

Jailer Says He Will Ask Jury To Act

Wayland Man Said To Have Told Role In Jail Break Here

Floyd Jailer Lawrence Hale said Monday that he will ask the grand jury, "as soon as it meets," to indict Albert Chaffins, of Wayland, in connection with the August 16 jail break here in which four prisoners gained temporary freedom.

Last of the four fugitives was arrested last Wednesday night, near Dwale, where Harrison Reed, of Hueysville, was captured by State Trooper Bevins and Prestonsburg Policeman Ralph Thornsbury. Wayne Lycans, of Huntington, W. Va., was captured the preceding night by Policemen Sam Hale and Dickie Campbell, as he walked in the vicinity of the First National Bank building here. Prestonsburg policemen Hale and Girven Waddle arrested the first two to be returned to jail, Ronald Gayheart, of Cliff, and Frankie VanHoose, of Paintsville, the preceding night, near Auxier.

Jailer Hale said he would base his charge against Chaffins on the Wayland man's own statement made to Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo, County Attorney Barkley Sturgill and State Detective Chester D. Potter. The officials quoted Chaffins as admitting he used a wrench to unscrew nuts from the top of the jail cell in which the four men were held, thus permitting them to lift the sheet-iron top of the cell aside and climb to the outside walkway, along which they moved to threaten a trusty and force him to call to Turnkey John Wes Burchett who unsuspectingly unlocked the main jail door. A statement by one of the four fugitives also implicated Chaffins. It was said he was paid $100 by Lycans for his part in the break.

The jail door unlocked, Burchett was slugged by one of the prisoners who swung a sock filled with bolts and nuts from their cell. One of the four said VanHoose was the

THE CHURCH-GOING CROW

Watt Hale, of West Prestonsburg, vouches for the truth of this story on which he has magnanimously given me an "exclusive." It relates to Jim Roe, his pet crow.

This ebony-colored specimen was raised by Mr. Hale from a fledgling and was a neighborhood favorite. Except for a tendency common to those of his kind—namely, to filch every bauble loose about the place and fly away with it to his own hiding-place—Jim Roe was a bird of reasonably good character, his owner says. But what makes him outstanding is the fact that recently he developed a sudden interest in going to church. A few Sundays back, prior to opening of worship service, in crowd-hopped Jim roe.

Watt looked at the crow, then at the preacher. "Well, is this going to be a segregated church, or are you going to let him stay?" he asked.

The pastor said he had no objections to his color or to his remaining but expressed some fear that the crow's presence might distract the attention of the congregation. So his owner captured him, took him to the door and gave him a quarter, so acting on the premise that the crow would take the coin and hie himself away to deposit it in his favorite cache (which, we presume, Watt had an idea of raiding later).

But the bird failed to act according to schedule. He flew over to a nearby car and dropped the coin down through a grill. From that time Jim roe wasn't the same bird—whether from grief over loss of his money or from being ejected from church, Mr. Hale does not know. Anyway, after a few days of inoping about, he disappeared.

Then last week came word of his whereabouts. A man from Abbott Creek brought the news. "Your crow is over on Abbott," he told Watt, who was beginning to look rather pale and drawn as his pet remained missing and his fate was still unknown.

"Yes, sir, he's over there, and he showed up for church last Sunday," he continued.

"He did? And what did the preacher have to say about that?" Watt wanted to know.

"Well," said the other, "the preacher said, 'If that crow has taken the trouble to fly clear over here, all the way from Prestonsburg to Abbott, to hear the gospel preached, I'm in favor of letting him stay!'"

THE KENTUCKY LONG RIFLE RETURNS. A member of the Kentucky Long Rifles of Morehead, in a display of marksmanship at the Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club's "Shoot-Out" staged on its Stratton Branch club grounds last Saturday. The event drew an estimated 800-1000 persons, and club officials say they may expand it next year to two days.

Rate on Bond Issue Less Than Expected

The $650,000 bond issue for construction of the proposed consolidated high school at Eastern was sold last Thursday on a bid of 6.667 per cent—an interest rate well below the lowest bid expected.

Almstedt Brothers, Louisville bond firm, was the low bidder. Two other firms submitted bids averaging 7 per cent or above.

The bids were received by the Floyd fiscal court, acting as fiscal agent for the Floyd County Board of Education.

Funds derived from the sale of bonds will finance construction of the first phase of the Eastern school plant. No attempt was made by opponents of the new school to halt the bond sale, but a suit filed last Monday in Franklin circuit court by three Martin men remains undecided. Date of the hearing of the complaint has not been set. The suit names State Superintendent Wendell H. Butler, the State Board of Education and the state Department of Education as defendants. Plaintiffs ask that they abide by "their own" rules and regulations, which provide that no new high school may be built unless it has an enrollment of at least 500. They contend that the Eastern school would not have an enrollment reaching that standard without students being transported to it from the Martin school district. And, they also contend, a 1939 Floyd circuit court judgement specified that the high school at Martin must be maintained. Last week's suit also asked that the state be enjoined from allocating Minimum Foundation funds for the new school.

The $1,018,780 bid of Akers and Akers, Dana contractors, on the Eastern building was accepted, earlier this year. Construction has awaited sale of the bonds and an end to litigation. It was the second time the project was let to contract, but on the earlier occasion court action blocked the sale of bonds.

Wounded Emma Man Expected To Recover

Bill W. "Booty" Cartmell, 36-year-old Emma man, remains under intensive care in a Lexington hospital where he was taken last Thursday after he was found with a bullet wound in his head. The wound from a 22-calibre rifle was said to have been self-inflicted.

