Landowner Gains Edge Over State In Trial Monday Of First Appeal For Road Entry

The first of more than 70 right-of-way cases in circuit court on appeal from county court-appointed appraisers' evaluations was heard here Monday, and it attracted unusual interest as it was viewed by many as a "test case."

The appeal, the Department of Highways vs. A. D. Martin, et al, of Allen, resulted in the landowner gaining an edge over the state via court action. The state appraisal was $6800. County appraisers set the value at $12,000. The jury, after inspecting the property and hearing testimony, decided Martin was damaged $10,000.

Most interested of the spectators were several other landowners who have rightof-way cases pending.

While this lone case was being disposed of, six other appeals were filed by the Department of Highways from right-of-way appraisals totalling $308,012. This brings the total number of appeals to 78 and the amount involved to around $1.8 million. Most of the claims in the past have involved right-of-way for new US 23 from Allen to the Pike county line. Half of the six new appeals, however, contest values set on property in the Bull Creek section.

First of the raids was staged here Saturday night by Prestonsburg Policemen Sam Hale, Ralph Thornsbury and Ray Click and State Trooper Phillip Tucker, who arrested Charles R. Joseph on a warrant alleging sale of intoxicants and MEETING OF SOREHEADS confiscated 180 cans of beer found in an automobile.

Police Judge Earl Blackburn said a warrant for Joseph's Taxicab will be issued, alleging possession of intoxicants for the purpose of sale. The beer taken here was found in the trunk of a car registered in the name of Namon Newsome. Police said operators of the cab service claimed the car was not on their lot, but the search warrant and the warrant of arrest were based on information given by three men whom police nabbed while drinking on the highway. They said, according to the officers, the beer was purchased on the Joseph lot. The Newsome car was impounded and will be held till trial in police court, Oct. 24, Judge Blackburn said.

Armed Forces Day, Nov. 11, may pass as quietly as usual this year in Floyd county, but if plans now being made materialize, it will take on new importance.

Nov. 7, the Saturday before Veterans' Day, has been selected as the date when the county will engage here in a patriotic demonstration featuring a parade, school bands, floats and a speaker or speakers yet to be named.

To plan the event, a meeting will be held next Monday at 7 p.m., at Martin high school. Leaders in the move said the representation of every school in the county and the presence of all interested citizens

Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark has written individual schools of the county, soliciting their participation and emphasizing the importance of the occasion. Beaver Creeks Work To Start Within a Month

The most comprehensive water system to be undertaken in this county, the $2-millionplus Beaver-Elkhorn Water District project, has reached the construction stage, it was announced this week by J. C. Wells, of Estill, moving spirit in the plan for improved water services to the Beaver Creek sections of the county.

A notice to proceed, authorizing the start of construction, was received last Friday from the Economic Development Administration (EDA), and the same day the three contractors were given their official work orders.

The contractors have 30 days in which to begin construction and 540 calendar days to complete it.

The water system, extending into both the Left and Right Beaver sections, will include approximately 82 miles of water mains, a treatment plant and storage tanks. The treatment plant will be located on the hill overlooking Allen, and the water intake will be from the Big Sandy river.

Contractors and their low bids on the three phases of construction are:

C. F. W. Construction Co., Fayetteville, Tenn., water mains, $1,641,197; Frye Engineering Co., Winchester, Ky., treatment plant, $579,150; Continental-Fremont Corp., Fremont, O., storage tanks, $115,023.

A pre-construction meeting of contractors with water district representatives, EDA and Kennoy and Co., Versailles engineering firm, will probably be held this week.

Mr. Wells said last week that preliminary engineering on a sewer system to serve the same area for which the water system is being built has been completed and that application for an EDA grant for this project will be made soon. Cost of sewer construction has been estimated at more than $5 million.

Wells pointed out that without an adequate sewer system the new water system will add to stream pollution.

Pilot Program Move Seen by Dr. Schecter

Dr. Arnold Schecter, of West Point, Ky., who assumed the directorship Monday of native of Chicago, is a graduate of Howard program will be moving next month from Prestonsburg to Wheelwright.

