

Grand Jury Indicts 6 After Dope Probe

Narcotics Use Alarming, Says Report by Jury

Indictments naming six defendants on the charge of "possessing narcotics for sale or use" were voted by the grand jury during last week's session, and the jury in its final report to Circuit Judge Hollie Conley expressed alarm at "the amount of narcotics being used by our younger citizens."

The grand jury heard evidence that also implicated several juveniles, but Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said their cases can be initiated only in juvenile court.

Also heard was testimony concerning a place called "The Pink House," on Spurlock Fork of Middle Creek, where marijuana and possibly other drugs were allegedly used.

Named in the indictments were Larry Music, Sammy Music, Bobby Cooley, Alan D. Ousley, David Scutchfield and Sammy Nelson. (Cooley, officials said, came here from California.)

Ousley and Sammy Music have been arrested and are at liberty under bond.

The grand jury report mentioned Speed, LSD, Yellow Jackets and other narcotics as being used. "We urge the citizens of this county to give their immediate attention... we urge that all law-enforcement officers investigate with vigor the use or sale of narcotics," the jury asked.

The drug probe here was led by the Sheriff's office.

The grand jury recommended that the garbage dump at the top of Cow Creek mountain be closed because it has become a health hazard. It also suggested marking of the parking area at the rear of the (See Story No. 1, Page 10)

Martin Council Protests Plans Made by Board

Mayor E. P. Grigsby, of Martin, announced this week that the City Council there voted unanimously, March 7, directing him to protest plans of the Floyd County Board of Education to renovate the present Martin high school building and to construct a six-room addition for grade school purposes.

Notifying Superintendent Clark and the board of education of the action, Mayor Grigsby said the council was of the opinion that the board should, instead, build a new 18-room grade school and withhold renovation plans for the high school structure until a later date when such financial outlay would be feasible. Council held that renovation of the high school is financially impractical and that such work, including the proposed addition, for grade school purposes "was definitely short range rather than long range planning."

Mr. Grigsby added: "Since a legal issue remains as to whether the board must maintain a 12-year school program at Martin, the board would be well advised to consider the renovation of the present high school building to be used as facilities for four years of that program."

He said a six-room addition would still leave school children there in scattered, inadequate facilities.

Conley Decision Dissolves Order In School Case

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley last Friday dissolved the restraining order which stayed enforcement of a McDowell high school rule against fighting and prevented Lloyd Stumbo, school principal, from depriving a student, John Paul Luxmore, from certain privileges as a penalty for violation of the rule.

The decision followed hearing of testimony, a week earlier. Judge Conley noted: John Paul Luxmore and Ronnie Hamilton, seniors at the school, engaged in a fight in contravention to rules set out in a student handbook which had been adopted at McDowell, several years ago. The handbook was in printed form, made available to the students, and student witnesses introduced at the hearing demonstrated a thorough understanding of its contents.

Both youths, under provisions of the handbook, received an automatic "F" which denied them privileges of riding the school bus to ball games, attending the senior prom and making the senior trip.

"It is necessary," Judge Conley wrote, "that the schools maintain discipline among... students, and the court finds this rule to be fair and reasonable. It was enforced in a fair and reasonable manner, and this court finds nothing arbitrary or malicious on the part of any of the school officials in enforcing this rule."

The case of the Casey Board of Education vs. Luster was cited. In the Casey case it was held that public schools are authorized to make and enforce reasonable regulations for the governing of schools, and such rules and regulations will not be disturbed unless it appears that the school officials have acted arbitrarily or maliciously.

In Concert Season Finale Here

Igor Kipnis, "the Victor Borge of the Harpsichord," will appear in the new auditorium of Prestonsburg Community College at 8 p.m., next Tuesday, in the final performance of the season concert series sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Concert Series. Son of the famous Metropolitan basso, Alexander Kipnis, the artist is internationally known and has appeared with the Boston Symphony, the Symphony of the Air, the Brooklyn Philharmonic and other famous orchestras. For his recording of French harpsichord music on Epic, Mr. Kipnis received nominations for "Best Classical Performance" and "Most Promising New Classical Recording Artist" (1964) from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Allen-to-Hazard Route Asked But Outlook Dim

Governor Nunn announced last week that he will seek funds from the Appalachian Regional Commission to build five new roads in Kentucky, one of which is a new two-lane KY 80 from Hazard to Allen, this county, but there is little hope any immediate help will be given.

A day after the governor had announced his intention to request the funds, a commission spokesman said the prospects for any dirt to be flying soon are bleak. He indicated Governor Nunn's request is in response to ARC's invitation to the several states to submit a "shopping list" which the commission will study.

The Allen-Hazard route (listed as Corridor 3) would link US 23 and the Daniel Boone and Mountain Parkways and would cost an estimated $68 million. The Daniel Boone Parkway and US 23 have already been authorized by ARC.

Another route asked by Nunn is Corridor 4, from Grayson to Salyersville, connecting at the Magoffin county-seat with the Mountain Parkway, and costing an estimated $50 million.

Other projects requested: Corridor 1, from Burkesville, extending northwest and intersecting with the Bowling Green-Somerset Parkway and on to the Green-LaRue county line; estimated cost, $47 million.

Corridor 2, from Pineville north to the Fleming-Mason county line, and south to Maysville, passing through Barbourville, Manchester, Booneville, Beattyville, Frenchburg and Flemingsburg to intersect with the Daniel Boone and Mountain Parkways and I-64; estimated cost, $160 million.

Corridor 5, from Hyden to Harlan, connecting the Daniel Boone Parkway with US 119 which is now being upgraded; estimated cost, $31 million.

Spindletop Research, Lexington, has made a study of the proposed routes, and it has indicated that in travel time their construction would reduce travel costs to highway users by $34 million a year.

The ARC's highway programs are scheduled to run through June of 1973, and to finance them Congress has authorized a

Dewey Lake Rise Is Begun Monday

Dean Murray, Dewey reservoir manager, U. S. Corps of Engineers, said Tuesday that the level of Dewey Lake began rising Monday afternoon toward the summer pool stage.

The lake had been dropped an additional three feet from the seasonal five-foot drop to make possible improvements at Terry's boat dock, near the dam. This work included widening of the loading ramp at the dock and dredging of the harbor. Although the work has not been completed, Mr. Murray said most of it may be done before the lake rises above the point which would prevent further operations.

Unless there is excessive rainfall, raising of the impoundment to the summer pool will require at least 10 days, Murray said.

WE'LL NOT RISK IT AGAIN

If readers are depending on me to inform them the day and hour Daylight Saving Time will arrive this month, I advise one and all to look elsewhere. I boldly set down such information, a season or so back, and I still flinch when I think on the enormity of my miscue. I am not going back into the files to be exact, but, as I recall, I didn't miss the actual date by more than a week. And did this little item prove that The Times gets around?

There was the case of my former associate, "Buck" Scaif, of Stanville, who read that particular edition of The Times, and promptly notified his son Julian that, since DST would go into effect on the morrow, he, Julian, would do well to take due notice thereof and get himself off on his proposed trip, an hour earlier than planned. Julian, in turn, relayed the information to Radio Station WPKE at Pikeville, and one of the staff there scented a "scoop," since he hadn't heard of the time change. But before leaping to the mike with this flash, the radio announcer called the Associated Press for confirmation. It was news to the AP man, and he developed a sudden interest. AP, in turn, decided to do some checking, too, and they called Thelma Stovall in Frankfort.