Mr. Cartmell is expected to recover, but it was said that he may be permanently blinded as a result of the wound.

Insurance Lack Idles 20 Drivers As Schools Open

Because 20 of the 30 drivers who transport schoolchildren on a contract basis did not have liability insurance on their vehicles, upwards of 200 pupils may have missed opening day of school Monday in this county.

County Superintendent Charles Clark expressed disappointment that some pupils were thus prevented from attending school but emphasized the point that no vehicle will be used to transport children until it is first properly insured.

"We finally got insurance on the regular school buses, although we had to pay twice last year's $9000 premium," he said. "But when application was made by contract drivers, insurers threw up their hands. Nobody wanted to insure them. Finally, the insurance was placed in the assigned risk category. This means that the various underwriters determine which shall carry the insurance by drawing lots. We are assured in this way of insurance, but the sky's the limit on premium costs."

Mr. Clark pointed out that not a contract driver in this county has had an accident in five years.

Contracts runs are made into areas which heavier buses cannot reach or where the number to be transported is so small that a regular bus run is not justified.

Elderly Woman Arrested After Teenagers Shot

Mrs. Franzie Tuttle, about 60, of the Rock Fork Creek section, near Garrett, is under bonds totalling $5,000 after she allegedly shot and wounded two 13-year-old youngsters at her home Saturday night.

Shot in their arms by shotgun pellets were Dolly Cayton and David Chaffins. The boy is recovering at the McDowell Regional Hospital; the Cayton girl, at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin.

Mrs. Tuttle told Magistrate Zeb Ousley, who issued two warrants for her arrest, that her neighbor, Andy Conley, had received a telephone call Saturday which bore the information that Mrs. Tuttle would be killed that night. Mrs. Tuttle said she had trouble with a relative, and when the message was relayed to her she prepared to defend herself. She said that when a truck stopped outside her home she called twice, calling on its occupants to identify themselves, and that when there was no response she fired.

The High Cost Of Air Pollution

This view of trees standing, skeleton-dead, on the mountainside overlooking the town of David is considered a classic example of what air pollution can do to timber as well as other forms of life. A slag heap on the mountain has been burning there for years, and almost all the trees around it are dead. Sulphur fumes from the burning slag are blamed for the timber loss.

Trouble at the Source

The late Peter Marshall, who perhaps was as much poet as preacher, once used for a sermon text the story of the old fellow who lived alone up in the hills where bubbled the springs which provided water for the valley and the city below. This man was the Keeper of the Springs, and he went his faithful rounds, clearing from the springs and the stream every contaminating thing, all the silt and leaf and mould, that would make impure the life-giving water. But the time came when the City Council decided to economize and let the Keeper of the Springs go, and to build a reservoir for the storing up of the water — all this, without thought of what the water was, up there at the source.

The result may easily be surmised. The water that flowed into the reservoir became polluted, far back in the hills. Its flow slowed. It became stagnant. A green scum formed. At last, an epidemic raged, and not till then did the community leaders learn how great had been the services of the old man.

Peter Marshall in his sermon placed the mothers of the nation in the role of Keepers of the Springs, and appealed to them to return to the good and the simple things and to dedicate their talents and energies to purity at the source of family life.

A few days ago, the American woman — or had won for her — a goal she had long been denied. The national House of Representatives joined the U. S. Senate in voting what is called equal rights for women.

A few days later, American mothers — and fathers — began sending their children to school where begins the years-long process of intellectual training. The stream of young humanity on the way to school is great. And what will be the end-result of it all?

How many young minds are being polluted, back there at the source, in the home? And how many are as unprotected as the waters along the way from every bad influence and ideology, because young minds were not cleansed and strengthened through the guidance and teaching and loving-care due them from the family source? Are they to be educated, the more effectively to hate, to demand, to scorn all personal and public morality, to destroy — even to destroy themselves?

Peter Marshall died a number of years ago. His sermon was first published in his book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," more than twenty years ago. But it is as current as today's newspaper, as relevant as truth always is. He voiced an eloquent plea for Keepers of the Springs to be faithful to their tasks.

To them he said:
"The world has enough women who know how to hold their cocktails, who have lost all their illusions and their faith. The world has enough women who know how to be smart. It needs women who are willing to be simple. Let us not fool ourselves — without Christianity, without Christian education, without the precepts of Christ inculcated into young life, we are simply rearing pagans."

Surely nobody begrudges woman any emancipation possible from the role of drudge, of household menial, of being a mere incubator for man's physical passion. But — and this is not to deny man's responsibility, also — she is indeed the Keeper of the Springs, inheritor of a God-given place in the now and the future of her children. And of her nation. And that place does not make a woman mannish or set her in competition with man at the neighborhood bar or in all the other masculine vices.

