$150,000 Okehed For Martin Work

Beaver Cr. Stream Job Start Seen

County To Cooperate In Getting Easements, Maintaining Project

The proposed $2.5 million stream improvement project planned to provide the town of Martin and nearby areas on Right Beaver Creek protection against Beaver Creek floodwaters this week approached the construction stage as the House Committee on Appropriations-Civil Function approved $150,000 in federal funds for the beginning of work.

Announcement of the appropriation approval came Wednesday from Congressman Carl D. Perkins, who said, "I am delighted that we have at least obtained committee approval of funds to get started on a long-overdue project."

The move for flood protection at Martin began about five years ago, following a destructive flood. Last year, $90,000 was approved for its planning, a work which has since been completed.

Congressman Perkins said the Corps of Engineers had written him, early this year, that it could utilize $300,000 for construction during fiscal 1970 but that the Corps later changed its thinking and last week told the committee it could use only $150,000 on the project this fiscal year.

The proposed work will involve deepening of Beaver Creek, widening the stream bed to a width of 75 feet and removing all snags and obstructions. The project will begin near the "Y" at the confluence of Right and Left Beaver Creeks, above Martin, and extend downstream a distance of 4.5 miles to a point near the Betsy Clark Branch, between Arkansas and Allen.

This Town . . . That World

Joe Creason this week noted that he had turned in 10,000 columns since taking over with The Courier-Journal from the redoubtable Allen Trout. In volume I'm up on Mr. Creason by around 5,000; in quality, I confess, I'm down to him. His remark that nine out of ten people who write him think they could do a better column hits the spot with yours truly. But he questions that nine out of ten could beat him at the job; figures, instead, that eight out of ten would be a more accurate percentage.

THE PURPOSE

It's no secret, our plans to convert publication of this newspaper to offset in a matter of a few weeks, so I may as well talk shop with any who care to palaver. Remodeling, buying new equipment, stepping over boxes of chemicals, paper, tape and a lot of stuff that's strange to a letterpress man of all these years — the whole business threatens to get me down, along with perhaps some others around the place.

The other day, while new shipments were being opened, a tray was unwrapped, and I wondered what in tunket that was for. Jimmy Goble's young son came up with the answer:

"That's for you, if you get any worse off, to get sick in."

I could only murmur something about it not being large enough. (See Story No. 2, Page 3)

Island Cr. Teams Score In State Mine Contests

Island Creek Coal Company employees from both western and eastern Kentucky took major honors at the state first-aid and mine rescue contests held here Saturday at Archer Park.

Island Creek's Hamilton mines team from western Kentucky, and two of the company's Floyd county mines produced teams which won second place in both the first-aid and mine rescue competition. The Island Creek team from its Spurlock mine was second in first-aid, and the team from the company's mines at Wheelwright held

Troopers Nab Woman On Rum Sale Count As Raid Aftermath

Martha Craft was arrested Saturday by State Troopers Brenner and Angel, charged with the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages as an aftermath of a raid made recently on the premises of her husband, Robert Craft, of the Auxier road. Mr. Craft was arrested previously on a possession charge and was marked a third-time offender.

Others booked at the county jail within the week: Sherman Leslie Foster, driving while intoxicated, by State Trooper Brenner; Brack Pinks, burglary, by Troopers L. Bevins and F. Bailey; Hayes Cance, Jr., a. w. o. l., by Trooper Angel; Hansford Spears, interfering with an officer and resisting arrest, by Conservation Officers Don Mead and Dalton R. Conley; Cordell Adkins, no operator's license, by Troopers Rose and Bevins; Larry (See Story No. 4, Page 3)

FIRE SEASON DANGER TOLD

Foresters To Maintain Lookout for Violators; Provisions of Law Cited

Division of Forestry employees this week alerted area residents to the danger of forest fires as Wednesday officially marked the beginning of the fall fire season, and at the same time they warned of the penalties for violation of forest fire laws.

The six-county area, of which Floyd county is a part, had 382 fires last spring, with this county contributing about 90 blazes to that total. Forest Division personnel are hoping to hold the woodland loss to fires to a minimum this fall.

The forest fire laws, which cover the period, Oct. 1 to Dec. 15, hold it illegal to have an open fire within 150 feet of any woodland, and no burning is to be done at a greater distance if it is capable of spreading to woodland through grass or other flammable material. If burning must be done, it is permissible only between the hours of 4:30 p.m. and 12 midnight, and then if all reasonable precautions are taken. These reasonable precautions include cutting and piling flammable materials and clearing around them to prevent fire spread to woodland. The fire must be extinguished by midnight.

Setting of fires to capture any wildlife is prohibited by law. This portion of the statute includes the smoking of squirrels or other animals from hollow trees and stumps or from holes in the earth.

Forestry officials said employees of the division will be patrolling the area to apprehend violators of the law. Those in violation will upon conviction be subject to both fine and imprisonment and will also be responsible for the cost of putting out any fire which they caused.

PEACE CLAIM SAID FALSE

Mud Creek Group Says No Agreement Reached On School Interference

A group of Mud Creek residents branded as untrue the report published in The Times last week to the effect that a peaceful relationship was being established between native-born VISTAS and residents of Mud Creek on the one hand and Supt. Charles Clark on the other.

"We have made no deal with Mr. Clark," they said. In a statement signed by Woodrow Rogers, Barbara Newsome, Sie L. Hamilton, Charlie Akers, Perry Hall and Eddie Blankenship, Supt. Clark's statement to the effect that the citizens had agreed not to interfere with the school system was singled out.

They said this was not true. Instead, they said, Homer Hamilton, Woodrow Rogers, Palmer Frasure and Eddie Blankenship had declared they would work on any issue with the people. "We intend," the statement added, "to work on getting free textbooks for our needy children. Other counties in Kentucky are getting free textbooks, and we feel Floyd county should get them, too."

Defending the Appalachian Volunteers and VISTA, the statement noted that "Mr. Clark seems to think we are trying to stop progress and cause a revolution. We are only making him live up to the federal and state laws."

300 Acres Land Sold At Auction Recently In Red River Gorge

J. O. Briggs, Stanton auctioneer and real estate broker, sold 300 acres of Red River Gorge land in an auction recently.

The land, owned by Prestonsburg and Mount Sterling businessmen, was sold mostly in 25-foot lots as a part of Daniel Boone Gorge Estates.

A number of the lots are located close enough to Red River to be flooded in the event the controversial Red River Dam is built. A restriction to the buyer is that the lots be used only for residences or recreation, with nothing of a commercial nature to be built or allowed. A few of the lots sold were 50 to 75 feet wide.

One 40-acre tract which included scenic Raven Rock, was bought by Ralph Martin, of Prestonsburg, for $3,500.

The land figuring in the auction lies within Daniel Boone National Forest and is approached from Ky. 15 and 77 by way of one-lane Nada Tunnel, which was cut through solid rock by the Lexington and Eastern Railway in the late 1890's.

Of the more than 400,000 acres in the forest, the 300 acres sold were part of more than 20,000 privately owned acres in the area.

REVIVAL TO BEGIN

A revival will begin at the Lafayette Chapel, Sunday, October 5 with evangelists, Rev. Larry Mann, Rev. Floyd Tackett, and Rev. Clark Lafferty, in charge of the services. The revival will be in progress through October 12. All are invited to attend.

To Open Concert Series

TO OPEN CONCERT SERIES. Shown above are a few of the Yugoslav group of 45 dancers, drummers, acrobats, singers and instrumentalists who compose the internationally known Frula. They will appear in the first of the Eastern Kentucky Concert Series at the Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse at 8 p.m., next Tuesday.

One of the world's most celebrated folk spectacles, FRULA, will include Prestonsburg on its forthcoming fall cross-country tour itinerary when it comes to the Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse at 8 p.m. next Tuesday for a performance under auspices of the Jenny Wiley Concert Association.

This will mark the second North American tour within 18 months for the famous Yugoslav ensemble of 45 dancers, drummers, acrobats, singers, and instrumentalists. So instantaneous and widespread was its success on the occasion of its initial visit in January, 1968, the eight-week tour originally scheduled had to be extended to eight months to accommodate the flood of requests for the company's appearance in cities and towns and on college campuses from coast-to-coast. The troupe established a record among foreign and domestic dance attractions by playing the longest consecutive tour within a single concert season of any dance show in America's history. Returning in response to overwhelming sponsor and audience demand, the company will again tour the North American cities for twelve weeks during the autumn of 1969, coming to the States direct from triumphant engagements at London's Royal Festival Hall and Spain's major cities. Winner of the first prize at the World Folk Festival and Competition, held in Moscow, to which 148 nations around the world recently sent their leading folk attractions and artists, the FRULA troupe, under the direction of Dragozslav Dzdzevic, has won numerous other citations and awards in its appearances in more than 50 countries around the globe.

Circuit Judge May Have 'Own' Ballot

Candidates for circuit judge at the November election may have a place on the ballot all to themselves as a result of the nonpartisan aspect given the office by recent election. For instance, said County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson this week:

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley, a candidate for re-election, won both the Democratic and Republican nominations in this county. Unless a court trial of the matter changes official thinking, Judge Conley will appear on both ballots but will be alone. Other candidates on the two tickets would occupy separate ballots.

