Small-Mine Men Seek Revised Bill

Park Group Told Danger To Industry

Speakers Say Bill Fails Safety Goal; Letters Are Asked

A massive letter-writing campaign to protest federal mine legislation that could wipe out Eastern Kentucky's small-mine industry was urged at a mass meeting held Sunday afternoon at the amphitheatre of Jenny Wiley State Park.

Two hundred or more small-mine operators from Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio and Tennessee were told to write their congressmen, telling them of the impact the proposed legislation will have on the industry. Congress recessed this week, and the bill is due for action when it reconvenes after vacation.

Speakers argued that the so-called safety bill, which will place all mines in the "gaseous" category and require of all costly "permissive" equipment, will not make non-gaseous mines more safe but will force 100,000 miners and mine-related workers to other work or into idleness.

John F. Kilcullen, Washington, D. C., attorney for the Independent Coal Operators Association, urged operators to work through their representatives in Congress for a modified bill which would save lives and yet not destroy the industry. He said the "permissive" equipment required by the bill in its present form would cost the average small operator $200,000 — a bill they cannot pay.

B. F. Reed, treasurer of the Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., Drift, said the bill, as presently written "wouldn't have saved a life in the last 16 years in Eastern Kentucky. Paul Patton, a Pike county operator, said, "More men will be killed going to Detroit looking for work than this bill would save." He argued that he and others like him would be forced out of business "in the name of safety when the safety factor doesn't really apply."

Names of 172 women and men to serve as precinct election officers at the local option show-down to be held in this county Saturday, Aug. 23, were announced after Saturday's meeting of the county election commission.

CLINIC TIFF, SUIT SUBJECT

Dr. Hall Asks Court For Ruling on Rights After Quitting Clinic

The Floyd circuit court is asked in a suit filed here to determine the rights of a doctor who has severed her connection with the Daniel Boone Clinic at McDowell.

One of the main points of contention is the doctor's right to continue practice at McDowell. The plaintiff is Dr. Mary A. Hall, who in July, 1969 accepted employment by the clinic at a salary of $24,000 a year.

Dr. Hall notified defendants, Willard and Woolsey, P. S. C., doing business as the Daniel Boone Clinic, of her intention to terminate the professional relationship as of August 23, and the termination notice was accepted, the complaint points out, but a dispute arose as to the resulting rights and liabilities of both parties.

One point of disagreement revolves around whether or not plaintiff is prohibited from continuing the practice of her profession at McDowell. The clause in the by-laws of the clinic which is in question is Section 10 of Article 12, which provides:

Each fulltime employee "expressly covenants and agrees (unless waived in writing by the corporation) that, for a period of one year following the termination of employment with the corporation, he will not, directly or indirectly, for himself or as agent, or on behalf, or in junction with, any person, firm, association or corporation, engage in the practice of medicine within a 50-mile radius from the city where he has primarily performed his services."

Maybe It's The Heat

Talked with the boy, the other afternoon. Weather seems to have been a little hot for his liking, and he explained they hadn't been feeling like running up and down any mountains since returning from Mexico. As his voice trailed weakly off, I caught something that sounded like "Tamales." Wonder what could be ailing him?

AT MOUNTAIN MANOR

There are a hundred stories waiting to be written, out at the Mountain Manor Convalescent Home here, I am told. Most of the patients there are old and sick, and many are as helpless when they were infants. But not all are old-stories. Some are pure, human-interest yarns that need the telling, so I am told.

Leslie and Collins On Senior All-Stars For Saturday Game

Two standouts on last year's Prestonsburg high school football team will play in the 13th annual Senior Kiwanis Bowl game at Lefty Hamilton Park, Williamson, W. Va., Saturday night, it was announced this week.

AV, VISTA Groups Ban Told by Clark

Commenting on the situation as it stands after last Thursday's altercation at the administration building here of the Floyd County Board of Education, Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark said in a prepared statement this week:

"The Superintendent restates the position of the school system: 'We are most anxious to meet any time with any delegation from any section of Floyd county in our office, but we do intend to resist with all our energy continued harassment by these imported characters whose motives appear to be to take over the direction of our school system, if not all Floyd county. I shall meet the VISTA's and Appalachian Volunteers at the front door, next time, determined that they will capture our schools only over my dead body.'"

SHOE FIRM NAMES TWO

Rogers and Music Move to Key Posts With Company Here

Two Kentuckians — one, a native of this county — have been named to the management team of the Prestonsburg Shoe Company (United States Shoe Corp.).

Al Rogers, a native of Frankfort, has assumed his duties as assistant plant manager, and Bob Music, of East Point, has been promoted to the position of plant controller.

Mr. Music's promotion followed his completion of a management development program at U.S. Shoe plants at Ripley and Cincinnati, Ohio. A graduate of Prestonsburg high school, he returns to the area after 16 years' residence in Ohio where he attended Ohio State University and was branch manager for the Reserve Life Insurance Company in Columbus, He, his wife, Gretta, and two daughters, Sherry and Brigitte, reside at East Point.

Mr. Rogers comes here from Miami, Fla., where he was assistant manager, quality control, for Miami Footwear. He has worked in every major area of the shoe industry for the last 20 years, with experience in quality control, sales, personnel and manufacturing. He is a graduate of the University of Georgetown.

He and his wife, Mattie reside at 15 Ford street. Their son, Rodney, and daughters, Brenda and Betty Jo, are college students in Tennessee and Florida.

HALL SLAIN ON MUD Cr.

Mitchell Is Wounded In Exchange of Shots; David Akers Arrested

Charlie Hall, 31, of Branham's Creek, was killed this morning (Thursday) in an exchange of revolver shots with one of three persons allegedly discovered taking gasoline from a truck of the Ranier Construction Company on Mud Creek, near the mouth of Toler.

Harold Dean Mitchell, 20, was shot in his leg. An artery was cut by the bullet, and the wounded man was removed from the McDowell hospital to the Methodist hospital at Pikeville. Officers presume that he was struck by a bullet fired by Hall.

New Squirrel Season Opening Set Saturday

Kentucky's 1969-'70 hunting season gets under way at day-break Saturday, August 16, with the opening of the 119-day squirrel season. However good the season may be, even the most optimistic knows it can't be expected to match last year's which saw more squirrels in Eastern Kentucky than the oldest hunter had ever seen.

Mrs. Mary J. Osborne Dies Last Thursday At Nursing Home Here

Mrs. Mary Jane Osborne, 71 years old, of Martin, died last Thursday at the Mountain Manor Convalescent Home here after a long illness.

Born May 21, 1898, she was a daughter of the late John and Susie Flannery Kleanes, and was the widow of Perry Osborne. She was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon).

Survivors include two sons, Jackie Osborne, of Price, and James Osborne, of Martin; three daughters, Mrs. Ruth Preston, of Florida, Mrs. Pauline Noblitt and Jean Osborne, both of Sacramento, Calif.; two sisters, Miss May Skoons, of Anchorage, Alaska, and Mrs. Rosa Cherwinsky, of Cleveland, O., and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Martin. Burial was made in the Martin cemetery, the Hall Brothers Funeral Home directing.

Mrs. Melvina Tackett Melvin Resident, Dies At McDowell Hospital

Mrs. Melvina Tackett, 75, of Melvin, passed away Friday at the McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital. She had been in failing health for some time.

