

ROAD PROJECT HERE MAY COST $330,000

WARD MOVES TO INITIATE WORK HERE

Project To Involve So. Lake Drive Work Of Reconstruction

Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward last week authorized the reconstruction of South Lake Drive here, a project which will cost an estimated $330,000.

Completion of the job, which will involve elimination of the "corner" turn at Richmond street is scheduled for fiscal year 1966-67 and for completion by November, next year.

A week earlier, Mr. Ward authorized design of a bridge across the Big Sandy at Lancer and of the Lancer-Water Gap highway which will be an extension of KY 3 to connect with the proposed new US 23 at Water Gap. Completion of this study is slated for September, possibly in time for it to be started concurrently with the construction of other Appalachian projects in the Prestonsburg area, Ward said.

The reconstruction project in Prestonsburg extends 1.6 mile. According to the Project Authorization issued by Ward, the work will start approximately 150 feet southwest of the intersection of Lake Drive with Graham street and will extend south and east on a new route, rejoining the present South Lake Drive near its intersection with David street.

This will eliminate not only the Richmond street "corner" but also the stiff curve between Davis and Third streets. The entire project apparently will be financed with state funds. The anticipated cost was broken down, as follows:

FLOYD MINES CLOSE AS PACT NOT SIGNED

A contract dispute which was expected to be settled by last week-end apparently had the United Mine Workers of America and the bituminous coal operators of the county as far apart as ever Wednesday, and the number of idle union miners was mounting.

No union mines worked in Floyd county this week. Some crews left their homes, apparently for work, but before reaching the mines voted to stay out.

Meanwhile, UMWA members continued picketing of the Terry Elkhorn Mining Company operations near here and in the vicinity of Auxier. Also being picketed is the Mahan Coal Company at Auxier.

State police remained at the scene of picketing, apparently acting to curb possible acts of violence. The Lick Fork mine, between Prestonsburg and Auxier, was operated this week and its output hauled to Hager Hill for processing and loading into railroad cars. The Mahan Coal Company, which ordinarily processes the Terry coal, has not

This Town... That World

KNOW ANY?

The world is full of unsung escape artists. Houdini became famous as such. A few have become famous as men no prison could hold. But the one who thinks he's the slickest is the man who, faced with eternal truth, darts for an out by turning to questions that are foreign to the subject.

The room is overheated when the office dog leaves his desk to lie in the floor.

FAMILIAR FISH

The granddaughter had the whole family mystified when she returned from Sunday School and lispily announced that they sang about Fwipper. Diligent inquiry solved the mystery. They sang, "Fishers of Men."

THIS SHOULD HELP

The fishing season having to date been a washout for me, I concentrate on baseball, which can be witnessed or heard and discussed from the recesses of an easy chair.

Take the Cincinnati Reds (or is it Redlegs yet?). A swallow or even a half-dozen do not a summer make, it is conceded, and these first few games obviously do not make a season. But this is something you can bet on—these guys are going to have to start doing things otherwise if they're going to finish in the first division.

"Doing otherwise" means putting an end, for instance, to this business of letting the other team kick you off with a triple play on a strikeout, or almost as effectively putting an end to your hopes with a double play, short to second to home. I maintain, second to home. I maintain.

SUICIDE VOTE ENDS PROBE

Jury Holds That Victim Of Rifleshot A Suicide Tuesday at McDowell

A jury empanelled by County Judge Henry Stumbo in the investigation of the gunshot death Tuesday at East McDowell of 56-year-old Mary Alice Keathley held that she died of a self-inflicted bullet wound. Mrs. Keathley was found dying at her home by her husband, Emery Keathley. A .22 rifle bullet had passed through her body, near the heart. The shooting was believed to have occurred between 9 and 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The husband said he had been plowing in their nearby garden and that he discovered his wife lying on a bed when he returned to the house. He said she died, immediately after he reached her. A short-barreled .22-calibre rifle lay nearby.

The husband was quoted as saying his wife had been emotionally disturbed for some time and that he had tried to keep watch on her.

The inquest was held by Judge Stumbo in the absence of Coroner James J. Carter.

It will mark the beginning of a new season of productions which will be featured at the park almost every week-end during the summer months. Sponsored by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association, the other dates and events scheduled are:

May 14, Louisville Symphony; May 20-21, Miss Floyd County Contest; June 18, Thoroughbred Chorus of Louisville; June 24-26, Kentucky Highland Folk Festival; July 1-3 and 8-10, "Mr. President;" July 15-17 and 22-24, "South Pacific;" July 29-31 and August 5-7, "H.M.S. Chalmer H. Frazier, of Prestonsburg, drama association president, said that other programs may be arranged to fill some open week-ends. He said the association is negotiating for other entertainment.

"Production and direction for the musicals are being supervised by the music and drama departments of the Prestonsburg Community College," Frazier said. "College students, music and drama teachers, and others with an interest in music and dancing are heading up a talented cast."

Miss Doreen Der, VISTA worker assigned to Floyd county, presented a cultural enrichment program, last Tuesday morning, to the first four grades of the Prestonsburg grade school.

Miss Der is a descendant of a Chinese family. Her forefathers have been in this country for four generations, and her home is in San Francisco.

She demonstrated to the group how to eat with chopsticks, taught them how to write a few words in Chinese, and told them of some of the family customs practiced in the Orient. The children were more interested in learning to write the Chinese characters than in any other phase of the program.

The program was presented through the efforts of the Floyd County Community Action to motivate students to read more about other lands.

UK'S DEAN NAGEL, SPEAKER AS TOP COLLEGE STUDENTS FETED AT HONORS BANQUET

Charter members of two honor societies and 20 Dean's List students of the fall semester, 1965, at the Prestonsburg Community College, were guests at the first Honors Banquet held Sunday evening at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

Dr. Paul C. Nagel, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, University of Kentucky, stressed the importance of intellectual achievement to the nation. "Instead of a Brain Trust, this country must depend more on brains," he said.

Encouraging the honors group to greater scholastic effort, Dr. Nagel congratulated them upon their achievement at the college here.

