

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1965

This Town... That World

It's Dog Days, and our elderly Dalmatian is in love. Wish that dog had been born dumb rather than deaf! He's pointing his nose at the stars and howling his love-song so long and loud that I fear I'll next be writing his obituary.

Women must think their husbands have eyes in the backs of their heads. Ever hear one say, "Don't turn around—but who is that couple just coming in?"

THE GREAT RIVER MYSTERY

Somehow, that newspaper story about the Johnson county man who fell from a boat, took an inner tube with him and kept so quiet about it all that his companion wasn't aware of anything amiss till he turned around just doesn't "hold water." Anyway, they found him serenely floating down the stream on the inner-tube after they had dragged the river three hours. Seems to us we would have been emulating the ads with a "Help Wanted" or so before settling down for the downstream ride.

Up from St. Pete for a vacation, Tom Hatcher claims he has been looking in vain for signs of poverty, hereabouts. Then he visited The Times office.

COMPARE!

Think the younger generation isn't an improvement over the older? Consider the cases of the duffer who finally manages to break 80 and his Little Leaguer son who hits two home runs in one game. The old gaffer will yak till you reach for the earplugs and tell, stroke by stroke, how he shot that matchless round of golf. But the son who hit the homers—he'll let you off with one question: "Mom, whatcha got to eat?"

If you want to see the impossible, just watch a hummingbird hop up a flight of stairs that isn't there.

300 ATTEND ACTION MEET

Interest Shown Friday Results in Scheduling Of 2nd Mud Cr. Meet

A community action meeting for the Mud Creek area was held Friday night, at the Harold elementary school with approximately 300 persons from Big and Little Mud Creeks, Harold, Toler Creek, Betsy Layne, Prater Creek and Branham's Creek attending.

Dominick Garofalo, assistant to the regional director of the Community Action program in Kentucky and West Virginia, was so impressed by reports of the interest shown there that he has requested a second meeting next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Stumbo elementary school, so that he may discuss community needs and plans with the people.

Common problems and possible solutions which might be worked out by the communities themselves or with the financial and technical help provided for Appalachia by the Economic Opportunity Act were discussed. Some of the problems discussed included roads, sewage, lack of industry, garbage disposal, recreation, housing and health.

It was decided that because the area is large, and since several smaller communities are involved, each community should select three representatives and hold smaller meetings. The representatives were elected and the meeting dates established. The officers elected to serve the Mud Creek area temporarily were Ted Stumbo, of Harold.

BIG SANDY VALLEY CORRIDOR APPROVED

$10 MILLION IS POSSIBLE ROUTE COST

434 Miles of Highway Allotted to Kentucky By Appalachian Body

Corridor B, the part of the Appalachian highway network affecting Floyd county and the Big Sandy valley, was approved last Wednesday by the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The action brought the total length of Kentucky highways to be built to 434 miles, which will mean an outlay of $41,348,000. The federal government's share of that cost will be 70%, or $28,944,000.

Corridor B runs from Asheville, North Carolina to just north of Portsmouth, Ohio, and the Kentucky part of the corridor will follow, generally, U. S. 23, with 144.2 miles of the route in this state considered to be eligible for construction and 19 miles of the highway considered already adequate.

Total cost of the 144.2 miles of Corridor B construction in Kentucky is estimated at $10,317,000, with the federal government's share $7,222,000.

Other corridors in this area are:

Corridor F—This runs from I-75 near Caryville, Tennessee to U. S. 23 at Jenkins, Kentucky, following U. S. 25-E into Kentucky to Pineville and then U. S. 119 to Jenkins. There are 79.6 miles in Kentucky which are considered to need construction and 13 miles considered adequate.

The total cost of the 79.6 miles is estimated at $10,350,000, with the federal share $7,231,000.

Corridor G—It runs from U. S. 23 at Pikeville to I-64 at Charleston, West Virginia, generally following U. S. 119. There are 31 miles of the route in Kentucky and all of it requires construction. That will cost an estimated $971,000, with the federal share $68,000.

Corridor I—This runs from U. S. 119 near Whitesburg to I-64 near Winchester, following Ky. 15 to its connection with the Mountain Parkway at Campton. There are 59.5 miles eligible for construction and 66.9 miles considered adequate.

The total cost of the 59.5 miles is $16,256,000, with the federal share $11,379,000.

Corridor L—This runs from U. S. 23 at Shelby, Ky., to I-81 at Christiansburg, Virginia, generally following Ky. 80 and U.S. 460. There are 19.7 miles in Kentucky and all require construction.

The estimated cost is $617,000 with the federal share $432,000.

Corridor R—It runs from the Mountain Parkway at Campton to U. S. 23 at Prestonsburg, where it would end, being an extension of the Mountain Parkway.

This 50-mile stretch has already been built, mostly through revenue from bond sales, and is considered suitable.

PRESTONSBURG AGAIN HAILED FOR ADVANCE

"Prestonsburg—City with a Future" is the title of a feature article which appeared in a recent magazine section of The Huntington (W. Va.) Herald Advertiser as the first of a series describing notable progress in three outstanding communities. Point Pleasant, West Virginia, and Portsmouth, Ohio, were other cities featured in the series.

The Prestonsburg story of progress covers a five-year period and it ranges from state developments such as the Jenny Wiley State Park tourist complex to the latest community ventures—a 22-acre city park and two urban renewal projects.

Development in Prestonsburg itself is dated back to five years ago, since it was then that a city planner was employed to study the community's needs. Mayor George P. Archer reported on that study: "Much to his (the planner's) astonishment, we approved the whole thing in 30 minutes."

City Manager Curtis Clark and Mayor Archer spearheaded the development program, with the support of the City Council and the taxpayers of the city.

The article is the second of the year to be published in daily publications, extolling the progress of Prestonsburg. Earlier, a page advertisement in The Wall Street Journal by the American Electric Power System told of community achievements and fea-

