

11,000 More In District To Benefit Perkins Says After New Black Lung Act Approved by Nixon

Congressman Carl D. Perkins this week hailed the signing of the Black Lung Benefits Bill as a victory for justice to the American coal miner.

The measure will extend benefits to some 136,000 coal miners who suffer from pneumoconiosis (black lung), or to their surviving widows and dependent orphans.

Approximately 11,000 claims from Perkins' Seventh district have already been approved under the original Black Lung legislation he piloted to passage in 1969. It is believed that the new legislation he sponsored will result in the approval of at least that many more in the district.

Amid reports that some federal administrative agencies and advisers were urging the President to veto the legislation, Perkins last week sent a personal message to the President, urging that he sign it. The Congressman told the President that simple justice to the suffering coal miners and their families demanded that the legislation become law.

Perkins has been advised by the Social Security Administration that every miner's or widow's claim that has previously been denied will be returned automatically to the Bureau of Disability Determination for review under the new regulations. A letter will be sent by Social Security to each

No Diabetes Trace Found in Testing Of 1515 Students

Charles Clark, superintendent of Floyd schools, released to The Times Monday the summary of an effort to screen and detect early signs of diabetes in the school population. This work was undertaken by the Title I nurses of the Floyd County Board to improve health services for school children.

Ray Brackett, director of Title I, stated that 1,515 second and sixth grade students were checked and that there were no positive signs of diabetes found in children at these grade levels.

"Next year we shall select two more grades for this screening," said Mr. Clark.

The screening was conducted by Mrs. Elmata Allen and Mrs. Judith Hamm, both registered nurses of the Title I Program of the Floyd County Board. The nurses were assisted by Mrs. Charlotte Stumbo, aide, and were under the direct medical supervision of Dr. R. L. Hall, county health doctor.

Right To Read Study Slated

The Clark elementary school will hold "open house" Thursday evening at 7 to inform the community of the goals of its recently awarded Right to Read program.

An in-depth study and assessment of the school was recently completed, and a program, written in general terms, has been submitted to the Office of Education in Washington.

It is hoped that each home with school-age children will be represented at the meeting, John K. Pitts, principal said. He indicated that the new program may well depend upon how well parents respond to becoming involved in the activities at school. Many activities will be directly related to how and what parents can do to extend the concepts the child has learned at school.

"We hope we will be able to assist parents in this, but they must first become aware of some of the basic things we are about to attempt in the new program," Mr. Pitts said.

Representatives from the U. S. Office of Education, state and local boards of education, and the International Reading Association will be present to answer questions and talk to parents about the new program.

All parents are urged to attend this important meeting.

West Prestonsburg Train Wreck Scene

One of 11 cars which derailed Sunday morning at West Prestonsburg careened into the corner of the old station structure, causing $2,000 damage. The total damage is expected to exceed $100,000.

Clubs Plan Cleanup Locally; Work in Left Beaver Lauded

The Prestonsburg Woman's Club and Homemakers Clubs are joining forces in what they hope will be a community-wide cleanup here, it was announced this week.

Attention will be centered on vacant lots which have been permitted to grow up in weeds and to become otherwise cluttered, but the effort will also seek a cleanup of all other properties, it was said.

The help of Boy and Girl Scouts will be enlisted, and the clubs have already been assured of the cooperation of the city and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The example of Weeksbury as a clean community was cited here this week. Magistrate Eddie Caudill described it as "the cleanest town in Floyd county." The Community Development Club there is headed by a teacher, Mrs. Bradford, and Ed Gibson, a retired miner, is a leader in its work.

Magistrate Caudill said Left Beaver Creek has three private collectors of garbage and other waste materials who are doing a good job. The problem of having a place to dump what is collected remains, however. He said that last week-end women of the Hi Hat Homemakers Club and children cleared Clear Creek of its last can.

"But we counted seven new beer cans, Monday morning," he added. Caudill said he has promised those interested in cleanup to fine every person caught contributing to the litter and that he expects to keep that promise.

I OFFER HELP

The folks at the Information Center here are optimists. They have had a waste can taken from the premises three times, and instead of accusing somebody of entertaining a bit of larceny in his heart, they are hopeful that the act reflects an interest in getting a start on a garbage disposal project. I hereby volunteer a cure to the situation. If they will accept with my compliments a can dedicated to the same purpose, but which has most of the bottom out, there'll be no more thievery. I can't give this specimen away or find a place to throw it.

