Rate Change Sets Tax Billing Back

Tax Books To Be Done Over Again

State Holds Levy On Financing Even With Local Rates

Floyd county's tax collection system was thrown for a big loss this week when a snag was hit on the rate for franchises and a complete overhaul of the tax bills was required.

First of all, in compliance with a court decision now in effect for the first time, franchise rates were fixed by the Department of Revenue at the same level as the rate for local taxes. That meant a loss in tax revenues, since the fiscal court had not anticipated a cutback on franchises, and the result was that local tax rates, as well as the franchise rate, were increased.

Next, because of the change in rates, the tax bills must be prepared anew.

The disturbing turn of affairs came just as the tax books for the year were being completed and as the Sheriff was preparing to send out tax bills. As a consequence, taxpayers will not receive their bills until the first or second week of December, and the date could be later than that if unforeseen problems arise.

The fiscal court several weeks ago set the rates for school and county taxes on real estate and personal property after the assessment had been increased by "blanket raise" at the order of the State Tax Commission. But it failed to realize that the franchise rate would be set by the state to match the local rate.

And if that were done, Floyd schools would lose approximately $41,000. County revenues were set to lose about $14,000.

Last week, the fiscal court was notified by the Revenue Dept. (See Story No. 3, Page 5)

WOMAN DIES OF GUNSHOT

Suspect in Slaying Apparently Attempts Suicide in Johnson

Johnson county authorities Wednesday described the fatal shooting of a woman at Thealka and the wounding of a man as an apparent murder and attempted suicide.

The woman victim was identified as Mrs. Roberta Wright, 34. She was shot in the neck as she walked past the home of Boone Brown, 45, and died almost instantly. Brown himself was found inside the house, his jaw and an eye blown away, apparently by the charge of a .20-gauge shotgun found nearby. State Trooper Ben Music said the woman was shot with a .30-caliber rifle.

Brown is expected to recover, it was said at the Paintsville hospital.

Circumstances leading to the shooting were not officially established. The slain woman was a daughter of Mrs. Julia Stambaugh Daniels, of Thealka. Her mother, her step-father, John Daniels, and a stepson, Ricky Wright, survive.

Mines May Profit But Rails Suffer

Conversion of coal to gasoline on a commercial basis is seen within the next seven years by the Office of Coal Research, with these results:

1. The coal industry, already resurgent, will be given another "shot in the arm." Greater employment in the coal fields is expected.

2. Railroads and other transportation industries may suffer as the tonnage of coal shipped in the block will be reduced.

Refineries capable of producing pipeline gas for transportation to industrial centers, gasoline for vehicle use and other related energy products may be developed in the coal areas.

But coal converted to gas or

EVERY SEASON, A BLESSING

The summer has passed, and gone with it days for family reunions, picnics, boating, fishing, golfing (unless you are hooked), any number of pleasant events. But there are Thanksgiving and Christmas and New Year's and Easter, filling in the void. And nights when the wind whistles and the sleet and snow beat at the windows and strange sounds are heard as the woodwork creaks — times when you and those about you feel drawn a little closer together. Every season has its compensations. I still maintain it's good just to be around.

It says here: Heredity is what makes the mother and the father of a teen-ager wonder a little about the other.

NO NEED TO WORRY

This little girl presented her masterpiece of art to her Sunday School teacher.

"Why, it looks like a cowboy going into a saloon!" teacher exclaimed.

"That's all right," said the child. "He's not going in there to get a drink of whiskey—he's going in to shoot somebody." (See Story No. 4, Page 5)

Wheelwright Blast Action Is Settled Out of Court Here

An $80,000 damage suit filed after an explosion wrecked a Wheelwright home in September, 1967, killed a child and injured others was settled out of court here Monday after a jury had been empanelled for trial of the case.

The settlement was for a reported $19,000. The suit, filed by Landell, Melbaine and Dona Thornsbury named the Mountain Investment Company as defendant.

Calvin E. Thacker, who was seriously hurt by the explosion which wrecked the home, sued for $200,000. Damages asked as a result of the blast totalled $566,000.

A jury trial of the damage suit of Ralph Hamilton against John Belcher, doing business as Belcher Refrigeration Co., resulted Tuesday in a judgment of $2,700 for the plaintiff.

This Was the Real Thing The County Had Saturday—A Real, Quaky Earthquake

Anything unusual happen around your premises, shortly after noon Saturday. Floors act tipsy, objects rattle around, the ground start to do the Twist?

You were experiencing a genuine earthquake.

Thousands of Floyd countians felt the tremor. Perhaps as many more were unaware anything unusual was happening.

Some dismissed the matter as another jet smashing the sound barrier.

Anyway, Kentucky and 21 other states—most of them east of the Mississippi—were shaken up.

It's unlikely there will be any follow-up tremors to the earthquake, a seismology authority said.

"I expect none whatsoever. We have nothing to worry about," said the Rev. Donald Roll, director of seismological studies at Loyola University. "That was kind of a safety valve. The pressure which had built up has been released."

This year's Community Chorus concert will be on Sunday, Dec. 1, at 4 p.m., and will feature Vivaldi's "Gloria" and other carol selections.

The "Hanging of the Greens" ceremony will take place on Wednesday, December 4, during school hours. The public is invited to attend these traditional festivities featuring the college band and chorus.

The Choral Arts Ensemble, which made its debut last spring, will present a program of Renaissance carols and sacred music. This group, directed by John Mochnick, instructor of music at Prestonsburg Community College, will perform six concerts, including the one at the college on Tuesday, December 17, at 8 p.m. The group will also appear at Pikeville College on December 9, at Baptist Churches in Prestonsburg and Paintsville and at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. The Choral Arts Ensemble will present a delightfully different musical Christmas program.

The college band and chorus concert will be Sunday, December 15, at 4 p.m. The band will be conducted by Mr. Kalos and the chorus by Mr. Mochnick.

All programs and exhibits at Prestonsburg Community College are always open to the public, and the community is urged (See Story No. 8, Page 5)

Home-Based Computer To Serve Businesses

The first Floyd-based computer service will begin operation soon from Allen, it was announced this week by James Burchett, of Prestonsburg. The computer will be located in the Porter Electric Company building at Allen.

The computer will be used for payroll and other distributions, analysis of financial statements and varied services.

Department Hears Some Floyd Hunters Confused About Season

The Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources asked The Times this week to warn Floyd county hunters against confusing the 1968-69 rabbit season regulations with those of the now-past 1967-68 season.

The warning was issued after Dalton Ray Conley, Floyd conservation officer, had notified the Frankfort office that many hunters in this (See Story No. 7, Page 5)

COLLEGE JOB BEGUN HERE

Contractors Finish Excavating at Sites For New Buildings

Excavation of the sites of two buildings to be added to the Prestonsburg Community College campus has been completed by Akers & Akers, contractors, and foundation work will probably be under way by next week.

Some of the preparation of the site involved the removal of soft spots in the location and re-packing these.

The work at the college is being done at a bid of $1,338,276.

The contract is for construction of a two-story academic building and a one-story student activities structure, plus renovation of the existing building. Renovation work will involve conversion of space into music studios, music practice rooms, a band room and a library doubled in size.

The academic building will include 24 offices, business education rooms, an art studio, an auditorium seating 235 persons, TV studios, home economics, and other classrooms. The student activities building will contain a book store, student work room, student lounge, snack bar, director's office and student government offices.

The project is to be completed 13 months after work is begun.

Water Distribution Possibility Grows

Arrest Expected In School Looting; Other Breaks Told

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis' office said Wednesday the arrest of a youth suspected of looting the Stumbo elementary school at Grethel last Friday night is expected to be made this week.

Two witnesses have identified the youth who allegedly took $20 in cash, rifled a locker and took science department materials from the building.

Lloyd's Standard Service Station here and two Martin service stations have been broken into in the last 10 days, officers reported. It was the second recent break into Lloyd's, from which only a small sum in coins was taken. At Martin the Ashland Oil Station operated by Henry Reitz was robbed of $40 in cash. About $5 in cash and cigarettes were taken from the Gulf Station operated there by Canel Caudill.

The Mud Creek success was reported after signatures of more than 800 prospective water consumers had been acquired. The Economic Development Administration had required a minimum of 700.

Preliminary plans for the distribution system have been approved, interim financing with EDA is in the process of being approved, and final engineering work is being done by John T. Hill and Associates.

County Attorney Barkley Sturgill, who represents the water district, said Tuesday that some of the work remaining to be done includes the working out of an agreement with the new Sandy Valley Water District as the source of water for Mud Creek. The Sandy Valley District recently completed construction of its distribution system from Pikeville, where it will purchase water from the city-owned water system, as far downriver as Stanville in this county.

