A planner's concept of the proposed open-air mall under consideration for Court street between Lake Drive to First Avenue is shown above. The design plan:

Existing sidewalks would be torn out and new sidewalks installed and the existing street pavement inlayed with brick. The brick paving will terminate at certain places to form circular tree grates and flower beds. Forty trees and 20 park benches have been proposed to give the mall a shady park effect. A garden fountain and two drinking fountains have been included to increase the functional and aesthetic pleasure afforded the pedestrian shopper. The existing canopies and projecting signs will be taken down and relocated if possible. A row of 10x25-foot canopies will be installed over the sidewalks on each side of the street. The canopies will overlap each other and will be flashed to each store front, forming a water-free sidewalk on each side of the street. Each canopy will be constructed on four aluminum columns with the two outside columns serving drains for the canopies. Street catch basins will drain into the proposed 15-inch storm sewer along with the canopy drains. The canopies will be 5 feet square translucent panels bolted to an aluminum frame as supplied by the Kalwall Corporation. Globe lights will line each side of the street and lights will be installed on store tops to shine down on the translucent panels of the canopies. This lighting will provide ample lighting for night time shopping and will illuminate the store fronts. The final improvement planned would be a space frame 40x45 feet across the Second Street and Court Street intersection. This will accommodate the translucent panels also used on the canopies. The space frame will provide a water-free intersection, giving the pedestrian shopping pleasure from one mall to another.

Jury Drum To Be Used By Courts

Police Court Here To Begin Jury Pay At July Sessions

The Prestonsburg police court will begin the use of a jury drum and pay those serving on its juries, beginning next month, and the Floyd quarterly court will return at the same time to the use of the jury drum, it was announced this week.

Police Judge D. E. Blackburn said the policy of paying jurors was influenced by a Court of Appeals decision in which it noted that persons summoned for jury service without pay might refuse service. Otherwise, the high court affirmed the ruling of Circuit Judge Hollie Conley in dismissing the appeal from police court conviction, of Henry Clifton. Clifton maintained that trial by unpaid jurors whose names were not drawn from a jury drum was unconstitutional.

Beginning with the July 1 court session, persons summoned by mail by the city clerk will be required to serve. Refusal will be met by contempt of court charges. Such jurors will be paid $5 per day for their service, and their period of service may cover an entire month.

County Judge Henry Stumbo said the fiscal court will be asked to budget funds for the payment of quarterly court juries and that jurors' names will be drawn from a jury drum for July court sessions.

Judge Blackburn said police court will probably have two sessions a month because of the heavy caseload. One of the cases slated for trial is that of Clifton, the appellant in the Court of Appeals case, who is charged with speeding.

arrived an open pocket-knife lay beside the body. Witnesses told Stumbo and others that Tackett had a knife during a disagreement which arose between him and Collins over the proposed marriage. Others who did not witness the actual slaying told authorities, however, that Collins told them he had taken the knife from Tackett prior to the shooting.

The contention that Tackett was shot by Collins was supported by testimony of the (See Story No. 2, Page 12)

Moynihan Sets June 28 Hearing In Martin Case

U. S. District Judge B. T. Moynihan has continued till June 28 a ruling on motions by Martin residents seeking an order enjoining Special Judge Fanning from enforcing an injunction which forbids picketing at the Martin school and to enjoin Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark from stopping group action by injunction. The continuance was ordered in a district court hearing Monday at Pikeville.

Judge Moynihan heard the claim that there is collusion between the superintendent and Judge Fanning, who has had under consideration several months a case involving the Martin school, and that they have acted in "bad faith," and conspired to deny plaintiffs' rights. He set 2 p.m. June 28 courtroom at Lexington.

The $50,000 damage suit filed against Superintendent Clark was not at issue in Monday's court proceeding at Pikeville.

come here from Pike county till Sunday night, but as of Monday afternoon had not made his appearance.

Deputy Sheriff Dester Hamilton recovered last Friday an automobile stolen from the bathhouse area of the Inland Steel Company at Printer. The auto was owned by Virgil Flanery, of Buck's Branch, near Martin. Sheriff Leslie said a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Frank and Lonnie Dillon, who are accused of taking the truck of Woodrow Jarrell, of Cow Creek, recently. The vehicle was found wrecked in Sugar Loaf Hollow.

A kidnapping charge against Elmer Laferty grew out of his taking of his own child, officers said. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Claude Flanery. Marvin and Phillip Neeley were jailed here last Thursday, each charged with striking and wounding with a deadly weapon. They were arrested by Deputy Sheriffs Layne and Jones, and later executed bond.

Other arrests, charges on which defendants were booked and names of arresting officers follow:

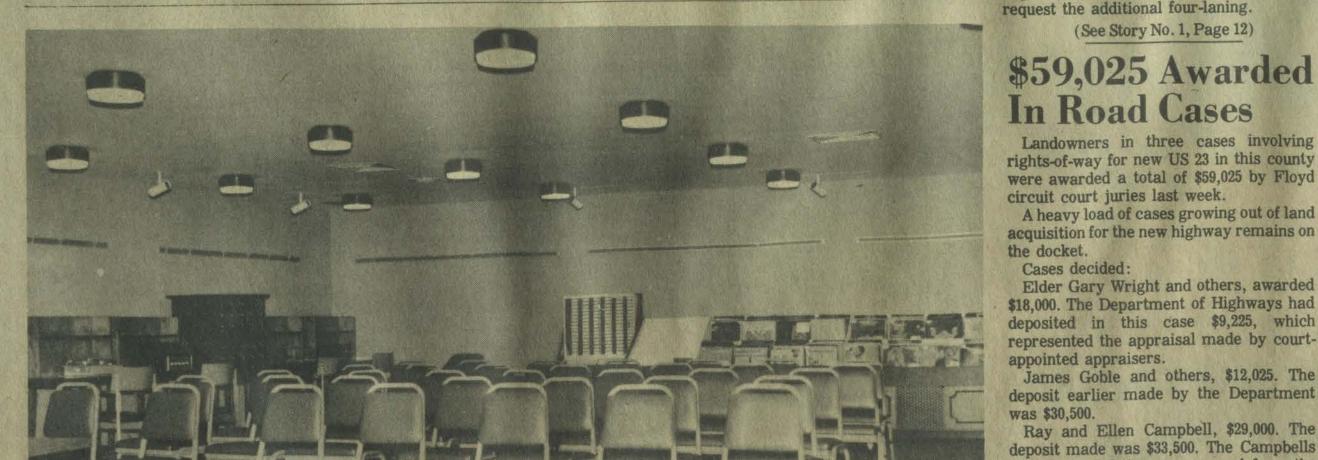

John Perkins, destroying private property and a.w.o.l., by Deputy Sheriff Ed Isaac; Edgar Tackett, no operator's license, by Policeman Harold Johnson, of Wheelwright; Jackie B. Boyd, contributing to juvenile delinquency, by State Trooper Williamson; Charlie Howell, drunk driving and no operator's license, by Constable Gillis Conn; William Thornsbury, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State for a hearing of evidence in the federal Trooper Delmar Laferty; Larry Fields, destroying public property, by Deputy Sheriffs Otto Fannin and Holland Hurley; Terrell Prater, drunk driving, by Lt. Ford Gets Contract On New Road Sector

Contract on construction of 2.541 miles of Ford Company was delayed a few days new US 23 from Water Gap to Allen, in- because of uncompleted utilities cluding a bridge across the Big Sandy at relocations. Work on both sectors of the Allen, was awarded last Tuesday by road is expected to begin within the next Commissioner of Highways B. E. King to few weeks. the Winston Ford Co., Inc., of Prestonsburg, on its low bid of $4,762,747.04.

