

HON. WILLIAM C. IRELAND

This biography of Judge William C. Ireland, of Maysville, was copied from History of Kentucky, by Kniffen, Perrin and Battle, published in 1887. It is a rare volume and the wealth of historical and genealogical materials it contains is a mine of information for students of Kentucky history.

Judge Ireland was presiding judge of the old Sixteenth Judicial District, one county in his circuit being Floyd. His picture hung in the Floyd Circuit Court room here for many decades but was removed during a remodeling of the structure a few decades ago.

The Ireland biography, as published in the old volume, follows:

"Hon. William C. Ireland is a son of Capt. Samuel D. and Sarah Crutcher Ireland and was born in Mason county, Kentucky, November 28, 1823. His grandfather, James Ireland, was a native of southwestern Pennsylvania and came to Kentucky when the latter was yet a part of the territory of Virginia. He was an officer under General Wilkinson in the early Indian wars and was one of the active and influential pioneers of Mason county.

"He was a nephew of Rev. James Ireland, a distinguished Virginian Baptist clergyman who appeared among the early ministers of his denomination that laid the foundation of the church in Virginia. Capt. Samuel D. Ireland was born in a blockhouse near the town of Washington, Mason county, August 1, 1798. He commenced boating on the Ohio River before he had reached his seventeenth year and long before the days of steamboats; and in 1827 or 1829 built the side-wheeler steamer, 'New Emigrant,' and ran that boat for some time to Cincinnati, Louisville and points up the river. Afterward he built the 'Cuba' and commanded her for some time, and subsequently partially owned and commanded the 'Hunter.' In 1845 he permanently quit the river and remained on his farm near Maysville, Lewis (sic) county, until his death in 1861.

"He was a man of large brain and great mental and physical ability and was greatly liked for his integrity of character. It is quite certain that his ancestors in this country were of Scotch or Scotch-Irish extraction and appeared in America long prior to the Revolution, doubtless first settling in Pennsylvania, Maryland or Virginia, or in all these states. The orthography of this name may have remained unchanged from the first but in the Western states one branch, apparently pointing to the same origin, is omitting the final letter. His mother, Sarah Crutcher, was born in Mason county, Kentucky, in 1800, and was the daughter of Matthew and Sarah Crutcher, who came to this state from Maryland.

"William C. Ireland received a good education, chiefly at the private schools of Mason and Lewis counties, commenced life in a store as a clerk, at Maysville, and afterward had charge of his father's farm for several years. In 1845 he went to Clarksville, Lewis county, where he studied law and wrote in the clerk's office for two years; in 1848 he was admitted to the bar at once entered upon practice at Clarksville. He rose rapidly in his profession, his practice embracing some of the most important cases. In 1852 he removed to Greensburg, Greenup county, where he established a large and valuable practice, and became one of the leading men at the bar of Eastern Kentucky, his practice extending over five counties and for many years before the courts of the state.

"In 1858 he removed to Ashland and has since resided there, pursuing his profession with his accustomed skill and success. In 1859 he was elected to represent Greenup county in the lower House of the Legislature and was re-elected in 1861, serving through the greater part of the most important period in the history of that body, especially during the second term of his service; the Legislature of Kentucky was noted for being composed of many of the best men of the state. He took position with the members of that body against the secession of the state from the federal union, and became one of the advocates of the necessary measures to sustain the state in its relations to the National Government.

"He also published several papers ably defending the course pursued by the Union leaders and rejecting the plans of secession as being a remedy for any wrong, but as being the way to the absolute ruin of the state and the impoverishment of her people, and while he remained firm in his position throughout the war and was bitterly opposed to the establishment of a Southern Confederacy, and worked incessantly against it, yet his sympathies were very warm for the Southern people, whose course he believed to be wrong.

"In 1863 he was elected assistant clerk of the Senate and served two years in that capacity. In 1874 he was elected circuit judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District, his term expiring in 1880. He was a Whig in politics until the dissolution of that party; was a conservative at the close of the Civil War, and has for a number of years been identified with the Democratic party. He has been for over thirty years actively connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is prominent in some of the social organizations of the day, has been largely identified with all movements of interest in the community, and is one of the ablest lawyers and most valuable citizens in his part of the state.