BLAST PLOT IS ALLEGED

Three Are Arrested; Officer Hears Plan To Destroy Trailer

One man was in jail here this week and two others are under $500 bond each following their arrest the night of Nov. 6 on a charge of attempting to dynamite a Magoffin county trailer.

Affidavits signed by one or more of the three alleged that the blast attempt on the trailer occupied by Joe Martin, near the gap at the divide between the Grassy Fork of Licking River in Magoffin and the Raccoon Fork of Salt Lick in this county, was inspired by Agnel Jones, of the Lackey vicinity. This statement alleged that Jones offered $800 in cash or a 1962 model Pontiac automobile and $100 (See Story No. 6, Page 5)

Mud Creek Bids Near, Is Report

Two County Projects Are Expected To Cost More Than $4 Million

Two water distribution projects designed to provide pure water to hundreds of Floyd countians were reported this week as moving toward federal approval, and one, the Mud Creek Water District, has reached the point in its development that bids for construction are expected to be asked next month.

The Mud Creek success was reported after signatures of more than 800 prospective water consumers had been acquired. The Economic Development Administration had required a minimum of 700.

36 SLATED FOR TRAINING

Disadvantaged of Area To Learn Work Skills At Vocational Schools

Two classroom-type programs to develop new work skills for 36 unemployed or underemployed persons in Eastern Kentucky under the Manpower Development and Training Act (MDTA) were announced Wednesday by Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Wilbur J. Cohen.

The federal investment will be $94,827 in MDTA funds, and the state of Kentucky will supply $4,320, for a total cost of $99,147. The state share will be paid either in cash or through the use of facilities and services.

In Paintsville, at Mayo Vocational School, 18 persons will receive 35 weeks of schooling as combination welders. Federal and state cost, respectively, will be $47,409 and $1,800.

At Millard, at the Millard Extension of Mayo Vocational School, a 34-week course will be conducted for 18 combination welders. Federal and state funds (See Story No. 10, Page 5)

City Water Moves To Outlying Areas

Water mains to reach sections both upriver and downriver in the $549,751 improvement and expansion program of the Prestonsburg water system are nearing completion, leaving only work inside the corporate limits of the city for the winter months.

The 10-inch main to the Kentucky Mack location, near Sugar Loaf, is expected to be completed by end of the week.

Downriver from Prestonsburg, a main of the same size has been laid to the state-owned property, near Auxier. Work which has been completed downriver includes six river crossings to afford water service to residents and potential industrial sites on the west side of the Big Sandy in the Cliff area. Remaining to be done is the connection of this main with the existing line at the northern end of town.

A 300,000-gallon water tank is under construction on the hill overlooking the Prestonsburg Community College.

Extension of the system is being done by the Y & S Construction Company; reservoir construction, by the Cole Manufacturing Company, (See Story No. 5, Page 5)

CC Student Group Backing Colleges As Presently Led

Continuance of the University of Kentucky Community College System as it is now administered was favored in a student council resolution adopted recently.

The Inter-Community College Student Council's declaration stated, in part, that the colleges "should continue as members of a closely knit educational system and administered from the University of Kentucky . . ."

The resolution was released through Ronald Stricklin, council coordinator, who is a student at Somerset Community College.

The council's action was its answer to a proposal by some that the community colleges be administered by regional state universities.

Nature Trails

By RUFUS M. REED

The Witch Hazel, Nature's Rebel Tree

The pretty, little witch hazel is nature's own "rebel tree." It defies the seasons and bursts out in full bloom, long after all the other trees have shed their leaves and passed into a trance. Even a hard freeze cannot kill the tiny, elfin blooms.

I shall not soon forget that cold, snowy day in late November when I was tramping through the leafless woods, wading knee-deep in dead, fallen leaves, when the snow was swirling through the barren woods and the "hominous snow" was pelting the dead leaves like buckshot. It was a day of somber gray gloom; not a wild flower was to be seen. I was hungry for the sight of just anything in bloom.

Suddenly I came upon a most amazing sight—a witch hazel tree completely covered with pretty, little, four-petaled, papery blossoms that seemed to defy the falling snow. They gave the lie to Old Man Winter! I stopped to look at the tree in enchantment. Its bare branches bore small clusters of pale yellow flowers that looked like finely shredded gold. Here was a tree that was truly "nature's own rebel"—one that refused to bow to the dictates of winter. The tiny blossoms spiraled and curled about the twigs and I thought they would make fine decorations for Christmas. They had an elfin, almost ethereal beauty. No wonder the tree has been named witch hazel—it literally bewitches the season! The small, gold-meshed flowers seemed to haunt me with memories of the summer that died in the frosty arms of autumn. I knew then I must have one of these trees for my tree garden; then I'd have pretty, golden-yellow blossoms to look at while the snow is falling to hide the lattered grief of the dead autumn flowers. I transplanted one and each November it rewards me with curly, crispy blooms of gold.

The leaves of witch hazel are beautiful, too; they are broad, blunt, rounded at the tip and have wavy-margined teeth. The bark is fragrant and is a rare shade of light brown.

This small tree is useful for its fragrant extract of witch hazel, which is prized in barber shops as a delightful lotion. The witch hazel was a favorite medicinal tree of the American Indians who made poultices from its bark to treat sprains and bruises. An ointment made from the bark of witch hazel, mixed with white oak and apple tree bark is an effective remedy for the piles. The bark of witch hazel has been much used in the past to make mouthwashes and douches.

The most remarkable thing about the witch hazel tree is the way it scatters its seeds. It does not depend upon wings and the wind as the maples do. It uses the principle of the old Roman catapult and can throw its seeds fully 20 feet! The way it prepares its seeds to be tossed like buckshot is one of the most amazing processes of nature. Inside the two-celled seed capsule there is a springy lining, which gradually contracts under tension as the seed pods ripen. When the pod is ready to catapult the seeds, it bursts open and the tension of the springing side shoots them out in all directions. Some can be heard thwacking against tree trunks. If one should be hit by one of the seeds, it would produce a strong burning like fire. No other tree has such a clever method for dispersing its seeds.

Another use of the witch hazel is the forked prong employed by the oldtime "water witches" to find underground water. One of these occult adepts used to be in most any rural community of the Tri-State region, and when people once dug wells by hand, using pick, shovel and windlass, they first called in the "water witch," to come with his forked witch hazel prong. He would grip this in both hands, close his eyes, hold it aloft and begin walking slowly around the place where the well was to be dug. When he got directly over a stream of underground water, the prong would dip down sharply toward the ground and the "water witch" would swear it dipped so violently he couldn't hold it, no matter how hard he might try. It was a special gift of the gods, he declared, and the "water-finder prong" just would not work for any ordinary person not so gifted. The old English miners also used such forked prongs to locate coal seams underground, claiming that by this method they knew where to sink the mine shaft.

I'm truly sorry to see so many of our witch hazel trees stripped bare of leaves every summer by the "herb gatherers." The leaves are often seen drying on the roof of mountain cabins, or on drying sheds, to be sold later on the herb markets. We need better conservation of these trees.

Sports Afield

By TED KESTING

We all know that more fishing waters will be needed to prevent existing waters from being overcrowded and overfished by the steadily increasing number of anglers. So what is the outlook for more fishing acreage?

One of the most powerful factors in this connection is the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act, which will provide some $200 million a year for the next five years, available to all states. Fishing will come in for an appreciable share of this billion-dollar fund, both directly and indirectly.

Further indirect benefit to the nation's 40 million fishermen will come from the acceptability of plans providing cleaner water, additional water acreage, new recreational facilities on water, marinas and boat liversies, access sites and so forth.

Direct benefit will come from acceptable plans for providing more fishing piers, catwalks for fishermen on bridges and causeways and other advantages for the encouragement of angling.

As far as pollution is concerned, we have seen an encouraging about-face in the pussyfooting which has gone on for years because of the political influence of the polluters, the pollutants coming essentially from industrial and municipal effluents.

Federal funds of many kinds can now be withheld until a state cleans up its pollution. A good example is the multimillion-dollar disposal plant erected by the city of St. Louis when federal funds were withheld pending its construction.

Because of pollution abatement in the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, fishermen are reporting a return of sporting species in encouraging number, according to Sports Afield Magazine's Angling Editor, Homer Circle.

Siltation has ruined many fishing areas, and the Soil Conservation Service is pursuing a sound program of showing farmers how to keep soil on their fields and out of our waters. Timber is now being harvested in ways that do not interfere with its water-holding benefits.

And while the use of "hard" pesticides has done undeniable damage to fish populations, these are now being rejected in favor of fugitive pesticides which have little residual effect on fish.

And millions of acres of water are being made into new fishing bonanzas thanks to advances in the sciences of fish culture, transportation, trans-planting, hybridizing and so on. The most notable example is, of course, the coho story in Lake Michigan.

