IN 1938 PALM BEACH UNCRUMPLED THE SUMMER SUIT

The summer suit you put on in the morning was a dish rag by afternoon, until Palm Beach* pioneered with the first wittless fabric blends.

Tailoring blend fabrics demanded totally new techniques. It gave birth to the "Engineered Suit"—Palm Beach's way of tailoring a suit so fit didn't depend on pushing, pulling, pressing. Instead it cut shape right into the fabric and sewed fit into the suit. Results were so superior at such a reduction in costs, that Palm Beach now engineers all their suits. From $49.95 to $59.95 (although they look and act like they cost much more)

MEMORIAL DAY AT FAIRVIEW

Jefferson Davis' 179th birthday on June 3 was marked by a memorial service at the Davis Monument at Fairview, Ky., by the Jefferson Davis Home Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, of Fairview. The invocation was given by Rev. Francis, pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church of Fairview. A combo duo gave a music program which was followed by the singing of "Dixie" and "My Old Kentucky Home" by the group. The address of welcome was given by Miss Mildred Hancock, with the response by Mrs. Wade Lettrel, Kentucky Division president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. She reported 30,000 members of the Daughters of the Confederacy would be observing that day the 179th birthday of Davis, president of the Confederacy.

On Davis' last visit to his home at Fairview and Bethel Baptist Church, he presented the church a silver communion set which is on display Saturday, at the church there.

Mrs. Chapman Bevins Jennings introduced members of the Kentucky U.D.C. Club of Paducah. Mrs. Kate Apperson introduced the speaker, Carroll Hubbard, who gave a brief history of Jefferson Davis. The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Lee Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe A. Clark, of Allen, and Mr. Terry Gene Kinzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kinzer, also of Allen, took place at 7:30 p.m., May 19, at the Allen Methodist Church.

The Rev. James C. Stratton officiated at the double-ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by Mrs. James C. Stratton, soloist, and Miss Sharon Leigh Frasure, pianist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor-length lace and sheer gown fashioned with a molded bodice that was styled with a Sabrina neckline outlined with seed pearls and crystals. Long lace sleeves draped to points at the wrist. The full bouffant skirt had a front panel of lace with sheer extending into a very full back, sweeping into a full chapel train that was edged in lace. Her tiered bouffant veil of imported slit illusion fell from a double cut Swiss crystal crown. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid.

Miss Gayle Hunt, friend of the bride, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Donna Sue Clark, Miss Carol Jo Clark, sisters of the bride, and Miss Pam Sexton, friend of the bride.

James Stephen Stout, served the groom as best man. Ushers were Jerry Dean Kinzer, brother of the groom, Mike Conley and Oscar Crider. Sherri Kay Kinzer, cousin of the groom, was flower girl and Robert Anthony Martin, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

A reception was held in the basement of the church after which the couple left for a short wedding trip to Lexington. Upon their return they will reside at Allen, until the fall term begins at Morehead State University where they will attend classes.

EVANS DIVISION MINE GETS LONG-TERM PACT

A long-term contract to supply coal to plants of the Carolina Power and Light Company was announced last Friday by James L. Hamilton, chairman, Island Creek Coal Company, and to fulfill this contract the Evans Elk-horn Division of Island Creek is expanding its Gund mine, now under construction in Pike county, to its designed capacity of 2 million tons per year.

Initial production from the Gund mine, named for the late George Gund, of Cleveland, is scheduled for the latter part of 1967, and deliveries to Carolina Power and Light will begin in the first half of 1968. Shipments will be in unit trains originating on the Norfolk and Western Railway.

With the Carolina Power and Light contract and two others previously announced with Toledo Edison Company and Upper Peninsula Generating Company, the entire output of the Gund mine is committed under long-term contracts for movement by unit trains or rail-lake to electric utilities.

The mine is one of four high-capacity, long-term mines currently under construction by Island Creek to serve the expanding energy needs of the electric utility industry and the metal-

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

The Healing Power of the Great Outdoors

When we grow weary of the clanging noises of city streets and life becomes over-burdened with care, there is a way to find peace for the weary heart and a calm for the jaded nerves. It is then we should heed the poet Bryant's words: "Go forth under the open sky and list to nature's voice."

Then is the time to let go of the daily cares and steal away, "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife." There is a peace profound in the green-robed hills or in the quiet, green valley where the birds sing merrily. Here there come no blaring horns of autos, no jangling of busy phones, no sounds to disturb, save the gurgle of a brook, the thrill of a bird, or the wind playing violin solos in the summer leaves.