The change in location apparently has been decided upon after the Mountain Development Company at Wheelwright offered the low bid among several submitted when the Floyd fiscal court advertised for a site. Until the move is made, it was said, the health program remains centered in the Floyd County Health Department building.

A change of location became necessary because of crowded conditions at the health department building. When the city of Prestonsburg did not join the fiscal court in providing funds for rental of a building here for the pilot health program, the court asked bids on a suitable structure. The Mountain Development Company is remodeling a building at Wheelwright to meet health program requirements, it was said last week.

Dr. Schecter's interest in air transport led him to join others, a few months ago, in seeking helicopter ambulance service for the Hardin county-Louisville area. Now's Time to Prepare For Top Alfalfa Yield LEXINGTON, KY.—Alfalfa is the highest yielding, best quality hay feed grown in Kentucky, and University of Kentucky College of Agriculture experts remind farmers that to keep the crop at a high level of production, they should apply high levels of fertilization in addition to practicing weevil control.

According to UK soil expert Dr. Kenneth L. Wells and UK forage specialist Warren C. Thompson, each ton of alfalfa hay cut will remove in the neighborhood of 8 to 12 pounds of phosphate and 40 to 60 pounds of potash. At the 1969 state average yield of 3 tons per acre for alfalfa, this represents 24 to 36 pounds of phosphate and 120 to 180 pounds of potash. For farmers who are producing yields which all growers should be shooting for-five tons per acre-this would represent the removal of 40 to 60 pounds of phosphate and 200 to 300 pounds of potash per year.

Very few soils in Kentucky can survive this yearly drain of phosphate and potash. and continue to produce proper yields. They must be fertilized each year or have enough phosphate and potash applied to last more than a year. For established alfalfa stands, the UK experts recommend topdressing now. Farmers should broadcast the required phosphate and potash— and should not forget to apply boron. An alfalfa stand should receive about two pounds of elemental boron per acre per year—that's an equivalent of 20 pounds of borax. Farmers should make certain their fertilizer contains this proper amount of boron.

Farmers should have their soil tested now to determine the present PH and the supply of phosphate and potash needed, then topdress to add the necessary amount for high yield. Farmers should shoot for a yield of five tons per acre on deep, welldrained soil and if they really have the knack for growing alfalfa, they can try for 6 ons per acre.

Farmers should test the subsoil also, at depths of 6 to 12 to 18 inches. The UK experts recommend keeping a balance book on alfalfa fields, benchmarking soil fertility, estimating phosphate and potash removal by the crop each year, and soil testing annually. And fall is a good time to get this job done.

"Were it left to me to decide whether we should have government without newspapers or newspapers without government, I should not hesitate for a moment to prefer the latter. But I should mean that every man should receive those papers and be capable of reading them."-Thomas Jefferson.

To All the People in Educational Districts No. 1 and No. 2 Who Are Interested in the Welfare of the Children of These Districts—

GREETINGS:

We the undersigned teachers have taught a cumulative total of 820 years in the Floyd County School System. We have seen this system grow from that of rural, one to four-room schools where the teachers taught all grades and performed his own janitoral service, to today's system of consolidation where the teacher teaches the grade or group of children for which he is specially trained and lets the janitor care for the buildings and grounds. The child is the center of concentration in all phases of his life — physical, mental, emotional, esthetical and spiritual. Art, music, physical education, guidance conselors and libraries have been added to the curriculum as the schools have grown in enrollment and qualified for these additional units.

We could enumerate many advances which have been made, but we would not insult your intelligence by doing so, because we know you have already observed the progress made, and that you the public, know that your children, as a whole, are now experiencing the best program for learning, in the best environmental setting they have ever been privileged to attend. Those conditions which are undesirable are rapidly being overcome.

Dr. J. H. Allen and Pete Howard, two of your outstanding Board members have done much to spearhead the progress which has been made.

