still. Miss White feels financial support will be given. Approximately $600 has been contributed since the office reopened.

Boy Scout Troop No. 27 will make a house-to-house canvass of the residential section here, August 16. Other communities of the county have been organized for similar direct solicitation.

"Maybe we don't deserve the Red Cross because of our failure to support it, but those service men, their families, people needing help in cases of death or other emergency—these do need help. So I suppose we'll be in business as long as our present limited funds last," Miss White said.

UTILITY FIRM AMENDS SUIT

Criminal Implications Not Intended by Firm, Defendants Are Told

The Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company this week amended its complaint filed in circuit court here against Forrest Burchett, et al. in order to remove from the complaint a statement defendant's attorney described as "libelous and... not material, pertinent or relevant to the subject matter of the complaint."

Asking that prominence be given to the amended complaint and its elimination of objectionable statements, W. W. Wallen, vice-president in charge of operations, said the allegations were made to "anticipate and negative a plea of the 5-year Statute of Limitations."

"The allegation," said Wallen in a letter to defendants' attorney, W. W. Burchett, "was not intended and should not be construed by anyone to imply criminal or immoral act on the part of any party to this action."

The amended petition likewise disclaims any intent on the part of plaintiff to charge any of the defendants with any immoral or criminal acts.

Defendants in their answer deny all the allegations of the gas company suit.

TOTS, KILLED IN CRASH, BURIED AT GOODLOE

Two small sisters, children of former Floyd countians, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shepherd, of Warsaw, Ind., died Thursday of last week, a few hours following injuries received when the family car was struck by a truck north of Warsaw.

Less, 2, and Tamera, 4, died at Murphy Medical Center, Warsaw, the former succumbing at 4:30 p.m. and the latter at 5:45 p.m. The accident occurred at 2:55 p.m. on Indiana 15. Both children died of skull fractures. They were grandchildren of Rev. and Mrs. Ashland Shepherd, of David, and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Nelson, of Blue River.

Mrs. Rosa Shepherd, 20, mother of the children, and David Hudson, 34, driver of the truck, were hospitalized suffering from shock and bruises. They were released after receiving first aid.

Indiana State Trooper John Hammersley and Deputy Sheriff Max Ganshorn, who investigated the tragedy, told this story:

Mrs. Shepherd was driving north of Warsaw and in a southward direction and slowed to make a turn onto a county road. An auto driven by George Wilkins, of Warsaw, struck the Shepherd car in the rear and the impact threw it into the north-bound lane of traffic and in front of the semi. Hudson swerved to miss the Shepherd car but struck it on the right side, sending it to shreds and hurling one of the children from the vehicle.

Wilkins, in explaining to officers that he found it impossible to miss the Shepherd car when he struck it in the rear, said he was driving about 50 miles per hour which was corroborated by witnesses. He was stunned by the tragedy and continually moaned, "Oh, those poor children."

Double funeral services for the children were held Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Apostolic Gospel Tabernacle at Warsaw, the Revs. John Reid and Darrell Hill officiating. Final rites were conducted at Goodloe, and burial was made in the Shepherd cemetery.

The two victims were the only children of the Shepherds.

SUPPLY FIRM IS ORGANIZED

Company Is Capitalized At $75,000; Lots Bought At West Prestonsburg

The Prestonsburg Building Supply Company this week announced plans for opening its business in West Prestonsburg by September 15. The firm, capitalized for $75,000, has as stockholders Gordon Moore, Clyde Vanhoose, Tom O. McGuire and Henry M. Conley. The latter will manage the business.

Location of the company's office, lumber sheds and yard will be on the church property and two adjoining lots purchased from G. E. Fannin, also on a lot occupied by an old store building and two adjacent lots purchased from the W. M. Greenwade estate. In addition to this space, the company has leased a 120 by 100-foot lot from the C. & O. Railway Company.

A concrete block building 100 feet square and two other lumber sheds will be constructed on the site. The church structure will be used temporarily but is slated for leveling later.

"We will have all types of Grade A lumber and other building materials and by carrying such stock we hope to save our friends and neighbors many trips to outlying areas to get such materials."

Dr. Archer on Staff Of McDowell Hospital

Dr. John G. Archer, of Prestonsburg, recently became a member of the staff of the McDowell Memorial hospital, it was announced this week.

HOSPITAL EXPANSION WORK IS BEGUN HERE

Well-Known Evangelist Air Crash Victim; Rites Conducted At Lexington

The Rev. Edwin Walter (Eddie) Moran, 41-year-old Methodist evangelist of Lexington, was killed Tuesday, July 30, when the plane he was flying collided with another craft near Riverside Airport at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Four years ago, Moran narrowly escaped death when the plane he was flying crashed in Illinois. He received severe injuries in that accident.

Oklahoma investigators said that the minister's light plane was coming in low for a landing and that the other ship also was approaching the field when they collided in the air.

Moran's plane was broken in two at the fuselage and plunged to earth. The two men in the other plane escaped serious injuries.

Federal Aviation Agency investigators began an inquiry into the accident. The airport has no traffic control tower.

TO INSTALL DATA PHONE, NEW FACILITY

A one-story addition to the Prestonsburg General hospital, now under construction, and installation of a Data Phone, newest of electrocardiograph transmission devices, will cost an estimated $25,000.

The hospital addition, being erected on the lot formerly used for parking on the south side of the hospital, will include a new business office, a new doctor's office, triple the size of the laboratory, double the size of the kitchen and enlarge the offices presently occupied by doctors.

The enlarged and improved facilities are a part of an expansion plan which looks toward plans for greater hospital service. Dr. George P. Archer, head of the hospital, said.

The Data Phone, a product of Southern Bell laboratories, will enable heart data to be transmitted directly and instantaneously to the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington, and immediate diagnosis to be made there of the case at hand, it was explained. A cardiologist or resident cardiologist will be on duty at the Medical Center 24 hours a day, thus insuring diagnosis as quickly and accurately as would be possible by the presence at the hospital here of a heart specialist.

The Data Phone is expected to be in operation within the next two weeks. Mrs. Ackerman, head nurse at the hospital, and two technicians were at the Medical Center Tuesday for instruction in the use of the Data Phone, and Dr. Archer himself will receive instruction there this week.

Only two other Data Phones are presently in use in Kentucky—one at the University of Louisville, the other at the Lexington Medical Center.

TWO WOMEN CONVICTED

Of Selling Intoxicants; Branham, Wells Trials Result in Hung Juries

Two women who had previously been convicted of possessing alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sales were convicted at their trials here Monday on charges of selling intoxicants, but juries failed to agree the next day in the trials of two men accused of possession.

The "hung" juries resulted in the trials of Bennie Branham and William Riley Wells, Jr.

Branham was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale after a raid on the Shamrock Club on Dewey Lake, July 3, netted intoxicants. Wells, who was convicted July 29 on a possession count, was given trial this week on an identical charge but which resulted from a previous raid.

Branham admitted ownership of the property popularly known as the Shamrock Club but claimed he had leased it to the Jenny Wiley Boat Club, which in turn had leased the property to Amvets Post No. 47. He denied any connection with ownership of the liquor confiscated in the July 3 raid. Nobody was found on the premises by State Police and ABC agents.

The prosecution showed that the place was licensed as a place of entertainment in the name of the Bennie Branham Shamrock Resort, with Branham listed as owner and manager.

Wells admitted the wine and whiskey taken at his premises in a raid prior to the July 3 sweep by state officers was his but added that he had not procured the intoxicants for sale. He claimed he had bought them for "church people."

