PIKE-FLOYD GROUP WINS LONG BATTLE

FEDERAL AID OF $770,000 IS RECEIVED

Upper Floyd County To Get Water Service From Pikeville System

A 42-month-old effort of Floyd and Pike counties to win federal support of a water system to serve residents of both counties has been successful. Congressman Carl D. Perkins announced from Washington last Friday.

The Economic Development Administration authorized a grant of $770,000 and a loan of $513,000 to the Sandy Valley Water District to construct the system which will take water from the Pikeville municipal system to several communities between the Pike county seat and Stanville in this county.

The water distribution system will begin at the end of the Pikeville city distribution lines in the Pauley Addition of Pikeville. Approximately four miles of the water main will be in Floyd county, and half or more of the customers of the new system will be in this county, it was said. The water district in its application for a grant estimated that 750 customers will be served.

The water district was organized by a group of leaders in Floyd county communities in the southern section of the county, near the Pike border, in 1963. (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

This Town . . . That World

I would report on the dog, but he's running around with the wrong crowd, these days, and, among other things, is guilty of absenteeism. Least said, the better.

Appalachia—ugh! I'd be a bit happier if they'd drop that expression. Sounds too much like a hillside ghetto.

WHO'S INSULTED?

The newspapers had a note or so recently about a protest being made against the Aunt Jemima name and illustration used on containers of that well-known pancake mix. The claim was made that these present the Negro woman in an undignified light.

How silly can people get? If every dark-skinned citizen were as respected as Aunt Jemima, mythical as she is, all the militiamen and special police could go home.

Mark Twain's classic, "Huckleberry Finn," has been blacklisted, here and there, because it had a character named Nigger Jim. Well, if they want to demonstrate about that, I think I'm beginning to bile a little about the aforesaid Twain's white character, Huck Finn's sorry, drunken, lazy, no-count, white pa. I may do a little overcomin' myself. (See Story No. 2, Page 2)

MUD CREEK WATER STUDY HELD HERE

How to "get off the ground" and get visible results toward meeting the Mud Creek water emergency claimed the attention of federal, state and county representatives in a meeting held at the courthouse here last Thursday.

Two procedures were discussed—one, a "stop-gap" measure which involves the drilling of water wells; the other, development of a permanent water distribution system to serve the 979 Area (that section of the county on Mud and Clear Creeks which are served by State Highway 979).

Originally, it was pointed out, the drilling of 80 wells at a cost of around $25,000 was planned as a means of meeting the emergency. This amount would have been provided by the Office of

Basic Rescue Course Slated at Wheelwright

Classes in civil defense training are slated to be held at Wheelwright, Elizabethtown and Frankfort during September, according to Thomas A. Thompson, training and education officer of the division of civil defense in the Kentucky Department of Military Affairs.

Two University of Kentucky civil defense conferences are scheduled at Ashland and Covington. The primary purpose of these conferences, Thompson said, is to acquaint local government officials with the need for a strong civil defense organization and to define their responsibilities for the development of such a program.

The support, cooperation and active participation of community and industrial leaders will be sought for program development, Thompson said.

A basic rescue course will be given, September 19-24, at Wheelwright. Further information may be obtained by contacting Petty Thompson, Floyd County Civil Defense director, Prestonsburg.

SHOT VICTIM UNIDENTIFIED

Woman's Body Found In Pike County Hills; Victim Shot in Head

None of the hundreds of persons who have viewed the body of a woman found shot to death Wednesday morning in the Pike county hills has been able to help with identification, State Police Detective Taylor told The Times.

The woman, whose body was found on the mountainside between Peter Creek and Johns Creek, approximately 150 feet from a trysting spot on a country road, had been shot in the top of her head with a .22-caliber weapon. She apparently had been dead only a few hours when found at 10:30 a.m. by Raymond Wagner, a hunter.

State police, Taylor said, are leaning toward the theory that the victim was not a resident of this section and perhaps came from another state, since no body has been able to supply identification. Her footprints were visible, leading from the point where she apparently left a car to the spot where she was found, but no other prints were found, Taylor said.

This was the description given of the victim:

White, between 40 and 50 years old, a brunette, dark hair, brown eyes, fully clothed and neatly dressed in a green-checked, two-piece cotton dress; full lower dental plate, partial upper plate of four front teeth; weight, about 120 pounds; wore wedding band and diamond engagement ring, also a St. Francis necklace.

Floyd-Co. Man, 62, Held After Town Is 'Shot Up'; Two Stills Are Taken

Sixty-two-year-old Noah Cole was jailed here Wednesday night by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Milt Hunt on a drunk driving charge after he reportedly had "shot up" a sizeable section of Weeksburg and had terrorized his neighbors.

A moonshine still was cut Monday morning on Branham's Creek, Sheriff Lewis reported, but its operators were missing. Alcoholic Tax Unit agents arrested Virgil Osborne, of Pike county, at a still which they confiscated Tuesday morning on the Pike county side of Abner mountain.

Robbie Johnson and Jim Morgan were booked last Friday by Martin Policeman A. J. Reed on a charge of grand larceny, accused of taking copper wire from the mine of Harry Branham but were later released.

Sheriff Lewis said this week. (See Story No. 9, Page 3)

FLOYD LOSS IS $5,391.05

If Matthews Opinion On Taxes Confirmed; Gym Fund Involved

Of the $2 million Kentucky school districts will lose in anticipated revenues if a ruling made by Attorney General Matthews is upheld by the courts, the Floyd County Board of Education will lose exactly $5,391.05, it was said here Wednesday.

The attorney general's opinion held that the 10% increase in tax revenues which boards of education will be permitted to collect this year after having held public hearings cannot be used in the payment of special voted bond issues.

The $5,391 which the Floyd board will lose, if Attorney General Matthews' interpretation of the law is upheld, is the difference between the amount the board will collect on the gym tax in Prestonsburg and the amount of principal and interest due this year on the bonds voted for the building of the gymnasium here.