Born in Pike county, Feb. 16, 1894, she was a daughter of Scott and Rhoda Johnson Burke. Her husband, Levi Tackett, survives.

Survivors, besides her husband, are five sons, Dings and Demas Tackett, both of Melvin, Clyde and Joseph Tackett, both of Kendallville, Ind., and Denver Tackett, of Jonesville, Mich.; two daughters, Miss Bernice Tackett, of Melvin, and Miss Coar Tackett, of River Rouge, Mich.; six brothers, Burchfield Burke, of Weeksburg, Dave, Joe and Wally Burke, all of Beavinsville, Britton Burke, of Betsy Layne, and Bailey Burke, of Paintsville, Ky.; two sisters, Mrs. Alice Hall, of Boyd county, and Mrs. Leana Johnson, of Knott county, and 18 grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted from the residence Monday at 10 a.m. by ministers of the Regular Baptist Church. Burial was made in the family cemetery at Melvin under the direction of Merion Funeral Home.

Injunction Bars "Protest" Groups As Fight Sequel

Appalachian Volunteers, Volunteers In Service to America (VISTA), a dozen individuals "and other persons in active concert or participation with the named defendants" were enjoined Tuesday by circuit court order from trespassing upon property of the Floyd County Board of Education.

Grand Jury Probe Of Narcotics Seen

Lake Public Use Area Target of Vandalism; Damage Estimate, $770

Vandals caused damage estimated at $770 Monday night in the public use area created by the U. S. Corps of Engineers, near the west entrance to Dewey Dam. Fingerprints have been photographed in an effort to identify those who made a shambles of the area.

Dean Murray, Dewey Dam manager, said the looters destroyed four 32-gallon trash cans and wrecked a water fountain on the grounds which they left strewn with garbage, and inside restrooms smashed windows and lights and damaged attachments.

Advertising Draws Tourists to Area

It pays to advertise, Eastern Kentucky Highlands Vacation Region 12 leaders learned from actual advertising results Monday evening at the region meeting held at May Lodge.

Robert Holcomb, Pikeville, chairman of the region until the recent election and installation of Curtis Clark, Prestonsburg city manager, reported on results of the region's northern newspaper advertising campaign this year, and that report shows:

To date, the total of individual inquiries about the region stands at 76,218, with an additional 8,312 school inquiries received. The breakdown by states of these inquiries follows:

Ohio, 14,079; Illinois, 12,649; Kentucky, 11,131; Michigan, 9,310; Indiana, 7,077; New York, 6,984; Pennsylvania, 5,693; Texas, 4,568; Wisconsin, 4,382; New Jersey, 3,169; California, 3,080; Missouri, 2,994; Canada, 2,744; Florida, 2,580.

Daily tabulation of inquiries kept in Frankfort shows that 20% of all inquiries sent the state of Kentucky concern Region 12 which is composed of Floyd, Pike, Johnson and Martin counties.

Lawrence Hall, spokesman for Magoffin county, asked that that county be taken out order enjoined them from doing any physical damage to board property or committing any act of violence upon the superintendent.

The petition requesting the restraining order alleged that for the last two weeks, and in increasingly large numbers, the defendants and (or) some or all of them, and those acting in concert and active participation with them, have congregated upon school property on Second avenue, Prestonsburg, where the board maintains its administrative offices; have interfered with the orderly conduct of business and have attempted to enter the building and trespass upon the property of the board; have done bodily harm to Superintendent Clark and threaten to continue to harass and intimidate plaintiffs, Mr. Clark and the board of education.

The petition also alleged that defendants "to desist and refrain" to the superintendent of schools and other employees unless they are restrained from doing so.

Board Resolution, Restraining Order May Be Attacked

The claim was made Tuesday in a letter signed by six residents of the Ligon-Mud Creek area and addressed to the Floyd County Board of Education that the board's property "off limits" to Appalachian Volunteers and VISTA representatives is unconstitutional and in violation of Kentucky law.

"As taxpayers of Floyd county," a portion of the letter read, "we feel that we have every right to be on public property, no matter what our occupation or income. We therefore request that the resolution barring AV's and VISTA's from school property be rescinded, and ask that school employees give courteous attention to all

Dope Sales Spread Seen Thru County

September Docket For Court Session Low with 1 Murder

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold Stumbo said Wednesday he will direct the attention of the September grand jury to the sale of narcotics in the county.

Use of marijuana reportedly has spread in recent months, and the probe will center on its sale.

The court docket is light for the Sept. 2 opening of the criminal term. Only 56 cases are listed for trial. The lone murder case is that of Charles Jackson, set for trial Sept. 15.

The list of jurors drawn for service during the term follows:

Paul Curry, Wheelwright; Mrs. Paul Curry, Wheelwright; Mrs. Helen Hammonds, Water Gap; J. C. Casey, Wheelwright; Mrs. Benton Ousley, Cliff; Verion Johnson, Water Gap; Raleigh Rice, East Point; Arnold Akers, Bypro; Claude Robinson, East Point; Eva Hyden, East Point; Rosa Conley, West Prestonsburg; Lillian Pelphrey, Lancer; Charles H. Stanley, Martin; Mrs. Bud Calhoun, Prestonsburg; Pete Dawson, Hi Hat; Herbert Baldrige, West Prestonsburg; Joe Hicks, Blue River; James E. ## FEST TALENT LIST GROWS

Highlands Folk Fest Program Is Delayed As Performer Added

The list of performers for the fourth annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre continues to grow, Mrs. Edith James, director, said this week.

The wealth of talent making itself available is so great that the festival program will not be completed till next week as new numbers are being added. All this promises the most successful festival since the annual event became a part of the region, Mrs. James indicated.

New additions to the program include singers, Virginia and Luther Shivel, Mrs. Michael Donahoe and Mrs. Sam Fitzpatrick; the Frankfort dulcimer group headed by Mrs. Charles Vickers and Foothills Scramblers, members of Richard Jetts Mountain Dancers who regularly enliven programs at Natural Bridge State Park.

The festival, sponsored by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association, will be held the last three days of this month.

There is Eddie, the four-year-old from Glasgow, Ky., who has captured the hearts of nurses, aides and all the staff. The State Welfare people appealed to nursing homes for a place for the tyke. Only Mountain Manor responded. The women at Mountain Manor took the blind child, who may always remain a helpless baby, to their hearts. They have ordered him a baby-bed. They have a fund going, "Pennies for Eddie." This is love at its finest—Eddie can't see, he can't thank them, not even by a nod of his head. But he's there, not a mere something, but someone to be loved.

"Such compassion is something you don't pay for," one of the owners of Mountain Manor remarked, the other day.

Then there's the old fellow who makes his way, every day, to a certain spot, carefully sets up his checker-board, black here, red over there, then sits patiently, waiting for somebody to stop by and play. It may be that the old-timer is waiting for a checker-playing pal who has gone on ahead; he may have forgotten.

If I weren't chicken, I'd stop and play him a game. I might serve two purposes — supply him opposition and, in all likelihood, get my pants beat off.

A LETTER TO PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS,

We are facing that which may be a crisis in our county: Will we be God-fearing people and vote Dry or will we be with the money-mad and vote wet?