"Judge Ireland was married July 4, 1849, to Miss Pamela D. Robb, of Lewis county, Kentucky. They have three living children, viz: Virginia L., wife of Rev. John W. Hampton, of Ashland; Sallie D., wife of Edward S. Norton, a prominent hotel man, and Samuel R., a law student at Ann Arbor, Michigan."

This Bill Deserves Active Support

If you are interested in improvement of the judicial processes of quarterly courts, mark House Bill 209 on your calendar.

This legislation, introduced by one of Floyd county's representatives, Fred Gearheart, is of real importance to every county in Kentucky. It provides that the county judge of each county appoint three jury commissioners in January of each year.

This legislation is important because it provides a means of escape from selection of juries by bailiffs or other officers who, if interested in the outcome of one or more trials, can under the present system easily pack a jury.

The law might well apply to magistrate's courts where also are heard cases similar to those given trial in quarterly courts.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky By JOE JORDAN (Kentucky Civil War Commission)

"There is no military news of any moment from any quarter," the Lexington Observer and Reporter observed (and reported) 100 years ago this week. The lack of news of battles and campaigns did not pose a problem for Editor D. C. (Mike) Wickliffe, though, for the Kentucky legislature was in session and it was a presidential election year.

Commenting on the spread of bootlegging and the need to meet such a challenge, Judge Conley said, "If this special grand jury doesn't slow it down, I personally will ask Governor Edward Breathitt and Commissioner of Public Safety Glenn Lovern to give us enough men so that two can be stationed near the door of every known bootlegger. We'll at least have an eye on their comings and goings."

"I know," Conley added, "I have some friends who are in the whiskey business. My advice to them is—get out now."

Bethlehem Steel Seals Mare-Cr. Mine Openings

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation has ordered its mine mouths on Mare Creek closed to the public. Several openings used years ago by the Pike-Floyd Coal Company, grantor to the steel and coal firm, were sealed last week with concrete blocks.

The mine openings were being entered by the public and early in the winter a considerable operation in the mining and sale of domestic coal was conducted. The company ordered the mines sealed in the interest of safety, it is said.

Eastern Student Grants Enable Many To Study; Interest Rate Is Low

More than 500 Eastern Kentucky State College, Richmond, students have used National Defense Student Loans totaling $113,525 to continue their college education during the fall semester.

And another $119,000 has been allocated to 550 students in residence at Eastern this spring semester.

An additional $35,000 is needed to satisfy total requests, which amounted to $154,000, according to Miss Lois Colley, director of student financial aid and administrator of the loan program. These funds may be made available later in the semester.

Loans were kept to a minimum this year, she explained, since appropriations weren't passed by Congress until mid-December. At this time $90 million was appropriated, with an additional $31.2 million to come later.

Authorized by the National Defense Education Act of 1958, the federal appropriation provides a financial aid program for college students to use in furthering their education and allows 11 years for repayment.

Interest, at the rate of three per cent, begins after the borrower ceases to be a full-time student. If the borrower enters military service, interest will not begin to accrue for the period of actual military service up to a maximum of three years, and the loans of borrowers who teach will be reduced by one-tenth for each year of teaching for a maximum of five years. This means that those who teach for five years will have to repay only one-half of the amount they borrow.

The repayment schedule permits a borrower to have a year of grace after he leaves college. At the end of the second year, he may begin repaying his loan at 10 per cent plus the three per cent interest.

Since its inauguration at the beginning of the spring semester in 1959, National Defense Loans at Eastern have amounted to $819,780. For each loan granted by the federal government, the college has contributed one-ninth of the total amount. In 1959, 54 students were recipients of the loans; in the spring semester of 1964, 550 received grants.

STRAWBERRIES

Orders for strawberry plants are being placed at a slow pace. Why? There are probably several answers, but I am sure it is not because all farmers are making so much money. Answer these questions for yourself: Do you have a need for additional money, especially in May and June? Do you have suitable land, reasonably level and not too wet? Do you or your family have time that you are not using profitably? If you can answer "yes" to these questions, talk to someone that has raised strawberries, or come by the office. You should consider setting strawberries this year.

Youth Power Delegate Tells of Meeting

By MAE RITA GAYHEART
On January 31 and February 1, I represented Floyd county at the first National Youthpower Conference at Lexington. I was selected upon the basis of my 4-H work. The theme for this conference was, "Food Comes First."

