Fate of High School At Martin Undecided; Sewage Plant Upheld

The embattled Floyd County Board of Education has won on three fronts within the week as construction of the consolidated high school at Eastern was approved in court here, the sewage plant for the same school was approved by the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission, and its redistricting of educational divisions was upheld by the State Board of Education.

The court case decided here Monday by Special Judge James D. Stephenson dismissed the suit filed by residents of Martin as to their attempt to enjoin the board from building the Eastern school. But a decision as to incorporating Martin high school in the merger with Wayland, Garrett and Maytown high schools into one school at Eastern was left to future adjudication.

The decision, which separates the two issues of the court action, followed hearing of testimony and arguments of attorneys.

Reminded by W. W. Burchett, attorney for the board, that assurance must be provided bond purchasers that no pending legislation would jeopardize the bond issue to finance the Right Beaver school construction, Stephenson expressed surprise that the bonding attorney had not already accepted his oral opinion holding that the board was free to build at Eastern.

The undecided portion of the case is based on an order of the late Circuit Judge John W. Caudill which stipulated that a high school shall be perpetuated within the Martin consolidated school district.

The board's victory before the Water Pollution Control Commission at Frankfort was outright Tuesday, but citizens of Martin indicated through their attorney, Paul E. Hayes, that an appeal to the courts may be filed. The commission held by unanimous vote that the sewage plant, as planned, is adequate.

Wayne Radliff, assistant superintendent of Floyd schools, represented the board at the Frankfort hearing, stressing merits of planned construction and denying charges of possible pollution of Beaver Creek from which the town of Martin, eight miles downstream from the plant, (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

THE VAGARIES OF SPRING WEATHER

Ten minutes ago, youngsters on their way home from school, bundled to their ears, were breasting a driving snowstorm in the best tradition of Orphans-of-the-Storm. Just now, a neighbor ambled down the street in his shirt-sleeves, collar open, basking in the sun.

This weather recalls the story of the oldtimer who, on a March day years ago, was plowing. The sun beamed down, he was sweating, and all bet up, was making uncomplimentary remarks to a span of balky mules. On his plowhandles was a heavy overcoat.

An acquaintance passed, saw the situation, noted the overcoat in particular, and wanted to know why in the name of something or other a man would be carrying an overcoat with him on a day like this.

The oldtimer ran a grubby hand across his brow and told the other,

"Any time a man is such a darned fool he'll trust Kentucky weather in March on one end of the field to the tuther, he ain't got sense enough to plow, anyhow."

The decision, which separates the two issues of the court action, followed hearing of testimony and arguments of attorneys.

Reminded by W. W. Burchett, attorney for the board, that assurance must be provided bond purchasers that no pending legislation would jeopardize the bond issue to finance the Right Beaver school construction, Stephenson expressed surprise that the bonding attorney had not already accepted his oral opinion holding that the board was free to build at Eastern.

I REFORMED - THE FISH DIDN'T

A note from Judi McNamee, of Suttland, Md. (she was Judi Reitz when she lived at Martin), comments on the dolor that marks my fishing stories. By way of cheering me up, she sends along some old Pennsylvania Dutch sayings on the subject. Here's a sample.

"Wammer flucht ibern fische langt mer nix," which, according to Mrs. McNamee, means, "If you swear while fishing, you will not catch any fish."

This raises a problem. I didn't catch any fish when I wammer flucht ibern, and now that I don't I still have the same trouble.

Education Study Slated for Meet

Sublett, director of the Teachers' Retirement System in Kentucky, will speak at 1:30 p.m. on the subject, "A Look at Our Retirement System," and at 1:50 a National Education Association representative will take "A Look at Our National Education Association." The discussion of the Kentucky Education Association will be made at 2:10 p.m. by Owen Arnold, of the KEA staff, and Miss Betty Jean Rowland, KEA field representative here.

Summation of these views will be given by O. E. Stanley, who will speak on the topic, "What We Have Seen As We Looked." The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. with "Moments of Musical Devotion," a presentation by the Rhythmic Youth Choir of Prestonsburg, directed by Mrs. Kathryn Frazier, and remainder of the morning will be devoted to business. "Sing Time," led by Mrs. Billie Jean Osborne, will open the afternoon program at 1:15.

$15,000 Fine Imposed For Stream Pollution

A fine of $15,000 was levied last week on the Kentland-Elkhorn Coal Co., Pike county firm, for pollution allegedly occurring on a fork of Big Creek, a big Sandy river tributary.

The fine was imposed by Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs at Frankfort. He also enjoined the coal company from further pollution of the Pike county stream.

Johnson Joins Local Program in Refuting Aid Failure Story

Detailed denial of the accuracy of a copyrighted news-story published recently in The New York Times and other newspapers, claiming that Russell Johnson, Ligon father of seven, is one of those in need who was failed by the aid program, was filed this week by the Emergency Food & Medical Program, a component of the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program.