Floyd Men To Have Part In Symposium at College

Alice Lloyd College at Pippa Passes announced this week that it will sponsor as a part of its Founder's Day-Homecoming activities, Oct. 10-12, Symposium on Appalachian Affairs for a study of the role of leadership and service.

Following the symposium, the annual homecoming program on Sunday, Oct. 12, will honor Dr. June Buchanan on her 50 years of service to the college and the Caney Creek Community Center. Opening symposium speaker at 1:30 p.m., Oct. 10, will be Ralph Widner, executive director of the Appalachian Regional Commission, who will speak on the subject, "A Hard Look at Appalachia Today."

Seminars will be conducted Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. Friday seminar leaders will include the Rev. Jack E. Weller, author of "Yesterday's People;" Edward F. Pritchard, Horney; Morris K. Caudill, of Morehead State University; Dr. Paul Street, of the University of Kentucky; Roger McKenzie, plant manager, American Standard Corp., Paintsville, and Charles Foltz, of the Appalachian Regional Commission. Charles Clark, superintendent of Floyd county schools, will moderate at 1:30 p.m., Saturday, a panel discussion, "The Effects of Changing Hollows — Should They Be Changed? How Can They Be Changed?"

At 2:45 p.m. Saturday, special services will be discussed. Benny Bailey, director of community services at Alice Lloyd College, will discuss ALCOR, and Dr. Russell L. Hall, director of the Floyd County Health Department, will speak on Mobile Health Facilities.

Harold Doster, executive Dean at ALC, will speak on "The Change in Appalachia" at 3:30 p.m., Saturday. At the 8:30 p.m. banquet, John Leslie, of Spindletop Research, will speak on "The Challenge."

ROADHOUSE IS CLOSED

Operators Arrested At the 'Purple Onion'; Closing Follows Fights

The Purple Onion, scene of one or more recent fights near Lancer, was closed Saturday night by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, and two of its operators were arrested on warrants issued from the office of County Judge Henry Stumbo.

Michael Robert Lyons and Richard Neal Stambaugh, both of Johnson county, were booked at the county jail on a charge of operating a roadhouse without a license, and Lyons also was charged with drunkenness and breach of the peace. Both men later executed bond.

The action against the roadhouse followed a recent altercation there in which Jack Clark Hyden, 16-year-old Prestonsburg youth, was severely beaten. Young Hyden was hospitalized. Later, a warrant charging Joe Stumbo (See Story No. 1, Page 3)

Floyd Youths Lose Lives in Accidents

Lives of two Floyd county boys were claimed last weekend in accidents.

NINE-YR.-OLD SHOT VICTIM

Services Held Here For Boy Accidentally Shot by Ohio Playmate

Funeral rites for nine-year-old Allen Clyde Jones, former Floyd schoolboy who was accidentally shot and killed Sept. 24 by a playmate at Vermillion, O., were conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday from the chapel of the Floyd Funeral Home here.

The child was shot while he and a neighbor-boy were playing at the home of the latter with a .22-calibre pistol which they had found in a gun cabinet at the residence. He died almost instantly of a shot which entered his head, near the ear.

The victim was a son of Clyde Jones, of Vermillion, and Mrs. Zina Bradley Jones, of Banner. He was a third-grade pupil in the Vermillion schools. Survivors, in addition to his parents, include two half-brothers, John and James; a step-sister, Becky, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Jones, of Banner, and Mr. and Mrs. Clint Bradley, of Langley.

The Rev. W. H. Amburgey officiated at the funeral. Burial in the Jones cemetery, near Allen, was directed by the Floyd Funeral Home.

Mayor Says River Funds Would Help

Engineers Say Lack Of Pump May Cause Flood Danger Here

Prestonsburg, according to the U. S. Corps of Engineers, faces, in the event of heavy rainfall, a danger of serious flooding because of a lack of pump capacity at the Local Backwater Protection Project which is locally known as "the floodwall."

The situation can be cured by the purchase of a fourth pump, said Col. Maurice D. Roush, district engineer, Huntington, W. Va. But, counters Mayor George P. Archer, that pump would cost about $45,000 — and Prestonsburg does not have the $45,000.

Mayor Archer said he will contact Senator John Sherman Cooper and Congressman Carl D. Perkins to try to get help from a federal source. He added that approximately the amount needed here is spent every year on surveys of the Big Sandy River which have meant nothing, and expressed the hope that some such fund could be tapped to meet the situation.

Col. Roush pointed out in a recent letter to the mayor that his office has since September, 1968 reported a shortage of pumping capacity in the Trimble Branch pumping station. Two pumps, each of 13,000-gallon-per-minute capacity, were installed when the "floodwall" first became operative. That was adequate at the time, because a ponding area existed between the station on Second avenue and US 23 (North Lake Drive). This ponding area was reduced in 1963 by filling for construction, and a third pump was installed. Continued reduction of ponding space — some caused by the fill for the Information Center between the station and US 23 — has made a fourth pump necessary, according to the corps of Engineers.

The income of the city is already completely budgeted. The total income from all sources for 1969 was placed at $220,500. The items budgeted, in brief, total that figure. They are:

Legislative Department, including city commission, planning and zoning and Civil Defense, $9,635; Administrative Department, $30,665; Judicial Department, $4,830; Public Safety — police department, $37,950; fire department, $17,250; Public Works — street department, $41,475; sanitation department, $27,000; Parks and Recreation — $6,895; Parking System, $23,640; Revenue Department — $3,520; General Expense — $7,040; Debt Service and Sinking Funds — $10,600.

City garbage collection rates, it was pointed out, are inadequate for some businesses to cover the cost of service. Charges made to businesses are to be studied by City Manager Curtis Clark, and recommendations are to be made to the City Council to set a fee sufficient to cover actual cost of garbage collection.

On another note, it was reported that the city has written several letters to District Highway Engineer Wendell Bayes requesting that the speed limit on US 23 from the entrance to the Prestonsburg Community College campus to the intersection near Prestonsburg high school be reduced from 60 miles per hour. It was suggested that a reduction of only 15 miles would be helpful in combatting speeding and reducing the number of accidents.

W.S.C.S. MEETS

The September meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Betsy Layne United Methodist Church was held at the home of Mrs. Jesse Elliott. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Edward Lykins, and was opened with a prayer by Mrs. O. E. Stanley. A program on Foundations for Patriotism was conducted by Mrs. Dean Osborn. Four members representing four nationalities discussed the way American patriotism sometimes appears to them and how it affects each group. Talks by Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Stanley followed. Mrs. Elliott spoke on how true patriotism can be shown and developed in an emerging nation and the problems that financial and technical aid from outside sources sometimes present to nations which are struggling for their independence. Mrs. Stanley spoke on what could be achieved in emerging nations by answering the call for true conversion of all men in a common brotherhood and a true sharing of Christian love with all mankind regardless of race or creed. A prayer by Mrs. James George concluded the program.

The business session followed. The October meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Edward Lykins, and the program leader will be Mrs. O. E. Stanley. Each member was given a prayer card with the picture and address of Miss Beth Furman, who is a missionary in Sierra Leone, West Africa and is a teacher at the Kabala Rupp Memorial School for missionaries' children. Miss Furman is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Furman, of Betsy Layne.

The hostess served refreshments to the following members: Mrs. Curtis Waller, Mrs. O. E. Stanley, Mrs. Dean Osborn, Mrs. Bert Allen, Mrs. J. Edward Mills, Mrs. Edward Lykins, Mrs. Beckham Caldwell, Mrs. James George, Mrs. E. P. Davis, and a guest Mrs. Palmer Crum.

Miss Elizabeth Graham Dingus, who is teaching in the Louisville school system, spent the week-end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom G. Dingus.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Roberts visited Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins and Judith Arnold Collins in Morehead recently.

Miss Anna Price Sheets, who was houseguest of Mrs. Catherine Weichers recently, has returned to her home in Bluefield, W. Va. While here she was entertained extensively both here and in Paintsville.

Tom Bolling, of Detroit, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Miles Whitaker, of Lexington, spent the week-end here with Mrs. Bolling and family.

Mrs. Willie Turner, of Hueysville, visited relatives here, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. Arnold Compton, of Lexington, is here this week visiting relatives.

ONE MAN'S DREAM-- ONE CITY'S IMPROVEMENT

When Pikeville is being congratulated on winning its $22-million Model City development, which will move a mountain, a river and a railroad and transform the community, the congratulations really should go to Dr. W. C. Hambley, mayor of Pikeville.

It was he who dreamed the big change. There were those who scoffed as he painted the future Pikeville in broad, sweeping strokes. But the dream was not abandoned, and the victory now really is his, although he would be the first to give credit to many others who worked with him.

Surely there is no "sour grapes" spirit in any other community of Eastern Kentucky that would cause any to begrudge the Pike county-seat its good fortune. The threat of flood, which hung over Pikeville, every winter and spring, will be gone. It will be a cleaner, bigger city. Its airport will be the center for air traffic in the area. All of this will enhance the overall picture of this part of what they call Appalachia.

But, as the dream and its reality reflect credit on one man, the huge program cannot be considered an improvement beyond Pikeville, one town. Governor Nunn has termed it a part of the regional development plan proposed by President Nixon, and it may be. But that does not mean it will succeed as an area or regional matter, for it is localized.