You know we cannot profit by ill-gotten gains. Only a FEW people in this county will get rich from the sale of liquor if it is made legal. The rest will be made paupers from the extra taxes they will have to pay to fight the crime that will be caused by drink, and that is not the worst of it. The teen-agers that will be made alcoholics and destroyed is far worse than being a pauper. The bootlegger will not get rich but he will make money because they can sell their homemade liquor cheaper and still make as much as the tavern keeper. Some of them will even work with the tavern keeper, selling after hours to minors and on Sundays. All the buyer will have to do if he is caught is say he got the whiskey from someone selling it legally and the bootlegger will go free.

We parents try every known method to keep our sons from having to go into the service of our country because we are afraid they will be killed. That is understandable. But how many parents will go to the polls and vote wet and make alcoholics of their children, which will not only destroy some of them drunk on the highways but will also destroy their characters and their souls in the end? Parents, you had better have a millstone hanged around your necks and cast into the sea than place a stumbling block in the paths of your children and neighbors' children by voting wet.

Maytown has not had a police officer since it was wet many years ago and has not suffered greatly in those years. While it was wet, there were three or four murders committed here. Parents, ask God to give you the wisdom to know how to vote right and the courage to do so. You will never regret doing right but you will pay dearly for doing wrong. Liquor destroys, it doesn't build character, it doesn't help your child through school, it doesn't have one single good asset. WHY ASK FOR SOMETHING LIKE THAT? The man that sells it will reap only ill-gotten gains; and, the man that drinks it will only get poorer and in the end lose all.

Why should we have to give all we have in taxes to supply officers to take care of us when there would be no need if all parents voted Dry? The argument of that great amount of money the county will reap in taxes from the sale of alcohol is a myth. The county receives ONLY the license money. BUT the county will have to PAY an excess of $60,000 annually for the salaries of policemen and deputy sheriffs that will have to be added to the force if the county goes wet. It has been proven in the past that it pays to stay Dry. Please vote that way.

Sincerely,
 MRS. ED SUTTON
 LANGLEY, KY.

NATIONALLY KNOWN SPEAKER TO SPEAK AT FLOYD RALLIES

CHARLES WESLEY EWING
Royal Oak, Mich.

Mr. Ewing will be leading a series of Floyd County Christian Dry League rallies at the places and times listed in the schedule below. One of the outstanding public speakers in the country, he drew from TIME magazine this comment after his keynote speech at the national Prohibition Party convention: "... hard-hitting prohibition oratory."

Mr. Ewing was the principal speaker at the National Temperance and Prohibition Council convention in Washington, D. C., last February. He is president of the Faith and Freedom Bible Institute, Royal Oak, Mich., and of the Evangelical Church Alliance, Inc. This man knows the alcohol problem across the length and breadth of America. It is the same in Floyd county. You are urged to hear him.

THE SCHEDULE OF RALLIES

Monday, Aug. 18, 7:30 p.m. — Martin (place to be announced)
Tuesday, Aug. 19, 7:30 p.m. — Betsy Layne High School
Wednesday, Aug. 20, 7:30 p.m. — Prestonsburg Grade School Auditorium
Thursday, Aug. 21, 7 p.m. — McDowell
Friday, Aug. 22, 7:30 p.m. — Garrett High School

Letters To the Editor

AN INVITATION

Editor, The Times:

With the public mind centered often on Communism, I would like to urge that those in authority in public places, ministers and other leaders, as well as students and laymen, attend the showing of THROUGH BLOOD AND FIRE to be shown at Faith Church at 7:30 p.m. August 16.

This film deals with the actions and views of the Communists in Russia towards their own citizens who are Christians and will not join the Party. It is first-hand information; sections of the film were filmed secretly in Russia. As educational material, let alone spiritual, it will be well worth the viewing of every Floyd countian. There is no charge.

Mrs. Ethel Wallen, 68, Martin Woman's Sister, Is Claimed Monday

Mrs. Ethel Wallen, 68, of Paintsville, died Monday morning at a Frankfort, Ky. hospital following an extended illness. She was a sister of Mrs. Nettie Conley, of Martin.

A native of Johnson county, she was born Sept. 13, 1900, a daughter of Franklin and Rachel King Williams.

Survivors, other than Mrs. Conley, are her husband, William Wallen; two sons, William E. and Byrnes Fairchild, both of Frankfort; two daughters, Mrs. Betty Myers of Newport, Ky., and Miss Janet Wallen, of Paintsville, and one other sister, Mrs. Myrtle Sammons, of Paintsville.

She also leaves five grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. from the First Christian Church at Paintsville, the Rev. Cecil Sherman officiating. Burial was made in Highland Memory Park at Staffordville.

Mrs. Sally Ann Martin Succumbs At Age 85; Burial Made At Midas

Mrs. Sally Ann Martin, 85 years old, of Hueysville, died Saturday at the Mountain Manor Convalescent Home here.

Born Dec. 13, 1883 at Hueysville, she was the daughter of Fred and Mandy Gearheart Martin, and was the widow of Landon Martin. She was a member of the United Baptist Church.

Survivors include three sons, Woots Martin, of Hueysville, Joel Martin, of Estill, and Kruger Martin, of Mount Gilead, O.; a daughter, Mrs. Madge Howell, of Columbus, O., and four brothers, Joel, Tip and Jim Martin, all of Hueysville, and Banner Martin, of Ashland, Kentucky. Also surviving are 15 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

Funeral rites were conducted Monday at 2 p.m. at the home of a brother, Joel Martin. Burial in the Gearheart cemetery at Midas was directed by Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

people. The court injunction must be withdrawn."

The letter, signed by Gordon Meade, Troy Frasure, Ida Akers, Si Hamilton, Piney Williams, Woodrow Rogers and Nick Frasure, requested a meeting with the board of education to be scheduled by the end of the first week of school. "Since we are all interested in the welfare of our children, we are hopeful you will agree with this constructive approach," the communication added.

The writers said the two main issues they would like to discuss are (1) the school lunch proposal and the ESEA local advisory committee, and (2) the resolution adopted by the board. "We feel," they wrote, "that the board has not met the federal requirements concerning public announcement of school lunch regulations."

Superintendent of Schools Clark last week announced that increased federal funds will make it possible for every schoolchild in the county to be fed this year, whether he has the money to pay for his lunch or is unable to pay.

- 3 - (Continued from Page One)

Dr. George P. Archer, mayor of Prestonsburg, predicted the bill, if unchanged, will deprive the Big Sandy valley of $50 million in income annually and would create a coal shortage next winter of 40 to 50 million tons of coal.

Spokesmen for the operators emphasized that they were not fighting safety but that they were opposing a "lump" classification of all mines as "gassy," even though tests show that the great majority of Kentucky mines are non-gaseous. Kalcullen maintained the bill would make mining more dangerous, because it would eliminate the small, non-gaseous operations and shift all coal production to large, "gassy" mines whose owners will be able to install "permissive" equipment. And permissive equipment, rules, laws and all prohibitions will not keep some miner from lighting a cigarette in a big mine, it was maintained.

The only opposition was voiced by John O'Leary, director of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, who denied that the legislation will close the small operations.