Dennis Henry, president of the college Student Council, presided. The 75 or more persons attending included honor students, members of their families and instructors. They were welcomed by Dr. Henry A. Campbell, director of the college. The speaker was introduced by Edward Worland, Jr. Awards were conferred by Rondall Lawson, Mrs. Carolyn Turner and Vernon Wiegand, of the college faculty.

Charter members of Psi Eta Sigma, women's sophomore honor society, who received certificates are Mary Rose Bailey, Loretta Burchett Blackburn, Nina Francis Branhams, Aleene Brown, Marcia Ward Carter, Flora Belle Church, Betty Stratton Flannery, Dempil Irene Goble, Glenda Hall, Helen Marie Hall, Mary Hamilton, Janet Louise Hunt, Sheila Lawson, Emma Gaye Marcum, Marilyn Pack, Judith Sharon Ratliff, Jeanetta Vaughan.

These charter members of Alpha Chi Delta, sophomore men's honor society, were likewise honored:

TRIAL ACTION HERE SLOWS

Liquor Case Results In Conviction, Appeal; Grand Jury To Return

Circuit court moved at a slow walk this week, with few cases ready for trial.

One of the trials held resulted Tuesday in the conviction of Eugene Allen, of Estill, on a charge of selling intoxicating beverages. He was fined $20 and given a 30-day jail term. Allen has filed notice of appeal.

A second liquor case, that of Lonnie Neeley, was dismissed when it was shown that he had already served a 30-day jail term as a result of his earlier trial in quarterly court for the same offense.

Walter Stogner entered a plea of guilty Wednesday to a child desertion charge and was given a two-year pen term. He has filed motion for probation, promising to pay $80 a month for the support of his children. His wife has recommended probation on those terms, court officials said.

The child desertion indictment against Emzie Risner was dismissed upon his agreement to pay $90 a month for support of his family.

The grand jury will return April 29 to conclude its work. Not more than two days will be required for its adjournment.

Others booked at the county jail within the week, charges on which they were jailed and names of arresting officers follow:

Speed Rollins, driving while intoxicated, State Trooper Engle and Deputy Sheriff Wallace Frazier; David Allen, of Left Beaver Creek, drunk driving and threatening an officer, Deputy Sheriffs Milt Hunt and C. B. Hall and State Trooper Harmon; Robert Lee Adkins and John Mitchell Gibson, grand larceny and breaking and entering, Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Frazier.

Adkins also is wanted in Knott county to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle without an operator's license.

23 1-ROOM SCHOOLS REMAIN IN COUNTY

All but nine of the 422 one-room schools remaining last year in Kentucky were in the state's eastern counties.

Pike and Monroe counties had the largest number of such buildings, 31. Floyd had 23.

In 1960, Floyd county had 82 such structures.

"We expect, at the present rate of abandonment, to have no more than six or seven one-room schools by the end of the next two years," County Superintendent Charles Clark said this week.

The reduction in one-room schools through construction of larger school centers has been made without the use of any federal funds.

The one-room school figures are derived from figures as of October 1, last year, and were provided by the state Department of Education in view of the recent charge, and denial, that federal funds arising from the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 are serving the political power structure of East Kentucky rather than impoverished pupils for whose help the money was intended.

The charge was made by Gerald Grant, following his survey of the region as a reporter for the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post Service. They were branded as "exaggerated" by U. S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins, Hindman, author of the congressional act and whose district lies within Appalachia.

"Ridiculous," commented Superintendent Clark.

It required nine years to cut in half the 1948 one-room school total of 3,278. By 1957 the total had been reduced to 1,523. It required seven years to cut in half this total, so that by 1964 the number stood at 853. It has required only a year, however, to reduce this by one-half, to the 422 remaining in use this term.

The major reason for one-room schools is that they serve isolated communities, often without all-weather access to larger schools, due to mountainous terrain.

Nevertheless, they are being absorbed into larger schools as more and more money is chan-

Magoffin Teacher, Seriously Wounded, Is in Hospital Here

Marietta Hoskins, Magoffin county teacher who was shot and seriously wounded Saturday night, allegedly by another Magoffin woman, is at the Prestonsburg General hospital.

A kinsman of the wounded woman said she was struck in the arm and abdomen by a shotgun blast, some of the pellets penetrating her liver.

Mrs. Esther Patrick was arrested on a warrant, alleging shooting and wounding with intent to kill. The shooting reportedly took place at the Patrick home on Johnson Fork of Licking River, about 10 miles from Salyersville. Its cause was not determined.

Mrs. Patrick executed bond to answer to action of the next grand jury.

COURT ORDER TO HIT CLUB

Closure Move Seen After Saturday Raid; Blackburn To Appeal

A move was begun here this week to effect the closing by circuit court order of the American Legion club at Martin after a raid last Saturday had yielded more than 14 cases of beer and resulted in the arrest of a man who was identified as the club manager or custodian.

The American Legion Post was fined $100 by County Judge Henry Stumbo when a guilty plea to possession of alcoholic beverages was entered. Walker Blackburn, the man arrested at the club, also entered a plea of guilty to a charge of selling intoxicants, was fined $20 and given a 30-day jail term.

When Judge Stumbo refused Blackburn's petition for probation, which was supported by a few residents of Martin and vicinity, Blackburn appealed the case to circuit court. He executed the $500 peace bond required by the judge.

Judge Stumbo said he intended to enter an order closing the club but found that he could not legally do so, since the place is in an incorporated town. So the closing procedure goes to circuit court.

The raid was staged by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, ABC Agent Claude A. Flanery, Deputy Sheriff Lonnie Herold and A. J. Reed, Martin Police-man.

The officers reported the haul as 14 cases and nine cans of beer.

Charlie Keathley was arrested.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Ted Nelson and burial was made in the Clark cemetery on Town Branch under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

INSPECTION OF LISTS FACES DELAY HERE

Revenue Commissioner James Luckett announced this week that taxpayers will have an opportunity, the week of May 2-6, to inspect assessment records at the offices of county tax commissioners, but in most counties, including Floyd, the assessment books will not be ready at that time.

For this reason, the inspection period will be set at later dates in most counties.

