

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1964

This Town... That World

Punching a typewriter when the old idea box is empty is like trying to punch a hole in smoke.

What I don't know about farming and the weather is more than somewhat. But I think I do know this: If you get a field of hay "down," and it doesn't rain before it's cured and in the barn, set yourself for a long drouth.

THE RETURN OF PETE

Pete's back. Pete's the buckin' burro which entertained visitors at the riding stables at Jenny Wiley State Park last year while depositing would-be riders on the greensward and on various parts of their anatomies.

That item entitles me to as many free rides as I want—which I don't want.

A GOOD JOB

The dollar-an-hour boys and an improvised street-sprinkler have Prestonsburg's streets, for all the construction work going on, cleaner than I can recall ever having seen them in the past.

SOMETHING REALLY IMPORTANT

We all talked 250 students enrolled at the Prestonsburg Community College for this first year. But now it appears the enrollment will be nearer 325, plus those who enroll for night classes.

GAME CLUB BUYS TRACT

Johns Branch Acreage Development Planned; $6,600 Price Named

The Floyd County Fish & Game Club has purchased a 54-acre tract of land on Johns Branch of Right Beaver Creek, near Langley, on which it will erect a clubhouse and where it will center its program of annual activities.

The clubhouse and surrounding grounds will be used for casting and shooting contests, archery ranges, fish fries and displays as well as for other activities which may later be developed.

All but two acres of the tract were purchased from the Miles May heirs; the remainder, from Ray Flanery. Total cost of the acreage was $6,600.

Auguring of coal is now being done on the tract, and beginning of construction of the clubhouse will await completion of that work which is expected soon.

OFFICES ARE MOVING TO NEW COURTHOUSE

CLERKS FACE HEAVY TASK IN CHANGES

Most Offices To Open In New Building Today; Jailer To Move Last

The old was giving way this week to the new as Floyd county's sagging, old courthouse was being vacated by county offices which are being moved across Third street into the new courthouse, now being completed.

The biggest moving job has been faced by the two clerk's offices, the circuit and county, with their heavy store of records, but both Circuit Clerk Frank DeRossett and County Clerk C. O. Robinson plan to open for business in the new courthouse this morning (Thursday).

Every other office was expected to be in new quarters by Monday morning.

Jailer Lawrence Hale will be the last county official to make the change to new quarters. Plumbing of the prisoners' cell-blocks and preparation of the living quarters for the jailer and his family will apparently be the last work to be completed, and Hale said he may not move till the last of August.

Installation of the air-conditioning system chiller and of steel for the jail were expected to be completed this week.

The grim, forbidding, all-steel interior of the jail will house approximately 80 prisoners. The cells and jailer's quarters occupy the entire third story of the courthouse, and this will be reached either by elevator or stairway. Most dismal and austere of all the space provided for prisoners are three cells set apart for solitary confinement.

A control panel at the east end of the row of cells, and near the jailer's quarters will permit the opening, electrically, of any or all the cell doors, as desired.

All offices except those of the circuit court clerk, circuit judge and commonwealth's attorney are on the first floor of the new building. These, the county and circuit courtrooms and the grand jury room are on the second floor.

The old courthouse and jail will be leveled soon to make way for the Central Business District urban renewal project on which work already has begun.

PROGRAM IS PLANNED IN ADULT EDUCATION

An adult education program, with the cooperation of the Floyd County Board of Education and the state Department of Education, is being organized in this county, it was announced this week by Superintendent Charles F. Clark.

One part, the general education course, is designed for adults who have not completed their high school education and consists of courses of study in English, mathematics, social studies and science. Fee for the course is $17.50.

Homemaking education courses are designed to provide instruction for adult and young adult homemakers. The fee for each course is $3. A course in foods will be taught by Mrs. Janet Ranier at the Prestonsburg high school; beginning sewing will be taught by Nancy Dingus at Martin

SLIM DOCKET LISTED HERE

Martin-Mullins Case Slated Again; Jurors For Term Are Named

When the Floyd circuit court begins its criminal term Tuesday, September 8, in the new courthouse, it will face a docket of only 22 cases, one of the lowest on record, but the term is expected to be one of unusual interest.

Only one murder trial, that of Deputy Sheriff Troy Mullins and Marion Martin, who are charged with the slaying of Ex-Magistrate John May, is on the docket now, but another case which will exceed the older case for interest is slated to be added.

This case is expected to grow out of the commonwealth's efforts to have Roy Salisbury indicted on the first day of the grand jury session in the triple-slaying of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Demey and Thomas Combs at Drift. Trial of Salisbury during the term, and as early as possible, has been stated by commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo as a prime objective.

The Mullins-Martin trial is scheduled for September 16. First trials docketed for the term will be heard September 15, a week after the empanelling of the grand jury. Twenty-three cases, one of them charging a liquor law violation, are set for hearing that day.

In all, 23 liquor cases are on the court docket, with 22 of these to be heard between September 23 and September 26.