Wayne Ratliff, assistant superintendent of Floyd schools, explained that the board each year "picks up the tab" for the difference between the bond payment due and the amount collected via the gym tax from property owners. The amount varies from year to year because the principal and interest totals are not constant.

Fayette county, where a 32-cent building tax and a 50-cent tax for general fund purposes had been voted, is the state's biggest loser with $388,000 lost if the opinion is confirmed.

World Eastern Star Leader, Native Prestonsburg Woman, To Be Accorded Honors Here

Mrs. Josephine Harkins Browning, most worthy grand matron of the General Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star of the World, will be honored Saturday by her own Adah Chapter No. 24 and by her native Prestonsburg. Honors by Adah Chapter will be accorded at a reception in her honor at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

Recognition by the town of her birth was spearheaded by Dr. George P. Archer, Prestonsburg mayor, who proclaimed Saturday "Josephine Harkins Browning Day." His official proclamation stated that the day was so designated "because of the many honors—local, national and international—that have been bestowed upon Josephine Harkins Browning, bringing reflected honor and glory to her home town and county, and because of her loyalty to her home town people."

Also to be honored at the May Lodge reception will be Mrs. Marguerite Wilder, Knights Templar Eye Foundation Committee of the General Grand Chapter, honored by Booneville Chapter; Irvin Arrowood, Registration Committee, General Grand Chapter, and Mrs. Lenore Gullett, vice-chairman of the Executive Committee of the General Grand Chapter, both honored by Paintsville Chapter.

RUM TRAFFIC AT NEW LOW

Judge Tells Jurors; New Court Procedure In Effect with Term

"The whiskey traffic is at the lowest ebb in Floyd county that I can ever recall," Circuit Judge Hollie Conley remarked in the course of an informal talk with the new September term grand jury here Tuesday morning.

Judge Conley did not give the jury formal instructions, pointing out that the new Kentucky law does not require such a duty of him and assuring the jurors he had the feeling they already knew their duties.

He pointed out that the jury has one murder case to investigate and added that complaints made about some municipal jails in the county might deserve probing.

Another court procedure under new law was put into effect with the court opening. Names of grand jurors were drawn by Circuit Clerk Frank DeRossett from a box containing the entire jury list. No juror may be transferred from the grand jury to the petit panel, or vice versa.

The grand jury in its first day's session voted three indictments, with one of these the result of its investigation of the Floyd slaying referred to by Judge Conley. Russell Jarrell, of Cow Creek, was charged with murder in the slaying of Darwin Music.

Others named in indictments were Bobby Webb, accused of auto theft and breaking and entering the garage of Forrest Johnson; and Frank Dimele and Harold Henry Davidson, named on counts of burglary of the home and safe of John James.

Few were excused from jury service. "I don't mean to be harsh but only those unable to serve or for whom service will mean an extreme hardship will be excused," Judge Conley said. Shirley Lewis, of Prestonsburg, was named foreman of the grand jury. Thirty-three were qualified for petit jury services.

16-YEAR-OLD P'BURG YOUTH SHOT IN HUNTING MISHAP

Michael Fannin, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy R. Fannin, of Prestonsburg, was wounded Monday morning by a shotgun blast fired by his companion, Doug Salyers, while they were squirrel-hunting on the Left Fork of Abbott Creek.

Young Fannin was struck by more than 100 pellets, none of which have been removed. The main charge struck him in his back, but scattered shot took effect in his neck, ear, temple and legs. He is recovering at the Prestonsburg General hospital.

The accident occurred when Salyers fired at a squirrel. He did not see his hunting companion who was crouching at the base of a tree. The wounded youth walked part of the way

WINE NAMED TO TOP POST

Former Pike Attorney Is Special Assistant In State Department

James Wine, former Pikeville attorney and a nephew of Troy B. Sturgill, of Prestonsburg, has been named a special assistant to the secretary of state.

Wine will be special assistant for refugee and migration affairs. It is a new post. Last spring it was offered to Abba Schwarz, who was then the center of a conflict over immigration policy.

Wine, now 47, has been with the State Department since 1961. He has served as ambassador to Luxembourg and to the Ivory Coast.

As a special assistant to John F. Kennedy in the 1960 presidential campaign, Wine did much to persuade Protestants that the election of a Roman Catholic president augured no threat to religious freedom.

Wine came to the Kennedy campaign from the National Council of Churches, where he was associate general secretary. He is a Presbyterian elder.

He practiced law in Pikeville from 1945 to 1957. He graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1940, and its law school in 1942. He studied international affairs at Oxford University.

State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey announced his appointment Tuesday, effective at once. Wine had been serving as special assistant to the deputy undersecretary of state for administration.

Wine is a native of Cabell county, West Virginia. He was county judge pro tem of Pike county in 1949, U.S. commissioner for Eastern Kentucky from 1950 to 1952 and a special circuit judge in 1956. He left Pikeville in 1957 to become vice-president of Park College in Parkville, Missouri. He joined the National Council of Churches in 1959. He is a former infantry officer.

He and his wife, the former Emma Lou Turck, have a daughter. (See Story No. 7, Page 6)

WARD CALLS US 23 MEET

Plans To Develop Route To Be Told At Ashland Sept. 21

Highway Commissioner Henry Ward announced last Friday at Frankfort that he will attend a joint meeting of the US 23 Association and the Ashland-Boyd County Chamber of Commerce, September 21, at Ashland, to outline plans of the Department of Highways for improvement of US 23 and other details for improvement of the highways in Eastern Kentucky under the Appalachian Development Program.

The meeting will begin at 12 noon with a luncheon at the Henry Clay hotel at Ashland, and Ward's presentation will follow the luncheon. Members and officials of the US 23 Association from the Virginia state line, near Jenkins, to the Ohio state line, near Portsmouth, will be invited to attend the meeting.