The awarding of the Ford contract was will seek federal approval for a plan to the last necessary to complete the Prestonsburg-Allen sector, the last work to Williamson a four-lane facility. The highbe started on the new four-lane highway from here to Pikeville. The Kentucky Road Oiling Co., Georgetown, had earlier been awarded the contract for construction of 3.357 miles of the Allen-Prestonsburg portion, beginning with the junction with the Mountain Parkway, near here, and extending to Water Gap. The firm's bid, lowest of those submitted, was $3,212,696.79.

Awarding of a contract to the Winston burg's Court Street is, we think, one of the best. The planners have designed the mall for beauty; restful shopping for visitors as well as local residents, benches for rest; fountains for esthetic value and for the thirsty; parking facilities. Just about everything except one important item, and that's the matter of public restrooms. And don't tell me this is an optional item.

UNDER LOCK AND KEY

If you run out of reading matter, you might toddle around to the Lake Drive building which until recently was used as the Dwale Outpost of the Floyd County Comprehensive Health Services Program. Hand-lettered on the inside of the door and windows are various comments which will remain there until somebody with a key unlocks the entrance. Also sheltered as safely as a priceless document in a museum is a "poem" asking, "What Happened to Milt?" that may not find its way into any anthologies but which will hold you for a few minutes. All this, we can safely say, was an "inside job."

LOOK-THEY'RE FOR FREE!

Last week, I had an idea that if I mentioned those kittens which are frolicking at our house we would have no less than a dozen calls from folks wanting to adopt them. The demand would be so great, I at first thought, I might sell them. But now, after thinking the matter over, and beset by my usual generosity, I have decided to give these cats away-if anybody will have them.

Baldridge, First To Drown in '71

Floyd county's first drowning of the year was recorded last Thursday when Claude Baldridge, 45 of West Van Lear, drowned in Johns Creek, below Dewey Dam.

The Johnson county man drowned between 1 and 2 a.m., and his body was recovered by the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad at 4:25 the following afternoon. Baldridge is believed to have fallen into the stream, approximately 300 yards below the spillway of the dam. His body was found where it had lodged between two rocks, some 1,200 feet farther downstream.

A 16-year-old boy, son of Mrs. Margaret Mullett, told rescue workers Baldridge had called for him to set him across the stream in his boat and that while he was baling water from the boat he heard a splash, then Baldridge's call for help. He said he ran toward the water but heard no further sound.

The Rescue Squad was assisted in locating the body by U. S. Corps of Engineers damtenders who reduced the flow of water from Dewey Lake through the dam and into the stream below.

The victim was a son of Mrs. Florence Bevins, of West Van Lear, and the late Tom Baldridge. Survivors include four brothers and two sisters, Glen Baldridge, of Paintsville, Earl, John Edward and Robert Baldridge, all of West Van Lear, Mrs. Eva Faye Rhoenski, Detroit, Mich., and Miss Edna Mae Baldridge, West Van Lear.

Presumably, two Republicans will be named, since the commission members whose terms are expiring are listed as of men commission. Dr. C. L. True Conservation Means Compassion For Life

By RUFUS M. REED

One of the most frequently used sayings concerning Christ's ministry was, "He had compassion on the people." Compassion is one of the finest attributes of human nature and it means "to have a deep feeling of pity or sympathy for the sufferings of others," and this applies as well to the animal kingdom, as the Indians called wild animals "our lesser brothers." They seldom killed any wild animal except when needed for food.

Some men-and boys, too-when they go to the woods with a gun seem to Presently he saw three plump squirrels have an itchy, trigger finger and have a desire to shoot almost anything that moves. whom I have been associated for some time in an official capacity (Lee is secretary of our Kentucky State Poetry Society, of which I am the treasurer) is a famed poet and author of several books, as well as being a professor in a college at Louisville. Lee tells a story recently that is almost heartrending and shows how thoughtless acts of cruelty often bring untold agony to innocent wild creatures. Lee and a young man were walking through the woods and this young fellow had a yen to shoot almost anything he might see along the way. He wanted to shoot the birds but Lee got possession of his rifle and reprimanded him sharply for wanting to kill birds. But it seems the thoughtless young man just had to shoot something that day. He had never been taught the horror of cruelty to wild life. Suddenly he turned to Lee and exclaimed: "Give me the rifle! I want to shoot a snake!" He fairly snatched the rifle out of Lee's hands, took aim at something in the weeds and fired! Then he ran on down the trail laughing, as if he had just done a deed that was fine and manly. Lee began to search in the weeds to see what kind of snake the young man had shot. But it wasn't a snake. He had shot a large toad, and Lee saw it sitting there bleeding, with the agony of death upon it. And here is where his compassion took over. Lee picked up the dying toad and held it in his hand, wishing there was some way to help top of a tall hickory and watch their bodies hurtle earthward and thud upon the ground. One morning in early September, he got his faithful shotgun and slipped into the woods to watch for squirrels. He could always tell when squirrels were "cutting on hickory nuts" by hearing the pieces of shell raining down through the leaves. Often he could hear the screech of their teeth on the hard shells as they cut through to get the sweet kernels.

He finally approached a tall, shagbark hickory and began to hear the shell In the past we have had too much wanton fragments raining down through the leaves; he then knew there were squirrels up there cutting on the nuts. He sat down, loaded up his shotgun and began to watch. cutting on the nuts high in the tree. He lifted his shotgun and drew a careful bead. Out loaded up and shot another squirrel out. He My good friend, Lee Pennington, with loaded again but couldn't see the third squirrel. "I'll soon get you, buster!" he told himself, as he remained hidden. In a few menutes he began to hear the sound of a squirrel's claws on the bark of the hickory and, looking sharply, he discovered the squirrel coming down the trunk of the tree, head first. It wasn't more than 40 feet distant from him when it stopped on the trunk and began to look around for its would-be killer. Evans thought, "If I shoot it at this close range, I'll tear its body up so badly it won't be fit to eat. So I'll just shoot its head off!"

> When he lifted his gun to shoot the squirrel, it didn't try to escape but just sat there looking at him in wonderment. As he went to press the trigger, the squirrel suddenly lifted its forepaw and put it over its face and eyes. Evans never pressed the trigger. Instead he lowered his gun and felt his hands tremble. What the squirrel had done reminded him of reading about a condemned man facing a firing squad, with a black hood over the face. "I'll never shoot another squirrel!" he vowed. He picked up the two dead ones and carried them home but, somehow, he now had no appetite for squirrel.