This was late at night. Mrs. Stovall wasn't certain, either, so she left home at that advanced hour, drove to the Capitol and probed till she got to the bottom of the matter, then notified AP of the correct date.

That, of course, set the wheels grinding in reverse—back to AP, then to WPKE, then to WPKE, then to Mr. Scaif at Stanville, and eventually to me.

Meanwhile, everybody else was assuring me that I had nitwitted the whole county into the fanciest infatuation this way in some time.

Layne Arrested Following Crash Friday Morning

Jimmy G. Layne, of Spurlock fork of Middle Creek, was arrested Saturday by State Trooper Don Thornberry, on a warrant charging him with negligent homicide in the auto wreck deaths on the preceding day, near here, of Wayne Cooper, 18, and his bride of a few weeks, Tammy Elrod Cooper, 19.

The warrant for Layne's arrest was issued after a witness told authorities Layne drove his truck from the Spurlock-Martin road onto the Mountain Parkway, directly in front of the Cooper auto. He was placed under $1000 bond.

Layne denied responsibility for the wreck.

Young Cooper, a student at Prestonsburg Community College, apparently swerved to avoid striking Layne's truck and his auto skidded across the highway into the approaching car of Mrs. Johnny Perry, officers were told.

The tragedy occurred at 7:45 a.m. Friday, at the intersection of the Spurlock road with the Parkway. The Coopers were driving toward Prestonsburg, where he attended college and Mrs. Cooper was employed in the bookkeeping department of the First National Bank.

Mrs. Cooper died almost instantly. Her husband died at the Prestonsburg General Hospital, about an hour after the collision.

Mrs. Perry was taken to a Pikeville hospital, suffering from broken ribs and a severe leg injury. Her condition was described Tuesday as favorable.

Mr. Cooper was a son of B. F. and Audrey Conley Cooper, of Salyersville. His parents and one sister, Miss Donna Lynn Cooper, survive. His wife was a daughter of Bob and Naomi Howard Elrod, of Burning Fork, Magoffin county. In addition to her parents, survivors include three sisters, Mrs. Rita Ruth Reed, Elsie, Ky., Misses Jolynn Kay and Glene Ray Elrod, of Burning Fork.

Bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were taken to Salyersville for burial.

Fired for Nunn Remark, Martin Restored to Job

William J. (Jennings) Martin, of Garrett, was restored last week by the state Personnel Board to the state job from which he was fired last August because he remarked to a taxpayer, "That's Nunn for you," or "That's Nunn's business."

Words to that effect were reportedly spoken by Martin when he went to the Wise Restaurant here to check on a sales tax return. They were reported to Revenue Commissioner James E. Luckett, who discharged the 14-year veteran employee.

The Personnel Board caught up on its heavy backlog of appeals from dismissals, and the Floyd man's case was heard March 10, with Douglas D. Mosley, a Republican, acting as hearing examiner. The board filed this recommendation:

"To find against the appellant simply because he said something to the effect, 'That's Nunn for you,' would be to infringe upon his rights as an individual to express his opinion. . .

Check To Help Park Expansion

Joe Gray, deputy administrator of the Kentucky Program Development Office, presents Dr. George P. Archer, mayor of Prestonsburg, a check from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for $1600. The grant reimburses Prestonsburg for 50 per cent of the cost of 6.3 acres of land. This land adjoined 18 acres the city already owned and together they constitute the 24-acre Archer Park. From left are: John VanderWier, administrative assistant, Kentucky Program Development Office; Mr. Gray, Dr. Archer and Mrs. Judith Archer, city clerk of Prestonsburg.

RICHMOND'S BEAR MARKET SALE

More than a hundred years ago, our store owner kept a bear which was chained to a tree next to the store. It was his custom in those days to invite home for lunch all customers who happened to be in the store at the noon hour. The invitation was usually accepted and store and bear were left unattended. On one such occasion, he and his friends returned to the store to find the bear had broken his chain and was inside the building. They found him inside the overturned sugar barrel, enjoying the sweet. As a result of this incident, he staged the first sale in Prestonsburg... a sale of the sugar from the barrel... at bargain prices.

And now, a century later, we go back to this bit of our history to give you barrels and barrels of bargains in our pre-summer sale.

More Than Awareness Needed To Make Cleanup a Success

THE TIMES has been asked to do its bit toward making businessmen and other residents aware of the importance of Cleanup Month in which we right now find ourselves in the midst.

It is not too much to ask of us, but we have an idea that if our people aren't aware of the need for a cleanup now, they are determined not to face up to reality. Magazines, newspapers, radio, television, every conceivable communications media, have told the dismaying, if not downright horrifying, story of an environment that is deteriorating toward the extinction of living things, including man, as a result of pollution.

Pollution is not something merely to read about. It is here—in the air, the water, the soil. It is wherever people are—at individual backdoors.

Few, if any, of us will make a big noise in the battle. But if we are not content to join the fight—to clean up our own premises as a matter of individual pride and responsibility to the corporate welfare, without thought of making a big splash personally, the battle is lost, to start with.

Here in Prestonsburg, on our street and yours, we can make one spot or two or a hundred cleaner and more beautiful and more livable. And that's what it's all about.

No, THE TIMES is not likely to make everybody aware of the cleanup campaign and the need for it. We are already aware. Our trouble is, we react to this awareness just as the individual who is aware that it's Sunday and that Sunday is a day for worship and then refuses to go to church.

We would remind those who have read this far that many groups and individuals here have worked hard and continue to work hard for a cleaner, more attractive community, and that the cause they represent deserves our fullest support. April is half gone and the job is far from done.

WHERE WAS 'SHAW'S PARADISE'?

Much of Kentucky's history remains outside textbooks and historical novels and when a new page is found, however brief or tattered, it is like finding a crocus in spring, its purple or gold petals pushing through a crust of snow.

Such a flower was discovered recently in the Lewis County Herald, published at Vanceburg. Actually, it was a rediscovery. Dr. William Talley of McGill University, Montreal, who writes the column, "Ancestor Hunting," for the Lewis county newspaper, found the unusual item in the Portsmouth (Ohio) Tribune, dated Aug. 10, 1887. The Tribune had copied it from the old Vanceburg Courier.

Under the headline, "Shaw's Paradise," the story concerned a rich, old bachelor named Shaw who lived alone on a 500-acre Lewis county farm. The paragraph explained little about the recluse and yet it told well, almost a page for every word.

"He dresses like a monk of the 13th century," the story said, "and devotes his whole time and fortune to flowers and tropical fruits. His farm is surrounded by a high fence, without gates or bars. His house is covered with rare vines; he has fig trees 20 years old, and flowers by the acre. He never derives a cent from his outlay of money and labours, but delights in 'multiplying curious growths and combining nature and art in wonderful forms.' He calls his large colony of bees his children, and the birds that feed from his table his little angels. The birds follow him though the walks and take the berries from his hand."

Dr. Talley asks in his column: "Where was Shaw's paradise and who was he?"