Commissioner Ward said that the meeting resulted from conversations he had with Herman Wheeler, of Paintsville, president of the US 23 Association, and L. W. Pilst, executive secretary of the Ashland-Boyd County Chamber of Commerce. Ward said that he had discussed such a meeting in detail last Thursday with Paul Blazer, of the Ashland Oil & Refining Company. Ward had asked Mr. Blazer to take the lead in organizing an area meeting to provide presentation of the facts concerning the highway program, and in this discussion it was agreed that such a meeting should be under the sponsorship of the US 23 Association. Ward earlier had accepted an invitation from the Ashland-Boyd County Chamber of Commerce to attend a meeting of that organization's Transportation committee.

"My purpose in asking for a joint meeting was to give me an opportunity to present facts concerning the plans of the Department of Highways for developing US 23 and other highways in the area and to explain the problems which Kentucky and other states have encountered in developing policies and procedures under the Act passed by Congress last year to improve highways in the Appalachian area," Ward said.

"When Congress passed the Appalachian Act, it directed the Appalachian Regional Commission and the U.S. Department of Commerce to develop standards and policies and determine priorities in the improvement of a 2,350-mile developmental highway system authorized by that act. It has been an extremely difficult matter to secure the adoption of final policies which enable the state highway department to proceed with the design and construction of these highways. The Appalachian Regional Commission, on August 10, adopted a new procedure under which specific funds were allocated among the states. Under this order, the state of Kentucky now can anticipate that there will be a total of $290 million (See Story No. 4, Page 2)

BOARD SELLS OLD SCHOOLS

Sets Out-of-State Credit for Teaching At 8-Year Maximum

The Floyd County Board of Education sold two abandoned school properties at its meeting last Saturday and authorized the advertising of four used school buses and a surplus vehicle for sale.

It sold the Goble Branch school property to J. B. Stepp on his high bid of $701.50 and its equity in the Salyers Branch school grounds to Magistrate Zeb Ousley on his high bid of $300. One other bidder made offers on each of the properties.

The board also voted a limitation on the number of years of (See Story No. 6, Page 6)

FIRM ASKS FLOOR AREA BE DOUBLED

Number of Employees To Rise to 225 When Structure Completed

Directors of Kentucky Appalachian Industries voted last Friday to build a second building to double its West Prestonsburg plant floor space, and this week footers for the new structure were already poured.

The action was taken at the request of officials of the Irving Air Chute Company, which manages the new industry here. Company directors were told the employment of an additional 100 persons could be expected upon completion of the building.

The new plant structure will be of the same construction and size as the original, and will add 10,000 square feet of floor space to the overall operation.

Cost of the building will be about $33,000, it was said. The construction job is being done by Tom Oak McGuire, Prestonsburg contractor.

The new building will be used for a type of work unlike that being done in the present structure. At this time 120 persons are employed at the plant, and more would be working if competent employees for night shift operation were available, company officials said.

The building is expected to be ready for occupancy within two months.

MOST RATES FIXED, TAX PICTURE CLEARS

A clearer picture of what Floyd county tax bills will be this year emerged this week as tax rates under the new full-value property assessment were fixed for the various agencies of county government.

The county rate on real estate and tangibles had already been set at 13 1/2¢ per $100 valuation. These other rates were subsequently established:

School tax, 40.3¢ on real estate and tangibles, 61¢ on franchises and 19¢ on bank shares. To this will be added for Prestonsburg property-owners a 5.8¢ real estate tax and 11.7¢ on franchises.

The health department tax rate was set at 2.3¢, the library rate at 1 1/2¢ cents and for the county expansion tax one cent.

For a property-owner residing outside Prestonsburg and not subject to city and gym taxes and having a property assessment of $10,000 the new tax rates would mean that he would pay $60.10 taxes. His bill, for example, would read like this:

State tax, $1.50; county tax, $13.50; school, $40.30; library, $1.50; health, $2.30; extension, $1.

If the taxpayer owned 100 acres of land, say, the forestry tax of two cents per acre or $2, would be added to that total.

Any taxpayer whose 1966 assessment is not more than four times that of last year will be affected very little by the new assessment, officials say.

A PLEASANT PROSPECT— BUT NOT ENTIRELY SO

Completion of Fishtrap dam next year, or the next, and the addition of its water storage capabilities to those of the Pound and John Flannagan dams in the Virginia headwaters of the Big Sandy river and to that of Dewey Reservoir in this county will practically eliminate the danger of disastrous floods along the main river. Homeowners and operators of businesses will rest easier in coming flood seasons, and level land suited to development or for industrial sites will be far enough removed from the high water mark to be valuable.

It is a pleasant prospect. From there planners can turn to helping solve the problems of those living along the tributaries of the Big Sandy where the benefits of these reservoirs do not reach.

Industry is spreading out into rural sections, and elimination of this flood threat opens, or will open, much of Eastern Kentucky to job-producing plants.

Yet all is not pleasant when one considers these impoundments. The prospects for two — one, the oldest; the other, the newest of the lot—are in the question mark category.

Fishtrap is fed by the Big Sandy only a few miles after the stream has left Virginia and the coal mines there which run into the river mine washings, coal dust and other refuse of the industry till the water is black. Until some governmental agency with authority to say, "Stop!" and enforce the order is found, the lake to be created by Fishtrap dam will be a settling basin for the excrement of the Virginia coal industry. This is the prospect there, unless the state of Virginia has a change of heart and decides to remedy the situation through its own initiative.

Dewey Lake has a similar problem. Johns Creek, which feeds its waters, has not yet run as black as the upper Big Sandy, but all the signs of future crisis are there, and the coal development in the headwaters of the stream has only begun.

For Dewey Lake the change of heart is not to come from Virginia. It must take place in Kentucky—specifically, at Frankfort.

The United States of America, whose Corps of Engineers built those dams and presumably have authority over much of the area lying within the reservoirs, apparently is helpless to save from damage and eventual ruin the lakes this same United States created at public expense and for the public benefit.