When there is a deepfelt need to get away from things for a brief spell, it is time to seek some quiet retreat in leafy summer woods and let nature soothe the heart and heal the soul. The soul of man needs such a place that it may commune with the beauties of nature and be made whole again. We need to seek some place where the wild flowers nod and smile in their beauty and the green leaves beckon as if saying, "Come and find peace."

We need to seek the companionship of nature more often—we need the songs of the birds to cheer the heart, and we need to make friends with the fascinating wild creatures of fields and woods. They can lighten the heart and steal away the dull cares that enshroud the human soul.

When we seek such a place to find peace and solace, we should lock the door against the intrusion of all worry and fretting. These must be left behind—locked out securely. Let the mind and soul surrender to the lure of the world of green, summer beauty. There is a peace in summer woods not to be found anywhere else. There is a something that calms the restless spirit of man and brings relaxation. There is peace and there is rest in the green cloisters of the forest, under the canopy of leafy trees, where the winds whisper litanies and the sounds of the forest steal into the heart and bring healing and solace. There is a pure delight in being alone with nature for a time, in some quiet retreat which has not been despoiled by the woodman's saw or the crashing of the bulldozer.

Many such places have been wiped out today and we must try to save all the scenic spots we can and set them aside as preserves for wildlife, for birds, for wild flowers... and for the healing of the human spirit. We have insulted nature too much, ravished her beauty, despoiled her scenery, and it is high time we turned about and made friends with her. Nature can and will go on without man, but man cannot go on without nature.

One should always go quietly through the forest, and with love in the heart for everything, and a sense of reverence for all wild things. One should let the mind and soul have free reign and become immersed in the beauty of the summer green; the soul will be washed clean of all worldly cares. When the human heart grows tired of 'being too much in the hectic rush of things," the best way to find healing, peace of mind and rest is to steal away to some woodland sanctuary and just relax and let nature do the healing. "There is a pleasure in the pathless woods," wrote Byron.

The earth, all dressed up in the green finery of summer, is nature's book of the outdoors, whose pages are illustrated in glorious ink of green. The hills that shoulder to the sky, the wide, green valley lying in peace serene, all wear a lush, green mantle; the trees are all dressed up now in sparkling gowns that have a sheen in the bright sun.

State Park Beaches Open Till Labor Day, Comm. Fox Announces

Public bathing beaches at 15 Kentucky State Parks officially opened last Saturday. Lifeguards will be on duty daily through Labor Day, according to Parks Commissioner Edward V. Fox.

Hours of duty for lifeguards will be set at individual parks and their schedules posted, Fox said.

Fox also reminded the public that food and beverages are not allowed on the beaches. Observance by the public of this regulation, Fox said, "will help solve our beach littering problem."

State parks with public bathing beaches are: Jenny Wiley, here; John James Audubon at Henderson; Buckhorn Lake at Buckhorn; Carter Caves at Olive Hill; Falmouth Lake at Falmouth; Greenbo Village at Gilbertsville; Lake Malone at Greenville; Pennyville Forest near Dawson Springs; Port Bonesborough near Richmond; General Butler at Carrollton; Cumberland Falls near Corbin; General Burnside at Lake at Greenup; Kentucky Dam of Rough.

Use of the public beach and bathing areas is free, but there is a 25-cent charge for checking each basket of clothes, Fox said.

Special Education Pupils Honored

Pupils in the Martin Special Education Class for Educables enjoyed a picnic, May 30, with Mrs. Paul Salyers and the teacher as hostesses. Earlier in the day, the class honor awards were presented in the auditorium before a large number of the student body. Cindy ReCTOR won the prize as the outstanding girl student, and was presented a doll. Eddie Sexton was given a pen-pencil set for being the most distinguished boy in the class.

Along with the junior high school, pupils from the special class viewed slides of the Holy Land, Lisbon, Rome, London, Athens and Corinth, shown and narrated by Mrs. Robert Coit, of Meridian, Miss., who toured these countries and cities last year. Mrs. Coit is former assistant city school superintendent in Meridian and for years was in charge of the special education program in that city. She and her husband spent a week recently with her cousin, Mrs. E. R. May, and Mr. May, of Warco.