Farm ponds also are a factor in fishing opportunities, and the science of managing these has been simplified so that any layman can get into the act. State fish commissions and state university extension experts provide know-how and literature to landowners.

So it goes. As all these factors are added up and become part of the total picture, I see every reason for optimism about the future of our fishing.

Instead of a second car, get a second house.

It's not as expensive as it sounds. There's no land to buy. No real-estate taxes to pay. Yet you can own a hunting lodge in the mountains. Or a cottage at the beach. And you won't need a car to get you there.

All you need is a Volkswagen Campmobile which, as houses go, is rather unusual. It goes. But most people buy the Campmobile for what it comes with. Kitchen including sink, ice box, and water pump. Dining table. Bedroom enough for two adults and two kids. Closets. Screens. Curtains.

Add the optional pop-up top and tent and the cost of this home-away-from-home is $3199.

Lots of people pay that much for a car. And some pay that much for a vacation.

But very few pay that little for a house.

ALC Support Drive Ends Here This Week

Radiant Rays

Psalms 34:5 They looked unto Him and were radiant . . .

Evelyn Underhill in her book, "The House of the Soul," uses the term, "vegetable-fibre saints," and remarks that they are like artificial silk, "glossy in looks but soon worn out." I once knew a couple who had a "milk-fed" baby. Unwise in the art of child-rearing, they had simply fed their baby all the milk she could drink. They thought milk was the perfect food. The baby was growing, at least in size, and looked healthy, for it was as "fat as a butterball." But when the time came to crawl and be active the baby was helpless. The doctor told them, "You've failed to provide a balanced diet. Milk is good but alone it will kill. Your baby is in serious physical danger."

How many of us, God's children, are in the same fix spiritually? How many of us are "vegetable-fibre saints" or, worse, milk-fed babies? Now, spiritual milk is essential and so are the vegetables—but what about the meat? Paul had to deal with a lot of folks who had weak bones, especially in the knees and back. They too often buckled or turned yellow. They were the ones who should have been weaned for years, and those who built only a foundation—the basic principles—with no framework or superstructure.

I've stood atop the Empire State Building and viewed the surrounding panorama. Some one had to erect that structure before I could ascend its heights.

There are superior spiritual heights and these are always far lovelier than the natural views. The higher the height, the greater the field of vision. In that majestic, splendid world of reality—the Kingdom of the Spirit where God and his servants dwell and where things are immutable—there exist visions of beauty that almost take the breath away. But to scale these heights requires real, meat-fibre saints.

How about it? Are we only knee-high to a grass-hopper, spiritually? Are we scaling the heights, braving the winds, secure in our spiritual sinews or are we wallowing around on our pallets or rugs, still playing?

One of the most discouraging facts in the Christian realm is to sit in most modern Sunday Schools and listen to children beating their drums, shaking their rattles, some saying "goo-goo" while others are crying because someone brushed against them and toppled them over. Equally, or more, disturbing is to sit while the pastor stirs the pabulum and then watches the sheep limp weakly out the door because of malnutrition, wondering how many will be overcome before the next meal?

Oh, to be able to walk into a steak-house on Sunday morning and have the pastor hand out a T-bone an inch thick and revel in a gourmet's delight!

1 Peter 1:1, 2; 1 Cor. 13:1, 4; 20; 1 John 2:14; Eph. 4:13 and Heb. 5:14, 6:1.)

NUNN SETS $600 MILLION TOURISM GOAL FOR STATE

Frankfort—A $600 million annual goal for the Kentucky tourism industry was announced recently by Gov. Louie B. Nunn as he revealed plans for statewide tourism development designed to attract private tourism enterprises.

"Kentucky's tourism industry is increasing rapidly every year," Gov. Nunn said, "and it is time for the state to broaden its role in this vital area. Private tourism investors must be attracted to Kentucky's recreation sites just as private industry is solicited by the Department of Commerce."

Gov. Nunn said the Kentucky Program Development Office, the Department of Parks and the Department of Public Information will:

* Prepare a statement showing the benefits open to Kentucky with a fully developed tourism industry;

* Prepare a work plan setting forth the specific tasks which need to be performed to create a statewide tourism plan; and * Incorporate these materials into an application for a planning grant to the appropriate Federal agencies.

Spindletop Research is expected to assist in the plan development.

Gov. Nunn noted the tourism plan is only one segment of a proposed total outdoor recreation plan for the state.

"Over 77,000 jobs were credited to the state's $440 million tourism business in 1967," Gov. Nunn said. "When the state succeeds in drawing $600 million annually, it is estimated over 105,000 Kentuckians will be employed. This increase of 28,000 jobs depends on our ability to attract the private sector of our economy."

Frank Groschelle, administrator of the Kentucky Program Development Office, emphasized that federal assistance would keep the planning costs to a minimum for the state.

He pointed out the growing needs of an increasingly recreation-conscious population. "This approach to recreation and tourism development utilizing investment opportunities for private enterprises will greatly enhance our opportunity to meet these needs," Groschelle said.

Commissioner of Parks Robert Gable said, "Kentucky has no agency actively soliciting investors in recreation and tourism to locate their capital in the state. Kentucky has a booming tourism industry and it must be promoted with private investors."

Commissioner Gable emphasized the opportunities presently available to private investors in the state in campsites, boatdocks, beach developments and many other areas.

"People tend to think of the state as running the tourism business in Kentucky but this is not true. There is no possible way the state can keep up with tourism growth in Kentucky unless we can create a working partnership with private enterprise. It's just too large."

CENTRE ART INSTRUCTOR TO HAVE EXHIBIT HERE

An exhibit of water colors by Jack Kellam is being held in the Commons Room at Prestonsburg Community College from Nov. 11 through Nov. 16. Mr. Kellam is a professor of Art at Centre College, Danville. His exhibit contains 15 paintings whose subject matter consists of scenes of places he visited on his travels throughout Europe. They are primarily pure water colors with the exception of three, which involve other media.

The exhibit is open to the public between the hours of 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Friday afternoon Miss Jessica Pollard, Art instructor at PCC, will present a talk to the Eastern Kentucky Art Education Association at its luncheon meeting in the Satellite Room at the Uptowner Inn in Huntington, W. Va. Her talk will be on "Art Education for the World Today."

Children's Theatre Begins Rehearsals On 1st Production

Rehearsals are under way by the Children's Theatre Group for the production of "Pegora the Witch," to be presented December 9 at 8 p.m. at the Archer Park Theatre-Gym.

Pegora is a young witch who is trying desperately to be bad enough to achieve the rank of first-class witch. She is frustrated in this ambition by an unfortunate quirk in her nature which makes her want to do good things, rather than bad. Finally she is told that she has only one more chance to become first-class. The deed which she must do, capture seven beautiful young princesses, is so cruel that she refuses at first, but changes her mind when she realizes that this is her last opportunity to remain in the ranks of the witches. Pegora almost achieves the task, and is foiled only by the quick-thinking court jester.

Approximately 20 children are participating in this performance under the direction of Mrs. Leo Weddle, head of the English Department, Prestonsburg Community College. Complete casting will be announced next week.

Others jailed here recently included Ezra Jones, arrested by Deputy Sheriffs Claude Flanery and John Reed and held for Michigan authorities on a rape charge; Billy Ray Patton, charged with destroying public property, booked by State Troopers Bevins and Angel; Alan Keith Stephens, knowingly receiving stolen property, booked by State Trooper Richard Ray; Charles Edward Kendrick, hunting without license, jailed by Conservation Officer Don Meade; Millard Setser, reckless use of a deadly weapon, arrested by Sheriff Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Frazier.

Welfare Rights Groups Says Trip To Frankfort Satisfactory In Result

The Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Organization this week termed as successful its trip to Frankfort Nov. 11 to ask for a food stamp worker to take applications one day per week in the Mud Creek section of Route 979.

The conference was with Public Assistance Department officials. Officials in Frankfort agreed that the Prestonsburg food stamp office could stay open an hour longer, closing at 1 p.m. instead of 12 noon, by staggering the food stamp workers' lunch hour. Other public assistance problems were discussed to the satisfaction of the group.

Arnold Hamilton, chairman of the organization, expressed appreciation to County Judge Henry Stumbo for his interest in the people's trip to Frankfort. He added that representatives from EKWRO tried to contact Judge Stumbo, but were told he would be out of town for the week.

The brethren naurally employed a lawyer, and on his advice made answer to the suit, stoutly denying that their prayers had had anything to do with that fire.

For comparison, the quake which devastated Alaska in 1964 registered about 8.5.

Saturday's quake was especially startling because it was the first ever experienced by residents of many of the affected areas.

The quake occurred shortly after 12 noon EST and was felt in Illinois, Arkansas, Minnesota, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, Georgia, Kentucky, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, Alabama, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Michigan, South Dakota, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma.