GRASSED WATERWAY

PLANNED WATERWAYS NEAR A LENGTH OF TWO MILES

By BYRON THOMPSON,
Soil Conservationist

Cooperators in the Floyd County Soil and Water Conservation District have planned 9,200 feet of vegetative waterways to be constructed in 1966 and 1967.

Of the total footage, 3,000 feet is planned on six farms in the Middle Creek Conservation and Development Project. Surveys and designs have been completed by the Soil Conservation Service for Alice Hackworth, Richmond Shepherd, Dollie Dotson and L. P. Tussey, all in the Middle Creek project.

A vegetative waterway has been completed for E. M. Hayes, at Martin. Mr. Hayes received federal cost-sharing assistance on construction of the waterway through the Floyd County A.S.C.S. office.

Such waterways serve to carry excessive surface water across field, make possible utilization land which was not profitable before, provide disposal of excessive surface water from diversions and row crops, to prevent excessive soil losses and prevent large gullies from occurring in field.

If you are interested in construction of a vegetative waterway on your farm, you should contact the local Soil Conservation office.

available to Kentucky for the improvement of 435 miles of highways on the Appalachian system. However, we still are awaiting action by the Appalachian Commission and the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads of the adoption of specific standards Department of Commerce on the which must be applied in the design of these highways. The state is not authorized to proceed with final design until these questions have been resolved.

"Kentucky was fortunate," he said, "in securing last year approval from the Appalachian Commission for the construction of 94 miles of highways under the Appalachian Program under what the Commission described as 'quick start' projects. Kentucky now has a total of $42 million of highway improvement projects under construction under this program. In this effort, Kentucky has more dollar volume of highway construction on the Appalachian Highway Program than any of the other 11 states in the Appalachian Region. These projects were authorized because the Department of Highways already had plans for them. The Commission agreed to early construction in order to get the program going. This was of vital importance, because this is a five-year program. The Congressional Act specifically provides that the legislation will expire in 1970 and, therefore, we all planning and design and get these projects under construction prior to that date."

"What I want to do at the meeting at Ashland on September 21 is to present the facts as I will have them at that time. I will invite the US 23 Association, the Ashland-Boyd County Chamber of Commerce, or any other organizations or individuals interested in the program, to check on whether I make a completely honest and factual presentation of the program. I don't expect anyone just to take my word for it."

MATTER OF TASTE

And another, which has to do with the two cannibals in an asylum. One was ripping out the pages of a magazine which bore the pictures of men, women and children, then was cramming them into his mouth and chewing them up.

FIRST PERSON REPORT

I don't know if it's nostalgia or plain hardening of the arteries, but I seem to have a greater liking as time races on for memories, reminiscences and that sort of thing.

For instance, I liked a thing I saw recently about the day when people really ate breakfast, and women prepared breakfast, and the entire family arose to eat it together.

No, that isn't science fiction in reverse, my young friends. It really happened, once upon a time—I was there.

For a few weeks now we have been mailing out to subscribers notices that their subscriptions had expired, or soon would, and you would be surprised how many appreciative notes we've had.

One such comes from Mrs. Zevelva Boyd Booth, of Danville, Virginia, formerly of Prater Creek. She writes, in part:

"Thanks for sending my paper on, I get it on Saturday evening, and you don't know how much it means to me. My father was Tish Boyd. He was the man who was riding a horse between Harold and Boldman when a train hit him. He landed on the cowcatcher, rode into Pikeville in his saddle, got off by himself, came home next day—plus saddle, minus horse."

Mrs. Booth recalls a few unpleasant memories but quickly turns to this:

"The most pleasant and beautiful thing I remember, you will have soon, Autumn. There is no place in the world like the hills of Kentucky in autumn. How I wish I could see them, but I have to stay on the job I have been on for 25 years with Dan Rivers mill. So I will keep on making thread out of cotton and spinning dreams of days gone by."

THE EMPTY HOUSE

And this by Larry Caudill, in The Cromona (Ky.) News:

The paint still looks good, white and green, in the summer's fading sunlight. The coalhouse, leaning from the weight of some tons of fuel, still encroaches on the street. The pump-house, power cut off, is sealed and locked. No water for the spotless kitchen sink.

The windows are like dead glass eyes, unshaded and curtainless. The doors are shut and tightly locked.

So many things are locked and dead—but unburt, per haps. Outside, the corkwood blooms are past the full — white, pink and crimson. The purple aster's buds are full, for late fall blooming.

The mimosa blossoms are becoming beans, but still the myriad black butterflies flutter over the fluffy pink flowers, now shedding in signal of fall . . . to be followed by inevitable chill of winter, when the green roof will be shrouded in snow. And the house will be shrouded in sorrow.

Nothing is so empty as an empty deserted house . . . Unless it is an empty, deserted heart.

Former Floyd Resident, Mrs. Hatfield, Succumbs In New Jersey Hospital

Mrs. Addie Huff Hatfield, native of Hueysville and former recreation director for the Davis Child Shelter at Charleston, West Virginia, died August 28 in Haddonfield, New Jersey, where she had made her home with a son the past two years.

She was a former recreation worker for the City Park and Recreation Commission and a past director of the Boys and Girls Club and the Charleston Recreation Center. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John W. Huff, of Hueysville.

Her death occurred in a Haddonfield hospital after an extended illness.

At one time she conducted a private school for pre-school age children in Charleston. Mrs. Hatfield was a graduate of Berea College and attended Morehead State Teachers College.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. A. M. Roy, of El Paso, Texas, and Mrs. J. E. Hillen, of Woodbine, Maryland; a son, C. W. Hatfield, of Haddonfield; six sisters, Mrs. Arvid Little, St. Albans, West Virginia, Mrs. Howard Terry, of Louisville, Kentucky, Mrs. Ellis Conley, Waverly, Ohio, Mrs. Ella Smith, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, Mrs. Sally Ratcliff, Hamilton, Ohio, Mrs. Lawna Francisco, of Pikeville; one brother, John W. Kentucky now has a total of $42 million of highway improvement projects under construction under this program. In this effort, Kentucky has more dollar volume of highway construction on the Appalachian Highway Program than any of the other 11 states in the Appalachian Region. These projects were authorized because the Department of Highways already had plans for them. The Commission agreed to early construction in order to get the program going. This was of vital importance, because this is a five-year program. The Congressional Act specifically provides that the legislation will expire in 1970 and, therefore, we all planning and design and get these projects under construction prior to that date."