290 ENROLL AT COLLEGE

Registration Deadline Told by Dr. Campbell; Schedules Explained

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, announced Tuesday that applications for the fall semester had reached 290. The college now expects to approach a total of 325 daytime enrollees when school opens September 3.

The college is still receiving inquiries concerning the deadline for registering for the fall semester. Dr. Campbell stressed the fact that students may continue to register through September 2. The student who waits until that time to register, however, runs the risk of finding that the classes for which he or she wished to enroll may be full.

All persons who have not participated in the pre-registration period should report to the college at 8 a.m. on Monday, August 17. All students who expect to enroll in the college during the fall semester must report to the college on August 22 at 8 a.m. to take the ACT examination. The cost of the examination is $4. It is still possible that a student may take the examination in Lexington on August 15, at the University of Kentucky. The examination will be given in Room 153 of the Chemistry Building there.

First days of pre-registration have exceeded all expectations, Dr. Campbell said. The college is averaging 60 students per day for pre-registration. All pre-registration days begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Commons Room and are usually completed by 11 a.m.

The students have thus far proved themselves to be cooperative. (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

AWARD CONTRACTORS DISPOSAL PLANT JOB

Two contractors will do the town of Martin's sewer and sewage disposal plant construction at a cost of $308,853.50.

A review of bids offered several days earlier was made Saturday, and the bidders declared offering low bids on the big project were:

Ramsey & Club, disposal plant and list (pump) stations, $131,430; Alderman & Alderman, construction of lines, $177,423.50.

ROAD PLAN HEARING SET

Elimination of Curves To Be Talked; Adams Awarded Park Job

Elimination of two curves on U. S. 23, from Prestonsburg to Lancer, is planned as a forthcoming highway project, and a hearing on the proposed construction has been scheduled by Wendell Bayes, district engineer, Department of Highways, at 10 a.m., August 27, at the courthouse here.

The proposed work would correct the right-angle turn at the Pure Oil Station on South Lake Drive (U. S. 23) here and the Ball Alley curve.

Still a point of contention is the route to be followed by U. S. 23 toward Allen. The Kentucky Highway Department has sought to prove to the U. S. Bureau of Highways the feasibility of improving the highway and following its present route. The federal agency, however, has to date refused participation in improving (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

ANNUAL MEET SCHEDULED

Many Floyd Countians To Attend Institute; Dr. Thompson, Speaker

More than 300 persons, including a number of Floyd countians, are expected to attend the seventh annual Growth and Development Institute, sponsored by the Division of Maternal and Child Health of the State Department of Health, August 18-20, at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, according to Dr. Helen B. Fraser, Director of the Division.

Members of the Institute will hear of the new developments and resources available for handicapped children and those working directly with them. The three-day conference will cover many subjects connected with the physically, mentally, and culturally handicapped child and the problems and ways of coping with these problems. It will also stress the need for more public concern for the future of these children.

The principal speaker will be Dr. John D. Thompson, professor and chairman, Department of Gynecology and Obstetrics, Emory University School of Medicine, Atlanta, Georgia, who will discuss "The Quality of Reproduction." Dr. Thompson is an authority in the field of obstetrics and is concerned with the prevention of mental retardation through the improvement of maternal care during the prenatal period of growth and development.

The Kentucky Society for Crippled Children will sponsor a luncheon on the second day of the conference, featuring a special style show of self-help clothing for the handicapped. Handicapped children will be invited to attend. (See Story No. 3, Page 6)

The First Baptist Church of Wheelwright will observe its tenth anniversary as a constituted Baptist Church, September 6, it is announced. The church was started in 1954 by Rev. Bert Caldwell and has grown considerably since that small beginning. The church recently constituted one of its missions into a church. It still operates a mission on Jack's Creek. This mission will have a dedication service of its newly decorated building, September 5, at 7:30 p.m.

CONGRESS APPROPRIATES KENTUCKY ROAD FUNDS; TOTAL IS $73,288,000

Senator John Sherman Cooper, ranking member of the Senate Public Works Committee which writes the legislation for road construction, reported this week that the Highway Authorization Bill developed in the Committee has been passed by the Congress. The bill provides a total of $73,288,000 for building Kentucky roads in the year, beginning July 1, 1965. Senator Cooper said that this total amount includes $7,502,000 for primary roads, $6,325,000 for secondary roads, and $22,502,000 for roads and streets in urban areas, all of which will be equally matched by Kentucky state highway funds.

On roads which are a part of the Interstate Highway System, Senator Cooper explained that under the revised schedule previously adopted by the Congress the federal government pays 90% of the cost.

TWO FLOYD OFFICERS SUE LEXINGTON DAILY

Deputy Sheriffs Troy Mullins and Marion Martin filed separate libel suits in circuit court here Saturday asking $20,000 damages each from Warren Schweder, Lexington newspaper writer, the Lexington Herald-Leader Company and its general manager, Fred B. Wachs.

The two officers, whose complaints are identical in their allegations, contend that the defendants caused to be published, last August 9, a feature article which was defamatory and which constituted an attack on the plaintiffs' reputations.