The Shaw paradise in Lewis county makes a marvelous story, and creates all sorts of conjectures. Did he leave any writings? Are there any records of his plants, growth formulas, experiments? And was his isolation in Lewis county his way of meditating and finding peace of mind, complete harmony among his "children" and friends... was he a Thoreau, and was the 500-acre retreat a Walden Pond?

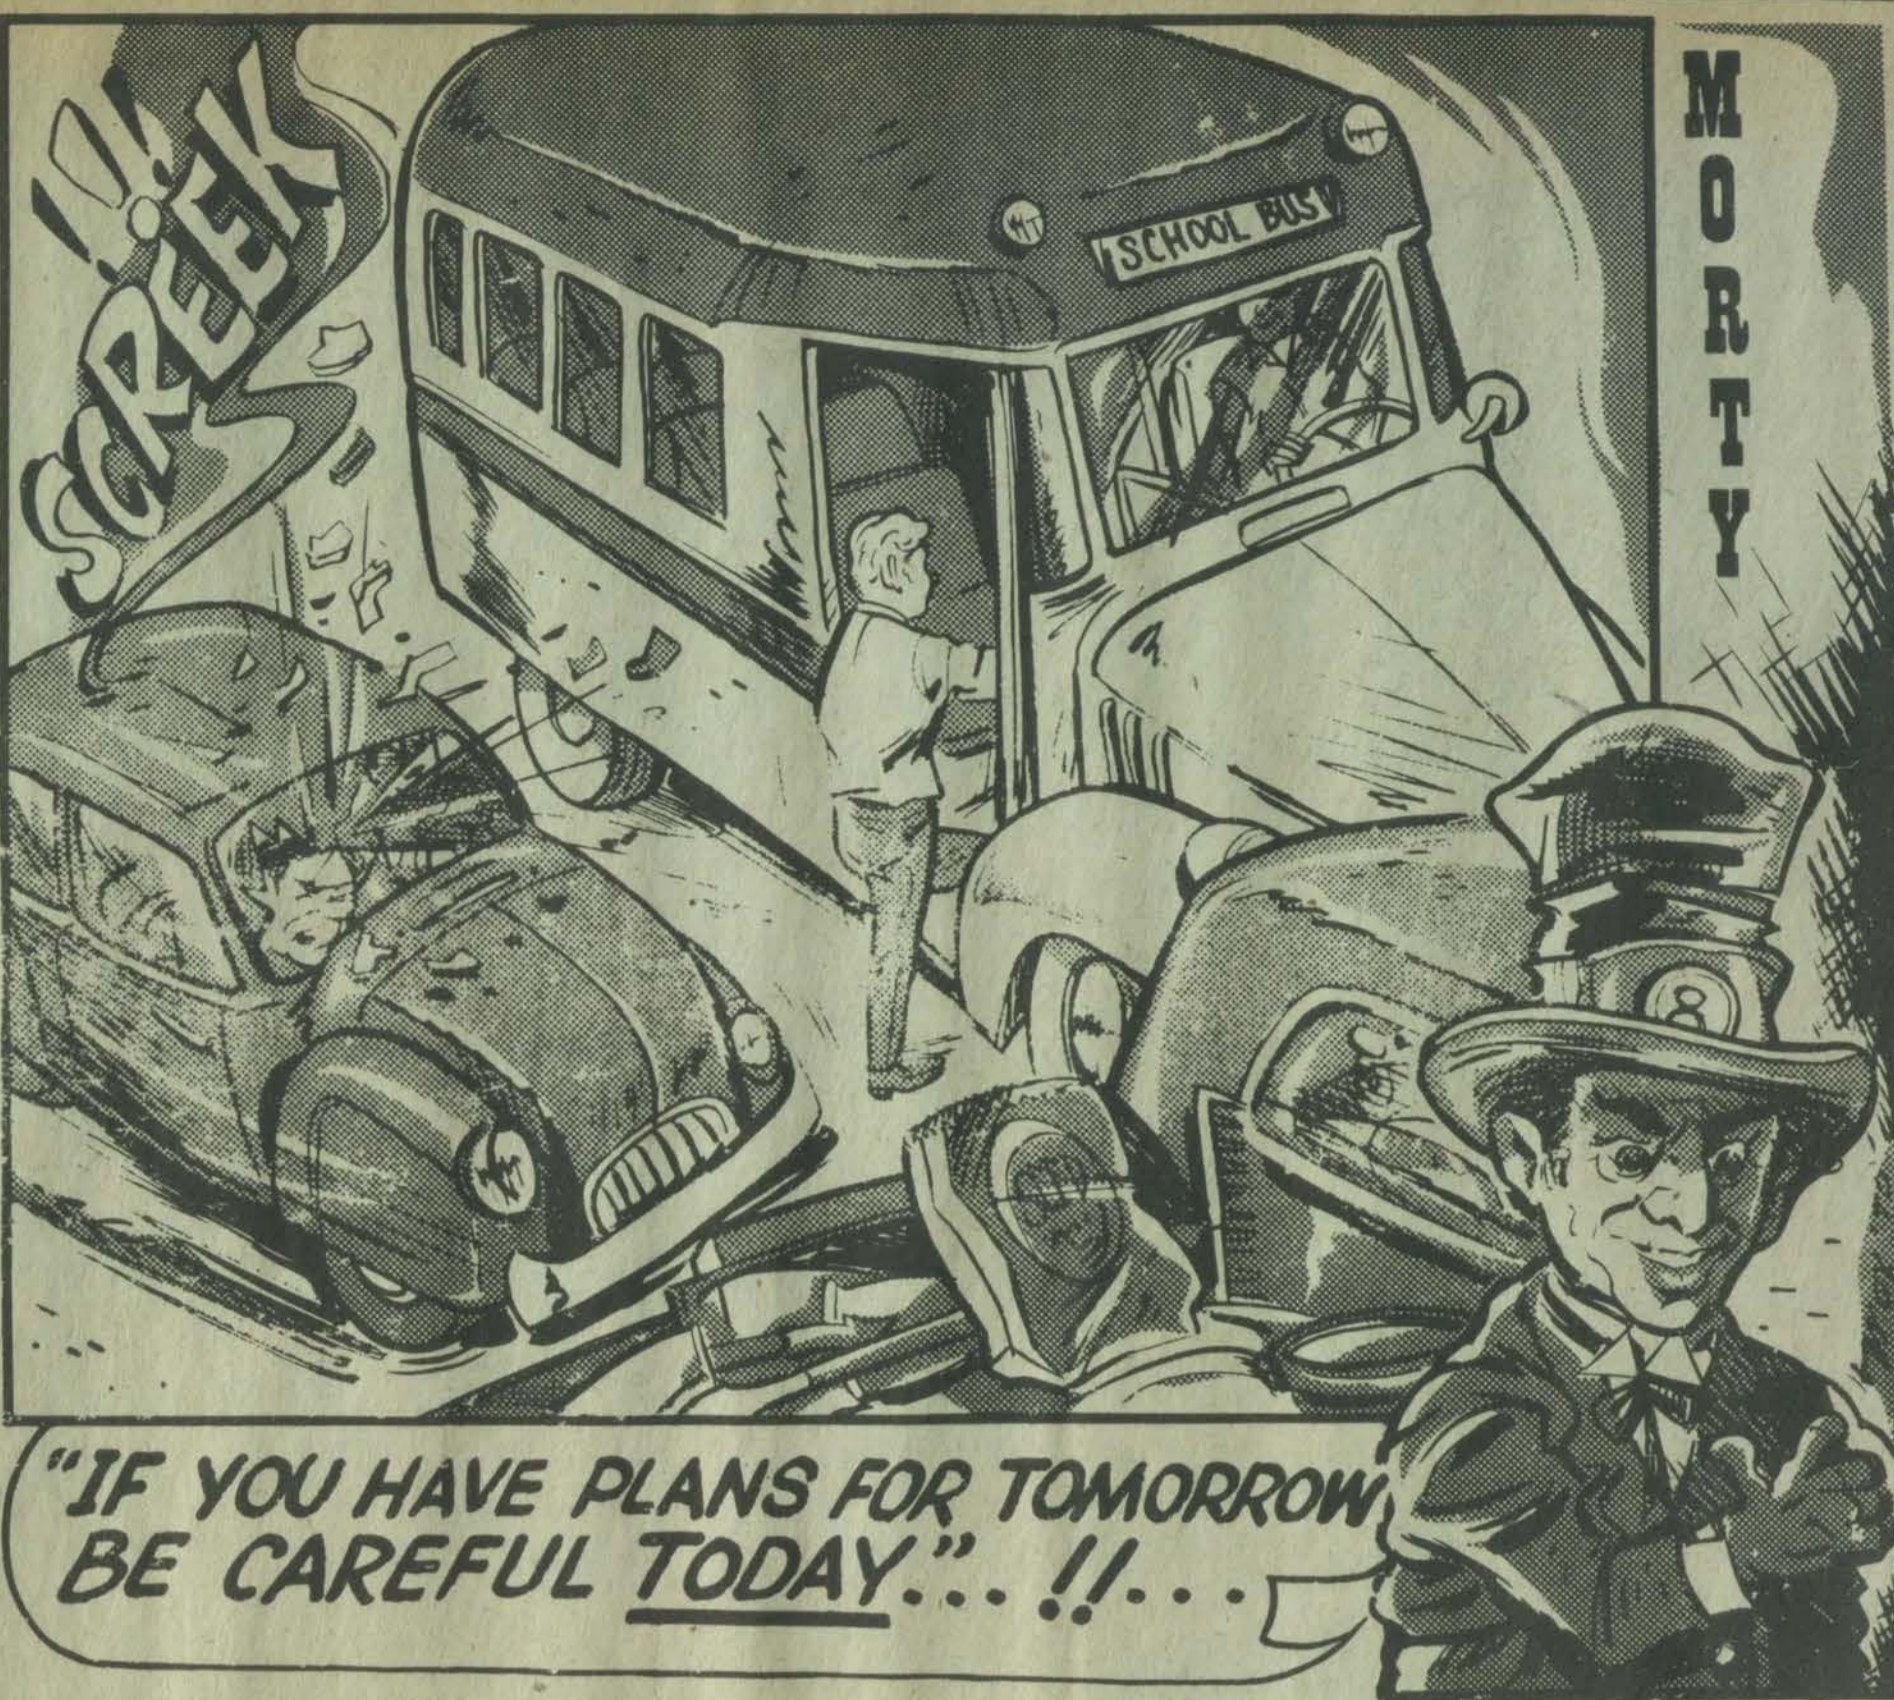

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

"THE GENERATION GAP"

Writers now talk about the "generation gap" as if it were something brand-new, maybe a product of our own hectic days, what with Vietnam War, moon voyages, and such. So far as I can tell from a long life and lots of reading, there has always been a generation gap. And why not? If parents are old enough to be parents, they are bound to have had younger days that differ from those of their children. And it would be a very rare parent who would or could look upon the world in the same way as do his children. Just what the writers are writing about sometimes puzzles me. Do they think we oldsters should have remained teen-agers or barely old enough to vote, so far as our thinking is concerned?

Seriously, though, there are some very good reasons why we are now living in an age that poses this problem far more than it ever was in any other age that we know of. The whole framework of our lives has undergone changes, so that what was common and quite the thing in our lives as young people are seemingly as far away from now as would have been the lives of the patriarchs. When you come to think of it, the main purpose of this column, in its going-on-35 years, has been an effort to bridge some gaps between Fidelity at the turn of the century and Bowling Green or your town, nearly three quarters of a century later.

Think how many times we oldsters have had to change in our sixty or seventy or eighty years! Talk about generation gaps! Why, I have personally had to adjust to conditions every few years, so many times that my own early years often seem as strange to me as they must seem to my children and grandchildren. Writers of sensational articles about youth in revolt probably rarely think about how many times Pap or Grandpap has had to adjust to things that he had never dreamed of in his earlier days. It is almost more than any mind can work out when you stop to think of it: the horse or mule was a sort of standard of things in my youth. Places not accessible by walking had to be reached by using horseflesh or muleflesh. That had widened our world, it is true, but how small a world our new one was as measured by our present-day standards. Recently my wife