Mrs. French Maggard and Mrs. Bess Dudley, of Lexington, attended the performance of "Anything Goes" at the Jenny Wiley amphitheatre, while guests at the May Lodge.

Mrs. Anna Ousley Dies In 59th Year; Funeral Held Monday

Mrs. Anna Ousley, 58 years old, of Martin, died Saturday at Our Lady of the Way hospital at Martin after a two-month illness. Born Oct. 11, 1911 at Pyramid, Mrs. Ousley was a daughter of the late Johnny and Louellen Ousley Griffith.

Surviving are her husband, Wilford Griffith; four brothers, Jonathan Griffith, of MacArthur, O., Ellis Griffith, of Risner, Clyde Griffith, Peru, Ind., and Butler Griffith, of Leslie, Mich., and three sisters, Mrs. Bertha Cole, of Stockbridge, Mich., Mrs. Dixie Marshall, of Grayson, Ky., and Mrs. Thelma Steinway, of Chelsea, Michigan. She also leaves two grandchildren.

Funeral rites were held at the residence Monday at 10 a.m., ministers of the Regular Baptist Church officiating. Burial was made in the Dingus cemetery at Dinwood under the direction of Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Albert Johnson, 58, Drift Miner, Victim At McDowell ARH

Albert Ray Johnson, 58, of Drift, died Wednesday morning at the McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital following an illness of 18 months.

A miner, he was born Oct. 16, 1910 in Lawrence county, a son of the late Jim and Martha Baugh Johnson. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lora Conn Johnson, and a brother, John Johnson, of Richmond, Kentucky.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 10 a.m. from the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church, ministers of that church officiating. Burial will be made in the Lucy Hall cemetery at McDowell under the direction of Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Heart Attack Fatal To Bert Dye, Age 80, At Orkney Residence

Bert Dye, 80-year-old retired miner, died suddenly Wednesday at his home at Orkney, the victim of an apparent heart attack.

Born March 11, 1888 in Pike county, he was a son of King and Sarah Osborne Dye, and was married to Rattie Gayheart, all of whom preceded him in death. He had been a member of the Church of God for 50 years.

Surviving are five sons, Carl, Adie and Sam Dye, all of Dayton, O., Kennel Dye, of Orkney, and Charles Dye, of Florida; four daughters, Mrs. Maxie Howell, of Orkney, and Mrs. Effie Sword, Mrs. Bessie Bryant and Mrs. Betty Sargeant, all of Wellington, Ohio; 34 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral rites will be conducted from the residence Saturday at 10 a.m. by ministers of the Regular Baptist Church. Burial in the family cemetery at Orkney will be directed by Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Vote DRY—Vote No

Inasmuch as I am a candidate for sheriff of Floyd county, I feel compelled to state my position on the wet and dry election. I have been advised to be neutral, to take both sides, don't alienate any voter.

But my conscience compels me to say, loud and clear, that my family, my husband and I are and have always been DRY . . . The finished products of the brewers' art has taken its toll in our family as it has done in so many others. Let there be no mistake:

I am dry first . . . a candidate for sheriff second.

SINCERELY,

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore—By Gordon Wilson, Ph.D.

BOOKS AND EXPERIENCE

All my long life I have been what most people call a book-worm, a foolish sort of fellow who reads and reads, and never seems satisfied with any day that does not open a book. And there is a bit of truth in that criticism, but not "the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

Like some fellow in a parliamentary body, I rise to defend another point of view. First of all, books have been written by and about people, often no more interesting people than the ones I could meet by stepping out on the street in front of my own house. Emerson wisely says that books are for one's idle time, when he cannot be with nature and with people. Unfortunately, I belong to a group of people who sometimes rather foolishly think that if it isn't in books, it just does not exist. Even semi-literate and illiterate often have a sort of worship for the printed page, as if that very fact made what appears on the page something to trust implicitly, to accept as final truth.

Of the fifty-five teachers whom I had in my career as pupils or students I am sure that half of them could be classified as book-worshippers. If they could not find an obvious fact in a book, then the fact was to be ignored. If the textbook said that this or that army won a certain battle, that settled it; no further study was necessary. If books contained oodles of accounts of the pioneers of one area and not even a sentence about those of some other place, it was obvious that Place No. 2 was unimportant.

And no state, unless it is Virginia or Massachusetts, has sinned more in this book-worship than Kentucky. Kentucky is often just what the writers have said about it and no more. If some of the worshippers of the printed page would lay down their book or magazine and take a drive into the state with their eyes open, a lot of hokum about Kentucky, both the moonlight and roses and the still-up-the-hollow traditions would disappear. We need more Joe Creasons, who have gone into the remotest places again and again, seeing with his own eyes and not with eyes already tainted with some previous person's seeing.

As a dabbler in science for most of my years I am often provoked by the blindness of people who believe what has appeared in print or has been handed down traditionally, rather than actually trusting their own eyes. Nine-tenths of the prejudices against certain animal life are capable of being disproved by the smallest observer, but over and over the traditional or bookish stuff is reversed, and nature suffers.

I am sure that a generous mixture of what we can ourselves experience and what we experience through the writings of others is a better way. A day-by-day mixture of books and looking can add much wisdom to the average mind. No amount of writing can even set down the treasure of knowledge that is gained by just living with open eyes and ears and minds. Over and over I am asked about lore and I say virtually what I have just said: that lore takes account of the normal array of knowledge that we all would like to have, plus little experiences which in a lifetime can pile up into small mountain ranges, that help us understand the knowledge of formal learning.

In looking back over many of the textbooks that have been part of my study always, I have some good laughs at the all-wise but often all-ignorant statements that used to appear in books on language, for instance. Half-baked statements by hack-writers who in turn borrowed from previous hack-writers often have been taken by supposedly educated people who could have proved the falsity of these statements with little or no effort. The worship of THE DICTIONARY is one of these bits of comedy that we educators perpetrate, forgetting that some of the dictionary-makers have been among the most narrow-minded scholars of all time, pretending to record language but actually trying to foist their own preferences on the less informed world. Books need constant mixing with things not in books.

MAYTOWN

Mrs. George Gray was hostess in her home to the Maytown W. S. C. S. at their August meeting, last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Gray was the program leader and was assisted by Mrs. Jones Tallent and Mrs. Tim Perkins. They used the theme, "Two in a Tussle," which depicted the tussle we have between ourselves and the person people believe us to be. The program was followed by the business meeting. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. James Allen, at which time the officers for the coming year will take office. The hostess served a dessert course to Mesdames Jones Tallent, George Patton, Hubert Halbert, Luna Halbert, Tim Perkins, Thomas Patrick, Henry L. May and James Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Hayes, of Broadripple, Ind. have been visiting relatives here and were the overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Patton.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Frasure and children were vacationing at Mammoth Cave and other points of interest in Kentucky last week.

Patricia Ann Hicks, Zionsville, Ind., was visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Hicks, and other relatives here last week. She was accompanied by two girlfriends.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Halbert, Stephen and Elizabeth Ann are vacationing in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio. They plan to attend some Cincinnati Reds baseball games.

Bess Ratliff and Lula Martin spent last week-end in Ashland visiting Nora Hayes. Mrs. Bertha Click spent several days last week in Kenova, W. Va., visiting her sister, Mrs. Hazel Kelly.