There were 109 delegates in all. They were Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, F.F.A. and F.H.A. groups. Some of our main speakers were Bernie Vonderhide, editor of The Kentucky Farmer; Nell Owen, Miss Kentucky of 1963; Early Perry, the writer for young people in the Kentucky Farmer. The second-rated magician in the U.S.A. entertained us.

Mostly, we had discussion groups and discussed food and its role in our everyday lives. I enjoyed this conference tremendously, not only because it was an all-expense-paid trip but because I really learned some valuable information about nutrition.

Leaders of the conference urged us to come back to our communities and make ourselves available to any civic groups or other organizations which might be interested in learning more about the activities of this conference. Any interested group may contact me at Eastern, Ky., or call Maytown high school.

Application Deadline For Feed Grain Pay

Deadline for feed grain applications is March 27, it was announced this week by Elder Goble, office manager of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

The feed grain program has been in operation three years and was designed to decrease feed grain production, stabilize and increase farm income and to increase cropland acreage devoted to conservation use.

"We feel the feed grain program has been very successful," Goble said. "Last year more than 45,000 Kentucky farmers signed up to participate and the producers on these farms earned $17 million or an average of $375 per farm."

Farmers are urged to visit the ASC office for full information on the program.

HOW SCHOLARLY!
Winston Churchill and some lesser lights were born a generation or so too soon. If these fellows who had no overweening affection for Latin were in school today — let's say, some schools — they would find it a fascinating study. In Melbourne, Florida, for instance, a high school principal was helping his daughter with her Latin. They were reading a story about a Roman boy named Marcellus.
Then, all of a sudden, they come to the point where this Marcellus was in Rome on a "picus nicus." The words threw the father, and he was needing help as much as the daughter. A glance at the bottom of the page helped. A footnote there read:
"Picus nicus, a word made up just for you, meaning picnic."
The school principal rallied from that one and continued the lesson. And a few lines farther down he and daughter found Marcellus on his "picus nicus" drinking a "coccam-colam."
This time he knew where to look, and, sure enough, there in the footnotes was this enlightening statement:
"Coccam-colam, a made-up word for Coca-Cola."
Which confirms my translation—all Gaul is divided between two parties.

OOPS!

It is held possible that, if the sale of bonds is affected without undue delay, the two urban renewal projects could be under way this year at the same time street paving is being done on a citywide scale by virtue of a $486,000 federal grant and a loan of $265,000.

Miss Clark, Mr. Pulliam Wed

Marriage vows were exchanged in a double-ring ceremony by Miss Sarah Louise Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen William Clark, of Wheelwright, Kentucky, and Darrell Boul Pulliam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen B. Pulliam, of Louisville. The Rev. Leo H. Frankrone, of Saint Juliana Parish Church of Martin, performed the ceremony in the Wheelwright Community Church on Saturday, February 8, at 12:30 in the afternoon.

White candelabra lighted the altar, which was banked with palms and decorated with silver baskets filled with white gladioli and white chrysanthemums. As guests were seated, a prelude of organ music was provided by Mrs. Raymond W. Gibson, church organist. Mrs. Donald Guth, wife of the Methodist minister, sang "Pans Angelicus," by Cesar Franck, and Franz Schubert's "Ave Maria."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk organza, fashioned with a portrait neckline, trimmed with a border of alencon lace, and long, tapered sleeves forming calla points at the wrists. The sleeves and the back of the fitted bodice were fastened with tiny satin buttons. The skirt of bouffant organza worn over tiers of silk taffeta and net, braced by bridal hoops, was caught at the sides and back with medallions of alencon lace and fell into a full chapel train. Her veil was a handmade mantilla, imported from Belgium, woven of pure silk French illusion, bordered with a band of brussels lace and studded with tiny seed pearls. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white roses, centering a yellow-throated white orchid, from which fell streamers of white satin ribbon tied with stephanotis blooms.

Attending her sister as matron of honor was Mrs. Joseph Philip Heist, of Granville, Ohio, and bridesmaids were Miss Alice Miriam Clark, sister of the bride, who attends Ursuline College in Louisville, and Jennifer Fannin, of Harold, cousin of the bride who was junior bridesmaid.

Acting as best man was Mr. Ronald Folts. Ushers included Mr. Stanley Humphries and Mr. James Penner, cousin of the bride, both of Louisville.