Far too long has there been enmity between man and nature, and it has been man's fault. Man has been a killer ever since he has taken to the woods of primeval America, where the game was so abundant. Where has been man's compassion for the wild things of nature? He has shown them

I have another good friend, G. Evans, who was once an avid killer of wild animals, but of late years has become an ardent conservationist and now refuses to kill anything unless it is a poisonous snake. His favorite sport used to be shooting squirrels during the "hickory nut season. At this time, he would load up his trusty 16gauge, take a box of shells and go to some hickory tree to "layway" the squirrels, as he said. He loved to shoot them out of the none. Today conservation without compassion is a hollow mockery.

Jesse Stuart, my longtime writer-friend, once had an experience that changed his life completely and turned him into an ardent conservationist. He has probably saved more wild life than any other man in Eastern Kentucky. Once some hunters came on his land to shoot the mourning doves nesting in the pines near the barn. Later, Mr. Stuart found one of the doves at the barn and it had been blinded by shots; it was desperately trying to reach its companions calling to it from the pines, but would fly up only to collide with some object. After that Jesse vowed there would be no more dove shooting on his farm. Here was true compassion for innocent wild life.

There is one difference between the hunting of the white man and that of the Indian: the Indian killed only when he had to do so to get food; the white man kills for sport, which seems to hark back to some savage impulse brought down from primitive ancestors.

Right-Size Shad Can Bring Summer-Long Jump Fishing

Usually when the first day of summer arrives, fishermen are busying themselves with jump fishing for white and black bass, separately or combined.

It's about this date each year that the early spawn of gizzard and threadfin shad have reached the size preferred by the foraging fish as tempting meals. This also is the time for these shad to school up in great droves to roam over the lakes by the thousands.

At the same time, the black bass and white bass are lurking in the deeper water, watching and waiting, until the shad drove comes their way. Their attack may come while the shad are far beneath the surface, or while they are near the top of the water.

If the charge occurs when the minnows are deep, the fisherman will know nothing about it. The battle between the forage fish and the forager occurs unnoticed by anyone. Usually, however, the attack will become so fierce and so intense in the depths that the shad will be forced to the upper layers of the water. The splashing dashing and darting so instigated does not escape the fisherman's eyes.

When he sees the water being churned as the feeding fish often dart completely out of the water in chasing the shad, the fisherman knows that this is what he is looking for. He knows also that a well placed lure, in the midst of this aggravated water, will more than likely yield a good black or white bass.

Once the jumps have been detected, the fisherman should maneuver his boat until he is within about 30 yards of the churning water, cut off his motor and start casting. The lure should be allowed to sink just a bit beyond the jumps and then retrieved quickly right through the area where the action is.

The bothered bass; bent on a bountiful meal, will attack anything that resembles a shad, especially a crippled one. Perhaps, he figures to have an easier time catching a "meal" that is incapacitated. The alert fisherman will not bother to "play" his catch any more than is absolutely necessary but will reel him in speedily so he may get in another cast as quickly as possible.

This frenzied action will occur over and over and continuously for as many as 30 minutes. Then the shad may submerge and with them will go the feeding bass. The fisherman can then wait, poised and ready for another run. As soon as he sees the riffling waters the dash will be on to this area for a repeat performance.

New Club Officers Officially Installed

Wayland, Ky .- The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club recently installed its officers for the new club year following a breakfast at the home of Mrs. Earl Castle, Estill.

"This is the time when we feel the spirit of re-dedication, when we renew our loyalties and once again pledge our support," commented Mrs. J. C. Wells, past president of the club, as she conducted the installation. "These officers standing shoulder to shoulder, as they appear before you, symbolize the way they will work together, for club work is truly the finest kind of partnership. In this togetherness lies our great power for accomplishment," she said.

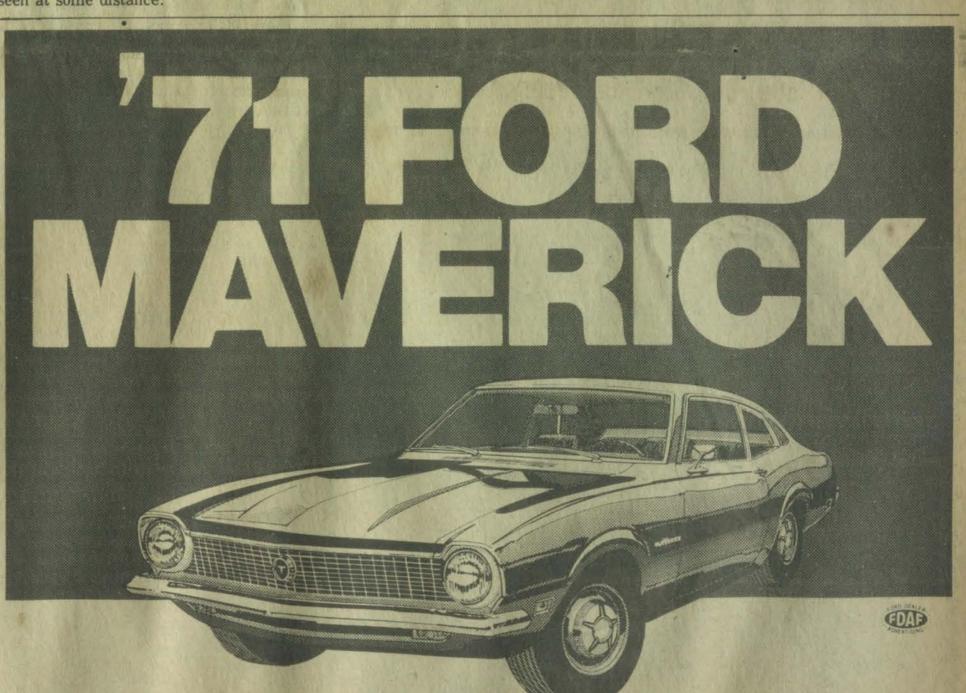

Officers installed by Mrs. Wells, using the insignia of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, were: Treasurer, Mrs. J. T. Spillman; recording secretary, Mrs. Don Hughes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Orville Duff; second vice-president, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff; first vice-president, Mrs. S. M. Martin; president, Mrs. Earl Castle. A silver tray was presented to Mrs. Charles R. Martin, who has moved from were discussed, including the Red Cross and the annual $10 award given by the club to a senior at both Wayland and Garrett high shcools.

Those present were: Mrs. B. R. Stapleton and Mrs. Noah D. Howard, guests, and Mrs. M. M. Collins, Mrs. Maud Hatcher, Mrs. Oula Coburn, Mrs. Alice Hornsby, Mrs. Rudolph Spencer, Mrs. Don Hughes, Mrs. Patricia Duff, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff, Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. Marie Mullins, Mrs. Jackie Lawson, Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. J. T. Spillman, Mrs. Nancy Tackett, Mrs. Margaret Thiessen, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. Earl Castle, and Mrs. Charles R. Martin, members.