Mrs. Charles Pence and daughters, Rebecca and Wynn, of Alte Monte Springs, Fla., arrived Saturday for an extended visit with her father, Dr. C. L. Allen, and her sister, Mrs. David Conley, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen made an overnight visit to Lexington last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Flanery and children have returned from an 11-day vacation in Florida and other points of interest in the south.

TWO IN AREA AMONG NINE CENSURED BY STATE PPC IN INVESTMENT PROMOTION

Nine Kentucky educators have been censured by the Kentucky Professional Practices Commission (PPC) for allowing their names, positions, and places of employment to be used "in printed prospectus (sic) and brochures used by salesmen to influence the teachers to buy stock in Educators Investment Finance Corporation," now known as EIFC.

The PPC ruled that such action "violated commission regulations and the code of ethics of the teaching profession."

Another charge brought against the educators by 49 other Kentucky educators whose investment in the company has diminished in value was dismissed by the PPC. That charge was that the accused educators "wrongfully used pictures, names, and where they were from in the KEA (Kentucky Education Association) Journal to sell stock and solicit loans in Educators Investment Finance Corporation."

The PPC reasoned that the magazine advertisement required a prospective purchaser of stock in the industrial loan corporation to get in touch with the company prior to any stock solicitation. But teachers were personally confronted by company salesmen with the brochure and faced with making an immediate decision.

The censure by the PPC, a state agency that is the Kentucky education profession's self-disciplining body, was against the following school administrators, all of whom were members of the corporation's board of directors:

Mitchell Davis, executive vice president of EIFC and former Barren County school superintendent; Harlan County superintendent James Cawood; Bardonia superintendent Ted Crosthwait; former Christian County superintendent T. W. Stewart; Hazard superintendent Roy Eversole; Jefferson County assistant superintendent Jack Dawson, EIFC's president; Russell Williamson, former principal of Inez high school; Montgomery County superintendent E. G. Jones, and Franklin County superintendent W. Roy Bondurant.

Charges against McCracken County superintendent Leon Smith and W. H. Harrison of Eastview were dismissed by the PPC because "no evidence was presented at the hearing against these two respondents," who also were board members of the corporation.

EIFC last year became a subsidiary of TSI, Inc., which controls Teachers Life Insurance Company, American Pyramid Corporation more recently acquired control of TSI.

The PPC, whose chairman is Rodney Herrold of Paducah, principal of McCracken county's Reiland elementary school, asserted in its ruling that educators have the same right as do other citizens to engage in private business.

"If a person becomes prominent through his professional endeavor he should not be penalized by this prominence so long as his position is not exploited in areas of commercial activity," the PPC stated.

"The commission believes that educators have the same right to engage in private commercial business ventures as all other citizens in this country. To hold otherwise would require that persons employed in the field of education would, of necessity, be forced by the code of ethics to restrict any activity involving financial remuneration to the field of education exclusively. This restriction is not placed upon other professions, and the commission is not prepared to hold that such an onerous burden should be placed upon teachers."

Ivyton Quadrangle
 In New Geologic Map

Two new geologic maps, prepared under the cooperative mapping program of the Kentucky and U. S. geological surveys, have just been printed, according to Dr. Wallace W. Hagan, state geologist, at the University of Kentucky.

The new maps are:

Geologic map of the Ivyton Quadrangle, by C. L. Rice, covering parts of Floyd, Johnson, and Magoffin counties. Coal has been mined throughout the quadrangle from as many as 10 coal beds, primarily for domestic use. The area also is in the Big Sandy gas field.

Geologic map of the Rock Haven Quadrangle and part of the Laconia Quadrangle, by C. F. Withington and E. G. Sable, covering part of Meade county. Otter Creek Park recreation area and parts of the Doe Run and Muldraugh gas storage fields lie within the mapped area.

Copies may be purchased from the Kentucky Geological Survey, Mineral Industries Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington.

Public Safety Seeks First Offenders

By LEONARD KIMBALL

Frankfort, Ky. — With what might well be more than just a seed of truth in a barrel of sarcasm, it has been observed more than a few times that God takes care of drunkards and fools.

But what about the drunken driving fool — who takes care of him?

If you subscribe to an unwritten policy presently followed by many Kentucky judges, then the answer to that question must be obvious . . .

"The majority of county judges with whom we come in contact," says one official in the Public Department's Driver Licensing Division, "makes no bones about the fact they frequently amend traffic charges brought against first offenders — particularly drunken drivers — to some other offense of less seriousness."

Often, the amended charge takes the form of something like breach of the peace or disorderly conduct, neither of which results in any "points" being charged against the man's driving record. It defeats the state's whole program which is to identify the driver with a problem and get him into a driver improvement club, or at least discuss his difficulties with him, before he kills himself or someone else.

"Sometimes," one driver improvement officer said, "this business of amending is done as a personal favor or because the arresting officer erred."

"But more often than not — and mainly because a drunk driving conviction normally results in the immediate suspension of a man's right to drive — it is done because the judge feels the first offender deserves a break."

"Now, if he really is a first offender, this is the time he should be identified so we can work with him before an unsafe driving incident becomes a regular habit."

But, as the state's driver improvement officers are quick to point out, the real fallacy in giving a first offender a second chance lies in the fact Kentucky's judges rarely check to find out whether it is actually a first offense they are dealing with or just another violation on a long string of traffic convictions already filed against the man in a variety of other court jurisdictions.

A good case in point might well be the record of one Kentuckian whose history of irresponsibility on the highway, carefully documented in a sheaf of court abstracts and arresting officers' report tucked away in the files of the Driver Licensing Division, reads like a full night's docket in a busy traffic court.

In less than four years, he rolled up a record of seven arrests, was tried in six different courts, involved in one accident, and had his driver's license yanked by the state on two occasions — once through suspension and once by revocation.

Although tried on these separate occasions in three different courts on charges of drunken driving, none of those cases resulted in suspension of his driving privileges. Twice, the charges were reduced to reckless driving, a "point" offense, and once to public drunk — a violation which does not even come under the Commonwealth's traffic laws.

He finally had to be arrested in a neighboring state before sustaining even a single conviction for drunk driving.

Early in his driving career, his driving privileges were suspended for six months after he accrued more than 12 points on one citation for improper passing on a hill and three charges of reckless driving, one of which had originally been a drunk driving citation.

If nothing else, he was determined. Less than three months after reinstatement of his license, he was back in court again. And the charge? Again it was driving while intoxicated and again it was amended to reckless driving.

Soon after that incident, the Public Safety Department hit him with a license revocation following their receipt of a report from out-of-state authorities about his drunk driving conviction in their jurisdiction.

The problem should have ended there — but it didn't.

There is still one more entry on his record — yet another arrest for drunken driving, and this time it was accompanied by a citation for driving without a license.

Imagine the surprise of the Kentucky judge who, when later confiding to state officials he amended the last drunken driving charge to public drunk because he thought a "first offender" deserved a break, learned he had been misled not once, but twice in one day.

Not only was his "first offender" a chronic drunk driver with a long history of prior traffic convictions but the reason he had been operating a motor vehicle without license because his driver's permit had been revoked nearly seven months earlier.