The story appeared in the Lexington Leader under the by-line of Schweder and bore the captions, "The Saga of Zig Frog" and "Bootlegging Operations Can Mean Death, Fear for Those Involved." References were made to the fatal shooting by officers of Ex-Magistrate John May.

The complaint alleges, in part, that the article tended to expose plaintiffs "to public hatred, contempt and ridicule," amounted to legal, if not actual, malice, and charges "the commission of a crime... or at least implies the commission of a crime... or charges criminal intent" to plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs also contend that the article "contained false statements of fact and was based upon false rumors and false hearsay reports."

The complaint points out that plaintiffs demanded a retraction and that the defendants, refusing to make retraction, conferred with a threat to make additional exposures.

Each plaintiff asks $10,000 damages and an additional $10,000 punitive and exemplary damages. Claiming permanent impairment of her earning power as the result of injuries suffered in a two-car collision on U. S. 23 at Harold last August, Ruby Alice Stratton asks $20,000 damages of Grover R. Edmonds and Kenneth Newsome in a suit filed last Thursday. She maintains that Edmonds, agent of Newsome, operated an auto so carelessly and recklessly that it collided with her auto.

PIKE GROUP CHALLENGE SUCCESSFUL

Eighty Cents Royalty Required Invalidates April Contract, Said

If a National Labor Relations Board decision made last week stands unchanged, the United Mine Workers of America have suffered a serious setback in their plan to stop coal production by non-union mines.

The NLRB voted 4 to 1, holding that the contract between the union and union operators is invalid insofar as it requires unionized coal companies to pay a double royalty on all coal purchased by them from non-union mines. This invalidates the so-called "protective clause" of the contract signed last April by the UMWA and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The clause provides that operators pay a royalty of 40 cents per ton to the union's welfare fund and that this royalty be increased to 80 cents a ton on all coal purchased by the operators from non-union mines.

Validity of the new UMW contract was challenged by the National Independent Coal Operators Association, which is headed by Robert Holcomb, Pikeville, formerly of Prestonsburg. Holcomb hailed the NLRB ruling as "a great victory for many thousands of miners who want to work for a living and stay off the dole and for all those who are interested in the long-term interests of the coal industry."

UMW officials in Washington expressed concern over the ruling and indicated they may appeal to federal court.

The purpose of the double-royalty clause, as the U.M.W. conceded, was to discourage purchases of non-union coal and to protect the job opportunities of U.M.W. members.

The theory was that the 80-cent royalty would make it uneconomical for unionized operators to buy coal from non-union mines.

Wage rates in the non-union mines are considerably lower than the rates paid to U.M.W. miners. Accordingly, unionized mines have been able to buy non-union coal and sell it to their customers at a profit.

The union tried to deal with this problem several years ago by a contract clause prohibiting unionized operators from buying any coal from non-union mines. The N.L.R.B. invalidated that requirement.

The 80-cent royalty payment on non-union coal was devised by the union this year to cut off the traffic with non-union mines without running afoul of federal law.

But the N.L.R.B. refused to go along.

Miss Sandra Sue Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mason Moore, of Prestonsburg, became the bride of Mr. Raymond Moreland Sutton, Jr., of Valdosta, Georgia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Moreland Sutton, of Williamsburg, Kentucky, in a ceremony performed at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, July 19, at Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here.

The Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor, performed the ceremony, using the double-ring vows in a setting of white gladioli and mums, banked with palms and lighted, with wedding tapers in wrought iron candelabra. A white satin-covered kneeling bench completed the church decorations.

A prelude of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Chalmers H. Frazier, organist. Mrs. William Rowe, soloist, sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length, silk-faced ivory gown of peau de soie. The gown featured a bateau neckline on a removable jacket with re-embroidered Alencon lace trim which was repeated on the bell-shaped skirt. The removable chapel train was caught at the waist by a self fabric bow. Her tiered fingertip French imported veil of silk illusion fell from a nosegay of re-embroidered Alencon lace petals outlined by tiny seed pearls. She wore a single strand of pearls, gift of the groom and carried an arrangement of white orchids and stephanotis with trailing satin streamers and ivy on a white lace-covered Bible.

Miss Nelda Jean Spradlin, Pine Knot, Kentucky, was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length pale pink gown of satin peau designed with a scoop neckline, fitted bodice, and bell-shaped skirt accented with double pleats in the back. Her headpiece was a circlet of illusion which was held by a matching open crown, semi-pillbox hat. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep-pink carnations surrounded by contrasting tulle and trailing ivy.

The bridesmaids in identical dress were Miss Elizabeth Ann Cornett, Miss Anita Gwen Martin and Miss Elizabeth Jane Sloane, of Hindman, all cousins of the bride. Suzanne Moore, of Frankfort, was the flower girl. She wore a floor-length dress of pink organza with a matching bow and carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Mr. Robert Nelson Ashby, Jr., of Louisville, was best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Joe B. Lovitt and Mr. James L. Harbuck, III, of Williamsburg, Kentucky, and Mr. Mike Sloane, Morehead, cousin of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Assisting were Misses Betty Carolyn and Sally Kathryn Moore, of Lexington, Miss Karen Martin, Hindman, and Miss Debby Moore, Frankfort. Miss Mary Frances Parke presided at the guest register.