Won't you join us at the polls, November 3rd, and cast your vote for continued progress by voting for Pete Howard in Educational District No. 1 and Dr. J. H. Allen in Educational District No. 2? You'll be glad you did.

Johnson County Apple Festival— A Glimpse of America at Its Best

By HELEN PRICE STACY

"Isn't it fantastic that we can gather like this in America! I can assure you that Paintsville, Ky. and Apple Day will be remembered not only in our scrapbooks but in our hearts."

Those words spoken by Miss Deborah Susan Patton, of Texas, Miss Teenage America of 1970, voiced the sentiment of some 40,000 people gathered in the All-Kentucky City (1969) for the two-day seventh annual Johnson County Apple Festival.

Saturday was an October blue day, sunny and bright, made even brighter by a special surprise guest, Gov. Louie B. Nunn, who served the best appleless pie when he announced that the Paintsville Reservoir area had been marked for a future state park.

No sooner had the announcement been made than a young lady turned to her companion and asked, "You mean, we'll have a state park like the one at Jenny Wiley?"

To give a more accurate estimate of the crowd in the Johnson County seat, one would have to go the parade route where people stood or sat six and eight deep on side streets.

Faces of America lined the streets and avenues to wave to Debbie Patton, Miss Teenage America; Cathy Ratliff, 1969 Apple Queen and lovely contestants in the 1970 contest. Riding high in their convertibles were Apple Prince Marshall Scott Blair, Apple Princess Lisa Jo Daniels, Apple Baby Boy Steve Butler and Apple Baby Girl Stephanie Lee-along with other contestants in the children's pageants.

On the sidelines Mrs. Lula Herkless, of Paintsville, waved to everyone in a long frock and bonnet she had made for the festival. "Didn't have a pattern," she called out, "just cut a paper pattern and made my dress and bonnet from that."

A most beautiful scene along the way was the moment the parade reached a hill. Looking west toward the horizon was a picture of America at its best: Shriners from Ashland, Hazard and other places... white floats decked with children, lovely lasses and red, yellow and green apples. . . precision marching bands from Ashland, Paintsville, West Liberty, Greenup, Whitesburg, Cumberland, Louisa, Salyersville, Virgie, Johns Creek, Maytown, Flemingsburg and other places...the Ellis Gearhearts of Hueysville with their ox-drawn buggy...honest, straightforward faces along the sidelines. . . and framing it all the Stars and Stripes curling in a stiff breeze; the gleaming, white spire of the Baptist church; hills just beginning to change color; a bright, blue sky with floating white clouds.

When the four-mile-long parade traveled

LeMaster Named VFW Aide-de-Camp

Kansas City, Mo. (Spl.)-Herbert R. Rainwater, San Bernardino, Calif., commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, has announced the appointment of Thomas LeMaster, 413 Scott St., Prestonsburg, Ky., as national aide-de-camp, V. F. W.

Commander Rainwater commented, "Our American heritage is a great and noble monument to the constructive idealism of man. It is a legacy of freedom and opportunity for every American who respects it—and who is willing to accept his own responsibilities under our law. Fortunately, we of the V. F. W. have such men as Mr. LeMaster who not only accept their own responsbilities but who reach out to serve their organization, their community, state and country. I publicly commend Mr. LeMaster for his fine record and expect that he will continue to distinguish himself not only in the V. F. W. but as a citizen of our country."

on to Main street there was just enough room to allow the units through.

Near the city park, Monroe McKenzie Jr. and Marion Preston and their mules Jim and Barney were pressing cane juice to be boiled into sorghum molasses in an oldtime evaporator.

How did it all start?

Seven years ago Citizens Bank had a onewindow display; next year, growers extended the display to the sidewalk. Today, this Eastern Kentucky event involves all of downtown Paintsville where approximately 2000 quarts of apple butter are made and sold by members of Paintsville Garden Club, with Mrs. Eula Preston in her sixth term as president; where citizens of nearby Thelma made an estimated 4000 apple pies; where apples by the bushel and cider by the gallon and other apple goodies are made and sold—the proceeds to be used for club projects, charity and benefit programs.