County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill said the vote of the jury in each of the two cases was five for conviction, one for acquittal.

Mrs. Anna Dingus and Mrs. Zella Mae Tackett were each fined $100 and given a 60-day jail term Monday upon their conviction on charges of selling. Mrs. Dingus had previously been convicted of possessing. Paul Tackett, husband of Zella Mae Tackett, had been convicted also of possessing, but in the trial it developed that the purchase of liquor was actually made from a (See Story No. 4, Page 6)

Give Uncle His Cut!

Uncle Sam is, apparently, our coldest blooded businessman-relative.

Give him his cut, and he has little concern about how you get the money. Is it bootlegging you have a yen for? Or is it gambling? Take your choice, says the federal government, in effect. Only be sure you get your whiskey or gambling stamp.

Apparently the old gent wouldn't give a spare whisker about what happens in the counties, cities and states as long as federal revenue acts are not flouted. And the cold cash will fix all that. It may be illegal to sell whiskey in a county such as Floyd, but the federal government will license anybody who has the price of a stamp to sell it. Morality, obedience to law, contempt or respect for the law—do these matter? Apparently not, in the eyes of the federal government, if the attitude of the public toward law and order costs it nothing in revenues.

The federal government should go out of the business of licensing liquor operations in local option territory—or, it should go all the way and license those moonshiners whom its agents seek so diligently.

Crusade Against Ignorance

(An editorial in The Courier-Journal)

During the past week Governor Bert Combs, in an effort to launch a statewide "crusade against ignorance," has set forth a three-phase program to overcome the effects of a half-century of educational neglect and stagnation in Kentucky. Briefly, the program would (1) attack the problem of the state's 225,000 functional illiterates who cannot get or hold jobs for want of basic education; (2) increase efforts at all levels to reduce drop-outs and keep children in school longer, and (3) persuade "every educated Kentuckian" to concern himself with the problems of education and to support the cost of an improved educational system.

To accomplish these aims, the Governor proposes remedies that may seem extreme to some people. He would, for example, require illiterates on relief to attend classes in order to qualify for continued relief. It is a method that has been tried with considerable success in Chicago, where a flood of uneducated immigrants, chiefly from the South, has given the city and Cook county a massive corps of unemployables for whom public welfare has become a way of life. And it hits at the heart of one of Kentucky's most persistent economic problems, for almost two-thirds of Kentucky's chronic unemployed fall within the functional-illiterate category, that is, they have less than a fourth-grade education, and are unable as a result to compete for even the most menial jobs.

An even more difficult problem, and one that may eventually require even more radical remedies, is the problem of drop-outs, children who are unable or unwilling to complete high school. As the Governor pointed out in his address to the graduating class at Eastern State College, "Every day brings home to us more graphically the fact that the Space Age has no place for the ignorant." Yet more than half of the children who begin school in Kentucky do not finish high school, and forty-two percent of those who start high school do not graduate.

There are many reasons for this—financial pressure, lack of progress that makes them feel inferior, lack of interest on the part of parents or associates—but the results are almost uniformly tragic. Ninety-five percent of the country's juvenile delinquents are drop-outs; so are three-fourths of the inmates at LaGrange Reformatory and 80 percent of those at Eddyville. Ninety percent of those rejected by Selective Service dropped out before high school graduation, so that there is not for these uneducated even the old escape of "joining up!" Within a few years these people become our problem adults.

Finding ways to reach and teach these people is going to be hard, as the Governor admits. And he is due for disappointment, we fear, if he attempts to reach the unemployable illiterates through the state and community colleges. As Chicago found, this must be a local effort, based on the local school boards, with financial help from the state. These people must be taught close to home, or given bus fare to nearby schools. The type of classroom afforded them is less important than the type of instructors, most of whom will probably have to be employed and paid by the state. For the aim here is not the regular education, but the teaching of the rudiments, reading and writing, that will permit the adult student to get a job, and perhaps give him an incentive to continue his education on his own.

Similarly, it is going to be hard to cut the drop-out rate without a great local effort backed by state appropriations. We may eventually be obliged to require high school graduation of all those physically and financially able, and to find means of subsidizing those who cannot attend for financial reasons. There are thousands of Kentucky children who fall behind early in their school lives because they do not have clothes to wear in cold weather, or sufficient food for the energy that study requires; we may be forced to give three hot meals a day and free clothes to such children. We may be obliged to tighten punishment of parents who permit or encourage children to leave school before graduation, and to change the law permitting drop-out at sixteen.

These could become expensive remedies, but they would be far cheaper than the system we now support, a system that leads to "second-generation reliefers" and a massive army of unemployables. As Governor Combs says, "Those who do not know do not earn, but take from the pocket of the earner."

In the long run, therefore, solution of the entire educational problem depends on the average citizen and taxpayer, and on his determination and willingness to do whatever must be done to improve the educational standing of the state. The great danger here is that the average Kentuckian, viewing the great effort and progress of the past few years, may feel that the fight is being won. As the Governor has pointed out, there are signs that the people "feel that the effort and progress at the state level has been sufficient . . . that they are beginning to chafe at the cost."

But the effort at the local level has not matched the state effort. Too many communities are failing to raise taxes or assessments, or approve school bond issues. We are still too near the bottom of the ladder in education. And we can climb out of our difficulties, keep our drop-outs in school and educate our functional illiterates only if, as Governor Combs urges, people "are imbued with a deep and burning concern . . . willing to make the personal and collective effort that is going to be necessary in the years ahead."

Don't you read before you buy?

Most people generally do. Not only do they read; they cut out and show ads to their family and friends; they clip coupons for information and samples. When people see an advertisement in print, they can compare designs . . . features . . . and prices of nationally known products and services. (And people do compare before they buy.) Advertising in print is a handy thing. You can always check back; the message is still there even if your attention is distracted. When you add it up, print advertising—the kind you read in this newspaper—makes sense. And because it measures up to the buying habits of most consumers, print makes sales.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

THE OLD HOME

An old folkway that is hard for the younger generations to understand is the reverence paid to the "old home," the center of a family, often for several generations. There has been so much moving from where any of us came from that we have lost much of this fondness for the old house where our family or our tribe once lived. I have often regretted that I grew up without any such memories. Father had come from Tennessee, where five generations of his family had lived in the same neighborhood, three of them in the same house. Mother had lived on the opposite side of my native county and, believe it or not, I could not find the spot today. Being the youngest member of my family, I was almost like a grandchild, so far as my parents and my older brother and Ily, I felt left out, for I had barely seen one grandparent, my mother's mother, when I was a very small boy. It is with a great deal of interest that I read of old home places, in all parts of America, in numerous books that have been written by descendants of some old, old family.

Recently I have read Donald Hall's STRING TOO SHORT TO BE SAVED, a well-written account of the author's grandfather's home in central New Hampshire as it was just a few years ago, for the author is in the early thirties. All his childhood he, the only grandchild, looked forward to spending most of vacation from school at the old homestead and helping his grandfather on the rather old fashioned farm. Having known this type of quaint old ways from his earliest boyhood, the author never felt superior in any way to the left-over folkways that his grandparents lived by. The farm was run very much as my father's farm was run almost two generations ago; modern farmers would have felt that everything was outdated, but somehow there was achieved a satisfaction that Mr. Hall, now a professor of English in the University of Michigan, feels proud to have been a part of. The old, old house, inadequate as compared with most of the houses we now know, had acquired, through its long life, some values that are not to be set down in figures. And that house was the symbol of a self-sufficient sort of life that has all but disappeared in our own part of the world. Few of us, after our years of living with so-called modern conveniences, would want to go back to this older type of life, except for brief vacation periods. We long ago got a restlessness into our blood that makes us leave the old memory-clustered places for newer and more substantial houses.