Mrs. Moore chose for her daughter's wedding a two-piece lace ensemble of pale mist aqua green, designed with a slight scoop neckline and elbow-length sleeves. She wore white accessories and a shoulder corsage of ivory rosebuds. Mrs. Sutton wore a street-length dress of light-blue, embroidered linen designed with cap sleeves and scooped neckline. She wore white accessories and a shoulder corsage of ivory rosebuds.

After a wedding trip to Virginia Beach and Williamsburg, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Sutton are now residing at 304½ East Park Avenue, Valdosta, Georgia. Mr. Sutton will resume teaching in September at Valdosta State College. Mrs. Sutton will teach in the Valdosta city schools.

Magistrate DeRossett Reviews Court Vote

At the regular Floyd county fiscal court meeting held on July 23, on motion by Bryant DeRossett and seconded by Edward Caudill that Blaine Hopkins be removed as the Floyd county road foreman. Motion being put to vote, Hon. Fred Conn and Hon. Zeb Ousley voted against said motion. Honorable Ed Caudill and Bryant DeRossett voted for said motion. Motion at a vote resulted in a tie. County Judge Henry Stumbo, as chairman of Floyd county fiscal court, voted against said motion, motion being voted down. The reason for the above motion for removing Blaine Hopkins as Floyd county road foreman was due to his insubordination and insufficient working on road which resulted in loss of time and a waste of the taxpayers' money.

Circuit Clerk Says He Has No Authority On Jury Selection

Circuit Clerk Frank DeRossett said this week that he is being importuned by various persons wanting a place on the circuit court jury. He added that he had tried to explain to them that he has nothing whatsoever to do with, and can do nothing about, this matter.

"The circuit judge draws the names of these jurors from the jury drum, in open court, and everybody can see this done," he explained. "The September jury was drawn in June, and it should be obvious to all that this matter of placing any person on a jury is not up to me."

LOOKING BACKWARD

Fellows who are in their middle years or older have a weakness which they're inclined to indulge when they get together. This is the pleasant pastime of reminiscing. Other day, some of the "boys" of this rather ancient vintage were looking backward, recalling the days when women seldom ate at the "first table" with the men; when it was not an uncommon sight to see a man riding a horse or a mule and one or more of his women-folks walking; when the lord of the manor seated himself for picture-taking while his lady stood, her hand dutifully on his shoulder. . . . And so on the conversation ran till one popped up with this question: "You guys remember when a capsule travelled in a man and man didn't travel in a capsule?"

SANITARY DISPOSAL OF SEWAGE IS URGED

With the installation of sewage treatment plants in seven towns of the area to eliminate a heavy volume of the sewage now entering streams, the Floyd County Health Department this week announced plans to get individual home-owners in areas not served by such plants to dispose of their sewage in an approved manner.

Sewage treatment plants have been, or are being, installed at Prestonsburg, Elkhorn City, Martin, Pikeville, Paintsville, Louisa and Catlettsburg. Floyd and neighboring counties are making real progress toward ridding their streams of sewage, it was pointed out. But, added a Floyd County Health Department statement, it is apparent that a large number of homes in the county are permitting their sewage to empty into nearby streams.

"Every effort is being made," continued the statement, "by the health department sanitarians to correct this situation, especially with new homes being constructed." Attention will be centered on getting individual home-owner cooperation in this county, once the Prestonsburg and Mar-

Webb-Tussey Wedding Solemnized July 11 At Maytown Church

The marriage of Miss Jeanie Katherine Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Webb, of Langley, Ky., and Mr. Taubie Carlos Tussey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Tussey, of Risner, Ky., was solemnized at the Maytown Methodist Church, Saturday, July 11, at 5 p.m.

The Rev. Robert Martin, of the Faith Bible Church, Martin, Ky., performed the double-ring ceremony. The couple stood beneath an arch entwined with greenery and white satin ribbon, flanked with masses of white gladioli. Tall, white tapers burned during the ceremony.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Alicia Crisp, of Martin, organist, played traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her twin brother, Paul Marcus Webb, of Langley, wore a street-length dress of white lace with a flower scalloped neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the wrists. Her short, shoulder-length veil was held in place with a crown of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of miniature white carnations with pale-blue satin streamers.

Miss Mary June Prater, of Langley, was her only attendant. She wore a pale-pink organza street-length dress with a shoulder corsage of pink carnations to match. Jack Webb, brother of the bride, was best man. Mr. Edwin Vincent Stewart was taper-lighter. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride for relatives and close friends of the family. Aunts of the bride, Mrs. Thurnal Click and Mrs. Ed Stewart, of Langley, and Mrs. G. B. Colvin, of Springfield, Ohio, presided at the bride's table.

Lexington, Ky. — Major burley seed producers of the state will hold open houses from August 1-10 inclusive, says Ira Massie, U. K. Ag Extension Service specialist.