Jump fishing usually is best in the early morning and late afternoon and often occurs over the "flats," or that area of the lake where the water is not too deep. A quiet, windless day is preferable. On a rough water surface it is most difficult to sight the "jumps," although on some occasions, when the fish are coming completely out of the water, such action may be seen at some distance.

Domed Cities or Doomed Cities?

Atmospheric Sciences Research Center has predicted that as many as 10,000 persons will in 1980, nine years from this date, die in an air pollution disaster in a metropolitan center of this country.

The same research center has predicted that by 1990 — only 19 years hence — the United States will have domed cities, that the residents of these cities will wear masks when they leave the security of that under-glass existence, and that when they do venture outside it will be into a world devoid of all animal and plant life.

That's the nightmare of air pollution.

From the moment that a raindrop reaches the earth from its place of purification in the airy spaces above, it becomes contaminated. Human excrement, industrial wastes, chemicals, components of a soil saturated with poisons, extend beyond the city, or even the village. Streams, lakes, even the oceans, are dying. Seafoods contaminated by certain substances — mercury, for one already are unsafe for human consumption. The delicate balance of nature is disturbed and, many believe, is nearing the point of collapse.

That is water pollution and its inherent horrors.

On the hopeful side is the possibility that a massive effort to stay the hand of the Destroyer may be mounted. Perhaps as many billions as have been spent on Vietnam can clear the air and clean the water again.

But will we keep them clean?

Transportation — mainly, motor vehicles — is the great air pollutant. According to data relased by the federal government, 86 million tons of pollution a year are created by this portion of modern America. Industry is the No. 2 polluter with 25 million tons of impurifies cast into the atmosphere every year. Power plants come next with 20 million tons, and so on.

Something can be done — if people care enough to pay the price.

Crankcase exhausts can be piped back into the motors of cars and trucks and reburned, but crankcase and engine changes necessary will add $100 or more to the cost of that new car.

Tailpipe exhausts can be whipped, we are told, by some 90 changes in the engine, carburetor and distributor of the vehicle. But that will add another $200, or more, to the price tag.

High octane gasoline can be produced without lead, and lead is the villain in motor vehicle pollution. But this gasoline will cost the car-owner two cents a gallon more and get him there no faster.

Low-sulphur coal took the smoke out of the "Smoky City," Pittsburgh, and it will help elsewhere. But that will add to heat and power bills.

The phosphorus and nitrogen that go into those detergents we use can be eliminated. But you hit a billion-dollar industry there, and there are jobs to be considered, payrolls to be cherished. These detergents create algae, the algae decomposes, uses up oxygen in the water and destroys its capability of supporting marine life.

Pesticides permeate the soil, run off into streams, kill fish, threaten birds and other wildlife with extinction. Even in the distant Arctic DDT is present in penguins these days. The shells of the eggs of wildfowl become so thin because of DDT that they cannot be hatched. This way lies extinction of a wonderful world that we have been lucky enough to have. But to toss aside the pesticides will make control of insects and other pests more difficult. High food bills will become higher.

We have danced to a crazy tune, and now it's time to pay the fiddler — and we will, in one way or another, pay. Will we pay the price, the high price of a livable environment, or will we dance a little longer till there's neither air nor water enough to keep us going?

Tourism, Recreation Hope of Area Told by UK Agriculture Dean

Education and Labor last week by Dr. Charles E. Barnhart, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Testifying during a committee hearing at the request of Representative Carl D. Perkins, Barnhart said:

"Historically, Appalachia has had a low tax-base, and this is reflected in the educational and recreational facilities and services in the area." To overcome this long standing condition and to provide job opportunities for the unemployed and partly unemployed, Barnhart said, "a north-south four lane highway through the area is needed—one that would connect intra-state routes to the north and northwest with I-81, near Bristol, Virginia."

"The 86 per cent increase in receipts of Kentucky business firms that serve travelers and tourists is proof that Kentucky mountains, lakes, streams and forests are popular vacation spots; but tourism lags behind because of the inaccessibility of this mountain area."

"If Eastern Kentucky is developed into a playground for Midwesterners, businesses and job opportunities would follow.

Mr. Alan Blakeman, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Mr. Ralph W. Collins and Mr. Eddie Gearhard, Augusta; Mr. Paul Long, La Grange, and Dr. Steve Combs, brother of the bride, Lexington.

The church was decorated with urns of white roses, spiral candelabra and fresh palm trees. The aisles were decorated with streamers of candlelight ribbon centered with white roses.

A reception was held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. The bride's table carried out the theme of the wedding with a centerpiece of white roses, daisies, and baby's breath. The guest table was also decorated with off-white roses, daisies, and baby's breath with variegated foliage. Assisting were Mrs. Chet Okopski, Miss Barbara Rowe, Miss Mary Nunnery, Prestonsburg; Miss Susan Bryson, Cincinnati, Ohio; Miss Sylvia Burke, Lookout Lexington. Mrs. Steve Liming, Cincinnati, The attendants wore floor-length gowns and Miss Sally Shearer, Louisville, kept the guest book. Misses Vanessa Lynn Howard, Leigh Ann Nunnery and Nancy Godsey distributed rice bags among the guests. After a wedding trip to Virginia Beach

A blueprint for improving economic camp sites would be needed to serve those conditions in Eastern Kentucky was who come to Eastern Kentucky to enjoy its presented to the House Committee on mountains, caverns, streams, canyons, and lakes."

> In addition to pointing out the economic aid that tourism and recreation would bring Eastern Kentucky, Barnhart said, "A comprehensive, long range development plan is needed. It should include secondary as well as primary roads, which make it easy for a vacationer to get to scenic and historical spots. This plan should also include:

- 1. Modern waste disposal systems.
- 2. The expansion of existing water systems and new ones.

3. Standards for new developments and ordinances to guide and direct the use of land and other resources.

4. The reclamation of strip mined areas." "Moving people out of Eastern Kentucky and other low-income areas is not the solution. Job opportunities, a larger taxbase, more houses, and more businesses within the area is the tonic Eastern Kentucky needs."

Mrs. Cecil Honored By Boldman Church

Sunday, June 6, was declared "Mae Cecil Day" at the Boldman Free Will Baptist Church. The occasion was the idea of Sunday School superintendent, Johnny Childers, and his wife, Irene, and was to commemorate Mrs. Cecil's 52 years of service as a Sunday school teacher.

During the hour of ceremonies in her honor, Mrs. Cecil received a carnation corsage from members of her family and a vase of roses from a Pikeville florist. She also received many gifts from members of the church and past members of her Sunday School classes. It was noted that about 50 persons who had been taught by Mrs. Cecil were present for the occasion, including many of the parents of present class members.