"I regret the delay, and was feeling real bad about it until I learned the worse predicament some other tax commissioners are in," Mrs. Clive Akers, Floyd tax commissioner, said this week.

Pike county, for one, is farther behind than Floyd. Fayette county's tax commissioner has asked Luckett to extend the time of the inspection period there till June.

Mrs. Akers said she is certain the assessment figures could have been transcribed to the permanent records in book form, had not an extension of time been given for property-owners to list their holdings. "But," she added, "we wanted to give the people all the time possible."

Mrs. Akers said the inspection period date will be announced soon, possibly within a week.

The week after the inspection period, the board of supervisors will be in session to hold hearings and make decisions on the justness of questioned assessments. The county tax commissioner must defend his or her listing of property before the supervisors. The commissioner or the taxpayer may appeal to the courts all the way to the Court of Appeals.

Usually, the annual opportunity to inspect assessment records is bypassed except by people with special interests. This year—because 100 percent assessment took effect January 1—there may be consuming curiosity.

"There has been widespread interest," Luckett said. "Those whose property lists at full value will have a pressing interest in seeing that others are also at full value."

In the past, he said, the revision of assessments has been downward. A taxpayer, discovering his neighbor was assessed too low, had demanded a consequent reduction of his assessment.

This time, everyone is theoretically at full value. Your only recourse in such a situation is to see that the other fellow's assessment is raised to 100 percent since yours can't be lowered under the law.

The main interest, of course, centers around the actual tax bills that everyone will receive by September 15.

The Revenue Department, still in the midst of several studies, sees no reason to change its original estimate: one-third of Kentuckians will pay less, one-third the same and one-third more.

But the real point, Luckett said, is that equalization is no longer an elusive dream.

"Taxpayers must recognize that this change provides an equal sharing of the property-tax burden for many years to come," he said.

"During inspection week, you must file a protest in writing with the county clerk if you feel there is a discrepancy in your assessment."

If you think someone else's property is listed too low, you may tell the assessor, and he is under court order to make necessary revisions.

Emergency teachers in Kentucky are vanishing, now that 94.3 percent of public school teachers and administrators in the state have a bachelor's degree or higher.

About 20,000 students are taking technical training at Kentucky's state vocational schools. This figure will more than triple when a $17.5 million program is completed by 1968.

Justice-Cooley Wedding Solemnized April 14

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Justice, of Cliff, announce the marriage of their daughter, Norma, to Mr. Caleb Bernard Cooley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Cooley, of Prestonsburg, on Sunday afternoon, April 17, at the Community Methodist Church.

Before an altar of candelabra and standards of white gladioli, the single-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Tom Maddon. Five-year-old Pam Rigney, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Coy Rigney, sang, "I Love You Truly," accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Rigney.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a light blue lace dress, with long sleeves pointed over the hands, and with rhinestone buttons on the off-shoulder blouse to the waistline. She wore a short headdress of blue illusion with rhinestone clip and carried a white orchid with satin shower ribbons which topped a white Bible.

Her matron of honor, Mrs. Jonathan Moore, wore a beige silk suit with shoulder corsage of white, with white accessories.

Mrs. Justice chose a beige linen suit and yellow corsage. Mrs. Cooley wore a light blue silk suit, with white accessories and a shoulder corsage of white carnations.

Mr. Ronald Cooley served his brother as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church. ## Clay-Music Vows Exchanged, April 16

In a candlelight service, Miss Brenda Clay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clay, of David, was united in marriage to Mr. Tom Edward Music, son of Mr. and Mrs. Worth Music, of Abbott road, 7:30 p.m., April 16 at the David Baptist Church. The Rev. Orbin Dickerson officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The vows were said before an altar of standards of white glad- ioli, flanked by branded candelabra.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, floor-length, with full skirt attached to an empire waist with short sleeves and high neck. Tiny, satin-covered buttons fastened the dress in the back to the fitted waist. Her veil of alencon lace fell to the waistline from a band of seed pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid, with satin ribbon falling in a shower cascade.

Her sister, Miss Janet Clay, was her bridesmaid, wearing a pink satin dress with empire waist. She carried a nosegay of pink shasta daisies. Her accessories were pink.

Pre-nuptial music was played by Mrs. Chalmers H. Frazier. Mrs. Clay, mother of the bride, wore a blue lace and crepe dress, with white carnation shoulder corsage. Mrs. Music wore a navy and white dress with carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. The bride's table, covered with an ecru lace overlay, was centered with a tiered decorated cake, which was cut by the bride and served with punch, nuts and mints.

A short honeymoon was spent at Natural Bridge Lodge. Mr. and Mrs. Music will live at David, where he is employed. Mrs. Music is an employee of The Bank Josephine.

Dawn In The Cumberlands

By DELTA ROSE MILLS (Alpine, Kentucky)

After reading "Night Comes to the Cumberlands" I can't quite agree with the author on his ideas of Eastern Kentucky when he depicts the whole region under gloom and dejection. I gather that some of the people living in that vicinity are a bit resentful at being cast in the same category.

I will admit, in traveling through that country, you will see people exactly as he described in his book, but you will see them everywhere you go, and I can't understand why the coal operators are the cause of their misery. I am not sure the people were happy and prosperous before the coal mines were opened.

My husband and I moved to Floyd county in Eastern Kentucky at the beginning of the terrible 30's. Drouth and famine were sweeping this part of the country. What water we used was carried a mile or more from a mountain source. Food was scarce and most of the people, including my family, were eating gravy for breakfast, made with clear water. After we arrived in Floyd county, we moved into a good house, with running water in the kitchen; we ate steak and eggs for breakfast, used natural gas to cook and heat the house, which was very economical. The company furnished and installed a cook stove when we moved in.

The mines had been in operation over 10 years at the time, and work was good, but I saw plenty of people who looked desperately poor and downtrodden, and there were "rat rows" and slums everywhere in the midst of good work and plenty.