The story in question said that Johnson, a silicosis sufferer, was refused help by the welfare board because it was not convinced he was permanently and totally disabled.

The program's reply, attested to by Johnson, includes these statements:

Johnson, 40 years old, the father of five whose ages range from 7 to 18, is a recipient of food stamps and has also received assistance from the Emergency Food & Medical Program. During the period, Aug. 15, 1968 through Feb. 18, 1969, he also received four vouchers for basic foodstuffs and two vouchers for food stamps.

The statement attested by Mr. Johnson concluded:

"In the article the representative did not check out the information and therefore misrepresented Mr. Johnson."

Black Lung Ass'n Formed at Meet

Formation of the Kentucky Black Lung Association was effected Sunday afternoon in a meeting at Wheelwright high school of miners with Dr. I. E. Buff, West Virginia cardiologist who led the recent successful battle for compensation laws in his state.

Members of the association immediately began developing plans to pressure state government for improved compensation legislation.

Dr. Buff urged a large gathering of miners and members of mine-workers' families to spend their vacations in Washington and there to insist their Congressmen do everything in their power to see that an effective mine health and safety law is passed. He also told the miners the new association should demand that Governor Nunn ask the Kentucky Legislature for improved workmen's compensation benefits for miners suffering from "black lung."

He indicated hope that Nunn might be persuaded to include the miners' problem in the proposed special session called to consider the interest rate ceiling on bank loans.

Buff described Kentucky miners' problem as "far more serious than in West Virginia," claiming two-thirds of Kentucky miners are not covered by any kind of accident or illness compensation.

B. F. Reed, Drift coal operator, said present Kentucky laws are as good as the new laws enacted in West Virginia.

Said Dr. Buff in his Wheelwright speech:

"You have no safety and health in your mines. How can you expect something else when your chief of mines is a coal operator whose point of view is certainly that of financial interest and income rather than men's health?"

The West Virginia doctor said he plans a mass meeting at Hazard, April 13, and another at Harlan a week later.

WATER RISE SET APRIL 4

Summer Lake Stage Seen by April 15th; Camp Area Stalled

Gates of Dewey dam will be closed next Tuesday to raise the level of Dewey Lake by five feet to its summer conservation pool. Dean Murray, reservoir manager for the U. S. Corps of Engineers, said this week. The lake should be filled to the summer stage by April 15, he said.

Although development of the Goble Branch area of the lake for public camping is at a standstill, Murray said the Corps of Engineers this year will start work on a recreation area, below the dam, and that it is expected development will progress to the stage that the area can be in use during a part of the coming season.

The work will include construction of an access road to the area, a parking area, picnic tables and restrooms. Games for children may be added later.

The Goble Branch section has been planned for two years or longer as a major camping area, but three or four tracts of land remain to be acquired and acquisition of property has come to a dead stop.

Floyd Gives $5,000-Plus To Help Stricken Youth

The drive for funds to provide a kidney transplant for 11-year-old Keith Williamson, of Paintsville, has passed the $20,000 mark, and Floyd county has provided at least a fourth of that total.

Clyde George, president of the Prestonsburg Area Chamber of Commerce, said last week that contributions handled by the Chamber totalled $5,008.85. The contributions sent directly to the family or to the Paintsville Jaycees, from this county are not included in that total.

Floyd churches, schools, civic groups, the public in general were swept by a wave of sympathy for the plucky Paintsville youngster whose life depends upon a transplant. Keith's father, Carroll Williamson, is manager of a cleaning and laundry firm here. The family's resources have been exhausted in the spending of more than $15,000 for the boy's past treatments.

Keith is now in Cleveland undergoing treatment at Mt. Sinai Hospital while awaiting a kidney for the transplant operation.

MANN DEATH IS HOMICIDE

Coroner Probe Fails To Fix Slaying Blame; Gun-User Unidentified

The bullet wound death on the morning of March 18 of Magoffin County Attorney Arnett Mann at his home in Salyersville was ruled a homicide after an inquest was held last Friday by Coroner Ishmael Caudill.

But there was no official statement as to who fired the .22-calibre bullet which caused the official's death.

Trains Draw Fire Blame Along River

Sunday Night's Rain Saves Heavier Loss; 4 Houses Destroyed

Forest fires raged out of control, last week-end in this county, and only a late Sunday night rain saved a situation that veteran members of the Kentucky Forestry Department termed the worst in their experience.

During last week, a time when hills and fields were tinder-box dry, upwards of 5,000 acres in this county alone were burned over, Forrest Burchett, assistant fire control supervisor, Department of Forestry, estimated. Half this acreage burned from Friday night till the Sunday night rainfall.

Both Price Moore, district forester, and Burchett said a 15-mile string of fire from Dwaile to Auxier was set by trains. From the level land along the tracks the flames spread to nearby areas of weeds and dry grass and on to the adjacent hillsides. They said white-hot accumulations of carbon are ejected from diesel-powered locomotives of the railway and that these caused the fires along the tracks.