John Steinbeck laughingly pictures, in his TRAVELS WITH CHARLEY, the fine old residential areas in our cities that once were the last word in elegance, where living on a certain street gave one a sense of belonging to the very best in modern society. Then years bring dinginess to the great old houses, new suburbs are opened, and the palaces often become, for many years, slums or are even deserted and become, as we used to say, bat roosts. Once in a great while some modern groups sense the value of some of these old places and convert them into museums of what used to be. Too often the palaces are torn down and the areas used for parking lots or new business buildings; just today I stopped to buy some gasoline at a brand-new station that occupies the site of a building that was a landmark until two years ago. No trace of what the area used to be is in sight; oldsters who return to their native town and want to seek out this place will have to ask directions as if they were in a perfectly strange city.

Poets throughout the ages have lamented the passing of one great era and its neglect by later eras. And it is only natural that each generation should build its own centers, its own homes, its own philosophies. However, it cannot escape the notice of the remaining few of older times who remember the associations of their youth with places now gone forever. "But grow we must," I have so often quoted from Oliver Wendell Holmes, "even if we outgrow all the things we love."

Who Loves A Critic?

From Newsweek's review of Judy Garland's latest movie: "Singing isn't really what she does any more. Acting is not exactly what she does, either. And glamour surely isn't what she's selling . . ."

"But she's, well, Judy Garland. And we love her. We have to love her. It's part of our way of life, like cookie jars, and baseball, and oral hygiene, and the call of the open spaces. And for people who like this kind of thing, this is the kind of thing they'll like."

Time Magazine's review of the movie, "Miracle of the White Stallions," ended with this: "The supporting players are obviously off their feed. And Actor Robert Taylor—well, frankly, a horse that acts the way he does would instantly be slipped to the glue factory."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest appreciation to our many relatives and friends for their thoughtfulness and kindness to us during the illness and upon the death of our beloved husband, and father, Martin Luther Osborne. Thanks are also extended to all who sent flowers, food and donated their cars and time when their help was so greatly needed. Especially do we thank Harold Dicks, pastor of the Arnold Avenue Church of Christ for his consoling words, the choir for the beautiful music and the Carter & Callahan Funeral Home.

No Bear Tale, This . . .

WHO DIDN'T SPARE TREE?-- BEAVER CAUGHT ON THE JOB

(Elliott County News)

The rugged cliff country along the Red River gorge in Wolfe county is becoming increasingly popular with sportsmen and outdoor lovers as a place of natural beauty and fine fishing. And nearly every party that goes into the "Roughs" comes out with some interesting experience to relate. However, one of the most unusual was related to us by a party of West Liberty fishermen who returned Wednesday from a two-day fishing trip in the canyon country to tell about an odd encounter with a troubled beaver.

While camping at the mouth of Clifty Creek—some three miles up Red River from Sky Bridge—Bob Rose, Earl Kinner, Jr., and Jim Gross, all of West Liberty, were visited Wednesday morning by Otis Landrum, of Pomeroyton, who along with bait and hooks, had brought his squirrel dog with him. While the men were casting minnows for bass at the mouth of Clifty, Landrum's dog began to bark furiously on the river bank across the river from the mouth of the creek. Landrum crossed the river and went to investigate.

About 20 yards up the densely wooded bank, Landrum found his dog barking at a large animal which, strangely enough, made no effort to escape, Landrum called to Rose and Gross to come up and have a look, and on further investigation, they discovered that the animal was a large beaver.

Puzzled as to why the beaver made no attempt to get away, they moved closer and discovered that the animal's tail was pinned to the ground by the sharpened base of a good-sized tree.

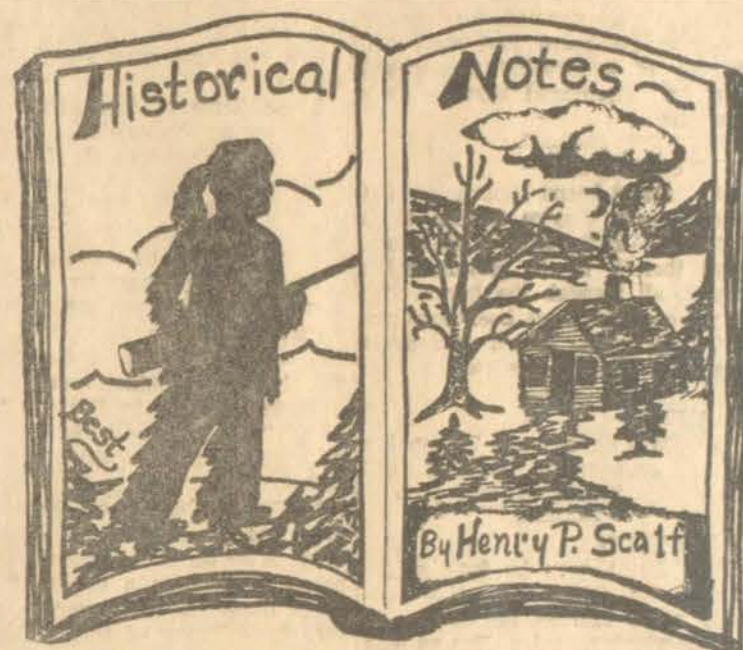

The beaver had inadvertently gotten itself into its embarrassing predicament by gnawing down a young white oak, some 30 or 40 feet high—the natural occupation of a beaver; but, instead of falling over the bank, the tree had caught against the limbs of the surrounding trees and had dropped straight down beside its trunk. The sharpened base of the tree had fallen onto the beaver's long, flat tail and pinned it to the ground.

The beaver wouldn't let the men near it, and after some deliberation, Landrum, Rose and Gross found a large tree limb and, using it as a lever, managed after some effort to push the tree aside and free the animal.

The beaver then made a beeline over the bank, and disappeared into a hole of water separated from the river proper by a gravel bar and a number of large boulders.

Other teeth marks on the tree indicated that when the dog found it, the beaver had been in the process of gnawing the tree in two again in an effort to free its tail.

There are bears in the Red River country, too, but this beaver's tail . . . er, tale, beats any bear tale we've heard for awhile.

GOBLE FAMILY

A letter from Homer C. Goble, 1721 West Short Road, Phoenix, Arizona, addressed to James B. Goble, of Emma, is passed to this column.

The Arizonian writes whom he supposes is his Kentucky cousin: "My great-grandfather on my father's side was James Blue Goble, my grandfather was James Francis Shrewsbury Goble. I believe, though having to rely on memory, that it was James Blue Goble or his father who came to Kentucky on one of the Simon Kenton explorations in the early 1800's and settled in Boonesboro.

"My father, Leroy Truman Goble, of Chicago, was a great one for tracing family and were he still living could probably have run down a chart he had and been able to identify you pretty close. We long ago found out that when anyone spelled their last name Goble they were kin . . . unless they were Pennsylvania Dutch, who changed the German spellings like GOEBEL to GOBLE, making it English.