NEW OFFICE TO BE HERE

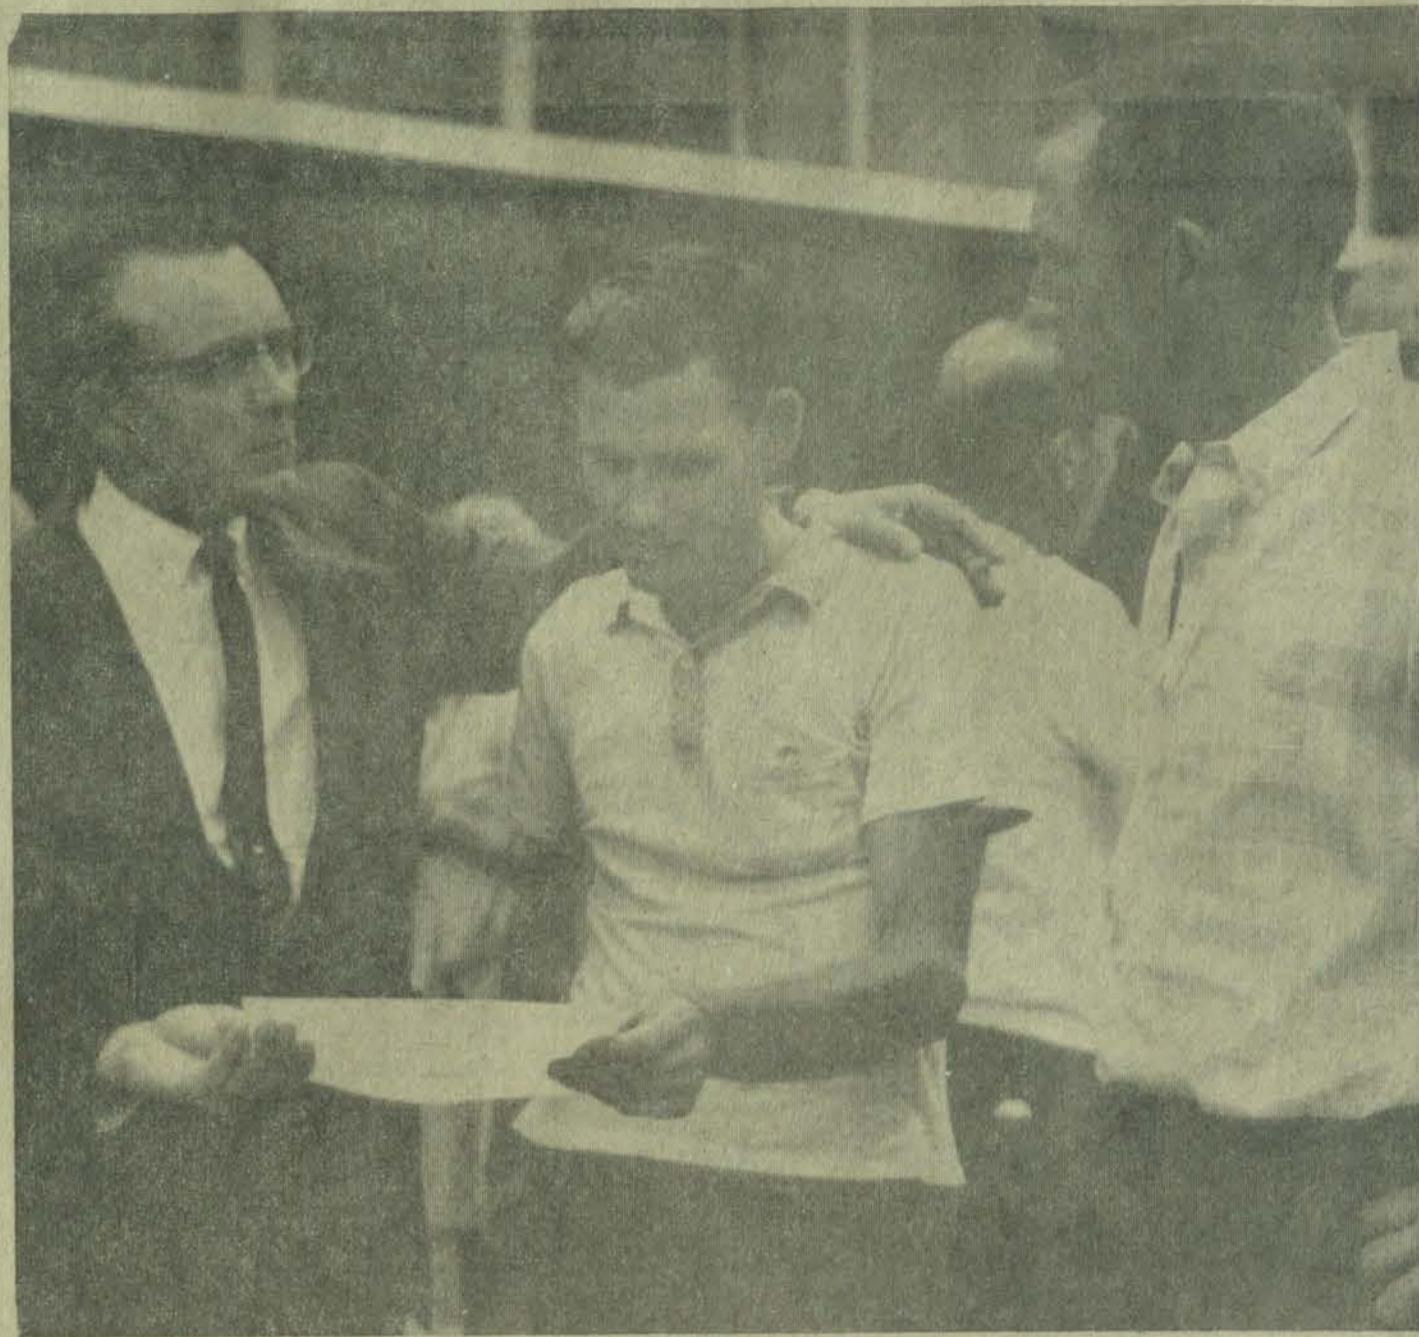

Resource Specialist For Six-County Area Is Jenkins Resident

Alvin B. Webb, of Jenkins, who has been employed as a resource development specialist by the Extension Service, University of Kentucky, will have his headquarters in Prestonsburg, it was announced this week.

Webb, who recently finished his work on a Master's degree in guidance and counseling at the University, will work in Floyd, Pike, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin and Lawrence counties. He will deal with Extension Service programs, according to Dr. Mike Duff, program chairman.

His work will be with the Area Development Council, county development associations, extension personnel and civic and lay groups. His post was created for the new Appalachian program of the Extension Service.

Webb is a native of Cumberland, Kentucky, was graduated from Whitesburg high school, has a degree from Pikeville College, and obtained his Master's this year at the University of Kentucky. He was a school principal at Millstone, a teacher at Jenkins and also was employed on the office staff of a coal firm at Mayking.

SALARY VOTE NOT CALLED

Only Increases Made To Road Employees; Span Held Unsafe

The Floyd fiscal court, in session two days last week, failed to take action toward authorizing an increase in official salaries in keeping with the recent Court of Appeals opinion.

The only increases voted were to county road employees, all of whom were granted a 25c-an-hour raise, effective July 1.

The court granted easements to the City of Martin in the construction of its sewer system to lay lines over and across public roads within the city while it is making necessary installations, such work not to interfere with travel and the city to repair any damages.

George Conn, who had been appointed by the court to inspect the bridge across the river at Emma, reported that the span is unsafe.

The court authorized the payment of $1,400 to Civil Defense in this county.

KNOTT WORK IS STYMIED

Strip-Mine Commission Rejects Application; Floyd Job Lacks O.K.

The first strip-mine application to be rejected under the 1964 Strip-Mine Act was denied the Wolf Head Mining Company to strip 10 acres of land on De-feated Creek, Knott county, this week.

The rejection was voted by the Strip-Mining and Reclamation Commission, which is composed of A. H. Mandt, commissioner of the Department of Mines and Minerals, Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick and Elmore C. Grim, strip-mining director.

Commissioner Mandt voted against the ruling which denied the company the right to mine the Knott county coal. An appeal to Franklin circuit court is possible.

The Strip-Mining and Reclamation Division has rejected one other application—that of the Reed Construction Co., Drift, for an operation on Turkey Creek, in this county, but B. Alvin Reed, head of the company, has not taken that case to the three-man commission.

Three other applications, all filed from Knott and Perry counties, are not likely to be approved as submitted, the strip-mining director was quoted as (See Story No. 6, Page 6)

ETV COUNCIL SCHEDULES COMBS HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Former Governor Bert Combs will address civic and educational leaders at 7:30 Friday night at the Prestonsburg Community College in a meeting called for the discussion of the proposed Kentucky educational television network.

"This is a good time for community leaders to learn what the program is about," said Floyd County School Superintendent Charles Clark, chairman of the four-county Southeastern Educational Television Council.

'OPEN HOUSE' DAYS HOLIDAYS AT AUXIER

The Princess Manufacturing Company at Auxier announced this week that it will have open house, Saturday and Sunday, July 24-25, and the community of Auxier is so elated with the opening of the company's plant there that it has declared both days holidays and plans holidays in future years on the same dates.

The invitation to the public to visit the plant was made, only two weeks after it began operation.

Producing sportswear mainly, Princess has a production schedule calling for the completion of 8,000 garments by the end of August. Approximately 30 persons, mostly women, are now employed, and the plant-owners expect to employ another 30 soon.

When full production is reached, 5,000 garments will be manufactured a week, the owners say.

The plant occupies the building built by the North-East Coal Company and later used as the Mallory Store, with both floors providing an area of approximately 6,400 square feet. The basement of the structure is now being conditioned for use as space is at a premium.

The company has installed 45 machines on the second floor of the building. The first floor contains the cutting room, pressing equipment, office and shipping room. Two cutting tables, each almost 70 feet in length, are in use, and the cutting mechanism in use can cut as high as 350 layers of cloth at one time.

Three of the owners of the business are Auxier men—William L. Wells, Darwin Wells and Paul Dean Wells. The fourth owner is Joseph Addinsio, of New York, a veteran in the garment production industry. Mr. Addinsio supervises pattern design and cutting, while his wife supervises sewing, inspection and other work.

3 IN FLOYD GET STAMPS

For Pinball Machines, Revenue Dept. Says; War on Gambling Set

Governor Breathitt's war on pinball machines has not been extended to Floyd county. The Times learned this week from county officials.

It was said at the County Judge's office that the Governor's office has not made any known contacts here and that no State Police plan of action is known.

Breathitt indicated this week that he will ask the Legislature at its next session to outlaw all pinball machines. He had earlier declared "a fight to the finish" on pinball gambling in the state.

Attention, to date, has centered on Louisville and other metropolitan centers where the greater number of federal gambling stamps for the machines have been purchased. Stamps for 495 Louisville locations have been purchased. Internal Revenue Service records show. IRS refused to disclose the number of stamps issued to each location, and the number of machines may be much greater than the locations reported.

In Floyd county The Courier-Journal reported that gambling stamps for pinball machines have been issued to three locations: Georgia R. Allen, Triangle Restaurant, Allen; Ted Newman, Restaurant, Hi Hat; Joy Messer, Tina's Drive-In, Martin; W. A. and Bessie Young, Lake Drive-In, Prestonsburg.

INLAND WINS TAX DISPUTE

Gas Company Shows Net Gain on Taxes; To Collect $114,000

A petition offering settlement of tax disputes between the United States and Inland Gas Company was accepted in a hearing Wednesday before U. S. District Court Judge H. Church Ford in Lexington.