I think they will be found in every town, or any thickly populated place, for people mostly make their own environment, and vice versa. Every fall I make a trip through the mountains of Eastern Kentucky, over good blacktop roads, with modern homes thickly settled along the highway; whereas, when I went there 35 years ago, the only comfortable and modern homes I saw belonged to the old settlers who had struck it rich when the buyers came and paid them for their coal, gas or oil, which abounded in the hills. The people had been there for generations, probably living over untold wealth, but if it had been left to their own resources it would never have been developed, and they would have gone on hunting the hills with their hog rifles, and living on turnip greens and hog jaw, and their children would have grown up in the same pattern. The mountaineer derived more benefit from the coal companies than anyone else, for they owned the land and the properties beneath it, and any or all of the men who wanted to work had jobs with the company with good wages.

When the engineers went into the mountains, they found a people that had no education, most of them being unable to write their own names; no railroads, no schools, and only a log church here and there, where the men gathered to drink and fight and sometimes kill each other. The people rode a horse, drove a wagon, or walked 18 or 20 miles, to buy or trade for groceries and a few yards of calico, and, of course, their chewing tobacco—if they wanted to go highbrow and use the store-bought brands.

We traveled to Floyd county first by train, a long, hard, dirty journey, taking two days for the trip. Now we drive to Wayland, one of the coal towns mentioned, visit most of the day, and return home by night. It is hard for any one to believe, seeing that country before and after, that it was damaged very much by the work done there. My husband worked in the mines for Elk Horn Coal Company. He was a union man, but not an agitator, but he was forced to go along sometimes with the crowd, as many of our neighbors were. There are always agitators in every group who do not like to work themselves and try to hinder other people, and it is mostly that type to be found sitting in their tumbledown doorways, or loafing in groups, perfectly happy and contented to be living on dole and welfare, and would not change conditions if they could. The men really worthy of sympathy and help are the ones too young to draw their social security benefits or miner's pension, and too old to get work and make a new start elsewhere. But for some reason they are bypassed and seldom mentioned. They were able and willing to take care of their families when they were younger and had jobs and are too proud to complain now. They may be forced to accept free commodities, but I venture to say they will never like it.

Our children were all of school age when we moved to Floyd county, and there being already a fine elementary school there, we entered them immediately. Later on, a fine high school was erected, also a gymnasium, which enabled our children to graduate in their own home town. The company took care of as many graduates as they could by employing them in the stores, office, or wherever they could place them, giving them every opportunity to better themselves, as they did one of our sons, giving him the management of one of their stores, which he held until the mines worked out and closed. Some of the boys went into the mines, and when orders were slow and work slack, the company very seldom denied the men "scrip" to live on. They may not have given them all they asked for, but gave them enough to stave off starvation, if they didn't waste it. The companies on Kentucky River never seemed as concerned over the housing problem of their working men as did the Elk Horn Coal Company of Beaver Creek. Their houses were modern and convenient, with a crew of carpenters working constantly to keep them in repair and painted. No one ever lived in a better town, or among better people, if any neighbor fell into distress, all the folks stood by, and gave them every aid possible. After the mines closed, most of the people bought the houses they were living in at the time, and now when you drive up Main street, the houses gleam with paint, some being redone with picture windows, bath rooms, additions and numerous other improvements, with late-model cars parked in front of the doors. It is a proud, little town, as it well may be.

In our first years in Wayland, living conditions were fine as long as we stayed in town on the concrete sidewalks, but journeys into the country in winter were rugged, unless by train. The roads were the same as when the town was built, passable in good weather for mules or wagons, but deep in mud in winter. My husband and I enjoyed taking long walks on the country roads in summer, meeting and talking with the people we met. The mountaineers are not a loquacious people unless you live among them, but they became accustomed to the sight of us wandering about the country, and became friendly after a while, and many pleasant Sunday afternoons were spent, sitting on some narrow front porch of a log cabin, listening to tales of life in the hills before the coal companies moved in.

When coal was discovered in the hills, hardly any of the people could read or write and made their living by hunting, and farming on the narrow creek bottoms and steep hillsides. Some had moonshine stills and manufactured whisky for their own use, and to sell or trade. Temperers were always at boiling point, and it took very little provocation to precipitate a killing, leaving many widows and orphans to face the harsh task of living without a breadwinner, or any protection at all. Under the circumstances, the younger generation grew up tougher than their forefathers. But all that gradually began to change after people began to flow into the hills. Schools were built and churches established, and the natives began to take advantage of their opportunities. Most of them, when they applied themselves, had a ready grasp of the fundamentals of learning, and in most cases were far ahead of the children of the outsiders. Schools and colleges began to open up throughout the hills, with a college at Pikeville, the Pippa Passes College, Lee's College, the Settlement School at Hindman, Hazard and Wootton — the child who wanted to extend his education did not have to go far from home, and many took advantage of it.

The college at Pippa Passes turned out lawyers, doctors, and numerous teachers, my sister being among the number. They have come a long way, and, in fact, you would need to travel far to find an old time dyed-in-the-wool mountaineer any more. And if you met one of their children on the street in New York, which would not be at all impossible, you would never guess they were from the hills of Eastern Kentucky.

When my husband and I started on one of our rambles, the road I liked to take most was the one up Mill Creek. The hills rose straight up on both sides of the stream with hardly room for a path, with tall, stately spruce pines growing so close to the stream that the tops met overhead, throwing a cool shade over the path. Long, green ferns grew everywhere, and no sound, except the murmur of the water flowing over the pebbles in the creek and the thousands of birds singing in the trees. It was a dead-end road, ending at the foot of a mountain, but a few cabins were scattered here and there, and it was always interesting to stop and talk with the people. Some were a little stiff at first, but soon thawed, when they found we meant no harm and were only on a hike for pleasure. Farther south of town and going deeper into the mountains, the country was so rough and wild it was difficult to travel very far on foot, but people lived up every cove and creek, walking over the muddy roads every day to work and to school, preferring to remain in their own homes, rather than live in a company house and pay rent. No matter where you went about the country, you would find Gibsons, Martins and Caudills, as they were the older settlers that had been there for generations. But you will not find nearly so many of that name there now, the older ones having died, and the younger ones migrating to the city, as have my own children, except one son, now living at Neon.