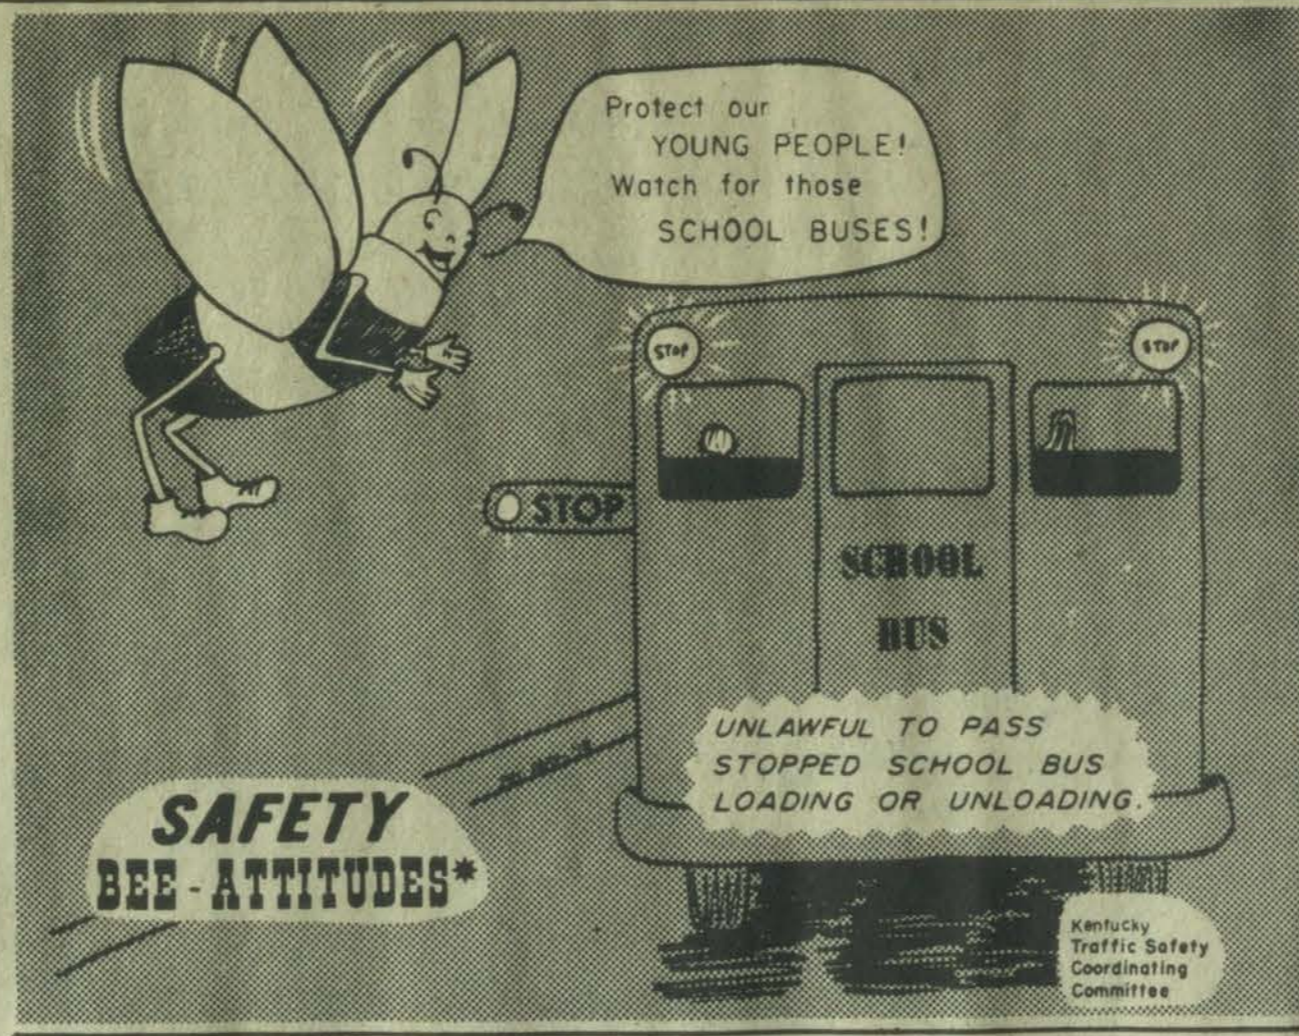

Of woman's desire for equality Peter Marshall also said:
"It remained for the twentieth century, in the name of progress, in the name of tolerance, in the name of broadmindedness, in the name of freedom to pull her down from her throne and try to make her like a man. She wanted equality. For nineteen hundred years she had not been equal — she had been superior . . . she wanted equality, and in order to obtain it she had to step down."

The Springs, these days, are unattended. And while the Keepers are away they're being poisoned.

HUNTING AND FISHING IN KENTUCKY Ky. Water Acreage Has Huge Increase

The commonwealth is almost 200,000 surface acres of water better off than it was in the "good old days"—the time before the lake building splurge by the U. S. Corps of Engineers, TVA and private enterprise.

That was the time when all of Kentucky's fishing was done in the miles of running water and the many farm ponds. The big lakes were things to dream about, things that many states to the north had but which we in Kentucky did not have.

But the high hills and deep valleys of Kentucky are ideally situated to lake building. By placing dams across the deep ravines many miles of water were impounded. And when properly impounded, those lakes lessened the danger of floods for the areas below the dams, and also provided more fishing places for Kentuckians who prize the art—always one of the more desired recreational pursuits in the commonwealth.

Then other government agencies got into the act—producing farm ponds here, there and everywhere at very little cost to the landowner. And this brought on an added duty for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources — stocking, free of charge, those ponds with a balanced family of fish, intermingling the largemouth bass and the bluegill.

It is necessary to tell the story about the farm pond productivity in order to populate the great waters of Kentucky with an adequate number of fishermen. It is from farm pond fishing that the big lake fishermen are produced.

They get their deep yen and know-how for fishing, Kentucky style, in the smaller ponds, which they soon outgrow. And then they are ready for the big challenge that the lunkers in the larger bodies of water present. Because of this—good fishermen and plenty of water—fishing has progressed to its present heights in Kentucky.