Bridal attendants were attired in identically styled turquoise dresses of silk taffeta, with short sleeves, fitted draped bodices and full skirts. They wore matching headpieces of sheer petals, trimmed with miniature flowers. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of magenta colored California roses with curled petals, and white stephanotis.

HOUSE VOTE SCHEDULED ON BILLION BUDGET BILL

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17 (Sp.)—A vote in the House is scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday on the Administration's record $1.4 billion budget bill.

A final House hearing on the measure which provides for operation of state government for the next two years was set for 10 a.m. Tuesday by the chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Governor Edward T. Breathitt, in his budget message to a joint session of the House and Senate, said, "With the adoption of this budget, which represents the soundest thinking of our state's most expert public servants, we will not only keep Kentucky marching forward, but we will quicken the pace of that march."

"At the same time I must advise you that this is a most precisely balanced document, and I can carry out my pledge to finance it without new or higher taxes only if the Assembly resists the temptation to indulge in costly measures not contained in this budget, or expand programs not contained herein beyond their proposed boundaries."

Set for 10 a.m. Thursday in the Senate chamber this week was a hearing by the Senate Municipalities Committee on the controversial question of state Sunday-closing legislation. The committee has four proposals under consideration.

One would allow local option. Another would close large retail firms on Sunday mornings from 6 a.m. until noon, with a local option choice on all-day closing. The third would prohibit the Sunday sale of specific items such as appliances, furniture and clothing. The fourth is similar.

The House passed by voice a resolution whereby public-school teachers were "encouraged to start each school day by asking publicly for guidance from Almighty God."

The House by voice vote also adopted a resolution which requested Congress "to propose a constitutional amendment to the effect that freedom of religion shall include the right to offer prayer in public schools."

A group of clerical members of Allied Organizations for Civil Rights touched off some complaints in the Senate because of notes sent to members in session asking them to leave the floor for a few minutes to hear the clergymen's views on the public accommodations bill.

Some of the legislators obliged but Senate Majority Leader Casper Gardner, Owensboro, complained that the notes amounted to lobbying on the Senate floor during a session, which is prohibited.

Lieutenant Governor Harry Lee Waterfield, president of the Senate, agreed and warned that unless the note sending stopped, lobbyists would be banned from corridors near the Senate.

The Senate passed by a vote of 29 to 1 and sent to the House an Administration bill which would limit to 58 the number of employees of both houses of the General Assembly, not counting constitutional officers. The measure carried the signatures of all three Democratic Senate leaders.

First reading was given in the House to a bill which would change primary election day from the last Tuesday in May to the fourth Monday in August. Kentucky primaries formerly were held on the first Saturday of August. The present bill was enacted in 1956.

Less than one-third of the more than 1,000 bills that will probably be introduced in the 1964 Kentucky General Assembly now in session will ever be written into the laws of Kentucky.

This high mortality rate is not the result of unfavorable votes in the Senate or House of Representatives—less than one per cent of all proposed legislation is defeated by legislative ballot.

The future course of a proposed bill is almost exclusively in the hands of one of the 64 standing committees of the House and Senate. These groups cull, screen, investigate, and report favorably or unfavorably on every piece of legislation having the effect of law. Their findings are almost always accepted by their fellow legislators.

Standing committees, with membership ranging from four to 43 legislators, are set up at the beginning of each legislature to handle the different types of legislation expected to be introduced. As bills are tossed into the legislative hopper, they are referred to the appropriate committee which decides whether or not they merit attention by the Assembly as a whole.

Since it would obviously be impossible for the House and Senate to consider and debate on the floor the merits of these 1,000-plus bills during the 60-working days of each regular session, the committee system has been established as the most efficient way of determining the merits of each item in the mass of proposed legislation.

The rules of assigning bills to committees are also established by each legislature. During the current session, the Lieutenant Governor as presiding officer of the Senate makes committee assignments for bills submitted in that chamber and for bills already passed by the House. The same job in the House of Representatives is handled by the Committee on Committees.

In considering a bill, a committee has four courses of action: it can report a bill favorably, unfavorably with committee amendment or substitution, unfavorably, or make no report at all. The last two rulings almost invariably spell doom for a bill.

In the 1960 regular session—the last legislature for which complete statistics are available—45 per cent of all bills introduced in the House and 33 per cent in the Senate failed to survive the first committee report.

Bills already passed by one chamber have a good chance of committee approval in the opposite chamber; only 25 per cent of Senate bills were rejected by House committees and 20 per cent of those passed by the House failed to clear the Senate committee hurdle.