The hearing marked one of the closing chapters of nearly 30 years of court proceedings involving Inland Gas Corporation, Kentucky Fuel Gas Corporation and American Fuel & Power Company which filed bankruptcy petitions about 30 years ago and later were reorganized to form Inland Gas Company.

The compromising petition was filed June 30 by Otis H. Horne, trustee of Inland Gas Corporation and agent for the American Fuel & Power Company.

In the order signed this week by Judge Ford, claims of the United States for $259,257.18 in 1959 and 1960 income taxes were rejected, except for a deficiency of $5,838.17 in 1959.

In addition, the companies are to receive $57,895.16 in refund of 1957 taxes and $56,206.62 for 1958 taxes.

The compromise was approved by the tax division of the U. S. Department of Justice before it was filed for final court approval.

All money realized from the special offer made for that day will be given to the Rev. Martin, the owner of the business, Paul Salyers, said.

FLOYD REFINERY HEAD ARGUES DO-IT-AT-HOME

Part of equipment in use at refinery.

V. H. (Jack) Tomlison, head of Floyd county's one and only oil refinery, is one who believes that the people of the county should do something with their own natural resources on their own part rather than letting others do the job and then sell the refined product back to them.

Mr. Tomlison, who is president of the Kentucky Oil & Refining Company, near Betsy Layne, practices this doctrine even more than he preaches it. He is now in his 10th year at Betsy Layne, buying the product of oil wells in Floyd and five other counties of the area, then converting it into gasoline, lighter fluid, diesel fuel and other products.

"It's hard work and no get-rich-quick proposition, but it's interesting and the kind of work I like," Tomlison explains, pointing out that the firm is growing, not in sensational spurts but gradually.

The Pulaski county native became interested in the Floyd county refinery during a meeting at Irvine, Ky., with C. W. Gilley, founder of the business. Before that, Tomlison had worked almost seven years with a Somerset refinery, then with an Indiana refinery and still later helped build a plant in the Chicago area.

The Floyd refinery had been idle six years when Tomlison (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

EXPANSION OF PROGRAM IS POSSIBLE

Says Congressman In Address; Floyd Role in Work Hailed

Floyd county's part in adult basic education, which is regarded by many educators as the brightest hope for a breakthrough in the war on poverty, had its hour last Saturday afternoon when county, state and federal officials and educators joined here in a special Recognition Day program.

The program hailed the achievement of the Floyd basic adult education program as being the first to complete the first full year of work and at the same time recognized those who had attended classes, some learning for the first time to read and to write their names, others gaining eighth-grade equivalency certificates.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins, who has gained national stature for his leadership in the area of education legislation, was the principal speaker at the exercises held in the Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse.

The Congressman saw hope of even greater educational benefits through federal legislation and funds. "We are going to write—at least, it's my hope that we will write—into the Poverty Bill next week a provision that federal funds may be expanded so that you may get a certificate which is the equivalent of a high school diploma," Perkins said, directing his remarks to the large gathering of basic adult education students in the stands.

He reviewed conditions which made necessary training such as is now being undertaken—the automation which rendered jobless men who had left school for high wages in coal mines, mills and other industries and who are now without the educational attainments necessary to attend vocational schools and learn new trades. Also reviewed were the hearings held, the legislation introduced and finally enacted.

"I envisioned," he said, "at the time of the introduction of this legislation that full opportunity would be afforded adult citizens to acquire skills in mathematics, English, writing and other basic subjects. Completion of such courses would allow entrance into vocational training and other courses of higher instruction which would give a man or a woman a chance for a more rewarding place in our economy."

Perkins predicted that the authority of ARA will be expanded within the next month and that $400 million will be authorized for public works. He suggested that communities should get their plans in at once for water and sanitation projects.

Charles Clark, superintendent of Floyd schools, presided as chairman of the meeting. "Bless your hearts—well done!" greeted those who have studied in this first year of adult basic education work. Remarking that at least 60 persons attending these adult classes have learned to read and write, he said, "We feel that we have been in the position of giving you a key opening a door out of total darkness."

Metallurgical Engineering -- High-Demand, Top-Pay Field

To high school seniors who have done exceptionally well in physics, chemistry and mathematics:
Stick with all three in college, and parlay them into a high-demand, lucrative career—metallurgical engineering.
If you have doubts about the multitude of job opportunities and the attractive salaries associated with this profession, here is information offered by the metallurgical engineering faculty at the University of Kentucky:
"Industrial and federal research agencies are begging for this type of engineer. We could land jobs for 10 times the number we graduate each year."
"Starting salaries are on the average above all other engineering areas—about $650 per month. It usually only takes a few years to climb to the five-figure-per-year bracket."
Dr. James G. Morris, associate professor of metallurgical engineering at UK, keeps well abreast of the goings-on in the industrial world despite a heavy teaching and research schedule, and is not boastful when he offers his opinion that metallurgical engineers are the core personnel of industry.
He backs up this claim by pointing out that metals are the most prominent materials in a continuously advancing civilization and that research for better alloys rests mainly with the metallurgist.
This is an echo of the historians who agreed "that the degree of civilization attended by a race was directly proportional to the extent to which they made use of metallurgical processes."
H. G. Wells, in his "Outline of History," cited man's association with metals from early times and in referring to a more modern age, stated: "Nothing in the previous practical advances of mankind is comparable in its consequences to the complete mastery over enormous masses of steel and iron and over their texture and quality which man has now achieved."
When man first began to work with metals and turn out implements and ornaments, he knew about six or seven. Now, his descendant, the metallurgist, must be an accomplished scientist-engineer-expert at working with nearly a hundred, usually several at one time. These combinations—alloys—have afforded metals both elastic and plastic properties. Some are highly heat resistant and have revolutionized steam-electric generating plants and equipment for steel manufacturing. They are important and necessary to manned orbital flight and space exploration.
The metallurgical engineering curriculum at UK provides a well-rounded program in physics, chemistry and mathematics and requires a student to take courses in several other engineering areas, especially electrical and mechanical, to complement full-stress metallurgical study. The department offers a graduate program and is one of the few in the nation that offers a doctoral degree in this engineering discipline.
Scholarships are available for this field of study at UK and summer jobs found for students are of a nature that relates to their future careers.
"Yes, we could place 10 times the number of students we graduate each spring," says Dr. Morris, "and the amazing thing about this is that the demand could be filled just through men who have graduated here and have climbed to administrative and supervisory ranks in their profession."
On an average, only four to five BS degrees in metallurgical engineering are awarded at UK each year.
"Looking at the graduation situation in other metallurgical engineering departments throughout the nation, UK's average is fairly comparable," Dr. Morris said.
"Many youths just out of high school and on the threshold of college are not aware of what metallurgical engineering is, what this type of engineer does in actual practice or the advantages linked with a career in this field," continued Dr. Morris. "This is the major reason for low enrollments. The profession itself and industry will have to find effective means of providing information if recruitment, to meet an ever increasing demand, is to be successful."

complete from Winchester to Salversville, and the toll-free section is scheduled for completion from Salversville to Prestonsburg this year. The Parkway's toll-free extension from Prestonsburg to Pikeville, which will call for modernization of U. S. 23, is a portion of the route approved as part of the Appalachian Developmental Highway System.
The southern leg of the Mountain Parkway also will provide a connection with the new Appalachian route. This leg extends from Campton through Jackson, Hazard and Whitesburg where it connects with U. S. 119. This highway also has been made a part of the Appalachian system.

MT. PARKWAY KEY TO LINKS WITH I-64

The Mountain Parkway was the key to approval of that segment of the 2,350-mile Appalachian highway chain which will connect Interstate 64 in Kentucky with Interstates 77 and 81 in Virginia.
Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said this fact was disclosed in conferences with E. S. Preston, the consultant who aided the Appalachian Regional Commission and the 11 states in the Appalachian area in reaching agreement on routes approved for the new system.
"The Mountain Parkway, which was actually the first true developmental highway in the nation, has shown in the past that its construction was not based on an unattainable dream," Ward said. "The fact that a major east-west Appalachian corridor was approved because of this highway is further proof that it was a well-planned investment. The Mountain Parkway was the first step in a dream come true for Eastern Kentucky, and the old argument that it was built to nowhere has once again been disproved."
In Kentucky, this system route follows the Mountain Parkway from I-64 near Winchester through Campton, Prestonsburg and Pikeville, then follows Ky. 80 to Elkhorn City. The route then passes through Virginia to a connection with I-77 at Bluefield and then on to an interchange with I-81 near Roanoke.
The Mountain Parkway has been completed or is under construction and, therefore, none of the funds appropriated for the Appalachian system will be required for its improvement. "It was this fact which contributed very significantly to adoption of the entire route," Ward said.
The portion of the system route to be improved under the Appalachian program generally will follow U. S. 23 from Prestonsburg through Pikeville to Ky. 80 south of Pikeville. It will then generally follow the present route of Ky. 80 from U. S. 23 to the Virginia state line near Elkhorn City and the Breaks Interstate Park. From this point it will involve a new location to U. S. 460 near Grundy, Virginia, and then follow U. S. 460 to the intersection with I-81.