To us, the whole idea of centering improvement on one community as a center for spreading regional development smacks too much of the old theory that if enough benefits go to the upper strata of society some of it will seep down to the fellow at the bottom.

THINGS THAT IMPRESS

Those who cover the shorelines of Dewey Lake, go up its coves and really see the impoundment and its background, are impressed by two things:

1. The beauty of the lake and the encircling hills.

2. What people are (a) doing to mar the beauty of this lake, and (b) the little those in authority are doing to stop them.

The visitor gets a hint of what is happening when he sees the lake itself dotted with cans, boxes, plastic jugs and a variety of trash. But when he goes to campsites and sees the accumulation of tin cans and all the rubbish that usually marks a dumpsite, then he begins to wonder.

He wonders about the camper who was content to leave the place he had enjoyed in such a mess. And he wonders why the Department of Parks or the Corps of Engineers, or whoever has the responsibility, doesn't act.

Once upon a time there was talk of a "garbage boat" and a crew which would see that refuse was hauled away and disposed of in proper fashion. On another occasion, it occurs to us, the warning was issued that cluttering of the shoreline would not be tolerated.

At many lakes — at most lakes, we hope — cluttering isn't permitted. A visit to any of the TVA impoundments will convince the visitor that campers are obliged to do a good job of housekeeping there. The same policy should be in effect at Dewey Lake, and the lake patrol should be delegated the authority to enforce it.

To the Editor

THE SOLUTION TO IMPERIALISM

Editor, The Times:

In regard to the article, Whose "Imperialism?" we may remind John Wilson "How to Destroy Imperialism." There is a perfect solution in God's Holy Word, I Corinthians: 13th chapter, first verse:

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."

This is enough to show us that all committees and federal-sponsored programs cannot work out problems for anyone if we have contempt for the people that we are supposedly trying to help. It is hard for me to realize such contempt from this group of Wilson's or any other, if they are sponsored by federal programs. Take away all federal money and this ninety percent that he refers to as "Sick people with their regular hang-ups" (I am sure this is not true for if that be the case, where would the citizen, the working force, and the decent person be?) and we would see some of these long-haired, bearded, and not tidy looking people, fleeing from our country. We might ask them the same question, "Where will you be when all the taxpayers' money is no longer available for you to get your regular hands on? Will you still have the same contempt for these people of Floyd county?" I cannot imagine how we can have any type of program to help society if we are full of greed and contempt and just interested in "what's in this program for me?"

John Wilson had better be thankful that ninety percent of the people of Floyd county or Appalachia are not as he describes, for the taxpayer would be too hung-up to work and too sick to tolerate the way he sees his tax-dollar at work, and then we would have a revolution on our hands. Our fighting men would be far from patriotic and draft-dodgers and riot-groups would have to show how they helped our country to become the wonderful place that it is.

May we thank God for the decent people and the working-class people and all that have made a contribution to our country and not take credit for other men's labors.

This fellow was listing the menu his wife had provided for supper, the night before. Beef, mashed potatoes, peas, green beans, salad, rolls. Then he added: "TV dinner."

DAMAGED MACHINERY

There are those who will tell you that if you've missed cornbread made of gritted meal, you've cheated yourself of one of the rarest treats late summer and early autumn provide. Meal from the gritter is so popular, around here, that they're sacking it up and keeping it, in the best Twentieth Century style, in freezers.

This leads us up to Lenna Moore and his gritter; Model A-16, he says, made with a 16-penny nail. When Gwendolyn Dingus bought two dozen ears of griffin corn from Shirley Morrison, the contract had already been made with Lenna to do the gritting. And now he's threatening suit. The corn was just right for good meal, but he claims it was hard, and he had to grit so long that he melted the bearings in his gritter.

TIME TO EAT

Watt Hale, who has neglected us for quite a spell, sends across the river word about the fellow who had felled a tree on his fellow-worker and then hustled off to the bottom for help. When he told his story, relatives and friends of the hapless worker grew excited and were ready to take off, but the bearer of tidings gravitated toward the dinner table which was still pretty well laden.

"Hurry, man!" one of the crowd urged. "Aren't you afraid Jim'll die?"

County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill said Wednesday that one of the basic jobs immediately ahead is the acquisition of easements and rights-of-way for the improvement. The federal government requires Floyd county to provide these easements as well as alterations to sewers, roads and bridges that might be affected — all at no cost to the United States. The fiscal court is also required to guarantee maintenance of the project, once it is completed, and this cost is estimated at $6,000 a year.

The fiscal court last April 16 complied with all federal requirements when it issued its "letter of intent of compliance," Mr. Sturgill said.

"Floyd county, of course, does not have the money to buy easements and rights-of-ways," Sturgill said. "Our ability to provide these in order for the work to begin will depend upon the interest of the people in the area affected by flood and needing the stream improvement."

Cats Down Pikeville Hi For 3rd Season Victory

The Prestonsburg Blackcats tumbled the Pikeville Panthers from the undefeated ranks Friday night with an 18 to 8 win at Pikeville.

The Blackcat offense was sluggish in the first half, but was able to pick up only two first downs in the half. But the Cat defense meanwhile was outstanding — in fact, their only touchdown in the first half came on a Pikeville fumble, with Tommy Burchett picking up the ball and scampering 65 yards for the touchdown. Prestonsburg led at halftime, 6 to 0.

In the second half the Blackcats began to move better as Mark Miller began to click with his passes. He connected with several and threw a touchdown aerial to his end, Robert Bryant. In the fourth quarter hard-running Wayne Brown scampered for the third touchdown of the night. Coach McClellan began to substitute in the closing minutes. Pikeville mustered its touchdown with a "bomb" pass to the right end, Pikeville picked up the two extra points. Prestonsburg failed on all three attempts for extra points. Friday night, the Blackcats will be at Leslie County (Hyden).

bo, Jr., Hyden's alleged assailant, with assault and battery was issued.

Sheriff Lewis said another disturbance took place at the Purple Onion last Friday night. He said Lyons was defiant after a closing-order had been tacked on the roadhouse door, about 7:30 p.m. Saturday, and that he and his deputies returned, late that night, to effect the closing and make arrests.

Freddy Williams, owner of the property in which the business was operated, has a roadhouse permit, Sheriff Lewis said, but this is not transferable.

New TENDERNESS

The new found tenderness in Proten Beef is directly related to delicious tropical fruits, such as pineapple, papaya, and figs. Nature's original tendering agents, already present in beef, are supplemented by pure food protein derivatives of some of these fruits. Minute quantities are used to create new tenderness never before possible. This process is so natural it assures full beef flavor and nutrition as well as added tenderness.

Surviving besides the widow are three sons, Eugene Crisp, of Martin, Seaton Crisp, Jr., of Hyden, William Crisp, of Bypro; four daughters, Mrs. Margaret Crisp and Mrs. Myrtle Maxine Gibson, both of Bypro, Mrs. Dorothy Mae Count, of Bevinville, Mrs. Anna Louise Hinkle, of Detroit; the following brothers and sisters, Mrs. Beatrice Hughes, Mrs. Verna Coburn, Mrs. Geneva Jones, Mrs. Cecil Elizabeth Urps, of Williamson, W. Va., Mrs. Dorothy Blevins, South Webster, O., Mrs. Gladys Stidham, of Marion, O., Mrs. Grace Setser, of Richwood, O., Edna Coburn, of Grayson; Earl and Okey McCall, Irving Gillan, all of Ashland, Shade and William McCall, of Mohican, W. Va., Henry Gillam, of Merion, O., Leroy Gillam, of California; 22 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Free Will Baptist church at Bypro, the Revs. Roy Ramey and William Burke officiating. Burial was made in the Richmond cemetery at Prestonsburg under direction of Merion Funeral Chapel.

Technical assistance to Kentucky's small business firms is available from the University of Kentucky Office of Development Services and Business Research. This service is free of charge to any business, with less than 250 employees, that needs guidance in the areas of management, personnel, quality control, marketing, and engineering.

The total enrollment for the University of Kentucky for the first semester of the 1969-70 school year is officially listed at 27,920. There are 16,175 on the Lexington campus; 10,127 in the Community College System; 816 in the Evening Class Program; and 802 in the University Extension Program.

Philosophy of the School of Allied Health Professions at the University of Kentucky states that if physicians and dentists are to receive their educational and clinical training in health centers, then it is imperative that those who work with them receive their education and training in a similar environment.

NEW FIELD ADVISOR NAMED TO SUCCEED CURRY HERE IN GIRL SCOUT COUNCIL

Floyd county Girl Scouts will receive the professional help of a new field adviser of the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council in Mrs. Peggy Chaffins, formerly a field adviser at Middlesboro, Mrs. Chaffins has been named field adviser for a section of the council jurisdiction that includes this county. She will have offices in Prestonsburg and will help volunteer leaders in her section at regular intervals.

For Mrs. Chaffins, the appointment means a return to her home area. She is a native of Pikeville and a graduate of Pikeville College. She has been a social worker at Eastern State Hospital in Lexington and was with the State Division of Public Assistance for three years before joining the Wilderness Road staff last October. She succeeds Roy Curry, who has resigned.