Once a bill receives a favorable committee report it is given first reading to the legislative body and placed on orders of the day for subsequent action. Here it faces the second major test. In the 1960 session, 15 per cent of favorably reported bills were either recommitted by majority vote for further study or were never called from the orders of the day for a vote.

When a bill receives its third reading and comes up for a final vote, success is virtually assured. During the 1960 session, only six bills were defeated by legislative ballot in their house of origin, and four which passed in one chamber were voted down by the opposite chamber.

Veto by the governor stopped 17 bills, but 251 of the 832 bills introduced in the 1960 session finally became law.

CLASS IN THIRD SESSION

A Civil Defense class, sponsored by the Lackey-Garrett Wayland Woman's Club, was held last Monday evening at the club-house in Wayland. This was the third in the current series.

Several interesting films were shown, including one illustrating a step-by-step method of building an inexpensive basement bomb shelter. A film showing work now being done on the "Dew Line" (Distant Early Warning Line) in the sub-Arctic reaches of Canada was shown. Another film titled, "Seconds for Survival," narrated by Raymond Massey, was shown.

Curtis Moore and Adrian Bentley, certified Civil Defense instructors, answered questions during the coffee break. The next regular club meeting is scheduled for Monday, February 24, at 6:30 p.m., at the clubhouse.

MENTAL HEALTH GROUP PLANS EXPANDED WORK

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17 (Spl.)—Kentuckians no longer travel long distances to have babies or operations and the mentally ill may soon have similar close-to-home services, according to plans drafted by the Kentucky Mental Health Planning Commission.

This local approach is part of a mental health blueprint to nail down the state's future needs. It is being prepared by the Commission and the Division of Planning in the State Department of Mental Health.

The commission, chaired by Howard Bost, assistant vice-president of the University of Kentucky Medical Center, and the new division were created last year after Kentucky became the first state to secure a federal grant for mental health planning.

Stanley Blostein, Louisville, former community health consultant with the State Department of Health, heads the division. It operates on a Federal $63,100 grant for each of the two fiscal years ending July, 1965.

Blostein describes the study grants as "first aid" for mental illness. The all-out attack, he said, hinges on the $29 million in federal funds made available last year by the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Mental Health Centers Construction Act.

Of particular interest to the planners is the $150 million which the act earmarks for construction of community centers. Funds for these projects will be allotted by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare as states complete their planning programs, possibly by July of next year, Blostein said.

Under the act, federal funds pay from one-third to two-thirds of the total project costs, with state and local funds making up the difference. (Kentucky's share of the total $150 million allotment has not been set, Blostein said.)

Kentucky's planning staff envisions 16 regional mental health centers, located in or near the dozen medical hubs to which Kentuckians now go for specialized medical services.

Currently, there are 19 community mental health centers in the state but most of these offer limited services and operate on a part-time basis, Blostein said.

Morehead Dean's List Announced for Semester

Morehead, Ky., Feb. 15 (Spl.)—Five hundred four Morehead State College students made the Dean's List for the fall term, and 58 compiled perfect 4.0 standings.

Students must achieve a point standing of 3.0 out of a possible 4.0 to appear on the Dean's List. Among the students making perfect standings was Mrs. Betty Jean Rowe Ellis, of Prestonsburg. Other students from Floyd county who made the Dean's List are:

- Peggy Sue Bradford, 3.80; Paul Ray Branham, 3.25; Caleb Bernard Cooley, 3.25; Bobby F. Crager, 3.00; Valeeta Gay Frazier, 3.06; Gypsie Gearheart, 3.31; Carol Jean Hogsed, 3.40; Ethel Shepherd, 3.00; Wayne Alexander Smiley, 3.07; Roger Lee Tackett, 3.53; Ronald Eugene Vaughan, 3.27 and Helen Louise Wells, 3.00.

Since no federal funds are available for staffing and operating the new community centers, these costs must be met by state and local governments and by private sources such as patient fees.

The pattern for state-local contributions to the centers has been set in about 25 states, through legislation permitting the state to match local funds, usually on a dollar-for-dollar basis, to the limit of $1 per person per year. Such a plan, Blostein said, may be suitable for Kentucky.

