

Hospital Is Given Group's Approval

Move Opens Later Study Of Facility

Breathitt's Order Creates Economic Development Dist.

The non-profit Highlands Hospital Corporation won approval at the Development Council's meeting in Pikeville Wednesday night of a proposed regional hospital here. The facility, planned for 150 beds, would serve Floyd, Martin and Magoffin counties. The council action was necessary before the project could be given consideration by other agencies of state and federal government. The council also approved the Model City program proposed for Pikeville and voted to seek legislation which would authorize the smaller communities.

The Big Sandy Area Development Council was designated an economic development district Dec. 10 by executive order of Gov. Edward T. Breathitt, Dr. George P. Archer, mayor of Prestonsburg and chairman of the board of directors of the Big Sandy Area Council, announced this week.

This act of the governor culminated the efforts of area citizens to establish the Big Sandy Area Council as a legal corporate body which will be empowered to develop and execute programs and projects of area significance.

The council's board of directors is composed of the county judges, or their representatives, of Pike, Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, and Johnson counties along with one mayor from each county and nine local citizens. All counties have equal representation except Martin, the county with the least population.

According to Mayor Archer, this marks the first concentrated effort of elected officials and citizens really to work together to attack developmental problems on an area-wide basis. The activities of the board of directors and the council will be to develop a comprehensive development plan. (See Story No. 4, Page 8)

VISTA Workers Out in Kentucky

There will be no more VISTA workers in Kentucky, and the Appalachian Volunteers working in this area will be local people.

So said Harry T. Eastburn, Paintsville, director of the Big Sandy Community Action Program, at a meeting at the courthouse here Monday evening of the Floyd County Development Association.

Mr. Eastburn declared against further acceptance of people being sent into the area from Chicago, the East and other parts of the country for the purpose of "trying to tell our people how to live."

Some members openly expressed their pleasure at hearing the statement.

The giant Floyd county Comprehensive Health program came in for discussion, and it was emphasized that it will be what its name implies — comprehensive, all-inclusive in the area of health problems faced by the poor.

John Milton Stumbo, chairman of both the CAP committee and the Floyd Development Association, explained, at the meeting and subsequently to The Times,

This Town . . . That World

The sun did shine brightly (brightly?) on our old Kentucky home, morning after the inauguration. And one Democrat I met seemed surprised.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

On Inauguration Day itself rain fell and the sun shone on the just and the unjust, the winner and the loser, the awake and the ins who came to a wake, and the ins and the outs. It was a grand day.

I wasn't there, and can't report the matter for myself, but I've read the papers closely, and I want to know about one forgotten man . . . Where was Henry Ward?

REPORTS

The most "untoward" incidents reported to this column concerned a hassle between Lenna Moore and Brad Boyd at the first toll station on their way to the Inauguration—possibly about who would pay the toll; and the other was that rooster fight that broke out under and around the grandstand as Governor Nunn was concluding his speech.

YES, IT'S THAT SEASON

Even if I hadn't consulted the calendar and found that it's only 11 days till . . . I would have known Christmas is near. The street lighting here is beautiful, almost every home reflects the care folks have taken to add the Christmas touch to their own environs. There's an intangible something that's growing. And just now a bomb, no less, went off with a roar that shook my dentures.

POST GUARD ON SALYERS

Wounded Floyd Man Charged with Murder In Death of Spouse

Homer Salyers, 47, former Wayland miner and resident of Dema, is under 24-hour guard at Springfield (O.) hospital where he is recovering from a bullet wound incurred in a fight with his wife which ended in the woman's death.

Lt. John Seiter, of the Clark county sheriff's office, said he has filed a first degree murder charge against Salyers in the death of the woman but that the warrant will not be served on the former Floyd coumian until he is ready to leave the hospital.

The marital tragedy was first learned when Salyers drove to the home of his sister, Mrs. Paul Severt, Route 1, South Charleston, Ohio, and fell against the door, moaning, "I'm shot." Members of the family later went to the (See Story No. 8, Page 3)

SCHOOL BUS, CAR COLIDE

Paris Woman Hurt, McDowell Hi Pupils, Driver Escape Injury

A Floyd county school bus transporting members of the McDowell high school band to Frankfort for the inauguration of Governor Nunn and Lieutenant Governor Ford figured in a collision with an auto, early Tuesday morning, in which a Paris, Ky. woman was injured and her car reduced to wreckage.

The accident occurred when the school bus, driven by Teddie Frasure, backed into a service station area at the junction of the Cynthiana and Georgetown roads to turn. Frasure said the woman driver of the auto, Miss Winifred Ann Dutton, 20, ran a stop sign and hit the bus as it pulled onto the highway. The car slid under the bus.

Deputy Sheriff Fred Boling was quoted as saying the bus pulled in front of the Dutton car.

None of the 35 passengers on the bus was hurt. Miss Dutton, who suffered severe facial lacerations, was taken to St. Joseph hospital, Lexington, for treatment.

Tough Ruling Hits Area Strip Mining

Pike county was perhaps hardest hit, but strip-mining operations in this county, Knott, Perry and Letcher were also sharply curtailed by Tuesday's new and tougher regulation of the industry which Governor Breathitt put into effect in last hours of his administration.

Breathitt said he was making the regulation effective immediately because of the finding of the Reclamation Commission "that an imminent peril to the welfare of the citizens of this commonwealth is created when spoil material is stacked on steep slopes, especially during the coming heavy winter rains and snowfall."

Commissioner Chairman J. O. Matlick, who also is head of the state Department of Natural Resources, said about half a dozen strip-mining operations in Eastern Kentucky would be ordered halted immediately as a result of the new regulation.

The regulation adopted will prohibit strip-mining of any

JAIL COUPLE IN RUM CASE

Husband Is Booked On 4 Counts After Raid Last Thursday

Harold Hurley, who was arrested last Thursday when whiskey was found in his possession, was booked here on four counts, and his wife, Frances, on one.

Hurley was charged with the sale of intoxicants, possession, breach of the peace and gambling. His wife was accused of possession.

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis said he and ABC Agent C. A. Flanery confiscated four pints of intoxicants from Hurley at a service station, then in a search of the Hurley home on Coldwater, near Harold, found 39 pints.

Others booked within the week:

Noah Adkins, arrested by State Trooper Herron on a drunk driving charge, fined $100 and costs by Magistrate Dewey Roberts, also $2 and costs on a no operator's license count; David E. Hunter, arrested by Troopers Ray and Stambaugh for permitting an unlicensed driver to operate his car, $10 fine and costs by Magistrate Roberts; James Eugene Akers, drunk driving, arrested by Ray and Stambaugh, fined $100 and costs by Roberts, plus $5 and costs for driving without a license; Lawrence Brown, worthless check, arrested by Deputy Sheriff Silas Derosssett; Darrell Yates, hunting without license, arrested by Conservation Officer Don Meade, fined $15 and costs by County Judge Henry Stumbo.

Nunn Inaugurated In Colorful Rites

Two Policemen Here Take Private Jobs

Two changes in the Prestonsburg police department have been made in recent weeks as the result of resignations. Lonnie Herald, of Emma, was named to succeed Bill Booth, who resigned to enter the employment of the U. S. Shoe Company, and Girvin Waddle, of the Abbott road, fills the vacancy created by the resignation of Sam Hale. Mr. Hale accepted employment with Princess Coals at David.

High School Glee Club To Appear in Concert

The Prestonsburg high school glee club will appear in its annual concert Sunday at 3 p.m., at the high school luncheon, presenting a program of carols, both traditional and modern. The program will be climaxed with the singing of Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

Former members of the glee club are invited to sing the "Hallelujah Chorus" with the choir. Misses Patricia Flannery and Lou Goble will be the piano accompanists, and Mrs. Carlos H. Haywood will be director. The concert is free to the public.

Gov. Nunn, in his inaugural address, declared, "It need not be true" that the next four years will see a state government divided against itself.

"It will not be true if each of us who is charged with public responsibility keeps firmly in his mind that there is a common touchstone . . . where all Kentuckians may assemble without division . . . the altar of common good," he said.

Nunn offered a firm "hand of friendship . . . in good faith and in good will to all who will accept it," promising to appeal to the people to judge "if it is rejected for selfish reasons."

"I shall not indulge in, nor shall I permit, partisan politics to impede the programs and the progress that we shall undertake," he promised.