TB Eradication Project Completes Skin Testing Of Martin Countians

The Martin County Tuberculosis Eradication Project (TEP) has completed a county-wide skin testing program for tuberculosis and histoplasmosis, with over 93% of the population skin-tested.
All who have positive TB skin tests, those who have TB germs in their bodies, have been asked to come to the Martin County Health Department and get chest X-rays. Individuals who are found to have TB will be notified to come to the Health Department to see Dr. S. A. Shaffer, director of the State Tuberculosis Hospital, Ashland, to discuss recommended procedures concerning treatment and further diagnostic studies. Those people who have positive skin tests and are found not to have TB will be given treatment to fight the germs that are already present in their bodies.
More than 99% of the households have been interviewed by TEP for the purpose of gathering census and health information that will be helpful in planning further health programs in Martin county. Dr. Michael L. Furcolow, director of the project, said that the Martin county school system, the Health Liaison committee, Dr. John W. Ford, of Inez, and Dr. Russell L. Hall, county health doctor, and the staff of the Martin County Health Department have contributed greatly to the success of the project.
Personnel will move the TEP office on August 1 to a location on Main street, Inez.

In Frankfort, Highway Commissioner Henry Ward, who has disputed some tentative decisions by commission officials on criteria for locating roads, last week praised them.

Offering "my personal commendation," to federal co-chairman John Sweeney and Kentucky representative John Whisman, Ward said "the commission's action means that the Department of Highways can proceed intelligently with plans, acquisition of rights-of-way, and construction of the entire Appalachian system in this state.

"The department will move as speedily as state and federal funds are made available."

Ward said there are still final corridor decisions to be made regarding the stretch between Greenup and Portsmouth and the stretch between Somerset and I-75.

He said the Greenup-Portsmouth road can run on either side of the Ohio River.

"Kentucky strongly supports this improvement on the Kentucky side and is in the process of developing further justification for this route," he said.

The Somerset link can be between Somerset and London or Somerset and Mt. Vernon.

"Kentucky supports the (Somerset to London) route, and we have developed information to support this location," he said.

(The route U. S. 23, between Prestonsburg and Allen, is another matter yet to be decided.)

Gov. Edward T. Breathitt was elected state co-chairman of the commission, to succeed Gov. Carl Sanders, of Georgia.

Paul Crabtree, West Virginia's delegate, nominated Breathitt, saying Breathitt is "more acutely interested" in the commission's work than most of the 11 governors and was one of two governors who made special trips to speak to commission meetings.

took over. "Mr. Gilley," he recalls, "had a little, pot still, a small amount of storage—and every tank on the place leaked."

Tomlison converted the plant from "batch" operation to continuous run. The refinery now has a capacity of 450 42-gallon barrels a day, and he expects to increase production within a reasonable time to 700 barrels.

The building process has been steady. Two years ago, a 210,000-gallon storage tank was added to existing facilities. The latest installations include a pipe distillation unit and flash chamber.

The plant employs 13 persons and has an annual payroll ranging between $40,000 and $50,000. All the stock in the company is owned by residents of the Betsy Layne area. Tomlison is president (and, it might be added, is chemist, lab technician, plant superintendent and general handyman). Andy Blanton, of Oil Springs, is sales engineer.

While the regular routine of work goes on Tomlison continues with research in his lab. Right now, he is digging into oil viscosities. He also continues testing a coal-treating oil which is used to dust-proof and freeze-proof stoker coal which is shipped into Canada and Alaska.

He isn't engaged in the coal business but he has an idea that research should be started in that industry at the mines. Tomlison points out that wood at one time suffered from the introduction of plastics but that that industry set an example for others by developing new uses for wood, its products and by-products.

The Betsy Layne plant produces three grades of gasoline. Kenlite lighter fluid, oil for coal treatment and diesel fuel.

THE PATENT BUSINESS

This, along with most other notes you'll find in this column, will not increase the sum total of your wisdom, but I found it interesting.

I, somehow, had a notion the boys had run out of things to invent, but it says here that last year 87,482 applications for patents were filed with the U. S. Patent Office, that 44,800 patents were granted and that there's a backlog of applications numbering 219,691 which will require three years to process.

When the Patent Office was only four years old, it issued Patent No. 100 to a man named Whitney for a cotton gin.

And Patent No. 6,469 covering a device which would fill a ship's hull with air and buoy it over shoals went to a young Illinois Congressman named A. Lincoln.

Thirty-five years ago, when Albert Einstein patented "an apparatus for producing refrigeration," he was regarded as just another eccentric immigrant.

Let's never mind the Morses, Goodyears, Bells, Edisons, Fultons, et al—instead, consider the man who might have made gentlemen of us all. He's the guy who patented an automatic hat-tipper.

Clark and other speakers were unanimous in their praise of Perkins for the work he has done in Washington.

F. P. Hilton, assistant superintendent, Bureau of Vocational Education, Frankfort, introduced the Congressman, remarking, "He can't make us do these things we should do, but he has made these things possible." He said he knew of no county in Kentucky that has done more with its resources than Floyd.

James W. Sallsbury, director of the adult education effort in this county, and his staff of teachers drew the commendation of officials who had reviewed the Floyd county record.

Ray Corns, Governor Breathitt's legal representative, hailed the occasion as a "day of accomplishment . . . rejoicing . . . for you and the state of Kentucky."

C. F. Esham, director of the Division of Adult Education, State Department of Education, spoke of the great debt that all who are interested in education owe to Carl Perkins. "Had it not been for Carl Perkins," he said, "we would not be here today in this program, and many other programs would be missing."

Mr. Esham described the adult basic education work as "a new dimension in education." He said that in this 19-county area 5,000 adults are enrolled in basic education work, and predicted that we will have enrolled, within five years, more people in adult education than we now have in the public school program — "provided such men as Carl Perkins get us the money."

Aaron Paul, Frankfort, expressed for the Division of Public Assistance pride in having a part in the program which, he told those who have participated in classes, "will make you a better parent and a better citizen."

Expressing appreciation of the work done by Congressman Perkins, Edmund Baxter, director of the regional office of Health, Education and Welfare, Charlottesville, Virginia, said, "I think it is highly appropriate that this pioneering ceremony be held in the home district of the Congressman." He added that the people of Eastern Kentucky have once again demonstrated that "they can make progress on their own when given an opportunity to do so."

"This," he said, "is the fulfillment of an American ideal—an opportunity for every American citizen."

The program was concluded by the presentation by Mr. Sallsbury of eighth-grade equivalency certificates to the following:

Evan Adkins, Grethel; Charles Lee Berger, Weeks; Willard Burchett, Allen; Reve B. Caudill, Wheelwright; Audie Elkins, Lambert; Dorothy Engle, Wheelwright; Della B. Flannery, Martin; Billy Fraley, McDowell; Kendall Griffith, Garrett; William J. Henderson, Melvin; William Huff, McDowell; Willie Johnson, Allen; Clyde Justice, Osborn; Marie Mann, Martin; Ida M. president; Leo Roberts, of Toler Creek, vice-president; and Lillian L. Sturgill, of Harold, secretary-treasurer.

Larry Grayhouse, a representative of the Council of Southern Mountains, and Sam Webb, of the University Extension Service, spoke to the group.

Mrs. Helen Wells, Community Action director, termed the meeting very successful, considering the large crowd and the enthusiasm expressed by the members. The next area meeting will be held Friday, August 13, at 7 p.m. at the John M. Stumbo school auditorium.

saying. Grim said this chance of denial exists because of steep slopes and the width of "benches" involved.

These applications are from: Caperton Coal Co., Hazard, for surface-mining along the right and left forks of Big Branch of Lott's Creek in Knott county.

Mountain Top Stripping and Pine Bluff Augering Co., Hazard, for surface-mining along the Knott-Perry line near Anco.

Tarheel Coals, Inc., Pineville, for surface-mining along Troublesome Creek, near Ary in Perry county.

Grim said slopes of 60 to 68 percent and requested bench widths of 150 to 180 feet are involved. No final decisions have been made, but the applicants almost certainly will be asked to reduce "bench" widths, Grim said. On such steep slopes, it is questionable if overburden can be stabilized before sliding into creeks below, he said.

Meetings To Implement County Farm Program Announced by Breathitt

Governor Edward T. Breathitt this week announced a series of August meetings to initiate implementation of his Commission on Agriculture's farm program at the county level.

The meetings are designed to inform farmers and agricultural leaders of the Commission's plans to raise farm income.