and I, in order to see the early fall colors, drove a little over a hundred miles one Sunday, never getting very far from home base. As late as 1927 I had to take a boat to reach one of the places we visited, and it took half a day for a steamboat going down stream to get me there. No boats were accessible after my evening speech; hence I had to wait until the next morning to get started back home. A daring young fellow with a T-model Ford said he would get me back home; it took us all morning to make the twenty-five miles; we had to ferry a river and creep over roads that would have been unsure walking for a mule. In my many years of studying birds and people in the Mammoth Cave area I have lived through several ages of roads and distances. It used to be a real adventure to get over the twenty-five miles from my front door to the edge of what is now the park. In fact, I used to go on the train up to Rocky Hill, transfer to a buggy, go to Brownsville, and have to wait until the next day to make proper connections to get back to Bowling Green by or before noon.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

All of us have lamented the bad image of our environment brought about by the pollution of litter and garbage of all kinds, but few of us have done anything to change it. I shall tell how we can beautify our environment this very spring and give it a better image.

First, there should be a community project in each locality to clean up the litter, and then there should be a vigorous campaign to beautify the environment—the homes, the lawns, the gardens. Our motto should be: "We can change things, for the better!"

One of the finest and quickest ways to improve and beautify the environment is for each family to have a flower garden, or plant beautiful flowers and shrubs on lawns, or along roads, or in all waste places and then to care well for them. Any small plot can be converted into a beautiful flower garden; the backyard can be used, or along the sidewalk, or along the street. We should not let unused places grow up in weeds or become littered with garbage; instead, we can and we should plant flowers. There are many species of old-fashioned garden flowers that are easily grown about the home or in a garden. I would recommend zinnias, marigolds, nasturtiums, bachelor's buttons, poppies, dahlias, cannas and petunias. Most of these are easily grown and the seeds for them may be obtained at most stores. Dahlia and canna bulbs can also be obtained at the seed stores. The soil should be carefully prepared and enriched with good humus or a little fertilizer. The flowers should be planted in rows, if possible, so that the weeds can be kept out.