There's ample water for even more fishermen and as their number increases there'll be still more places for them to fish from year to year. Right now the total acres of water impounded behind 13 dams totals 183,965, headed by the three titans, Lake Cumberland with 50,250 acres; Kentucky Lake with 48,100 acres within the state and Barkley with 45,600 acres all of which lie in the commonwealth.

Before many years pass there will be an additional 15,450 acres available for fishing and other recreational uses as well as for flood control. There'll be Cave Run Reservoir with 8,270; Laurel River Reservoir with its 6,060 acres and Carr Fork Reservoir which will impound 1,120 surface acres. To be sure there are other lakes on the drawing board, but when they'll be built no one knows and many hope they will never materialize, claiming that enough of Kentucky's fine hunting lands and scenic beauty already has been covered with water.

With such huge acreage and such fine fishermen, is it any wonder that fish bite every day in Kentucky?

Writing a Book Changed His Life

Back in the second half of the 19th century there was a soldier named Lew Wallace. He was a major general in the Union forces during the War between the States. Lew Wallace was also a lawyer, and a statesman of some note. He served as governor of the New Mexico Territory from 1878 till 1881 and as minister to Turkey from 1881 till 1885.

Like many others, Lew Wallace found that as a grown man he had no religious beliefs. He often thought about this, especially when he was around others who were strong in their belief. He even talked with Robert Ingersoll, the well-known atheist, for several hours once. Ingersoll tried to prove to Wallace that the Bible was an unworthy book.

Following a visit with some friends once, Wallace spent some time in deep thought about what the friends had discussed — God, Christ, the Bible, etc. Somehow Wallace had felt left out of the conversation. The reason was simple — he knew very little about the subjects.

Following that conversation, Wallace made up his mind to write a book about what his friends had been talking about. The reason he decided to write a book was that he might make an in-depth study of the Bible. He knew that unless he had some primary reason to study the Bible his study would be haphazard and would soon end.

So for the next several years Lew Wallace spent what time he could reading

Texans Look Back To Floyd County

By HENRY P. SCALF

More than a century ago many of the DeLongs and Burchetts, of the Prestonsburg vicinity, stirred by stories of the free land and the wide open places of Texas and discounting the horrifying tales of Comanche atrocities, moved to the Lone Star State.

The first to go were the brothers, George Washington, David and Samuel DeLong, in 1864. In the next decade others of the two families took the long trek west. For nearly a hundred years there was silence from these expatriate families but it seems that, while the nostalgia for a clan's homeland may subside a bit, it never completely dies. The genealogical bug bit several members of the DeLong and Burchett families, particularly Mrs. W. Bert Dennis, Gail, Texas, and Mrs. Alta Corfman, El Centro, Calif. Faintly, old stories of their ancestors came back to them from the mists of the century the families had been separated from Eastern Kentucky. The two researchers finally established contact back in Floyd county.

Mrs. Dennis, a competent journalist, is not only seeking to learn more about her DeLong ancestry but is writing a history of one of the great Texas ranches. "All the DeLongs in almost every instance stayed with ranching," she writes to her Floyd county contact, Henry P. Scalf, Stanville. "They all enjoyed the wide open places."

Recently, Mrs. Dennis, in looking through an old family Bible, found several pictures of the migrating DeLongs and Burchetts. She sent back a picture of Martha DeLong who married Kennis Sanford Burchett, No. 20, 1887, at Prestonsburg. She and Kennis Burchett were parents of Bessie and Kennis Sanford Burchett.

Mrs. Dennis writes:
"I found the picture in my grandfather's Bible at the old home in Coke county. Remember, my grandfather was John Jordan Austin, who married Arminta DeLong, Martha's sister. I also found a picture of my grandmother, Arminta, which is being copied at this time.
"We found pictures of Samuel DeLong and his wife, Mary Killian; of James

Martha DeLong Burchett

DeLong and his wife, Elizabeth (Betsy) DeLong. Now, we have a problem, one Mrs. Corfman and I cannot solve. A relative had the following date for the death of either Martha or Kennis S. Burchett—18 Mar. 1886. Mrs. Corfman thought it might be Kennis, because she thought Martha went to Missouri later with her two children. We cannot find out anything from the county in Missouri where she is supposed to have moved. We thought there might be some Burchetts there who will remember if it was Mr. Burchett who died in 1886 or the son or who. Where is Cliff, Kentucky? Some of the DeLongs were born there.

"We are just about to finish the genealogy of the DeLongs who came to Texas and were children of James and Betsy DeLong. And they were quite a few who came! The first to come were George Washington, David and Samuel, in 1864. Then, John, who never married, in the 1870's, then my grandmother, Arminta DeLong Austin came in 1872; then William, who went on to New Mexico and never married. Francis Marion DeLong came and was married to Fanny Isabel Pancoast by 1881 in San Angelo, Texas—then they moved to New Mexico and Arizona. That left James who was born in 1843 and died in 1863 in Kentucky; Sarah E. who married John J. Auxier; and Martha, who married Kennis Sanford Burchett. As far as we know that is the entire family. The above mentioned John DeLong, unmarried, died in Tom Green county in 1889.

"We had a DeLong reunion the first Sunday in June and there were about 100 who came and, of course, there were many more who couldn't come. The oldest one there was Mrs. George Washington, Jr., who was born in 1885.