Back at the courthouse, Escom Chandler said, "It's the greatest Apple Day we've had." Black-haired Debbie Vanhoose, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Vanhoose, of Paintsville, was crowned 1970 Apple Queen and this month will go to Pennsylvania to represent Kentucky in the national contest. Paula Ball, 17, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Ball, Paintsville, was first runnerup, and Susie Johnson, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orban Johnson, Flat Gap, was second runnerup.

The Prestonsburg Black Cats last Saturday night turned the tables on their old namesis, the Belfry Pirates, on the Belfry field and, despite a flock of penalties which slowed the Cat offense, edged the Pirates in a defensive battle. 15 to 14.

After a scoreless first quarter, Tommy Burchett raced 20 yeards for the first Prestonsburg touchdown in the second on a fine fake by quarterback Scott Cline. The kick for extra point failed. Later in the quarter, John Paul Leslie intercepted a Pirate pass but when the march for another marker bogged down Leslie on fourth down kicked a field goal from the 25-yard line to bring the score to 9-0.

Belfry came back in the third quarter to score, and the two-point conversion brought the score to 9-8. This was followed by a deflected Belfry punt by John Paul Leslie and George Hale. Terry Hickman picked up the ball and ran 35 yards to score. Leslie's kick failed.

With a 15-8 lead, Prestonsburg still was not out of the woods, with Belfry scoring again in the fourth quarter on a pass. The two-point conversion attempt that could have given Belfry the win was stopped.

American history contains several periods of indecision and crisis. When the 55 delegates to the constitutional convention of 1787 met in Philadelphia, the course of American history was drastically shaped and directed. The delegates could have maintained the conventional wisdom of states' rights and, in the process, crushed

the prospects for a democratic United States of America. Instead, the delegates set aside their preconceived ideas and their states' pretty selfishness and envisioned what America could and should be.

America was at a crossroads in 1778: as a country, she could maintain the status quo and become a decadent, rotting country, or she could adopt a new set of imaginative

America is at a crossroads today. If we choose the road to the right, we will be faced with repression and a stifling of the fundamental rights and liberties of man. If we choose the road to the left, we will un-disorder. Just as our forefathers rejected in 1787 the conventional wisdom of the day,

America must now reject the polarization and the rhetoric coming from both the right and the left. Instead of bickering over the actions of a few irrational people, we must

The Duke Does His Magic — And Not a Rascist Was in Sight

By BARBARA HEINZE

Something nice happened on the way to the gym and back Tuesday evening. A lot of us heard the Duke and were reminded that popular music is not necessarily a heretoday-and-gone-forever thing. For those on the other side of the generation gap, the Duke is who else but Duke Ellington and he obviously never saw a piano that he didn't like. With him were his group of polished musicians, any one of whom could and did give out with virtuoso performances from Rufus Jones on the drums to Cat Anderson that. with his trumpet.

The group led off with selections from the New Orleans Suite, on to a few rock selections and of course all the familiar standards known to many generations including "A Train," "Creole Love Call," "Mood Indigo," "Caravan," many of which Ellington composed. Then there was "Do Nothing Till You Hear From Me," "Missed the Saturday Dance," and "I'm Beginning To See the Light." Through the warp and woof of it all, the Duke wove his own fabric of sophisticated magic at the piano.

In Memoriam In memory of my husband, Luther Allen, who passed away Oct. 15. 1967:

dreams? Just as our forefathers rejected in 1787 their own selfish wants and desires, the many people of power and wealth in America must put aside their desires and think of the six-year-old girl starving in Mississippi and the thousands dying in Asia.

The young people who have protested so militantly are sincere and concerned human beings. Young people see things obviously wrong in America: the hate, the apathy, the prejudices, the war, and the division of our great nation. Instead of trying to understand and envision a better nation, it has been easier to label everyone who sees something wrong in America as a "radical" or a "commie." Our leaders are making a serious mistake if they don't realize the historical importance of America's actions now. If our people choose to pretend that America's only problem is a "bunch of troublemakers," then freedom and democracy will slowly disappear. But if the people of America realize that many things are wrong and decide to do something creative and imaginative about them, then our country will more closely resemble the vision of America that our forefathers had in 1787.