Mrs. Cecil, who is the wife of Lee Cecil, of Harold, at 72 is the oldest active member of her church. She has been a Christian since the age of 10. She suffered a light stroke in May from which she has not fully recovered, but says that she knows it is because God has blessed her that she is still able to attend church and teach her class. The final event of the morning was a Bible program presented for those present by Mrs. Cecil and her class members, ranging in age from 5 to 10.

IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH

The recent Democratic gubernatorial primary in which Wendell Ford was chosen as the nominee demonstrated that democracy works in Kentucky. It was a hard-fought campaign by both sides, but there was little bitterness or rancor and both victor and loser evinced qualities of gentlemanly statesmanship, one by being magnaminous in victory, the other by accepting the results with serenity as the voice of the people.

Floyd County gave Bert Combs a huge majority, and the leaders on that side can be justifiably proud of their efforts. The voters for Combs did not disbelieve in Wendell Ford, rather, they believed Combs would serve Kentucky better. The voters for Ford in this county believed in the Lieutenant-Governor and were convinced he would bring progress to the state. That both sides could engage in a hard-fought campaign and emerge united behind the victor is evidence, indeed, that democracy works in Kentucky.

Big Sandy Historical Society Has First Meeting in Virginia

The first meeting of the Big Sandy Valley High School, Paintsville, who are currently Historical Society to be held in Virginia met recutly at Breaks Interstate Park. Mrs. Bonnie S. Ball, a vice-president of the organization from Haysi, Va., welcomed the group to the Old Dominion. The brief business session was under the direction of the president, Wallace J. Williamson, III, of Ashland.

Emory L. Hamilton, Wise county, Virginia historian and genealogist, the main speaker, was introduced by Henry P. Scalf, of Stanville, Prof. Hamilton's address was a detailed account of the frontier forts in Southwest Virginia that attempted to prevent Indian raids by way of the Big Sandy and Kanawha Rivers and their various tributaries. He emphasized that the main Indians raids into the Clinch and Holston valleys came through Eastern Kentucky, from the Indian villages along the Scioto River. By use of a large map, he located the historic places about which he spoke, including all the forts, the Wilderness Road, Cumberland Gap, Pound Gap, and the headstreams of the Tug, Louisa, Russell, Pound and Dry Forks of Big Sandy.

The speaker told an interesting story about the Daniel Boone family at Moore's Fort in 1774. The men of the Fort garrison, according to Hamilton, had become lazy and careless in guarding the fort against Indian attacks. Mrs. Boone and Mrs. Hannah Carr and some other women of the fort loaded their guns lightly, went out from the fort, shut the gates and shot their guns in rapid succession like the Indians. The men all scrambled for the fort, but, finding the gates shut, none could get in, except one young man who managed to climb over the stockade wall. So great was their consternation that some of the men ran through the pond in front of the fort. After they were finally let inside the gates, the men were so angry some of them wanted to have the women whipped.

Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Williamson both had words of praise for the Kentucky Young Historians from Johnson Central Things are seldom what they seem.

Big cars often pose as big cars, when they're really small cors.

For instance, notice how much bigger the big car seems than the Volkswagen Squareback Sedan.

Then count the number of suitcases it can take on: only 12.

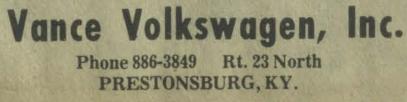

Now, notice how small the Squareback seems to be.

Then count the number of suitcases it can take on: 16.