"I will appreciate any help you can give me concerning Martha DeLong Burchett, her husband and children and also the John J. Auxier, who was born in Auxier, Ky., and married in Floyd county."

It's a shame more drivers who drink can't stick to their limit.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

"Up With The Birds at Dawn"

The old settlers of Appalachia were early risers and most of them had the stern rule: "Up with the birds at dawn." They followed this rule closely during the spring and summer seasons when they were planting and cultivating their crops. Most of them were usually up with the first songs of the birds and they worked long hours in the field. I remember when I was a boy many years ago, the old settlers also had this rule: "Work in the fields until the first whippoorwill calls!"

They toiled in their crops many long hours; they reared large families and taught them the value of hard work. I often wonder how the young people of today would take the stern discipline of the old-timers, but it is something that is sorely needed. Most of our young people have too much idle time on their hands; this leads them to stir up mischief. "An idle brain is the devil's workshop"—a true saying, even if it is a trite one. I never heard of a thing like juvenile delinquency in the days of some fifty years ago. The young people back then were taught to work long hours in the fields; they respected their elders and never went out at night to stir up trouble. They went to bed early and were "up with the birds."

However, what I wish to write about is the beauty and the glory of rising before dawn and walking out in the new, green world of spring to listen to the songs of the birds. Most of us nowadays are sleepyheads and thus we miss much of the beauty of a sunrise, when the earth is flooded with the happy songs of birds.

In making a breeding bird survey for the Department of the Interior every June for the past several years, I was required to get up and begin counting the birds half an hour before dawn. I was at first amazed at the beauty and variety of the many different songs to be heard at this early hour. I learned which birds woke first to salute the dawn with a burst of song. Among the early singers, the cardinal usually is the first to begin the chorus and his merry whistle seems to say, "Get up! Get up! Get up!" It is a signal for the other birds to stir and salute the new day with an outburst of singing. Seconds after the cardinal's first rousing whistle, the robins come alive and join in with their early morning carol; it sounds finer, sweeter, heard in the first crack of dawn. Soon the wood-thrush comes alive and sends forth his loud, flute-like voice; it rings far over hill and dale and seems to float like liquid silver on the crisp, morning air. The dawn chorus of the birds is a rare musical treat which most of us miss by not getting "up with the birds."

You will be richly rewarded by rising some fine morning in June before the sun peeks over the horizon, and going out to hear the birds. Soon the brown thrashers, catbirds and warblers join in the early morning salute to the waking world. The music is better than many stringed instruments playing in a band. The dawn chorus of the birds is truly one of nature's rarest symphonies; it does something to a man's soul; it lifts up his heart and makes it light; it is good for whatever ails a man's insides; it fills his soul with heavenly grace and leads him to realize that this old world is not as dull and drab as it seems at times. It is truly filled with sublime music but we must have a seeking mind and a willing heart and keep the ears trained to hear it.

If you are brave enough to get up before dawn some June morning and walk out quietly to hear the birds, you will be surprised and delighted at the variety of the songs and notes and tones and silvery whistles to be heard; you'll catch the strains of the violin, the flute, the cello; you'll hear warbles, trills, carols and a carillon of silvery bells; you'll hear some songs that seem almost sublime.

I shall never forget the night I once spent at a fine, old farmhouse, far out in a wooded country. There were trees all around and they were full of birds. Birds seem much scarcer now than then. Their songs woke me up at dawn. There were literally thousands of birds singing in unison and I lay still in bed listening in rapture to this salute to the dawn. The songs rose and swirled and drowned out all harsher sounds of the farmyard. I could scarcely hear the crowing of the rooster and even the barking of the watchdog was overwhelmed by the songs of so many birds. The recording of their songs lives on and on in my memory and will live there as long as life shall last.

Birds are happy creatures; they love life and are far happier than most humans who fret and fume all day long and predict the end of the world in a matter of years.

Birds fill this earth with happy songs; they make this old world a finer, happier place for all. Many birds are persistent singers. The red-eyed vireo repeats his musical phrases over and over as many as 4,000 times each day. He never finds time to feel sad or blue. The warbling vireo keeps his easy-flowing tune going all day long; the catbird often sits in a tree and pours out his medley for hours at the time. Singing comes natural to a bird; it never sits down to mope or complain as we mortals do. I'm sure we should be more like the birds and spread more joy in this sad old world.

It is always better to sing and be happy than it is to sit and wail and say, "This old world is going to the dog" Could you ever make a bird believe that?

More Nursing Homes, Less Schools Seen If Population Stops Growing

By GARY HUNT

Suppose we achieve zero-population growth, what happens then?

"It's somewhat ironic that many of the young who advocate a no-growth population haven't foreseen the consequences," says Dr. Thomas R. Ford, University of Kentucky social demographer and author.

"In the first place, it means we will have an older population, there will be relatively fewer children and young adults around. This has political implications," he adds.

With the huge majority of the population centered in the older ranks it is highly probable that society would be more conservative, Dr. Ford points out. There would most likely be a readjustment of services to a different age group—more nursing homes, fewer schools.

"Many areas of the U. S. already have witnessed such situations with out-migration," Dr. Ford has found. "In Eastern Kentucky now you get more older people in political power than in most areas. You have the older power structures staying in existence longer. This is partly because the young have moved out."

Dr. Ford has observed the activities of the proponents of zero-population growth and he believes they have not given adequate attention to the consequences. He does not say zero-population is undesirable, he just says the planners "have looked at the undesirable consequences of a growing population, but they have not yet looked at the consequences of stationary population." He thinks it is high time they start doing so.