Now, more than 35 years later, Highway 7, a good blacktop road will take the traveler into Neon through that rugged country, in less than an hour, a distance of around 30 miles. A railroad has also been built, running parallel with the highway for miles with two of the highest bridges in that part of the country. It is said that Neon was named when the conductor of a train told a native to put his "knee on" a stump and climb on. Which could possibly be a fable.

There was a large theatre building in our town where movies were shown every night. Radio singers and other performers almost always included in their rounds through the country. It was a big night in town when they were due to put on a show, and if they were good they were highly appreciated; if not, they were practically booed from the stage and out of town. The mountain people are the friendliest folks you will meet, but if they get the idea they are being bamboozled their tempers are ever ready to flare, and sometimes the retaliation is unpleasant for the offender.

Part of the town of Wayland spread over a flat bottom that was under water when Beaver Creek overflowed. We were forced to take a house in this flood zone at first. My neighbors kept telling me of the loss caused by these floods, and what a disaster it could be, if a cloudburst came in the middle of the night, which had happened before, until I became a nervous wreck, walking the floor every time a cloud appeared. I made the life of the general manager miserable, asking for a house on higher ground, until he relented in self-defense and rented one to us. We lost no time in moving in, and a very good thing it was, for less than a month later there came a flood, and the poor people on the low ground were stranded again. Every one pitched in to help out the unfortunate, providing beds, meals and shelter. But they were a never-say-die people, and as soon as the waters receded, set about restoring, discarding and buying new furniture, with the courage of the pioneers, only to have it happen again within a year.

Continued Next Week

The mountain doctors, as a rule, are highly skilled, and, on the average, loss of life in the hills in later years is at a minimum. Our own Dr. Melvin Wicker was a mountain man himself, and understood the mountain people thoroughly. He had helpers who came and went, but he was always there. In the 18 years we spent in Floyd county, I never heard of him losing his temper or patience with anyone. He never refused to go when called, even if he had a suspicion he was not really needed. He spent his life in the service of the people and in return they admired and respected him, which was a sidelight on the type of person he was, for miners are subject to take an instant dislike to a man, doctor or no, on such a minor thing as a physical defect or the way he wears his clothes, as for instance, when a young doctor, fresh out of medical school, came to town and set up office. He was a competent and able doctor, but had the misfortune to have a cast in one eye. The miners promptly rejected him and continued to call on their old stand-by, Dr. Wicker, until the young doctor took the hint, quietly folded his tent, and left town.

Fighting in the mountains was not a thing of the past by any means in the 30's, and it was a very common thing to hear of an old grudge being settled by a gun or knife, or flaring up into a series of killings, as happened between the Whitsons and the Brays. They were two families living on opposite sides of the mountain and had always been enemies, the trouble having started so many years before, the original cause had been forgotten. They each had four sons. The Whitson sons were: Jack, Leslie, Bill and Royal. While the Brays were: Emmett, Lyle, Manfred and Hugh. They fought when they were children, and after they grew up, still hated each other, and the least excuse set them at each other's throats. The Brays always kept a moonshine still going somewhere in the hills, and were quarrelsome and hard to get along with, and every one tried to stay out of their way, especially when they were on the warpath. Jack was the first to fall by the guns of the Brays, when they called him to the door of his home one night and shot him down. The Brays never went anywhere alone, but kept together, which made a force that was hard to combat. But Manfred drank too much of his own brew one day, and started out across the mountain to find the Whitsons, and he met Bill and Leslie on the road. When the smoke cleared away, Manfred and Bill lay dead on the ground, and Leslie was badly wounded. His friends carried him home, where he lay abed for weeks, finally recovering, only to be ambushed through the window of his home one night while he sat holding his baby. That left only Royal, who began to think he was no match for the Brays, and after they waylaid him one day and tried to kill him, shooting off one hand, he decided to leave the country. That ended the feud with the Whitsons, but the Brays continued to harass the country at large until they were all killed.

When my husband and I started on one of our rambles, the road I liked to take most was the one up Mill Creek. The hills rose straight up on both sides of the stream with hardly room for a path, with tall, stately spruce pines growing so close to the stream that the tops met overhead, throwing a cool shade over the path. ## Childers To Head Office Of Commonwealth Life As Adams To Retire

Joe F. Childers, agent in Commonwealth Life Insurance Company's Big Sandy Agency for the past seven years, has been promoted to the post of assistant sales manager and placed in charge of the agency's staff office here.

A joint announcement concerning Childers' promotion was released this week by John C. Grubb, vice-president in charge of Commonwealth's field operations, and John T. Parker, sales manager in charge of Commonwealth's Big Sandy Agency.

In heading the Prestonsburg staff office, Childers will take over the position recently vacated by Ted Adams, who will work on several special company projects in the Big Sandy area prior to his retirement from the company in July. Adams, who recently won Commonwealth's Executive Vice-President's Trophy for an unprecedented eighth time, marks his 40th anniversary with Commonwealth this month.

Childers joined Commonwealth in July, 1959, as an agent in the Big Sandy Agency. He has won practically every major sales honor offered by Commonwealth, including qualifying for the Company's Sales Leaders' Conference six consecutive years.

Childers, his wife, Mary, and their three children currently live in Pikeville.

Kentucky seems to be headed for a record-breaking highway construction year, Gov. Edward T. Breathitt said Monday.

He based his prediction on early season contracts. The state will open bids May 5 for construction on 90 road projects, raising to $76 million worth of work starting this year.

All 26 miles of KY 15, the Mountain Parkway extension between Quicksand and Hazard, will be let to contract next month.

it requires considerable talent to get yourself in fixes such as these. Talent such as the Daffy Dodgers of the Babe Herman era had, when it was not unheard of to find as high as two runners roosting on the same base.

Then there's that radiocast they're doing this year which, on occasion, sounds like the guy doing the play-by-play has already had more samples of the brew he's advertising than somewhat. The other night, I was aghast when Ellis had a no-hitter going and this guy at the mike keeps telling one and all that it's just that—a no-hitter.