It was outgoing Gov. Edward T. Breathitt who set the bipartisan, cooperative tone of the affair in his valedictory: "Only one who has stood where he (Nunn) stands today . . . can be fully aware of the burdens which he will carry or the responsibilities which he will assume.

"In his efforts . . . he deserves a fair chance and a (See Story No. 2, Page 8)

Courthouse To Cost $15,000 Posed Problem, Back in '82

At this season of the year, 85 years ago, a red-hot issue was developing in Floyd county — namely, the question of building a new courthouse and jail.

An acre of land for a new courthouse and jail was available — a tract "lying in the southeast corner of the field just back of where H. H. Fitzpatrick lives . . . just below the Harris coal bank" — and its cost was only $150. And the cost of both courthouse and jail was limited to $15,000.

But four of the 24 magistrates which the county then had voted to repair the old facility on Front street and not plunge into such an outlay of funds for a new building. Voting for repair of the then-standing county building were W. M. Clark, Lindsey Clark, John B. Martin and John W. Osborn. Casting their vote for a new building were J. J. Vaughan, Hugh Marshall, A. J. Miller, W. J. Snipes, John Hackworth, Alfred Pitts, H. W. Haywood, James Banks, A. J. Moore, L. B. Perry, Aoy P. Cline, J. P. Mead, Samuel A. Patton, A. J. Coburn, Newton Stone, W. J. Bates, W. R. Hall, Wilburn Hall, Hogan Hamilton and A. J. Yates.

(The ins and outs of the job are recorded in old county court records which Edgar P. Stephens, of Prestonsburg, has been delving into during recent weeks.)

The project moved ahead till it was ordered on Nov. 17, 1882 that a "skilful architect" be employed, plans and specifications adopted, and the project advertised in The Kentucky Democrat and by posting notices at the front door of the existing courthouse.

The same order authorized County Judge David Stephens to petition the next session of the General Assembly to enact a law which would permit the county court to issue county bonds to pay for the job.

Almost a year to the day later — Nov. 15, 1883 — the three commissioners appointed by the court of claims, W. H. May, Joseph E. Langley and F. A. Hopkins, filed their report, together with

FLOYD MAN IS CHARGED

In Slaying of Negro Saturday at Lexington During Restaurant Row

Festa Salisbury, 45, former resident of the Hunter section of Left Beaver Creek, was arrested early last Saturday by Lexington police after he allegedly had shot and killed Odis James Ayres, 43, Negro, in a Lexington restaurant.

The shooting took place at 12:06 a.m. Saturday in the Firehouse Restaurant at 211 East Third street and apparently culminated an argument between Salisbury and Ayres. Lexington police said Ayres and two or three other men had been drinking beer and that he and Salisbury engaged in an argument on the racial question. A police department spokesman said Salisbury "got rough" and Ayres retorted, "H---, I got a bigger man than you are," and that Salisbury then fired a shot into the left chest of the other.

Ayres died in the booth where he had been sitting.

Another version of the shooting said Salisbury had asked Ayres and another man to leave, since it was closing time, but that Ayres refused to leave, called Salisbury vile names and threatened him.

Salisbury was employed at the restaurant, it was said. He is a son of the late Bill Bryan Salisbury.

Courthouse To Cost $15,000 Posed Problem, Back in '82

A contract and bond executed by S. R. Marrs to build the jail and jailer's residence for $4,700. Dr. A. H. Stewart filed a petition opposing this transaction but was overruled. County Attorney W. S. Harkins appealed to circuit court from the action.

But plans moved ahead. Then the court directed that the original petition to the General Assembly asking that the county be permitted to issue bonds be amended so as to direct the General Assembly to enact legislation authorizing the county court to levy a direct tax to pay for the buildings.

The next entry, dated March 13, 1884 records the acceptance of the jail and jailer's residence for the county, and noted that Jailer James S. Layne might move in.

This was followed on Nov. 13 by an order fixing a levy of 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation to pay off a balance of $2,145.65 and interest due the builder of the jail and jailer's residence.

A year later, the court ordered what apparently was an additional 25 cents per $100 valuation for the courthouse. But on the same date the court directed that the General Assembly be petitioned to pass an act at its next session authorizing the court to levy an ad valorem tax of not more than $1 per each $100 worth of taxable property, funds thus realized to pay for erecting a courthouse and clerks' office.

What happened next is not clear. The records available do not show who contracted to build the courthouse itself, or for how much. But the work was done. Bricks were baked from clay taken from a branch which ran down what is now Court street, in front of the courthouse site. The late W. J. "Squire" Vaughan, one of those who worked on the structure, often recalled the work (See Story No. 6, Page 8)

MAN JAILED IN FORGERY

Second Visit to Store Here Ends in Capture This Week by Police

A man held in jail here on a forgery charge was captured Monday because, police said, he returned to the scene of an earlier crime.

The prisoner, who gave his name as Joe M. Rowe, then later admitted he is Jimmy Hammonds, is accused of the forgery of a $99 check on the Joseph Lumber Company, Salyersville, which he cashed last August at the IGA Store here.

When he returned to the store Monday, this time tendering a $66.66 check on a Columbus, O. firm for cash, the store manager called police, meanwhile refusing the man an exit.

Policemen Ray Click and Woodrow Lafferty said another man fled in an automobile when they were jailing Rowe, or Hammonds.

Six persons were convicted in police court Monday. Names of defendants, charges on which they were convicted and penalties imposed follow: (See Story No. 3, Page 8)

Credit NYC's with Lights, Decorations in Use Here, City Manager Clark Says

If you have admired Prestonsburg's colorful street lighting and decorations for this Christmas season, City Manager Curtis Clark says you should give credit to a group of National Youth Corps boys.

A new lantern-type light is one of the features of the yule scene here, and it has evoked considerable comment. These lights may be purchased from the manufacturer, or his distributor, for $89 each. Ten of these were erected.

The lot of them cost the city of Prestonsburg less than $90, Clark said. The NYC boys themselves made the lights, erected the community Christmas tree at the city parking lot, opposite the courthouse, and did the complete street-decoration job throughout the business district.

Commenting on the ingenuity and industry of the boys when given proper supervision, Clark explained that most of the youths have dropped out of school. But since they began NYC work, 30

State Ends Its Control Of 2nd Dock

Jenny Wiley Shop Near Dock Excluded From Private Lease

It was learned here this week that the state's Department of Parks has leased to Paul Martin, of Prestonsburg, its Jenny Wiley State Park boat dock.

The lease went into effect in the closing days of the Breathitt administration, and Martin has assumed charge of the installation.

Some resentment of the lease arrangement was expressed by Republicans and some other opponents of the late Democratic administration.