Dr. Ford is a sociology professor. He and Dr. Gordon F. DeJong of Pennsylvania State University have edited a book, "Social Demography," published this month by Prentice-Hall. Dr. Ford, as a social demographer, is interested in the social consequences of population changes.

According to Dr. Ford, the stationary population concept means as many deaths as births. Assuming an average life expectancy of 70 years, there will be as many people over 60 as there are under 15. The median age will be 37, where it is now 28. This means half the population will be over 37 years old.

"The lack of energies at 37 as compared to 28 is a very real thing. The older one gets the more adjusted he becomes to undesirable situations where the young keep trying to change them," Dr. Ford states. "Maybe to avoid social and economic stagnation we will have to adjust our thinking to where we don't rigidify at age 30 or what have you."

That is part of the problem. "We haven't really adjusted our thinking to a stationary population. Our history and economy have been geared to an expanding population. We need to examine what the economic and social implications are to a population which will no longer grow in size. We haven't done this. If we don't, we may be in for a rude shock."

There would be both advantages and disadvantages to zero-population which should not be overlooked, maintains Dr. Ford. "As a society we could make greater efforts toward improving, rather than just trying to keep up. For instance, there is housing. Instead of the rapid building, as we now have it, eventually some saturation point would be met and then improvements in the quality of housing could be made. Improvements in the quality of many things could be made." Industry would have to readjust, he asserts. There probably would be higher wages, since industry would be in greater competition for the supply of available labor. "Japan already has seen this to some extent," says Dr. Ford. "They had a drastically reduced birth rate in the latter 50's and a number of industries that rely on manpower are very concerned about their sources of labor."

He adds that if stationary population should come about, any new industry coming into existence would have to take its manpower from an already existing industry.

Receives Master's Degree

Miss Shelba Jean Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nero Shepherd, of Water Gap, recently received the Master's degree in Education with emphasis on remedial reading from Eastern Kentucky University, at Richmond. Miss Shepherd was named to the Deans' List for superior grade point standing. A 1964 graduate of Prestonsburg high school, she received her B. OBSERVE 56TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William Storie, of McDowell, celebrated their 56th wedding anniversary Saturday and Sunday, August 15 and 16, with open house for family and friends.

During the two days they were visited by most of their 12 children as well as many of their 37 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

Out-of-town guests included relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Storie from Virginia and North Carolina.

The Stories were married August 12, 1914, on the Tennessee-North Carolina state line. This particular site was chosen by the Stories because Mrs. Storie is a native of Tennessee and Mr. Storie of North Carolina. They moved to Floyd county in 1919 and have made this their home since that time.

The Blood-Stained Cross, The Star-Spangled Banner

Don't be just an American, be a Christian American. When you wear a little flag on your lapel, above it pin a little cross, and show the world that Christ comes first.

We have a beautiful flag, and I love it, but the old rugged cross, and the Christ who died there for me is the most beautiful to me of all things I have ever seen and known, and I do know personally the Christ of that Cross.

The greatest honor anyone could ever have is to be a soldier of that cross and carry it daily. We must learn of him (Matthew 11:29) in order to carry it faithfully, and with His perfect love and compassion for all mankind.

In His love and until He returns.

Alice Lloyd College Has More Than 300 Slated To Enroll

Pippa Passes, Ky.—More than 300 young people, most of them from eastern Kentucky, were on the Alice Lloyd College campus Wednesday (Aug. 26) to begin the 1970-71 academic year, the institution's 47th year of education for leadership and service.

Sophomores completed registration procedures Wednesday as freshmen and other new students attended orientation sessions and completed placement tests. Freshmen will register today (Thursday).

Two new dormitory units will be ready for occupancy as the fall term begins, and a third is scheduled for completion in late September. It is hoped that the modern, three-story science facility now under construction will be completed and equipped before the spring semester.

Alice Lloyd students benefit from a program which stresses the importance of each individual. During the opening term, which lasts only four weeks, students enroll for only one course. This is followed by a 12-week term in which students take two courses in the first six weeks and another two in the second six weeks. Some courses providing more academic credit will run the entire 12 weeks. The spring semester is composed of similar time periods. This type of academic calendar permits more course offerings during a year, reduces the number of people in each class and allows the instructor to spend more time with each student.

No capable student is denied an education at Alice Lloyd College because of insufficient financial resources. Scholarships, loans, grants and work opportunities are arranged for each student, according to his or her needs.

The second term will begin September 28.

 man who struck Burchett. The homemade bludgeon was later found on the hillside overlooking Prestonsburg by State Detective Potter and Jail Turnkey James Stone.
 Chaffins paid the balance due on his fine for a minor infraction, the morning of the break. He claimed he had acquired the money in a poker game with other prisoners. Lycans had more than $200 in his pockets when he was arrested.

The escapees, whose break precipitated one of the most intensive manhunts staged in this county, will be held without bond till the grand jury meets. Lycans was brought here from Pike county for safekeeping after he had led in one Pike jail break while he was being held on an armed robbery charge. Gayheart faces a federal charge in connection with the transporting of a stolen auto across state lines. The recent break was Gayheart's second since his arrest several weeks ago. Reed was originally jailed on charges of attempted murder and attempted rape of an 83-year-old Hueysville woman, and VanHoose was a security prisoner brought here from Johnson county, where he faces a variety of counts.