"That does it!" I yelled, and for once one of my predictions was on the beam. The other side not only got a hit, but Mr. Ellis wasn't around for the ninth, and this fellow Baldschun they got from Philadelphia lets his old teammates use him for batting practice.

Can you imagine Waite Hoyt tempting fate by boasting about his pitcher being on his way to a no-hitter?

Now, if this doesn't get the aforesaid Cincinnati's back on their game, write 'em off and start rooting for the Mets.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL WORK SET FOR FINISH IN 1968

Frankfort, Ky.—A $17.5 million vocational school construction program in Kentucky, which will accommodate several thousand additional students when completed in 1968, is well on schedule.

Dr. Harry M. Sparks, Superintendent of Public Instruction, made this observation in announcing that nearly $3.5 million in Federal Appalachian funds have just been approved for 16 vocational schools in Kentucky's Appalachian region.

The Appalachian funds will supplement other federal, state and local funds, including money from the $176 million bond issue, which will be used to finance vocational school construction throughout the state.

Sparks said the Appalachian money gives a big boost to this year's total construction program for which over $7 million is allotted. This will more than half complete the overall program involving about 35 extension and area schools.

Governor Edward T. Breathitt kicked off this new building program last fall with groundbreaking ceremonies at Lexington for the Fayette county vocational school. The Governor noted that more than $2 million worth of construction for vocational education was completed during 1965.

Of the Appalachian funds, Sparks added, more than $2 million is immediately available for 13 schools (all but one are extensions) and over $1 million will be available after July 1 for three area schools.

At the first 13 schools, construction will get under way soon, Sparks said. They are:

Pike, Bell, Clay, Breathitt, Garrard, Knox, Lee, Letcher, Montgomery, Russell and Martin counties and Corbin (all extensions), and Ashland area school.

Appalachian funds available after July 1 will be applied toward expansion costs for Mayo (at Paintsville), Somerset and Harlan, all area schools.

Sparks said about $1 million in Appalachian money is being sought for new schools in Clinton, Carter and Greenup counties and an expansion to the Hazard school. That request is expected to be approved, he said.

The projects already funded in the Appalachian area alone will provide facilities for about 4,000 additional students, Sparks said.

As to the program in other areas in the state, he said it is in good shape.

For instance, he cited new facilities which will be available this fall at Paducah, Christian county, Muhlenberg county, Elizabethtown and Lebanon. These constructions will increase the total capacity by 1,250 students.

Construction is ready to get under way for new schools at Lexington and Bowling Green. Each will make room for 1,000 additional students when they are opened by the fall of 1967.

Also scheduled to open by the fall of 1967 are vocational buildings at Russellville, Maysville and Bardonia, all extension schools. Sparks said the Jefferson County Area Vocational School at Jeffersonton is scheduled for a $600,000 expansion which will double present facilities there.

The state's $1 million school at Covington, constructed in 1962, will be expanded by the fall of 1968 to accommodate about 300 additional students at a cost of $550,000.

Also scheduled by the fall of 1968 is an addition to the Owensboro Area Vocational School to accommodate 300 additional students. The construction will cost $1.2 million, Sparks said.

Also coming in the last phase of the program but not yet with allocation funds, are school constructions at Taylor county, Carrollton, Shelby county, Henderson and Allen-Simpson counties. Each school, when constructed, will provide for 200 to 250 students.

Sparks said the vocational school construction program is aimed toward providing a vocational school within commuting distance of every high school student.

Also surviving are two sons, Ellis and George Osborne, both of Buckingham; three daughters, Mrs. Carrie Hall, Mrs. Barbara Johnson, both of Buckingham, Miss Nevada Osborne, of Utah; three brothers, Roy Osborne, of Buckingham, Willard Osborne, Hunter, Troy Osborne, of Bensenville; three sisters, Mrs. Albert Cook, Topmost, Mrs. Rachael Isaacs, of Michigan, Mrs. Ermine Hall, Bypro.

LOCAL OPTION FACTS

The Temporary Steering Committee for the dry forces in Floyd county would like to point out a few facts regarding the petition that is being circulated in the county for a local option election.

Many have reported that they are told that this vote will be for State-Owned Liquor Stores. This is erroneous for the simple reason that the 1966 legislature did not pass the bill authorizing state-owned liquor stores. The petition is for a vote to make Floyd county wet territory for the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages. If this is done the county will revert to what it was when it was wet before.

If the county is voted wet we would have from 17 to 19 package liquor outlets. This is set up on the basis of one liquor outlet for every 2500 population. However, there would be no limit to the number of beer outlets. Any restaurant or recreation center could qualify to sell beer and grocery stores could become carry-out outlets for beer.

The only revenue which the county would receive directly from the passage of this petition would be in the license fees from the stores and from fines. The major revenue would go to the state and federal funds, of which a small portion would trickle back to the county. However, the revenue received would be far less than the cost of added police protection and the added cost of taking care of the drunks in the jail.

It is difficult to conceive of intelligent people like Floyd countians wanting to vote to legalize the sale of intoxicating beverages and then have to hire more policemen to arrest the drunks since we know that the end result will be an increase in drunkenness and lawlessness. This is what you are asking for in signing the petition.

BOTH BIRTHS, DEATHS DROP

Heart Disease Is No. 1
Killer; Cancer Is Next,
1964 Statistics Show

Kentucky showed a decrease in the number of both deaths and live births in 1964 in comparison to 1963, as reported in "Kentucky Vital Statistics—1964," a report released by the Kentucky State Department of Health.

In 1964, the total number of births and deaths in the United States showed a significant increase. The number of deaths to Kentucky residents decreased from 31,714 in 1963 to 30,616 in 1964. The number of resident live births decreased from 67,910 to 67,901. The estimated population dropped from 3,061,500 in 1963 to 3,044,600 in 1964.

Strawn W. Taylor, director of the Division of Research, Planning, and Statistics, Kentucky State Department of Health, explained:

"The 1964 Kentucky birth and death rate, a ratio based on the total births and deaths per 1,000 population, remained essentially the same. The reduction in the actual number of deaths does not necessarily indicate that the Kentucky death rate is decreasing, but more likely that people are moving out of the state."