Many wild flowers from the woods can also be transplanted about the home or in the wildflower garden, provided the habitat is suitable. Among the wild flowers that are easy to grow are gold poppies, Dutchman's breeches, squirrel corn, red catchfly, Virginia bluebells, jack-in-the-pulpit, wild columbine, Confederate violet and some others.

Flowering shrubs: how to transplant them:

1. The flame azaleas, or orange-flowered azaleas. These are called the most beautiful flowering shrubs of Appalachia; they can be transplanted in early spring and require a well-drained soil, strongly acid, well exposed to the sun. The roots must not be injured in transplanting, and the same side should be turned toward the sun. The plants should be fed with azalea food and watered frequently until they get a start. These azaleas often bloom in yellow, fiery red, deep orange, reddish-orange and sometimes two colors will appear in the same corolla.

2. Pink azalea, also called pinkster flower—this azalea can also be transplanted if good care is used. Some of the soil in which it grows should be placed about the roots; it requires a dry, strongly acid soil, well exposed to the sun. It grows on spurs and ridges with sterile soil and on south-facing slopes.

3. The great laurel, or rhododendron maximum, the state flower of West Virginia many say this rhododendron is difficult to transplant, but we have had some success in moving it and getting it started. The roots must not be cut or broken in any way and some of the decayed leaf mold should be placed about the roots. A shady spot should be chosen to transplant it; a layer of rotted leaf mold should be kept around the shrub, and it should be watered frequently. Some round rocks from a brook or a creek should be placed about it or over the roots; it seems to draw some sort of nourishment or minerals from the rocks among which it grows; the soil must be strongly acid. Never put any lime about this shrub and never set it out in clay soil. It requires a sterile, mostly sandy soil enriched by decay of oak-leaf mold or pine needles. You may not get any blooms the first year, but, sooner or later, you will be rewarded by large clusters of showy blossoms of a pale rose-color or pinkish-white, with a splash of yellow in the throat. The long, leathery evergreen leaves often drop in winter, but they keep their fresh, green look the year around.

4. The fringe tree. You may have some trouble in finding the seedlings to transplant but your efforts will be rewarded and if you can get a fringe-tree to growing on your lawn you will soon come to regard it as a most priceless possession. This tree thrives best in moist soils, along stream-banks or in thickets, sometimes on steep bluffs among cliffs. IT IS EASY TO TRANSPLANT IN AN OPEN, SUNNY PLACE, IN GOOD SOIL THAT IS NOT TOO DRY. When the tree bursts into full bloom, it sends out a sweet perfume that fills the air; the blooms shimmer in the sun and look like a shower of late snowflakes of March. The tree also looks as if it was trimmed in finely cut lace.

5. The American holly. This tree is beautiful on the lawn, the year around, with its evergreen leaves and clusters of red berries. The holly mostly grows in low bottoms along streams and is sometimes found in rich coves. It is hard to transplant, and some of the soil must be left on the roots, and these must not be cut or broken, or the tree will die. The holly should be set in moist, sandy soil and it should be kept watered until it gets a start to grow. Only the female or pistillate trees bear the red berries.

FRANKFORT, KY.—The bait or lure by which white bass are caught during the spawning runs that'll occur in the lake headwaters in a few weeks is always a moot issue.

Finger-long doughbelly minnows, found mostly in small farm ponds, are the choice of many fishermen who argue vehemently that to use anything else is a waste of good time.

They'll admit that other lures, other minnow species and artificial devices, will catch white bass when they are at the spawning grounds, but they say the doughbelly, fished properly and in the right places, will bring in the greatest number.

On the other hand, there'll be those who claim that the biggest and most fish are to be harvested by the shiny spinning lure (and each fisherman has his favorite).

Both groups will have excellent luck using their favorite lures and they'll have a chance to use them in the next few weeks. The doughbelly is fairly hard to come by. Not many bait dealers handle them, but they can be found. Most are obtained by the fisherman himself from a small farm pond which previously has been stocked.

When you have the bait there's a right way to use it.

The minnow should be hooked just in front of the dorsal fin when the rig consists of a floater and sinker and when fished in eddies or deep pools of the feeder stream where the whites are running. The floater holds the minnow slightly off the bottom allowing a free-wheeling, swimming action.

When fished from a boat in deeper water in the lake, ahead of the feeder stream, the minnow should be hooked in the same manner.

By constantly moving the minnow with short, gentle pulls on the line or by slow retrieves, the minnow still simulates a captive appearance since its swimming action is impaired only slightly but still enough to indicate it may have been injured.

That'll bring in fish in good numbers. Another favorite way of hooking the minnow is through the nose. When so hooked it is usually fished without a floater and is cast into the swift waters and retrieved slowly. In this type fishing the minnow skirts just above the bottom of the stream and that's where the white bass are congregated.

Before the whites reach the streams, minnows similarly hooked may be cast into the banks from a boat in the deeper water and retrieved in the same manner. Those are the two most popular ways of fishing the minnow for the white bass.

But there are hundreds of fishermen who discount the value of the minnow and stick strictly to artificial lures.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our mother, Ammie Boggs Cox, who departed this life April 8, 1969:

Your gentle face and patient smile
With sadness we recall,
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
The voice is mute and stilled the heart,
That loved us well and true,
Oh, bitter was the trial part
From one so good as you.
You are not forgotten, loved one,
Nor will you ever be,
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore,
As time goes by, we miss you more;
Your loving smile, your gentle face,
No one can fill your vacant place.

Restoration of Old Land Grants And Survey Plats Being Resumed

FRANKFORT, KY.—Assistant Secretary of State Mary R. Galvez says a campaign to save and restore many old land grant and survey plats in the State Land Office is under way again.

The project was started some months ago by Secretary of State Elmer Begley who had to interrupt it because of illness.

The office has some 454 books of Kentucky land grants dating back to the 1770s and survey plats showing locations of the grants.

Many of the grants are for Kentucky land deeded by Virginia before Kentucky became a state. They bear such famous names as Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, Daniel Boone, and George Washington. All land granted in Kentucky is recorded in the records.

According to Mrs. Galvez, the books are priceless and doubly valuable—as history and as a record of who originally owned the land.

"We receive several requests each day from writers, historians, and people who just want to know who originally owned certain lands," Mrs. Galvez says. "In boundary disputes, attorneys sometimes trace deeds all the way back to the original land grant contained in these books."

It is such use and time which threatens the old books most. They are so old and in such bad condition, they are literally crumbling to pieces.

The old books will be rebound, the crumbling pages laminated in plastic, the books stored and retired from use.

Before that is done, reprint copies must be made by a process which makes copies clearer than the original.

"With reprint copies, we could make the records readily available to researchers and students which we cannot do now because of the danger to the originals," Mrs. Galvez says. "These old books should never be touched."

The Kentucky Historical Society has already begun copying the records and making reprints, but more funds are needed.

Rebinding the old books alone will cost an estimated $152,000 and Mrs. Galvez is seeking donations.

First donations came from Woodford County junior high school students who pledged $100, and from an unknown visitor who saw the crumbling books and left a donation for their restoration.

Mrs. Galvez now is seeking aid from schools, foundations, bar associations, and historical groups, and individuals interested in saving a valuable record of Kentucky history.

"These books can't be replaced," she says. "They are deteriorating and if something isn't done soon, Kentucky's historical documents will be lost forever."