"I'm only guessing your middle name is Blue but the name became widely used after Joseph Goble, born in 1786, married Ruth Blue, born 1793 in Miami City, Ohio. From then on the Blue was often used as a middle name. They were Virginians, I think, at least one of my great-uncles Blue moved to the Tidewater area after he was run out of town on a rail for throwing disreputable brawls in his home in Virginia. After being impolitely removed he settled in a fishing village on the Tidewater where he could throw any kind of a party he liked. Two Blues fought for the Confederacy that we know of and one for the Union in General Lew Wallace's Brigade. (He was the author of Ben Hur.)

"I think it most likely that you are probably a direct collateral descendant of James Blue Goble, my great-grandfather, born 1813, who married Harriett Williams in 1835. I believe in LaSalle City, Illinois. His brothers of whom he had several could also be of your ancestry. They were Daniel B., Samuel Kyle, John Galford and there may have been others. Sisters who would not have carried through the Goble name were Hannah, Sarah, Martha, Ruth and Mary.

"If you are interested in this kind of thing I have a lot of rather sketchy information on it. What happened to Dad's records after he died I do not know but most of what I have is only the direct ancestral line as it concerns myself and my brother, My, and possibly your first ancestor on this side would be Thomas Goble, who came over to near Boston in about 1634. His son Daniel, born 1641, was hanged by the neck in 1676 for slicing up seven Indian women and their babies near Concord, Massachusetts. His nephew, Matthew, hanged at same time for same thing. Daniel's son Daniel was born 1698 in South Carolina. Well, I might as well make it easier to read: "Thomas took land in Puritan Colony, Charlestown, Massachusetts, 1634. Daniel, born 1641, hanged by neck till dead, 1676, Concord, Massachusetts. Daniel, born 1669, Daniel, born 1698, Daniel, born 1720. Caleb, born 1749, fought in Revolutionary War but no one could find out where. Joseph, born 1786, who married Ruth Blue, James Blue Goble, born 1813. (Somewhere from here on your line comes in). James Francis Shrewsbury Goble, born 1850. Leroy T. Goble, born 1884. Homer Cedric Goble, the writer, born 1917."

MARTIN-THAXTON FAMILIES

A letter from Mrs. Blanche T. LeBaron, 231 W. Fairview Road, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, inquires about two pioneer Kentucky families.

"I have been trying to gather data from the records of Kentucky and Tennessee concerning my great-grandfather and his ancestors who was supposed to have come from Kentucky.

"My father was Arden Martin Thaxton, son of Richard Cantley Thaxton and Mary Rebecca Martin. His father, Richard C. Thaxton, was the son of Williamson Thackston and Mary Ann Sherry. Williamson Thackston was born in 1806 or 1810. In the records it stated he was born in Randolph and no indication as to whether it was in Kentucky or some other state. We do know he married Mary Ann Sherry on May 23, 1829, in Allen county, Kentucky. We are not sure that Mary Sherry's name had Ann in it. They moved to Illinois where one son was born whose name was James William. He was born in Adams county, Illinois, and another son was born in Monroe county, Missouri. This son was born in 1837. James William was born in 1832. The second son was Richard Cantley Thackston, who is my grandfather. Mary Sherry left her husband sometime before 1844. We do not know where Williamson Thackston went to or where he lived after his family left him.

"I am interested in securing more information about him and his father. We do not know his father's name. While in the Knoxville library I came across a Thomas Thackston who was living in Allen county in 1829 (Census). It only gave his name but there were two boys under 10 years of age, one under 16 and one 26 years old. His wife was over 45 and so was Thomas Thackston. There were three females under 10, one under 16. This is the closest I have come to about the time when my great-grandfather lived.

"In the 1850 Census I noticed a Richard Sherry who was 45 years of age and it gave the names of his children. This could have been a brother to Mary Sherry who was born in 1809 in North Carolina, Rutherford county, who married Williamson Thackston."

Mrs. LeBaron would appreciate information on these families and invites correspondence.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week Kentucky elected a governor and other state officers favoring support of the Lincoln administration and its war effort. A few days before the election, Maj. Gen. A. E. Burnside, commander of the Union Army of the Ohio, from his headquarters at Cincinnati issued a proclamation putting Kentucky under martial law "for the purpose only of protecting the rights of loyal citizens and the freedom of election." To this was added the significant statement, "No disloyal persons shall be allowed to vote."

Federal troops were at the polling places on election day, and it was apparent that many of the officers in charge of them classified as "disloyal persons" all citizens who showed up with the intention of voting for the Democratic party nominees for governor, 75-year-old Charles A. Wickliffe, a former governor. Indeed, at Wickliffe's own precinct at Bardonia and in the presence of the venerable statesman, a Union Army colonel from Indiana erased Wickliffe's name and said the polls were not open to him.

Only about 85,000 votes were cast in the entire state. Collins' History of Kentucky estimated that 40,000 persons either were turned away when they appeared or were kept away from the voting places by military intimidation or interference or by fear of being arrested. Voting was not secret then, and in some cases men who voted the Democratic ticket were immediately arrested and charged with disloyalty.

Under these circumstances it was not astonishing that two Union Army officers, Col. Thomas E. Bramlette and Col. Richard T. Jacob, were elected governor and lieutenant governor, respectively, by majorities of about four to one. Because the word "Republican" was unpopular in Kentucky, they had run as "Union Democrats." Wickliffe and his associates were called "Peace Democrats."

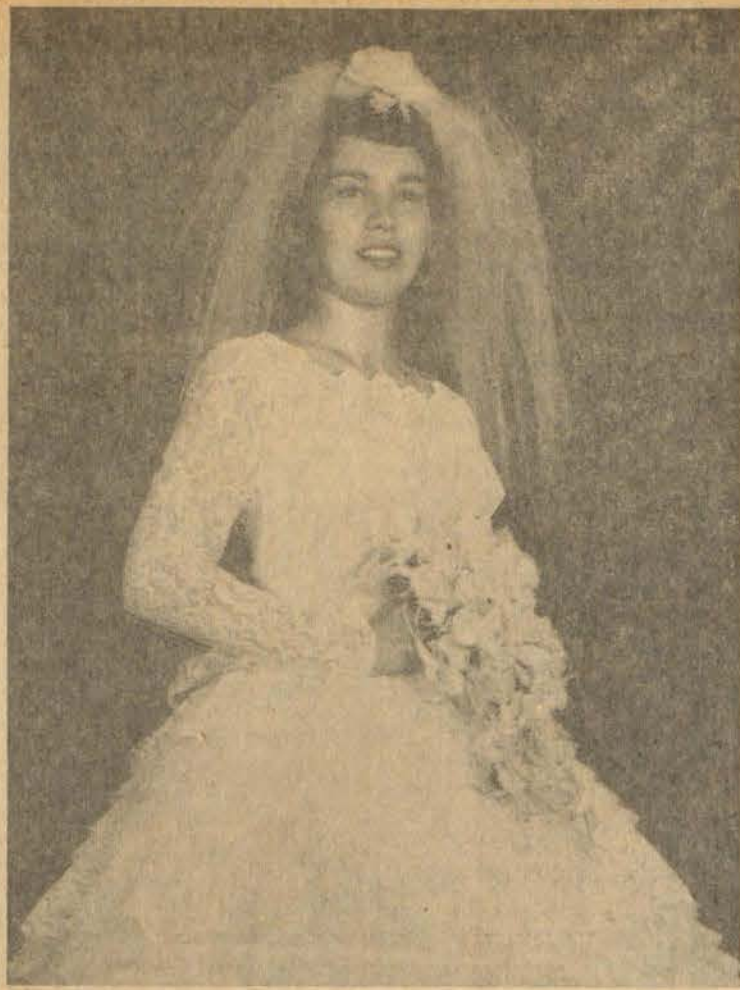

Members of the legislature, chosen the same day, were nearly all supporters of the Lincoln administration. Only three counties—Boone, Carroll and Trimble—sent to Frankfort representatives who had run in opposition to the Commonwealth's supplying more men and money to the Union war effort.