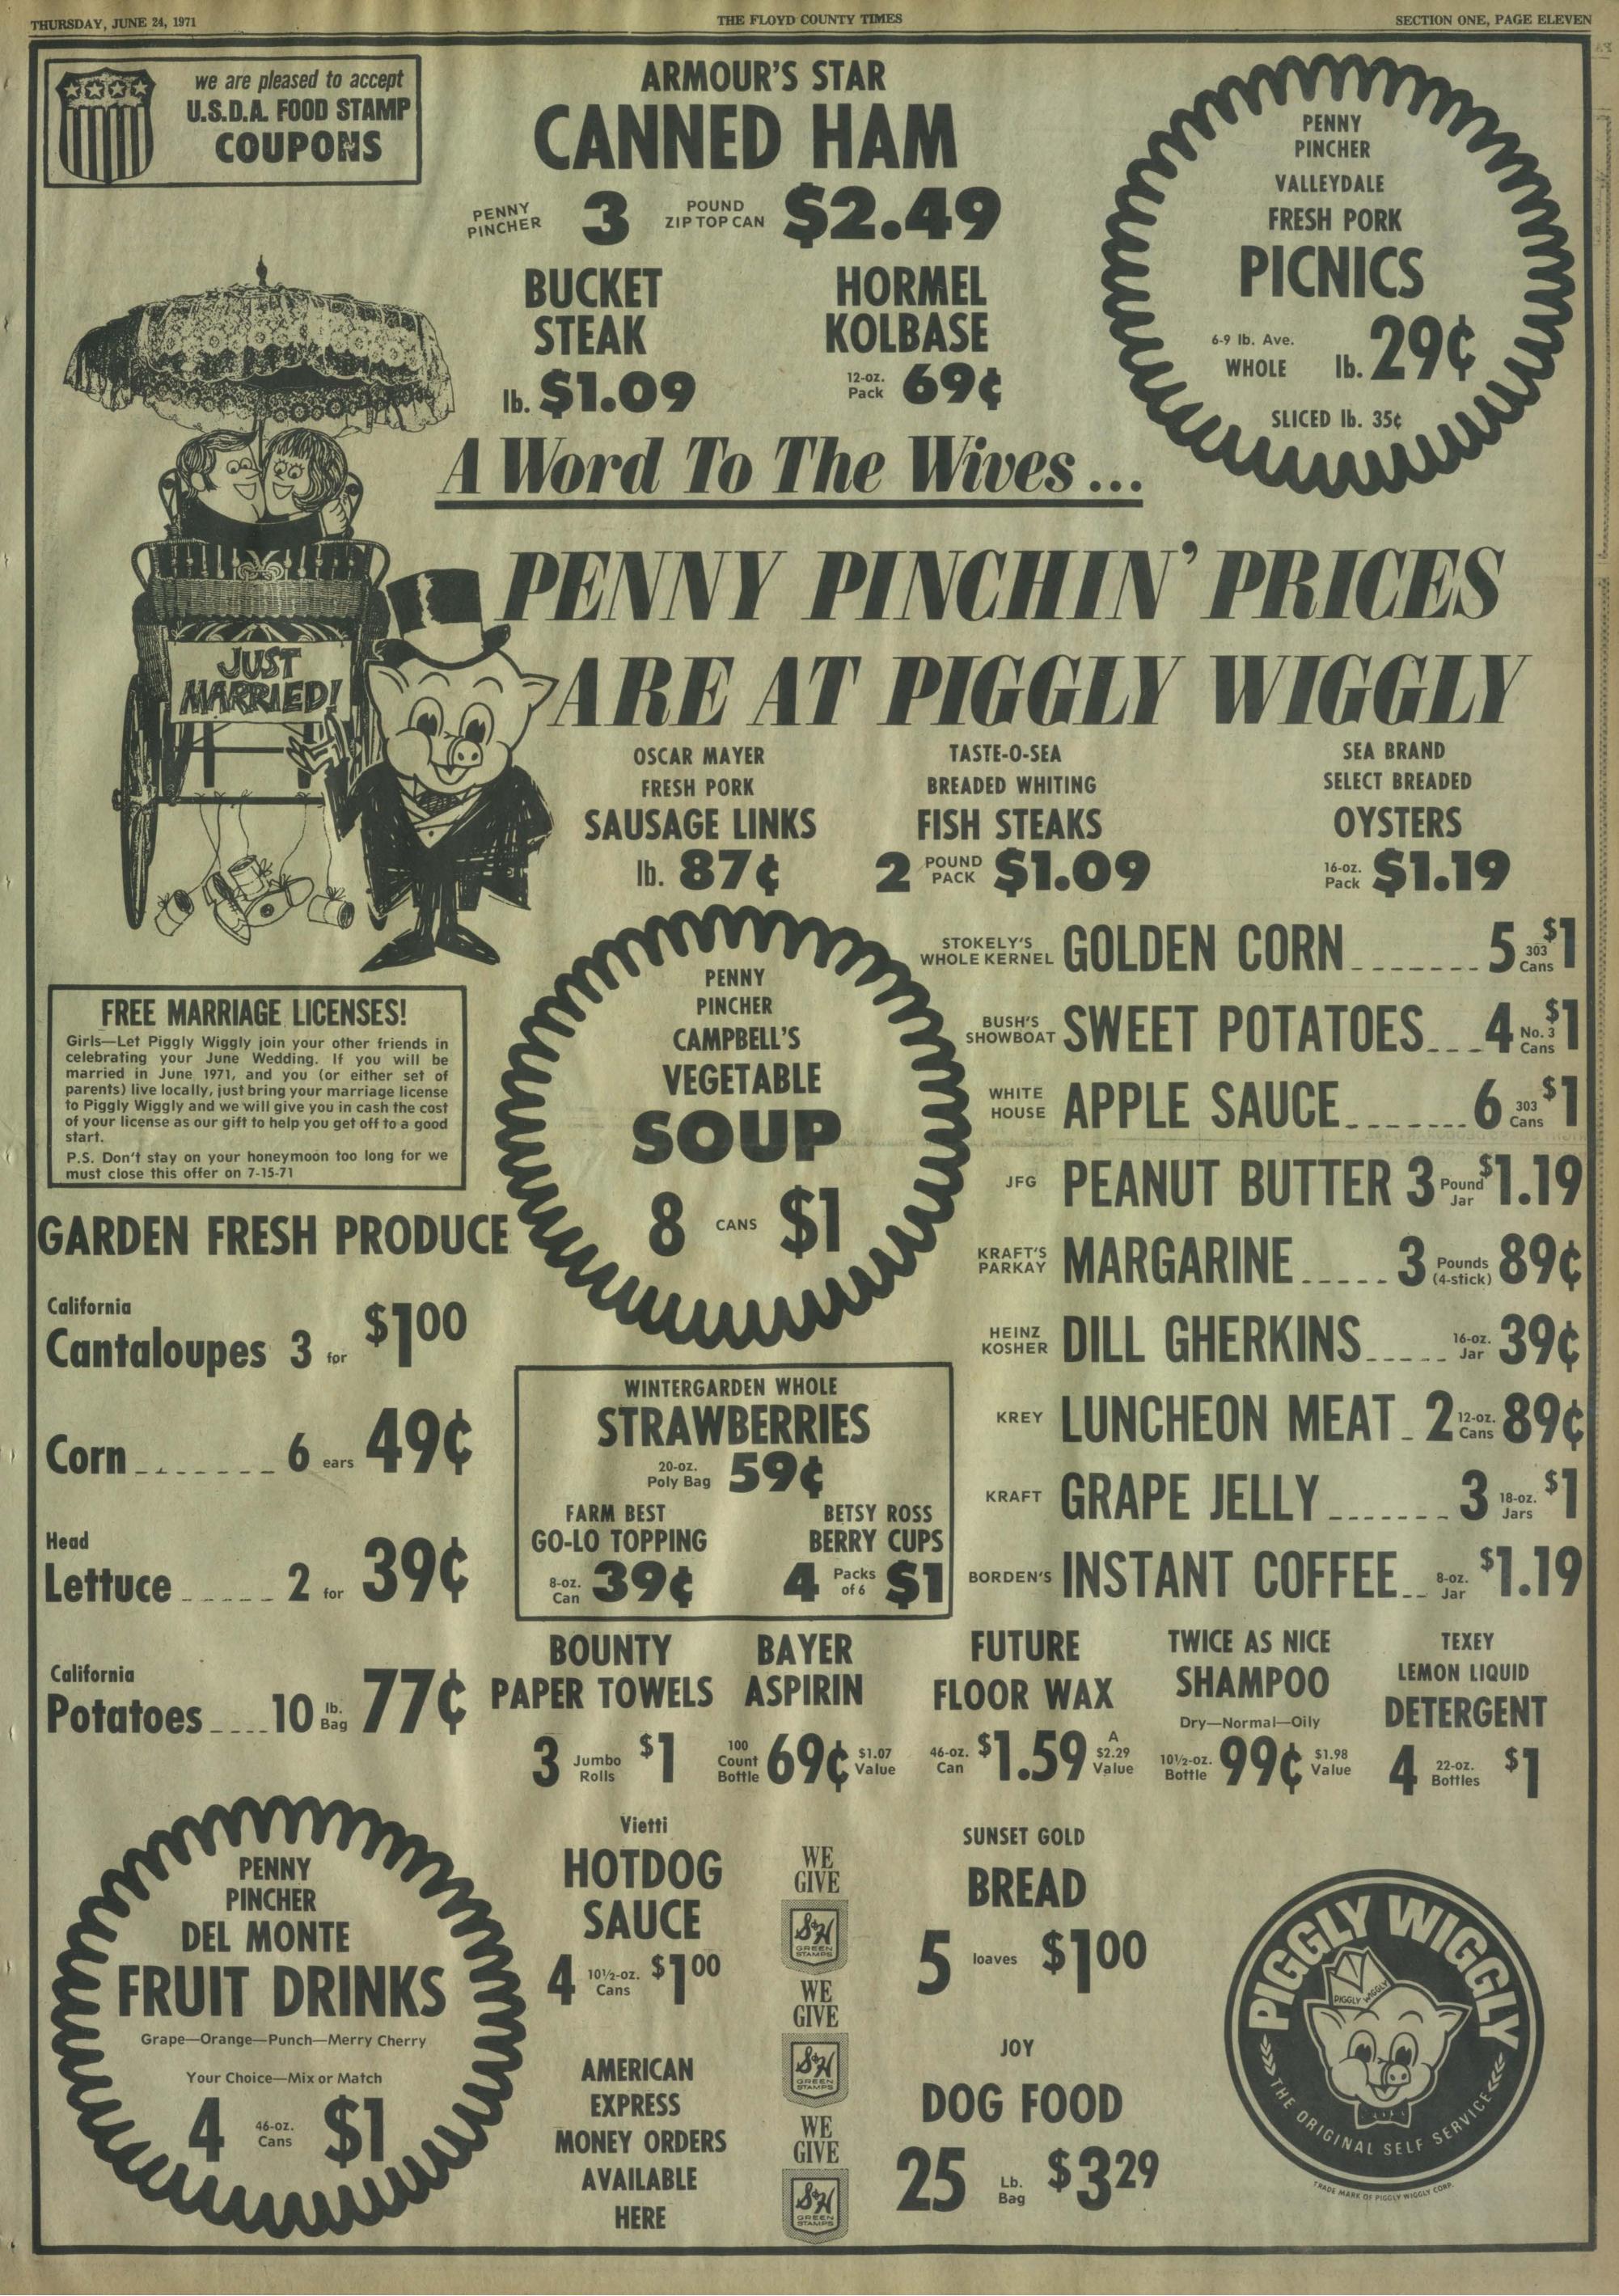

That's because the Squareback has 32.8 cubic feet of carrying space. Which is one and a half times as much as that of the largest sedan trunk.

Of course, if you really have a lot to carry you can always fold down the Squareback's rear seat. Then you'll have more than twice as much carrying space as the largest sedan trunk.

So which would you rather have -a sedan that looks like a big bully but really is a 12-sulitcase weakling? Or a little fella who's really a 16suitcase giant?

Jenny Wiley Reading Council Formed at Recent Meeting

By MARIE D. STUMBO

For some time it has been the aspiration of a local group of persons who are sincerely concerned about reading and its relative components to form a local chapter of the International Reading Association. This desire was realized recently when Dr. William C. Hampton, president of the state council of LRA and head of the reading laboratory at Morehead State University, met with a group of interested individuals at the Clark elementary school to help organize a local chapter of IRA.

The new organization known as the Jenny Wiley Council of International Reading Association, was formed to include professional persons who are concerned with the improvement in reading and in teaching procedures from Pike, Floyd, Knott, Martin, and Magoffin counties.

The following officers were elected: President, Dr. Catherine Shrewsbury; president-elect, Bertha Ratliff; secretary, Nadine Hicks; treasurer, Delphia Hicks. Maytown high school was chosen as the location for the future called meeting for the charter presentation. The IRA members from Floyd county who were active in the Appalachia Council of IRA at Morehead Williams, president of the Second had to be relased from that chapter before the local group could receive their charter. The purposes of the council are:

1. To encourage the study of reading problems.

2. To stimulate and promote research in all areas of reading.

3. To study the various factors that influence reading progress.

4. To assist in the development of more adequate teacher-training programs.

5. To publish results of pertinent and significant investigations and practies.

6. To disseminate knowledge helpful in the solution of problems related to reading, 7. To promote mutual understanding and cooperative work among educators.

8. To sponsor conferences and meetings planned to implement the purposes of the council and of the state and national associations.

The second general meeting was held June 8 at Prestonsburg Community College. Much work, including work on the program for the year, was accomplished at this meeting. An executive board and committees were established. The executive board members are Dr. Catherine Shrewsbury, Bertha Ratliff, Nadine Hicks, Delphia Hicks, Marie D. Stumbo, Pam Wolford, and Fronzo D. Akers. Members of the Publicity Committee are Marie D. Stumbo, chairman, Myrtle Ratliff, and Sara Laven; Committee on Studies and Research-Fronzo D. Akers, chairman, Bertha Ratliff, and Nadine Hicks; Organization Committee-Pam Wohlford, chairman, and Audrey S. Gunell; Program Committee-Bertha Ratliff, chairman, Doris Robinson, and Violet Allen; Nominating Committee-Virginia Goble, chairman, and June Stephens; Rules Committee-Leonard J. Allen, chairman, Delphia Hicks, and Nadine Hicks. Goldia Short was chosen parliamentarian.