"Had that judge checked the man's record before passing judgment," driver improvement officers said, "the drunk driving charge may not have been amended — and the citation for driving without a permit would probably have led to a conviction for driving while his privilege was revoked."

"It's a common problem," they said, "and, unfortunately for the safety of the conscientious driver, it has the effect of keeping dangerous drivers on the highway when they ought to be walking."

According to the Public Safety Department, only one court in the Commonwealth makes it a regular practice to check the driving record of every motorist brought in on a traffic violation.

"And it is a practice which should be adopted by every court in the state," they said.

The Frankfort police court requires every cited driver to obtain — and bring to the court at the time of his hearing — a true extract of his entire driving record, obtained from the Public Safety Department's Driver Licensing Division.

"If we could convince every judge in Kentucky to levy this same requirement," they say, "it would go a long way toward reducing our high traffic fatality rate for it would nail down the repeater who is most likely to kill someone — unless he is stopped."

WIN PROGRAM HAS PROMISE FOR MOTHERS ON WELFARE; CLASS HERE, A FIRST STEP

Frankfort, Ky. — The recent graduation of eight women from a General Educational Development (GED) class in Prestonsburg marked the first step toward a productive future for welfare mothers in Eastern Kentucky.

The women are the first Eastern Kentucky graduates of the Department of Economic Security's Work Incentive (WIN) Program operating in Jefferson and 22 Eastern Kentucky counties. The program is designed to educate and train for employment mothers receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

In a message sent to the graduates, Gov. Louie B. Nunn congratulated them for their "hard work, eagerness and determination to learn." The Governor urged them to continue aiming toward employment. "Your efforts will help your children, your community and the entire state of Kentucky," the Governor said.

All eight graduates have been accepted for training at Mayo Vocational School in Paintsville.

Economic Security Commissioner Merritt Deitz pointed out the WIN Program in Eastern Kentucky operates under somewhat different circumstances than the program in Jefferson county.

In Eastern Kentucky almost 82 per cent of the AFDC mothers have eight years or less education, as compared with 36 per cent in Jefferson county.

The majority of the 764 women in these counties are enrolled in basic education or GED classes, rather than in job training courses as is the case in Jefferson county.

"Though the object of the program is employment, it should be obvious the WIN participants in Eastern Kentucky must have their education level raised before they can train for available employment," Deitz said.

"Lack of education is one of the most serious poverty-related problems in Eastern Kentucky, and for this reason the WIN Program has concentrated heavily on education in the area."

Deitz said the Eastern Kentucky WIN Program is not without its problems, "the most difficult of which is geography." Many mothers otherwise suitable for the program are ruled out because transportation difficulties are insurmountable.

"In spite of the problem," Deitz said, "there is little absenteeism in the Eastern Kentucky program."

Another difficulty is the scarcity of job opportunities in Eastern Kentucky. Away from the larger cities there, employment prospects decline. Jobs are not available and many women live too far from job centers to make commuting a realistic option.

Recently 10 enrollees in Eastern Kentucky WIN were interviewed by members of an Eastern Kentucky WIN Program evaluation staff from the Auerback Corporation. All of the women were in either orientation or GED.

"The report stated most were quite positive about the program and particularly about their contact with WIN staff," Deitz said.

According to the report, most had learned of the program through their Public Assistance caseworkers, but some had initiated their own contact after hearing about it on local radio. Most enrollees indicated their caseworkers had specifically stressed the educational aspects of WIN, and the enrollees tended to discuss their hopes for WIN in educational terms: "I want to finish high school," or "I think I need more education."

Most had given some thought to employment, though, and tentative choices included secretarial work, health occupations and cosmetology.

The report concluded the WIN Program in Eastern Kentucky is of considerable value even where there appears to be no immediate "pay-off" in terms of employment.

THE BEECH TREE AND ITS PARASITE

Often you will find growing under a spreading beech tree a large colony of odd-looking plants about a foot high. These have no green chlorophyll and their small leaves are like scales. Their color is a rich madder-brown and they put out numerous small branches. They are the parasites on the roots of beech; their name is Beech Drops. Botanists call these odd plants EPIFAGUSE, which means growing on the roots of a beech.

Beech Drops belong to a parasitic family of plants called BROOMRAPE, which includes the peculiar scaly plant called Cancer-Root.

Beech Drops bear pale pinkish or white flowers that appear in late August or Sept. They are said to possess valuable medicinal properties, which were well known to the Indians who used them to make poultices for healing wounds and bruises. The plants are also noted for their drawing properties and were used to draw the infection out of a carbuncle.

The beech trees, under which Beech Drops grow, are said to be the most elegantly dressed of any other forest tree. A beech is known to botanists as FAGUS GRANDIFOLIA, from the Latin, fagus, a beech, and grandifolia, large leaves. These are ovate and grow about four inches long. The leaves have prominent, feather-like veins and each of these extends to a sharp tooth on the leaf margin. When they first come out in the spring, the leaves are coated with a silvery down; this soon disappears as the leaf unfolds. The full-grown leaf is a dark green color on top, lighter green below. In autumn they change to a pale gold color but they seldom fall from the tree. They cling tenaciously to the branches all winter, and shrivel up and turn brown. When the cold winter winds blow softly, these crimped up leaves sigh and sing sad dirges for the departed summer. They quiver and flutter in every wind that blows and do not fall off until the new leaves of spring push them away.

Most naturalists say that the beech is one of the most beautiful and useful trees of the forest. It produces a bounteous crop of delicious nuts, which are the choicest food of squirrels, wild turkeys, grouse, hogs, bluejays and other birds and animals. Boys and girls like them too, and often search under the beeches for the nuts to eat. They are richly flavored and oily. Some European peoples have long depended upon beechnuts for food and oil supply. They also dry out the leaves and use them as winter forage for livestock.

Many of the larger beeches have cavities and hollow boughs, which are especially designed by nature to serve as the winter homes for wildlife. Squirrels and raccoons den in hollow beeches, birds such as woodpeckers, chickadees and nuthatches sleep in hollow beeches during winter nights. Hollow beech trees are also the favorite homes of flying squirrels; black bears also hibernate in the larger ones.

It is a pity that some land companies hire men to decaden their beeches, by cutting a ring around the bark. This is done to give the oaks, ash and other trees a better chance. But no greater mistake can be made than to destroy the beech timber. It is a hard blow to wild life, as it destroys one of their best sources of food. Beeches are also very good for preventing soil erosion, as they have an extensive root system from which they often send up hundreds of sprouts that form a dense grove of little trees under the main tree. Not one ounce of soil can wash away where one of these big beeches grows, with hundreds of little ones arising from the roots.

Although beech lumber may not be as valuable as that of oak or ash, the larger trees have red heart-wood, which makes fine flooring; it is also used to make broom and mop handles, clothes pins, chairs and such. There is also no better wood for campfire than seasoned beech, as any outdoorsman will tell you.

We have only one species of beech that is native to the U. S. This tree heads a large and important family of trees, to which belong the oaks, chestnuts and chinquapins.

Beeches growing in the fertile bottoms of streams often reach immense size, with a diameter of four or five feet and a dense, spreading crown. The largest ones grow along the Ohio River valley and on the sunny slopes of the Appalachians. The beech tree is handsome in any season. Its trunk is silvery gray with white bands or large circular blotches, which lend the trunk a touch of splendor.