Total farm income in 1964 was $732 million. The Commission's goal is $1 billion annually.

In 16 towns, the Commission will present recommendations for improving farming efficiency to county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service chairmen, Soil Conservation Service technicians, county extension agents, vocational agriculture teachers, farm bureau presidents, and others.

For this area the meeting will be held in the Mayo Vocational School auditorium, Paintsville, August 12 at 10 a.m.

Witnesses To Attend Tennessee Convention

Burnis Jones, of Beaver, presiding minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, announced this week that about 10 members of the local congregation will be leaving this week for the first session of the "Word of Truth" convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in Chattanooga, Tennessee. The convention will be held in Engel Stadium. Advance requests for accommodations indicate the attendance will be upwards of 14,000.

All meetings of the local congregation held at the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses will be cancelled until August 3, according to Jones.

The Bond Issue Deserves Our Support

As Kentucky's voters study the $176,000,000 bond issue on which they will vote at the November election they have several vital considerations which they must keep in mind if they are to vote intelligently.

They need to consider these facts:

Of the total, $139 millions will be earmarked for roads—interstate, primary and secondary—and that investment on Kentucky's part will bring $7 from the federal government for every $3 spent by Kentucky. On interstate roads the federal government's share of the cost will be $9 to each $1 of the states. Altogether, state and federal funds will make available $736 million for highways of these three types.

Of the remaining $37 million in the bond issue, $17 million will be allocated to the University of Kentucky, the University of Louisville, the five state colleges and the Prestonsburg and other community colleges—and, as a result of federal matching funds and money from other sources, the total for these will swell to $87 million.

Add another $7 million to the expansion of state park facilities, livestock show and sale facilities, forestry, small lake projects and the like; and $5½ million for vocational schools, libraries, industries for the blind and for the schools for the deaf and blind.

They should consider, too, that this bond issue would provide the Highway Department with sufficient funds until 1970 to match not only these federal allocations to the interstate highway system (including federal farm-to-market roads) but would also assure that Kentucky will be able to take full advantage of the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to qualify for approximately 480 miles of highway construction in Eastern Kentucky under the Appalachian road program which also provides $7 for each $3 of state funds.

The need for roads and other marks of progress embraced in the program proposed by this bond issue cannot be denied. The urgency of the opportunity to benefit from federal funds is great.

But there are alternatives.

ALTERNATIVE ONE: Kentucky could forget its partially completed interstate system, its opportunity to share in the Appalachian road-building program, and its development of colleges and schools, parks and other facilities.

ALTERNATIVE TWO: The state could devote all existing highway funds to the interstate and Appalachian programs and forget all other road work, including the big job of maintaining those already completed.

ALTERNATIVE THREE: It could seek other means of raising the needed funds. It could, as has been suggested, raise the auto registration fees from $4.50 a year to about $45, or it could increase gasoline taxes by three or four cents to the gallon and have the highest such tax in the nation.

In any event, the people of Kentucky must make a decision. Kentucky needs more and better roads; it needs all the help it can get from federal sources; the opportunity it fails to grasp now will be picked up immediately by some other state. There can be no dillydallying about this matter.

We believe that if the people will weigh the benefits possible through passage of the bond issue against the losses that will surely follow if they defeat it, there can be no decision other than to give it their overwhelming support.

The Soil Bank Wife Program

By CLENNIE BOLLON (In The Foreman's Journal)

Already us pore farmers can sign up our corn and our wheat and our peanuts and our cotton in the Federal Reserve Soil Bank which has local branches in all County Seats, and we can get us a pretty good sized check for not growing nothing on our little farms. This is right nice for us pore people because we never did grow nothing much and never did have much desire to do so.

We have allus been able to grow a awful bunch of younguns. We've been able to produce nearly faster than the Nation can take care of them. It has got the big shots and high thinking fellers scared that someday they'll be too many younguns born and the world will be overpopulated with human beings and that will be very bad. It is now in the minds of the Great Thinkers that the time has come for us and everyone else to Soil Bank our woman. By the first of the coming year, it is expected that each and every husband—rich or poor—can whistle into the nearest Soil Bank office and soil bank his woman. Then he will be paid an equivalent of $500 per youngun that he don't have as long as he actively participates in the Youngun Program of the Soil Bank Wives.

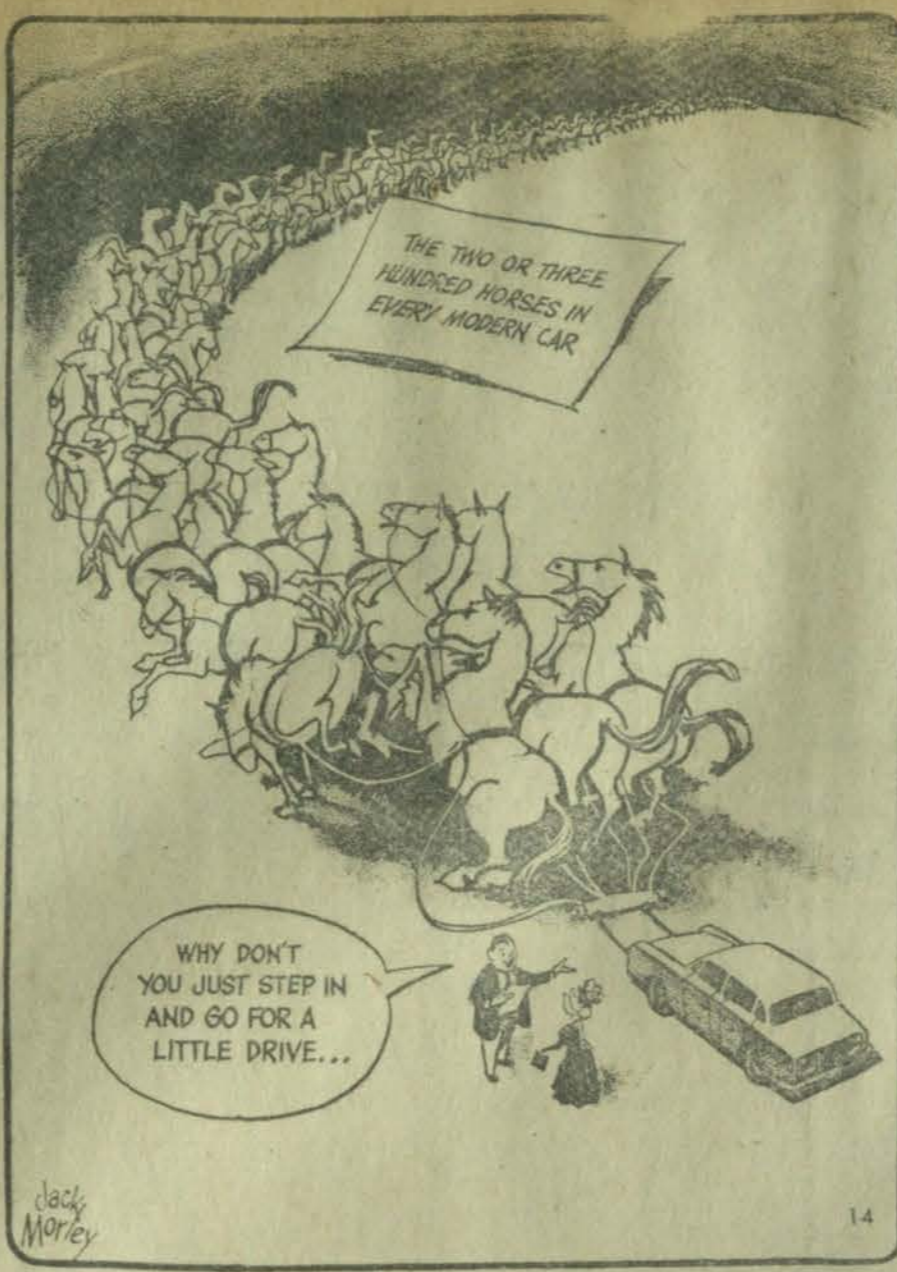

This program is going to be much more favorable to the Nation than any of the grain and cotton programs. It is going to be the greatest advantage that the government has shown the people. It will be the "secret weapon" of the War on Poverty. It will practically wipe out Poverty by its own self. Heretofore the government has absent-mindedly been paying families for producing younguns. The family with the biggest bunch of younguns allus got the most of everything the government has had to give away. Their commodity poke was bigger. Their Social Security check was bigger, and all their Draw Checks were bigger. And their checks and pokes got bigger with each additional youngun that arrived at the homestead. These new arrivals are frequent when they are worth around forty or fifty dollars a month to a draw check.

With the Woman Soil Bank program, the government is going to actually for one time in its life save money for the taxpayer. It will be much cheaper to pay the husband of the woman a sum of $500 per year for each youngun that he don't have than it will to support the younguns being born out of Soil Bank and other ways. There will be no need of more Federal Housing projects and even the Welfare Department will practically be a thing of the past.