An invitation is extended to all classroom teachers, librarians. teacher aides, English teachers, reading consultants, school administrators, and other persons who are interested in reading from Pike, Floyd, Knott, Martin, and Magoffin counties to join the Jenny Wiley Council of IRA, the youngest in Kentucky.

The next meeting will be called meeting at Maytown high school for the presentation of the charter.

Nonetheless, according to the 1969 of the Interior, Kentucky in '69 was the 12th largest gas producing state in the nation, with a marketed production of some 81,304 wellhead value of 25.1c per mcf. That translates into nearly $21 million, for 1969

The same source reports that as of December 31, 1969, there were 6,413 producing gas wells in Kentucky. It is most likely that subsequent figures will reveal a great increase in this number. And the bulk of that increase will probably be from State figures for oil production provide a glimpse into the increasing importance of eastern Kentucky in the oil and gas field.

Again, latest figures are only for 1969. But in that year, a total of 12,923,800 barrels

More interesting, however, are the figures for Letcher county. In one year, from 1968 to 1969, oil production more than doubled, going from 112,792 to 257,792

Incidentally, the federal Mineral Report indicates that Kentucky oil brought a relatively high price on the national market

All told, the figures demonstrate a quickly developing oil and gas industry in Kentucky. Figures for 1969 do show that the state is far from being as productive as other leading fuel (other than coal) states.

But in relative terms, Kentucky is just

And a big chunk of that beginning is right

A current television commercial by the Columbia Gas System, one of the larger gas firms, shows a beautiful Appalachian mountain ridge. An announcer informs us that in order to meet the supply demands of the cities (like New York and Chicago), the company is going back to America's original frontier. The ad tells of plans to drill wells "miles deep" in the mountain figures are misleading.

What was once a flurry of exploratory figures are for the year 1969. Since the bulk drillings has become a system of pipelines of the current movement of the larger oil and expensive wells drawing and transporting oil, gas or both out of eastern Kentucky. An ever-increasing number of oil and gas companies, some of them Minerals Yearbook of the U.S. Department representing the giants of the fuel industry, have found in Appalachia a vast, and mostly untapped, fuel bonanza.

Last year a geologist with the Kentucky mcf. (million cubic feet), at an average Geological Survey told The Mountain Eagle that the oil and gas deposits here are "of the same order as those in the Louisiana-Texas Gulf Coast" region. Others in and out of the business have agreed with that immensely significant statement. But still, many have challenged the notion that some mineral other than coal might become the region's king.

Not among the doubters, however, are some very key parties. Take, for example, J. T. Brown. He is president of the Equitable Gas System, the Pittsburgh, Pa., based company which has extensive gas and oil interests in eastern Kentucky, including Letcher County. In the 1970 Annual Report to his firm's stockholders, Mr. Brown mentioned an agreement between his firm and other companies "to explore the gas producing potential from deep horizons of the Company's acreage in Kentucky." The exploratory well will be drilled to about 12,500 feet, "at an estimated cost of between $550,000 and $650,000." Signal Oil and Gas, a large Texas-based firm, "has the major participating interest."