No citizen is safe in Kentucky. There is no law and order in Kentucky. The governor of the state has announced that he is above the law and can change it at will or at the will of his supporters.

Citizens who risk their lives on highways destroyed by illegally overloaded coal trucks under the governor's protection or behind trucks spilling boulders on and around their cars have been told openly by the man elected and sworn to protect them that their rights do not count when weighed against private profit. To add insult to injury, the Attorney General of the state, charged specifically to protect the rights of the individual citizen, has declared that the people through their constitutionally provided local governments have no right to protect their property, their children, or their local areas from destruction and that he has no authority to stop the unlawful destruction of their highways paid for by their taxes.

Kentucky, you bleed and no one comes to staunch your wounds but only to open more holes in you!

I call on all officials and all candidates to do their duty and speak out as protectors of the public or resign their offices or candidacies.

Lenna Moore has been out of this column for a few weeks. In fact, he's been out of commission. But he made it around, the other day, to list his various and sundry miseries. The survey was found by Mrs. Pauline Fields, administrator of the State Land Office, sandwiched between other documents in one of 473 metal drawers built into the wall of a Capitol room.

The drawer bore the label "Walker Line," and among the contents was an 1820 resurvey of part of the Kentucky-Tennessee border originally surveyed by Dr. Thomas Walker in 1779-80.

ARC Says More Money Headed For "End of the Hollows"

Regional Commission is turning from construction of a 1200-mile highway system. More of its attention will be given to the "heads of the hollows" situations.

The success of Alice Lloyd College's ALCOR programs emphasizes the need for the change, the following news-feature by an ARC writer says.—Editor.)

BEARVILLE, KENTUCKY-Pronounced BARR-vill. Population "about" 50 or 60. Location: Roughly four miles up a dusty, winding mountain road that snakes through the hollows of an isolated section of Eastern Kentucky coal country.

Bearville is one of hundreds of hollow communities found throughout this economically depressed section of the Appalachian region. Locally referred to as munities are havens of a proud people who have been by-passed by 20th Century creek that quietly flows by the schoolhouse. technology, education, and health.

The road to Bearville, dirt with a little miners years ago. It is impassable after heavy rains or during the hard winter months.

Alice Lloyd College, about two hollows over from Bearville, is a two-year, coeducational liberal arts college in Pippa Passes, Kentucky. The fully accredited of hope for the parents. school exists to "give capable Appalachian students an opportunity to develop purposes and capacities for leadership and citizenship, especially leadership in service to mankind." The passage, from Alice Lloyd's brochure, is not merely an idle statement.

A significant step in the service of mankind is being made by the college's ALCOR program, which stands for Alice Lloyd Community Outreach Reserves.

With more than $52,000 in help from the Appalachian Regional Commission, the outreach program maintains 25 student nurses who live back in the hills with the families and work with them to achieve better education and health standards.

school before completing their primary medical students, most of the problems are education. Outhouses dot the countryside, (Much of the attention of the Appalachian causing pollution in the spring-fed creeks health, public assistance, and economic when rains flood them. Running water is seldom seen and each of the homes is equipped with a backyard well, usually ferreted out of the ground with a shovel.

Working alongside the student nurses are about 45 Alice Lloyd students, generally all Appalachia natives.

These college education students, a rarity in this beautifully serene land where wanting to own a 30-ton Mack coal truck is a typical boyhood ambition, are a bridge between the deep rural areas and the fastpaced outside world.

After a long, dusty hike from where the car had to stop, the one-room cinder block schoolhouse-community center comes into view. Shirtless and shoeless youngsters dart back and forth in carefree play while Connie, the pretty 21-year-old student "hollers," these tiny, ultra-rural com- nurse, patiently counsels a little boy against drinking the water in the polluted

The large number of outhouses and lack of a solid waste disposal system are the gravel here and there, was built by the strip main factors in the cause of the impurities in the small streams.