All buy Lycans told Jailer Hale they had intended to return to jail, even if not recaptured. They had little to say of their experiences during the days and nights of hiding in woodlands and fields while state, county and city officers maintained a round-the-clock watch. Jailer Hale expressed his appreciation for the efforts of officers and the help given by citizens in the return of the prisoners to jail.

LOVE FOLLOWS A LITTLE GIRL TO SCHOOL

Prestonsburg's Mrs. Lucy Ransdell had an experience Monday which many of us have had, but few of us have been able to get it into words. A little girl whom she loves very much left for her very first day of school, and Mrs. Ransdell set down the thoughts that followed her:

"My little neighbor started to school this week. It's all going to be strange and new to her for awhile and, World, I wish you would sort of treat her gently. You see, up to now, she's been queen of the roost. She's been boss of my backyard. I have always been around to bind up her wounds and have always been handy to soothe her feelings. But now—things are going to be different.

Monday morning, she walked across the yard, waved her little hand and started on her great adventure which will probably include tragedy and sorrow.

"To live her life in the world she has to live in, will require faith, and love and courage. So, World, I wish you would sort of take her by her little hand and teach her the things she will have to know. Teach her that all are not just, and all are not true. Teach her that for every enemy there is a friend, that it's far more honorable to fail than to cheat. Teach her all the things she needs to know but do it gently if you can.

"This is a big order, World, I know, but see what you can do, She's such a sweet little, girl, my little neighbor, and I love her so."

The five-story structure will require two years to build. Financed jointly by the Appalachian Regional Commission and the university, it includes technical education on the graduate, four-year, two-year and high school levels. MSU President Adron Doran hailed the institute as a "significant breakthrough" in technical education for Eastern Kentucky and the rest of Appalachia.

Miss Goodman, Other RECC Queens Compete at State Fair for Ky. Title

More than 20 of Kentucky's most attractive young women will once again compete this year for the coveted title of "Miss Kentucky RECC" at the Kentucky State Fair during August 24-26. The well-known beauty pageant will be conducted for the 21st time this year, and the girl who is chosen queen of Kentucky's Rural Electric Cooperatives will go to Dallas, Texas in February to represent the state in the National Beauty Pageant.

One of the contestants will be Miss Idola Jane Goodman, of Water Gap, who recently was named Miss Big Sandy RECC queen. In addition to the state-wide recognition that will come to the winner of the "Miss Kentucky RECC" Beauty Pageant, a wide variety of valuable gifts and prizes will be awarded to the lucky girl. "Miss Kentucky RECC of 1970-71" will receive a $300 scholarship to be used at the school of her choice, a silver trophy, a mounted crown which is symbolic of her title, and an all-expense-paid trip to Dallas, Texas, to participate in the national "Miss Rural Electrification" Beauty Pageant.

The girl who is named runner-up in the Kentucky Pageant will receive a $200 scholarship to be used at the school of her choice, the runner-up sash, and a silver trophy. In the event that the winner cannot represent Kentucky at the National Pageant, the runner-up is her alternate and will do so.

Each year, two other girls are also honored at the Pageant. The "Rural Kentuckian Magazine" presents a trophy to the girl who delivers the best speech on the evening of August 25, and the contestants themselves vote to select "Miss Cordiality." Both of these awards are coveted by the girls, since each award is recognition for out-standing academic ability and personality appeal.

The contestants who will be appearing in the contest this year earned the right to do so by first competing with other girls at the Rural Electric Beauty Contests held during July of this year. Those contests were held in conjunction with rural electric cooperative annual meetings, and 241 girls participated in the events.

It can run the mile in 5¢ flat.

Who says a nickel won't buy anything anymore? That solitary nickel pays for your gas. (Naturally.)

And oil. And tires. And maintenance. And repairs. And depreciation. And registration. And insurance.

And even some nifty accessories. (like a radio. Floor mats. Luggage rack.)

Five cents.

That's all it takes to run the mile in a Volkswagen.

Of course if you want, you can run the mile in someone else's car.

But you'll never see the finish line on a nickel.

Because a U.S. Government study says the average conventional car costs more:

10.9 cents a mile. Heh-heh-heh.

Music of Banjo and the Fiddle To Be Joined by Bagpipes' Skirl At Approaching Folk Festival

Celebrating the Appalachian heritage in music and dance, the fifth Kentucky Highland Folk Festival will be presented at Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre, September 4, 5 and 6.

The hills surrounding the amphitheatre will again this year resound with the music and rhythms of folk ballads and dances handed down from generation to generation in the Appalachian mountains. Even the skirl of the bagpipe will be heard this year when William Ried will play Scottish folk ballads. He is a member of the Carl Clark Buckskin Pioneer dancer and Scottish Highland Dancers, of Lexington, who will perform, as will the Hindman Settlement School Dancers with their director, Raymond McLain, who heads the school. They will be assisted by the Decoy Community Dancers, led by Lionel Duff.

Modern folk ballads will be presented by Bobby Ranier and Mike Omerod, who will play and sing their own compositions, and Prestonsburg high school football coach, George McClellan, will play the guitar as will Marcus Owens, well-known to folk song enthusiasts. Virginia and Luther Shivel, also of Prestonsburg, will sing, and Jethro Amburgy, of Hindman, will perform on the dulcimer which he makes. Santford Kelly, of West Liberty, will play the fiddle.

Among the performers familiar to folk festival audiences will be Town Hall, former Floyd county school superintendent, and Denny Slone, who will play the banjo, and the Jenny Wiley Chantresses, directed by Mrs. Edith James.