"What I want to do at the meeting at Ashland on September 21 is to present the facts as I will have them at that time. I will invite the US 23 Association, the Ashland-Boyd County Chamber of Commerce, or any other organizations or individuals interested in the program, to check on whether I make a completely honest and factual presentation of the program. I don't expect anyone just to take my word for it."

Approximately 400 guests are expected to attend the reception at the lodge. As of Monday, reservations had been received from Washington, D. C., North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, Florida and Alabama as well as from many chapters in Kentucky.

Born in Prestonsburg, Mrs. Browning is a daughter of the late Walter S. and Josephine Davidson Harkins. Her husband, Iley B. Browning, is a prominent Henderson, Kentucky geologist and oil producer. They have two sons, Iley Baker Browning, Jr. and Walter Scott Browning.

Mrs. Browning was elected and installed most worthy grand matron of the world Order of Eastern Star and its more than three million members in 1964 at Dallas, Texas. Her march to world leadership of the order began about 20 years ago. Only one other Kentucky woman has attained that honor.

Her work as head of the world Eastern Star organization has taken her on inspection tours to many foreign countries, and honors accorded her have been both national and international. Here at home, she was named a member of the Floyd County Hall of Fame in 1958. She is chairman of the board of directors of The Bank Josephine here.

A LOOK AT THE PROPOSED NEW STATE CONSTITUTION

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a series of articles explaining the proposed constitution for Kentucky, and how it differs from the present document written in 1891. Today's story deals with Articles X through XIV, finance, general welfare, commerce, general provisions, and mode of revision.

By ALBERT E. DIX

Article X of the proposed constitution dealing with finances, both local and state, makes few changes from the present Kentucky constitution.

But the changes which are made recognize today's economy and make provision for tomorrow's. Tax exemptions granted to churches, burial grounds and public property, etc. are the same with one exception: counties may exempt a manufacturing establishment from local taxes for five years. This inducement to industry had formerly been limited to cities, and was written in to keep the state competitive in the dog-eat-dog search for new plants.

In methods of taxation, the ad valorem or property tax is provided for, except that the General Assembly may do away with it if it substitutes some other form of taxation in its place. There is a growing feeling among tax experts the property tax is becoming outmoded and thus the Revision Assembly made a future for its removal.

Section three of the draft keeps the provision in the present document of property assessment at fair cash value, or 100 percent assessment.

The Revision Assembly debated fair cash value for assessments at length, many of the delegates favoring different percentages of value for taxing purposes.

Strengthened was the provision giving a taxpayer a cause of action to compel obedience with the fair cash value section. Under the present constitution, a property taxpayer has the right to protest his own assessment. Under the new he can protest not only his but the assessment of another taxpayer, if that assessment is, what he believes to be, unequal.

Prohibition against using public funds for private purposes are retained, as well as the prohibition against the state surrendering its taxing power.

Unless incurred in time of war, the state still cannot assume the debt of a unit of local government. The state is powerless to pledge its credit to a unit of local government; no unit of government, state or local, can become a stockholder in a private gain enterprise; and the state cannot loan credit to an individual or any entity for private gain purposes.

All laws enacted by state or local government which call for the borrowing of money must specify why the money is to be borrowed. None of this money can be used for any other purpose.

Section 1 of Article XI of the draft directs the General Assembly to provide for a school system in Kentucky. The proposed document calls for the election of a State Board of Education, with the Superintendent of Public Instruction appointed by the board.

The common school fund, the interest it receives and its use have been deleted. The fund no longer exists.

Omitted is any reference to the school fund being equally distributed among white and colored schools. Since there are none of the latter, the provision was deleted.

Retained is the provision which prohibits the Commonwealth from using public school funds for any church, sectarian or denominational school. Retained also is the General Assembly's right to pass laws regulating the distribution of state funds among school districts, and the use of that money for public school purposes.

Section 2 of Article XI has a new first paragraph. It is the health, education and welfare provision, giving the legislature the power to enact laws regarding conservation of natural resources, "including but not limited to wildlife, soil, minerals, forests, water and pure air. . ."

The Revision Assembly outlined these as matters of public concern, apparently aware of the many bills now pending in the General Assembly concerning the specified areas.

The other three paragraphs of Section 2, Article XI, are taken from the present constitution, giving the legislature power to write child labor laws, legislate on behalf of the granting and paying of pensions or annuities to old persons, and establish a penal system in the state.

Article XII, commerce, absorbs two sections of the present constitution in three sections. The first paragraph eliminates many of the present constitutional provisions by giving the General Assembly the right to "provide for appropriate regulation of common carriers and public utilities as and to the extent required by the public interest."

It would no longer be a constitutional prohibition to give a person a free pass on a railroad, steamboat or other common carrier. No longer would a corporation, doing business in Kentucky, have a constitutional obligation to keep a place of business in this state.

Retained but changed, in part, was the provision prohibiting corporations from holding real estate for more than five years without improving or using it. Under the present document this property escheats to the state if the prohibition is violated.

There is some sentiment in the Revision Assembly to strike this provision entirely. The term for holding land was extended to 25 years. Corporations today side-step this provision by forming land-holding companies whose express purpose is the buying, selling, and holding of land for various uses.

To help minority stockholders get seats on boards of directors of corporations, the draft allows cumulative voting of stock. This is in the present document.

This article, particularly, points up the wish of the Revision Assembly to make matters of business regulation law, and not constitutional guarantees or prohibitions.