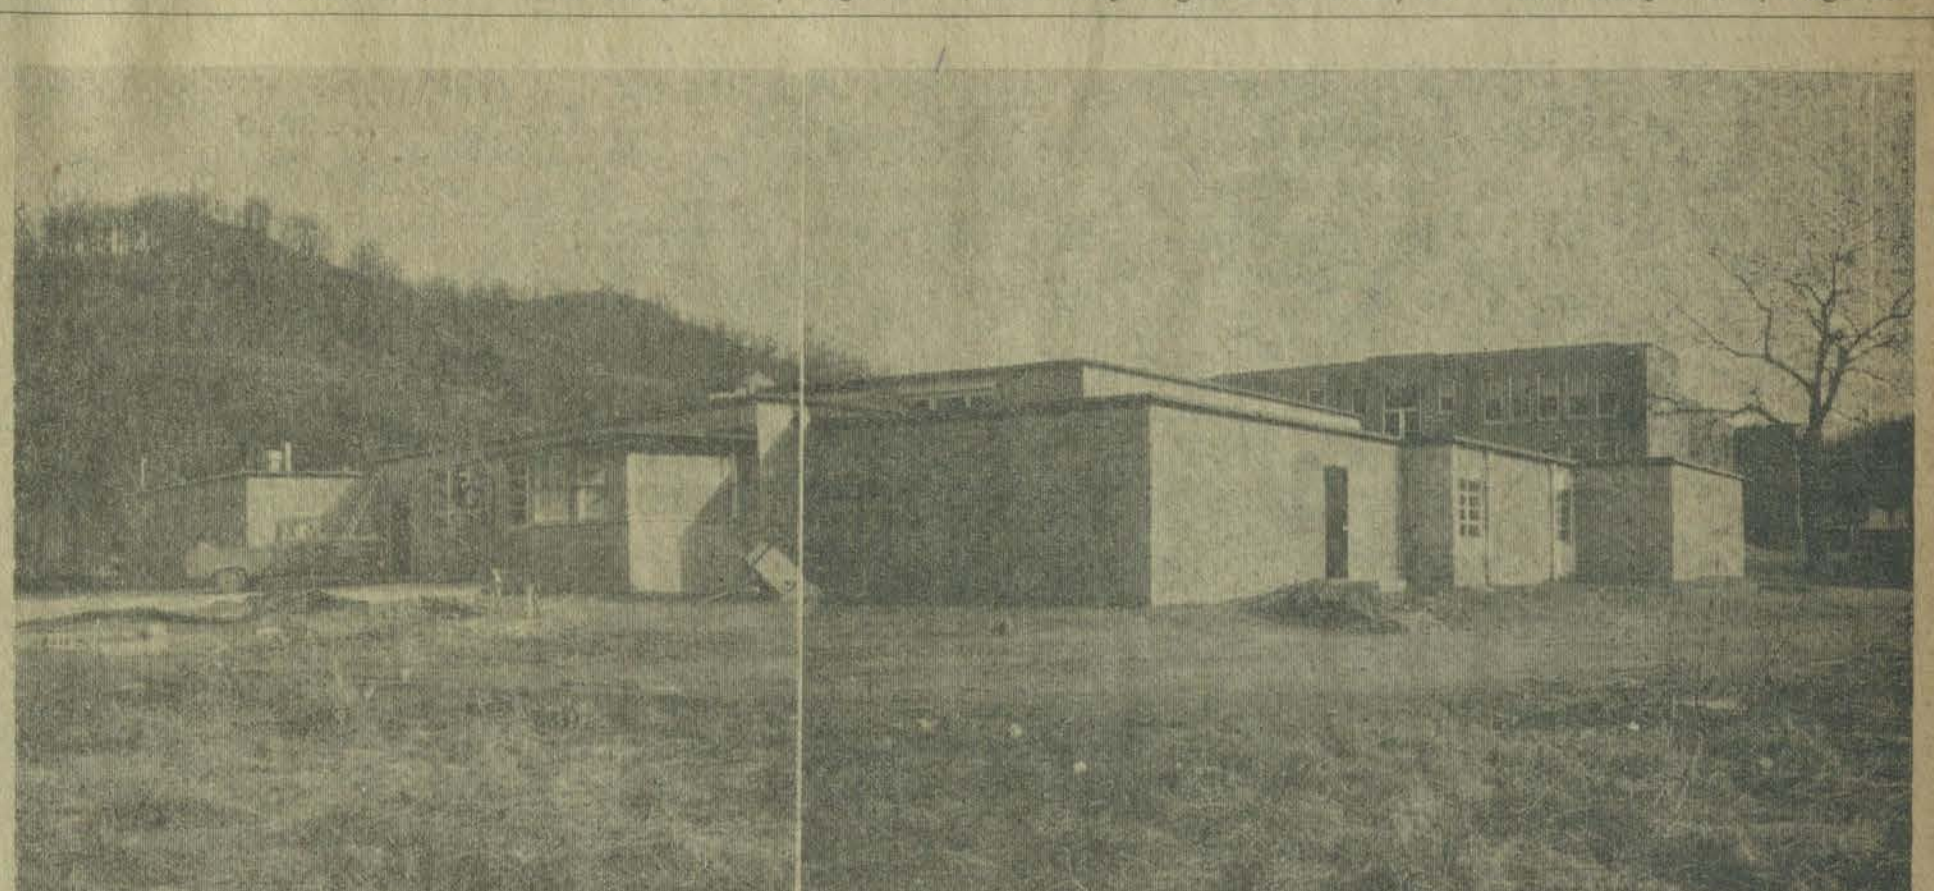

According to terms of the lease, Martin will pay the state 12 percent of the gross on gasoline sales, boat and motor rentals and open boat slips. It was said that he will pay 50 percent of the gross rental of covered boat slips.

The lease does not include the souvenir shop overlooking the dock.

It is expected that the state will offer its boats and motors for sale at auction.

The lease will place operation of the dock under a system similar to that of the Chandler administration when Wayne Stumbo had the facility under lease. When Bert Combs became governor Stumbo surrendered his lease. An attempt to break the lease held by Hene Terry on the second dock on Dewey Lake failed. Terry continues to operate his dock in the vicinity of Hager Gap, a short distance up the lake from Dewey Dam.

The report received here said that the leasing of three state-owned docks was considered by the Department of Parks and Gov. Breathitt, but it is not known here if leases were executed on the other two.

THE NEW GOVERNOR GETS A "HOT POTATO"

One of the last acts of the Breathitt administration was to put into effect tougher rules affecting the strip-mine industry, and there will be some criticism of the action on the grounds that it was politically motivated.

These critics will recall that a group representative of a sizeable portion of the small-mine industry openly opposed Henry Ward in the gubernatorial campaign and announced that it would, in effect, tax itself on a per ton basis to raise funds against him. At the same time, Ward pointed out that his Republican opponent, Louie B. Nunn, had failed to take a firm stand in favor of strict strip-mine controls.

Others fail to see the heavy hand of politics in the action taken this week. Governor Breathitt had already taken a strong stand on strip-mining and had drawn down on his head the ire of the operators. The order to restrict strip-mining to slopes no steeper than 28 degrees followed a legal hearing, and may have been made at this late date because Breathitt feared his successor would not face up to the urgent issue immediately. So they argue.

If the Breathitt action is to be construed as political retaliation, those who see political motivation behind every official act, or every failure to act, will be watching the stand taken on strip-mining by Governor Nunn in the months ahead.

WHO HAS THE ANSWERS?

There is a growing feeling that the American people have failed, generally speaking, to arrive at a fixed conclusion about foreign policy, the war in Vietnam and the possibility of an escalation of hostilities because their minds are concerned with something which they are ill-equipped to meet, head-on—namely, nuclear warfare, which hovers over the situation.

The rank-and-file among us know as much about The Bomb, although we have read about it, beheld pictures of its awesome force and even shuddered at it, as the child who has seen the match burn but whose finger has never touched the flame.

We belong to the masses who do not know the answers. But of one thing we are certain:

If we are going after this thing with all our might, we should call it war, officially declare it war—then dare any and all to burn their draft cards, and begin throwing up a few barb-wire enclosures to hold those who brazenly attack their government and call for its overthrow.

'WHATSOEVER THINGS'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Here's a figure that some of us will be interested in for the simple reason that many of us are interested in figures. The Internal Revenue Service (everybody knows them!) recently reported that 596 people can be classified in the category of millionaires in the United States. The IRS said that was the number of Americans who showed adjusted gross incomes of $1 million or more on their 1965 income tax returns. This figure compares with 492 millionaires in 1964. That's a gain of 114 over a one-year period, or an increase of nearly 25 percent.

Here's another figure that many will be interested in because most of us are included in this figure. The Treasury Department says that our total outstanding debt—federal, state, local, corporate, and individual—in the United States as of December 31, 1966 was $1,529,700,000,000. That's trillion, my friend, not billion! Our total debt increased $99.1 billion last year. And Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler says that the debt level will continue to rise!

Those are some terrific figures and it would do us well to study them for a while. We are living in a day and age, you see, when terrific figures are becoming a standard part of our society. We talk about millions and billions and even trillions now without hardly a wink of the eye. It is common place.

There is another story that I wish to share with you. It is a story about a $35 million Titan 3 rocket that was scheduled to blast off down at Cape Kennedy. The count stopped on the rocket and its firing was postponed with just one second left on the countdown. The reason the rocket did not fire makes the story important. It was not fired because of trouble in a valve. The cost of the valve was about $150. That $150 doesn't seem like much when compared to the total cost of $35 million but it was important enough to stop the rocket from being fired.

We humans need to remember that story. There was a Grand Man who walked the shores of the Sea of Galilee once who taught that little people, like little valves, are important. Fact about the business is that He made no distinction between the little man and the big man. To Him all men were important. It is hard to remember that in this day and age when big men run big governments, big farms, and big businesses. It is hard to remember that even a little baby born to a couple in poverty is important. You know what they did with most babies in Rome before He came along? They threw them in the sewer. But not after His influence touched them! He always makes little people important.