How many men Kentucky already had contributed to that side was made known in an official statement by Adj. Gen. John W. Finnell. It said there had been 41,937 Union volunteers enrolled from Kentucky. Sub-totals were given for the nine congressional districts into which the state was divided. The Eighth and Ninth districts, both in the Eastern Kentucky mountain area, led with 7,121 and 6,489, respectively. The First congressional district, in the extreme western end of the state, had the smallest number of Union volunteers, 1,154.

A Confederate cavalry force that had captured Richmond and Winchester withdrew to Estill county, pursued by the Tenth Kentucky (Union) Cavalry regiment.

NEGROES ASK INTEGRATION

In Knott-Co. Schools; Carr Creek Elementary Only School Involved

A group of Knott county Negroes filed suit in United States District Court Tuesday asking immediate integration of all schools in the county.
The suit said there has been some integration in grades 7 to 12, but that grades 1 to 6 are still segregated. It was filed on behalf of 14 Negro elementary students.

Beckham Combs, Knott County School Superintendent, said the suit involves only one school—Carr Creek elementary school.
Combs said no action has been taken on integration of the school because it would involve additional classrooms and county officials feel no such expansion should take place until they find out more about the location of the proposed Carrs Fork dam.

The dam, Combs said, probably will necessitate razing the present school building.

The suit said the 14 Negro children have been "prohibited by the Board of Education from attending the several elementary schools conveniently located throughout Knott county, all of which the defendants have set aside and designated for the exclusive attendance of white pupils."
It also said the plaintiffs, except for one student, live closer "to other elementary schools which are attended exclusively by white students," but are assigned to the all-Negro school, the suit adds offers "inferior schooling and training" and is "old, dilapidated, poorly equipped, and abandoned by white students . . ."

The suit was filed against the county board and its members, including Combs and Chairman Laird Watts.
Combs said other schools are integrated in the county, but each had to be expanded first to take care of the increased number of children.

"This is not a matter of integration, but a matter of consolidation," he said.
All of the plaintiff children live in the community of Redfox, which is near the Carr Creek school, Combs said.

A SCOUT'S-EYE VIEW OF EUROPE AND THE JAMBOREE

BY WALKIE MAY

Five boys from Floyd county are in Marathon, Greece this week participating in the Boy Scout World Jamboree. They are part of a 629-member contingent from the U.S.A. who will join 14,000 boys from 76 countries for 10 days of Jamboree activities, August 1-11. The American boys are divided into eight tour groups which are visiting England, Switzerland and Italy, both before and after their Jamboree in Greece. The following contains excerpts from a letter written by one Floyd county boy, Walter May. —Editor.)

(hotel) is delicious. You really get your shilling's worth. For the food is heaped on your plate. My plate is cleaned when I've finished. The money system over here is not as hard to learn as you might think. There are two half-pennies, known as 'hay pennies' to a penny; three pennies to the three-pence or 'trumpence'; two three-pence to the six-pence or 'tonner.' Well, you get the idea.

I took a few pictures today of people going to a royal garden party in their tall hats and fancy coats. The parks in London are full of people lying on the ground. By the way, at the Boden-Powell house the British Scouts served us tea!

Today we went to see Warwick Castle and I know no more about it now than I did at Ft. Slocum. They ran us through in 15 minutes with about four minutes to see the "sights." I bought a folder to find out what I should have seen. We did get enough time to see Shakespeare's birthplace. I got some good pictures and bought some more.

At Charles Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop I bought a set of small spoons which I hope will be useful as well as ornamental. We saw the cathedral at Oxford University but had to hurry there, too, because they were planning a banquet.

Yesterday, I slept through breakfast and lunch and was one of 13 people who caused the tour to be late. I slept on the bus some, too. We travelled a good 120 miles.

On the flight from London today, a bunch of us jumped up and yelled, "I'm from Ken-n-tucky" and took a "chaw" of some round bread loaves which we had bought. We "toured" Lucerne in a motor coach this morning. Saw the Lion of Lucerne among other things. Our hotel, the Lucernehof is nicer than the London one but the food was better in London.

Bobby Goble and I took a cable car ride up a mountain. There are four intervals because a cable cannot reach the top. I also took a ride on Lake Lucerne on a pedal boat which Gary Goble and I rented. I had bought a bone horn which we blew and the sound of it carried to shore.

I bought a watch for 40 francs, $9.20 in U. S. currency. It is waterproof, antimagnetic, 23 jewels—the works, including a day indicator. I am all packed for Athens. We leave at 7:00 in the morning.

I'm ready to go to bed, and I'm about to starve to death. Boy, how I'd like to have three hot dogs and a chocolate milk shake! So far, Greece has been hot and dirty. Some of us walked down a street toward the Acropolis, but the smell was so bad we had to turn back. Of course, that is merely one section of Athens. The rest is pretty nice.

We have seen the Acropolis of Corinth and the ruins of Old Corinth. We went to Mycenae. The Epidaurus Theatre, which we visited, is the best preserved amphitheatre in Greece. Its acoustics are really great.

When they have a large group like us come, I believe that they take the local residents out and put us in. The dresser drawer has someone's clothes in it and there is a pair of old shoes under the bed.

Tomorrow we go to the Jamboree. Jamboree Camp, Aug. 1

We are all set for the Jamboree. Our patrol is made up of the eight boys from the Lonesome Pine Council. Bill Gordon Francis was elected patrol leader before we left Ft. Slocum. We cook in Algean clay pot stoves with charcoal.

The wind is terrific. The campsite next to us had tents blown down. We must be good tent-pitchers for we had but one, and it fell only because it tore.

I guess you heard about the 29 Philippine Scouts who died in an airplane accident. It makes me realize how lucky I am. (Flags flew at half-mast and we had special memorial services for the Philippine Scouts.)

(I'm mailing two letters today, so I can have two sets of the special Jamboree stamps marked, "First day of issue." Please save them for me.)

The heat today has been 104 degrees but the wind cools it down to feel like 80. The wind is supposed to die down tomorrow. Things sure do dry fast. I washed my underwear and hung it on the faucet. Then I washed a T-shirt and when I had finished washing it, my underwear was dry.

I traded an Explorer T-shirt for a French one. We went swimming today and the Aegean (sea) is ice-cold. It is as clear as is claimed. It was 20 feet deep where I was and I could count the leaves on the seaweed.

Our American show is coming along. Some of our group are doing square dancing. Jim Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Francis, Huntington, West Virginia, will be Uncle Sam. More later.

BLAST ROCKS PROJECT SITE

Earth-Moving Equipment Dynamited In Magoffin; State Police Seek Clues

State police and Highway Department investigator joined Monday in efforts to identify the persons who blew up $36,000 worth of construction machinery on the Eastern Parkway extension in Magoffin county.

The engines of two large earth-movers and one bulldozer were blown to bits with dynamite last Thursday night on the project site three miles west of Salyersville.

Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said he will take all steps to track down the guilty, mostly because such incidents can hinder road improvement programs in the mountains.

Reception of the incidents, he said, soon would be reflected in construction bids. Contractors would have to include higher insurance and performance bond costs in their bids.

He was concerned, too, over the prospect that some of the larger contractors would refuse to bid if faced with possible trouble on projects in the mountains, which have a history of violence.