The next to the last Article, XIII, has one major change. The constitutional limits on salaries have been removed. A Court of Appeals decision known as the "rubber dollar theory" all but made that section of the present constitution null and void, and the proposed document reaffirms that decision. It leaves to the General Assembly the setting of pay scales. It also provides no salary shall be changed or adjusted during the term for which a man is elected to office, a provision also contained in the local government Article.

The draft outlaws lotteries; sets up the procedure for removing public officers from office; omits the words "have not fought a duel with deadly weapons within this State nor out of it, or have I sent or accepted a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, nor have I acted as a second in carrying a challenge nor aided or assisted any person thus offending. . ." from the oath of office; and defines treason against the Commonwealth.

A prohibition is included making it a violation of the Constitution to use money appropriated for one purpose for another. Any surplus is held over until the General Assembly later provides for its appropriation.

In suits against the state the General Assembly retains the right to tell you in which court you start such a suit, but it also may waive the defense of sovereign immunity. The latter is a new provision. If your car is parked in a state park, and is socked by a state truck, the General Assembly can waive the immunity from your suit and allow you to institute legal proceedings to collect damages.

Broadened was the residence requirement for all civil officers of the Commonwealth. The draft says they must be a resident of the state. The present document says the same thing but omitted is the residence requirement pertaining to district, county, city and town officers. This is left to law.

Constitutional guarantees pertaining to incompatibility of offices, recovery for wrongful death, eminent domain, and juries are retained.

So is a specific paragraph which makes Frankfort the seat of state government. The final section, 15, directs the General Assembly to "enact all laws necessary to make this document fully effective."

(NEXT: Mode of revision, and how the draft can be made a reality.)

CATS DEFEAT MORGAN CO. 19-13, FOR SECOND WIN

The Prestonsburg Black Cats added another victory to their record Friday night as they downed Morgan County, 19-13 in West Liberty.

Early in the first quarter Phillip Haywood connected with John Clark for a 29-yard touchdown pass. Morgan County came back with a touchdown from a yard out by J. C. Brown, making Prestonsburg's edge a mere 7-6 at the end of the first quarter.

Haywood stopped a threatened second quarter touchdown with a pass interception on the 25, and he plowed his way to the 35. Two plays later, the Cats scored on a 62-yard touchdown pass from Haywood to Leslie.

The forward wall of the Black-Cats, sparked by Clinton Hager, John Webb and Larry Lyons, prevented the Blue Devils from scoring again until the fourth quarter.

The Blue Devils were deep in Black Cat territory when John Webb's alert interception on the 35 stopped the Devils' hopes of tying the score.

In the fourth quarter, after a sustained drive, Leslie went over for a touchdown from 15 yards out. This was matched by a 10 yard touchdown by J. C. Brown, making the final score 19-13 in favor of the Cats.

Haywood completed two out of three passes. Both were touchdowns heaves, good for a total of 91 yards.

Anti-Rabies Fight Launched In Knott To Last Two Weeks

A two-week program to control an outbreak of rabies in Knott county began last Saturday.

Nine cases of rabies in Knott county have been identified by the State Health Department laboratory. Dr. Joseph Skaggs, medical epidemiologist, said. Seven of the nine were in cattle. At least twice as many cattle with rabies symptoms have died, Dr. Skaggs said.

Thirty-one Knott county residents have taken Pasteur treatment for prevention of rabies this summer, he said. Most of them were trying to treat cattle who later died.

The control program is being aided by foxes and stray dogs. A countywide quarantine of pets and domestic animals has been in effect for about a month.

The schedule for the program: Veterinarians will travel throughout the county to vaccinate livestock.

Consultants of the U. S. Bureau of Sport, Fisheries and Wildlife began Tuesday a series of meetings to discuss ways to reduce the fox population and demonstrate trapping techniques.

The first effort to get federal aid was made under the Accelerated Public Works Act, with 10 men signing a $1,000 note to get the effort under way. An engineering firm undertook survey and planning work on a contingency basis.

Falling with APW, the district applied for help under the Economic Development Act.

The job of laying approximately 14 miles of water mains is slated to begin within three months and to be completed in a year.

Members of the commission which will administer affairs of the water district are Dr. Myers and Fred W. Redwine, of Pikeville, Jack Branham, of Betsy Layne, Walter Hall, of Stanville, and E. H. (Ted) Stumbo, of Har- old.

The project will bring Pikeville water near the Mud Creek area where a critical water situation has resulted in plans calling for either the drilling of wells or development of a central water distribution system. A move is under way to organize a water district to serve that area.

The Pike-Floyd project is the smaller of two applications before EDA from this county. The larger is a project calling for the expenditure of $8 to $10 million dollars by the Beaver Valley-Elkhorn Water District in developing a water system which would serve communities on both Left and Right Beaver Creeks.

Early action is expected on the Beaver Creeks' application.

mile at a minimum monthly rate as low as $6. This has been done, he pointed out, because the water districts involved received grants and long-term loans from the Farmers Home Administration. Basing his calculations on a 55% federal grant, Pritchard estimated that the customer-participation in the Mud Creek area may make possible a monthly minimum rate of around $4.50 for up to 3,000 gallons of water. Customers would pay a $25 tap-on fee.

Farmers Home Administration, its representative said, can make a grant of up to 50% and supplement that amount with a loan. Percy Liles, of the Huntington, West Virginia office of the Economic Development Administration, said EDA can grant up to 60% of the total amount needed. He also said the Appalachian Regional Commission can make grants as high as 80%, but was reminded by Nick G. Johnson, of the State Department of Health, that ARC has exhausted its funds for the year.

Harry Eastburn, director of the Big Sandy Community Action Program, who presided at the meeting, pointed out that OEO may make $15,000 available toward getting the program started, if $10,000 is made available from Governor Breathitt's emergency fund.

"The situation continues to exist, and grows worse—we have to get this thing started," Eastburn commented.