Frasure Named Ward's District Agent of Year

CHICAGO, April 6—Ron Frasure, owner of Montgomery Ward catalog sales agency in Prestonsburg, has been named the Chicago district's "Agent of the Year" for 1969, it was announced today by J. B. Smith, district general manager.

Frasure, who opened his Ward catalog outlet in March, 1967, earned the honor for his excellent year-long performance in sales and other business operating factors. He was in competition with more than 140 other agencies in the district's seven-state area.

The area covered by the Chicago district includes all or parts of Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman, of East Point, announce the engagement of their daughter, Judy Ann, to the Rev. Larry F. Mann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Mann, of Prestonsburg.

Miss Freeman is a 1968 graduate of Prestonsburg high school, and is now attending Prestonsburg Community College. Rev. Mann is pastor of the Horn's Chapel and Auxier United Methodist Churches. He is a 1967 graduate of Prestonsburg high school, and has attended Pikeville college.

An open house wedding is planned for June 8, at 7:00 p.m., at the Community Methodist church in Prestonsburg. The Rev. Alton Brown will officiate.

Job Corps enrollments at the 52 centers currently operating totaled 20,363 as of March 4, 1970.

Honored at UK

Miss Kathy Sue Allen, of Lexington, was one of 21 new members tapped for Mortar Board at the recent Awards Night at the University of Kentucky. Eligibility for Mortar Board, a national honorary for senior women, is based on scholarship, leadership and service to the University.

A Vocational Home Economics major at U. K., Miss Allen is on the Dean's List. She is a recent initiate of Phi Upsilon Omicron, national Home Economics honorary fraternity. An active member of the American Home Economics Association Chapter at U. K., she has been selected as a delegate to the state convention in Louisville in April and also to the national convention in Cleveland in June. She presently serves as secretary of the U. K. Chapter of Gamma Beta Phi, national scholarship-service honorary, and is employed part-time at the U. K. computing center.

Miss Allen is the daughter of Mrs. Lois M. Allen, of Lexington, and Thomas E. Allen, of Dayton, Ohio. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Allen, of Martin.

PLAN WORKSHOP

A workshop on reseating chairs is scheduled to begin May 12, at 7 p.m., at the Arts and Craft building at Archer Park. Mrs. George Chidister will be instructor for the workshop which will be sponsored by the Woman's club. All who are interested are invited to attend.

INFANT IS VICTIM

Melissa Ashworth, infant daughter of Billy Lee and Betty Williams Ashworth, of Cleveland, O., died March 28 at Methodist hospital, Pikeville. Graveside services were held March 30 at the family cemetery at Beaver where burial was made under direction of Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

"Can Heironymus Merkin ever forget Mercy Humppe and find true happiness?"

The title asks a question, and we, the management, in all fairness, answer a few questions before you decide to see this film.

YES. This is a bold, adult film. The scenes are uncensored. They may shock you. Embarrass you.

courthouse where cars are often blocked from leaving by other vehicles parked later. The report was signed by Delbert Davis, foreman.

It was said this week that a fugitive warrant has been issued for the arrest of James Allen, of Printer, who was named in a narcotics indictment here, a few months ago.

Other indictments voted by the grand jury follow:

Floyd Martin, Altoona, Ind., Maurice Collins, Willard, O., James D. Wayne, Columbus, O., Curt Mullins, McDowell, Bennie Lewis, Stanville, Henry McCoy, Norman R. Bryant, Paul Spears, Sandusky, O., Johnny B. Holland, Cambridge, Ind., and James F. Akers, Harold—all accused of child desertion; Haskell Tackett, reckless use of a deadly weapon; Marvin Little and Sherrill Newsome, both for possession of alcohol for the purpose of sale; Delmer Thompson, Danny R. Mitchell and Kenneth R. Isaac, theft of explosives from Leonard Hall, and knowingly receiving property stolen from Leonard Hall; Floyd Compton, knowingly receiving stolen property, copper wire taken from South Central Bell Telephone Co.

Lloyd Everett Mullins, drunk driving, reckless driving and assault and battery with an auto on the person of Mrs. George Hamilton; Ronald Gearheart and Pink Akers, Jr., theft of auto owned by Roger Dale Martin; Clyde Barnett, knowingly receiving property, more than $200 cash from Fountain Corner Drug Store here; David Scutchfield and Otis Wallen, theft of copper wire from South Central Bell; Muriel Baker, seduction; Curtis Elkins, carrying a concealed deadly weapon; Charlie Keathley, two counts of knowingly receiving stolen property, autos.

Martin is now restored to his job as senior field representative. The Personnel Board has held that he is not to lose pay for the time lost, but his attorney, Clifford B. Latta, said here that the back-pay issue awaits a court decision.

Another case won before the Personnel Board was decided too late. The discharged employee, F. L. West, who was McLean county road foreman, has since died. He was fired because he refused to accept transfer to Floyd county. His family will receive the back-pay due him.

Mines Chief Makes Tour For Coal Study in Area

Earl T. Hayes, acting director of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, plans to be in Eastern Kentucky coal mining counties this week to get a first-hand look at a situation which some coal men have described as disastrous to the industry.

Robert Holcomb, former Prestonsburg man who is president of the Pike County Independent Coal Operators' Association, said, only a few days after the mines bureau chief decided to come to Kentucky, that every coal mine in his county, small or large, is subject to being closed within the next 90 days.

Holcomb said this is a possibility because compliance with the federal Mine Safety Act, which became effective March 31, is impossible for any mine, small or great.

At the same time, however, a record number of coal mines—103, in all—were granted licenses during March in Pike county. Of these, 86 were new operations, 17 were reactivated after a period of idleness.

During the first workday this month, three Pike county mines were partially inspected and fines were levied by the inspectors on the spot. Holcomb said the fines totaled about $1,500.

Holcomb claims that lack of knowledge is due to the fact that the federal Bureau of Mines has not provided mine operators with instructions and does not have copies available.

"This procedure is leading to chaos within the industry because operators are trying in vain to gain the necessary information and knowledge to continue operating and to avoid fines and possible jail sentences that are meted out on the spot by federal mine inspectors," he said.

"It seems we have lost one of our basic freedoms—right of trial by jury."

Mines Chief Hayes acknowledged that complaints from operators about the law are "a real concern" to the bureau, but he pointed out that Congress had made it very plain that it wanted the law enforced and soon.

Hayes, who succeeded John F. O'Leary after he was dismissed from the directorship on March 1, said frankly that the law "is going to be tough on the operators. . . It's going to be difficult for some of them to comply."

Some 7,500 copies of the regulations have been ordered for distribution in the field, a bureau spokesman reported. The lack of this material was another of Holcomb's complaints.

Meanwhile, the bureau's inspectors will continue to enforce the new law as they have since the day it took effect, Hayes said.

"I bitterly resent any inference in the press that we won't enforce the law," Hayes continued. "We have no choice. We will enforce the law."

Although comparative statistics for previous years were not immediately available a compilation of bureau figures for the first four days of inspection under the new law showed what appeared to be a dramatically high number of violations.