Too, your Youngun Base will be promulgated according to the height and weight and livability of your past younguns. Them with histories of light younguns will not receive as much as them with histories of heavy or overweight younguns. This will be a fair regulation because all of us know it will save more money not to raise big rearse eating younguns than it will to raise thin pore appetted younguns.

Your local Soil Bank Program will take care of you and give you advice as to when to expect this new Wife Soil Bank Program to go into effect. Also you will be furnished information and the newest devices for helping you to benefit and actively carry out this program. Wild younguns born into this program will not be tolerated and those responsible for such will be duly reprimanded.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

MOST DEADLY OF THE MUSHROOMS

It is said there are thousands of dollars worth of good mushroom eating going to waste every day in the forest because people can't tell the edible mushrooms from those that are dangerous to eat, and are afraid to take a chance. The mycologist (one who knows mushrooms) says that mushrooms contain certain vitamins and minerals not found in other plants and are highly nourishing. That's why many birds and animals eat them; among these are squirrels, grouse, wild turkeys, box turtles, deer, cows, sheep and thousands of kinds of beetles. But nature has given most of these the ability to tell the dangerous ones. Now and then one will find dead beetles poisoned from eating the deadly mushrooms. But squirrels know which kind to eat, and if one will follow the squirrels, he can tell the ones that are non-poisonous.

Fortunately, there are only a dozen or so among all the many thousands of species that are dangerous to eat. Nearly all the mushrooms in the notorious Amanita group are poisonous. One of these is known to naturalists as "The Death Angel." This is because it looks perfectly innocent in sheer white, but its innocent white hides its deadly nature. The death angel is ALL WHITE and often has a white glaze on top. One sure way to tell it is to look at the base of the stalk. The stalk is ALWAYS enclosed by a cuplike structure called the "volva." Then, near the top of the stalk, there is a collar, or ring, around the stalk; the white gills are densely crowded together on the underside of the cap.

The death angel sometimes grows six inches high and is inclined to spring up after summer rains. The cap is smooth on top, has no scales or warts like some Amanitas. This mushroom is said to have poison identical with that of the rattlesnake; the danger of eating it is, by the time one gets sick it is usually too late to do anything. Mushrooms with a volva or cup at the base and a ring around the stem, near the top, should be avoided. Usually those that are pure white all over are also dangerous. The Fly mushroom, which is red or yellowish-orange, and has scales on the cap, produces hallucinations when eaten and was used by the American Indians in their wild, religious orgies. It can also cause death.

THE FAMOUS MOCKINGBIRD

The mockingbird is "the metropolitan opera star of the bird world." It is also called "the American nightingale." It is the state bird of five states: Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Florida and Texas. This bird can mock anything that strikes its fancy. Once I saw a mockingbird listening to the song of the Kentucky Cardinal. Suddenly it burst into the Cardinal's song and really beat the Cardinal at its own song.

A man down south had a dog with tags that jingled like little bells every time the dog ran around the house or yard. A mockingbird heard the jingling tags, and one morning when the dog failed to come out and run, the bird jingled just like the dog tags and fooled the owner of the dog.

Another man was using a floor sander; one morning, before he had switched on the electric sanding machine, he heard a noise outside and when he investigated, he saw a mockingbird singing just like the noise of his sanding machine.

A man pushed a squeaky wheelbarrow and was surprised to hear the mockingbird reproducing the squeaks. This bird can reproduce the sounds of squeaky door hinges, or the bark of a dog, the mew of a cat—almost any sound it hears and takes a notion to reproduce.

The mockingbird is long, slender, graceful, gray above and white below, with large patches of white on the wings, with white streaks down the sides of its tail. It is a member of that famous trio of mimic thrushes brown thrasher, catbird and mockingbird.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College, Bowling Green, Ky.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

As a lifetime reader of American literature and a teacher in that field for a half century, I have often loved to trace the influence of some wise person who found something good in our plain folk life and thus formed, unconsciously, a new school of thinkers and writers. Many of the people who lived before our time have been so idealized that they could not possibly recognize their portraits as painted by some of our romantic writers. Good was good and bad was bad to many of our earlier writers, so that any variation from what the author conceived to be the thinking of people would be hard to find. I am afraid that the Pilgrims, as an example, have suffered far more from their interpreters than from the Church of England.

Among scholars James Russell Lowell has come to have a place much higher for his scholarly knowledge of New England local speech than for his poems that are pretty far removed from New England as a whole. It was not merely a writer making up an ignorant dialect that Lowell used when he wrote poems in the manner of a back-country fellow like Hosea Biglow. For years Lowell had studied the quaint, substandard but very natural language of the uneducated but not necessarily dumb back-countryman. Harvard speech, no matter how ardently the educated tried to preserve it and teach it, was merely a dialect that had been elevated to standard usage, not a foreordained way for all people who speak English to follow. Back in the hills people talked naturally and never knew it. They had inherited from their ancestors some words and meanings and intonations that were unconsciously transmitted to their children and children's children. But, to a narrowly-educated person, then and now, they spoke a debased speech, one that social climbers shunned as they shunned any suggestion of being inferior in any way to their imagined London English as spoken by the court and the universities. Lowell, though an aristocrat of long standing and a third-generation graduate of Harvard, saw in this natural speech of New England some very forceful ways to say some eternal truths. And thus Hosea Biglow becomes the mouthpiece of the common New Englander and the back-country philosopher.

A long time after Lowell arose Edward Eggleston, who found in the backwoods of Indiana a vigorous speech, no less genuine than Lowell's New England dialect. A scholar in history and, therefore, learned in the waves of migration that settled southern Indiana, Eggleston loved to register, conscientiously, the language as he heard it, with no apology for its rudeness or lack of polish. His study of Indiana dialect was merely a part of his whole grasp of the history of the early Middle West. He sensed how language is to be considered when we are to know a people; documents are always necessary, even the most abstruse; but no very good historian ever stops with written records, especially formal ones. People of all sorts are behind the most casual statement of some historic fact. Eggleston recognized the differences between the speech of the pioneers in Indiana and that of Tidewater Virginia and of New England. Here was, from the earliest frontier days, a new group of speakers, a melting pot of cultures that has been too often ignored or played down rather than up. Scotch-Irish and Pennsylvania Germans, with French Huguenots in smaller numbers, and a fair mixture of immigrants from nearly every lands north of the Ohio River, and somehow evolved a type of speech that differed then and still differs from that of any other region. Fortunately, Eggleston, in reissuing his THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER after it had astonished him and everybody else with its wide popularity among people of all degrees of culture, wrote, with plenty of learning, about the speech of his area, one of the best essays on regional speech we have ever had. It and Lowell's introduction to a later edition of THE BIGLOW PAPERS constitute two excellent starting places for earnest scholars of regional speech. When they wrote dialect, they tried to make it true in every way to the areas they knew best.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SAYS TAX RATE TO BE CUT

Editor, The Times:

During the past several weeks, since the State Court of Appeals handed down its history-making decision on property assessments, many individuals have been disturbed by the prospect of a drastic increase in their taxes. Most of them are afraid their taxes will double or triple next year.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The Governor, local school officials, and other governmental leaders, all across the state have expressed their desire to reduce the tax as assessments are increased in line with the court decision. I am convinced that local school boards, which are elected to represent the public in each school district, will act wisely in reducing tax rates to the appropriate level while still maintaining essential school services.

How could they act otherwise? They are taxpayers themselves; and they serve at the discretion of those who elect them. They have the welfare of the community and the children at heart as they make decisions affecting the school program.

The most important idea growing out of this entire situation is that property taxes will be equalized. Some people will discover that they have been bearing more than their share of the tax burden for many years when they find their actual tax payments are reduced as assessments are equalized. Other, who have not been carrying their full share of the load, may find themselves forced to pay a little more under new assessment practices.

If we just stop to think about this for a minute or two, most of us will admit that we are willing to carry our fair share of the load. What we really object to is carrying more of the load than our neighbor. This recent court decision can insure the fairness of the tax burden on each property owner, while making it possible to have a good school program.