Another potential source of income for the centers—health insurance payments—may develop as a major contributor to the program, Blostein said. Some few insurance companies now include coverage of mental illness and others cover it on an optional basis.

Major health insurance companies are moving toward more liberal underwriting of mental illness, he added.

Nationwide, about one-third of all hospitalized mental patients enter private institutions, Blostein said. These patients are being studied through a survey of private psychiatrists, to determine what part they play in the total treatment picture.

Wheelwright Kiwanians Get World Fair Preview From Kentucky Utility

Color slides of many of the major exhibits to be shown at the New York World's Fair were shown to the Wheelwright Kiwanis Club at its regular meeting, February 3, by J. A. Palmer, director of public relations for Kentucky Power Company. In the 20-minute talk on the fair, Palmer outlined many general facts as well as explaining in detail the "Tower of Light" exhibit of the investor-owned power companies. He estimated that seventy million people will visit the Fair between April 22 and October 18, 1964, and between April 21 and October 17, 1965.

The Unisphere, the symbol of the fair's theme of "Peace Through Understanding," is a 14-story global representation of the world in stainless steel. This symbol is being presented to the Fair by the United States Steel Corporation and will stand as a permanent fixture at Flushing Meadows Park. Mr. Palmer said that General Motors' "Futurama" is the largest and most elaborate exhibit ever constructed by one company or nation. This 40-thousand square foot structure will house a continuous show of envisioning the world-wide adventure into man's potential for progress in the future.

He said that the "Tower of Light" features three 120-foot high prismatic pylons and 12 searchlights, each with one billion candlepower of light—the greatest concentration of exposition lighting ever created.

SERVICE FORESTER WORK IS CHALLENGING FIELD

Service Forester at Work

STATE SERVICE FORESTER Don Graves, of the Williamstown office, of the Kentucky Conservation Department's Forestry Division, uses a diameter stick to determine whether this tree is large enough to be harvested. He is one of 38 such foresters in Kentucky, who daily answer requests from private woodland owners for assistance in when to cut, when and what to plant, and how to protect the valuable trees that cover nearly 11.5 million acres of Kentucky land.

Special to the Times

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 9 — Surveyor, farmer, economic advisor, teacher, fire marshal, botanist, mathematician, statistician and computer rolled into one—those are the minimum professional requirements of Kentucky state service foresters.

In Kentucky there are 38 of these jacks-of-all-trades. To a man, they hold a college degree in forestry. And not one would change his rugged, mostly-outdoors existence for another occupation.

As qualified consultants in their field, they receive daily requests from timber owners throughout the state for advice and assistance. During 1963 they responded to nearly 5,600 requests for service, or an average of about 145 per man, the State Conservation Department's Forestry Division reports.

These requests ranged from "What kind of tree should I plant?" to "How many board feet of timber per acre by species can I harvest from my stand?" Each request usually involves one, two or more trips to the timber owner's land and several hours of paper work in the office.

Farm operators, with tree stands averaging around 30 acres per farm, make up the biggest group of those seeking help from the state foresters.

State Forestry Director Gene L. Butcher says that Kentucky has 11.5 million acres of forest land, of which about 10.5 million acres are privately owned. Farm ownership represents about half of the privately-owned land, he says.

When the timber owner wants help with his stand, he contacts the service forester, who will first survey the timberland and make a preliminary report, basing his recommendations on obtaining the best managed forest.

If the land has underdeveloped or open plots, the forester recommends planting seedlings and will list the type of tree that can best be grown on this land (seedlings, in eight varieties, are supplied by the State Forestry Division, at a nominal cost of $8 per thousand.)

The forester also recommends improvements that may be necessary—fire protection for the timber or guards against damage from grazing animals.

The first thought of every forester in his preliminary report is to encourage a "sustained yield"—that is cutting each year only those trees which have reached a certain size. This allows better growth of smaller trees which are harvested in turn when they reach the required size.

Butcher points out that this type of rotation assures a continuing income and is better for the conservation of the land than to cut all the trees at once regardless of size. Foresters compare "sustained yield" timberland to an insurance policy.

Where land is overdeveloped—with trees that are too big or too numerous—the forester will agree to or recommend harvesting a "cash crop" of trees. This leads to an even more complex part of the service forester's job.

At the owner's request the forester will "mark" the trees for cutting. Using a spray-paint gun, he walks through the wooded land, making two paint marks on every tree which has attained a certain diameter or more—the size he recommended be cut in his preliminary report.