Earlier, Mr. Johnson had spoken of the gross pollution of at least 75% of the wells now in use in the Mud Creek area. Some of the tests made, he said, revealed that more than 1,000 coliforms existed in water samples—which, he said, "is explosively dangerous."

Eastburn had also pointed out by way of background information to open the meeting, that some residents of the area walk as much as four miles to get water and that others are getting their drinking water supply from coal banks and creeks.

Almost unanimous willingness on the part of the people to cooperate was reported by Hershell Hamilton, a leader of the movement to improve Mud Creek conditions. It is estimated that 85% of the people have signed to tap onto a water distribution system, and Hamilton has collected from a number of these the initial down payment of $3 on the $25 tap-on fee from some with the understanding that if the venture falls through their deposits will be refunded.

Another meeting by September 15 "to pin down recommendations and what can be done" is planned.

The afternoon session adjourned in time for a tour of the Mud Creek section with Hershell Hamilton by County Judge Henry Stumbo, Mr. Morrison of the Floyd county CAP office, Floyd Anderson, of the Office of Emergency Planning, Washington, D. C.; Elmer M. Beckett, Paintsville, Civil Defense; Leonard Kelsay and Alfred Alexander, Frankfort, Office of Economic Opportunity.

'66 HEADSTART PROGRAM REACHED 477 FLOYD TOTS

The 1966 Floyd County Headstart Program, under the direction of Robert R. Allen, had 16 child development centers with a total enrollment of 477 preschool children who were aided in their development by a program that was flexible and geared to the needs of the individual child. The summer program was primarily focused on creative and exploratory aspects of learning.

The Headstart child was offered various experiences not often obtainable within his home. These were offered through the efforts of 29 teachers, 35 mother-aides, 35 contract bus drivers, 16 lunchroom managers, more than 40 volunteer aides, and an administrative staff of four. Throughout the program these people constantly observed, studied, and evaluated the sixteen centers to discover all means for more effective child development.

The total cost of the Headstart Program was $94 million, which included the following: (1) two physical examinations per child, (2) dental treatment for each child, (3) field trips, (4) pre-school activities both in and out of the classroom, (5) parent-teacher-staff in-service meetings, (8) pre-school consultants, (9) Headstart films and audio-visual equipment, (10) parent involvement, and (11) constant evaluation. A follow-up study will be made relating to each of the above listed.

Parent involvement was an important aspect of the Headstart Program. This involvement included working in the classroom, attending parent meetings at each of the sixteen child development centers, and through the active membership of the Policy Advisory Committee. The primary purpose of this committee, which was composed only of Headstart parents, was to observe, study, evaluate, and make recommendations so that the program would be more effective for the children. This committee was very active and made many recommendations which will be implemented in the 1967 Headstart Program.

Miss Joy Furry, Headstart field analyst, Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, D. C., visited the Floyd county Headstart program in July, offering suggestions, working with people in the 16 centers, and in establishing rapport with the local project and the residents of the county.

The program received the complete cooperation of the Floyd County Board of Education, superintendent, Health Department, welfare agencies, community organizations, local doctors, dentists and citizens.

Coaches and Athletes To See Demonstration By UK Staff Men Here

Two members of the University of Kentucky athletic department will give a demonstration of weight-lifting Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse as a part of the U-Kats-sponsored program in state high schools.

The weight-lifting program has been recommended by U-Kats to the high school here as a means of strengthening and developing its athletes physically, and County Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark will have coaches of other high schools in the county and physical education instructors present to benefit from the demonstration.

U-Kats, which has a chapter here, and which has won the cooperation of Superintendent Clark, has a membership of more than 1,800 now and by January 1 expects to swell that total to 10,000. Half of the $10 membership fee is returned to cooperating schools.

U-Kats Day was observed in Lexington last week, with members from chapters from all over the state attending. The Prestonsburg organization was represented by Homer D. Neeley and Don Chaffins.

CARTER CAVES HAS SILVER MINE YARN

Although there's no official record of silver ever being mined in Kentucky, there's a wealth of stories about fabulous silver mines in the commonwealth and about the vast hoards of treasure they are supposed to have produced.

There's a legend in the country around Carter Caves State Park that will not die. There are old people there who claim to have seen pieces of silver ore picked up from the ground.

History records that numerous French people came into the Ohio valley between 1750 and 1779. Howard Le-Kain, a Frenchman from one of the settlements along the Mississippi River, struck out alone around 1770 through this wilderness of tall, virgin timber and dense underbrush. He was an adventurer as well as a prospector and carried not only the usual prospecting tools but also a coin mold of Spanish design bearing the date of 1711. Le-Kain came to that part of Carter and Lewis counties known as Buffalo Run and McGlone Creek, where the Stamper farm is now situated.

Settled in the lush valley with a group of Indian companions, Le-Kain made long hunting trips through the forest. On one of these trips he discovered, in a deep crevice in the hills, a rich vein of silver containing a small amount of gold. He found that the vein descended to a depth of about 90 feet. So the story runs.

With the help of his Indian friends Le-Kain built a small furnace and worked the ore for several years, molding it into coins and long bars. Warring Indians who roamed the nearby hills discovered the mining operations and began harrasing the mining party.

So Le-Kain decided to hide the greater part of his silver and leave the area until the Indians should become settled or more friendly.

Caves were numerous in the region, with 25 to 30 on the Stamper farm alone. But Le-Kain needed an inconspicuous one, and it had to be dry. Finally he found exactly what he wanted; a small cave facing the morning sun and near the top of a low hill. There he carefully hid six barrels of silver coins and bars and about two gallons of pure gold, building up a circle of rock about it. He cut his name and the date in the cave floor, and completing this, rolled a large stone across the cave opening.