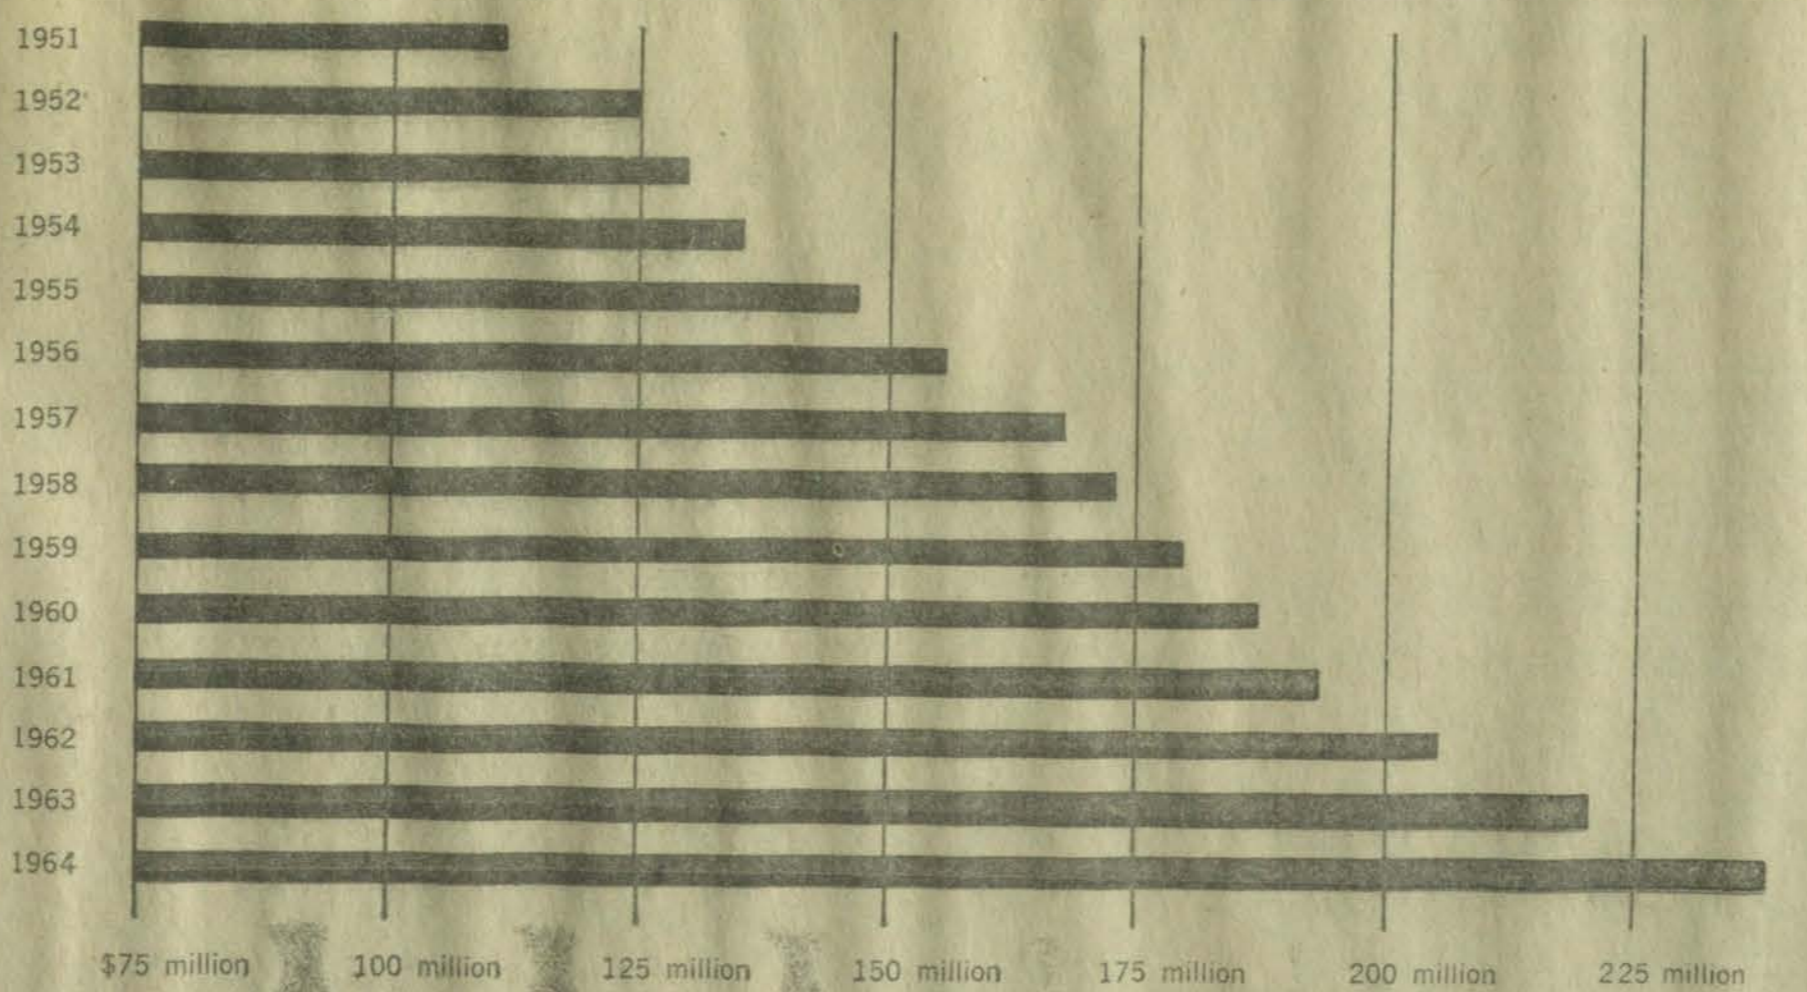

Each piece of property will be assessed on its own merits, regardless of anything else. It is my understanding that the State Department of Revenue already has prepared some guidelines for this process which can be used by the local tax commissioner and the local board of supervisors in arriving at "the fair cash value" of farms, residences, and commercial property in the local school district.

In the name of the 28,000 teachers in the state who make up the Kentucky Education Association, I would ask everyone to examine the situation calmly and to cooperate in getting the tax load equalized at the earliest possible date.

Tourist Spending Takes Biggest Leap In 1964

(Kentucky Department of Public Information)

SPENDING BY OUT-OF-STATE TOURISTS in Kentucky, which increased by a record $15 million in 1963, increased by even more—$18 million—in the year just ended to an all-time high total of $238 million. This chart, based on surveys made by Dr. Lewis C. Copeland, University of Tennessee economist, shows that tourist spending in the Bluegrass State has more than doubled since 1951.

GROUNDBREAKING SLATED FOR BYPASS AT LOUISA

Federal, state and local officials, will spade eastern Ky. soil near Louisa during groundbreaking ceremonies for the Louisa Bypass at 2 p.m. Friday.

Sponsored by the U. S. 23 Association, the ceremony will be held at the north edge of Louisa, near U. S. 23. Herman Wheeler, president of the Association, will be master of ceremonies.

The 3.09-mile, $1,881,000-Louisa Bypass and Madison Street Connector, financed with state bond money and federal Appalachian funds, is the second Appalachian project which Kentucky has put under construction this month. On July 6, ground was broken on Kentucky's first Appalachian project that will stretch from Isom towards Whitesburg.

Development of plans, right-of-way acquisition, relocation of utilities and construction of the Madison Street connector, which amounts to $667,000, is being financed with 50 per cent bond money and 50 per cent federal funds. Construction costs on the bypass alone, estimated at $1,214,000, will be financed with 70 per cent federal Appalachian funds and 30 per cent state bond money.

"The beginning of construction on the Louisa Bypass — the second Appalachian project to be started in 17 days — is clear proof that your Highway Department is going to build roads all across Kentucky, just as fast as funds are available," Commissioner Ward said.

McDOWELL 6th TEAM TO ENTER A.I.T.
McDowell high school, expected by most basketball observers to be the class of the 15th region for the 1965-'66 season, became the sixth team to accept a spot in the 11th annual Ashland Invitational Basketball Tournament.

Announcement of McDowell's selection was made Saturday. Ten teams will vie for the state's leading invitational championship December 27-31 in Paul Blazer high school gymnasium. Others announced are Harrison County, Hazard, Louisville Male, Mt. Sterling and host Ashland.

McDowell, which had a 28-5 record last year, is coached by Pete Grigsby, Jr., a University of Kentucky graduate who has posted a 103-32 record in four seasons at McDowell. He coached three years at M. C. Napier high, before moving to McDowell. He has three of five regulars back on the squad and they'll be joined by two top reserves.

Ricky Hall, 6-4 and 190-pound senior, plays center-forward and is the team's outstanding player. He averaged 15 rebounds and 21 points a game in 1964-'65. Hall has a good reverse left move under the basket and scores well with a jump shot.

Donnie Hall, his brother, is a 5-9 guard and just a junior. However, he averaged 10 points a game as a sophomore. Woody Carter, 6-0 senior guard, is a top defensive player and scores well.

ROAD BOND ISSUE BACKED IN EASTERN KY. DISTRICTS

Lexington, Ky. — Two Eastern Kentucky highway districts are "gold star" districts, according to officials of the Kentucky Better Roads Council.

Only one county in the two districts has failed to come through with an endorsement of the $176 million bond issue to be on the November ballot.