To the Carpenter, everybody was somebody. It would be a better world if we would learn to treat people, even little people, like somebody. You see, that's one reason He came into the world—to get us to treat everybody like somebody!

There's Something Rotten—And This Ain't Denmark

(The following, which might be termed "The Taxpayer's Lament" has made the rounds from one publication to the other, and now it turns up here.)

Hey, Uncle, how much does it cost to rear a child? You allow us taxpaying parents only $600 a year to feed, clothe, house and train a youngster. In your Federal Job Corps you spend $7,000 a year! This is quite a difference!

Now, which is the correct figure? Either we're allowing too much or you're not allowing us enough. You allow taxpaying parents a $600 deduction for the care and feeding of each child. . . .

Yet under the Cuban refugee program you assume minimum upkeep required $1,200 a year—and if the Cuban boy or girl is attending school—an extra $1,000 a year.

How come you short change the home folks? In the austere environs of a Federal prison you have discovered that it costs—to maintain one person, with no frills, no luxuries, and no borrowing Dad's car—$2,300 a year.

By what rule of thumb do you estimate that Mom and Dad can do it for one-fourth that amount?

Under Social Security you pay $168 a month to maintain the elderly. What makes you think we can maintain our young'uns on $50 a month?

And, Uncle, your VISTA program (Volunteers in Service to America) spent $3.1 million last year to train only 202 trainees. That indicates that the cost of maintaining and training one youth for one year is more than $15,000.

Then how come we taxpaying parents get an exemption of only $600 to maintain and train one youth for the year?

Or let's see how much you spent upkeeping one youngster in military uniform. House, $55.10 a month Food, $30.27 a month. Clothing upkeep, $4.20 a month. That comes to $1,074.84 a year. Are they not cheaper by the dozen?

How in the world do you expect parents to provide all these things, plus clothes, recreation, books, medicine—for $600 a year? With your figures you admit it can't be done.

Is it possible, Uncle, that you expect us parents to manage more efficiently than you, because we usually do.

With all our expenses, we American individuals have more than enough savings to offset our debts; you don't.

With all our prosperity, you, Uncle, are still spending per year, $2.9 billion more for relief than during the depths of the depression. So it may be that you are uncommonly extravagant.

But how ever we try to rationalize and explain you, it is still a hurtful affront when you allow us hard working dues-paying home folks only $600 a year to rear a legitimate child—while you under ADC, will pay more than $800 a year to upkeep an illegitimate one. There's something rotten here—and we're not in Denmark.

(Editor's note: Almost at the same time the foregoing letter was being received by The Times, the following, written by a Prestonsburg woman, was received.)

EDITOR, The Times:

There are lots of Floyd county boys in service, and a lot in Vietnam. Most important of all, they need prayer. If you know a boy in service, please send him a Christmas card. It's the least we can do, and it costs so little. Let's show them we care—as Christians, first, and as Americans.

9-POUND RED

J. H. Keenon, of Prestonsburg, who is no mean fisherman at home—when he fishes—does well away from home, too. He landed this 9-pound redfish recently from Pier Kahiki, South Shore, Fla. Mrs. Keenon also caught her share of the fish during their two-week stay.

NATURE TRAILS

By Rufus M. Reed

Can we save our national bird from extinction? Many leading authorities believe it is too late. Our bird of majesty is about to go the way of the passenger pigeons. In the entire United States today there are only about 1,500 of these big birds of prey left.

If the bald eagle goes, what bird could fill its place? None! On June 20, 1782, the bald eagle was adopted as our national bird. It is a symbol of the nation's power and majesty. In flight it is the most magnificent bird of all. When flying it holds its neck and head with the golden bill straight out and its great wings with a seven-foot span are held in horizontal position; the yellow legs are extended back, the white tail spread out like a fan, the bird soars high above valleys and mountains; it is the monarch of all it surveys.

There are various causes for the bald eagle's slow but sure decline over the past. The bird has a low potential of reproduction, as the female lays only two white eggs at each nesting per year; of recent years, the eggs have been found infertile. It is believed the cause can be traced directly to eating fish contaminated with DDT. This highly toxic pesticide concentrates its potency in streams and keeps building up in aquatic life forms. The eagle's main diet consists of fish; eating dead fish is causing its slow but sure destruction. Too many of our streams are polluted with dangerous chemicals from wholesale spraying with highly toxic pesticides.

It is also reported some hunters and maybe a few farmers have shot large numbers of the bald eagle. Perhaps some men shoot them just for the thrill of bringing down such a magnificent bird of prey. What sport is there in destroying the life of such a majestic bird?

There will soon be few of them to poison or to shoot. When any species of birds begins the downward trend it is most difficult to stop it. The bird just seems to keep right on declining until it gradually becomes extinct.

Like the screech owls, bald eagles mate for life and become greatly devoted to each other. If one mate is shot or poisoned, the other pines its life away and there is no more reproduction. Bald eagles usually build their nests in trees, and sometimes in crevices of high cliffs. They use the same nest year after year and keep on repairing the structure, adding new materials until the nest may weigh a ton or more.

The bald eagle is also called the "American Eagle," its picture appears on the 25-cent piece. It is also sometimes called, "the white-headed eagle."

The immature bald eagles do not have the white head and tail until they are about three years old. They are sometimes mistaken for golden eagles and are shot.

Bald eagles do little if any harm to man. Besides a diet of fish, the bird catches rabbits, mice, squirrels and sometimes snakes. There have been reports from persons of seeing bald eagles carrying a snake in their claws, perhaps to feed their young.

The bald eagle makes loud, cacking sounds and sometimes breaks forth with a shrill scream like that of the red-tailed hawk.

It seems our birds of prey are fast diminishing; they seem wholly unable to meet the challenge of a rapidly changing environment and the encroachment of man on their domain. The turkey buzzards are almost gone now; our hawks and owls are growing scarcer year by year. Our polluted streams no longer abound with fish as in former times, so birds like bald eagles and ospreys are having a hard time of it. When they do make a meal of fish, they are likely to get poisoned or else get enough poison in their bodies to make their eggs sterile.

The commission declined unanimously to approve a third proposed regulation that would have set new standards for service roads into areas undergoing strip-mining. At a public hearing on the three proposals last week, representatives of mine operators complained that some provisions of the road proposal were unnecessarily restrictive.

The vote on the two regulations that were adopted was 2 to 1, with Matlick and Reclamation Division Director Elmore Grim in favor.

The third member of the commission, Ambrose H. Mandt, who is also commissioner of the Department of Mines and Minerals, voted against all of the regulations.

Mandt explained his dissent in a statement in which he said not enough time was allowed affected miners to study the proposals, and existing regulations "should be given a fair testing period before they are discarded."

"Furthermore," he wrote, "I feel that it would not be in the best interests of a new strip-mine regulation commission, the coal industry or the Commonwealth to be burdened with hastily passed regulations."

Opponents of the regulations complained at last Thursday's hearing that they had not received ample notice of the changes. An official of the department said the notice were mailed Nov. 27.

Breathitt, explaining his decision to sign the emergency order, said "firm but fair enforcement" of the state's nationally acclaimed 1966 strip-mine control law had serious problems remain."

Past Slides Noted

He cited studies by the U. S. Department of the Interior which he said "found no effective reclamation from strip-mining operations on slopes above 28 degrees," and he added that heavy rains at this time last year had brought some half-dozen landslides at Eastern Kentucky mining sites.

"I believe that the division's adopted amendments are sound and reasonable regulations," he said. "The coal industry will not be put out of business by these regulations, and widespread damage and destruction from strip-mining on excessively steep slopes will be eliminated."

Opponents of the regulations at last week's hearing claimed the new rules would practically eliminate strip-mining in Eastern Kentucky.

Matlick said yesterday that they were aimed at "a half-dozen of the bigger strippers that are causing the problems."

The slopes restriction was not expected to have any effect on mining operations in the rolling terrain of Western Kentucky, Breathitt said.

Breathitt's action will leave the problem of tougher regulations in the lap of his successor, Republican Gov. Louie B. Nunn.

Nunn's opponent in the Nov. 7 election, Democrat Henry Ward, charged frequently that Nunn would not firmly commit himself in favor of a tough stand on strip-mine controls.

David Schneider, an assistant attorney general assigned to the Department of Natural Resources, said the regulations probably could not be repealed by a governor's order.