The Wilderness Road Council, with headquarters in Lexington and with the on-going help of 1,950 volunteers, serves 10,000 girls in 55 Kentucky counties, plus one each in Ohio and Tennessee. It is supported by United Funds, Community Chests and fund drives in those areas without federated giving.

Layne Memorial Meet Draws Family Members

The Layne memorial meeting was held Sept. 14 at the Dan Knauz Memorial Park at Ivel. Relatives of the Moses Sanford Layne family came from Ohio, Tennessee, California, Illinois, West Virginia and Michigan, as well as various places in Kentucky. Lunch was served at noon, then the afternoon was spent in special singing featuring a quartet from Olive Hill and the Hubert Layne Family from Elizabethtown, Tenn. A floral gift was sent from the Layne memorial to David Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Layne, who was then in the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville. An offering was taken for the Layne memorial fund with good response. The reunion closed with prayer by Clyde Layne, pastor of Mt. Zion Chapel, Justell.

ANGUS ASS'N MEMBER

Lloyd Hayden, of Manton, has been elected to membership in the American Angus Association at St. Joseph, Missouri. Lloyd D. Miller, secretary, announced last week.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my many friends and relatives, who in any way helped and expressed their sympathy upon the passing of my beloved husband, Johnnie Chaffins. I especially want to thank the Regular Baptist ministers for their comforting words, the doctors and nurses at the McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital, who were so kind to us, and the Merion Funeral Chapel for its efficient services.

Coed Plans To Return For East Kentucky Work

By LAVADA BLANTON

Blonde, slender, pretty, she is an instructor of the severely and profoundly retarded at the Frankfort State Hospital and School. Her name is Bonita Skaggs.

In addition to her full-time work at the hospital and school, Bonita is carrying nine hours at the University where she is a senior. She will get her bachelor's degree in June in special education.

Her classroom is not much different from any other primary teacher's. Around the room are miniature road signs — "Stop," "Quiet," and a model of a traffic light. On a shelf is a record player and children's records. At the other end of the room near the blackboard is a felt board with cut-outs of a table setting.

In the class are three students. She teaches a total of 17 children in four groups each day. Between the classes, she commutes to Lexington for her classes at U. K.

Bonita is one of 17 members of the teaching staff at FSHS. Five are certified teachers, eight instructors, with a minimum of two years of college work, and four teacher's aides who assist the teachers in classroom work and with records.

There is an educational program for all of the 215 children under 21 years of age at the hospital and school. For some, half an hour a day is all they can tolerate. Others may get an eighth-grade-level education.

The educational program is geared to the needs of each individual child to enable him to progress as far and as fast as his own potential allows. Some children are in a class of one; the largest class has 12 students. The average is eight or nine students per class.

Bonita began teaching at the hospital and school in March. Through the summer she taught severely retarded, with whom progress was limited — but rewarding. For one child learning to stay in the room was progress. Another "found herself" with a mirror. It was the first thing that had ever seemed to interest her.

In the first week of fall classes Bonita is trying to evaluate her new students, "not for an I.Q., but to learn what they can do right now," she says. "If all they can do is string beads, I'll start there." Later she will teach them to dress themselves with dressing dolls, button and zip boards and clothes they can put on over their clothes.

Working on the basis of individual attention, she tries to give each child reassurance and success. One child can take a primary level puzzle apart, but can't put it together. So she praises her for taking it apart while continuing to help her fit the pieces into place. With another child she moves her while saying "Turn around in your chair this way," and praises her for the effort.

When she first began teaching retarded children at the Bluegrass School in Lexington, she says she used to leave the classroom to cry and then would come back and try again. Now she enjoys teaching.

The change came, she says, when she realized these are only children who have a handicap. "It's as though they are locked away in another world and it is a challenge to find the key to bring them out. They have a right to learn everything they can learn. If toilet training is all one can learn, he deserves a chance to learn that," she says.

"These children can learn just as all other children learn, but it is more limited. They are preserved in a kind of infinite childhood.

For that reason, she says, she has an even greater love for these children than for other children.

Miss Skaggs started out at U.K. as a political science major, but it didn't give her the kind of contact with people she wanted. A friend suggested she think about special education and told her who to see. Two years later she went. She says she finds special education "much more fulfilling."

While going to school Miss Skaggs has worked full-time. In January she must quit her job at FSHS to do practice teaching.

Originally from Paintsville, she plans to go back to Eastern Kentucky to develop better facilities for the retarded after she gets her degree in June.

Pikeville Realizes 'Model City' Dream

The city of Pikeville recently received the heaviest windfall of public funds to be received by any Eastern Kentucky community when it was announced by Governor Nunn that $22 million will be spent on a "model city" project there, the dream of Pikeville's mayor, Dr. W. C. Hambley.

Approximately half of the $22 million will be in federal funds. The state of Kentucky is to supply $7 million, with the remaining $4 million coming from local sources.

The work will involve ridding Pikeville of the Big Sandy river, a flood threat every year until the completion of upriver dams, and the C. & O. railway tracks which split the town, and, besides occupying valuable room, contributed to the community's load of dust and grime.

Originally, it was proposed that the old river-bed could be filled and converted into much-needed building sites, but now it is suggested a lake may take the place of the stream. The impoundment may be necessary to meet a drainage problem, with the river gone.

Work will involve cutting through Peach Orchard Mountain and rechanneling U. S. 23, the C. & O. Railway and part of the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River — all around the western edge of Pikeville.

By doing so, Nunn said at a Frankfort news conference, the city of 6,000 will better serve a surrounding area of 200,000 persons and will obtain several hundred acres of land.

He predicted the project, half financed by federal money, would make Pikeville "an inspiring and enviable model city for all of Kentucky and perhaps all of America."

The dramatic cut in the mountain will cost $13 million and take about three years to complete.

The remainder of the $22 million will pay for new roads, a new railroad, a centralized coal-loading yard outside the city and necessary drainage and flood control facilities.

Nunn said the Big Sandy Valley Area Development Program is father of the current project. He said it is part of a concept "in which urban services for rural areas can be developed in a cluster of existing small communities — such as the Pikeville-Prestonsburg-Paintsville combination."

The governor also called the $22 million package part of the Nixon Administration's "new federalism" — declaring it is an investment in the future rather than a one-shot expenditure of government money.

Agencies involved in the project include the Appalachian Regional Commission, U. S. Commerce Dept., U. S. Housing and Urban Development Dept., Kentucky Highway Dept., Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and Kentucky Program Development Office.

The U. S. Corps of Engineers financed studies to check the hydrologic structures for flood control and also supervised the boring necessary to make sure the cut could be put through the mountain. More than 13 million cubic yards of earth will be dug out to make the spectacular cut.

The huge development program will also involve:

1. Knocking off the top of two mountains, fill the space in between and construct an airport with a 5,000-foot runway, long enough for jet aircraft.

2. Improving and coordinating city services and programs, including the organization of a central "service center" which will diagnose social needs and bring appropriate services to families in the area.

3. Reorienting and expanding Pikeville's educational system, to offer the town's citizens and students at all levels, from pre-school through post-graduate, the training that will best advance the town's economic future.

SUMMER INSTITUTE — Some of the approximately 100 students who completed a Pikeville College institute concerning children with learning problems are shown with Prof. Richard D. Howard, a Floyd county native, left, who is chairman of the college's department of special education and who directed the institute. The institute was sponsored by the federal Office of Education and the students hold checks paid to them by the government for attending a five-week session. Stipends amounted to almost $45,000 which was paid to the students in amounts ranging from $375 to $875. A total of $93,000 was expended by the government on the institute conducted in the summer. Others, from left to right, Evealene Moore, Pilgrim, Ky.; Pauline Owens, Grundy, Va.; Mrs. Jacob P. Cline, Jr., Pikeville; Elizabeth Vinciguerra Neace, Williamson, W. Va.; Ted Corder, Eolia, Ky.; Nick Osborne, Wheelwright; Mrs. Jo Ann Reid, Wooton, Ky., and Lula Wimmer, Pilgrim Knob, Va.

District 50 Protests Federal Funds Cutback

District 50, UMW, has asked President Nixon to exclude the Appalachian area from the 75 per cent cutback in federal construction funds recently announced, saying the people of this region have suffered undue hardship for too many years.

In a letter delivered to President Nixon on Thursday, September 4, District 50 President Elwood Moffett said the people of Appalachia "need help from the Federal Government if they are ever to achieve the economic status of the average citizen of the remainder of the United States."

The communication pointed out that federal funds had made possible the construction of highways, dams, bridges, and the expansion of hospital and educational facilities, improving the general economy of the Appalachian area.

Moffett said, "there is a dire need that the federal programs continue as an inducement to industry to locate in the area."

The letter to President Nixon said most of the workers on highway construction are former coal miners who have been displaced by mechanization of the coal industry and "these people would be drastically and adversely affected by any reduction in federal expenditures in the Appalachia area," Moffett said.

John Worth Spears, Former Floyd Man, Dies at Norton, Va.

John Worth "Bub" Spears, 54, of Meta, Ky., died Sept. 16 in Community Hospital, Norton, Va., following an apparent heart attack.

Born Mar. 31, 1915 at Edgar, Floyd county, he was the son of Mrs. Nina McGuire Spears and the late John Walker Spears, of Lancer. He was a veteran of World War II, serving from 1942 through 1945, and since his return from service was a merchant and farmer. He had been a retired miner since 1966.