CORN, NOT "CAWN"

This yarn has lurked around some where in the subconscious more than a year, and it required the help of "Huck" Francis for me to get it in proper order again.

It has to do with the young preacher who was called for a trial sermon at a church which was in need of a pastor. He showed up, preached the best sermon in his repertoire and then had lunch with the deacons. Then he went home and waited and waited for word that never came.

Core Drilling May Begin Soon At Emma Site

Miss Flo Weddington, moving spirit in the drive for a new bridge to span the Big Sandy river at Emma, said Monday she was told last Friday by Charles G. Cook, director of the Division of Bridges, Kentucky Department of Highways, that the work order issued to Kroboth Engineers, of Lexington, means that core drilling at the bridge site will begin soon.

Additional survey work also remains to be done. Miss Weddington said some of the delay on the project has resulted from the continued high river stage this spring. Earlier in the year, groundbreaking was promised this month.

The campaign to replace the present 45-year-old suspension bridge with a modern span of concrete and steel was launched by Miss Weddington 16 months ago.

"The survival of the community depends on this new bridge," Miss Weddington said. "I only hope the present bridge will last till a new one is ready for use."

The present bridge is considered unfit for motor traffic.

Five Arrested In Booze Raids Over Week-End

Four whiskey raids and the capture of a man who was accused as a transporter of intoxicants featured activities of peace officers over the week-end.

Arrest of Joe Hall, Jr. last Friday on the transporting charge by Deputy Sheriffs Howell and Hamilton netted 13 cases of beer, but a heavier haul was made by ABC Agent Arvel Nelson and Prestonsburg police in a raid early Saturday evening on the VFW Club here where 443 cans of beer were taken. Bill Spradlin was arrested as operator of the club and his trial is scheduled in police court here.

A raid last Friday by State Troopers A. C. Cantrell and Dennie Williams and ABC Agent Nelson on the premises of James "Red" Slone, at "Winchester," near here, netted 198 cans of beer, 11 half-pints of whiskey and four half-pints of vodka. The same officers later in the day raided the premises of Joe Lykins, near Harold, and arrested Johnny Watson on a possession charge after they had confiscated 176 cans of beer and three half-pints of whiskey. Both Slone and Watson are slated for trial in quarterly court.

Sheriff Frank Leslie also reported the arrest of Tom Hall on Toler Creek and the confiscation of one and a half cases of beer.

Perkins Speaker Here As 90 Are Graduated

Addressing a graduating class of 90 at the seventh annual commencement exercises of Prestonsburg Community College, May 14, Congressman Carl D. Perkins pointed out that more than 3,000 students of the area have benefitted from the college, and without it and the financial aid provided many of these would not have been able to attend college.

He also reflected on the decreasing dropout rate with students in Eastern Kentucky, attributing this improvement to increased educational opportunities offered the young.

The speaker also commented on current road construction in Eastern Kentucky and pointed to the need of a new KY 80 between Allen and Hazard as a link connecting US 23 and KY 15.

Following Congressman Perkins' address, several faculty members and students were recognized and given awards. Each year the students at Prestonsburg Community College select an instructor to receive the Great Teacher Award, and this year Dr. Kenneth Blick was the recipient of the award. Robert Branham, president of the Student Congress, presented the award, pointing out that Dr. Blick was selected because of his effectiveness in classroom presentation, his fairness towards all students, his genuine concern for students both in and out of the classroom, his friendly warm personality, and his enthusiasm for life.

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, recognized Mrs. Laura Weddle for serving as a division chairman of the English Department for the past six years.

Burl Wells Spurlock, representing the family of the late Burl Spurlock, was presented an award for the service that had been given to the college by Mr. Spurlock. Mr. Spurlock had served on the advisory board and had been instrumental in the development of the college.

Rail Wreck Loss Above $100,000.00 11-Car Derailment Here Last Sunday Under Investigation

Damage in excess of $100,000 resulted at West Prestonsburg Sunday morning when 11 cars of an 82-car freight train derailed, ripping up 120 yards of the main railway and sidetrack and spilling the contents of some of the cars along the tracks and into the yard of a nearby resident.

Cause of the wreck had not been determined Monday afternoon. Tom Johnson, of the C. & O. Railway Company's public relations department, Huntington, W. Va., said a team will be assigned to investigate the derailment and its cause.

The railway was expected to be restored to normal traffic by late Tuesday. Meanwhile, the only traffic was routed around the wreck via a "house track" at the old depot in West Prestonsburg.