The festival will be directed as in other years, by Mrs. James, nationally recognized for her work in folk music.

Displays from pioneer homes and paintings of local scenes by Russell May will be shown during the festival in May Lodge, Jenny Wiley Park.

On the festival's final day—a Sunday—an afternoon program will trace the evolution of religious music in the region. A rhythmic choir, directed by Mrs. Chalmer Frazier, will dramatize the earliest form of worship, and a choir will sing chants still heard in the hills. The program will close with modern hymns sung by performers and audience. The festival will begin at 8 p.m., on Sept. 4 and 5 and at 5 p.m. on Sept. 6.

Electric heat made the big difference.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Wilson of Louisa, Ky. switched to electric heat 2 years ago. "Switching to electric heat is one of the finest things we've ever done. I tell my friends now that they will never know what comfort is until they have electric heat." Cost? Immunization Delay Risky, Says Dr. Hall

Dr. Russell L. Hall, Floyd county health officer, urges all mothers to have their children completely immunized before the start of the new school year.

Said Dr. Hall: "It is very important that every child's immunizations be brought up to date, so that he is protected against the serious communicable diseases that are preventable by immunization.

"Putting off immunization is risky," For example, the 'old fashioned' measles outbreak which has already caused two deaths this year in Kentucky could have been prevented. Also, eight cases of tetanus (lockjaw) were reported in Kentucky last year—two of which were fatal."

Dr. Hall urges parents to consult their family physician or the county health department about the possible need for "boosters" or additional doses of vaccine before school starts.

It is especially important to check the immunization record of preschoolers at this time, because according to Kentucky law no child is eligible to enroll in school without first presenting a certificate from a physician stating that the child has been immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis, measles, and smallpox.

In addition, although not required by law, rubella (German measles) vaccine is recommended for boys and girls between the age of one year and puberty.

Order Removes Bar To Opening Bids on US 23

Although a special judge in Franklin circuit court has dissolved the injunction which barred the Department of Highways from opening new bids on three sectors of the new US 23 in this county, the dissolution order will not become effective till next Monday. After that, the bids are expected to be opened.

The delay in effective date of the dissolution order was made in order to give time for an appellate court decision to be made, if one is asked. The new bids will not be binding if not opened before Sept. 6, which is 30 days after the date they were submitted.

The decision to void the injunction was made by Kenton Circuit Judge William Dunn in the absence of the vacationing Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs.

The suit followed rejection by the Department of Highways of bids totalling $9,812,754 on approximately five miles of US 23 between Stanville and the Floyd-Pike line. Damages of $4 million were asked by the J. D. Barter Construction Company, Harrisburg, Ill., the low bidder, and its subcontractor, the Mattingly Bridge Company.

Former Highway Commissioner Eugene Goss rejected Barter's bid on grounds that it exceeded cost estimates by $877,000. He said that excessive and out of line with other recent contracts.

Six highway contractors who submitted bids on the projects after that rejection sought to intervene in the case and asked the court to dissolve the injunction.

Dunn held that those firms could not intervene in the case but he dissolved the injunction, anyway, on an identical motion filed earlier in the day by the Highway Department.

Both the intervening complaint and the request for the injunction were denied by Dunn on the grounds that the law involved was "created for the protection of the public rather than the benefit of contractors."

The complaint by Barter and Mattingly alleged collusion on the part of other contractors and the Kentucky Association of Highway Contractors KAHC, and not on the part of Goss, Dunn noted. But in order to overturn Goss' rejection of the bid, he added, "there must at least be an allegation that Goss has colluded."

"And mere allegations of abuse of discretion without particulars is not enough," he added, but must be proved.

State Delays Action On New Louisa Bridge

The State Highway Department announced last week that it will hold in abeyance a plan to build a new bridge across the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River to a point between the Levisa and Tug forks at Louisa.

The department decided on the delay after the Louisa and Fort Gay Bridge Co. wrote him that the Louisa and Fort Gay bridge, a toll facility owned by private interests, would be closed if the new span were built.

"Obviously (our) bridge cannot compete against a free state bridge across the Levisa at approximately the same location," company officials told Goss.

The state's proposed bridge, however, would cross only the Levisa Fork while the toll bridge crosses both forks.

Bridge company officials noted that the closing of the private toll bridge would cut off all highway traffic between Kentucky and West Virginia at that point.

The department may begin negotiations to purchase the private span and "free" it. If an arrangement materializes, commissioner Goss said, the highway agency would operate the toll bridge without cost until plans could be drawn to replace the entire structure.

Speaker Says Less Air Pollution Now From Auto Engines

Substantial progress has been made in reducing air pollution from the automobile, and research now under way promises an even "cleaner" internal combustion engine, according to John W. Fish, director of public relations for the Kentucky Petroleum Council.

In a speech to the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club last Thursday night Fish pointed out that total emissions of carbon monoxide and gasoline fumes from the nation's motor vehicles reached a peak in 1967, and have been on the downgrade for the past three years.

He said that automobile pollutants are now being reduced by the installation of increasingly effective control devices on new automobiles and that as older cars with no control equipment are phased out, the overall reductions will continue.

Fish said that the Nixon Administration's proposal to tax lead used in gasoline would increase motorists' costs and could actually hinder the objective of reducing auto air pollution. He noted that at 11 cents per gallon there is already an approximate 50 per cent state and federal tax on gasoline.

He said that intensive research now going on, sponsored by industries and government, offers every reason for confidence that the automobile will soon cease to be a major factor in the nation's air pollution problems.