Burchett said one fire originating from a train at Dwaile burned over a thousand acres. He ascribed a fire at Betsy Layne to the same source and others in spots along the line downstream as far as Auxier in this county. Moore said one such blaze started in front of the forestry office at Theima, Johnson county.

Eight or 10 other Floyd fires at more isolated places, removed from the railroad, broke out from various causes.

At least four dwelling houses—all unoccupied—were destroyed by fire during the week-end. Two of these were in Sand Branch on the railroad side of the river, below Emma. Two others were in "Sang Factory," near the mouth of Town Branch, across the river from here. At Stephens Branch, below Cliff, the roof of the home of Mrs. Tom Moore caught fire but the residence was saved. Outbuildings on her farm were destroyed, foresters said. The Prestonsburg Fire Department was called to Lancer vicinity to fight back encroaching flames.

High winds Sunday afternoon and night drove firefighters from the hills. The situation grew more hopeless until rain in 15 minutes that night did what a weary fire crew had not been able to do in a week-long losing battle.

The Department of Forestry has only four salaried employees in this county. In situations such as that of last week they enlist the services of relief program workers and any volunteers who will help. Burchett said the Nelson Program has about 200 men in this county but that few of them could be enlisted for firefighting.

"We couldn't help," he said. "Some days, we worked as much as 20 hours, and never less than 14 hours a day. But a thousand men couldn't have done anything with those fires, Sunday."

Search for Body Begins 3rd Month

Two months had elapsed this week since the search of the Big Sandy river for the body of seven-year-old Beverly Akers began, and the search continues.

Beverly, her mother, Mrs. Barbara Howell Akers, and her sister, five-year-old Tammy, lost their lives, the morning of Jan. 25, when the auto driven by Mrs. Akers left the highway at Emma and plunged into the river. The lone survivor was Phillip Akers, 11. Bodies of Mrs. Akers and Tammy were found, soon afterward.

The search has been a discouraging work, with cold weather often making it a physically painful process. The swollen, muddy river also has been a deterring factor.

Some have lost hope, others have forgotten the tragedy.

But the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad has not missed a week-end since Jan. 25 in maintaining the search for the child's body. Most days during the week, the river is patrolled.

And, members of the squad say, the hunt will continue until the child's body is found.

War In Vietnam

I have been thinking about the war in Vietnam and have given it a lot of thought. I have always been more or less a believer in the Monroe Doctrine, and that is to avoid foreign entanglements and keep your nose out of other people's business.

Many people thought Cuba would be a democratic republic, but Castro turned it into a Communist country and just about 90 miles off our shores, and the United States could have defeated his regime in about a week. The property of corporations and American business men were confiscated by him. The question uppermost in my mind is why should we permit Castro to get by with his Communist ideas and then go ten thousand miles or more to fight the same kind of government. We have now lost more than 33,000 American boys and more than 100,000 wounded. Why do we permit the North Vietnamese people to come south of the line dividing the north from the south, commonly called the DMZ? North Vietnam is violating this established line every day. I think the South should have the same right to invade the north Vietnam territory in the same way. The north is killing thousands of innocent men, women and children almost every day. Why should we not have the same right to throw rockets into Hanoi, the capital of North Vietnam that the north takes in shellings Saigon, the capital of the South?

This war in this country has now been in progress for several years at a cost of approximately 30 billion dollars per year, and no one knows how long we will be there and still losing thousands of the youth of this country. The United States is not seeking to reap any reward for this great loss, but merely to defeat Communism. Sometimes such action reminds us of forgetting an old mule or horse and at the first opportunity you will be kicked in the back and maybe killed, just as we have furnished foreign countries millions of dollars and food supplies, and when they get on their feet they tell us to get out and go home, and then they begin to kill each other. This country during the second World War furnished Russia ten billion dollars in Lend Lease, in material, which perhaps enabled that country to defeat Germany. What has Russia done since?—Never repaid one penny and, instead, has overrun many small countries and taken away their liberty. Right at this time Russia is supplying North Vietnam with most of their modern weapons that are killing out American youth.

It seems to me the only relief that will come to us will be for China and Russia to get into a great war, then Russia would need her own supplies. China could lose five Chinese and kill one Russian and then have more than two hundred and fifty millions left while there would be no Russians.

Several years ago, a line was established between North and South Korea, but this has been violated many times, as in Vietnam. War cannot be won by forming lines. You either win or lose a war.

posed school, draws its water supply. Hayes insisted the low rate of water flow at Eastern and deficiencies of the proposed plant would result in water contamination at Martin.