Additional survivors include the widow, Mrs. Lucy May Spears; one daughter, Mrs. Donald House, Ottawa, Ill., and two sons, Bobby, of Meta, and Worth Spears, of Ottowa, Ill.; a brother, Robert Walker Spears, Chino, Calif., and four sisters, Mrs. J. G. Stepp, Mrs. Ed May, Mrs. Mae Kendrick and Mrs. James B. Goble, all of Prestonsburg.

Funeral services were conducted Sept. 19 at Meta Baptist Church, the Rev. Jack Mutter officiating. Burial was in the Spears cemetery under the direction of the Justice Funeral Home, Pikeville.

James F. Boggs, Sr., Former P'burg Man, Victim in Missouri

James F. Boggs, Sr., 74, retired railway car inspector and former resident of Prestonsburg, died at 10:45 a.m. Friday at Ripley County Memorial Hospital, Doniphan, Mo., after an illness of two years.

Born in Hinton, W. Va., July 2, 1895, he was well-known in the Big Sandy area where he resided for 27 years while a railway company employee. He had lived in Ripley county, Mo., the last 20 years.

Survivors include a son, James F. Boggs, Jr., San Diego, Calif.; four daughters, Mrs. Louise Elkins, Prestonsburg, Mrs. Lucille Preston, West Van Lear, Mrs. Betty Jo Scheurch and Mrs. Charlie Cloud, both of Newport, Ky.; one brother, F. F. Boggs, Hinton, W. Va., 12 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral rites were conducted Sunday from the Edwards Funeral Chapel, Doniphan, Mo., the Rev. Leslie Elam officiating. Burial was made in Doniphan cemetery.

WILL WE LEARN BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE?

Couldn't we learn to love each other? Before it is too late, before we go too far, before we destroy the earth and everything there is in it, couldn't we learn to love each other? Don't turn me off, don't call me a fanatic, don't say I'm off my rocker. For the chances are growing greater and greater every day that we will destroy each other unless we learn to love each other.

We have missiles strung around the world, missiles that have but one purpose — to kill. We humans annually spend more money on weapons than on any other single item. Some people call it progress, this ability to kill more than your enemy. The Galilean says it is suicide.

"Love your enemy . . ." No, we can't do that, can we? "It won't work," we say. How do we know it won't work? — we haven't tried it. We have been too busy inventing more deadly weapons. It could very well be that the most powerful weapon in all the world is to practice the Galilean's way, to "love your enemy." We have worked on the assumption that the only way to get rid of our enemy is to destroy him, kill him. But don't you get rid of your enemy when you make him your friend?

Couldn't we learn to love each other? Before somebody accidentally pushes the wrong button at the right time, couldn't we learn to be brothers? Do we have to destroy this earth, blow it to pieces, because of our sinfulness? Couldn't we find a way to work things out?

We have declared war on poverty in this country. We have set out to improve everybody's lot. We are going to try to give everybody a fair share. That's O.K. But we are only bypassing the real war on poverty. Our greatest poverty is in the spiritual realm. The very area that made us great we have now placed last. We are poor. We have more than we have ever had before; we eat better than we have ever eaten, and we spend more now than ever before in history. But we are poor. Starving. Dying. We have nothing to undergird us, to tie us together, to help us understand ourselves and get along with our fellowman. Couldn't we learn to love each other?

We take liquor and bottle it and sell it and tax it and drink it by the millions of gallons. We take

FAVORITE TREES OF THE INDIANS

The Indians loved the hickories and gave them their name, "hickoria." The nuts were one of the best sources of food for them, and the Algonquians taught the whites how to make a delicious food they called "powwocoria." This was said to be the most highly prized food of some Indian tribes. The recipe for making it was:

Take the sweet nuts of the shagbark hickory, crack enough to get plenty kernels to boil; after boiling them, strain off the rich, soupy liquid; mix with it corn meal made by grinding the maize between stones; stir up the liquid with the meal, then cook slowly into a thick mush; make the mush into small cakes and bake them on hot stones.

Talk about a tasty food! It is said this was one of the best-loved foods of the Algonquians. If there was no maize to make the mush cakes, the Indians ate the thick soup made from hickory nuts and found it tasty and very nourishing.

From the name of this food, "powwocoria," the last part, "hickoria," was taken and applied by the botanists to the genus, Hickory; this was the oldest and most fitting name for the hickory clan. However, the botanists later changed the name to "carya," which was not as proper for the hickories as "hickoria," since carya is the old Greek name for the walnut tree. Of course, the hickory trees are members of the walnut family, which is noted for the strong, aromatic scent of its foliage. Although the odor is strong and pungent, it is not altogether unpleasant, and many persons like to smell the odor of crushed hickory leaves.

The hickories are remarkable trees for many reasons. They are native to the United States and are found mainly in the eastern part. The trees were unknown to the whites until coming to the New World. The wood of the hickory is close-grained, springy and tough as whang leather. The twigs have solid pith, which shows a pretty star when the twig is cut crosswise. If you look under a hickory tree, you will seldom find any broken or fallen twigs on the ground. The fiber of the wood of the twigs is tough and strong enough to resist a hurricane and seldom breaks during a severe storm.

The pioneers depended on hickory wood for the handles of their tools, such as axes, hammers, mattocks, pitchforks and single trees; they also made flails out of tough hickory wood. The spokes and rims for the wagons and buggies of the early settlers also were made from the wood of the shagbark and other hickories. The old-time basket-makers knew how to rive thin strips of wood from a piece of hickory to make the big bushel baskets that lasted for years. The wood of hickory is heavy and is also used for barn timbers, and in other construction where heavy and strong wood is desirable. A cubic foot of seasoned hickory wood weighs about 54 pounds.

October is the month for hickory nuts to fall. Unlike the walnuts, they hull themselves and one usually finds the thick hulls lying beside the naked nuts. The hickories produce four-sided nuts and when the hull opens up and drops off, it will be found to consist of four sections.

Our leading hickories of the Tri-State region are the shagbark (also called the small shellbark hickory), the big shellbark, the mockernut, the pignut and bitternut. The mockernut hickory is also called "white hickory," as its bark is whitish and it has white heartwood. The pignut hickory is called the "broom hickory," as the pioneers knew how to make brooms and mops from one of its small trunks. The end was split into many thin strips, which were tied together to make an effective mop or broom. I have seen some of these and they were long-lasting. The bitternut hickory is a tall, slender tree and is called "the red hickory," as its inner wood is reddish-brown. The big shellbark hickory is noted for the size of its nuts, which with the hull on are almost as big as a baseball.

Outstanding of all the hickories is the shagbark, or scaly-bark hickory. It is generally rated as the best of its clan for its sweet nuts, which are the favorite food of squirrels and a lot of people, too. I shall write more in details about this hickory in a future column. I call it "the Abe Lincoln of the Woods," because of its rugged grandeur and power to stand tall against the storms that may assail it.

KEA To Take Case To People in '70

LOUISVILLE, KY. — The Kentucky Education Association (KEA) is taking to the public the case for its 1970 legislative program, asking, "Can Kentucky Grow if Our Schools Stand Still?"

Plans for an intensive campaign to enlist and consolidate public support have been announced by Dr. Kenneth Estes of Bowling Green, KEA president, and Dr. J. M. Dodson of Louisville, KEA executive secretary.

"We've got to remember," Dodson said, "that if the teachers and the educational program of Kentucky move, they've got to move at the behest and desire of the people who support Kentucky education."

Dodson noted that KET has not spearheaded any widespread citizen involvement in education since 1960, when the Kentucky Council for Education worked to develop public understanding and attainment of educational objectives.

Too many Kentuckians condemn school people as "always money hungry," Dodson said, because KEA requests additional school revenue at each legislative session. But if citizens know why KEA has set certain legislative goals — and the educational erosion that could result if the goals aren't met — they will back KEA's efforts.

Campaign activities will include the organization of local and state citizens groups, coffees and luncheons, tours of schools, and speakers' bureaus. Newspaper, radio, television, and billboard advertising will play a major role. KEA's district education associations are asking each member to contribute 50 cents to raise $15,000 for the advertising portion of the campaign.

KEA's 1970 legislative program seeks to move Kentucky education "four steps forward" with proposals under four headings — better schools, better teaching, broader benefits, and fuller funding.

The "better schools" category covers foundation-program allotment increases that would (1) raise to $8000 the state-allotment base for starting salaries of teachers with degrees, (2) reduce the number of pupils per classroom, (3) provide more special-instruction personnel in art, music, physical education, and counseling, and (4) set aside more funds for school construction and operating expenses.

"To attract and keep first-rate teachers," KEA contends, "Kentucky needs competitive salaries, smaller classes to permit individual attention, new curricular programs for children, and funds to eliminate the statewide pinch in services, supplies, and school maintenance."

On the matter of salaries, KEA cites "a mistaken but widespread belief throughout the state that teachers got the bulk of the sales-tax increase in the form of salary raises in the 1968 General Assembly," whereas the truth of the matter is that only about a third of the foundation-program increases went for salaries.

"In spite of the increase during the decade, the present salary base for beginning teachers is only $1700 over what has been determined the poverty breaking-point level for a family of four," says KEA. A program which seeks to raise this base from $5000 to $8000 cannot seriously be considered "lofty" or "unreasonable."