In 78 mines inspected between March 30 and April 3, federal inspectors issued 576 notices of violation, each carrying a penalty of $25, and three outright withdrawal orders, each of which provides a $500 penalty, plus closure of the mine.

The withdrawal orders are issued when an "imminent" danger to life is found in a mine. A notice of violation can be for a relatively minor safety irregularity or, for example, the lack of drinking water or toilets in a mine.

The law gives inspectors power to determine on the spot the type of fine being assessed. But Hayes challenged an assertion Holcomb made last week to the effect that the operator has lost his right to challenge the decision.

"The fine is like the collateral you'd put up in a traffic case," Hayes said. "If you want to forfeit the collateral, all right. But if you want to appeal it, you can do so to the compliance panel and even carry it on to the federal courts."

Damages Voted In Car Deaths Total $245,923

Floyd circuit court juries have returned unanimous verdicts awarding a total of $245,923.50 damages and expenses in two highway tragedies in which four persons were killed.

In one of the damage actions John Wilburn and Larry Howard were named as plaintiffs by Peggy Gail Wright, individually and as administratrix of the estate of her sister, Brenda Crum, Gary Wright, administrator of the estate of his mother, Maggie Wright, and Coleen Griffith, administratrix of the estate of her sister, Teresa Wright.

The jury awards in the case were: To Peggy Gail Wright, who survived the wreck in which her mother and two sisters were killed, $2500 damages and $268.50 hospital expense, and as administratrix, $25,000 compensatory damages and $25,000 punitive damages; to Gary Wright, $20,000 compensatory and $10,000 punitive; to Coleen Griffith, $50,000 compensatory damages.

In the second suit Eliza McFall, administratrix of the estate of Nancy McFall Pippin, won from the Adams Construction Co. $112,000 judgment and $1,055 funeral expense. Mrs. Pippin, 37, a resident of Letcher county, was killed last year near Martin in a collision with an Adams cement truck.

Mrs. Lula Bolding, 84, Garrett Resident, Dies At McDowell, Sunday

Mrs. Lula Bolding, 84, of Garrett, died Sunday at McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital, after a long illness.

Born September 7, 1885, she was a daughter of the late Jim and Victoria Franklin Hunt. Mrs. Bolding had been a member of the Free Will Baptist church for the past 30 years.

Survivors include her husband, Mance Bolding; five sons, Clyde and Claude Bolding, both of Garrett, Emory Bolding, of Andrews, Ind., Luther and James Arthur Bolding, both of Warren, Ind.; two daughters, Mrs. Audrey Whitt and Mrs. Angie Mayo, both of Huntington, Ind.; a brother, Albert Hunt, of Chapman, Ky.; two sisters, Mrs. Dollie Thacker and Mrs. Tinny Thacker, both of Regina, Ky. Thirty-three grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at the home of her son, Claude, at Garrett, the Revs. Stewart Howard, Dillard Reed, and Archie Everage officiating. Burial was made in the Howard cemetery there under direction of Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Dr. Scott Osborne Heart Attack Victim

Dr. Scott C. Osborne, 57, of Starkville, Miss., native of Martin, died in Starkville, Saturday, of an apparent heart attack.

Born at Martin, he was a son of Mrs. Myrtle Compton Osborne and the late Rev. S. D. Osborne. He was a graduate of the University of Kentucky where he received his Masters and Ph. D. degrees and was head of the English department at Mississippi State College at Starkville.

Surviving him is his widow, Mrs. Pauline Wylie Osborne; his mother and one sister, Mrs. Beecher L. Scutchfield, of Martin.

Funeral services were conducted Monday morning from the Presbyterian church in Starkville, and burial was made there.

Infant is Victim

Malonna Ann Blair, infant daughter of Sgt. Gordon R. and Milda Little Blair, of Ft. Campbell, Ky., died Saturday, in the U. S. Army hospital, there. Surviving besides the parents, are the maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Little, of Melvin, and the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Blair, also of Melvin. Graveside services were conducted Monday morning at the Little cemetery at Melvin by the Rev. Rolla Blair. Burial was made under direction of Merion Funeral Chapel.

Pikeville Among State Cities To Receive Anti-Crime Funds

FRANKFORT, KY.—The state Crime Commission said Lexington, Louisville, Bowling Green and Pikeville are among 114 cities throughout the U. S. eligible for additional anti-crime funds this year.

Louisville has been selected because of its size (over 200,000) and Lexington because of its high rate of reported crime.

Both Bowling Green and Pikeville are Model Cities that will receive special attention because they have completed comprehensive city improvement plans.

Each of the four target cities can qualify for up to $150,000 in federal funds to carry out projects in the following categories:

Special efforts to reduce street crime and violent crime or concerted programs against such particular crime as robbery, burglary, and auto theft. Projects may include special anti-crime street patrols. Improvement of police-community cooperation and understanding. Projects may include police training, citizen advisory units, use of community service officers, joint crime prevention programs. Improved operation of misdemeanor courts, including reduction of delay in trial and court backlogs; improved management, and better sentencing and disposition techniques.

New programs for juvenile offenders—including expanded referral services, better court processing, improved community treatment and rehabilitation programs.

Special programs for enforcement, prevention, and education in narcotics and dangerous drugs.

Special enforcement activities against organized crime in center cities, with emphasis on illicit activities which prey on the poor—gambling, loan-sharking, narcotics traffic.

Special councils at the city level to coordinate and plan city-wide improvements in all law enforcement activities—police, courts, corrections, prosecutions.

According to Charles L. Owen, executive director of the commission, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) in Washington has approximately $32.5 million to award nationally before June 30. Ten million dollars has been earmarked for the 114 target cities and the remaining $22.5 million is available to city, county, and state governments that choose to implement programs in nine areas of urgent criminal justice needs—including police, court and corrections improvements, the prevention and control of riots, special narcotics projects, and organized crime intelligence.

When they're looking up to you,
are they really looking down at you?

The station wagon on the left is known in some circles as a status symbol.

The station wagon on the right is known in the same circles as a mistake.

Now the status symbol is long and low and really quite beautiful.

Whereas the Volkswagen is short and high and really quite ugly.

The status symbol features a powerful engine.

A Volkswagen engine is not as powerful, but it'll go farther on a gallon of gas.

The status symbol boasts roughly 88 cubic feet of carrying space.

The Volkswagen has twice that amount, 176 cubic feet.

Conclusion:

If you're looking for something to show how big you are, then we suggest you get yourself a status symbol.

But if you're looking for something that's just plain big, then maybe it wasn't us who made the mistake after all.

Groups Here Work Together

Weekly meetings, planning sessions, discussions of the filth and litter threat to Prestonsburg, and now the work—all these have figured in the cleanup campaign now in progress here under the sponsorship of the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club which has been given the assistance of other groups.

The Health Department has joined the drive. Shown here at a recent meeting of Citizens for Beautification are (standing) two health department sanitarians, Aaron DeRossett and Charles Collins, and Mrs. Pauline H. Sparks, of the health department staff, who is also a director of the Kentucky Division of Cleanup and Beautification. Seated are, from left, Margaret Hamilton, health educator; Mrs.

Minnie G. Sutherland, representing the Prestonsburg Woman's Club, and Pat Willis, Junior Woman's Club representative.