The class again thanks the many individuals and groups who have done so much for them in recent months. Special mention is made of Mrs. Otha Hopkins and her seventh graders who have greatly added to the happiness and achievement of Eddie Sexton.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

MEASURED MILES

In a project of gathering material and writing a series of articles on "Traditional Aspects of the One-roomed School" for the KENTUCKY FOLKLORE RECORD, I have had occasion to ask about the size of school districts in our end of the state. It came as no great surprise that the one-roomed schools were rarely more than four or five miles apart, on an air line. With modern roads and with transportation, this seems very, very small for a school or any other unit.

Most of the old-timers whom I have talked to said that the school district was measured by short legs, for school children, as a class are and were small and had to contend, morning and afternoon, with whatever miles there were between home and school. It has been hard for me to explain this to the younger generation, who have grown up since everybody owned a car, and former distances seem ridiculous.

Occasionally I have found some old-timer who had walked more than three miles to school, but even these oldsters also recalled how that long daily round trip did not interfere with the usual games of Wolf Over the River or Hare and Hounds. However, most old-timers admitted that they, personally, did not walk very far and usually had known short cuts through the woods or across fields that saved many steps.

Thinking about the daily walk got me to thinking also about walking in general. Many a man who had walked behind a plow from sunup till sundown would not have dreamed of walking three miles in any season, just to be walking or on serious business. We used to say, and there was a lot of truth in it, that some of our neighbors would go out to the pasture and chase a horse for a couple of miles trying to catch him to ride to Sulphur Springs Church, a half mile to a mile away. But riding even an ornery horse gave some style to its owner and rider; and if the horse was hitched to a buggy, that added local dignity.

Not long after the turn of the century I got the reputation in my home neighborhood of being queer or maybe "slightly off" because I would walk miles and miles, just to be walking. In this way I visited places that no other member of my family had ever seen, creeks and hills and springs and extensive woods. But I must make a strange confession: though I lived for two school years within four miles of Cayce, Ky., the home of John Luther "Casey" Jones, I never walked that distance and knew Cayce only as it appeared from the train. I did borrow a mule one Saturday and rode to a teachers' association on the other side of Hickman county, where I was teaching. Long since I have been an old man, I have wondered at this left-over fear of walking that even I, a fanatical walker later, still had.

At Sulphur Springs and other country churches we expected all but the very strangest people to ride or drive to church. I cannot recall this incident, but an older brother used to tell of seeing six different families coming to our church in wide-tired log wagons. Some of these families could have walked to church in the time they had to take to round up the horses and hitch them to the wagons. But the arrival of a two-horse rig from "up the creek," with Papa and Mama in the buggy, and with Big Brother and Little Brother riding young horses just behind the carriage, somehow set a pattern that all respected and most wanted to follow. "Thou shalt not covet," said the preacher, but even he should have known how envious were many of the congregation who did not have such a display of worldliness. But nobody envied the families, not enough to tell, at least, who came on foot, leaving the tired horses at home to recuperate for the next day's plowing. Considerably more than a century ago Thoreau said that man had invented a wheel and had lost the use of his legs; I wonder what he would say today?

Community Colleges Praised by Writers In Detroit, Cincinnati

The University of Kentucky's Community College system has won praise from a visiting education writer, Harry Salsinger, of the Detroit News, president of the Education Writers Association of America.

Salsinger, guest of the UK Alumni Association at its recent editors' conference, compared the University System with the one in Michigan.

"No Kentucky county," he wrote in the Detroit News, "need find itself in the position of Detroit and Wayne county of having to coax and cajole voters into approving new taxes for a community college."

He pointed to the Kentucky system's close ties with the Lexington campus and the new academic plan which makes credit transfer easier.

Brady Black, editor of The Cincinnati Enquirer and also a guest of the alumni, commented on the University's "impressive changing from a regional university to one with national and international interests."

In a Sunday column, the Cincinnati editor, a former resident of Ashland, also pointed to the lack of demonstrations of the type which have marked student activity at Berkeley, Yale and other institutions. Those riots and near-riots, he said, were discussed with student leaders in a two-hour conference with no faculty members present.

Evangelism In Depth

By REV. DAN HEINTZELMAN

More and more people are beginning to hear about Evangelism in Depth and are asking, "What is it?"

Simply, it is an effort at concentrated, coordinated evangelism that includes virtually all evangelical groups in Eastern Kentucky. The basic emphasis is upon the local church and its people, but each local church cooperates with the other churches of its community to make a simultaneous evangelistic impact. No church surrenders its doctrines or distinctives, yet each helps to make an united impact for evangelism.