The leading killer in Kentucky (also in the United States) was diseases of the heart, which took 14,626 Kentucky lives during 1964. This represents a slight decrease from 14,791 in 1963. Kentuckians died from heart diseases. Over a number of years, however, heart diseases have been steadily increasing, and the figure for 1964 represents an increase of 3,600 deaths over 1949. In 1949, death from a disease of the heart occurred every 57 minutes, while in 1964, heart diseases killed every 45 minutes. Other leading causes of death in order are cancer, injury to blood vessels of the central nervous system, accidents, pneumonia, diseases of the arteries, and diabetes.

Suicides jumped from eleventh place in causes of death in 1963 to ninth in 1964, with a suicide occurring every 25 hours and 23 minutes. Tuberculosis deaths decreased, but the number of new cases reported increased slightly over 1963. The number of new cases of syphilis reported increased from 1,452 in 1963 to 1,738 in 1964.

A significant trend has been noted in the report of deaths from measles since 1962. In 1964, 21 deaths from measles were reported—an increase of more than 50 percent over 1963 and two and one half times the number of measles deaths in 1962. This increase in the number of measles deaths was caused, in part, by an increase in the number of factual cases. Yet, it has been demonstrated that measles is a disease which could be controlled by immunization.

"Kentucky Vital Statistics—1964 is the official source for birth, death, and disease statistics in Kentucky. It was compiled from information on cases of reportable diseases occurring to Kentucky residents in 1964 and from 104,475 birth and death certificates received by the Kentucky State Department of Health during that year. More detailed information is available from the Department on request.

'EMERGENCIES' ON WAY OUT IN STATE SCHOOLS; FLOYD
NEXT TO LOWEST IN AREA

Louisville, Ky. (ENS) — Emergency teachers in Kentucky are becoming a vanishing breed now that 94.3% of the state's public-school teachers and administrators have a bachelor's degree or higher.

The number of emergency teachers dwindles each year and the State Department of Education and the Kentucky Education Association (KEA) are striving to ensure that the trend continues.

Actually, only 2.99% of this year's professional staff are certified on an emergency basis (and some of them have college degrees). The other 2.71% are non-degree teachers who hold regular certificates obtained through old certification regulations.

Thus, 97.01% of Kentucky's 23,574 public-school professional staff members meet regular certification requirements.

But what about the 885 emergency teachers who don't? Who are they and where can they be found?

Dr. Sidney Simandle, director of the State Department of Education's division of teacher education and certification, answers those questions in a new report from his division.

"The teacher shortage," he writes, "continues to be concentrated in a few school districts located for the most part in the eastern and northern sections of the state. Approximately 60% of all of the emergency teachers are concentrated in 10% of the school districts."

Floyd county next to Clay county, is low in emergency teacher percentage. Twenty-three of its 438 teachers, or 4.7%, have emergency status.

Perry county currently has the highest number of emergency teachers — 52. This is 17.3% of its total teaching staff.

Greenup county has the second largest number of emergency teachers — 42. But its percentage of emergency teachers — 24.6% is the highest in the state.

Data prepared by Simandle's division show that 48 of the state's 200 school systems employed five or more emergency teachers this year. This accounts for 678 of the 855 emergency teachers.

HINDMAN PASTOR HONORED ON THE 25th ANNIVERSARY OF COMING TO KNOTT-CO.

The Hindman Baptist Church was packed as it had never been before, the evening of Sunday, April 3, when its pastor, the Rev. J. S. Bell, was honored for 25 years of dedicated service in Knott county.

The Anniversary Recognition Service began as an ordinary Sunday evening worship service, the veteran minister having no inkling of what was to come. Then the Rev. Rush Sloane, pastor of the Garrett Baptist Church, asked of the Hindman pastor permission to occupy the pulpit. A steady string of surprises followed.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Reed, of Norfolk, Va., whose interest and support had meant so much to him when he first came to Eastern Kentucky, to Fleming, 29 years ago, entered the sanctuary. His three daughters and his son — all of whom he thought were elsewhere — followed to sing a song in tribute to their father. Letters and telegrams from church leaders and friends from distant places were displayed.

A touch of symbolism was added with the presentation to the minister of a vase containing 25 red roses by his son, James — five of the roses being an expression of love from Mrs. Bell and his four children; five, representative of the five preachers who were ordained through his ministry; five from the five churches established during his work in Knott county, and ten representing the esteem of the entire county for Mr. Bell.

Each of the five of his "boys" who were ordained as a result of his work — the Revs. Rush Sloane, Archie Everage, Edmon Bolen, Lawrence Baldrige and Bud Adams — spoke during the anniversary service. Cakes were brought from the churches of Hindman, Allen, Mousie, Smithsboro, Garrett, Montgomery and Big Creek. Gifts came from these and the Caney and Dark Hollow churches and from Knott county officials as well as from many individuals.

Gifts of clothing and luggage were designed to prepare the Rev. Bell for his trip which will begin April 15 when he will go to Fairbanks, Alaska for a revival of two weeks. This will be a part of the Alaska Crusade which will end May 1. A gift of money was made to defray his expenses on this mission.

Mrs. Bell, who had cooperated with others in planning the event as a surprise for her husband was herself surprised when she was presented

SOUTHERN BELL ANNOUNCES DEVICE TO TRACE CALLS

Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company has announced that in many cases it is now possible to trace nuisance and obscene telephone calls.

This has been made possible through the use of recently developed equipment which is now available in Paintsville, Roy L. Atherton, Southern Bell manager, said.

Mr. Atherton explained that the special equipment is being used primarily in aggravated cases where harassment calls are repeated over a period of time. He pointed out that the availability of the call-tracing equipment and other factors still do not permit Southern Bell at this time to meet every request to trace a call. But, he said, the equipment will be used more and more in the future as the telephone company and law-enforcement officials step up action against nuisance and obscene calls.

"Southern Bell has long been concerned about the problem of nuisance and obscene calls," said Atherton, "and we want to do everything we can to help bring this type of call to a halt."