The dynamiting occurred about 10:30 p.m. last Thursday. No one was injured, but a mechanic narrowly escaped death.

Ward said the unidentified mechanic heard the first blast and drove to the scene in a jeep to investigate. He drove past one piece of equipment just before the second blast.

"John Kenny told me that if the man had stopped he would have been blown to bits, too," Ward said. Kenny is head of the Kenny Construction Company, of Illinois, with headquarters in Skokie, Illinois.

Kenny has contracts for $5,187,309 worth of construction work on the extension of the Eastern Kentucky Parkway from Campton to Salyersville. His two projects cover eight miles.

A threat of violence has been connected with Kenny's work since it was started a year ago. Pickets have appeared from time to time protesting that too few local workers were being employed.

Two other unconfirmed reports apparently figure in the investigation. One is that about 15 workers reported for work in a drunken condition recently and were fired in a group after two pickup trucks were smashed by heavy equipment.

Another is that local rock-balers were replaced recently by a West Virginia firm that brought in larger trucks.

Kenny officials were reported in Salyersville to be out of the county and unavailable for comment. Kenny himself conferred in Frankfort Monday with Ward and apparently was on the way back to the project.

Ward said he assured Kenny that the state will provide all protection possible.

"I feel very strongly that the state has an obligation to protect contractors, even though our own equipment was not involved," Ward said.

He said he had assigned officials out of the Jackson district office to work with State Police investigators.

"If necessary, I also will hire professional investigators," Ward added.

Public Safety Commissioner Glenn Lovern said his State Police detective staff is adequately manned to conduct a thorough investigation, and that such is planned.

wealth's Attorney Hollie Conley, County Attorney Barkley Sturdivant and Deputy Sheriff Sam Hale were among those taking part in the investigation, immediately after discovery of the body.

Mr. Willis said he entered the apartment when, passing on his way to his own living quarters, he saw the door partially open and when his call to Mr. Conley brought no response, Mrs. Conley had left the apartment, about 7:30 a.m., to babysit at a Prestonsburg home.

The victim was a miner before he engaged in the restaurant business here. He later operated a farm. He was a son of the late James and Sarah Music Conley and was a native of the Little Paint section of the county. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Dorothy Pelphrey Conley, three sons and three daughters, all children of a previous marriage: Rev. James Dewey Conley, of Prestonsburg, Grady Conley, Lillington, North Carolina, John E. (Pete) Conley, of Lexington, Mrs. Ethel Willis, of David, Mrs. Edith Tyre, Thousand Oaks, California, and Mrs. Doris Cottle-Greeley, Colorado. He also leaves a brother, Ernest Conley, Wilmington, Ohio, and a sister, Mrs. Virgie George, of Cliff.

Funeral rites were conducted today (Thursday) at 1 p.m. from the Little Paint Church of God by the Rev. Moses Kitchen, and burial was made in the family cemetery on Little Paint under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

woman. The same ABC agent who claimed to have made purchases at both places procured warrants for the two women.

It was said that warrants alleging the sale of intoxicants had not been procured against others convicted of possessing because the person making the purchases was out of the county and had not appeared to swear to warrants.

The court proceedings were interrupted Monday by the gunshot death here of J. E. Conley, necessitating continuance of two of the cases till Tuesday.

All those convicted are appealing from the jury verdicts to circuit court. It was said this week that they will attack legality of the search warrants, contending that Glenn C. Burchett as trial commissioner was without authority to issue the writs.

Second trials of Branham and Wells were docketed for August 26. Except for these, the quarterly court docket is clear of liquor cases.

Prominent Letcher Man Victim At Whitesburg; Former Coal Operator

A former Letcher county coal operator, who figured prominently in an income tax evasion case in the 1950's, was shot to death Tuesday of last week near Whitesburg.

The coroner, Mrs. Archie Craft, said Sam J. Bates, 58, was killed during an argument with Edward Darrell Rowe.

Mrs. Craft said Rowe, 24, told this story:

Bates had collected $100 from him last Thursday under the pretext of keeping Rowe's camp on the river from being raided by police.

Two days later the camp was raided, and Rowe was fined $300 on a charge of selling liquor in dry territory.

Rowe said Bates returned to his home Tuesday and wanted more money. When Rowe refused, Bates slapped him and Rowe fired at him once with a revolver.

Bates was released from prison in 1957 after serving a term for income tax evasion. He had been convicted on charges of evading payment of $206,991 on income from the mine he once operated at Whitesburg.

He was a son of the late Robert (Bob) Bates, who was instrumental in the founding of Knott county which was separated from Letcher.

COLOR BARRIERS DROPPED IN 8 KENTUCKY CITIES

Frankfort, Ky., August 5 (Spl.)— Restaurants, theatres, and other public places in Paris, Campbellsville, Elizabethtown, London, Richmond, Owensboro, Paducah and Bowling Green have voluntarily dropped color barriers, following Gov. Bert Combs' fair treatment order of June 28, the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights has reported.

Galen Martin, the Commission's executive director, said to his knowledge no incidents have resulted from new policies in the eight cities.

Earlier, Martin reported voluntary desegregation in public accommodations in Hopkinsville, Frankfort and Danville.

In most of the cities, businessmen got together and agreed to the open-door policy. A Negro leader in Elizabethtown praised the local chamber of commerce for bringing about desegregation of hotels and restaurants there.

The Middlesboro Chamber of Commerce board of directors unanimously passed a resolution urging city businessmen to provide service for all citizens, Martin said.

A drug store chain operating throughout the state informed Martin that some outlets began serving Negroes at lunch counters over 10 months ago. All were "open" at the time of the fair services order in June, the firm's spokesman said.

The Kentucky manager of a national restaurant chain has suggested that local managers serve all patrons without discrimination. The manager, who made the suggestion early in June, commented, "The executive order was what we needed all along."

Lexington, Campbellsville, Franklin and Hopkinsville have also formed human rights councils since the order was issued, Martin said.

Gamma Globulin Allotted To Counteract Infections Afflicting Many In State

Frankfort, Ky.—Gamma globulin, a blood fraction which fights certain diseases and infections, will again be available to Kentuckians through the State Health Department during the 1964 fiscal year.

The first quarterly shipment of the allotment arrived this month. In addition to this amount, Kentucky usually purchases between 3,000 to 4,000 cc of gamma globulin each year to meet needs beyond that of the Red Cross allotment.

The gamma globulin is available to protect household contacts of hepatitis cases, pregnant women exposed to German measles during the first three months of pregnancy, and to prevent rubella (red measles) in children up to two years of age.

About 12% of the 2.5 million pints of blood collected annually by the Red Cross is processed into fractions, of which gamma globulin is one. This is then distributed on the basis of population and amount of blood collected in each of the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Gamma globulin is sent to county health departments by the Kentucky State Department of Health when cases requiring it are reported. The Red Cross places no restrictions on the medical uses of gamma globulin it supplies except that no charge be made for the material.

The continuance of the gamma globulin distribution by the Red Cross depends largely on the financial support of the public and blood donations. Through local support of the bloodmobiles throughout the state, greater quantities of blood may be collected in Kentucky—giving the state a larger gamma globulin allotment for the fiscal year.

Educational TV Heads Appointed, Announced; Program Purpose Told

Frankfort, Ky., August 5 (Spl.)—O. Leonard Press has been appointed executive director and Ronald Stewart chief engineer of the Kentucky Authority for Educational television, it has been announced by Dr. Roy H. Owsley, Authority chairman.