YOUTH CORPS FIGHT LED BY CONGRESSMAN PERKINS

The fight to secure the Youth Conservation Corps and youth work and training programs in the antipoverty bill was led on the floor of the House of Representatives last week by Congressman Carl D. Perkins (D-Ky.). Perkins, who has authored in the House youth employment programs and programs to expand adult basic education opportunities, said that their inclusion in the President's anti-poverty program was the climax of several years of hearings conducted by his general Subcommittee on Education into the chronic unemployment problems of young people.

Great emphasis was placed by Perkins upon those provisions of the program which were directed to the needs of the small family farm which more than any other element of our economy had been devastated by automation. "Technology on the farm has made it impossible for the small family farm to produce enough income to ever provide a marginal existence for many rural Americans. At the same time," said Perkins, "automation has taken the jobs of our miners, resulting in a two-edged attack against the economic well-being of Eastern Kentucky's Appalachia. Poverty of the farm and poverty in the miner's homes must be eliminated in the national interest."

The U. S. House of Representatives was in its second day of debate Thursday on legislation recommended by President Johnson in his "War on Poverty." The House Rules Committee in clearing the measure for action on the floor authorized considerably extended debate in view of strenuous opposition to the legislation voiced by members of the minority on the House Committee on Education and Labor which had jurisdiction over the initial consideration of the bill.

Portions of the bill were fashioned from legislative programs advocated by Perkins in hearings conducted by the General Subcommittee on Education during Congressional sessions since 1961. The House Rules Committee has failed to honor previous requests to get those bills up before the full membership for a final vote.

"It is essential that the legislation provide authority to extend grants to small family farms for the specific purpose of increasing the ability of such farms to provide more income for the family," stated Perkins. Also stressed by Perkins were provisions of the bill which would finance special projects devised by local governments to eliminate major sources of economic misfortune including special employment projects, job training, health programs, vocational rehabilitation, housing and special remedial educational assistance programs.

For the most part, the Poverty Bill initiates programs not characterized as welfare programs but rather as programs designed to enable individuals and extremely small businesses to get the kind of backing or training necessary to make their enterprises or occupations profitable and self-sustaining.

The measure contains seven titles which in addition to the previously mentioned job corps and Youth Conservation Corps, would extend the work study concept in the Perkins Vocational Education Act to students attending colleges and universities, urban and rural community action programs, the family farm program, special small business loan authority, extensions of the Jobless Dad program and other work expanded programs for unemployed persons and a volunteer service agency which would recruit technical assistants to help in poverty areas much in the same way that Peace Corps volunteers are serving in foreign countries.

Perkins pointed out in debate that the bill under consideration, referred to as the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, dealt only with educational training and employment matters and that it was absolutely essential for the revitalization of the Appalachian area that the Appalachian Development legislation, handled by the House Public Works Committee, be enacted into law during this session of Congress. Perkins has been outspoken before the Committee and in the Congress on the need for a massive Eastern Kentucky public works construction program with emphasis on highways.

Perkins said that the final vote on both the Economic Opportunity Act and the Appalachian Bill would be extremely close but he was optimistic about their passage.

100 YEARS AGO
 THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky
 By JOE JORDAN
 (Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago Kentuckians truly were suffering a long, hot summer. Bands of armed outlaws, variously called "guerrillas" and "bushwhackers," roamed the state, robbing the citizens and murdering those who resisted, sometimes torturing persons who refused to tell where they had concealed their money.

During the week under review, it was reported that guerrillas were thick in the Cumberland River valley, for low water made it possible to board passing steamboats.

It was a close question whether citizens were in more danger from the guerrillas or from the anti-guerrilla activities of the Union Army. Maj. Gen. Stephen G. Burbridge had authorized arresting "Southern sympathizers" living within five miles of the scene of any guerrilla outrage. Since the state was under martial law and the writ of habeas corpus had been suspended, there was no appeal from what might be the erroneous, arbitrary opinion of an Army officer that one was a Southern sympathizer and did live within five miles of the scene of an outrage. And while one was so imprisoned, one might be taken out and killed by a firing squad in "retaliation" for the slaying of a Union sympathizer by unknown persons. As many as four prisoners could be killed in retaliation for the death of one Union man.

Newspapers reported that the guerrillas preyed upon Southern sympathizers and Union sympathizers with complete impartiality. It was the general opinion that the outlaws included deserters from both armies, as well as criminals who had not performed military service on either side. Burbridge, by ordering Southern sympathizers taken into custody in the vicinity of the scenes of guerrilla crimes, seemed to be assuming that the guerrillas were all Confederates.

Citizens could be punished by the military for failing to give information about the guerrillas. A newspaper, the Louisville Democrat, protested in an editorial in its August 3 issue that it was dangerous for citizens to inform on the outlaws, who could be expected to take vengeance upon them.

"It is thought strange," the editorial said, "that citizens render little or no active assistance against guerrilla parties, and their inaction is punished by the military as disloyalty. It may be patriotic and heroic to take up arms or give information against them but who is to protect the man who does this, when the guerrillas assail him the next day? If a citizen is to aid, let him be protected in it; otherwise any expectation of his active help is unreasonable."