Eight of the wrecked cars were loaded with watermelons out of the South and frozen foods. The train, No. 97, was made up at Elkhorn City and its destination was Russell.

One car careened into the corner of the station structure, causing damage estimated at $2,000. The derailment occurred at 10:50 a.m. Prestonsburg police, State Police troopers and county officers quickly placed a guard over the spilled contents of cars.

A small gas main was broken, and a few homes in West Prestonsburg were without fuel until repairs were effected Monday.

Speaker Tells Lack of Funds For Programs

Although there is a wide range of programs for housing and community improvement planned, their funding remains a major problem, Hobart Wooten, program manager, Louisville area office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), told members of the Big Sandy Area Development Council last week.

He cited the example of the Neighborhood Development Program which is intended to provide for community rehabilitation. Kentucky has been allocated $2,300,000 for the current fiscal year for that program—and, said Wooten, "Any one of our larger cities could have taken it all for one project." To prevent that from happening, HUD set a limit of $500,000 on any one project, so that at least five areas would benefit from the amount funded.

Wooten said Kentucky had been allocated only $624,000 for development of neighborhood facilities, and the entire amount has been granted to projects in Paintsville and Salyersville.

The same money problem faces low-income public housing, the speaker said. With funding available for about 500 such units, Kentucky has requests for 12,000.

But housing problems, he said, are not going to be solved through the construction of public housing projects, anyhow. "To solve the problem in Eastern Kentucky, we are going to have to get private enterprise interested," Wooten said.

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, reported on the Upward Bound program tested a few years ago at the college here. He said the program was apparently much more effective than similar programs on campuses which have no dormitory facilities.

The pre-college program, which provided cultural exposure, education and campus-related activities to high school students from this area, was completed by enrollees. Of that total, he reported, 268 graduated

Federal Funds Set for Flood Relief in Floyd

One of 10 counties designated by the federal government as a disaster area as a result of recent flooding, Floyd county will be eligible to federal grants for the repair of roads and bridges, and individuals affected by flood may benefit from low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration and other agencies.

A federal survey of road and bridge damage will be made before funds are allocated the county.

Other counties in the "disaster area" classification are Knott, Letcher, Pike, Breathitt, Bullitt, Franklin, Lincoln, Madison and Wayne.

The SBA loans are available to businessmen and private homeowners who reside within city limits. The loans will be made to those who qualify, with the possibility that up to $2,500 of such loans may be "forgiven" if justified by need.

Loans in rural areas can be made by the Farm Home Administration to repair property. Department of Agriculture loans may be available to cover crop losses. These different types of loans will be handled separately from the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

Other areas of Kentucky are still being investigated for possible disaster area designation. Governor Ford has asked that 36 counties be so classified.

Sewerage A Necessity, Too

Two water districts activated within as many years have brought a safe and adequate water supply to a large portion of Floyd county. These serve the river section of southern Floyd and the Mud Creek area. Within a matter of months a third district will have completed the longest system of its kind in Kentucky and will be bringing water to homes, schools and businesses in both Beaver Creeks.

To have good water at the touch of the spigot, with the conveniences of modern plumbing, is a mark of progress. We have been interested in all these ventures and, naturally, wish for them success.

But, for all their modernity and desirability, water systems in solving some problems create others. Every home that has a bathroom must have a sewer line, and therein lies the cause of added stream pollution. Septic tanks will, in many cases, suffice. But in some, where the soil is not suitable for a "field," they will not. In others, there are those who will follow the line of least resistance and pipe their sewage into the nearest stream, thereby making that waterway a carrier of raw pollution.

Obviously, then, the functioning of three water districts which serve several hundred homes, plus private water systems in communities where there is no sewage treatment facilities, poses a threat to the health of many more than are served. The streams which thus become sewers eventually feed the Big Sandy, its pollution content is increased, and all the talk of curbing pollution becomes meaningless.

All this we point out, not to argue against these fine water systems, but to emphasize the need of sewage systems and central sewage treatment plants to go along with the water supply facilities.

But no rural community nor any small town can finance adequate sewerage. They couldn't bear the cost of the water systems, to begin with.

Yet pollution standards are fixed, as they must be. And they must be maintained. The federal government rightly joins the several states in demanding an improvement in the quality of public waters, and still both move too slowly.

Then, in view of the inability of most communities to comply with these demands, what is to be done?