The winter buds are a rich shade of brown, with prominent bud scales shingled over the embryo leaf. They are sharp-pointed; Thoreau called them "the spear-heads of spring."

The old settlers of Appalachia had a high regard for beeches and turned out their hogs in the fall, to fatten on beech mast. The hogs ate so many nuts, their meat got sweet and oily and had a wild woodsy tang that made it fine eating.

FLOYD COUNTY COURT

In Re: Petition For Local Option Election In Floyd County.

ORDER

Court convened at 10 o'clock A. M. on this July 10, 1969, pursuant to an order entered June 23, 1969, at the regular term of this court, and thereupon the following proceeding was had:

A petition for a local option election, pursuant to KRS. 242.020, having been filed with the clerk of this court on the 11 day of June, 1969, which petition contained the signatures of voters of Floyd County in excess of 25% of the votes cast in Floyd County at the last preceding general election held in this county, and which petition is as required by law, and the court having considered all of the same and being sufficiently advised, is of the opinion that it is the duty of this court, this being an adjourned session of the regular June 23, 1969 term of court following the filing of said petition, to order the holding of a local option election in Floyd County, Kentucky, as more particularly set forth hereinafter.

It is, therefore, ordered by the court that a local option election shall be held in Floyd County, Kentucky, on the 23 day of August, 1969, between the hours of 6 o'clock A.M., Eastern Daylight Saving Time, and 6 o'clock P.M., Eastern Daylight Saving Time, consistent with the election laws provided by the Kentucky Revised Statutes, and said election shall be conducted as follows:

(a) There shall be held an election in Floyd County, Kentucky, in all precincts of said county, and the question to be placed upon the ballots for said election as follows:

"Are you in favor of the sale of alcoholic beverages in Floyd County, Kentucky?"

The County Court Clerk shall issue such notices, as are required by the filing of this order and shall prepare all ballots consistent with this order, and do all other things necessary and incidental to, as required by the Kentucky Revised Statutes, in the preparation for and the carrying out of this election.

There shall be ballots printed and issued in accordance with the above order, and said voting by the regular voters in the respective voting precincts of Floyd County, designated above, shall be tabulated in accordance with the general election laws and the results of said election shall be tabulated as to determine the results of said voting precincts, as set out above.

ORDERED THAT COURT BE ADJOURNED.

This 17th day of July, 1969.

Marion Fannin had the last laugh. "Some of my friends laughed when I told them I was saving money with electric heat... 'til I showed them my bills. The total of my gas and electric bills used to cost me more than I'm now paying for just my electric bill with electric heat. We've found electric heat to be less expensive—and we're getting more comfortable and convenient heat for less money" ... Marion Fannin of Ashland, Ky. has lots of company. ## Just One Person

"I'm just one man," he said, excusing himself. "What can I do about all this?"

I thought about his philosophy, and the more I thought about it the more I pitied him. "I'm just one man . . . just one man . . . just one . . ." It was easy for him to excuse himself because he was like every other person ever born — just one person — he thought that he had been short-changed. He considered himself ineffective because he was only one man.

Suppose everyone should take his attitude, it would be a real tragedy, wouldn't it? Well, fact about the matter is that too many have taken that attitude. That's the reason we need to take a look at history a little.

Martin Luther was just one man. But he was one man who called the church to repentance and changed the face of the whole world! When he hung those 95 theses on that little All Saints Church door in obscure Wittenberg on October 31, 1517, he had no idea they could or would change the course of literally millions of people. But he was doing what he, one man, could to cure what he considered to be a great wrong!

Russell Conwell was one man. One man with one speech which he called Acres of Diamonds and in which he told about finding treasures where you are. He gave that speech more than 6,000 times. And yet that one man with that one speech founded what today is Temple University and literally put thousands of youngsters through college.

Florence Nightingale was just one person. At the age of 17 she heard the voice of God calling her into the nursing profession, a profession made up of drunks and prostitutes. She faced the greatest opposition to her calling from her own family, and her decision to follow her dream caused a great split in their relationship. But because of her dedicated decision she made the field of nursing one with a high and holy calling and one widely respected.

Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi was just one person. One person with a great dream that freedom could be won for his beloved India without the use of violence. He was one man who believed that the most powerful weapons one has for fighting wrong were a just cause and lots of love. And he was right.

There was still another Who was just one person. One person against the whole world. One person, rejected, mistreated, misunderstood, hated, and crucified. But not once did He excuse Himself from some task — even a cross — because He was just one person. He never murmured, never refused to try because He was just one person. And today millions have found salvation through that One Person. His name is Jesus of Nazareth.

"I'm just one person," you say? Well, my friend, that is all it takes to change the world and to make it a better place to live in. Don't you think it is about time you got busy?

"KATYDIDS AND FROST"

Back at Fidelity just about everybody used to believe that katydids were genuine prophets; they did their first "holler" just ninety days before the first frost. In this year of 1952 they must have begun early, for we had some severe frosts very early, too early for the fields that were trying to get a little green after some showers broke the summer-long drought. For some reason, I failed to record when the first katydid called this year; hence I cannot say whether it was right or wrong. I am sorry for this neglect, for someone ought to keep katydid records and show how nature takes care of itself and shows in advance what to expect.

Folk psychology amuses me and delights me more and more as I grow older. After a rather busy life among the folk and among scientists, too, I am nonplussed at the faith that so many people still have in signs and wonders. You would think that a fellow who drives an automobile or has electricity in his home would long ago have adapted himself to the modern age and would not be living in the Middle Ages. Anyone who expects this miracle to happen, however, had better do some more observing, for folk customs are too deeply rooted to be shaken loose by R. E. A. and radios and even an atom or hydrogen bomb. If Father thought a katydid knew in advance more than all the weathermen, then it was so, for Father was a great man in his day and was respected far and wide for his weather knowledge. We look at the weather report in the paper and plan our day accordingly, for the most part; but for longer times than a few days we trust katydids, fogs, circles around the moon, and hogs carrying shucks or leaves in their mouths.

The idea that there is a prophesiable continuity in nature is itself folkish. What does a katydid know about frost or about anything except katydids? That question would have caused a thunderbolt in some sections around Fidelity and may not be too well received in Podunk right now. I have had people speak in quavering voices about signs, voices that they assumed only when they talked about God. To question any of the age-old signs that they knew was blasphemous, irreligious, worthy of stoning or burning at the stake. Of course, the good old groundhog comes into this same discussion. Even if hunters are accustomed to see groundhogs in this climate at any time in winter, some of them believe or try to believe that the official Groundhog Day set the pattern for the next six weeks of weather, regardless of weathermen.