The association between Press and Stewart will continue one of nearly four years at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. Press has been head of the Department of Radio, Television and Films and director of the U. K. Broadcasting Service since September, 1958.

Educational television will supplement the regular classroom instruction. Its main purpose is to make available to even the smallest and most isolated schools top-flight instructional aids for the teacher and laboratory facilities many of these schools cannot afford.

Press, 41, a native of Lowell, Massachusetts, has been on the staff of the University for 11 years, having joined U. K. in September, 1952, as program supervisor. He has also served as program consultant to the National Educational Radio and Television Center in New York and Ann Arbor, Michigan, and to the National Association of Educational Broadcasters in Washington.

He has been vice-chairman of the Kentucky Authority for Educational Television since its organization last year. This year he has been a consultant to the U. S. Office of Education regarding the Educational Television Facilities Act.

Stewart, 29, a native of Jenkins, Kentucky, was chief engineer for radio station WBLG in Lexington prior to joining the U. K. staff. He was graduated from the University in 1960 with a degree in electrical engineering.

Offices for the Authority will be housed temporarily in a U. K. building until a permanent structure is completed on the campus. Test operations are planned for next spring or early summer, with full-time programs scheduled to start in September, 1964.

Ten transmitter stations are to be built. They are to be located at Ashland, Covington, Hazard, Madisonville, Pikeville, Somerset, Bowling Green, Lexington, Morehead and Murray. In addition, it is expected that the production and transmitting facilities of the Jefferson County Board of Education at Louisville will be tied in with the system.

Lexington, Ky.—Biblical agricultural knowledge combined with modern food processing and marketing methods has resulted in a product which may help expand markets in U. S. wheat, according to the U. Miss Connie Mitchell Weds Ronald L. Hammons At Frankfort, June 8

Miss Connie Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cline Mitchell, of Grethel, Kentucky, and Ronald L. Hammons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Hammons, of Frankfort, Kentucky, were united in marriage June 8 at the home of her parents.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gene Corbett in a setting of red roses, gladioli and pink peonies. Mrs. Corbett played the organ and sang "I Love You Truly," and "Tell Me Why."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white, ruffled lace, street-length dress fashioned with a satin, fitted bodice and a scoop neckline that dipped in the back to rosettes and satin bows that hung to the hem. Her veil was of pure silk bridal illusion imported from France. The crown was tiara-type, handmade of simulated miniature pearls and crystal head trim. She carried a white Bible covered with white carnations.

Mrs. Lois Mitchell, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. She wore a street-length dress of yellow chiffon. Her headdress was accented with tiny bows and a nose-length veil. Lowell Mitchell, brother of the bride, was best man.

The mother of the bride wore a blue sheath silk dress with white accessories and a white carnation corsage. The mother of the groom wore a blue jersey dress with harmonizing accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Mrs. Hammons was graduated from Betsy Layne high school in the class of '62. She was a member of F.H.A. Music Club and president of the senior class. She is now an employee of the Commonwealth of Kentucky at Frankfort.

Mr. Hammons was graduated from Franklin County high school at Frankfort. He is now stationed at Baltimore, Maryland, with the Navy as personnelman third class.

LaRUE SCHOOLS RECOGNIZED FOR PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Seven schools and 1,546 students in LaRue county, Kentucky, were cited Tuesday as "dramatic evidence" of what can be done toward better physical fitness in American youth.

The President's Council on Physical Fitness, in a report released here on schools and colleges all over the United States, said results in LaRue county were "dramatic evidence of what can be accomplished by action and enthusiasm even where there is a shortage of facilities and leadership."

(The LaRue county school system is headed by former Morgan county Superintendent of Schools Ova Hanev and husband of the former Miss Irma Wicker, of Wayland. Mrs. Hanev is chief clerk of the superintendent's office.)

Their statistics showed that when the first fitness tests were given to the children in LaRue county, 42 percent could not pass the minimum tests, but after six weeks only 15 percent didn't pass. They added that after 12 weeks the percentage unable to pass was down to nine.

In the overall survey, the council said that during that 1962-1963 school year, four out of every five children passed a minimum test of strength, agility, and flexibility as compared to two of every three children tested in 1961.

While there have been big gains in physical-fitness programs and the number of children participating, the council cautioned that more must be done. It said California is the only state requiring daily participation by every student in a physical education period. It said 20 percent of public school pupils in Grades 4 to 12 have no program at all.

The council went on to say they will begin aiming at the adults now.

Despite the gains, the report said, the United States "still has a long way to go to match foreign countries in physical fitness programs."

Still, it said, "Today's school children are spending more time in physical fitness programs and are measurably stronger and in better condition than the school children of a few years ago. A significant trend also is noted at the college level. The decline in the physical fitness of entering freshmen apparently has been checked and reversed."

The council operates under the direction of C. B. "Bud" Wilkins, President John F. Kennedy's consultant on physical fitness and football coach at the University of Oklahoma.

Scholarship Plan Made For Over-Age Children In State Institutions

A scholarship plan for vocational training of older children in state institutions has been announced by Richard J. Clendenen, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Child Welfare.

Clendenen said the new plan calls for sending selected children 16 to 18 years old to the Mayo Vocational School at Paintsville and West Kentucky Vocational School at Paducah. Funds are available to meet their expenses of enrollment and living at the schools, Clendenen said. He estimated the cost at about $600 a year for each student.

To start the plan, $8,000 is available, the commissioner reported. He said this is more than enough for 12 scholarships. Eight of these would go to selected children at the Kentucky Children's Home, and the others to youngsters at Kentucky Village, the State Reception Center, and the Barkley State Camp for Boys, with allotments varying by need.

The money is to come from Social Security payments, mainly survivors' benefits, which a number of dependent children receive. A portion of these payments goes to the account of the beneficiaries and a portion into a pooled fund of the institution which shelters them.

Another source of scholarship money is the Kentucky Children's Home Corporation, lineal descendant of the citizens' group that founded K. C. H. nearly 70 years ago. The corporation board has announced a grant of $1,500 to pay tuition, fees and incidentals for K. C. H. children in high schools, junior colleges, and vocational schools.

State-Chartered Banks Show Resources Upped; Commissioner Comments

Frankfort, Ky., August 5 (Sp.)—Kentucky's 267 state-chartered banks showed an increase of 9.3 percent in total resources on June 30, compared with the same date last year, Banking Commissioner H. A. Rogers has reported.

Rogers said the increases showed "a vigorous climb well above our expectations."

The 1963 figure is $1,682,807,021 for June, 1963, compared with $1,539,385,203 on June 30, 1962, an increase of more than $143 million.

Percentage increase for 1961-1962 over the preceding year was 8.6 percent, Rogers said.

Total deposits in June, 1963, were up $131 million over last year. The biggest jump was in the time deposits which reflect the higher interest rates now being paid, Rogers said. Time deposits rose from $356 million to $417 million over the 12 months.

Demand deposits showed a significant increase, from $721 million to $766 million this year.

Total capital accounts of the institutions were $156.5 million this year, compared with $148.5 million last June. But increased deposits lowered the percentage of total capital to total resources from 9.66 percent last year to 9.29 this year.

Rogers explained this means the banks have 92.9 cents in capital for every $10 on deposit, a ratio still well above the national average.

In addition to Kentucky's 267 banks under state regulation, there are some 35 under federal regulation. The latter include "national" in their names and are interstate in character. These banks are not included in the report by Rogers.