Under attack from Martin residents was the lagoon to be provided at Eastern to receive sewage prior to its entering the treatment plant. Rudy Yessin, hearing officer for the Water Pollution Control Commission, in his March 15 report on the first hearing of the case said, "The proof was that when the effluent left the lagoon it would be relatively free and clear from bacteria and that it was at that particular stage ready for treatment by the City of Martin waterworks plant." He added that there is "absolutely no showing that the effluent which would enter Right Beaver Creek would be polluted or would result in pollution."

The third decision was made by the State Board of Education last Thursday when it held that redistricting done by the board of education is satisfactory and within established guidelines.
Redistricting was done after a suit was filed in circuit court here by a group of Bull Creek residents, but the case went to the state board when it was contended the reshuffling of precincts was not satisfactory. Joe Hobson, attorney, and J. M.
Wells argued in opposition to the redistricting work as done.
The county board again was represented by Assistant Superintendent Ratliff.

Philippians 2: 20-21: "According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

REV. BEN PARKER

Bro. Parker was pastor of the Ivyton Baptist Church from the time of his ordination in February, 1958 until his death on March 27, 1968. Surely he now has said, even as Paul: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Some day all doubt and mystery will clear. The trials and threatening woes will disappear. Then, looking back upon our life's short span, We'll view with glad surprise God's perfect plan!

held by Coroner Caudill. This case involves the slaying, Tuesday of last week, of Tom Ray Risner, 22, Salyersville mechanic, at Hendricks by Deputy Sheriff Clay Eldridge.

Eldridge said that he and Deputy Prock Jackson were called to the home of J. B. Williams where, they had been told, men were drinking and shooting out the windows. He said Risner fired a .16-gauge shotgun at him and Jackson as they approached, then ran. At Eldridge's command to halt, accompanied by two warning shots fired into the air, Risner stopped and pointed his gun at the officer before the latter fired, this report says.

Miss Marcia Palmer Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, and Ishmael Hopkins, Jr., son of Mrs. Lena L. Hopkins, of Wayland, and the late Ishmael Hopkins, were married Saturday, December 28, at the Cynthiana Christian Church, with the Rev. Ray Hulian officiating at the ceremony.
 Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. James Smith, organist, and Mr. Randall Wells, soloist.
 The bride, escorted by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white slipper satin, designed with round neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves cuffed with crystal beading. The A-line style skirt swept into a full chapel train, scalloped on the edges and attached with a bow to the back of the gown. Her shoulder-length veil was attached to a crown of beads and crystal sequins. She carried a white orchid mounted on a white Bible.
 Mrs. Cecil M. Bennett, matron of honor, wore a floor-length gown of green velvet designed with green tating. She wore a matching headpiece and carried a white muff covered with green holly and red velvet ribbon.  Mrs. Smith, mother of the bride, wore a red A-line dress with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of white carnations.

 Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church basement under the supervision of Mrs. Stanley Lemons. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Randall Wells, of Morehead, and Mrs. Woodie Reeves, of Maysville. Attending the guest book was Miss Annabel Brodtkorb.
 After a wedding trip to the Smoky Mountains, the couple is residing in Morehead.

Weeds In Lawns

Spring control of most broad-leaved weeds in lawns should be done in late March or early April. Fall treatment in October or early November is also satisfactory.
 Some of the broad-leaved weeds commonly found in lawns are Buckhorn plantain, Wild garlic, Broad-leaved plantain, Ground ivy, Dandelion, Henbit, Chickweed, Seta-r-of-Bethlehem, Sheep sorrel, and Wood sorrel. Most of these can be killed in lawns without damage to grass by 2, 4-D, 2, 4-D plus 2, 4, 5-T, 2, 4-D plus Banvel D, 2, 4-D plus Silvex.
 Follow directions given on the container for rates of application. Repeated spot treatments following first application may be necessary. Clover may be severely injured or killed. Avoid spray drift that might injure desirable plants. Do not use same spray equipment for spraying flowers, vegetables, fruits or shrubs.

 And Nature will again do its magic work of beautifying the earth, turning the death of winter into those "living" days when transformation comes in myriad colors of blade and bud and leaf and flower.
 And so springtime is a time of challenge to us to clean up, paint up, to do our share toward beautifying what nature does not touch.

SPRING'S BOUTS WITH WINTER

King Winter is loath to give up his throne to fair maiden, spring, so he blusters and blows and brings a fresh puff of snow on his cold breath. The little creatures that had the first touch of spring in their hearts are frightened and go back to winter hiding. But spring will surely, if slowly, win her bouts with winter, and long before the calendar says spring.

Spring has many creatures to help her celebrate her advent. These come out boldly and joyfully to sing the resurrection songs of victory over winter death. If you walk out one sunny day toward the last of February, or the first day of March, if there is a brackish scum pond nearby, you'll hear the first glad jubilee of spring. There will come a shrill piping and peeping, and then a loud chorus. These are the little chorus frogs and they really sing the first spring song: they proclaim the victory over King Winter, which has kept them imprisoned under ice so long.