Near the bottom of the hill, in the small cove where the old Stamper home now stands, he cut the crude outline of a serpent on a large stone. The serpent's head pointed toward the cave. On a smooth deerskin he drew a map depicting the location in detail. Completing these tasks he hid the molds with which he had made his coins. Le-Kain and his companions then left for Louisiana where he married an Indian girl who was one of the party. One daughter was born to them and shortly after, Le-Kain fell ill and died. The daughter eventually married and gave birth to a son, Robert Tinder. It was he who made the first known attempt to recover the treasure—but not until 1890, when he was nearing 60.

In the intervening period of around 100 years, there had come some changes to the valley; notably, the Stampers had settled there. Wash Stamper and his sons, Charles, Frank, John and Green wondered about the rock with its serpent drawing, but it was not until Robert Tinder came that they heard of the treasure. The group set out immediately, armed with the map made by Tinder's grandfather and with some searching found the cave. But no treasure. Subsequent excursions over the next 20 years proved fruitless. Land-slides had filled the cavern leaving no trace of Le-Kain's fortune. Only the old coin molds were unearthed.

Robert Tinder died there and is buried close to the cave site that dominated the vision of his last years.

The sessions will include evaluation testing, tours of the campus, an introduction to the faculty and discussions of College regulations. September 6 and 7, the Alice Lloyd faculty, including nine recently appointed members, will meet at Buckhorn State Park for an orientation retreat. MEDICARE HURTS MANY HOSPITALS IN STATE

Medicare's two percent-above-cost formula is beginning to hurt some Kentucky hospitals, and it appears that darker days are ahead. One 150-bed hospital has at least one-third of its beds occupied by patients 65 or older, and is bogged down with paper work and financial troubles. A Louisville hospital has figures that show it will lose more than $65,000 a year on Medicare patients.

"The reimbursement formula is not equitable, and will not allow for normal growth or capital improvements," Hasty W. Riddle, executive director of the Kentucky Hospital Association, said yesterday. Social Security's formula of paying only two percent above the actual cost of caring for Medicare patients is not the big reason for a planned increase in room rates in Louisville-area hospitals this fall, but it certainly played a part, Riddle said. A hospital administrator who asked that he not be quoted said that, sometime in the future, hospitals may be forced to limit the number of Medicare patients accepted. Right now, he said, all hospitals are attempting to care for persons who are in the greatest need of attention, regardless of age. But he said 25 to 30 percent of the patients in Louisville hospitals are under Medicare, whereas last year the percentage for the elderly ranged from 20 to 22.

Medicare, the government's health program for the aged, got under way July 1, but reimbursement to nursing home patients does not become effective until January 1. Riddle said hospitals may be forced to subsidize Medicare patients by charging higher fees to other patients. "A hospital with a population of mostly Medicare patients could not survive financially under present regulations," the KHA executive director said. The hospital with the 33 percent Medicare patients is in an area where there are no adequate nursing homes to which elderly patients can be transferred. The hospital's utilization committee has recommended the dismissal of several of these patients, "but there is no place to send them," Riddle said.

To make matters worse, there is a big demand for space in this hospital, he said. The Louisville hospital that estimates it will lose $65,000 annually on Medicare patients points out, Riddle said, that Medicare will pay only about 20 percent of the additional clerical costs brought on by Medicare's requirements of detailed forms for each patient. Riddle said hospital expenses per patient per day in Kentucky's short-term hospitals increased $2.31 during the past year. The national average showed a $2.90 increase.

There are 242 full-time employees per 100 hospital patients in Kentucky, compared with 246 nationally, figures show. The cost in wages to keep one patient in a hospital bed for one day in Kentucky was estimated by Riddle at $22.45. This is slightly higher than the cost in Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia, but below the cost in Indiana, Ohio and Missouri.

There is evidence now that hospitals throughout the country are becoming concerned with Medicare's formula of two percent above actual costs. They say the formula doesn't sufficiently cover depreciation of capital assets, bad debts, charity patients and numerous other such items. A group of hospitals in California has increased room charges to non-Medicare patients by $3 to a range of $35 to $47 per day. The 6,000-member American Nursing Home Association has already officially rejected Social Security's formula for reimbursement. Operators of Kentucky nursing homes say they may refuse admittance to medicare patients because the formula does not provide for meeting the full costs of caring for patients.

TALLENT HOME FROM TRIP TO NEAR EAST WITH UK FIVE

Bob Tallent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones Tallent, of Langley, returned to Lexington last week after more than a month spent in the Near East, traveling with the University of Kentucky Wildcat basketball team on a Cultural Presentation Program sponsored by the State Department.

Tallent's letters home have been filled with the wonderful experiences the team members have had. They spent nine days in Athens, Greece where the Acropolis was the high point of their tour. He wrote: "In the middle of the Acropolis stands the Parthenon, which is an engineering feat today, much less during the period in which it was built. It seems incredible to me that such a magnificent structure could have been built during that period on level ground, much less on such a steep precipice."

The next two weeks were spent in Tel Aviv, Israel where the International Basketball Tournament was held. The Wildcats won the tournament while playing six games and beating Warsaw, Poland, 81-57, in the final game. Each member of the squad received a gold medalion, and Coach Adolph Rupp was presented a two-foot-high gold team trophy in recognition of the victory. The American flag was hoisted over the outdoor Yad Elishu Stadium as 5,000 spectators watched. The Wildcat team found the Israeli "crazy" about basketball. During their stay in Israel the team members visited Bethlehem, Nazareth, Jerusalem, and the Sea of Galilee.

Before returning home the Wildcats visited Iran and its capital city, Tehran, where they won three games. They defeated the Abadan Oil Fields team, 101-3, Tehran's All-Stars, 88-54, and the Tehran Juniors, 77-27. From there the team went to Shiraz, Southern Iran, where they played Pahlavi University.

While in Athens, Tallent met Jesse Stuart, noted author, who is a distant cousin, and they reminisced about Eastern Kentucky—which goes to show its a small world, after all.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear mother, Minnie Belle Walters.

A tribute of love to our mother, who passed away, August 31, 1955.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
Sweet to remember her who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Sadly missed by her children,