Urges Subscribers Keep Phone On Hook

Please don't leave your telephone off the hook. That's the request of Leroy Warren, plant manager for the Southern Bell Telephone Company in Paintsville and Prestonsburg. Mr. Warren said several subscribers each week who report their telephones are out of order have really just forgotten to replace the receiver on the hook. Nearly 8,600 cases of trouble reported during the first six months of this year in Southern Bell territory in Kentucky were the direct result of customers not replacing their receivers properly, Warren said. He pointed out that not only their own service was affected, but any person on the same party line also found his telephone dead. In many cases, Warren said, it was discovered an extension telephone had been left off the hook and forgotten when another member of the family had taken the call on a telephone elsewhere in the home.

EAST-WEST GAMES

Saturday night in Lexington the annual East-West high school basketball and football games will be held for the 12th time. Representing this area in the basketball skirmish will be Virgie's six-foot-four center, Don Blair, and Carr Creek has all-stater Lewis Couch and William Fannin, both of whom played under East coach, Morton Combs. In the East-West football game the E.K.M.C. is represented by Belfry's all-state quarterback, Floyd Halford; halfback John M. Ratliff and end John Collier, of Pikeville; end Donnie Phipps, of Elkhorn City. Whitesburg's Delano Thomas and tackle Jimmy Stamper were named but failed to accept the invitation to play. All of the players named from this area were all-conference selections last season.

ALL-STAR GAME

Williamson's annual West Virginia-Kentucky Kiwanis all-star football game will be played in the West Virginia city Saturday, August 17, at 8:30 p.m. (E.S.T.) Belfry coach Al Vipperman will coach the Kentucky team and be assisted by Jack Hall, of Elkhorn City, and Carl Ward, of Ceredo-Kenova. Jim Perry, of Crum, will handle the West Virginia team. Some of the players on the Kentucky roster are: Ernest Tackett, Claude Tolliver and Kenneth Duty, of Fleming-Neon; Hiram Wright, Billy Wright and Jerry Coats, of Whitesburg; David Belcher, Elkhorn City; John Turner, Paintsville; George Shell, John Fleming and Crayton Hamilton, Jenkins; Larry Lee, Catlettsburg; William Felner, Leslie County; Jay Collier, Pikeville; Manuel Arnett, M. C. Napier, and Sonny Phillips and John Coleman, Belfry. Ronnie Snodgrass, of Prestonsburg, was invited, but an ankle injury will keep him from playing.

PLANS ROAD TRIP

Denzil Halbert, veteran Martin basketball coach, is attempting to schedule a two-day basketball road trip to Central Kentucky. He would like to schedule the games in January. Wheelwright high lacks four games to complete its 1963 football schedule. Coach Ray Brackett needs home games for September 14 and 21 and October 5, and an away game for October 17.

All Eastern Kentucky football coaches and football officials are required to attend the annual Eastern Kentucky football rules clinic at Prestonsburg high school next Tuesday night at 7:30. The clinic is sponsored by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association. E. B. May, Jr., of Prestonsburg, is the region's official representative.

Prestonsburg high school football coach Bert Dixon had 50 candidates report for fall practice drills Monday. The Black Cats will play a ten-game schedule, with home games set for September 13, Elkhorn City; October 11, Belfry; October 18, Whitesburg; November 1, Paintsville.

School Program Aided From Governor's Fund; Cutback Is Prevented

Youth Councils, to deal with the problem of Kentucky's school dropouts and unemployed youth at the local level, have been set up in 60 Kentucky counties, Dr. Cathryn Handelman, chairman of the Kentucky Commission on Children and Youth, has announced. In Floyd county, appointments to the council have been accepted by Judge Henry Stumbo, Superintendent Charles Clark and Richmond Stone. They will represent the county at a forthcoming statewide conference on school dropouts set for August 22-23 at the Kentucky hotel in Louisville. "We want this conference to be a practical one," Dr. Handelman said, "and in order to do so, we need help from the local level. An organization in every county is the ultimate goal of the Commission. We have invited all county judges and school superintendents to select a third council member and participate in the local movement. "In addition," she said, "we hope the county youth councils will provide continuing study and action on a year-round basis."

Kentucky in 1962 had the second highest school dropout rate in the nation—48.2 percent. An intensive report of the situation will be released at the August conference by the Kentucky Department of Education.

Forestry Award Contest Deadline Is Announced; $1,000 Cash Prizes Set

The deadline to enter the Tom Wallace Farm Forestry Awards Competition has been extended two weeks until August 30. Kentucky and Southern Indiana farmers have until that time to submit entries in the ninth annual contest, which offers $1,000 in cash prizes. Designed to emphasize the importance of an active farm forestry program, the competition is sponsored by The Courier-Journal, The Louisville Times and WHAS, Inc. To be eligible for the grand prize of $500 or the second prize of $200, the farmer may have completed his forestry program over a period of several years or in a single year. However, the improvement awards of $200 and $100 are based on progress made since last August. A certificate of merit will be presented to the top entrant in each county from which five or more entries are received. Entry blanks and complete rules may be obtained from foresters, county agents, conservationists, or by writing the Public Service Department of the newspapers. Entries must be submitted to the Tom Wallace Farm Forestry Awards, The Courier-Journal, The Louisville Times and WHAS, Inc., Louisville, Ky., 40202.

? WILDLIFE ? QUESTIONS ? AND ANSWERS ?

Q. A few days ago I was fishing in a state-owned lake and was told that I could take but 15 bluegill. It was my understanding that there was no limit on the number of bluegill that can be taken from Kentucky waters. Why this limit on specific lakes? J.R.B., Spencer county.

A. Different rules apply to newly opened state-owned waters, both as to size and creel limits. This is necessary to protect the fish during the formative years of the lake and to guarantee so far as possible a sustaining population of fish. Yes, in some of the lakes only 15 bluegill may be taken. There is no size limit on bluegill but for bass there is both a size limit and creel limit in some of the lakes. The best advice to a fisherman is that he acquaint himself with the rules of the lake before fishing. Posters giving this information have been placed on all lakes so governed.

Q. Our teacher told us that the mourning dove is a migratory bird. If it is why does it nest in this state? We have a large cedar tree on our place and most every year doves are hatched there. K.H.R., Pembroke, Ky.

A. Your teacher is correct. The dove is considered a migratory bird and seasons are regulated by the federal government. They do nest and hatch young in Kentucky but those birds hatched in this state often move southward during the winter, while those reared in states further north move into Kentucky during the cold periods.

A lure that is good for casting but may be poor for trolling, since it will have little or no built-in action and must be given action by the user. This "includes out" of good trolling lures the plastic worms and jigs now so deservedly popular for casting, as well as some others. Which, of course, isn't saying that they won't sometimes catch fish when trolled.

A nonweedless lure is certain to hook more strikes of most species than will any but the best weedless one—in other words, catch more fish for you in a day, perhaps including the big one that didn't get away. So it's often desirable to use a nonweedless whenever it's practical; that is, when you don't have to reel in too often to take off a weed.

Still, some of our best lures come in weedless only. Some are so effective that I use them as they are, even in open water, says Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. With others, you can instantly press down the weed-guard to render it inoperative in any way—and later, when it's needed, put it back up just far enough above the hook point to avoid hooking weeds.

Many lures, trolled at the right speed, impart a steady twitching or bobbing motion to the rod tip, but even the tiniest weed will stop this; so a casual glance at the rod will tell you if the lure is performing properly.

In most fresh water trolling, the depth at which an underwater lure runs is governed not by a sinker