But miners affected by them do have recourse by filing an appeal in circuit court, Breathitt said.

Lt. Seiter said Salyers told him that he and his wife, Violet, 42, engaged in an argument and that she suddenly pulled a .32-caliber revolver from the glove compartment of the truck and shot him in the chest. He added that he in turn snatched the weapon from her and shot her. The woman was hit in her head and abdomen.

IN MEMORY

Of our father, John Garrett, who passed away Dec. 12, 1962:

Loving Memories

Your gentle face and patient smile,
With sadness we recall.
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
The voice is mute and stilled the heart
That loved us well and true.

Ah, bitter was the trial to part
From one so good as you.
You are not forgotten, loved one,
Nor will you ever be;
As long as life and memory last
We will remember you.
We miss you now, our hearts are sore.

As time goes by we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face—
No one can fill your vacant place.

ALICE LLOYD COLLEGE SCIENCE FACILITY STUDIED

Pippa Passes, Ky.—Flexibility is the key word in describing the science building conceived at Alice Lloyd College Science Facilities Conference last week in Louisville.

"Alice Lloyd's new building will be so flexible that its faculty should be discharged for lack of imagination if they allow the laboratory to remain the same, two years in a row," said ALC science consultant Richard Sames, co-ordinator of the two-day meeting and professor of biology at Bellarmine College.

Ford Foundation's Educational Facilities Laboratory asked Alice Lloyd to sponsor the conference after the college engaged in 12 months of study to develop compatible with current science programs, but easily adaptable to the requirements of science education in the future.

Fourteen other institutions from four states participated in the conference, studying Alice Lloyd's plans, reviewing facilities developed at other colleges, exchanging ideas with architects and Ford Foundation consultants, and posing new problems to be studied.

Alice Lloyd's planning centered on the "open laboratory." Rather than a chemistry lab, or a physics lab, the new building will have only one laboratory serving all areas of science. Courses will overlap also, emphasizing particular concepts of science in which elements of chemistry, physics, and biology will be learned at the same time, thus assuring that the student will not gain a narrow education in only one discipline.

Laboratory flexibility will be achieved through the use of auxiliary units which can be wheeled to the laboratory work bench, bringing compressed air, electricity, water, pumps, or other services needed for certain experiments or demonstrations, and providing additional table space on which to work. When the student leaves the lab, he may wheel his experiment and equipment away from the bench, making room for the next student.

The laboratory is being designed by architect Jasper Ward, of Louisville. Some modification of the plans will result from conclusions of the Science Facilities Conference. Construction of the building is scheduled for next year.

More than 3 million American homes are heated electrically. The Federal Power Commission forecasts 19 million families will convert to or build electrically heated homes within just 12 years! Why?

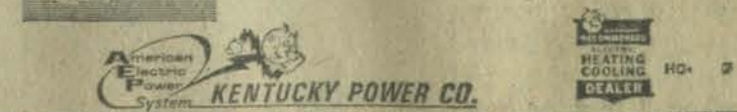

Ben Franklin's stoves sold like hotcakes because they were more efficient than an open fire. The pot bellied stove was replaced by central heating systems. Today's big home-heating trend is another vast improvement... flameless electric... because it offers such a wide choice of systems and so many more advantages that it makes other methods of heating seem clumsy and old-fashioned. More convenient, more comfortable, more versatile, electric heat gives you more for

REPORT SAYS AV's RESIGN

Action Said Protest Of Mulloy's Firing Recently by Ogle

By KYLE VANCE
(In The Courier-Journal)

Whitesburg, Ky. — Large numbers of Appalachian Volunteers (AV's) were reported Monday to be planning resignations to protest the firing of Joe Mulloy, a field representative who said he will refuse draft into the Army.

The AV's are mostly college students or recent graduates from scattered locations across the country who work with the poor in mountain areas of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

They have taken leadership in such projects as opposition to strip mining and they have sought to organize the poor in opposition to the so-called "power structure" in courthouses.

Mulloy, who was among three persons charged with sedition in Pike county, informed the Kentucky AV staff Dec. 2 that he expects draft notice soon and will refuse to serve. The staff voted, 20-1, to have him fired.

Milton Ogle, director of the AV's—financed largely with federal funds—said by telephone from Bristol, Tenn., that he has received only two resignations.

He said he had heard rumors that others were coming, or were being talked about, but that he was unwilling to react to rumors. He said he hadn't even heard the report that AV's outside of Kentucky will quit, too.

Ogle said the firing of Mulloy was a difficult decision to make.

"It wasn't unanimous of course," he said. "It was not made on the basis of support or nonsupport of Mulloy's position."

"We simply had to consider whether it was compatible with the work we were doing and the people we were working with."

"What would they think about us? I believe our people must think of realities, and I also believe that most of them will."

Prosecution of the sedition charge against Mulloy, of Louisville, and Mr. and Mrs. Al McSurely was dropped after a federal tribunal ruled Kentucky's sedition law unconstitutional. The three are fighting a subpoena of a U. S. Senate subcommittee to gain possession of material taken from their house.

Government Files Brief In Support of Charge Against Pike Attorney

The United States filed a brief last Thursday in support of its charge of civil contempt against Pikeville attorney Dan Jack Combs in U. S. district court.

The government charge stems from a certificate of good faith signed by Combs and law partner, Reed A. Anderson, when they accused Federal Judge B. T. Moynahan of bias concerning a land condemnation suit involving the Prestonsburg-Paintsville airport.

Moynahan declared property values set by a jury for land owned by Combs' clients as excessive, and Combs and Anderson charged bias. The government claims, however, that the certificate signed by Combs was insufficient.

The case will be heard by Federal Judge Mac Swinford.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

SOME INSTITUTIONS THAT HAVE PASSED

This article is No. 1700 in the long series that started on Sept. 1, 1935. In all my earliest years I recorded passing institutions, many of them of such recent date that most of the readers of the column could distinctly remember when they were still active as folkways. Thus grew up articles about the old family nag, the home-knit yarn stocking, the village blacksmith, the country doctor, the one-roomed school, the country church that held Sunday School only in the open months, dinner on the ground, sitting till bedtime, and on and on. Two books, long out of print and (am told) collectors' items, were made up of these earlier essays on passing institutions and told about an older rural life that is now gone for ever or so changed that it is hardly recognizable.

Today, when I saw the number 1700 in the upper right-hand corner of the typed page, I suddenly realized how many institutions have breathed their last or shown signs of dying since this column started. In 1935, when the series started, horses and carriages were somewhat common in my area; it was not at all unusual to have to slow down to keep from frightening a horse as we drove our cars along some of the worst roads you ever saw.

In 1935 there were hundreds of one-roomed schools scattered all over the state; today, according to our State Superintendent, there are around 300 (There were 340 in September, 1966). Long after the column started, I recall that I lectured to the teachers of a very well-to-do county and said that I somehow felt greater affection for the teacher of the small school, away out in the sticks or down in a bend of the creek, than for any other member of our profession, particularly when that teacher was young, as I was in 1907 when I tackled my first school. I still recall the pleased look on a good many faces in that big assembly of teachers. And now only one one-roomed school remains between the area known as Appalachia and the Mississippi River.

In 1935 and for long after there were passenger trains galloping, 22 of them daily at Bowling Green, for example. When I went to a meeting at Murray in 1933, where folklore societies from all over were holding a joint session, the last passenger train had fairly recently been taken off the N. C. and St. L., and a delegate from New York had to be met in Paducah and driven to Murray; at that time there was no airport at Murray or no regular service, at least. Even during World War II, when gasoline was scarce, I went here and there to commencing trains by train, usually crowded trains at that, with soldiers home on leave, with members of soldiers' families coming o'going to visit with the men in service. And now there are lots of railroad lines that have no passenger trains, and, according to the reports of the railroads, none of them still in use are paying expenses.

In 1935 I had my forty-seventh birthday a month after this series started. Now I am some months past seventy-nine. That's a pretty long time for the column and for me. In 1935 my younger child was only 10 years old; it was 1943 before I became a grandfather; and now I have had that honor five times and on one occasion I have been admitted to the next higher degree in the order—great-grandfather. In 1935 I still had 24 years to serve as the head of my department before I retired; now I have been a private citizen, of sorts, for eight years and some months extra. In other words, horses, and one-room schools, and passenger trains, and lots of other things—including me—have become passing institutions, some of us still pretty game but not quite so prominent and so perky as we were in 1935. "Labuntur anni," said Horace; and, in English, "The years roll by."