Started citizens flooded police and fire departments and newspapers and radio stations with telephone calls and, in some cases, ran into the streets.

There were no reports of serious damage or injury. Two persons were injured slightly in Southern Illinois, one by a brick which fell from a chimney and the other by bottles which tumbled from a shelf. A woman was injured in Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

ies, the OCR says, until production of the synthetic gas will be competitive with natural gas.

Research at the Cresap, West Virginia, pilot plant to study coal-to-gasoline conversion is still in the first stages of operation.

Gov. Shapiro, of Illinois, announced recently that a $400 million project for converting coal to synthetic fuels would be located in southern Illinois. Gov. Shapiro said the new complex would consist of a deep coal mine and a plant to convert coal to gasoline, oil and possibly pipeline gas, with sulfur and oxygen as byproducts. He added that the project would require 10,000 employees, including 1,000 coal miners in addition to refinery and research personnel. Land acquisitions and options as well as water commitments for the mine operation are well under way, Gov. Shapiro said.

WHO ESCAPED, UNMAGINED?
The foregoing item recalls the story told me on a fishing trip of the fellow who set himself up a liquor store in the vicinity of a church. The opposition was terrific. Members of the congregation assembled for prayer, and they prayed that the liquor store would burn.

And burn it did—lock, liquor stock and beer barrel.

Whereupon the owner, having been told of the prayers made for his loss, filed suit for $25,000, naming the church and its members as defendants and setting out how they had brought destruction down upon him.

The brethren naurally employed a lawyer, and on his advice made answer to the suit, stoutly denying that their prayers had had anything to do with that fire.

That did it. The man lost his suit. But before it was all over the judge had a word for all concerned:

"One thing I have decided while hearing this action," he told plaintiff and defendants. "It seems plain from the statements made here that this whiskey-seller has got a lot more faith in the power of prayer than any of you who did the praying."

partment that if county revenues were to be up to the preceding year's level, a rate raise was necessary. It set the school franchise rate at 49.6 cents per $100 assessment, and the county rate at 16.6 cents.

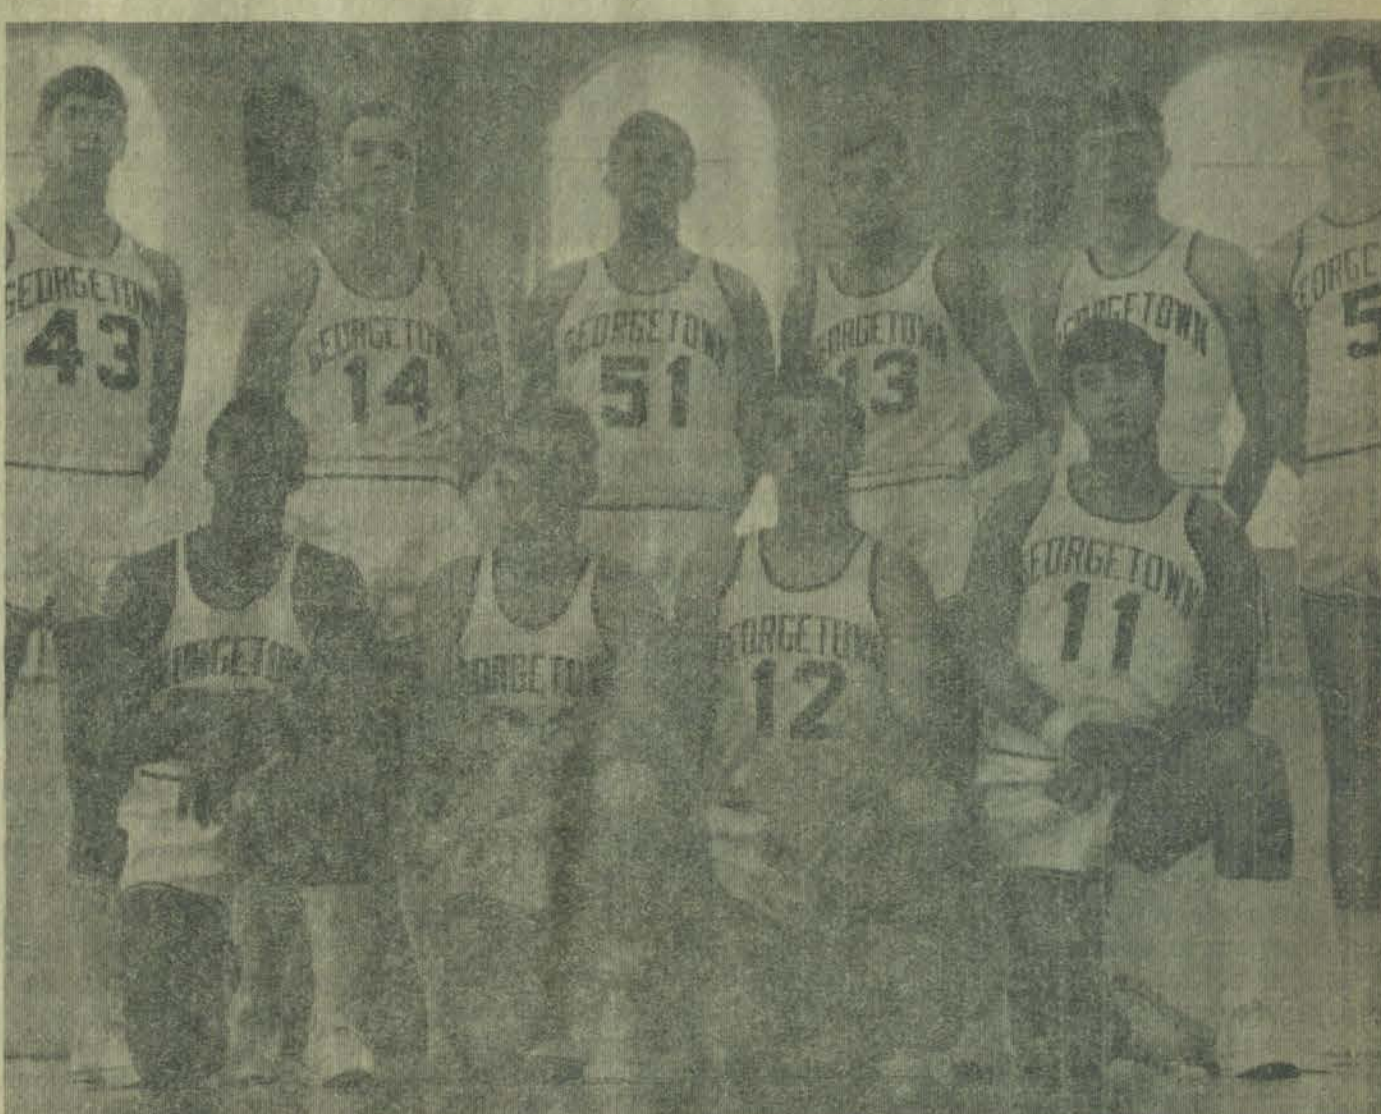

The same tax rates were demanded at the local level, which meant that the fiscal court was required to raise the school tax rate on real estate and personal property from the original 42 cents per $100 valuation to 49.6 cents and the county rate from 14c to 16.6c.

Before this complication arose Sheriff Joe W. Lewis had complained that separation of real estate from tangible personal property on individual tax bills was creating a near-intolerable situation in his office.

Lewis stands to be a big loser as a result of the rate revision and its delay of tax collections. The bulk of his commissions on collections will come after Jan. 1, and that will pile onto him next year commissions for both 1968 and 1969 and the possibility of exceeding his constitutional salary limit.

"It is in this way that Prestonsburg Community College can truly be of service to its seven-county community," said a college spokesman.

Right or Wrong

By HENRY A. BUCHANAN and BOB W. BROWN

President Johnson has called a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam. The North Viets have repeatedly insisted that a bombing halt must precede serious peace talks. So it would seem that now we could get on with the peace talks.

But it isn't working out that way. Because South Vietnam's President Thieu says he will not negotiate. Thieu objects to Viet Cong representation at the peace talks. To admit the Viet Cong to the conference table would be "national suicide," according to sources close to the South Vietnamese President.

"I will never betray the nation," Thieu said. "I will never lead our country into an adventure that might turn me into a traitor."

We can appreciate President Thieu's feelings about the Viet Cong. But it is the Viet Cong that we are fighting in South Vietnam. The Viet Cong plus the North Viets. And if we are not to negotiate the peace with the enemy, then with whom are we to talk in the hope of achieving peace?

Peace talks which do not include the Viet Cong would not solve any problems. Not unless all the Viet Cong could be eliminated from the picture in South Vietnam. Neither President Thieu nor the American Army has been successful in efforts to do that.