The Evangelism in Depth program will be carried on for slightly over a year and will include almost every type of evangelistic effort that has been used in the past. The new thing about EID is the way in which so many different approaches to evangelism are tied in one package, and, above all, the way in which all these efforts will cut across traditional church lines.

The program of EID in Eastern Kentucky will be the first of its kind ever tried in North America. The concept of Evangelism in Depth was developed in Latin America and has been used to bring nationwide revivals in some areas there. It could well be that what is done here could be a pattern for our nation to bring revival in our time.

HOW COME ELECTRIC RATES KEEP GOING DOWN?

We've got a system!

Prices keep going up. You pay more for food—more for clothing—more for almost everything. Yet the price of electricity keeps coming down. For instance, in 1947 the average cost of one kilowatt-hour to our residential customers was 3.72¢. Today it's only 2.18¢. How come?

Our power system has a mass production answer. We're one of six investor-owned companies forming America's largest interconnected power system. That gives us the ability to mass produce power. As a matter of fact, we generate more power than any other non-governmental system in America.

Because we are a system, we can generate and transmit power more reliably and efficiently. That ability leads to constant savings. Those savings get passed on to you... keep your electric rates moving one way... down.

It's another way we serve you better electrically.

Dean Murray, Dewey Reservoir manager, U. S. Corps of Engineers (in boat), prepares to shove off with Bernard Carter, director of the Kentucky Division of Fisheries (in light cap) and George Lovill (in light jacket), of the U. S. Corps of Engineers, to release more than half a million rockfish fry in Dewey Lake. The fish were stocked recently from one end of the lake to the other to give them maximum chance of survival. Assisting in releasing the rockfish, but not shown in photo, were Charles Bowlers, assistant director of Fisheries, and Raymond Copley, of the Corps of Engineers.

PAINTSVILLE STORES AGREE TO CLOSE DOORS ON SUNDAY

(The Paintsville Herald, June 1) — Problems concerning Sunday merchandise sales appear to be headed for a peaceful settlement in Paintsville with a general agreement between city officials and store operators as to what can and can't be done.

Mayor J. B. Wells said that he had personally contacted several of the stores which had been selling merchandise on Sunday, and had obtained excellent cooperation in attempting to resolve the issue.

Both Paintsville Foodland and Paintsville Sundry Store have agreed to discontinue Sunday operations. Mayor Wells said, and Frazier's Key Market has agreed to comply with state law and not offer for sale any non-food items.

"I am most appreciative of the cooperation offered by these businessmen," Mayor Wells said today. "Without their full cooperation, nothing could have been accomplished."

The city will enforce the state law as necessary, Mayor Wells said, and will do so without any discrimination or prejudice.

Problems concerning Sunday sales have been recurrent issues in many states, including Kentucky, where general laws are on the books but have frequently been flaunted. In Lexington and Fayette county, where Sunday closing has been a major court issue, the state law now has been upheld and Sunday sales have been terminated. Practically the reverse has been true in Ashland, but the court decision there found discrimination against one store.

The issue first became a public matter here last fall, when a group of merchants asked City Council to review what they called a "growing problem" with Sunday store sales, stimulated by the threatened opening on Sunday of the G. C. Murphy store. The issue subsided somewhat after the Murphy outlet chose to open for longer hours on a week-day instead.

Since that time, the Paintsville Chamber of Commerce's merchants' committee has been active in attempting to negotiate

O. Brown (deceased), New Mexico State Teachers College; Alexander Capurso, Stanislaus State College, Turlock, Calif.; John M. Carter, Campbellsville College; Frank Dickey, University of Kentucky; Adron Deran, Morehead State University; Herman Donovan (deceased), University of Kentucky; Jack Early, Dakota Wesleyan University; John O. Winners of awards of national and international reputation include Don Whitehead, twice winner of the Pulitzer Prize, and Thomas Hunt Morgan (deceased), winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine.

Others in the UK hall include William Arthur, editor of Look Magazine; Dr. Robert Baker, dean of the graduate school at Northwestern; Harry Caudill, author and attorney; P. J. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ON THE LONE PRAIRIE
EDITOR, The Times:

From the report that I have, the big timber job in the Jenny Wiley State Park is a teen-age timber job. Adults would know better than to chop down a sapling to make room for a seedling.

It was stated that they were only cutting mature trees. It so happens that there hasn't been a mature tree on Johns Creek for 50 years. This beautification job leads me to believe that Mr. Bell spent his life on the prairie where there were no trees.