The "better teaching" category of KEA's 1970 legislative program calls for new or amended laws that will make possible these professional improvements:

1. Permit teacher-participation in development of school policies, practices and programs, and guarantee the right of a local association to enter into negotiation with a local board of education.

2. Provide a breathing-space for the teacher each day, through a planning period or duty-free lunch period. The time can readily be made available by assigning non-teaching duties — such as lunch-room and playground supervision — to teacher aides or parent-volunteers.

3. Establish a council on teacher education and certification made up of a broadly representative group of experienced educators. Such an independent body would make recommendations to the State Board of Education based on practical considerations, giving teachers a legal role they do not now have in standard-setting for their profession.

4. Require boards of education to supply reasons in writing for failing to re-hire a teacher or for transferring a teacher to a lower-paying position.

5. Authorize boards of education to publish total payroll statistics without breakdown by names of individual employees. Present law requiring the listing of individual salaries is an invasion of privacy and needless embarrassment to school personnel.

Sports Afield

Here's a suggestion for mid-day fishing — try trolling.

The dictionary defines trolling as, "Fishing with a moving lure, especially with a revolving lure."

A working definition might read: Fishing a moving lure at the end of a static line. A static line, of course, refers to one not being reeled in.

One of the greatest things about trolling is you can use whatever type of tackle you own. The important thing is not to use tackle too light or too heavy for the fish you're after. If it's too light you'll lose big fish. If too heavy, it takes the sport out of playing smaller fish.

Some trollers just mosey around with no pattern in mind and they luck into a fish here and there. But good trollers have a system and here's one, supplied by SPORTS AFIELD Magazine's Angling Editor, Homer Circle, to consider.

If the water is calm, try a surface lure near shore and over weed beds. Move slowly, just fast enough to make the lure work. If you troll too rapidly, you will not get a natural action out of the lure — all you'll get is twisted line.

Of course nothing can bring a quicker end to your trolling plans than a miserably twisted line. This is caused by (1) work, (2) a lure that runs off-center, and (3) a fouled lure, either on a piece of debris, your line or itself.

The simplest precaution is to tie a Sampo ball-bearing swivel to the end of your line. No matter what happens to your lure, you'll get no line twist.

Secondly, before trolling any lure, drop it down about three feet from your rod tip and watch it work under water at the speed you intend to troll. If it runs on center with an even beat, it's ready for use.

Suppose it runs to the left, or right. Such a lure either will turn over or run into another lure and give you a snafu that will resemble a crow's nest. The cure: When a lure runs to the left, bend the line tie slightly to the right until the lure runs on center. In other words, bend the line tie the way you want the lure to run. Do this carefully with a pair of long-nose pliers.

Watch your rod tip as your lure makes it wiggle. When that wiggle changes into a jerky or pulsating motion, stop trolling and bring in the lure. It's fouled by something.

If no action results, snap on a floating diving type.

Troll just off the break where the short water darkens into the five- to ten-foot depths or deeper. Ideally, your lure should be touching bottom or bottom cover very lightly. You can control this by raising or lowering your rod tip once you locate it. If there is cover on the bottom, fish normally are over, in or around it.

Next, try the deep working lures such as metal spoons, weighted spinners and so on. Troll them through the deepest waters off rocky points, near steep bluffs, and other fishy spots.

HUNTING AND FISHING IN KENTUCKY

BY HARRY TOWLES

Kentucky doesn't have more miles of running water than any state save Alaska for nothing. It has those many fine streams for something special and that is stream fishing. Many fishermen are not aware of the fine fishing that may be had from these streams. Rather, they have been spoiled by the offerings of the bigger lakes in the commonwealth and may be overlooking excellent fishing right in their own backyard, so to speak.

No better streams for variety fishing may be found than the Green, the Cumberland, the Kentucky, the Licking and the many smaller streams. And no better time to fish them than in the fall. It is then that mostly clear water may be found with a temperature in the sixties which is most invigorating to the fish. And invigorated fish mean good fishing.

In October and early November the rivers are usually well within their banks and the water is clear and cool. By casting along rocky cliffs, over fallen treetops, beside logs and submerged stumps good catches of black bass are experienced. There are good sized bass in the streams, too, and a four pound black bass in a stream will, in all probability, give more fight than a six pounder taken from the lakes. They just have more vigor in the cool, clear streams and they undoubtedly resent more violently being duped by an artificial lure. Casting is not the only method of catching the battling blacks, however, the minnow fisherman, by dropping his line into the same places, may come up with just as many fish as the caster. The fellow who likes fast water fishing can be satisfied most usually by casting into the waters immediately below the locks and dams of these streams.

In addition to the black bass he'll likely encounter there the white bass and occasionally the sauger in some sections. In addition, if he is fishing below the dams with live bait he may also tie into a large catfish, or a buffalo or a croppie or a bluegill.

And while talking about croppie don't forget the streams in the fall for this species also. Dunk the minnow around fallen treetops at three to six foot depths and the croppie is more than apt to respond. This is true in the smaller streams as well as in the larger ones. In fact, some fishermen enjoy their very best fishing streams like Salt River and Rolling Fork by walking the banks and dunking the minnow around half submerged brush piles in the edges of these streams. In doing this, because of the cumbersome nature of casting equipment in brush infested banks, the plain old cane pole is used for dropping the minnow gently into the waters.

Around brush piles also may be found abundant bluegill to be had for the simple expedient of dropping a worm or cricket in the right place. A great number may be taken from around a single brush pile as they seem to congregated in such areas.

Perhaps, the epitome of all stream fishing is reached in the smaller streams. By walking the banks, or actually by wading if the weather is not too cold, and by casting into the eddies or the riffles with a helgramite or minnow or a nightcrawler good bass are harvested. This is fall fishing in its finest form. True, the bass will not be too big, but those caught will battle with every ounce of energy and they'll employ the swift waters of the riffles to their advantage. To a lesser degree flies and popping bugs and other artificial lures that are shiny and resemble in action a minnow also are used. And who knows, while so fishing a redeye may challenge the lure or even a bluegill may relish the fight. But principally it's the black bass, the small-mouth no less, that will offer the greatest sport to the avid fisherman.

So, if you like the lakes, give them a try in fall season but don't for a minute think that those lakes offer the only good fishing at this time of year. Don't by any means overlook the fine fishing that is available in the streams.

Auxier Postmaster Exam Is Announced

The Interagency Board of Civil Service Examiners for Kentucky has announced an open competitive examination for postmaster at Auxier. The position is in grade PFS 6, starting salary $6,675 a year. Applications will be accepted until October 29.

Complete information about examination requirements and instructions for filing may be obtained from the post office where the vacancy exists or from the Interagency Board of Civil Service Examiners, Room 167, Federal Building, 600 Federal Place, Louisville, Kentucky 40202. Applications must be filed with the Interagency Board and must be received or postmarked not later than the closing date specified above.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

JUST IN TIME

In the winter of 1968-69 I reread all the 1700-odd essays that have appeared in this column since it began in September, 1935. A grant from the Faculty Research Committee, continued from previous years, was made to have my essays typed on an electric typewriter and on good bond paper and to be bound in volumes of 200 essays as my gift to the Kentucky Library. It gave me a chance, also, to correct any casual error in typing and, especially, to make an annotated index to the whole series and a cross-reference index, too, so that if anyone should ever want to know what dinner on the ground used to be, he could find the references all together without having to leaf through several large volumes.

The chief feeling that I had in doing this tedious but delightful work was to review the hundreds of passing institutions that I have witnessed when they were alive and when they were passing away. Frankly, I soon felt that, for dozens of these essays, I could not possibly write them now; years have still further covered over the feeling of other times. When I first wrote "The Old Family Nag," I was only in the mid-thirties; now I am eighty, forty-five years farther away from Old Mag, our family nag, and the old family buggy. And I have been told many times recently that the front room is so ancient that even middle-aged people had never seen one.

In the summer of 1961, while speaking to a group of teachers in Breathitt County about folklore, I casually mentioned a front room and praised its good qualities and the memories attached to it. Every one of the sixty or seventy people in the room except one man inclining toward gray hair looked perfectly blank; nobody except him had ever seen a front room. Imagine that! How glad I am that I knew the room and that I sat down one fine day and tried to picture our own room, which was enough like dozens of others that it could have been chosen as a type.

In the early spring of 1969, while speaking to a class in folklore, I asked how many of the twenty or so juniors and seniors of the class had ever attended a one-roomed school. Only one had had that experience. And then I recalled that, when I began to teach school, in smallish Hickman County, away back in 1907, there were some eighty schools there. And, long after I was teaching in college, I could have named two dozen counties that did not have a single consolidated school. At the end of the school year 1968-69 a consolidated grade and high school will drop its high school work and become a part of a big county high school. And yet I can remember as if it were a year or two ago what a stir was made when two small villages and nearby one-roomed schools got together and built that school. For years there was a lot of hard feeling because some of the villagers resented having their schools, rather inadequate ones, taken away. Fortunately, though, I lived to see that one of the proudest high schools in my whole area of observation, and many school administrators came to see how it worked and modeled their own schools on it.