Obviously, if the South Viets will not attend the peace talks, there can be no meaningful peace talks. For officially we are not at war with anybody. We are just there to advise and assist the South Viets. Of course our advice and assistance have cost us 25,000 men and 25 billion dollars. But it's still President Thieu's war. And if President Thieu would rather fight than negotiate then we have two alternatives. We can stay on and fight by the side of President Thieu. Or we can let President Thieu fight his own war.

The trainees will be mostly the severely disadvantaged drawn from among the hard-core jobless from rural poverty areas.

Training will be emphasized for young people, older workers, and members of minority groups. All of the training will be in occupations in which there is a local need for more skilled workers.

Since the start of MDTA in late 1962, more than 13,000 classroom-type projects have been approved to offer training to about 800,000 people in some 600 occupations.

Persons must be unemployed or underemployed to qualify for MDTA assistance.

Maytown Hi Wins Second in a Row, Downs Betsy Layne

Maytown high school won its second consecutive victory Tuesday night, overwhelming Betsy Layne, 84-40.

Maytown held a 26-21 lead at the half against the Bobcats but Maytown broke the second half open by outscoring Betsy Layne, 25-15, in the third period.

The scoring: Maytown (84)—Click 24, Talbert 19, Stewart 14, Halbert 11, Hicks 7, R. Hicks 6, Gibson 3. Betsy Layne (40)—Newman 9, Newsom 12, Stumbo 2, Boyd 3, Tackett 14.

The new extensions will reach an estimated 150 new customers at this time. Six-inch extensions of the system were made earlier to Jenny Wiley State Park and the Clark elementary school on Middle Creek.

The water plant here has a daily capacity of 1,000,000 gallons and is designed so as to double that capacity at comparatively little cost. The demand now being made on the plant averages about 350,000 gallons a day.

The work to be done this winter inside Prestonsburg includes:

An 8-inch line from Highland down Graham to Arnold (Second) avenue to the corner of Second and Court to tie in with an existing line and replace an old 4-inch line; a 10-inch line from Court street down Highland and Central to the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company property; a 10-inch line into West Prestonsburg, to pass at the rear of the Colonial House, follow Harkins street to a point near the Prestonsburg Building & Supply Company, there connect with a 6-inch line and make a complete loop of the area. From 10 to 15 fire hydrants will be added during the work within the city.

When these loose ends are tied up, the grant-loan of $1,471,000, which was approved months ago, will be available to the Mud Creek district.

Meanwhile, the Beaver Elkhorn Water District has reached the "feasible number" of water-consumer applicants, with 660 submitted to the Huntington office of EDA. But EDA has asked that a backlog of an additional 200 signers be procured. Right Beaver Creek areas almost untapped for consumer applications hitherto have a potential of 1,000 or more customers, J. C. Wells, a district leader, said.

The 660 consumer signatures submitted was considered a feasible number, since the customers of the district included all schools in the area to be served on the two Beaver Creeks, plus two hospitals. The town of Martin is also seen as a possible customer.

Engineers are now accumulating additional information desired by EDA for the project, and the sign-up of the additional 200 customers is under way.

When all federal conditions are met by the district, funds from a grant-loan of $2,790,000, which was approved by EDA last June, will be available for the work.

The Beaver Elkhorn system considers the Big Sandy river at Allen as a source of water supply, or it may construct a reservoir.

Floyd County Fish & Game Club members are losing no time getting their clubhouse going up in the Johns Branch valley, near Maytown. Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Sept. 1, and with clubmembers donating their work the foundation and subfloor have been completed. They hope to have the structure under roof before winter weather arrives and to have it ready for use next spring.

'Whatsoever Things'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

There was this young boy. He loved to draw. He would take his pencil and a piece of paper and would draw anything around him that caught his fancy. Once that young boy was asked by an elderly gentleman to draw a picture of a horse. When he had finished with the drawing the gentleman was so pleased with the boy's work that he gave him a whole dollar! And that was back when a dollar was a dollar.

That seemed to spur the youngster on. He kept drawing. He worked at it. He loved it. He gave himself to it. Soon he had landed himself a job with a newspaper as a cartoonist. He was real proud of himself when he got that job. But while he thought it was something to get excited about, one of his superiors didn't see it that way.

The editor of the paper where he worked in Kansas City called him in one day. He said he wanted to talk to the young man about his future. Being quite frank with the young cartoonist about his job and his future, he said to him: "You don't have any talent. Why don't you get out of the drawing business and into something where you have a chance to succeed?"

Well, the young fellow thought it over. Gave some serious consideration to doing just that, quitting his drawing and going into another line of business. For he did want to be a success. And the editor should know about talent. But, after considerable thought, he decided to stay in the drawing business, even if he didn't "have any talent."

You will find people like that occasionally. People who won't quit, people who won't give up even if others think they are doomed to failure. No one has ever found the magic formula that separates those who refuse to quit from those who give up at the first setback. A lot of the time, however, it can be nothing more than the spirit of the Creator driving them on. For some-

Joseph Maynard, 58, Passes Away Friday At Allen Residence

Joseph E. (Joey) Maynard, 58 years old, died suddenly Friday night at his home at Allen.

A veteran of World War II and a member of the Baptist Church, Mr. Maynard was a former driver for the Sparks Bros. Bus Company and for several years operated the Phillips 66 Service Station at Allen.

He was a son of the late Wade and Lillie Crum Maynard.

Survivors include a stepson and a stepdaughter, Elster Huffman, of Columbus, Ohio, and Mrs. Christina Compton, of Allen; four brothers, Curtis Maynard, of Bradenton, Fla., Ralph Maynard, of Ogden, Utah, Charles Maynard, Royal Oak, Mich., and John Edward Maynard, of Tucson, Ariz., and a half-brother, Ballard Osborne, of Matewan, West Virginia.

Funeral rites were held Monday at 1 p.m. at the Allen Baptist Church, the pastor, the Rev. Earl Waugh, officiating. Burial in the Davidson Memorial Gardens at Ivel was directed by Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our appreciation to the ministers for their comforting words and all the brothers and sisters of the church, and to all our friends who helped us during the sickness and upon passing of our dear mother, Dahlia Johnson. We want to extend our appreciation to all who sent flowers and food, to the doctors and staff of the McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital, also the Daniel Boone Clinic, especially Dr. Susan Brenner and Dr. Mary Alice Hall; also the Merion Funeral Chapel for its efficient service.

times there is not a single person in this whole world who believes in us other than Him.

That's one of His traits. He believes in us even when no one else does. He believes in us even when we don't believe in ourselves. That's what made Him face that ugly cross. He believed in our goodness when we displayed our sinfulness. He never gave up on us. He still is counting on us to this very day. He is disappointed a lot of times, but He never gives up. When everyone else has counted us out, He is still pulling for us.

That young artist who "had no talent" but wouldn't quit went on to great heights. His enterprises today rake in more than a hundred million dollars a year. His name was Walt Disney.

No one can remember the name of the Kansas City editor.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

MOSS, EARTH'S EVERGREEN MANTLE

Mosses are kindly plants. They cover the face of the earth with a mantle of green that keeps it moist and warm and also prevents soil erosion. Moss covers old logs and stumps lying in the woods with a green burial shroud, and even in death they seem alive and green. Mosses cover the rocks and hide their scars and imperfections, lending them a touch of fresh green beauty the year around. In cool, damp woods, moss grows on the north side of tree trunks, and the pioneers could tell the direction just by looking at the tree moss.

When people used to set their hens, they would send the kids to the woods to gather slabs of green moss to make a warm, cozy nest for the "settin' hen." It was believed the warmth of the moss helped the eggs to hatch better.

Pioneers also used slabs of thick moss to chink their cabins, and for bedding for themselves and their stock. In some cold countries, like Lapland, the mothers put moss in the baby's cradle to make it soft and warm.

Slabs of thick green moss were once widely used in bedding out sweet potatoes. The moss was placed over the bed to hold in the heat and make the potatoes sprout better.

Moss is nature's evergreen carpet that covers the wounds and scars of earth. It will take hold and thrive where other plants cannot do so. It is a soil-maker, a paver of the way for the larger flowering plants. It slowly dissolves the rocks on which it grows and turns them back to the soil. It helps to change the old logs and stumps and dead limbs into humus for the use of other plants.

The mosses are among our most beautiful plants and are worthy of our careful study. One kind, called "The Haircup Moss," looks like a cluster of small pines growing thickly. Another kind forms green pincushions, which are very attractive; it is called "the pincushion moss." There is another very pretty kind of moss which bears round spore capsules that look like small apples. This one is called "the apple moss."