In the only action of the week on Kentucky soil between Union Army and Confederate Army units, the old courthouse at Salem, in Livingston county, was successfully defended by a detachment of the 48th Kentucky (Union) Infantry regiment under Capt. Hugh M. Hatt. It had been attacked by Major I. L. Chenoweth's Confederate cavalry.

STRIP MINE SUIT FILED

Flood of Suits Seen As Aftermath; Court Thinking Has Changed

A suit, filed in the Letcher Circuit Court by a landowner, asking for damages to his property caused by a strip-mining operation may initiate a flood of similar suits, it is said.

Attorney Harry M. Caudill said the Letcher suit was encouraged by a recent Court of Appeals opinion that found "cause for court action" where a Bell county landowner's property was damaged in a like manner.

It should be surmised, Caudill said, that the scores of other citizens throughout the coal-mining region of Eastern Kentucky who have been similarly damaged will go to court.

Many millions of dollars could be at stake in the suits, he said, when it is considered that farm-lands up and down nearly every hollow in Eastern Kentucky have had dirt, stone and coal washed onto them.

Earlier court opinion had held to the thinking that damage to property should have been contemplated when the mineral leases were drawn years ago.

This excused the operators from responsibility for damages, and gave them freedom to push the overburden from stripping down the mountain slopes. Heavy rains then washed the loose earth to the lower regions.

The revised thinking of the high court, as brought out in the Bell county case of George C. Green against Asher Coal Mining Company, takes the opposite view.

The time has come, the court said, when the strip miners should exercise reasonable discretion, with consideration for the rights of lowlanders, when they take the earth off of coal seams.

In cases where there is wanton disregard for good reclamation practices, damaged property owners should be entitled to relief in court, the opinion decided.

Caudill, an author and conservationist as well as an attorney, filed his suit for Cicero and Rebecca Combs, man and wife, against Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Company. It asks $6,000 actual damage and $6,000 punitive damage.

The petition states that the Combs' property is near the mouth of Polly Branch, a tributary of the North Fork of the Kentucky River.

The company's leased operations are above the headwaters of Polly Branch.

"In such an operation," the petition said, "the surface of the earth is laid open and natural vegetative cover is destroyed (and) the dirt rock, shale, and other strata which are disturbed and displaced, and all the various forms of natural vegetative cover which are removed from the surface of the land are dumped, pushed, and eliminated along the lines of least resistance, by casting same down the side of the mountain as debris."

Knowing that this created a condition for washing, the company still failed to restore its land, Caudill charged.

Polly Branch became obstructed by rock, soil, dirt and coal, he continued, with the result that the waters were "diverted upon and flooded the land of the plainiffs."

Caudill said he believes the new thinking of the court will encourage action by "all downstream landowners."

Even the Kentucky Department of Highways can sue, he said, where it is shown that silt from stripping has filled creek beds and caused a washing out of roads.

REGIONAL HOSPITALS SEEK REDUCTION IN EXPENSES

Appalachian Regional Hospitals is seeking to reduce its payroll by two percent and readjust fringe benefits to employees in order to prevent a $300,000 deficit.

Dr. Karl S. Klicka, president of the non-profit organization which maintains 10 hospitals in Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia, said last week, "Their continued successful operation depends on a balanced budget."

Wages and salaries require $3.5 million of ARH's budget of $13,965,000 for the current fiscal year.

"I trust all employees of ARH hospitals will understand that in our efforts to reduce expenses and administer the hospitals efficiently," Dr. Klicka said, "we are working also to protect their jobs. Should the hospitals cease operations, there would be no jobs."

The alternative to the $300,000 economy package proposed by ARH, Dr. Klicka added, would be "drastic personnel cuts which of necessity would cause a reduction in services offered by these hospitals." He commented that "I do not believe that either the employees or the community would want to suffer this course."

ARH, in negotiations with District 50, United Mine Workers, which represents non-professional service workers in the hospitals, proposes to save $175,000 a year by trimming wages and $125,000 by modifying vacation, sick leave and hospitalization benefits.

The hospital corporation now provides paid vacations up to four weeks, two months sick leave, and 180 days of free hospital care for employees and their dependents. It proposes to reduce vacations to two and three weeks, sick leave to 30 days, and give each employee a Blue Cross hospitalization policy.

As for wages, Dr. Klicka said that ARH has been criticized for paying wages higher than the prevailing rate in some communities. "Even with the proposed reduction for non-professional employees," he states, "the minimum month wage in the lowest categories will be $241.50 a month or $2,898 a year. This is a respectable wage and it is still about 75 percent more than is currently paid in hotels, restaurants and most hospitals for that category."

He added that while hospitals are exempted from paying the $1.25 minimum wage fixed by federal law, ARH hospitals were paying it and will continue to do so.

He said further that ARH would continue its policy of guaranteeing pay increases to new employees in all categories, "although this is seldom done in labor-management contracts of other corporations."

At the request of ARH, the U. S. Department of Labor has directed its mediation and conciliation service to assist the hospital corporation and UMW District 50 in contract negotiations.