I find it nearly impossible to talk to farmers who are under thirty. Their farms are mechanized to the nth degree; my memories run too far back into the era of the horse and the new-ground and the cutting of sprouts. Imagine some boy like me in the early years of the century with a bush-hog; why, persimmon and sassafras sprouts might even look demanding and challenging. I could sweep them down at a fearful rate. For many farmers whom I know, the days of milking by hand seems something out of an old, old story. Imagine not being slapped by a cow's tail that is full of cuckleburs while you are trying to milk on some frosty morning. It is a wonder that we of other times kept a reasonable portion of our ears after such an incident.

And all these things make me glad that I took time, in a very busy life, to have my little say. Of course, some later people who chance to read any of these essays will wonder at the author's shameless exaggeration and his fertile imagination.

STUDENT CONTRIBUTIONS TO FLOWER SHOW LISTED

The Maytown high school home economics classes under the guidance of Mrs. Joyce Stewart, instructor, displayed the results of five weeks' instruction at the recent Maytown Fall Flower Show. Forty-five arrangements of artificial materials were entered, with 16 arrangements receiving blue ribbons, 12 red and 17 white ribbons. Sixteen table settings were judged. Beth Barr, home furnishings specialist with the Agriculture Extension Office, Pikeville, indicated all 16 tables were nearly perfect, but gave three red ribbons on minor technicalities. Minnie Conley, of Eastern, former home economics teacher, assisted Miss Barr in judging the display.

Adhering to the theme of the artistic arrangements division of the show, "My Land Is Kentucky," fourth-year home economics students titled their table settings. The following titles, and ribbons awarded are listed: Fireworks at the Park (Red) — Bonnie Bradford, Mary Tuttle, and Reka Ratliff; State Fair Breakfast (Blue)—Darlene Hicks, Bridgett Robinson, and Reba Ratliff; New Year's Dinner (Blue)—Verna Bowling, Dianna Martin, Sandy Boyd, and Sherry Salisbury; Thanksgiving Day Dinner (Blue)—Marlene Nance, Geneva Shepherd, and Annie Lou Moore; Easter Sunrise Breakfast (Blue)—Anna Bowling, and Doshie Martin; Apollo Celebration (Blue) — Glenna Cooley, Carla Robinson, Belinda Jones, Joan Bailey, and Emma Jane Allen; Shaker-town Tea (Red) — Sherry

The following program was presented: "God Bless America" and "Every Night When the Sun Goes Down," by the Mixed Chorus; "Johnnie Has Gone for a Soldier" and "Laura Lee," by Freshman Girl Chorus, "How Great Thou Art," trumpet solo by Glenna Robinson, accompanied at the piano by Susan Compton; dance routine to "Baby Elephant Walk" by Maytown majorettes, Carla Robinson, Joan Bailey, Belinda Jones, Carol Stambaugh, Teddi Gibson, and Patty Herald; piano solo, "Tarantella," by Susan Compton; trumpet solo, "Mabel Polka," by Glenna Robinson; "Autumn Leaves" and "Climb Every Mountain," by a special group consisting of Carla Robinson, Belinda Jones, Joan Bailey, Becky Stewart, Deloris Harmon, Patty Herald, Theresa Prater, Jeanie Frasure, Pat Tallent, Jim Stewart, Jan Hicks and accompanied at the piano by Susan Compton. This group ended the program with an a capella arrangement of "Wayfarin' Stranger."

Pikeville Gas Loss And Free Utilities Cost City $165,000

Pikeville, Ky. — Leaks in the system and free utilities for a number of citizens have cost Pikeville nearly $165,000 in the past two years, the city council said Monday.

The disclosure came at a council meeting with a request by council candidate Frank Justice for public airing of recent city financial audit results.

Asked to explain the losses in the gas and water system, the council said a substantial number of persons were getting service. The group also noted there had been a number of leaks in gas and water lines.

The council told Justice an effort is being made to rectify the situation.

Life will go on without you.

Not all traffic fatalities are caused from drinking while driving or speeding. But too many of them are. Even if you don't have an accident, you could be arrested... heavily fined... lose your license (and maybe your job?). You know all of the arguments against speeding or drinking while driving. If you still want to do it... remember: life will go on without you.

Nature Trails

PLANTS THAT SET TRAPS

There are several species of plants that display an almost human ingenuity in setting "bug-traps." A study of their skillful ways of catching insects is almost enough to convince one that even plants have some uncanny power to reason; they must, indeed, know a lot about the nature of the insects they trap, such as their feeding habits and what they like to eat.

Among the most notorious of the insect catchers are the Pitcher Plants, of which there are several species. Some of them depend almost entirely on insects for their food supply. They grow mostly in bogs and swampy regions, where they cannot obtain the proteins and other nutrients they need, so they trap insects to eat.

The Northern Pitcher Plant grows in wet places in the north-eastern and central states. Its leaves form hollow cylinders called "pitchers," which are ingenious death traps for insects. Even the bloom of this plant is designed to resemble raw, red beefsteak, so as to attract flies and beetles. The pitcher of the plant looks somewhat like the long neck and head of a goose. It has a flap folded over at the top, which emits a sweet secretion from honey glands. In some way, which we do not fully understand, the pitcher plant "knows" that insects go after anything sweet, and that's why they use a honey secretion to capture them. The top of the pitcher is marked with conspicuous lines leading downward into the inside depths. The plant somehow "knows" that insects are prone to follow purple lines in search of nectar or other food. After feasting on the sweet stuff at the top of the pitcher, the insects follow the purple lines as if to explore the inside of the pitcher. There are hairs bent downward, which do not hinder the insect from crawling down, but these are designed to keep it from crawling out.

Inside the pitcher, there is a glazed surface as smooth and slippery as glass, so that an insect's feet cannot cling to it. When the insect crawls to this glazed surface, it tumbles into a "death bath" at the bottom of the pitcher. There it struggles in the water until it is drowned. Then the pitcher plant proceeds to digest it.

One of the western species of pitcher plants is called "the hooded cobra," as the leaves form a hood at the top, somewhat like the spread hood of the cobra snake.

The Indians had a high regard for the pitcher plant and used it as a remedy for smallpox. They claimed it had certain medicinal properties that would keep the face from being pockmarked.

The greatest danger the pitcher plants face is a severe drought, which might cause the water in the pitcher to dry up, so there would be no death-bath for drowning insects.

THE SUNDEWS. These are also insect-eating plants that grow in marshy areas of the prairies and other parts of the U.S. They are called "sundews" as the plants produce a rosette of bronzy leaves which are highly efficient bug-catchers. The leaves are densely covered with rows of tentacles, each of which secretes a shiny droplet of a sweet liquid that looks like dew glistening in the sun. When an insect lights on one of the leaves, the tentacles whip over and secrete a sticky glue, which holds it fast. The tentacles quickly close down over the victim like those of the octopus, and it is held there until the plant can digest it.

The sundew plants capture midges, flies, beetles, mosquitoes, bugs of many kinds, and thus they do a good work in keeping a check on the insect populations. The leaf of the plant is so sensitive to a stimulus that even a piece of hair dropped on it will bring a quick response. The plant actually seems capable of transmitting impulses much like the nervous system of animals.