I Say What I Think

didates love to talk about on the campaign trail?

That's the situation on this front that Gov. Louie B. Nunn will face when he draws his budget for the 1968-70 biennium. It is just piling more woes upon the distraught financial situation of Kentucky and the quadrennial pledge of all gubernatorial candidates to ask for no increase in taxes.

The old "no tax increase" promise is not new to Kentucky's political scene, for it is a plague that has been pushed upon every candidate by the voting public for years. In addition to this, some have even promised tax reductions.

The University of Kentucky has asked for an additional 22 million for the next two years, and it is a foregone conclusion that all other state supported colleges at Morehead, Richmond, Frankfort and Murray are going to ask for increased budgets.

Since Western's request is about 95 percent more than two years ago, this amounts to more than $13 million additional. For the sake of generalities, assume that the others will be in proportion, for the average will be $10 to $12 million each for the five state-supported universities, or $50 to $59 million added to UK's request of about $22 million more than received two years ago.

The University's asked for $109,592,500, or $13,882,600 more than asked for two years ago and $22 million more than received.

So, the total, in round numbers for the state supported colleges and universities is going to be in the neighborhood of a request of $69 to $70 million more than two years ago.

Of course, none will get the total of its request, as none did two years ago, but the total figure is going to be up even in the grants.

Now, add to this the $90-$95 million more promised the Kentucky Education Association to finance the Minimum Foundation Program for primary and secondary schools, and you come up with $150 to $160 million more for education alone for the next biennium.

General fund income, from which this money must come, will be about $355 million this fiscal year, ending next June 30, and normal growth will add about $45 million for the next biennium. Subtract this from the education requests and in round numbers the general fund will be short $100 to $110 million of fulfilling this.

Now, don't forget the arrangement worked out by UK with the University of Louisville for including UL in the state program. The Louisville school has said that it must have more state funds. Certainly UK hasn't included this into its request, or has it?

When the state's income grows, the demand for services increases. The built-in increments for state employees under the Merit System will cost an additional $10 million a year. Can this $10 million be recouped by trimming the "fat" from the budget and firing "drones" that cannot do the job? This is the question that will be asked by the voters in the next election.

It is a foregone conclusion that the voters will demand these silly promises.

Gov. Earle C. Clements is the last in memory who campaigned on a promise to increase taxes, and this was to levy a two-cent tax on gasoline to build rural roads. The people bought this.

Gov. Simeon Willis campaigned on the promise to eliminate the state income tax, but found when he took office that it could not be done if state government were to continue to operate on its previous level of services.

Budgeteers would love to have the answer to the riddle for 1968!

These are simple things, of course, but how much they are like modern tourist traps!

For a few brief years we had an unusual attraction, the only set of triplets in my father's practice area. They were the children of a tenant on a big farm up the creek. Most of us had never seen a set of triplets before and not too many sets of twins; the older brothers of the three little girls would grab a baby apiece when somebody stopped out front and wanted to see the triplets. Many a nickel or dime passed into the hands of the accommodating brothers in this show of the three babies. But the triplets soon grew up and had rights of their own; they were just as great wonders as ever, but they might run away and hide when nosy people came along. Thus we lost one of our best entertainments for our visiting relatives and friends.

TIDBITS

Of Kentucky Folklore

WHAT WE SHOWED THE VISITORS

When I recall what we used to show our visitors, I can see how much Fidelity was like the Big World. Relatives came to see us to spend the week-end; we owed them some hearty meals and some entertainment. We did ourselves proud in both spheres.

Over beyond Fidelity was a hilltop that had as its cover a sandstone, or pudding stone, rock as big as a big house. For some reason it had acquired, long before my time, the name of Devil's Pulpit. For generations it had been a great picnicking place. On the big rock you could build a small fire and roast some potatoes or fry some bacon or, on some coals drawn away to one side, boil a pot of coffee. Meanwhile, for our part of the world, you had a wide view from the edge of the rock that looked out over Blood River Bottom. Rocks and wide views were rather rare in the flat Jackson Purchase and this added a brand-new experience to some of our visitors. Many years after I left home, a middle-aged cousin told me that our early-morning trip to Devil's Pulpit was the one thing she remembered about her visits to the home of the Wilsons.

Down to the east, toward what is now Kentucky Lake, was the tobacco factory. When the weed was being processed there, the singing of the colored women who did the stemming attracted wide attention. When we had visitors while the factory was running, we tried to include that as a memorable place to visit. In my long years of studying folklore I can think of nothing more folksy than that melodious singing.

Only a scant half mile from my home was Sulphur Springs Church and the picnicking area there. The church was for worship, the picnicking place for buying soda pop and chewing gum and ice cream. At the picnicking place there was a crude set of seats made to accommodate the annual throngs that came to the Confederate Reunion. Various other uses were made of this outdoor auditorium, such as candidate speakings, which, in those days, were as much a part of our lives as breathing. Close by were several springs, especially the one by the side of the road that was a neighborhood blessing, as it supplied water for dry cisterns, water for horses, water for wash days. Across the creek, via the footlog, was another spring, slightly sulphur, as the one by the road was iron-flavored. Springs were common enough, but not too many of them in our area were kept clean and properly "gummed." The gums were sections of hollow trees, usually sweetgum trees, set down deep in the sand, with clay rammed down to force the water to stay inside the gum and not just spill out in all directions. Many people went again and again to the springs when there was a big day, whether on week days or Sunday; in fact, it was a favorite stroll for the young couples. The scared young women could be helped by her escort along the footlog, for it had no railings to reassure you. Dare-devil kids could make the log sway and thus sicken or dismay some visiting chicken-hearted youngsters.

For a few brief years we had an unusual attraction, the only set of triplets in my father's practice area. They were the children of a tenant on a big farm up the creek. Most of us had never seen a set of triplets before and not too many sets of twins; the older brothers of the three little girls would grab a baby apiece when somebody stopped out front and wanted to see the triplets. MAKE SAFETY APART OF HOLIDAY OBSERVANCE

With the holiday season here, Dr. Russell L. Hall, of the Floyd and Martin County Health Departments, has again asked for the cooperation of everyone in making safety a part of their observance.

"Christmas is a happy and joyous occasion for all. Special precautions should be taken to help keep it that way," he said, and then offered some suggestions for family and home safety:

1. Be sure all toys and presents given to children are not capable of causing fire, explosion or electrical shock, do not have sharp edges, or do not contain poisonous materials such as lead paint.

2. Be sure toys which operate electrically have the UL (Underwriter's Laboratories, Inc.) label on them.

3. Select a Christmas tree which has been treated with a fire-resistant coating, if available. Keep water around the base of any live tree at all times while in the home.

4. Use only UL-approved electric lights and decorate with fireproofed or nonflammable materials.

5. Keep the decorated tree in the coolest area of the room, and away from registers, heaters, fireplaces and other heat sources.

6. Turn off tree lights whenever you leave the house, even if only for a short time.

7. Frequently check the needles of the tree around light bulbs—if they are brown, relocate the lights. When the needles begin to shed take the tree down and dispose of it.

compassionate judgment from every Kentuckian, regardless of party." Breathitt declared as the crowd applauded.

"To those of you who adhere to my political faith, I should urge that every proposal which he (Nunn) makes be judged by one standard and one standard alone: Is it good for Kentucky?"

Again the crowd applauded the departing governor.

Lt. Gov. Ford also touched on the harmony theme in his inaugural speech, noting that he and Nunn face "a unique and exacting challenge."

"I will do all I can to make it a comfortable relationship in which Governor Nunn has maximum opportunity to produce good results as governor," Ford pledged.

The new lieutenant governor said he has no wish "to talk on eggshells" and will not make Nunn do so. The crowd applauded his promise that Nunn can leave the state without fear that his lieutenant governor will upset things.

Ford said, however, that he reserves the "right to oppose" if differences involve matters of principle, and this is what the people should expect him to do.

"But I do not intend to be an obstructionist in any sense of the word," he added.

set priorities on jobs which are needed first and pursue all avenues to bring about all planned developments.

The December meeting of the council will be held next Monday evening at 6 o'clock at the Paintsville Country Club, it was announced by Paul Gearheart, of Harold, president of the council.