I always enjoy going near one of the scum ponds where many of the little frogs are singing their hallelujah chorus; it's a glad jubilee that breaks the back of winter. Never do creatures get as happy and delicious with joy. Usually there are four or five kinds of these little fellows living in the same pond and when they all sing together it makes a loud chorus one can hear half a mile away. The music swirls over the countryside and sets the pace for the forward march of spring.

There are the little cricket frogs, about an inch long, some green, others olive-brown, and most with a little dark triangle on the head. These sing in rapid time, with a sharp clicking like crickets make. Then there are the small chorus frogs, about two inches long, olive-green with black patches on back and hind legs. These little fellows whoop up the spring in every roadside ditch and brackish pond. Then we have the spring peepers, which pipe like a Scottish bagpipe. The peepers are small brownish frogs with a crucifix (cross) on the back and toe pads on feet. They get in such a delicious way of singing, they often climb up in shrubs around the ponds to send out their loud, musical piping. If one sits down near where they are all singing together, he can hear almost every kind of note sounded. Some of the notes are loud and musical, some are harsh, some of the singers quack like ducks, others sing like they are strangling, or had a sore throat but were determined to sing, anyway.

Their songs split the country silence right down the middle and frighten away Old King Winter; their music is born of love and mating and they will soon lay large batches of eggs in a mass of gelatin, long before spring comes by the calendar.

Then there is a bird that helps to usher in the spring long before it's due to arrive by the calendar. It is the red-eyed towhee, a long, slender bird, a shade smaller than a robin, with coal-black head and back, robin redbreast sides and a white belly. All winter long, the towhee has kept mostly on the ground with his flock, scratching in the snow or among the old leaf carcasses for seeds. While he has been busy scratching he has sent out erstwhile his ringing call of good cheer: TO-WHEE!

But along about the last of February, the male towhee leaves off his ground work, flies up in some roadside bush or a lawn tree perhaps and declaims: "DRINK YOUR TEA—EE—EE!" This is a peremptory reminder for one to go to the woods to find the red roots of sassafras to make tea "to thin the thick winter blood." The towhee seems to know just the right time to broadcast his loud reminder to his human friends to get their spring tea ready.

Then in the first warm spell, when the sun shines bright in the leafless woods, if one walks out among the trees and watches closely, he may see one of the most beautiful creatures of earth emerge from some hollow tree where it has hibernated. Now the first warm sun calls it from its winter hibernation and out it comes to go flitting through the barren woods like some fairy nymph. This is the mourning cloak butterfly, one of the very few butterflies that hibernates. In England it is known as the famous "Camberwell Beauty," and if one observes its colors closely, it will be seen to deserve that name. The wings are a deep, warm shade of brown with blue spots sprinkled around for decoration. On the outer edges of the wings, there is a narrow band of pale gold. This butterfly is one of the nymphs—the Nymphalids, and is widely distributed over the U. S. Its larvae are large, spiny caterpillars, which hatch from batches of eggs laid on twigs of elm, willow or hackberry; the eggs look like rows of small nail heads. John Keats, the poet, wrote: "A thing of beauty is a joy forever; it will never pass into nothingness." To see a mourning cloak butterfly sailing leisurely through the leafless woods is to realize that one of nature's supreme purposes is the creation of beauty.

TIDITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

WHAT CAN WE BRAG ABOUT?

Every generation has to brag about its prowess, but styles so change that it is rare that a younger generation cares much for what gave Pap or Grandpap a great thrill. My own children always grew drowsy when I would try to interest them in my joys as a youngster. Fortunately, my grandchildren, or some of them, probably because of things they have read at school, do sometimes take a mild interest in my boyhood experiences.

What thrill is there about going to town? My youngsters have lived all their lives in town and think it queer that anybody would have ever made a trip to any town just for the adventure. But, back in the early years of his century, our lives were almost marked off into epochs by the few times that we ever got to town, a bare eleven miles away. Going took us a full three hours, at best, three hours of anticipation; and the three hours on the way home were filled with plans to tell the ones who were so unlucky as to have to stay at home a few of the great events of the day. And we could actually see a train, not merely hear it when "falling weather" carried the sounds of trains into our remote area. And we could buy a chunk of ice as we left town and make gallons of ice cream for ourselves, our families, and our neighbors. And we could buy a sack of oranges or lemons to keep the home-stayers from being too sad at having been left out of the big adventure.

Why should a horse or a buggy be regarded as a thing to brag about? Even a small, patched-up car could cover lots more miles and not have to be curried or fed. But not even a voyage across the ocean or into the skies could have taken us into newer and stranger lands than we could explore by riding our steeds or driving them to the family buggy. A good horse gave a person some distinction, especially a "riding horse." How could a man now look as grand as he did when he saddled his fast-stepping saddle horse and rode down even a country lane, the envy of every other fellow whom he met? And, if the horses' owners wanted real class, they could put their horses in a livery stable and have them attended to while the masters did their "trading" in the nearby stores. Or if they drove their buggies, these same vehicles could keep, for an indefinite time, the chalk mark put on them for identification at or near the livery stable. I cannot imagine a car big or expensive enough to give one the distinction that a high-stepping horse and a bright new buggy gave the young bloods around Fidelity.