Mrs. Sparks said tourism suffers by the presence of litter and garbage and that many complaints about the presence of both have already been received here. The sanitarians pointed out that state law provides a stiff penalty for property-owners who permit their premises to become sources of filth or causes of sickness. If the property is not cleared within a prescribed period, it was pointed out, the property-owner may be fined from $10 to $100, and each day's continuance of such nuisance may be considered a separate offense.

PCC Students Win Sweepstakes Trophy At 3rd Speech Clinic

Prestonsburg Community College won the first place sweepstakes trophy at the third annual Kentucky Community and Junior College Speech Clinic held at the University of Kentucky March 31 and April 1.

Prestonsburg Community College, 10 other community college and Alice Lloyd College participated in the statewide event.

Prestonsburg won the top sweepstakes trophy by amassing a total of 65 points in the various tournament categories. Barbara Hignite and Charles Bickford placed first in acting. Interpretative reading first place went to Tom Ward; second place in extemporaneous speaking, to Mike Pike. Also receiving honors were second place in book review to Bill Frazier and third place in Reader's Theater to Rex Sublett and Barbara Hignite.

Other students who participated in the tournament were Anna Deskins, Clarence Sloane, Jr., Johnny Griffith, John Lawson, Mary DeRossett, Eddie Kuss, and Gary Vickers.

Church Renovation Begun at Martin

MARTIN, KY.—Men of the First Baptist Church here, under the leadership of Pastor James E. Clark, have just installed insulation and masonite paneling in the sanctuary, which was previously the same as the cinder block exterior. Two new furnaces have been installed; a fan awaits installation, as do folding doors that will lead to the educational rooms. A wide outside doorway has recently been made in the left wing. The old ceiling will be replaced shortly. Labor has been entirely voluntary and gratis, men working evenings as time permitted. Women of the church helped to raise funds for the materials needed.

Attendance continues to increase, with the 100 mark having been reached. Everyone is cordially invited to services, Sunday School, (Clarence Crisp, superintendent,) at 10 a.m., preaching at 11. Evening service and prayer meeting, now at 7:30.

MAYTOWN NEWS

(Delayed from Last Week)

The Maytown Woman's Club held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Ed Stewart, with Mrs. George A. Patton, president, presiding. A film was shown and narrated by Mrs. Stewart on India, describing the great temples, its people, their customs, government and work.

The club voted to send contributions to the March of Dimes, Heart Fund and Red Cross.

The following students will represent the Maytown club in the Seventh District Woman's club contests which will be held April 11th, at the Prestonsburg Community College: Glenn Robinson, art; Susan Compton, piano; Glema Cooley, sewing. The Nominating Committee gave their report on officers for the new year: Mrs. George A. Patton, president; Mrs. Roland Burchett, vice-president; Mrs. Ed Stewart, secretary; Mrs. Paul Spencer, treasurer. Committees were selected for the Spring style show which will be held April 25th. Mrs. Ed Stewart will be commentator of this year's show.

MILLER, HORNE IN NEW POSTS WITH KENTUCKY POWER CO.

MR. MILLER

MR. HORNE

W. R. Miller, supervising engineer in Kentucky Power Company's Pikeville division, has been named to the new position of engineering superintendent in the general transmission and distribution department in Ashland.

Miller will be responsible for the supervision of engineering development and design of substations and transmission and distribution systems.

L. J. Horne, Jr., Pikeville power sales engineer, succeeds Miller as supervising engineer. J. M. Wood, Pikeville division manager, said.

A native of Knott county, Mr. Miller is a graduate of the University of Kentucky with a BS degree in electrical engineering. He joined Kentucky Power at Pikeville in 1954 as a distribution engineer and was promoted to Hazard division supervising engineer in 1964. He was transferred to the Pikeville division in 1966 as supervising engineer. He is married and the father of a son.

Mr. Horne, a native of Robinson Creek, is a graduate of the University of Kentucky with a BS degree in electrical engineering. He joined the company as a distribution engineer in 1958 in Pikeville and in 1969 was promoted to division power sales engineer. An air force veteran, he is married and the father of two daughters.

'New Community' Concept Is Seen In Valley Towns

The Prestonsburg-Paintsville-Pikeville area was cited Monday by John Whisman, states regional representative for the Appalachian Regional Commission, as an example of what may be done if the local development district concept is approved as a key unit in national regional development.

Speaking at a conference of the Southeastern Kentucky Regional Health Demonstration Program at Natural Bridge State Park, Mr. Whisman said the new cities of tomorrow are being built in Eastern Kentucky. He said the development district concept, which he and others are urging on Congress and the President, would enable Eastern Kentucky communities to apply the best technical help available in rebuilding the region.

"The concept being pioneered in Appalachia revolves around the word 'scale.'" Whisman explained it this way: "New York is too large to solve its problems. Hazard is too small to solve its problems. Lexington is just about right."

Applying "scale" to Eastern Kentucky, Whisman said: "The new community of the future that I've talked about here is Pikeville-Paintsville-Prestonsburg. These three communities would still be communities with their individualities, but they would form a cooperative municipality." The new municipality would represent a new level of government, which would enable the three cities, in Whisman's phrase, "to go into a trading off of services."

$5 Million Fund
To Finance CEP
Thru October

The Eastern Kentucky rural Concentrated Employment Program (CEP), sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Inc., has been funded to continue operations through October, 1970, according to William U. Norwood, regional manpower administrator, U. S. Department of Labor, Atlanta, Georgia.

Federal funds totaling $5,096,463 to serve about 1,850 individuals with a goal of placing 400 of them in employment, have been allocated. During its previous contract period, the Kentucky CEP provided training and work experience for almost 4,000 people and placed over 600 in permanent employment.

Nationally, 82 CEP programs are in operation, including 13 in rural areas.

Operating through a single local sponsor, CEP seeks out the hardcore unemployed in ghettos and other areas of concentrated unemployment. It makes available to them such manpower and related supportive services as orientation, basic education, counseling, physical examinations, medical treatment, day care for their children, work experience, training, job development, and job placement.

"I have electric heat and it's of fuel we've had."

Jimmy Ross of Catteltsburg, Ky. has had electric heat for 2 years. "People I talk to who haven't had any experience with it think electric heat's expensive... until I show them how little it's cost me, and they can't believe it." Mrs. Ross loves it. "Our mobile home was converted to electric heat and it makes cleaning so much easier. Even if it cost more I'd pay about anything to have it." Any mobile home can be switched to electric heat, quickly and economically... and cost you about the same as you're now paying. Kentuckians Are Reaching For Brooms and Paint Brushes

By FRANCES WEST

FRANKFORT, KY.—National focus on a cleaner environment is causing Kentuckians everywhere to sit up, take notice, and reach for a broom and paint brush.

Gov. Louie B. Nunn set the pace by proclaiming April as "Clean-Up and Beautification Month" in Kentucky.

Those in charge of clean-up and beautification program say there has been an unusually large number of requests for information on how to organize clean-up activities.

William R. Nash, director of the Division of Clean-Up and Beautification, said "It looks now like the number of cities and counties participating will exceed the 110 that conducted anti-litter projects last year."

"We are encouraged," he said, "by the many communities that have set up a year-round program with longrange goals for improvement in all aspects of physical appearance."