The significance of this well, as Brown notes, is that Equitable's "approximately 1,000,000 in eastern Kentucky have never been drilled to this contemplated depth." He added that "we are looking forward with interest to the results."

According to news reports last week, Signal has already drilled a well some 12,000 feet-more than two miles-in Pike county.

If the explorers' predictions are correct and all signs now point that way-the cap will literally come off eastern Kentucky's oil and gas pools. Expert opinion is that an 1800 foot thick deposit of high-quality petroleum lies at about 22,000 feet. No wells have yet approached that depth; however, they haven't had to. Strikes at more accessible levels have been enough to keep the pipelines filled. Although gas and oil come together, most of the drilling in Letcher county so far has concentrated on gas. One well in the lower end of the county is reportedly producing a flow of 40,000,000 cubic feet. And it's a relatively shallow well. It's extremely difficult to learn accurately just how much natural gas is being taken out of this region. The state Department of Mines and Minerals has no figures on natural or liquid gas production, "as these figures are not required to be reported to the Commonwealth of Kentucky," according to the Department. Thus it becomes necessary to look for federal reports of gas production. The problem is that the latest available

Letcher Countians Make Plans For Vast Tourism Complex

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

the rediscovery of a vast cave complex in place. the mountains here is still a matter for conjecture. But it has excited the College of Agriculture Cooperative Eximagination of tourism and recreational developers everywhere.

There is, however, one thing certain: Local people are already making plans to see that the situation does not get out of hand. They don't want their region exploited solely for the benefit of outside interests. They want the natural beauty of the area preserved and not turned into a gaudy maze of tourist traps. Local leaders, who recognize the tourism and recreational potential of the caves and other natural attractions of the area, are making arrangements to see that local people

WHITESBURG, KY .-- The final result of benefit from any development that may take

With the assistance of Alvin Webb, UK tension specialist in public affairs, the Letcher County Planning Commission is setting up a non-profit organization with the state to assure that all the people of Letcher county benefit from the development.

The articles of this corporation provide that all outside interests privileged by franchise to come in and start developments shall be obliged to hire local people in all possible positions. The articles also provide for all profits above expenses of doing business by these corporations to be returned to satisfy the educational and social needs of the people of the county. The local organization intends to provide adequate business and legal advice to local businesses related to tourism and recreation.

Raymond Love, local director of the federally-sponsored National Youth Corps., rediscovered the caves last August. He realized that they were a potential tourist attraction, and is pleased by the nationwide publicity following the rediscovery.

Love does not envision just a tourism complex centered around the caves but a vast recreational empire taking in other attractions in the immediate area-like Lilly's Wcods, Jefferson National Forest, Carr's Fork Reservoir, Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come and Buckhorn State Parks. Love believes that, to be a success, all these attractions must be combined into one unit because, however vast and interesting, the caves alone will not attract and hold the attention of enough people to make the project a complete success.

"We do not want gaudiness," Love said. "Rather, we want a natural beauty complex and to keep that natural beauty intact."

This area has much to offer in the way of spectacular natural beauty-myriad forms of wildlife and wildflowers. It has high cliffs and mountains, miles of free-flowing streams, numerous scenic waterfalls, and a world of trees and wilderness areas, all just waiting for the hiker, naturalist, and lover of the outdoors. It is a land also, as local historian Frank Majority pointed out, rich in pioneer and Indian lore and history.

Wildlife Chief To Retire, July 1

MINOR CLARK

Minor Clark announced last week he will resign as commissioner of the state Department of Fish and Wildlife Resour- 1971 totaled 11,220 as compared with a ces, effective July 1, after 13 years and one March 1970 total of 11,580. month at that post.

The resignation, because of ill health, was contained in a letter to commission chairman, Dr. Robert Webb.

J. T. Cox, formerly assistant commissioner, will serve as interim commissioner until the post can be permanently filled.

Clark served longer than any other man at the wildlife post. He was involved in fish and wildlife work for 35 years, having joined the state agency in 1936. In 1940 he was placed in charge of the department's Fisheries section, and after a Navy hitch returned to become superintendent of Fisheries in 1946.

Clark was promoted to assistant commissioner in 1952 and served at that post until 1958. He became acting commissioner during the illness of Commissioner Earl Wallace, and was appointed commissioner in August, 1958.

A native of Shelby County, Clark graduated from Eastern Kentucky State College and did graduate work at Western Kentucky State College and the University of Kentucky. He taught school in Shelby County before joining the state.

Clark said ill health is the sole reason for his resignation and that he will be available at all times to serve the department in any manner possible.

Road Deaths Drop Noted in Kentucky

According to a recently released study by the National Safety Council, Kentucky ranked 21st among 32 states nationwide reporting a drop in traffic deaths during the first three months of 1971.

The study showed Kentucky's fatality rate to be seven per cent below the total reported for the same period just one year earlier. Delaware, with a 64 per cent reduction, led the list of all states credited with a declining death rate.

Among six states neighboring Kentucky, only Ohio with an 11 per cent decline bettered the figure attributed to the Bluegrass State. Virginia reported a drop of four per cent while an increased number of deaths were reported for Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Tennessee. Figures from West Virginia were incomplete.

Nationwide, the number of motor vehicle deaths reported during the first quarter

The Times has been asked to explain that the similarity of names has caused three Floyd countians embarrassment following arrests of others. The Randall and Terry Akers listed on driving offenses are not the Akers brothers who reside at Bevinsville, and the Jo Clark listed on the same type of charge is not the young man of the same name who resides at Allen, it is pointed out.

'Out Of The Shadows'-A View Of Alcoholism

The nation's number one health problem-surpassing heart disease, cancer and drug addiction-is judged by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to be alcoholism. Estimates are that between six and nine million persons, two for every city block in America, suffer from this disease.

The ABC News special, "Alcoholism: Out of the Shadows," Saturday, June 26, 4-5 p.m., provides a first-of-its-kind look at this problem as it affects the lives of the vast majority of those afflicted, the family-type, middle-class, often young people whose lives have been nearly destroyed by this progressive disease.

Hosted by ABC News special correspondent Frank Reynolds' and written and produced by James Benjamin, the program was filmed principally in Rochester, N. Y. It focuses on the candid revelations, of a group of now-sober alcoholics who agreed to appear on the program in the hope that their stories might help others to find help as they did.

In a unique television format, these several individuals will not be shown in the shadow or "back-of-the-head" shots most often employed in dealing with such personal problems, but will face the cameras and relate their experiences openly.

The city of Rochester was selected for "Alcoholism: Out of the Shadows," for two major reasons. It is a fairly typical middlesized American city, and it has adopted a progressive attitude toward alcoholism-to reach alcoholics early-which has resulted in successful treatment for numerous alcoholics, many of them in their twenties and thirties.