The answer may not be as simple as we make it in this one paragraph, but it should be obvious that if sewers are to be laid and sewage treatment plants are to be built—as they must be, if all this anti-pollution talk is to mean anything—the federal government must finance in large part the cost of these necessities.

We would also add this: No water district development should be undertaken without a sewer facility being provided. Sewage treatment plants in a few larger towns along the rivers are not the answer. What about those hundreds of places where raw sewage enters the stream, between those larger towns?

The Beaver-Elkhorn Water District in this county has plans for a sewer system in the making. It will be interesting to see the position taken by the federal government on the venture which demands immediate attention if more miles of water are not to be polluted far beyond the danger point.

Works of Prestonsburg Artist, 15 Others To Feature Exhibit

Russell May, of Prestonsburg, is one of 16 Kentucky artists whose works will feature the exhibit of Kentucky Heritage Artists premiering next November in the Dimick Gallery, Washington, D. C.

The exhibit will be sponsored by Mrs. John Sherman Cooper and the wives of Kentucky Congressmen. Mrs. Cooper will give a reception in honor of living artists whose works are exhibited. The reception is expected to be held Nov. 15, and on the following day the exhibit will officially open at the Dimick Gallery with a reception for the press, patrons of the art world and guests of Mrs. Cooper and wives of the Kentucky Congressmen.

Senator Cooper will sponsor a Kentucky Artists Day in the Senate, and the artists will be guests at a round of receptions, teas and other events during the four-week Washington exhibit.

If the exhibit in Washington is a success, Governor Wendell H. Ford wants to bring it back to Kentucky for a tour of the state, possibly at state parks.

All the artists to be honored by Mrs. Cooper and her co-hostesses are living, with the exception of the late Paul Sawyer whose career paralleled Mr. May's, in that each was a sign-painter before becoming an artist. Sawyer's Kentucky River and Frankfort scenes have become nationally famous. Other artists who will join Mr. May in the Washington exhibit are Ray Harm, Pine Mountain; Doug Adams, Morehead; Harold Collins, Lexington; Al Cornett, Lexington; Don Ensor, Louisville; A. Jack May, Danville; Nellie Meadows, Cannel City; C. G. Morehead, Owensboro; Joseph Petro, Lexington; Robert A. Powell, Frankfort; Helen Price Stacy, West Liberty; John Stamper, Lexington; Joyce Williams, Ashland; J. Smith, Lexington.

Mr. May is a self-taught artist and successful sign painter doing business in Prestonsburg in the same building that serves as a gallery for his art work, says Helen Price Stacy in a recent newspaper feature.

Tourists, especially those en route to nearby Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, frequently stop at the gallery to view May's paintings. Occasionally one will ask the artist why he paints so many scenes of the Alps.

"I've never been able to get their beauty out of my mind," he answers. "That gorgeous scenery—I have to paint it."

The Prestonsburg man became acquainted with the Austrian Alps during World War II. Thirty years later, this past winter, he had an opportunity to revisit Austria and he recently returned home from a two-month-art-study trip which he calls "the best part of a good dream."

It wasn't easy for May to be accepted as a student by one of Europe's leading young artists. More than a year ago he heard about Gerhard Neswadba of Austria and decided that he would study with Neswadba.

"He had other ideas," laughed May, "and giving art lessons to a 50-year-old man from the hills of Kentucky was not among them. It wasn't where I was from that made any difference to him, but my age."

But after persistent inquiries the Floyd countyman was accepted to study with Neswadba for two months. The European emphasized that he did not accept May for the money involved—May's two months' expenses would be $7000—but for the prestige in saying he had a student from America. Neswadba has tutored only three persons, May being the third.

Last January, May was all set to fly to Vienna to begin his study, but an illness of his father postponed the trip two weeks. When he was met by Neswadba, the two recognized each other instantly. The European knew only a few words of English, and May knew no German—"Just ja (ya) for yes." During the months the two men had corresponded, May had to take the letters he received to a nearby German teacher for translation.

"But art is international," he said, "and needs no other communication. We had no trouble understanding each other at any time."

They traveled together to Klosterneuburg, where the Kentuckian started painting at 7:30 a.m. and quit at 7:30 p.m.

"I had one break—for lunch," he said. "I ate breakfast before I started work and the evening meal afterward. I went shopping once and to church twice in the two months I was with Neswadba."