The method of call tracing now being used by Southern Bell does not involve any wiretapping or listening in on conversations, he pointed out. He said the equipment records the number from which the nuisance and obscene calls are placed and that the police then take the steps toward arrest and conviction.

Kentucky law provides a penalty of one year in jail, a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000, or both, upon conviction of making obscene calls. The law is effective 90 days from March 18, 1966. This is the date the 1966

DENIED ENTRANCE

Miami — The burned-out liner, Viking Princess, a modern prize of the sea, arrived at the old pirate stronghold of Port Royal, Jamaica, but was denied entrance to the nearby port of Kingston for fear she might sink.

This man Bell, incidentally, was born at a place called Life (Tennessee).

Kentucky legislature adjourned.

Southern Bell suggests that anyone who receives a nuisance or obscene call hang up immediately. This often discourages the caller, he said. If the calls continue, then the victim should call the telephone company business office. If the call is serious, such as a threat to life or property, then the victim should also call police.

In Explanation

The use of the term, "Happy Pappies," in the advertisement of the Hall Concrete Products Company in last week's Floyd County Times has drawn considerable criticism, and The Times wishes to make clear to all who are interested that Hall Concrete Products is not responsible for use of the term.

Its use was not in any way intended as a reflection on any person so employed or upon members of his family. Perhaps we should not have printed the term, but its use has become so widespread — in the daily press, magazines and other news media — that such resentment was not anticipated.

The Kentucky Agriculture Department's Division of Pest and Noxious Weed Control in 1965 sprayed 120,750 acres for the control of the salt marsh mosquito.

95% IN FLOYD IN MEDICARE

Eight-Week Effort Termed Successful; Deadline Extended

After eight weeks of intensive effort to contact all senior citizens 65 years or older in Floyd county Medicare Alert workers reported 95% participation by those eligible for latest medical and hospital insurance.

Medicare Alert was a program sponsored by the Big Sandy Community Action Program covering Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Magoffin, Lawrence, and Martin counties, and was calculated to make it possible for all eligible citizens, 65 or over, to make an educated decision as to whether he or she wished to take part in the Medicare Program.

(Since conclusion of this work on March 31, the deadline for participation has been extended to May 31.)

Harry Eastburn, CAP director and J. P. Hill, program director for the work in the six-county area, expressed satisfaction with the Medicare Alert outcome, especially since there was such a short time to train workers and only eight weeks to carry on the entire work — February 1 to March 31.

Special workers for Medicare Alert in Floyd county were Virginia Carter, captain, Roxie Reynolds, Nola Carroll, Bill Petrey, Donna Tuttle, Roger Reed, W. J. Sloan, Robert Hicks, Fred Gayheart, Amos Akers, H. O. Wilson, Lee Alley and Shelby Newsome later replaced Fred Gayheart and Amos Akers, with Assistant CAP Director Douglas Morrison helping to coordinate efforts of CAP clubs, civic organizations, stores, newspapers, post offices and broadcasters.

Personal contacts with persons over 65 in the county totaled 1,602. The number of persons referred to Social Security Offices was 112.

Members of Black Star Coal Corporation at general sales meeting in Cleveland, March 17. Standing left to right, R. A. Wimmer; R. L. Cooper, vice-president; Paul O. Weisser; Earl B. Tucker; H. E. Byrne; H. W. Strohmeier; Lou Mueller; George E. Evans, Jr., president. Seated, H. P. Kelly; H. K. Brooking; E. E. Bostick; T. R. Hall and C. H. Effer.

"Too few people realize that the coal industry today is one of the great growth industries in the United States," James L. Hamilton, chairman of Island Creek Coal Company, told 70 members of Island Creek Coal Sales Company at a recent general sales meeting at the Cleveland Athletic Club.

Citing national annual coal production figures, Hamilton pointed to a growth from 400 million tons in 1961 to 510 million tons last year, an estimated 535 million for 1966, and a predicted 612 million tons by 1970. He stated that Island Creek, by adoption of new concepts in production, marketing and transportation, is more than keeping pace with this growth as evidenced by figures showing, over the past three years, a doubling of reserves to a total of 2.3 billion tons, an increase in production from 12 million tons to 20.5 million tons, a 36% increase in sales from $80.8 million to $110.3 million and improvement in earnings.

Island Creek Coal Sales Company is a division of Island Creek Coal Company, whose executive offices were moved to Cleveland from Huntington, West Virginia, in mid-1965 after a reorganization of the nation's third largest coal company into a corporate staff and five operating divisions.

The sales company division, of which A. L. Lynn is president, maintains sales offices in 11 cities and markets coals produced by the parent company's coal-producing divisions.

The March meeting was the first general sales meeting to be held since relocation of the company's headquarters and it afforded many of the sales division field personnel their first opportunity to visit the new offices in the Bulkley Building.

All meeting sessions were held at the Cleveland Athletic Club. Featured speaker at the closing dinner was Dr. G. Herbert True, of South Bend, Ind., whose subject was "Creativity in Selling."

Sealed bids will be received by the Department of Highways at its office, Frankfort, Kentucky, until 10:00 a.m., Eastern Standard Time on the 5th day of May, 1966, at which time bids will be publicly opened and read for the improvement of:

PIKEVILLE WINS TITLE OF ALL-AMERICAN CITY
Pikeville is one of 13 cities named an All-America City by the National Municipal League and LOOK magazine, co-sponsors of the annual competition for the title.

The 13 cities were selected from an original field of 142 entries. The winners were chosen because their "citizens have made outstanding strides in improving their communities." The winning cities will be featured in an article in the May 3 issue of LOOK magazine.

The article notes that Pikeville, a coal town, once suffered from chronic unemployment after automation of the large coal mines and the closing of the small ones.

"But now it is a growing community, with population up 27 percent in five years," the article states. "The secret — successful do-it-yourself coal mining. Townspeople and out-of-work miners pooled their slender savings and leased coal seams out as cooperatives."

The article states that there are now 714 small mines in Pike county employing 7,000 men and paying average daily wages of $18 to $20.

"The town has a new school, new motels and the promise of better roads, downtown renewal and an airport," the magazine reports.