"The Cord Moss" is another common kind. It sends up long, slender threads that look like tiny spears. These bear the spore cases at the tip. Some kinds of mosses have spore cases that look like bean pods. One of our most beautiful and useful of the mosses is called "peat moss," or "Sphagnum moss," which grows in swampy places. It is used to wrap the roots of plants for shipping to gardeners or florists. This moss holds moisture well and keeps the roots from drying out. Peat moss also makes a fine fertilizer when ground up and mixed with the soil. It is a source of peat, which is used for fuel in some countries. The peat moss forms vast beds, which eventually becomes peat—a good fuel when cut into blocks and dried out.

We owe a great debt to the club mosses of our region. They were large trees back in the Coal Age and helped to form our vast coal beds of today. They are now merely small, evergreen plants, much used for Christmas decoration. The common club moss, called "running ground pine," trails over the ground and forms solid mats of an acre or more. It is a hardy evergreen, which some people call "wolf's claws," as the tiny leaves have sharp teeth. The spores of the club moss are sulphur-yellow, oily and highly inflammable. These spores flash like brimstone and are used in making fireworks, "sparklers," and such.

The mosses, which are called Bryophytes, reproduce by spores. One may often see slender, threadlike projections rising from a bed of moss. These bear the spore cases at the tip, in a sort of cup or capsule, and when the spores are ripe, the cup opens and lets the spores discharge, to be transported afar by the winds.

A thick cover of moss on the ground makes the softest bed for one to lie on in the forest, to rest and enjoy the scenes of nature. Many birds and animals use moss to line their nests or burrows. The Indians used moss for bedding in their wigwams. In the dead of winter, moss lends a springlike aspect to any place where it grows.

NEW GUN LAW RULES EFFECTIVE, DECEMBER 16

New federal gun law puts controls on interstate and over-the-counter sales of firearms and ammunition and requires registration of destructive devices and gangster-type weapons, Commissioner Sheldon S. Cohen, of the Internal Revenue Service points out.

While most of the controls on gun and ammunition sales under the Gun Control Act of 1968 go into effect December 16, import curbs became effective October 22. Mr. Cohen said that the Alcohol & Tobacco Tax Division of IRS, the agency which administers federal gun laws, is now preparing material that will help those who sell guns and ammunition, as well as the general public, comply with the requirements.

The purpose of the new law is to help federal, state and local law enforcement officials fight crime and violence, Mr. Cohen said. "It is not the law's intent," he added, "to place any unnecessary restrictions on the purchase or ownership of firearms used for hunting, target shooting, or any other lawful purpose."

Cohen said the controls on guns and ammunition should help curb indiscriminate traffic in deadly weapons. To buy a gun or ammunition, the retail purchaser will usually have to appear in person and show identification sufficient to establish his name, address and age.

Persons under 21 will be prohibited from purchasing pistols, revolvers and ammunition for such weapons and persons under 18 will not be permitted to purchase any firearms or ammunition.

Sales will generally not be permitted to out-of-state residents, according to Cohen, although a person from an adjoining state can buy a rifle or shotgun by complying with certain provisions of the new Act.

Sales to residents of a state will be prohibited if possession of the firearms is not allowed by local ordinance, Cohen explained that if a city or county has legislation restricting gun sales, a resident of that city or county cannot go to another city or county and buy a gun he could not buy in his own community.

To help gun dealers comply with this section of the law, IRS has asked about 10,000 police departments throughout the country for copies of their local gun laws. Summaries of pertinent laws are being compiled in a booklet and will be mailed by IRS to Federally licensed gun dealers.

Cohen said the booklet, which should be in the hands of dealers before December 16, will enable them to check on the gun laws of a locality before selling a gun.

A provision of the law which is effective October 22 bans the import of surplus military firearms from overseas. The United States has been a dumping ground for these weapons for many years. However, other firearms particularly suitable for sporting purposes may still be imported.

The gangster-type weapons that have to be registered include machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, short barreled rifles and silencers. Destructive devices that have to be registered under the new law are grenades, bombs and rockets as well as certain projectile firing weapons such as anti-tank guns, bazookas and mortars.

Cohen said anyone with a gangster-type weapon not previously registered or a destructive device that must be registered should contact an IRS office and obtain a copy of Form 4467. Firearms not previously registered must be registered during the period from November 2 through December 1.

The gun control law provides that information or evidence submitted in registering a weapon during this period cannot be used against the registrant in any criminal proceeding arising out of a prior or concurrent violation of the law. However, this would not prevent prosecution for furnishing false information.

Cohen said this provision of law protects against self-incrimination, the issue in a January, 1968 Supreme Court decision in the Haynes case concerning a violation of the National Firearms Act.

License requirements for gun dealers are set in the new law and license fees for dealers are raised from the present $1 a year to $10.

These requirements take effect December 16. Applications sent to dealers for renewals beginning that day will reflect the changes.

To qualify as a dealer under the law, a person will have to be 21 years of age and have a place of business in the United States.

TIDITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Thanksgiving Day, Then and Now

In recent years Thanksgiving Day has come to be almost as significant in Kentucky as Christmas used to be here or as Thanksgiving Day has always been in New England. Sixty years ago, when I was away from home for my first Thanksgiving Day, the trustee of my school suggested that I could have a holiday. That was the first time I had ever heard of such a thing. After I came to Western to remain through the year and not merely between the schools that I was teaching, no attention was paid to Thanksgiving as a day off. Most of the students did not have enough money to go home at Thanksgiving and again at Christmas; hence no especial objections were raised to having school on the day. But there would have been a real riot if someone had suggested less than a whole week for Christmas. In the fall of 1913 I first enrolled in Indiana University and was surprised at how everybody was planning for Thanksgiving by early November; it would have been hard to get a corporal's guard of students from out of town for any event for that whole week-end. But at Christmastime I knew a lot of students who stayed in town for the entire season.

By degrees Thanksgiving Day became more important as younger and younger generations came to Western, so that going through the week-end without a break in school life would now be impossible. And this season has become more and more memorable among most of the people I know. Fortunately, Thanksgiving Day has not yet been so commercialized; it even seems like a holiday, not a time to make a big splurge of buying things and showing off. A minister in some western state recently suggested that Thanksgiving Day be set aside as the time to give and to eat; then Christmas could be a real religious occasion. Somehow that has appealed to several people whom I know, people who feel that Christmas has become too much noise and palaver.

In late 1967 a faculty wife, who was reared in a western state, interviewed me on Christmas as it was in older days. She had shared my filled stocking, even having the same type of fillers: candies, nuts, raisins, figs, an apple, and an orange. But when I mentioned the annual bale of small firecrackers and the small roman candle, she seemed greatly amused, for she had never even heard of the southern and border states' fireworks at Christmas. She found my account of the numerous Christmas cakes appealing, but just could not understand why we did not have such an array of cakes at other times.

I was a mature man before I realized how persistent customs can be and how my generation was merely holding on to practices brought over from the Old Country. The Virginia-North Carolina tradition made Christmas a festive occasion; Thanksgiving Day was ultimately of New England origin, especially the "over the river and through the woods" part of it. Rather oddly, the Christmas tree did not become a common thing at Fidelity until after I was away elsewhere; at first the tree was a neighborhood affair, not a family tradition. I actually was present at the first Christmas-tree celebration in 1906, just before I left home for keeps. It was a good many years later that I saw, when I visited my old home at Christmas, any evidence of Christmas trees, and never one in my own old home. It has been hard for me to make the younger generation realize that Christmas trees have been common only in recent years in our part of the world. But the hanging up of the stockings, as celebrated in Clement C. Moore's famous poem, was already standardized in my earliest days, though one of my grandmothers, I was told, always celebrated, with her family, Old Christmas Day, January 6.

EDITOR, The Times:

MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Recently the members of Region 20 Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc., along with interested citizens, met with Dr. Dale Farabee, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Mental Health. Region No. 20 is comprised of Floyd, Pike, Magoffin, Johnson and Martin counties.

In this meeting we reviewed and evaluated the work which has been done and is being carried on through our comprehensive care center, known as Mountain Mental Health Services, Inc. It was an entirely different story from the days of 1963 when a psychiatrist made a day-a-month visit to the area. Presently, under the supervision of a board comprised of three citizens from each county, a professional staff representing many disciplines is giving services to over 700 patients in our region. Consistent care and modern drugs have made it possible to treat patients effectively in their home environment.

It is through the support of the state and NIMH and under the leadership of Dr. Farabee that these comprehensive care centers throughout the state have been able to give such services. As Kentuckians we can take great pride in being a part of such a program of "people who care." Kentucky has certainly been a leader in this field.

NEXT WEEK, THE SEARCH FOR HIDDEN DIABETICS

Inventor Thomas Edison, comedian Stan Laurel, painter Paul Cezanne, opera composer Giacomo Puccini, novelist and historian H. G. Wells and the colorful mayor of New York City, Fiorello LaGuardia... a group of highly gifted individuals who, despite the diversity of their talents, shared a common bond.