These meetings are designed to inform the leadership of the Big Sandy area of progress being made, the potential for development, and means of using state, federal and private resources to improve the area. Mr. Gearheart said any citizen of the area is encouraged to attend and participate.

A meeting of the board of directors will be held at 5 p.m. at the Country Club under the direction of Dr. Archer, chairman, to complete arrangements for requesting funds to hire professional staff members to assist the board in development programs.

on the two-story courthouse and the use of home-baked bricks. These bricks are now in two large buildings erected at Archer Park after the courthouse was levelled to provide the parking area across Third street from the present court structure.

The last entry yet found in the matter is dated April 4, 1892, and it provides that:

1. The land on which the new courthouse is erected shall be enclosed by a fence constructed of white oak planks five inches wide, one inch thick and nailed to black locust posts set 2 1/2 feet in the ground, with a six-foot gate in front of the courthouse.

2. A public privy shall be constructed on said lot, said building to be not less than eight feet high and 16 feet long, divided into three compartments and painted with three coats of paint.

DOGGONE UNHAPPY

The dog isn't happy. There's a party going on, and he apparently wasn't invited. There was a time when he went, whether invited or warned to stay away, but now he casts a yearning look and lifts his nose skyward and gives with a patented howl — which, these days, is no wolf-call. The old gentleman apparently remembers what happened to him at the last soiree he attended and has decided, maybe, it would be the better part of discretion to reform.

ONE WORD

I have just finished John Steinbeck's "Travels with Charley," which I enjoyed. The guy has a lousy brand of prose that, to me, lays in the shade most of the writers of today. I like the clarity of his style and an innate simplicity which stays him from digging into the thesaurus for those strange, little-known words on which some writers dote and satisfy their vanity. But one word he used in this interesting log of his travels about the country with his elderly dog just wasn't necessary. He spoke of a thing as "carcinomatous" when "cancerous" would have been as effective, or as horrible.

Kentuckian Heads Iowa Revenue Dept.

Frankfort, Ky.—William H. Forst, executive assistant to the Kentucky revenue commissioner, has been named to direct the new Revenue Department of the state of Iowa.

Commissioner J. E. Luckett said Forst's appointment is "a well deserved opportunity and one to challenge Forst's talent for organization and administration."

Forst rose rapidly through the ranks of the Kentucky agency, beginning as a research staff member in March, 1959. He is the second Revenue Department employee to become the head of a revenue department in another state.

His appointment was announced by Iowa Governor Harold Hughes. The department was created by the Iowa legislature to replace the State Tax Commission.

Forst's salary, Luckett said, "will be half again as much in Iowa as it has been in Kentucky, $18,000 to $24,000 a year."

Court of Appeals Rules for WHAS

The 6th U. S. District Court of Appeals last week unanimously ruled in favor of WHAS, Inc., that the station did not willfully violate a section of the Federal Communications Act.

At issue is a political broadcast during the 1963 gubernatorial primary contest between Edward T. Breathitt and A. B. Chandler. The Federal Communications Commission said the station did not comply with regulations regarding identification of the program's sponsors, and declared a forfeiture of $1,000.

WHAS appealed and its position was upheld by U. S. District Court in Louisville, and in this latest ruling by the district Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

Currently, the central campus of the University of Kentucky has parking facilities for 1,478 cars.

Ratliff Warns Against Social Security Breaches

Violations of the Social Security Act will be vigorously prosecuted, Daryl E. Ratliff, district manager of the Social Security office warned this week.

He said that an Eastern Kentucky attorney was recently convicted and fined a maximum $500 for charging an excessive fee in representing a social security claimant. The attorney was previously indicted on six counts but was brought to trial on only one count. The judgment was rendered in the U. S. District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky at Cadetsburg. Mr. Ratliff advised that it is his understanding that the attorney prior to the conviction had returned the overcharge of approximately $7,900.

Federal regulations govern the charging of fees by attorneys who represent social security claimants. These regulations were established to adequately compensate the attorney and to protect the claimant from excessive charges which take away from the benefit the measure of security designed to help the older people, the disabled, and widows and children.

Fortunately, said Ratliff most attorneys follow established procedures and where higher fees are in order because of the work involved they secure prior approval of their fees from the Social Security Administration. Ratliff urged all claimants and their representatives who are not familiar with the details of fee limitations to contact the social security office at Pikeville, Kentucky and ask for this information.

9th Community College To Open Next Month With 1,000 Enrollment

More than 900 students have applied for admission to the University of Kentucky's Jefferson Community College—double the expected number for the college's first class beginning in January. Dr. Herbert M. Jolley, college director, said Jefferson is receiving approximately 70 applications a week.

College officials expect to receive 1,000 applications by January. Jolley said "early estimates put 500 inquiries as an optimistic figure."

The Louisville college officials are discussing the possibility of Jefferson—operated jointly with the University of Louisville—opening with the largest student body in the community college system. Northern at Covington now ranks first with 1,336 students.

Other UK community colleges and their enrollments are: Ashland, 980; Elizabethtown, 610; Henderson, 503; Somerset, 475; Prestonsburg, 431; Southeast at Cumberland, 428; Ft. Knox, 425, and Hopkinsville, 408.

The tenth college in the University's community system will be Hazard's.

MAYTOWN

MRS. TALLENT, HOSTESS

The regular monthly meeting of the Maytown W.S.C.S. was held at the home of Mrs. S. J. Tallent and was the annual Christmas party. Mrs. Tallent was program leader and presented the Christmas tableau, "For This Little Time." Dianna Ousley portrayed Mary, Sherry Halbert her friend, Sarah and Rebecca Stewart played the part of Mary Magdalene. They were dressed in costumes of the time that they depicted. At appropriate times in the production, Mrs. Bonnie Spencer sang "Oh, Holy Night" and "It Is No Secret." Mrs. Spencer and Alicia Crisp sang "Star of the East." Following this tableau, Mrs. Tallent, the narrator, set the scene for the more secular side of the observance of Christmas. To conclude this portion of the program, a trio composed of Sherry Halbert, Dianna Ousley and Alicia Crisp sang a medley of "Silver Bells," "Walking in a Winter Wonderland" and "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas." The program presented the story of Christ and what His coming into the world has meant to mankind, and served to remind members of homes and Christmases they once knew.

Following the program, a short business meeting was conducted. The Christmas card money was turned over to the treasurer and plans were made for the purchase of a filing cabinet with the profits from the sale. A special Christmas offering was given by the members toward the support of the three new conference missionaries. The Society voted to fill fruit baskets for the elderly again this year.

Everyone present enjoyed a gift exchange and the Society presented a gift to Mrs. Leonard Sumner, the pastor's wife. Refreshments were served members, Mesdames Ed Stephens, Paul Spencer, Henry May, James Allen, George Patton, Fred Bishop, Edgar Herald and Leonard Sumner; and guests Mrs. Herman Halbert, Mrs. Eugene Hopkins and Lara, Alicia Crisp, Sherry Halbert, Dianna Ousley and Becky Stewart.

The January meeting will be at the home Mrs. Paul Spencer.

EFFORT BEGUN TO SAVE VIRGIN TIMBER TRACT

Whitesburg, Ky. — Prantic efforts are under way to save a remarkable tract of Letcher county timberland which remains today as nature has developed it since the Ice Age 70 million years ago. It is believed to be the last remaining such acreage in the Eastern United States, where even the fallen trees have been permitted to remain and rot, carrying out the natural process of forest development.

Adding to its value as a natural museum is the fact that in this area, in the Eastern Kentucky ridges of the Cumberland Plateau, a wider variety of timber grows than in any other region in North America.

Lilly's Wood, so named in honor of Lilly Cornett, the man who made preservation of the 600 acres possible, contains an estimated 100 species of trees. It is dominated by great walnuts, flawless white oaks, and rare virgin yellow poplar (tulip tree).

It also contains so varied a supply of wild flowers that only expert botanists can name them all.

Lilly's Wood is faced with an uncertain future. It is owned by four brothers, who are "not too well off." So far, out of respect for their late father, they have resisted tempting offers from eager timber buyers. Too, some of the mineral rights are owned by a firm that leases to coal strip miners. A 40-inch seam of coal runs through the forest.

The threat of strip mining is not one of immediate concern however. Bruce Stephens, Jr., vice-president of Kentucky River Coal Corp., said the company is committed orally to waive its surface mining rights in the forest so long as it is preserved for public inspection.