How about a fine house as something to give distinction? Even the smallest new house, I am told by builders and owners alike, can offer more livability than the veriest mansion of other times. Often older writers would talk about the cool, big rooms of the mansions; and, say the moderns, they certainly were cool in winter and fly-infested in summer, too. Long ago a very large percentage of us learned that we were paying pretty much for the honor of a big house; think of the mansions that had been abandoned before tourist days began to make some of them capable of paying their way in the world.

Well, maybe we had better brag a bit about ancestors. But with education and travel, sometimes ancestors shrink a bit. Cynics remind us that all of us have the same number of ancestors, that a man now getting grown could have had 64 ancestors and a great-grandmother in the Revolutionary War times; if one fit or fought, how about the other thirty-one? Maybe some of them were horse thieves, say the very worst cynics. And a highly-educated ancestor sometimes turns out to have been barely literate. I saw a deed once, from a very aristocratic family, where the great ancestor deeded some 400 acres to each of his 10 children and signed a cross at the end. Hum! Maybe we had better go out into the yard and see the new car, remembering that, in a very few years, it will be so shabby and out of date that we will want to trade it in on a new model.

162 Schools Take Part In Recognition Program

Avil McKinney, chairman of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Education Committee, announced last week that the second year of the Student-Teacher Achievement Recognition Program of the Chamber had achieved even greater participation throughout Kentucky and that the total of schools participating was 162 this year. School STAR STUDENTS have been designated from all schools participating, said McKinney, on the basis of achievement as related by the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test taken on or before December 31, 1968. To become a school STAR STUDENT, the student must have scored the highest of all students taking the test in his school. The School STAR STUDENT in turn selects a STAR TEACHER, a teacher who in their opinion has made the greatest contribution to the student's scholastic achievement. County STAR'S are then designated on the highest score system.

From the list of county STAR STUDENTS and TEACHERS, seven regional winners are selected. From the regional winners, a STATE STAR STUDENT and TEACHER are designated.

The awards of recognition consist of certificates for the school STAR STUDENTS and TEACHERS; plaques and a $100 Savings Bond or the Regional STAR STUDENT and TEACHER; and a "Lamp of Learning Trophy" plus a $500 cash scholarship from the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce for the STATE STAR STUDENT and TEACHER.

Star Students and Teachers named from Floyd county are: McDowell high school — Margaret Susan Reed, Frances A. Turner, teacher; Martin high — Patricia Ann Reynolds, Dortha W. Allen, teacher; Maytown high — Thomas Stewart, Lowell L. Martin, teacher.

"All nature is a vast symbolism; every material thing has sheathed within it some deep spiritual truth."—E. H. Chapin Usually in the last days of March, when the spring hills look bare and forlorn, with not a green leaf on the trees, the cold, little "sarvis" trees come out in pure white, adorning the naked woods with beauty. One may see them standing here and there in white like the late snow showers of March. They lend a touch of chaste, white beauty to the woods with their five strap-like petals appearing ahead of the leaves.

A member of The Rose Family, the sarvis is one of our prettiest and most useful small trees; it has beauty of leaf, fruit and bloom and plays a good part in feeding birds and squirrels. This small tree brings an almost magic touch when seen blooming alone in the drab, leafless woods as if to chase away the gloom of departing winter.

This tree was always called "sarvis" by the old-time land surveyors who surveyed the early patents of the region and then used a sarvis for a "corner tree." The tree has many other names to lend it distinction.

Along the Atlantic coastal region, it has long been known as the "red bush," a name it got from its early blooming, which takes place about the time the shad fish leave the salt waters of the ocean to go up the freshwater streams to spawn. The shad, largest of the salt-water herrings, wait at the mouth of the rivers until the temperature rises to about 60 degrees F. Then they set out upstream to spawn. At this time, the little sarvis trees are beginning to bloom their white banners on the barren hill slopes.

In pioneer times, the sarvis got another name that lends it a touch of immortality. In those "olden days" the circuit riders passed through the region on horseback along about the last of March, or as soon as the weather began to get warm. They visited all their members and held memorial services for those who had died the previous winter. They often held these services at the graveside of the dead, if the weather permitted. While holding the services, the old preachers often looked over the hills across from the cemetery and saw the sarvis trees standing in white beauty, reminding them, no doubt, of the chaste souls of the departed saints; so the circuit riders named the pretty tree "the service," a name that now appears in the books of history. The tree is today as a fitting memorial of the days of the circuit riders who honored their dead.