All were diabetics. And all of them continued to lead productive lives because their diabetes was medically controlled.

Today, former baseball star and business executive Jackie Robinson, along with millions of other Americans, is living proof that a diabetic can lead a normal and successful life when the disease is detected in its early stages.

But for Kentucky's estimated 25,000 "hidden diabetics," the picture is not so bright. These are the busy homemakers, the teachers, the skilled workers, the business and community leaders who have diabetes and don't know it.

During National Diabetes Week, Nov. 17-23, the State Department of Health's Office of Chronic Disease is asking the help of all private physicians and county health departments in a statewide effort to locate these hidden diabetics.

According to C. Hernandez, M.D., director of the Division of Epidemiology, these hidden cases are the main reason why diabetes is still the seventh leading cause of death and the third leading cause of blindness in the United States.

A simple blood test is all that is needed for diabetes detection.

The Office of Chronic Disease has contacted all of Kentucky's private physicians and county health departments asking that the blood tests be made for as many people as possible and offering testing supplies and registration forms on request. The Department of Health's Division of Laboratory Services will analyze, free of charge, all blood specimens submitted by physicians, health departments and other agencies.

The Chronic Disease Office has also enlisted the cooperation of the state's podiatrists, since the ratio of diabetes among podiatry patients is much higher than in the population as a whole.

Diabetes results when the body cannot transform food—chiefly sugar and starch—into energy, tissue and bone. When diabetes goes undetected, severe complications can develop, including permanent damage to eyesight, blood circulation and the nervous system. In extreme cases, a coma will result which, for some, will be fatal.

Most diabetes cases occur among persons over 40 years of age, the overweight, blood relatives of diabetics and women, especially those who have had babies weighing nine pounds or more at birth.

However, diabetes is not confined to older age groups. The disease can and does strike children, usually during periods of rapid growth and development at ages seven or eight.

Some of the symptoms of diabetes are excessive thirst, frequent urination, drowsiness and fatigue, unplanned weight loss, intense itching, slow-healing infections and changes in vision. But, sometimes, there are no symptoms at all, or, at the most, just a vague "below par" feeling.

Dr. Hernandez pointed out that everyone can help in the search for Kentucky's 25,000 hidden diabetics by having the simple detection test themselves and urging their families and friends to do likewise during National Diabetes Week.

Series of Seminars Slated at College; Students To Lecture

Donald Johnson, chairman of the Biological Science department at Prestonsburg Community College, has announced a schedule of biological science seminars to be held at the college beginning Wednesday, November 20, at 4 p.m.

The seminars will be held on each Wednesday at 4 p.m. until the end of the fall semester. They will be resumed January 15, and also will be held during the spring term, 1969. All lectures will be given by students of PCC.

The seminars are open to the public, and all who are interested in the biological science field are urged to attend.

Following is the seminar schedule:

Pastor Herbert L. Duncan and the congregation give all a hearty welcome.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could see
 Our dear Mom as she used to be?
 Wouldn't it be wonderful to see her smile,
 And have her back for a little while?
 Could we be wrong for wanting
 her so,
 When the Angel wanted her, too,
 Could we be wrong for missing
 her so,
 And all the things we used to do?
 No, we wouldn't disturb her peaceful rest
 For we know, above all, that
 God knows best.
 So He called her to His home on high.
 But we'll miss our Mom, every day that goes by.
 Soon together, again we'll be Together for eternity.

Voter Participation To Be Survey Topic In Area Next Week

Census Bureau interviewers will ask about voter participation in the 1968 election during the Bureau's monthly survey of households here the week of November 18, Director Joseph R. Norwood, of the Bureau's regional office in Charlotte, North Carolina, has announced.

Surveyed households will be asked if they were registered, if they voted, if they cast a vote for President, if something prevented them from voting in 1968, and if they voted in the 1964 Presidential election. No questions will be asked about party or candidates. Answers will provide a statistical analysis of the voting habits of persons of voting age. The survey is similar to one made shortly after the 1964 general election.

The questions on voting will be added to the Bureau's regular monthly queries about jobs that provide data to the U. S. Department of Labor for use in determining unemployment figures.

Households in the survey are part of a representative sample throughout the nation, from which the Bureau collects data. All answers are confidential, and the information obtained may be used only for statistical purposes.

The interviewer who will visit households in this area during November 18-23 is Mrs. Ella R. Daniel, Thelma, Kentucky.

Paintsville's first series of downs started on their 29. Unable to move the ball on the ground, the Tigers attempted a pass that was intercepted by John Leslie. Paintsville received a penalty on the play that moved the ball to its 12.

After failing to gain on two running plays, Mark Miller threw a pass to Wayne Brown in the end zone for the touchdown. A Miller-to-Brown pass was also good for the extra point.

Prestonsburg's next scoring opportunity came when the Tigers were trying to return a punt and fumbled on their own 10.

Three plays later, Miller went in to score on a quarterback sneak. Kenny Wells plunged over for the extra point.

Late in the first quarter, Paintsville intercepted a Black Cat pass on their 35. The Tigers opened up with an aerial attack and moved the ball to the Prestonsburg 25. Then a penalty gave them a first down on the 10.

Paintsville was on the two-yard line and threatening to score when Mark Miller intercepted a pass two yards deep in the end zone and returned it all the way for a touchdown. Two key blocks by John Leslie and Wayne Brown allowed Miller to cover the last 50 yards of his electrifying run, untouched. The extra point try failed. Prestonsburg led 26-0 at half time.

The Black Cats faced a determined ball club, the second half. In less than three minutes of the third quarter, Paintsville had moved the ball from their own 40 to a first down on the Black Cat two. Paintsville scored on a running play over guard and converted for the point after. Prestonsburg failed to generate a sustained offensive drive in the third quarter. Paintsville was warned by the officials for unnecessary roughness on several occasions.

The Cats were caught looking the other way for one play in the fourth quarter when Carl Melvin, on a tackle eligible play, caught a pass on the Prestonsburg 42 and went in to score. The conversion was good. Paintsville had narrowed the Black Cat lead to 26-14.

Refusing to be outdone and a little angry over the previous play, Prestonsburg stormed back. After moving downfield and picking up a first down on the Tiger 30, Darrell Leslie covered the remaining yardage for Prestonsburg's final touchdown. Miller carried the ball over for the extra point. Final score, 33-14.

Cats Down Tigers To End '68 Season

The Prestonsburg high school football season Friday night with the Big One, a 33-14 victory over their old rivals, the Paintsville Tigers.

Although the team was in the process of rebuilding after heavy losses last year through graduation, Coach George McClellan brought his charges along well to record a season record of nine wins against two defeats. Over the 11-game schedule the Cats developed both a strong defense and an offense that perhaps reached its apex in the climactic closing game. Their only losses were to Jenkins and Beltry. Their victory string included wins over Wheelwright, Morgan County, Leslie County, Whitesburg, Elkhorn City, Pikeville, Hazard, Louisa and Paintsville.

While Prestonsburg played near perfect football in the first half Friday night, Paintsville made mistakes that resulted in costly penalties. The opening kick-off was taken by Darrell Leslie and returned to the Prestonsburg 45-yard line. With the help of a penalty assessed against Paintsville, the Cats moved steadily and picked up a first down on the Tigers' nine. Kenny Wells went on in for Prestonsburg's first touchdown of the night. The extra point attempt failed.

Paintsville's first series of downs started on their 29. Unable to move the ball on the ground, the Tigers attempted a

McDowell Hi Loses 1st Home Game Since 1965 to Salyersville

McDowell, Ky.—The Salyersville Hornets of Coach Jack Stafford came to McDowell last Wednesday night and broke a three-year string of 30 consecutive victories for the Daredevils on their home floor. The last time the Daredevils lost a home game was on December 15, 1965 when Maytown edged the Devils by two points.

Salyersville jumped into an early lead and pulled steadily away from the younger, inexperienced Daredevils. The Hornets displayed a powerful offense by placing four men in double figures.

The Daredevils experienced a cold shooting night and could place only two men in double figures. These were Charles Vance with 14 points and Benjie Stewart with 13. Steve Smith, the Daredevils' 6-10 freshman center, tallied only nine points but collected 15 rebounds and blocked nine shots. The final score was Salyersville 71, McDowell 52.

Two nights later, the Purple Flash of Martin came to McDowell, fresh from an 18-point victory over Knott county. Intense interschool rivalry produced one of the most exciting games of the young basketball season as the Daredevils edged the Purple Flash, 68-65. This raised the Daredevil record to two wins and one loss.

The Daredevils were outbounded by Martin but made up the deficit by shooting a hot 54 percent from the floor. McDowell was led in scoring by Ira Newman with 23, Benjie Stewart with 16, and Steve Smith with 11 points. The leading scorer for Martin was Joe Stumbo with 16 points.