"We agree that the forest is much too valuable to destroy if it is maintained in its present state," he said. "It is a truly wonderful piece of land and ought to be taken over by the state or somebody who would guarantee its preservation forever."

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to take this means of thanking everyone who helped us upon the passing of our husband and father, J. S. Reynolds, who died Nov. 22. We especially thank those who sent food and flowers. We want to thank the Boldman Free Will Baptist Church for serving dinner on Saturday and also all ministers who took part in the services, and especially the Hall Brothers Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service.

Early 1968 To See Road Work Start

Gov. Edward T. Breathitt announced Saturday that construction will begin early next year on $58 million worth of highways that have already been let to contract. No sector of U.S. 23, in Floyd or any other county, was included in the list of projects, leaving action on this highway to the new state administration.

Breathitt said work orders have been issued on 320 miles of projects, including the paving of all the Jackson and Pennyrite Parkways.

In making the announcement, Breathitt said, he hoped to clear up the questions of numerous citizens who have inquired about the status of road projects currently planned or under construction in view of the changeover of administrations.

"It is good business and is customary," Breathitt said, "to let contracts in the fall so that contractors will have ample time to stockpile all materials for an early start the next year."

Breathitt said the $58 million in contracts are part of the overall $98 million let this year—setting an all-time high and exceeding last year by $4 million.

Breathitt listed the following major contracts in Eastern Kentucky that have been awarded in recent weeks for all types of highway work, thereby insuring completion of most of the projects by the end of next year:

Breathitt, KY 28, 1.6 miles; from Perry county line to Perry county line.

Carter, I-64, 0.9 mile from Rowan county line to one mile west of Fleming Fork road; I-64, 2.7 miles from one mile west of Fleming Fork road to 1600 feet west of Reeves Branch road; I-64, 2.5 miles from west end KY 2 interchange to 1900 feet east KY 1704.

Johnson, Prestonsburg-Dewey Dam-Inez road, 4.6 miles from KY 1107 to Martin county line.

Lawrence, KY 3, 14.9 miles from Louisa toll bridge to Martin county line.

Martin, KY 3, 9.9 miles from Lawrence county line to KY 40 at Inez; Prestonsburg-Dewey Dam-Inez road, 2.9 miles from Johnson county line to Beech Fork Creek.

Perry, KY 28, 1.6 miles from KY 1833 to Breathitt county line; KY 28, 4.8 miles from Old KY 28 at Buckhorn to Breathitt county line.

How to Thaw That Turkey

BY FRANCES H. PITTS

Don't thaw your Christmas turkey at room temperature, warns Mrs. Frances Pitts, area extension agent. Thawing a turkey in this way can result in high, and possibly dangerous, levels of bacterial growth.

The best method is let the turkey thaw in the refrigerator for two to three days or even longer, if it weighs more than 15 pounds. Or, if you don't mind tying up your sink for about 6 hours, you can thaw a turkey in its original wrapper under cold running water.

Actually, you don't need to thaw turkey products before cooking them although they'll need to be cooked longer if they are not thawed. Remember to remove the giblets, etc., from inside a whole unstuffed turkey even when you plan to cook it unthawed, Mrs. Pitts recommends.

Remember, too, that the turkey you buy already stuffed should never be thawed before it is cooked.

The best way to judge cooking time is to use a meat thermometer, she points out. When cooking an unthawed turkey, insert the thermometer after bird has thawed in the oven. In a whole turkey, put the thermometer in the thigh or breast.

State Industrial Growth Cited As 775 Industries Tell Plans For Plants

During the past four years industrial firms have made 775 announcements that they would establish new plants or expand existing ones in Kentucky.

This report comes from the Kentucky Department of Commerce, which points out that this industrial growth will create 57,000 new jobs and bring an investment of $1.25 billion in new capital in Kentucky.

The report by the Department's former commissioner, Miss Katherine Peden, says that between 1963 and 1967, the number of non-agricultural jobs in the state increased by 140,000.

Personal income of Kentuckians will total about $7.7 billion this year, a gain of $2 billion or 30 percent over 1963's income, the report says. Per capita income has risen by $550 to $2,450 a year.

The report adds that during the first eight months of this year, personal income in Kentucky was 8.2 percent ahead of last year's income for the same period.

McCreary county is the youngest of Kentucky's 120 counties, having been established in 1912. It was named for Gov. James B. McCreary.

98-Bell Carillon Louisville Bank Gift

Frankfort, Ky. — The Capitol now has a 98-bell carillon, recently presented by the Liberty National Bank and Trust Co., Louisville.

In presentation ceremonies, H. Dean Burgiss, vice-president of the bank, said he felt the carillon, formerly installed on the bank's main office building, should be placed "where it can be heard and appreciated by visitors to our Capitol."

The carillon can be played manually from a two-keyboard console system or automatically from a roll player. The bank also donated to the state its complete library of music for automatic playing.

The miniature bells in the carillon, when struck and amplified, produce the tone of huge cast bells.

WHAT INSPECTION LAW MEANS TO CAR-OWNERS

Kentucky's new motor vehicle inspection program will go into effect Jan. 1, and here are some of the steps motor vehicle owners will be required to take:

1. Drive into an authorized official inspection station. (There will be one near you and you will recognize it by a prominently displayed sign.)

2. Turn your vehicle over to the mechanic-inspector at the station who has been specially trained to inspect your vehicle and is the only person legally qualified to do the job.

3. When the mechanic-inspector has checked your vehicle, he will do one of two things:

• Place a sticker on your windshield indicating your vehicle has successfully passed the safety inspection; or he will

• notify you that you must make a repair or replacement on your vehicle in order to pass the inspection.

4. Any repair or replacement that is needed must be done within five days, at your expense, or you may not drive the vehicle until the work is completed. If the work is done within five days, you may return to the same station for recheck at no additional cost. After five days, another complete inspection, plus another regular fee, is required.

5. You may have your repairs or replacements made at the official inspection station, or at any other place you wish. If you want to, you may make the repair or replacement yourself. The important thing is that the work is done quickly and properly so that your vehicle will pass inspection within the five-day period.

6. When your vehicle is approved (either after the first inspection or after you've made your repairs or replacements), you will receive a copy of the report made out by the mechanic-inspector.

Each time you have your vehicle safety inspected and approved, you may drive for one full year without another inspection. In order to stagger the workload of checking over 1.5 million Kentucky vehicles annually, inspections will be made every month. During 1968, (the first year that the new program will be in effect), here's how you can determine when you should take your vehicle in for inspection:

During January and February, 1968, you may, at your convenience, drive into an authorized official inspection station and have your vehicle checked. During January and February, inspection will be on a voluntary basis. However, if you do not have your vehicle inspected during January and February, 1968, you must have it inspected by the date indicated in the table below. To use the table properly, first check the last number of your 1968 Kentucky license plate when you receive it. Then look at the table.

Last Number of Your 1968 License Plate*	Your Vehicle Must Be Inspected by This Date
3	March 31, 1968
4	April 30, 1968
5	May 31, 1968
6	June 30, 1968
7	July 31, 1968
8	August 31, 1968
9	September 30, 1968
0	October 31, 1968

If you buy a new car the dealer will inspect it before you buy it. It will not need to be submitted for inspection until the following year, during the same month it was inspected. Always check the date on the sticker on the windshield.

If you buy a used car, it must have a valid Kentucky inspection sticker for the current year.

The last digit of the 1968 Kentucky plate determines when the car must be inspected. Check the table, if the month to inspect has passed, the sticker must be on the windshield or the car cannot be driven on the highway.

When your car has passed the inspection, but some item inspected was near the minimum limit, the mechanic-inspector will mark your inspection report as "Borderline Passage." He will show which area (brakes, ball joints, etc.) was listed as borderline, and this will be notice to you that this part will need attention before the next inspection period. Time has nothing to do with wear. Mileage governs the wear of your tires, brakes, suspension parts, and other things involved in the inspection.

Each time an authorized mechanic-inspector inspects your vehicle, he must make numerous separate checks, some of which require special equipment. The maximum fee that he may charge by law is $2.50. If your vehicle needs repairs or replacements, you must bear the cost. If you make the repairs within five days of the first inspection, and return to the official inspection station for approval, you will not be recharged the $2.50. If you wait over the five days, the mechanic-inspector must, by law, completely reinspect your vehicle and must charge you an additional $2.50.