"If the final judgment should be left to a mediator, we are confident that the decision would be fair and equitable to both sides," said Dr. Klicka.

District 50 represents service workers such as kitchen help, cleaning maids and janitors, employed in ARH hospitals. The union and ARH are negotiating renewal of a contract for hospitals at Pikeville and South Williamson, Kentucky; Beckley and Man, West Virginia, and Wise, Virginia. ARH also is seeking to reopen wage negotiations for a contract covering its five other Kentucky hospitals at Harlan, Hazard, McDowell, Middlesboro and Whitesburg.

Definition of Inpert Discussed by Magazine; Many Call It Intuition

All of you know what an expert is: anyone who is more than two miles from home and carrying a briefcase! But what's an impert? You won't find the word in a dictionary, but Neil M. Clark used it a few years ago in The Saturday Evening Post. He said that an impert (unlike the expert) is one who hasn't been trained and taught how it must be done.

Thomas A. Edison once hired a college-trained "expert" for his laboratory. His first job was to find the cubic contents of a light bulb. The expert sat down with his slide rules and sharp pencils and began to measure the bulb from every conceivable angle. Several hours later he came to Edison with the answer.

Edison replied he was at least ten percent off, but the expert insisted he was right. Edison then made a tiny hole in the end of the bulb, filled it with water, poured the water in a measuring cup, and in two minutes had the exact answer. Sure enough, the expert was ten percent off as well as three or four hours slower with his answer.

Edison was the impert—his employee the expert. The impert depends a great deal on common sense, and looks first for the simple, apparent answers.

In everyday life we run up against a lot of problems. Some of them are big problems, and some are small. But at the time, all of them seem mighty important. Quite often the professionally-trained expert comes right up with the answer. But not always. Some problems you sort of have to feel your way through. Thomas Faine called it common sense, and the women call it intuition. The Bible calls it wisdom and says that "happy is the man that findeth it" (Proverbs 3:13).

Whatever it is, it's a pretty handy thing to have around!

First Historical Marker To Honor Fisherman; Dedication Set Saturday

Kentucky's first historical marker commemorating a fisherman will be dedicated at 2 p.m. Saturday, near Cynthiana.

It will be erected to honor Dr. James Alexander Henshall, the Isaac Walton of America, resident of the Cynthiana area during the Civil War and also during the 1870's.

Sportsmen, historical society members, and heads of several state departments will attend the ceremonies.

Dedication speaker will be Minor Clark, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. The dedication program is being spearheaded by the Kentucky Historical Markers Commission and the League of Kentucky Sportsmen.

Dr. Henshall, a native of Baltimore, spent a major portion of his life in Cincinnati and Cynthiana areas. He died in 1925 at 87.

He remains America's foremost authority on the black bass, and a volume he authored, "Book of Black Bass," is a classic and collectors' item.

Dr. Henshall coined the now-popular phrase to describe the bass, "inch for inch, and pound for pound, the gamest fish that swims," an observation that was coupled with his scientific effort to make the bass the most popular game fish in the country.

He was a foremost ichthyologist of his time, and held numerous high positions in Ohio and in federal fisheries agencies.

Western Kentucky Teachers' NEIGHBORHOOD LOYALTIES

Over and over, as the small community has lost its former importance or even been merged with a larger social unit, I have sat on the sideline and waited to see how humanity can or will adjust to changing condition. A very few neighborhoods that I have known have recognized that they had so gone down in population that they could not afford to keep their school, for example. A few such communities, which had formerly been proud of their graded school, supported by local taxation, taxed itself far above the tax rate of its county to keep its school on and on, even after the state department of education had warned it that it could not still be recognized as a standardized school. In one county that I know quite well, a community within easy walking distance of a large county-seat school, demanded and got a one-room school after many other schools in the same county were begging for consolidation. Every time I pass that schoolhouse site, I remember how even the county superintendent of the time felt proud of himself for giving the citizens of what would now be called the suburbs of the town a brand-new, dinky little school building.

Neighborhood jealousies have always been pretty numerous. In my youth I was the principal of a two-room school in a village that stoutly maintained its independence, especially against the neighboring village, where the population was building up, where a good road was being built, and where, ultimately, a good four-year high school was to function for decades, until all the small high schools of the county would be united in one respectable plant. Among older people, I suspect, that neighborhood jealousies must still exist; the younger people may wonder why Grandpap cannot see the value of the big county high school.

A good many years ago, I spoke several times in a big consolidated graded school that represented the union of ten one-roomed schools. Fortunately, the first principal of the big new College, Bowling Green, Ky. school was a good leader, not prejudiced toward any one of the nine schools that went out of business when the consolidated school was built where the tenth small school had been. Out in the front hall of the new school were displayed the pictures of the ten small schools and their teachers and pupils; a chance looking at these framed pictures soon convinced a great many people that the very small places were outdated, that the new center was in keeping with more advanced times. I have been at that school that united all these neighborhoods so well when it seemed that every type of neighborhood backing was present. But I must say that this was and is the exception.