Connie knows all the families in Bearville, and she is welcome in any of their homes. It took a couple of weeks for Connie to break the ice with the local residents, but now she is the idol of the children and a ray

She plays games with the children every day at the little center. Although the games might seem unusual to the suburbia firstgrader, they are designed to teach the Appalachia deprived many of the essentials of nutrition and health.

Handwashing, brushing teeth, and combing hair are part of the day's activities at the center, always made a game for the youngsters, but stressed that such activities are good and helpful.

Time is not always spent with the children, however, because Connie walks deep into the hollows to visit many of Bearville's citizens. Occassionally she will run across a serious health problem, before her arrival merely accepted as part of life. Many of the area's youngsters drop out of But now, with the dedicated assistance of corrected and the people are shown ways to prevent bad health and disease.

> The medical students assist the people in getting help from local agencies, such as the County Health Department.

> The Appalachian Regional Commission has provided the Student American Medical Association with almost $275,000 that involves 160 medical and pharmacy students in the day-to-day routine of rural physicians.

The students work with the doctors and travel from center to center checking the children's eyes and looking for serious health problems. They have gathered valuable data in their untiring work, as well as being extremely helpful to the residents. The data will help them, and others, determine the most severe problems and assist in setting up priorities for work in the hollows.

In the evenings the adults flock to the center in the base of the hollow. The men folk sometimes sit around and talk and the women work on quilts and hooking rugs. Other times Connie talks with an expectant mother about the best things to eat. Mental retardation, infant deaths, and communicable disease are widespread and Connie contributes a great deal of time working with the people on the health problems. And a lot of planning goes into the "community cookout," which has the participation of the entire Bearville community. Balanced menus are worked out by the residents, with a little help now and then from Connie. Everybody pitches in and the cookouts are always a resounding success.

Very slowly over the sweltering summer months Connie has gained the confidence and respect of Bearvillians and with this confidence she has passed over to them vital information on dental hygiene, infant care, pre-natal care, and environmental Health problems afflict 40 percent of the 10,000 persons reached by ALCOR this summer and the important work of the students has done a great deal to remedy the problems.

School drop-out rates are high, especially in Bearville, whose children must trek the narrow, winding road to Kentucky Highway 80 to catch a bus to a school 12 miles away. That means the day begins at 5:30

Among the most serious problems in regard to education are lack of parents' understanding of educational needs, withdrawal characteristics, low self-esteem, non-competitiveness, and disregard for the future. Connie's "in-the-home" contacts broaden the parents' outlook on school and the need for it.

To relieve the monotony of the long summer months she works in the schoolhouse with the children on their abc's and numbers, spiced with two-way discussions about the value of vegetables, meat, bread, and fruit in the daily diet.

One of the most successful programs under ALCOR was the introduction of fresh fruit in the children's diet every day when they came to the schoolhouse to learn and play with Connie. This past summer the fruit was not included because of the squeeze of a tight budget.

Often times a listless child has become cheerful and alert when he has had a nutritious snack. In striking cases parents actually thought their child was unable to talk, until a nutritional diet and activity changed the whole life of the child. ALCOR was recently expanded to include opportunities.

Though the summer ends and the students return to school, the program's work will not. Every week-end the students will return to the hollows to visit the families, check on the health problems, advise parents on meal planning and nutrition, and give that little bit of encouragement to a first grader who is having trouble adjusting to school.

The ALCOR project is one of the ways the Appalachian Regional Commission is now turning to "the man in the holler." RC States' Regional Representative John Whisman recently said, "There is now a need to correct a fundamental historic error in the program—there needs to be an emphasis on human resources.'

As much of the ARC's expenditures turn from building the 1,200 mile Appalachian Highway System, many more of the dollars spent will be felt by the man at the end of the hollows.

Social Security Has Teleservice To Help Reduce Office Visits

A new telephone service at the Pikeville social security office can handle "most social security business" without requiring personal visits to the office by the public, according to Daryl E. Ratliff, social security district manager for Pikeville.