At the same time that he marks the tree, the forester estimates by height and diameter the volume of commercial wood that can be taken out of it. He notes this by symbols on a chart and also writes down the type of tree—several different species usually grow on one plot of land.

Painting, observing and making notes, a good forester can mark trees on an average 25 acres of land per day, Butcher says. The maximum area the division will agree to mark is 500 acres.

THE ZONE MOAN

Kentucky's veteran basketball coach, Adolph Rupp, hates the zone defense so intensely, when he installed one this year for the first time he was using words like "transitional shifting" and "hyperbolic paraboloid" to describe it. Now he has mellowed to the point he calls it a "point press." Everybody else refers to it as a one-three-one zone.

Southeastern Conference basketball has grown from mediocrity to as good a brand of round ball as played in any league. Kentucky ruled the SEC with such complete authority for so many years it is still the BIG game on the schedule of the other league teams. For many of them a win over Kentucky makes a successful season.

The best way to beat Kentucky has been a ball control type of game. And that's the type of basketball that is in fashion more in the SEC than in most of the other major college leagues. Kentucky has forced the league to a control game, and this, in turn, has forced Kentucky to a zone. As much as Coach Rupp despises it, he likes winning more, and the Wildcats have taken up the zone for the first time in history. Rupp says, "Lancaster talked me into using it."

Assistant Coach Harry Lancaster, after considering several different types of zones, adopted the one-three-one with last season's freshman team.

"Chuck Noe (then coach at South Carolina) passed through Lexington during the summer," Lancaster says, "and we talked basketball. He was sold on the one-three-one and he was the first person who could give me some hard and fast reasons why players reacted to a given situation. In other words, when the ball goes in the corner, let's say, there was a sound reason why every player moved to a certain spot. The one-three-one looked real good for the freshmen last year, and we just decided that if we did use a zone, this would be the one."

The zone is in at Kentucky.

Revised Map Details Kentucky Waterways;

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17 (Sp.)—A new and revised map showing Kentucky's rivers, creeks and reservoirs has been published by the Kentucky Department of Commerce.

The 22-by-48 inch map, printed in two colors, shows more than 1,700 streams with stream names, reservoirs, locks and dams and navigation depths. The scale is one inch on the map equals 10 miles on the ground.

New features of the map include streams not shown on previous stream maps, the navigable extent and depth of rivers, and location of locks and dams. Waterways appear in blue and county boundaries, county and city names in gray.

The map should prove of interest to fishermen, water sports enthusiasts, and persons or organizations concerned with surface water drainage. Commerce Department officials point out. Copies of the map may be purchased for 83 cents each from the Department of Commerce, Capitol Annex, Frankfort, Kentucky.

58th DISTRICT DRAW

Floyd county favorites, Wheelwright and Garrett, drew in opposite brackets for the 58th district high school tournament which will open in the Prestonsburg fieldhouse Wednesday, March 4.

John Campbell's defending champions, the Garrett Black Devils, will meet 23-game winner McDowell in the first game at 7 p.m., March 4. In the second game of the opening round, Betsy Layne will meet Wayland.

In Thursday's lower bracket games, Don Wallen's Wheelwright Trojans will clash with the home-standing Prestonsburg Black Cats in the 7 p.m. tussle, and arch-rivals Maytown and Martin will close out first-round play in the 8:45 meeting.

The semi-finals will be played at 7 and 8:30 p.m. on Friday and the consolation and finals at the same hours on Saturday night. No seniors will be permitted to play in the consolation game, as has been the rule for the past five seasons.

The officials will be the same as for the Floyd county pre-season tournament in December. Nelson Allen and Foster Meade will referee, Frank Heinze will be the timer and Homer Lee Hall the scorer.

Burnice Gearheart, Garrett high school principal, will serve as tournament manager.

Garrett, by virtue of its 70-62 triumph over up-and-coming Betsy Layne, moved into ninth place in Tuesday's statewide high school basketball ratings. Wheelwright jumped into 12th place and Paintsville rose to 20th position.

STATE CONSTITUTION IS BEING REVISED

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17 (Spl.)—The 1964 Constitutional Revision Assembly named to draft a new, modern state constitution for submission to the people of Kentucky is now at work.

It held its first meeting Monday in the House Chamber of the Old Capitol Building where the Constitutional Convention of 1891 gave the state its present charter after 226 days of meetings.