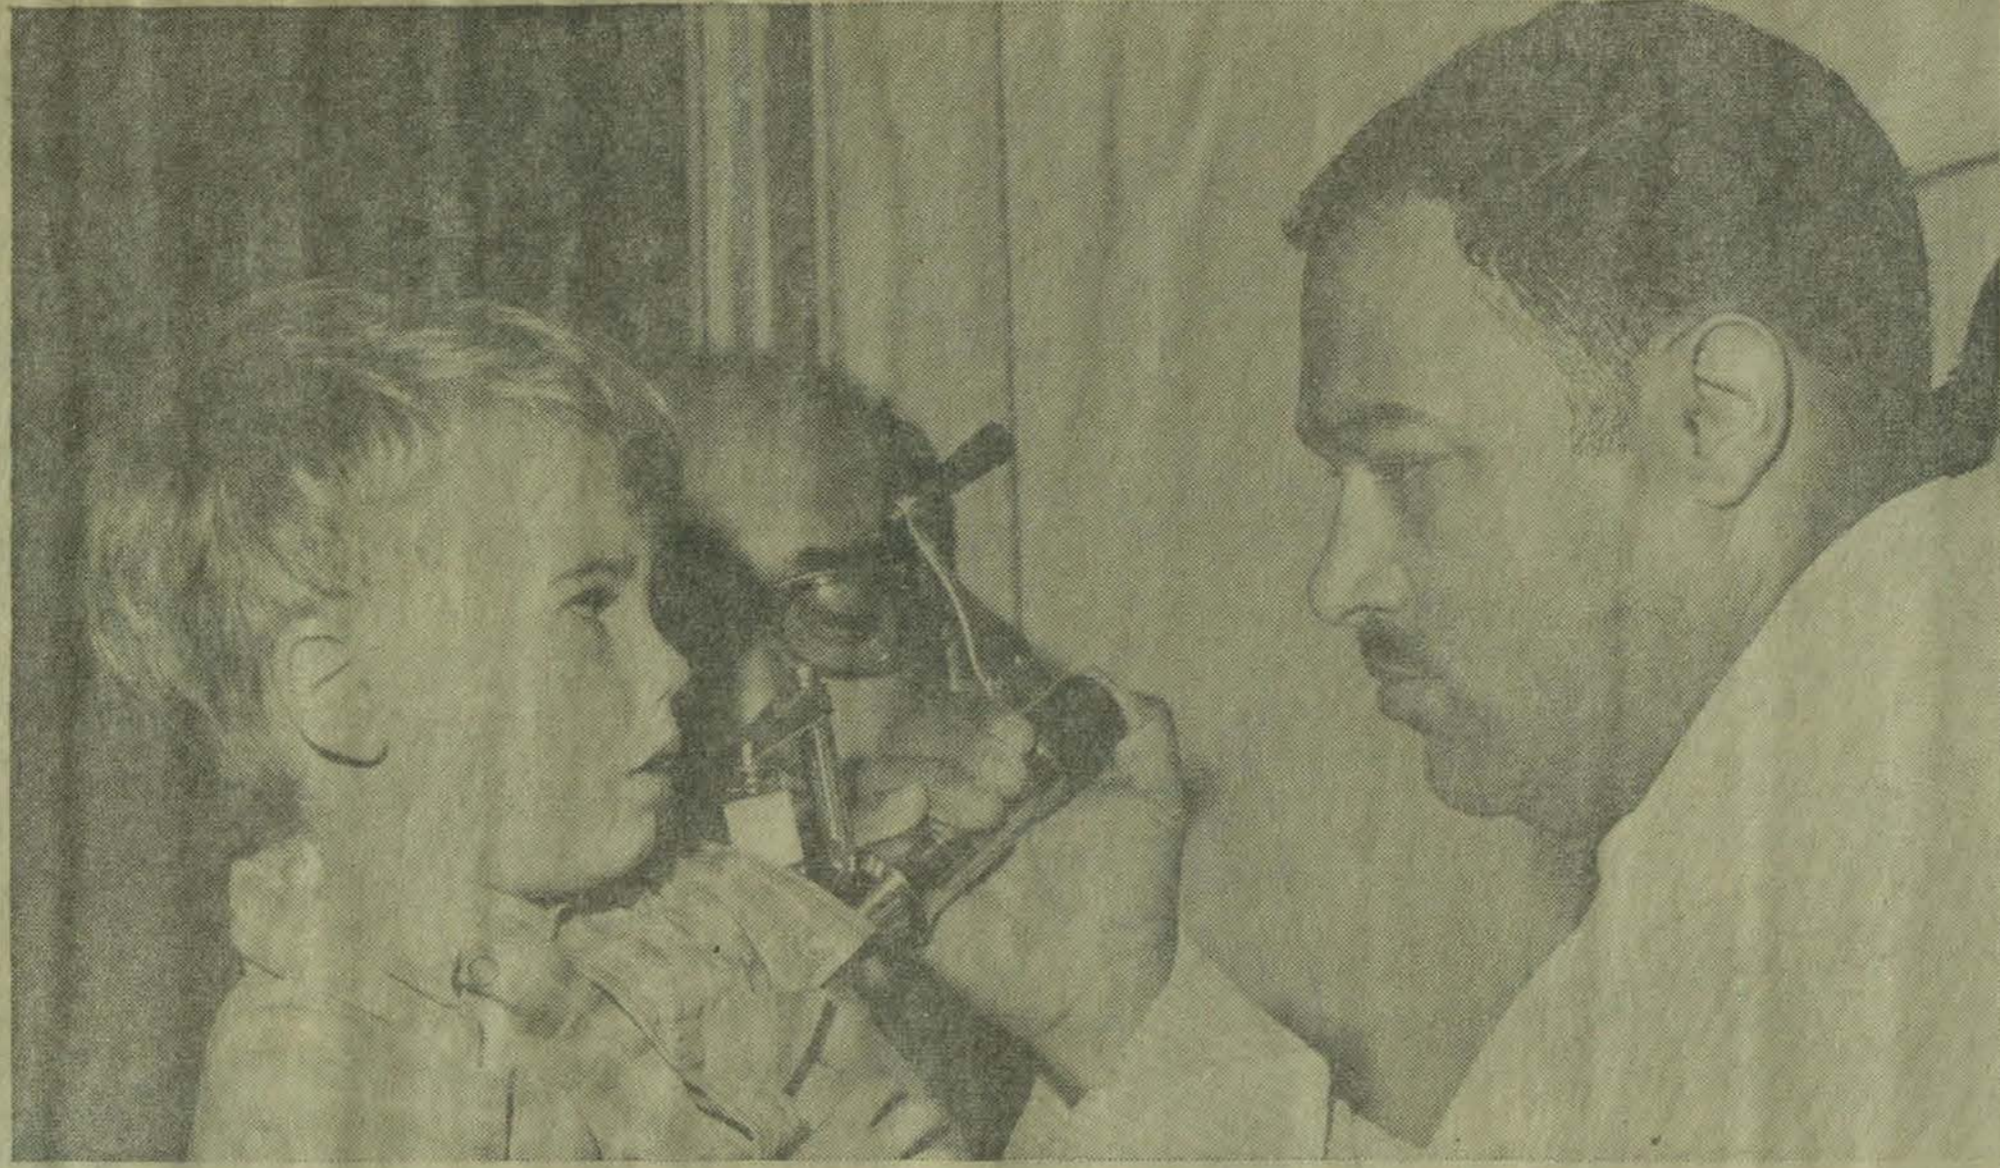

Sometimes dozens of different kinds of insects are found glued fast to a single sundew leaf. This plant is one of the old remedies for whooping cough.

VENUS' FLYTRAP. — This is also a plant of marshes and it also uses a most ingenious method for trapping insects to devour. It has a trap on the end of the leaf, which is hinged and can open or close like a book. The margins of the trap have hairs for holding the insects.

When an insect lights on the leaf, a quick impulse is sent out for the trap to close. It shuts down quickly and holds the insect fast until the plant can digest it.

Venus' Flytrap produces white flowers with showy, red stamens. When I study the various ingenious traps for catching insects, as used by the plants, I am reminded of the first line of a poem that used to be in the old school readers:

said the spider to the fly;
"Won't you walk into my parlor?"
It is the prettiest little parlor you ever did spy."

BADGE OF IMMUNIZATION—A flesh-colored band-aid marked the immunization of Cindy Gray, who can face child-bearing without the fear of birth defects caused by rubella. In the meantime the vaccine will prevent her from contracting the disease and spreading it to women of child bearing age.

WAR ON RUBELLA

The Kentucky Health Department has waged war on Rubella (German measles).

The Commonwealth stepped out as one of the first states in the nation to arm its future population against birth defects caused by rubella.

A group of young school children rolled up their sleeves in Clark County and faced the jet-injector guns of the Health Department crews, which vaccinated over 800 children in one day.

VACCINE AND LOLLIPOPS—Dr. C. Hernandez, director of the division of Epidemiology, presented lollipop awards to the first veterans of Kentucky's war on Rubella. Immunizations today will be instrumental in fighting a predicted Rubella epidemic in the early 1970's.

Man Killed Day Before Funeral For His Mother

Curtis Fitzpatrick, 55, of Louisa Rt. 5, died Monday at 5:50 p.m. in an Ashland hospital, six hours after he suffered internal injuries in a two-car collision near Louisa earlier in the day. His mother's funeral was scheduled Tuesday.

According to the state police the accident occurred on Ky. Rt. 3, nine miles south of Louisa, when his car collided with another driven by Donna Cline Stone, 23, of Inez. Police said Mr. Fitzpatrick was attempting a left turn into the highway.

His mother, Mrs. Catherine (Kate) Fitzpatrick, 86, of Clifford, was to be buried in Fitzpatrick cemetery following services at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Mount Olive Church at Clifford.

Mrs. Stone was hospitalized in a Louisa hospital with back injuries. Her condition was listed as good.

A State Department of Highways employe, Mr. Fitzpatrick was born March 14, 1914, at Clifford. His father was the late James Fitzpatrick.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Hazel Northern Fitzpatrick; two daughters, Mrs. Bob Johnson and Miss Brenda Fitzpatrick, both of Clifford; one son, Howard K. Fitzpatrick of Logan, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Alvis Maynard, of Clifford, and three grandchildren.

Pikeville College Prexy To Be Installed, Oct. 9 As Center Work Started

Pikeville College will inaugurate its 11th president Oct. 9, shortly after groundbreaking exercises for a three-million-dollar science center.

Dr. Robert S. Cope, formerly vice president of the college, became its president July 1, succeeding Dr. Thomas H. Johns. Cope will be formally installed by Norman A. Chrisman, Pikeville, chairman of the college board.

Rexford S. Blazer, Ashland, Ky., board chairman of Ashland Oil Company, will deliver the inaugural address. The college will confer an honorary doctor of science degree on Blazer.

Cope came to Pikeville in June 1968, from the College of Wooster (O.). He had been registrar and director of admissions eight years at Wooster which, like Pikeville, is a United Presbyterian College.

A former vice president of Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., Cope is a native of Wellsville, O. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from the College of Wooster and M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

The science center will include eight classrooms and 12 laboratories, providing space for all work in natural sciences and mathematics in its three stories and basement. The south end of the structure will include a 250-seat lecture hall.

Fourteen faculty offices and five small research laboratories also are included. A pedestrian bridge will connect the building with the rear entrance of the college administration building.