Corn husks, the quality of fur, the shape, even, of a wild goose's breast bone — how much poor mortals could learn from nature if they only would! And why take quinine for chills when there are many less painless ways to get rid of malaria? And all these anti-asthma drugs seem foolish when everybody knows that asthma can be "cured" by standing the affected person against a tree, boring an auger hole at the level of his head, cutting off a lock of the asthmatic one, cramping it into the hole, and ending this complicated operation by ramming a peg in on top to assure that the hair will stay. When the tree has grown over the peg, goodbye asthma. Of course, the person afflicted may have meanwhile got run over by a car or may have fallen down a coal shaft or may have jumped out of a twelve-story window like some accused Communist. And we will never know whether the asthma cure worked. But we can go on believing in it, because Grandpa and Grandma and Uncle George and just about everybody else who is or was anybody believed it and told us when we were young. No wonder so many people fall for any new wrinkle in bringing back the bloom of youth or the faith of primitive men. If someone, properly recommended, should announce that he has the elixir of life, the fluid so eagerly sought after in mediaeval times, he would be able to get some suckers to buy a quart or two of it and would soon be riding around in a big car and probably would announce for the highest office in his state. Stranger things have happened.

FEARNOT, KENTUCKY KATE SHARE UK RARE BOOKROOM WITH SCRIPTS OF CLASSICS

Today's novels cost a lot more but they are no more vividly written than were the "dime novels" of yesteryear.

The University of Kentucky has a collection of these former "best sellers" in the rare book room at the King Library on the Lexington campus.

The covers of the novels generate the impression that the text will be of a hair-raising nature. "Fred Fearnot" is a leading character in the dime novels series, "Work and Win." In one issue the guide for his party in Mammoth Cave "crawled through a hole in the wall and yelled, 'I am deserting you.'"

"Fred shook his fist at the man and answered, 'You will do so at your peril.'" Fred then led his group to safety.

In another novel — one of the "Log Cabin Library" — "Kentucky Kate" is subtitled, "Or the Moonshiner's League."

"Crippled Bill," a moonshiner, is pursued by a federal revenue agent but "the bullet (he fires) intended for the pursuer's heart entered the tender bosom of little Kate."

Unlike the happy ending of most of the other novels, Kentucky Kate ends on this note:

The revenue agent is looking at a gravestone on which is cut, "Here lie Crippled Bill and his child, little Kate."

"The revenue officer planted a rose bush on the grave; one he had bought for this purpose and which would bloom every year."

A Personal Plea

This is a personal plea from one who grew up, worked in, and loves Floyd County and its people. A plea for a "No" vote in the forthcoming election.

As one who has served in the past and presently serves in the Armed Forces of the United States, and now in the capacity of a Chaplain I have yet to see anything good come from a "Yes" vote.

Those who support the liquor industries will tell you that more tax money will come into the county as a result of a "Yes" vote, and you will have better roads and public facilities. But from one survey with which I am personally familiar in a Texas town it was shown that the number of deaths increased, more tax money was required for the upkeep and increased numbers being placed in jails, and the number of "bad" checks also increased, plus the untold numbers of broken homes and more poorly clothed and fed children. The only two people to actually report an increase in business were the sheriff and the undertaker.

And for those of you who profess the name of Christ and call yourselves a Christian, you will be placing a "stumbling block" before your brother if you vote "Yes" . . . the very thing the Apostle Paul, in the name of Christ, urged us not to do. By voting "Yes" you will be a direct contributor to that which will contribute to the death of many . . . maybe one of your own. One only has to look at the statistics and see that alcoholic beverages is a major contributor in the number of deaths on our highways and elsewhere.

This is only a personal plea, and does not have to be heeded unless you so desire, but, please, think it through before you decide. I love each of you and shall continue to do so, because I am one of your products who, but by the grace of God, may not have cared.

McDowell Graduate On LMU Dean's List

Harrogate, Tenn., August 6. — One hundred and sixty-three students of Lincoln Memorial University have been named to the spring quarter Dean's List. To be included in this select group students are required to maintain an academic average of 2.0 or better out of a possible 3.0, and must have carried 12 or more quarter hours of subject matter.

Among the 26 Kentuckians listed was Judy Hamilton, a 1967 graduate of McDowell high school and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Hamilton, of Price.

There are well cases reserved for timely topical displays or permanent ones such as miniature books, historic writing materials, and books by contemporary creative Kentucky authors.

There are many famous editions of the Bible including those of John Baskerville (1763), Dr. Hans Mardersieg (1962) and the two from the Nonesuch Press (1924-27 and 1963).

The most extensive "special collection" encompasses imprints relating to the history of the Ohio River Valley.

There are the widely known and rarer works of Filson, Imlay, Toulmin and Flint as well as the reports of early travelers and observers displayed in the Rare Book Room, but these are only a token selected from the enormous holdings of newspapers, manuscripts, magazines, books and thousands of reels of films containing vital statistics of the region.

On Aug. 16 a color sound film will tell the gripping story of the life lived by Christians in Russia in this age. A man who endured solitary confinement and torture for 13 years tells his story on the film.

The morning service of Aug. 17 will feature Roscoe Neace, pastor of the United Baptist Church in Miamisburg, Ohio. Rev. Neace, a son of Mack Neace, was born at Barwick, Ky., in Breathitt county.

The Ambassadors Gospel Quartet from Rev. Neace's church will sing at all services except the first. Their own pianist, Mrs. Bates, will accompany them.

Rev. Donald Grinar, of Virginia, who flies a plane, called "Wings for Christ," for the Mission Board, will be song leader.

There is no charge made at any service. Free-will offerings will be taken to defray necessary expenses, the Rev. Martin said.

As our state's largest research library, we must acquire all books written by Kentuckians, all written about Kentucky and all printed in Kentucky and we have been relatively successful in this assignment," says Mrs. Frances Shine, curator of rare books at UK.

"We have many extremely rare pieces of Kentuckiana which are little more than tiny pamphlets, dog-eared school texts, river boat guides or much-thumbed almanacs with loop of hempen thread by which they hung in some pioneer's cabin. By all odds our favorite treasure is a small length of once-white satin (hard to come by in the western country of 1801) on which our first printer, John Bradford, working in his log cabin print shop, proudly spelled out the words of Thomas Jefferson's first inaugural address. An early traveler reports seeing a framed copy of it on the walls of Postlewaite's tavern where the Phoenix Hotel now stands."

WHAT A BARREL OF WHISKEY CONTAINS

(This is something that ought to be pasted in every book of every schoolboy or schoolgirl — and written on the hearts of men and women, the world over.)

- A barrel of headaches, of heartaches, of woes;
- A barrel of curses, a barrel of blows;
- A barrel of sorrow for a loving, weary wife;
- A barrel of care, a barrel of strife;
- A barrel of unavailing regret;
- A barrel of care, a barrel of debt;
- A barrel of hunger, of poison, of pain;
- A barrel of hopes, all blasted and vain;
- A barrel of poverty, ruin and blight;
- A barrel of tears that run in the night;
- A barrel of crime, a barrel of groans;
- A barrel of orphans' most pitiful groans;
- A barrel of serpents that hiss as they pass,
- That glow from the liquor in the head of the glass;
- A barrel of falsehoods;
- A barrel of that falls from the maniac's lips as he dies."

Dear, fellow-citizens, help the DRYS to prevent the WETS from making Floyd county any "wetter." Ask Sheriff Lewis about this very important decision you are about to make.

Don't play the fool in this critical situation!

Beware of the first drink! All the rest of the state is watching you! And, above all, your good Creator — you'll have to "face it out" with Him, some day.

I hope the clergy of this county will see the danger ahead and spend some of their time and money striving for the Right — RIGHT NOW!

Yours in Him,
MILFORD HALL, SR.
McDowell, Ky.