Appointments to the 50-member assembly were announced last week by Governor Edward T. Breathitt. The list includes Kentucky's seven former governors, one delegate from each of the state's 38 senatorial districts and five delegates from the state-at-large.

Besides the former governors, those invited to serve in the assembly include Kentucky's U. S. Senators John Sherman Cooper and Thruston B. Morton; Louisville's Mayor William O. Cowger; Jefferson County Judge Marlow Cook and Republican Louis B. Nunn, Glasgow, whom Breathitt defeated for governor last November.

In making known the make-up of the assembly, which includes two women, Breathitt said: "If ever Kentucky had a blue-ribbon group capable of solving some problems, this assembly is it. Members are a cross section of thoughtful, responsible Kentuckians. Each has deep knowledge of Kentucky and her people and each has achieved eminence or distinction in some field."

The Governor also said that he and the officials who helped him "were careful to select the delegates without partisan political consideration and we have supreme confidence that this group will come up with a model constitution."

The delegates, excepting the former governors, were chosen by Breathitt, Lieutenant Governor Harry Lee Waterfield; State Representative Shelby McCallum, speaker of the House of Representatives, and James B. Milliken, chief justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Republicans Morton, Cook and Nunn are at-large delegates. The two other such delegates, both Democrats, are Louisville's former Mayor Charles P. Farnsley and Judge James W. Sites, former chief justice of the Court of Appeals.

The former governors include five Democrats and two Republicans. The Democrats are A. B. Chandler, Keen Johnson, Earle

Back in the office, the forester makes a second report. Using his notes and an adding machine, he calculates the wood volume of the acreage by type of tree. Taking from his files a list of prospective wood buyers, he submits both to the owner.

This report is invaluable to a timber owner, Butcher points out. With it he can contact the prospective buyer and tell him exactly how much of what kind of wood he has to offer and use it as a basis to work out a price. Before this service was available, small wood growers, without the training to determine wood volume, had to rely on the buyer's estimate of their crop.

The forestry division charges a small fee (40 cents per 1,000 board feet) for marking timber. Proceeds are used to provide for marking paint and other expenses.

Last year, the 38 service foresters marked more than 13 million board feet of timber—five million more than was marked in each of the two previous years. The sale of last year's marked trees brought almost $250,000 to the timber owners.

The Cooperative Forest Management program, under which the service foresters operate, is financed by state and federal funds. It requires the foresters to spend at least 75 per cent of their time in encouraging good management of Kentucky's privately-owned timberlands — including surveying, marking and activities relating to protection and conservation of the trees.

Discussing the importance of Kentucky's economic future, State Conservation Commissioner J. O. Matlock declared that: "Kentucky's forest industries employ about 20,000 workers and the forest and food industries contribute products valued at more than $160 million to the state's economy each year.

"To feed the mills and factories takes millions of feet of sound usable wood that can come only from managed forests," he added. "Our service foresters know how to obtain a managed forest and I hope more woodland owners will take advantage of their experience and training in the future."

Cadillac

IF IT'S TOO QUIET—TURN ON THE RADIO

Some of the finest comments that come to us from owners of 1964 Cadillacs concern the car's extraordinary quietness of operation.

A Cadillac owner remains comfortably insulated from the distraction and din of the heaviest midtown traffic. And we think that this remarkable characteristic tells a great deal about the quality and goodness of this extraordinary new Cadillac creation.

First of all, it indicates the car's high level of craftsmanship. Every 1964 Cadillac, in fact, now undergoes more than 1400 separate inspections.

It indicates, too, how Cadillac's combination of functional styling, scientific soundproofing and advanced new suspension have reduced to an almost unbelievable degree the sounds normally associated with travel.

And, even more importantly, it speaks of the car's great engineering. Cadillac's dynamic new engine operates with flawless precision, despite its record power. Its new transmissions, both the Hydra-Matic and the Turbo Hydra-Matic, translate that power into smooth, hushed response . . . and combined with exclusive True-Center drive line, virtually eliminate vibration.

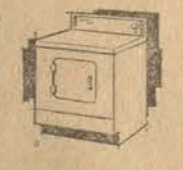

If you have not yet driven a 1964 Cadillac, you will find it a most revealing experience. Your dealer will have one ready any time that's convenient. Just let the car's amazing quiet do the talking.