"We call it Teleservice," Ratliff said. "With it, we can handle a great deal of the paperwork by phone that involves such social security matters as application for benefits, change of address for prompt delivery of monthly checks, and general and specific questions about social security programs, including Medicare."

With Teleservice, Ratliff said, social security personnel can, in many instances, fill out an application for benefits over the phone, then mail the form to the beneficiary for his or her signature.

"We can also accept change of address information by phone from beneficiaries who are moving, so that delivery of their checks will not be interrupted," he said. 'And, of course, we can answer questions affecting workers' retirement, Medicare. disability, and survivors protection."

The social security Teleservice phone number for the Prestonsburg area is 886-

I offer these objectives as a program of action for the consideration of the voters of Division No. 1.

- 1. The construction of a junior high school here to lessen over-crowding in our school buildings.
- 2. A redistricting of educational divisions so that people from Cow Creek, Bull Creek, David and parts of Middle Creek and Allen can vote for a Board Member representing the district where their children attend school.
- 3. Division No. 1 should receive its fair share of school budgeted funds for the amount of taxes paid and number of pupils enrolled.
- 4. Removing of political pressure from all school employees.
- 5. A faculty member to attend meetings and advise with the Board Budget Planning Committee.
- 6. Up-grade our school system so we can meet the standards of the Southern Association of Secondary Schools.

I pledge my wholehearted support to reaching these goals when elected.

Large or Small, School Districts May Save through Central Buying

By LEWIS SHARPLEY

FRANKFORT, KY .- The Louisville stands to benefit from the centralindependent school district has about 55,000 pupils and the East Bernstadt independent district, in Laurel county, has about 400.

Both school systems have a common financial goal-to get as much as possible for the taxpayer's educational dollar.

Officials in Louisville and East Bernstadt—as well as in most of the other 190 school districts in Kentucky-expect important savings to result from the new law under which supplies can be bought at state-discount prices.

The smaller school districts stand to benefit most from the new law, in the belief of James Melton, assistant superintendent of public instruction in charge of administration and finance.

For any purchase of $1000 or over, bids have to be taken. "The superintendent of a small school district has so many duties that he does not have the time to make a study of dozens of price lists on the scores of items that must be bought during the year," Melton observed. "However, on purchases that run into the most money, he can order through the state and be sure of getting good

The new law should result in substantial savings to most schools, Melton added.

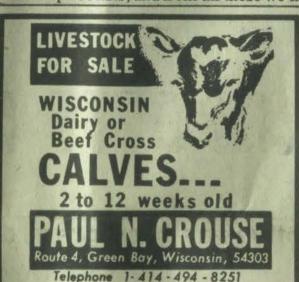

The East Bernstadt superintendent, Russell Mason, said: "I can see that quite a lot of saving is possible."

Mason, like many other Kentucky school officials, obtained a rundown on possible discounts by writing to N. B. McCubbin, state purchasing director.

J. B. Myers, purchasing director for the Louisville city schools, is taking a close look at state price lists and is planning to buy through state channels whenever a saving is possible.

For some time Myers' office has benefited from the joint buying system set up by the city of Louisville and Jefferson county in 1965. He pointed out that in some instances buying through a local firm is more advantageous even if the price is slightly higher-if considerations such as machine servicing are included.

"We take bids on our own, we study the city-county price lists and now we'll study the state price lists, and from all these purchasing law (HB 204). Hayward Gilliam of London, Laurel county school superintendent, plans to use the state price lists whenever his district would benefit. The district has 6200 pupils.

"I feel like it will help us," Gilliam said. Rep. Brooks Hinkle, D-Paris, chairman of the Joint Legislative Interim Committee on Education, said that use of the new central-purchasing law by most Kentucky school districts "could give them the equivalent of an appropriation of several hundred thousand dollars a year in additional funds. Eventually the savings should total into the millions."

Hinkle pointed out that the bipartisansponsored law, which passed both houses of the last General Assembly unanimously, is permissive-not mandatory.