In my own county, not too many years ago, the two teachers and every patron who had a child of school age asked that the small school be united with the large consolidated school not very far up the road. To this day I have never heard of a single regret from that community. The two teachers became a part of the larger unit, the children fit right into their respective grades, and the school is a good illustration of recognizing the passing of older times.

In accepting this changed condition, our generation has often adjusted more rapidly than could have been expected. In the earlier days of consolidation in our end of the state, tempers flared, name-calling got a big workout, and some old-timers in that area still carry around their resentment at the turn of things nearly forty years ago. Just yesterday I read an item in the daily paper that a new central high school for that entire county is being planned and will soon be erected. I wonder whether the neighborhood jealousies of the mid-1920's will still be around when the new building is ready for occupancy. Of course, we hate to see our familiar customs change, we can always make out a case for our little nook back in the bend of the creek; but change is in the air, and it will need our support and our guiding care, not our hard-headed opposition because we remember only the good old days of the one-roomed school at Podunk or Fidelity.

Sherman-Carr Vows Solemnized August 12 At St. Juliana Church

Miss Frances Sue Sherman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John J. Sherman, Martin, Kentucky, was united in marriage August 12 at 11 o'clock a.m. in St. Juliana Church, Martin, to Mr. Richard Pullman Carr, son of Mr. Richard Carr, of Orlando, Florida, and the late Mrs. Russell Crace, of Ashland, Kentucky.

The Rev. Leo Frankrone performed the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was furnished by Sister Angeline.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white French faille floor-length modified sheath gown, with a bow at the front of the lifted waist. The scooped neckline had a Alencor lace border which extended down the elbow-length sleeve as insert. The detachable wateau train of silk-lined faille was edged with the same lace as on the gown. Her bouffant French illusion veil was caught to a forward headpiece of peau de soie roses and petals trimmed with seed pearls and lace. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias and ivy with sprays of stephanotis.

Miss Patricia Evans was maid of honor and Mrs. Barry Dean Martin was the bridesmaid. They wore floor-length gowns of apple-blossom pink, accented by a free-flowing full-length back panel, attached at the waist by a bow. Their headpieces of Dior bows, caught to nosegay veils, matched their veils and completed their ensembles. The maid of honor and bridesmaid carried colonial bouquets of pink and white pom pom daisies.

Mr. Ed Van Hoose was best man, and ushers were Mr. James Van Hoose and Mr. Jerome Sherman, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a pale blue and green silk print dress with white accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the St. Juliana Parish Hall. Assisting were Mrs. T. A. Combs, Mrs. William Martin, Miss Mary Jo Evans, Miss Sheila Evans, Miss Mary Ellen Dermont and Mrs. Robert Dermont.

For a wedding trip to Virginia Beach, the bride wore a slate blue cotton suit with black accessories.

Mrs. Carr is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky State College, Richmond, Kentucky, where she will return this fall for graduate work.

Mr. Carr is a senior at Eastern Kentucky State College where he is a member of the football and track team.

The couple are making their home in Richmond, Kentucky.

POINT PENALTY INCREASES SLATED FOR VIOLATORS

Stronger point levies aimed primarily at speeding and racing violations will go into effect in the state's driver point system by Labor Day week-end, according to Governor Edward T. Breathitt. "I realize that no enforcement program is a popular program," Breathitt told a recent public hearing held in Frankfort on the proposed changes. "But all of us as public officials must face up to our responsibilities. Whatever price we have to pay in public criticism will be well worth it if even one life is saved."

Major changes in the point assessments are:

Racing (now six points); suspension of driving privilege for 90 days for first offense, one year for second offense, and three years for subsequent offenses.

Speeding (now three points); under 16 miles per hour over limit, three points; 16 to 25 mph over limit, six points; 26 mph and over, suspension of driving privilege for 90 days.

Moving violation involving an accident: from present four points to six points.

Passing stopped school bus loading or unloading—from present four points to five points.

Passing in a no passing zone—from present four points to five points.

Failure to yield right-of-way to emergency vehicle—from no points now to four points.

Operating a motor vehicle in violation of restrictions (such as without glasses)—from no points now to 90-day suspension.

Attempting to elude a peace officer when making an arrest—from no points now to 90-day suspension.

Of the 20 persons attending the public hearing on the proposed revisions, only one question was raised, Dallas Queen, Maysville, vice-president of the Kentucky Automobile Dealers Association, questioned the method of determining the speed of an offending motorist when "your own specifications for police cruisers allow for a three per cent speedometer error."

Queen said he would have to consult with the dealers he represents before the association could endorse the proposed changes.

Other spokesmen were unanimous in their approval, however. Some of the typical comments voiced were:

James M. Brown, Louisville Automobile Club: "We intend to fully support the Department of Public Safety in this matter."

Captain Estel Hack, Louisville Safety Council: "I hope the courts and the police will do a good job of apprehending and convicting offenders when these changes go into effect." George Wilson, Lexington, Kentucky Automotive Wholesalers Association: "This is a step in the right direction." Paul Young, Louisville, Kentucky Motor Transport Association: "We agree in essence with everything you are trying to do."