Frank G. Clement, three-time Governor of Tennessee, and Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State University, will be the featured speakers at the 45th annual convention of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association, which convenes today (Thursday).

More than 2,500 educators are expected to attend the convention, which will be held in the Paramount Theatre. Floyd county schools closed for the two-day event.

The welcoming address will be delivered by Nelson Allen, of Russell and a native of Floyd county, as president of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association.

Following a greeting from Mrs. Martha Dell Sanders, president of the Kentucky Education Association, Clement will speak on "Education, Citizenship, Progress and You."

The Friday morning session will open at 9:30 with special music by the Pikeville College Band, directed by Carol Feather. The Rev. Omer M. Miller, pastor of the First Christian Church, Russell, will deliver the invocation.

"What's Ahead?" will be the topic of an address by Dr. Marvin Dodson, executive secretary of the Kentucky Education Association, scheduled at 10:05 a.m. Dr. Doran's topic will be, "There Is a Lad Here," and is scheduled for 10:25 a.m.

Mrs. Sanders, a former teacher at Paducah Tighman high school, is a candidate for president-elect of the National Education Association.

More than 30 school units are represented in the E.K.E.A. district, including 18 county districts, Prestonsburg Community College, Ashland Community College, Mayo State Vocational School, Maysville Community College, Ashland Vocational School, Pikeville College, and Morehead State University.

'AMERICAN FOLKLORE'
FEATURES DR. ROBERTS, NATIVE OF FLOYD-CO.

Dr. Leonard W. Roberts, native Floyd countian, is currently featured in the publication, "American Folklore," which included his presentation of "Magic Folktales in America."

The publication was the result of a lecture series on American folklore broadcast over the Voice of America, which was transmitted in 36 languages around the world. The purpose was to familiarize and develop interest in the field of folklore.

The series of forum lectures was presented in 1967-

1968 by 25 selected authorities within the field throughout the nation. The response from the broadcast over the Voice of America stations resulted in the publication of "American Folklore," which was edited by Professor Tristram P. Coffin, of the University of Pennsylvania, and the publishing of "Our Living Traditions" by Commerical House, Basic Books Inc., New York.

Dr. Roberts, who is presently serving as chairman of the Humanities Department at Pikeville College, believes the publication to be one of the best selections for a text book on folklore. Other published works accredited to Dr. Roberts includes "In the Pine"; "Folk songs of Appalachia"; and "Old Greasybeard".

SOME ADVISE CHANGES FOR EXTENSION SYSTEM

By ERNEST L. CLARK

(In The Courier-Journal)

Three years ago Kentucky became the first state in the nation to switch completely from its 51-year-old county agricultural agent system of farm advisers to one involving farm agents and specialists working on an area or regional basis.

Some people believe now that the switch was too abrupt, and are calling for modifications or a change back to the old system.

For example, seven county farm bureau federations have approved resolutions this year flatly stating their preference for the old system involving the assignment of one agent to each county with specialists on call to back him up on problems he is unable to solve.

And the parent Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation at Louisville has completed a study of the new system which is reported to be critical.

John W. Koon, executive secretary of the federation, confirmed that the study has been made, but declined to give details until officials of the University of Kentucky's extension service, which operates the system, have had time to study it.

Koon did say, however, that the report's conclusions will be discussed at the organization's convention in Louisville later this month, where delegates will make their wishes known.

Dr. William A. Seay, dean of the UK College of Agriculture and director of the extension service, confirmed that he has received the report, adding that it is undergoing study by a committee headed by Dr. E. M. True, assistant director of the extension service.

Seay said he "has long been aware of the reservations some people, including some on our own staff, have about the new system." That was the reason he more than a year ago appointed a committee to make an "in-depth" study of its own to determine if the system is accomplishing its goals and how it can be altered to make it more popular among farmers.

Seay said he hopes to make the committee's report public in about two weeks, and that he intends to implement its recommendations as quickly as possible.

Still another Kentucky farm organization official, George Stiles, Howardstown, president of the National Farmers Organization of Kentucky, expressed his dislike for the new system last week. Stiles said his organization has taken no official stand on the issue, but that he and many members have discussed it. He said the new system divided responsibility and authority which leads to confusion.

Under the new system which went into effect in 1965, the state was divided into 14 areas of eight or nine counties each. Each of the agents (those with bachelor's degrees only) and specialists (those with graduate degrees) has responsibilities within a county, but also is available to work in his specialized field in the other counties of the areas. Also involved in the change-over were the service's home economics agents and specialists.

At the time of the changeover, Dr. G. W. Schneider, associate director of the extension service, said the move was necessary "because we are passing from the era of the generalist to the era of the specialist." He said the new technology of farming demands highly-trained specialists to advise farmers. He also said the change allowed assignment of non-agricultural specialists in the state to work in areas where farming is not a major enterprise.

In its resolution calling for the study of the system, Farm Bureau delegates asked that specific attention be given to the part agriculture will have if and when the school expands the service university-wide. A spokesman said the delegates are afraid the service may lose its identity with agriculture with the assignment of non-farm specialists.

In addition, it asked the study group to determine if extension workers' salaries have kept pace with those paid in other states and with those paid for similar positions at UK.

The Kentucky Department of Mental Health reports that 100 of Kentucky's 120 counties now have community mental health mental retardation services available.

Teaching at McDowell Takes on a 'New Look'

McDowell, Ky.—When school opened at McDowell high school this year there was a "new look" in the English and Social Studies program.

During the summer a "task force" composed of Social Studies teachers, Kenneth Ray Akers and Bobby Allen, English teachers, Frances Turner, Sallie Miller and Bennie J. Stone, along with Lloyd Stumbo, principal, Adrian Hall, guidance counselor, and Anna Sue Stumbo, supervisor of Floyd county schools, was involved in a workshop headed by Edwardine Tyson, consultant, from the Elizabethtown (Pa.) area schools. The workshop covered writing basic guides and planning units for team teaching techniques in these two fields, and was made possible through the services of the Eastern Kentucky Development Corporation in cooperation with the Paints-ville Board of Education, Title III for Region VII of Eastern Kentucky.

At McDowell the entire English and Social Studies department has been organized in cooperative planning, unrestrained communication and sincere sharing. Much planning and preparation by this task force made this new team teaching program possible. Freshman, sophomore, junior and senior English, along with Speech and Creative Writing, have been correlated with Civics, World History, United States History and Current World Problems.

The group team teaching is composed of all English and social studies teachers, as well as the librarian and guidance counselor. The teachers are responsible for small and large group instruction as well as independent study. This team teaching is not a new teaching method but a combined, unified, correlated team effort or approach made more functional and suitable in meeting individual needs of pupils.

"We have attempted to adjust our program to the child rather than the child to the program," Principal Stumbo points out.

These advantages are claimed for the program:

1. Has forced teachers to plan together.
2. Provides more flexibility in scheduling individual people.
3. Permits the moving of individuals from one group to another without embarrassment or destroying their entire schedule of classes.
4. Makes literature more meaningful by correlating man's thoughts with his actions.
5. Exposes the student to history and literature simultaneously.
6. Uses combined teacher strengths to overcome individual teacher weaknesses.
7. Forces communication among teachers, counselor, librarian and principal.
8. Involves thematic teaching of English with chronological teaching of history—what had formerly been disconnected and meaningless now becomes ordered and reasonable to the student.

The High School Junior Program is conducted by the College of Arts and Sciences during the eight-week summer term at the University of Kentucky. The program is open to all students with a "B" average or better in their high school academic courses.

Jesse Stuart Says Teacher 'With Revolving Eye' Changed Life While In High School

Richmond, Ky. — "A gray-haired high school English teacher changed my life," says Jesse Stuart. "She had a revolving eye—you couldn't do anything she didn't see."

Stuart, author and teacher, addressed a student assembly at Eastern Kentucky University last week. He said, "One theme I wrote in high school, 'The Nest Egg,' won me 27 different A's in college, was printed by the Atlantic Monthly and included in a college reader."

Telling of some of the jobs he had as a youth, Stuart said, "Among the men I worked with were the roughest bunch of talkers I ever saw. They told the wildest stories, which I cannot tell you now. But you're reading these stories in my works, refined by education, of course."

This proves, said Stuart, that you have to "rub shoulders" with all kinds of people if you want to be a writer.

He said that when he left home to go to college, most of his suitcase was filled with short stories and poems, many of which he sold later to magazines. He advised Eastern students to keep most of their themes and the materials they create in school.

He also advised the students "to give good measure in everything you do—writing, teaching or whatever job." He said when he returned home from college poems and story ideas began to come to him "by the dozen." He wrote 42 poems on one Sunday morning, many of them on poplar leaves.