The Twelfth highway district, with headquarters at Pikeville, has scored a clean sweep, with every county represented with an endorsement from one or more organizations. The Eleventh district, with headquarters at Manchester, lacks but one county of tying the record of its neighbor.

A major share of the bond issue money, $139 million, goes for highway construction, including the Appalachian road development program.

In addition, the program also contains funds for job-training at new or expanded vocational schools as well as $17.1 million to expand or construct community colleges under the University of Kentucky. The same allocation also includes funds for capital construction at Eastern Kentucky State College as well as Morehead State College.

The breakdown of the program also earmarks money for the development of forestry facilities, community libraries and small lakes for industrial and recreational purposes.

The Eleventh district includes Harlan, Leslie, Bell, Knox, Clay, Whitley, Laurel and Jackson counties.

Survey Shows Streams Less Acid Than Feared

A U. S. Geological Survey study of more than 300 streams in 10 Appalachian states has shown much less acid loading from mine drainage than was expected, the Department of the Interior said this week.

Interior said some observers were surprised at the study results, which showed no acid in streams in Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama and Georgia. Acid was found in only three streams in Maryland, two in Kentucky and one in Tennessee. The study indicated nearly all major streams affected by acid mine drainage are in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio, but even there most streams contain good-quality water suitable for practically all uses. Of 72 Pennsylvania streams sampled, only 22 contained some acid contaminants. In West Virginia, 14 streams of 56 sampled were acid, and in Ohio seven of 37 showed acidity.

JOBLESS IN THIS AREA RELIEVE NURSE SHORTAGE

The State Department of Mental Health is turning to jobless Eastern Kentuckians to help relieve chronic shortages of male nurses aides in state mental health institutions.

The first five aides were recruited recently in the Hazard, Harlan and Pikeville areas through cooperation of the Departments of Economic Security, Personnel and Mental Health.

The five began work July 1 at Central State Hospital, Anchorage, near Louisville. Eleven other men from the three Eastern Kentucky areas have passed Merit System examinations for the nurses aide positions and 40 are expected to be tested during July.

The idea of bringing unemployed workers from Eastern Kentucky has worked successfully at Eastern State Hospital, Lexington. Daniel B. Howard, former personnel officer at the hospital, decided the same formula might help fill vacancies at Central State and at Frankfort State Hospital and School. Howard was recently named personnel director for the mental health department.

Both men and women aides are needed at the two institutions, Howard said, but the beginning salary of $180 per month is less attractive to men with family responsibilities.

For the present, the five Eastern Kentuckians at Central State will live on the hospital grounds in $15-a-month bachelor quarters. After several weeks of classroom study and on-the-job training, they will be eligible for promotion to psychiatric aides—jobs which pay $189 per month, Howard said.

Howard described the five as "highly motivated young men who would rather work than live off the dole." Two are former miners and two others recently completed their military service. None had been able to find employment near their hometowns, he added.

Applicants for the aide positions must be between the ages of 18 and 55, have at least an eighth grade education and the aptitude to work with patients.

Cooks, maintenance workers and other employees for the mental health institutions may be recruited from Eastern Kentucky

if the experiment proves successful at Central State, Howard said. These positions have higher beginning salaries than the aide positions but are still difficult to fill in high-employment areas such as Lexington and Louisville.

Applicants interested in learning more about these positions and the advantages of employment under the Kentucky Merit System should contact their nearest State Employment Service office of the Department of Economic Security or write direct to the Division of Recruitment and Examinations, Department of Personnel, Frankfort, Kentucky.

Special examinations may be given in Eastern Kentucky if they are warranted by the number of applicants.

Washington—About 4.75 billion acre-feet of water falls on the United States each year as rain or snow. Thirty-two percent of this returns to the air as evaporation or transpiration from bare landscapes and nonbeneficial vegetation. Thirty-eight percent sustains forests and fields. VOTING-MACHINE CHANGES URGED Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky's attorney general urged the maker of Shoup Voting Machines last week to design and install flanges on the front door of its devices to prevent removal of the door by knocking out the hinge pins.

Atty. Gen. Robert Matthews also asked the company to notify its technicians—who are employed by many of the 70 Kentucky counties using its devices to prepare them for elections—to make sure that two seals are placed on right and left studs on the back of each machine.

Matthews also wrote all county court clerks directing them to see that numbered seals are affixed to the two studs in back of each device "so that no tampering can be accomplished without prompt discovery."

In a letter to Ransom Shoup, Ridley Park, Pa., president of Shoup Voting Machine Corp., Matthews said he was glad to find upon investigation of voting irregularities in Martin county that the Shoup machines did not malfunction.

"Yet the test conducted by the state police detectives indicated that tampering with these machines and securing access to them was easily accomplished without the benefit of keys," he wrote.

"Therefore, it is extremely important that your technicians and employees should be notified that all seals should be placed on the machine after it is set for a particular election."

"It is also suggested that on all your machines some type of flange be placed on the front door so that it cannot be removed merely by taking the door off its hinges.

I feel confident that it would be a very simple thing for your company . . . and I hope that you will give consideration to this project."

Investigation of voting irregularities in Martin county in the May 25 primary showed that the 11 Shoup machines used in the election had been "gimmicked" before the vote. Each machine showed more total votes cast in races for sheriff and county clerk than the total number of persons who had voted on each machine.

In his letter to the 120 county clerks Matthews explained what had happened: "As you possibly know, recently in Martin county certain vote frauds were discovered . . . the crime consisted of pasting small deeds with the number 0 on them over the number 9 in the individual columns for two particular candidates.

"This was done after access was obtained to the machines and 99 votes run up for two particular candidates . . . then, when the first vote was cast, the machine recorded 100 votes.

"Since you are charged with responsibility . . . of protecting these machines and the integrity thereof, you should be reminded to keep in a safe place at all times the keys to said machines."

Plant Materials Center Scheduled at Quicksand

Lexington, Ky.—The U. S. Department of Agriculture said this week a plant materials research center would be established at Quicksand, Breathitt county, in the near future.

Secretary Orville Freeman said the center would try to develop plants to fit special land problems of the Appalachian region. The center will cost $200,000 and will be built with funds from the Appalachian Regional Development Act.

Plant specialists of the U. S. D. A. Soil Conservation Service will study native Appalachian plants and others at the center, to develop varieties specially adapted for improving land and wildlife resources in Appalachia. There are 19 such centers in other U. S. areas. Goals are improved grasses, legumes, trees and shrubs for the study areas. Plants that show promise will be tested further on region farms. If such plants meet requirements, seed supply is increased on farms of district cooperators and crop improve-

GOVERNOR TELLS STAND ON STATE STRIP-MINING

BY GOV. EDW. T. BREATHITT

One of the basic pledges in the platform on which I ran for Governor two years ago was to promote the conservation of Kentucky's natural resources.

The hard looks I have just taken at strip mine operations in both Eastern and Western Kentucky prompt me to broaden that pledge.

I have instigated action to try to relieve the sorry situation in which the owners of surface land in Eastern Kentucky find themselves because of the so-called broad form, or long-form deeds to mineral rights.

The courts have held that the mineral-rights deeds, drawn up 50 or more years ago, give their owners the power to strip the surface of the land to get out the coal beneath, despite the protests of owners of the surface who may be ruined in the process.

In furtherance of my determination to alleviate this situation, if at all possible, I have asked the Attorney General to intervene in a Knott county case to test again at length the legality of the long-form deeds.

I have assigned a lawyer from my office to assist in the suit, outside counsel will be hired if necessary, and we are prepared to go even to the U. S. Supreme Court for a final interpretation.

In the Knott county case, 19 land owners were enjoined from interfering with mining operations which, they said, caused silt, stone and other debris to wash onto their property.

The landowners asked the court through their attorney to dissolve the restraining order and to declare the land off-limits to the coal operators on the grounds that the old long-form deeds should not apply to strip and auger mining. Strip and auger mining were unknown when most of the deeds were written.

As a result of my tour of the strip and auger mining section of Eastern Kentucky, I have directed the Department of Natural Resources to adopt regulations aimed at solving the problems caused by mining on steep slopes and other practices which result in damage to homes, streams, wildlife and vegetation.

I was pleased to note on my trip to Western Kentucky that worthwhile reclamation work had been done under provisions of the strip-mine law passed by the 1964 General Assembly.

It was apparent, however, that we have not done all we must do, and with that in mind I ordered a new regulation that will require flattening of earth rolling terrain the hills of earth stripped off to get at the coal. This would eliminate deep pits and valleys that hold acid water.

The inspection trips proved to me that it is vitally important that the state act with responsibility in the whole area of strip and auger mining to protect the rights of the citizens of today as well as those of tomorrow. It is increasingly apparent that further action will be necessary at the 1966 Legislature.