In some books, its name is also listed as the "June berry tree." It is the earliest of its family to bloom and the first to have ripe fruit. The berries ripen in June and turn a beautiful red-purple. When they ripen, there is a rare get-together between the birds and squirrels to get the berries. People like them, too, and many oldsters recall with a touch of nostalgia their carefree days of boyhood when they went to the woods in June to climb a sarvis tree to feast on its berries. This tree was also a favorite one of the Indians, who pounded the ripe berries into a cake and mixed them with jerked buffalo meat and suet to make a meat cake called "pemican." This cake would keep for months and was handy for the Indians to carry along on hikes through the wilderness.

The blooms of the sarvis have a sweet perfume and are decorated with red silken bracts, which add the warmth of colorful beauty to the blooms. The first leaves to appear are also red and silky, or "downy," as the botanists say. They often call the tree "the downy service berry." The leaves are ovate and have fine teeth around the margin. The bark is dark and has narrow ridges on older trees.

The sarvis sometimes grows to a height of 50 feet or more; its habitat is on dry hillsides, rocky spurs and along old sandstones near creek valleys. I have often seen sarvis trees growing on the sheer face of old sandstones and they sway over as if peering over the cliff.

Governor Bypasses Widow of Auditor

Governor Louis B. Nunn flew into the face of the political tradition that a widow should succeed her late husband to an unexpired term of office and may have set the stage for a spirited primary within the Republican party when he passed up Mrs. Darlene Conley, of Johnson county, widow of the late State Auditor Clyde Conley, in naming an auditor Monday to serve till a successor is elected next fall.

He appointed James Thompson, Louisville insurance executive, to serve as state auditor, the office which he had occupied 14 months at the time of his death, March 2.

Mrs. Conley promptly resigned as an assistant in the office and filed for the G. O. P. nomination for auditor at the May 27 primary. The new appointee, Thompson, said he will also seek the nomination.

John W. Greene, of Sandy Hook, who lost the auditor's race in 1967 to Conley, and Miss Louise Foust, a former state auditor, have filed on the Democratic ticket.

With Mrs. Conley went Joe C. Radcliffe, former Johnson county judge, who served as executive officer in the auditor's office during Conley's term. Radcliffe said he resigned "because Mrs. Conley... was not asked to succeed her late husband" and because he thinks the new auditor should be free to name his own staff.

Mrs. Conley said James Watson, Nunn's executive assistant, did not consult her about remaining in the office or about the appointment of Thompson. She wrote Thompson: "I do not think I should remain in state service during the campaign. The demands of seeking public office make it impossible to effectively perform the duties of this office while campaigning."

The departure of Mrs. Conley and Radcliffe leave in Frankfort few — perhaps only two — of the sizeable group of Johnson county Republicans who were named to key posts after the Nunn inaugural. Gone are Highway Commissioner Hazlett, Personnel Director W. Howes Meade, State Auditor Conley by death, and, now, Mrs. Conley and Radcliffe. James "Slick" Melvin and "Buzzy" Wheeler remained on the state payroll this week, it was said.

Governor Nunn said he asked his staff aides to tell Mrs. Conley after her husband's funeral that if she wished to remain in state government "we should be happy to retain her in a job commensurate with her abilities and experience."

The University of Kentucky recently received for the second year in a row the Award of Honor from the National Safety Council for its safety record. Only one other university in the country has been twice honored.

Stilton for Constable

Paul Stilton, Democratic candidate for Constable, Dist. No. 4, served in the U. S. Army in the Pacific theatre during World War II. 'Whatsoever Things'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

A gentleman and his wife were in the furniture store looking at the new bedroom suites. "How much is that one?" asked the man.

"That one is only $299.95. And there is nothing down with 36 months to pay with bank rates."

"Good," replied the husband. "Do you have something for me to sign?" Presented the contract, he promptly signed.

Leaving the furniture store, this same couple went to the telephone company. "We would like a phone for our new home," said the lady. "We are happy to be of service to you," said the gentleman. "Just sign this card right here and we will bill you monthly." "I sure will," replied the lady. She picked up the pen and signed her name.

The couple then went to buy a new lawn mower. "This is an excellent machine," said the salesman. "It sells for just $149.98 with 18 months to pay." "I like it," said the husband. "I believe I would like to pay $10 down and the rest by the month." "Good," said the clerk. "Just sign right here." The man picked up the pen and signed his name.

On leaving the store, the lady remarked, "We had better go take out some more insurance on the car. We haven't got enough for adequate protection." At the office the conversation went something like this: "We need some more insurance." "How much do you need?" "About five thousand more." "Sure. Sign right here. We will bill you quarterly."

Driving home, the woman remembered that they had forgotten something. "We forgot to pay the car note, honey," she said to her husband. "We sure did," he said in agreement. "And the note I signed said it could all come due if I failed to make a payment." They turned around and headed back toward town.

That afternoon, after they got home from paying all the bills that were due, a member of their church came by to see the couple. "I have your pledge card for the church," said the visitor. "How much do you think you would like to pledge for the coming year to His work and His Church?"

"PLEDGE!" cried the man. "Look, we don't believe in pledging! We don't pledge for anything! Why, the nerve of the church, asking us to pledge. What right do they think they have to ask us to do such a thing? They way things are now-a-days, I wouldn't pledge a dime a week. I will give what I can when I come. But I don't intend to pledge a penny!" He then ushered the embarrassed visitor to the door.

Sometimes we feel folks who speak of hypocrites in the church are justified in doing so. Most of the time they aren't. Most of the time they are only trying to defend something they do which is defenseless. But there are times, unfortunately, when someone speaks of hypocrites in the church that we have to agree with them. When one thinks the above over, what other answer can he come up with?

'Teacher' in School Here Gets No Pupil Backtalk

Johnny is a good student. He seldom "talks back" to teacher — and to this one, never.

Teacher tells Johnny, "Wrong answer, try again." Johnny may have words at the tip of his tongue, but he doesn't speak them.

Because he's a Prestonsburg elementary student, and teacher is a computer.

The school is participating in a new program in computer-assisted instruction in mathematics at the elementary and junior high levels.

This is a supplementary program to the regular mathematics classes in one fourth grade class, a fifth grade class, two sixth grade classes, and one combination seventh and eighth grade class.

A teletype machine, one of a vast network of teletype terminals connected to a large computer at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif., has been installed at the school here and has been in use since late January.

This new teaching device is designed to individualize the materials to the students' level of development in each phase of mathematics. Each student is assigned a number by name and all future computer transmissions are handled in this manner. The beginning grade level for each student is predetermined by scores on the Stanford Achievement Test.

The first lesson in each series of seven lessons is a pre-test, and the last lesson is a post-test. The pre-test determines where the child begins his instruction. There are five levels of instruction and the higher a student scores on the pre-test, the higher the beginning level for the first lesson. The second lesson depends on the score of the first lesson.

If a student scores between 80% and 89% on the first lesson, the second lesson will be on the same level of instruction as the first. If he scores below 60% the level will drop, while a score above 89% will raise the level. This procedure continues through all remaining lessons. Each lesson contains new material with some review from previous lessons.

The procedure which the student must follow to receive the lesson is a simple process. He must first press the "start" button on the teletype. The teletype terminal will then type, "Please type your number and name." The student responds by typing his assigned number, hits the space bar, and types his first name, then hits the space bar again. The computer will then type the student's last name, and when the student hits the space bar, the lesson appears.

One problem appears at a time in ten seconds. The student is given ten seconds to respond. If he fails to make a response in ten seconds, the teletype will type, "Time is up, try again." Ten more seconds is then allowed. After two tries by the student, the teletype will type the answer. If the student answers within the allotted ten seconds, but with an incorrect response, the teletype will write, "Wrong answer, try again." Following two incorrect answers, the terminal will type the correct one.

At the close of each lesson, which is never more than 20 problems, the teletype will type, "End of Drill number so-and-so, 20 problems, 80 percent correct in 163 seconds. Goodbye. Johnny — tear on dotted line."

Each lesson will normally last from three to ten minutes. The student tears off his lesson from the teletype machine and keeps it for his own classroom use. His teacher receives a complete report of each student at the end of the seven-part series.

Planting Fruit Trees

Many people ordered fruit trees for arrival in early March. There are several steps that should be taken to insure that these trees live when planted.

The roots should be kept moist and protected from drying out at all times before and during planting. Some moisture can be added when you open wrappings for inspection. They can be kept for a short while as they were shipped if placed in a cool basement or cellar. They should be heeled in the soil if you must keep them for very long. Many people soak the roots in a pail of water for 24 hours before planting.

The hole should be dug large enough so that the roots can be fanned out without crowding and deep enough so that some top soil can be put in the bottom. Broken roots should be cut off and twisted roots should be separated.

Fruit trees should be set slightly deeper (1-2 inches) now than they were in the nursery.

In the case of dwarf trees, be sure that the graft or bud union is above ground. If it is below the surface, roots may form above the graft and destroy the dwarfing effect. The dwarfing effect is in the rootstock.

It is important not to leave air pockets which would dry out the roots. Fill some fine soil around the roots and work it in with your fingers. Pack the soil as you fill the hole. Water generously 5-10 gallons per tree if possible.

She didn't even care that it turned water directly into steam without boiling it. She showed no emotion when we explained that this is revolutionary and super-efficient, that it gets more out of every pound of coal and eliminates a lot of expensive equipment.

BUT SHE WAS IMPRESSED when we pointed out that ideas like this help us hold the price of electricity down. Betsy gave a big smile to learn that while the price of practically everything in her budget has gone up the past ten years, the average cost of each kilowatt-hour she uses has dropped 18 percent.

Like Betsy Miller, you may not care about super-critical steam generation. But it's one of our many techniques to keep dependable power at your fingertips at the lowest possible cost. And we know you care about that.