The two months passed quickly and then it was time for the Kentuckian to leave. Neswadba accompanied him to the airport. At the moment of parting, May said it was then that he learned for the first time that his study and his painting were approved by the European. "I am most content," he said to May.

On the plane, he defended his roll of 30 paintings from a stewardess who tried to put them with the baggage. "I told her that roll represented two months of my life and $8000, and that I would keep it with me."

Prestonsburg Mayor Dr. George Archer and other civic leaders think that a Russell May Day sometime this year would be a good way to invite the public to Floyd county to see the 30 paintings he did while in Austria.

"My life's greatest experience" is how May remembers his trip abroad.

And his selection to represent his state in the coming Washington exhibit is next to that.

HER GRANDCHILDREN

Exemption Cost To This County Is $5½ Million

Although the homestead exemption allowed homeowners 65 years of age or older will cost Floyd county a total of $5,499,691 in its assessment for 1972 taxes, final assessment figures indicate the county has no major problem in holding its tax revenues to at least the level of last year.

The total assessment last year was $117,019,338. This year, the assessment stands at $125,347,043. (Some of this assessment, however, is not taxable at the full rate.)

The fiscal court is expected to meet soon to set the tax rate per $100 valuation.

The assessment on both farmland and residential lots was up this year—farmland from $16,377,398 in 1971 to $16,616,436 this year; residential lots and improvements, in a sharper rise, from $25,103,489 last year to $36,676,729 in the new assessment. Commercial property, however, showed a slight loss—from $17,439,677 to $16,660,935.

Some of the homestead exemption losses were offset by assessment of new properties and of mobile homes.

Mineral and timber rights were assessed this year at $4,005,833, as compared to $4,608,644 in 1971. Oil rights were valued this year at $111,975.

In the tangible property division drilling, mining and construction equipment was valued this year at $3,544,400. Last year these were assessed at $1,298,600. The 10,708 motor vehicles listed this year were valued at $16,631,720; aircraft, at $277,400 and watercraft at $301,300. Merchants' inventories rose from $5,243,516 last year to $7,016,657.

The final recap of the assessment shows that $19,422,000 of the assessment is subject to the gym tax levied for the construction of the Prestonsburg high school gymnasium. This is restricted to Prestonsburg property. The assessment lists 173,766 acres of farmland and 168,065 acres for fire protection.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this opportunity to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends, the donors of flowers and food, the ministers who took part in the funeral services of our father and brother, Felix Patton; the singers, the elders—Brady Amburgy, William Amburgy, Green Boyd, Doug Burkett and Jim Reed—for their consoling words, also the Hall Brothers Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service. None of this will be forgotten by the family.

Measure Request May Yet Be Made

Set-aside inspection and measurement service is now under way in this county by the Floyd county ASCS.
There is still time for any farm program participant to get this service for his crop and set-aside acres before the certification deadline of July 15. This may be done by filing a request at the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) office.

This year, the ASCS measurement service, which is provided at cost, also includes inspection of set-aside acreage at the time of measurement to determine if it is of acceptable quality to earn full set-aside payments without deductions. Acreage set aside under the feed-grain program must be of average productivity and similar to the acreage on which the program crops are grown in order for full payments to be earned.

Emphasis now is on measurement of set-aside acreage, and of that feed-grain acreage which was signed up for limited production under one of the feed grain program options.
Producer certification may be made as soon as a farmer has his program crops planted and his acreage in compliance with program regulations. All set-aside inspection and measurement service in Floyd county is expected to be completed before final certification dates.

NEWPORT, KY. (AP)—Lt. Col. Grover Johnson, night chief of the Newport Police Department, will retire July 1 after 21 years.

The announcement was made last week by Mrs. Sybil Shaffer, executive director of the state pageant.

Sixty contestants from all sections of Kentucky will be competing for the title of Miss Kentucky Teen-Ager. The winner will compete for the title of Miss National Teen-Ager, September 2, Atlanta, Georgia.

Reading Council Elects Officers

The Jenny Wiley Reading Council met at Maytown high school, May 2. The chairman of the Program, Treasury, Auditing, Publicity, Research, Organization, Rules and Evaluating committees gave annual reports of the activities of their respective committees for the year 1971-1972. The Evaluating committee chairman, Elsie Stephens, urged the Council to accept the challenge of making classroom teachers more aware of this council and the benefits derived from being a member of IRA Councils.

Officers elected for the year were: Bertha Ratliff, president; Marie D. Stumbo, president-elect; Nadine Hicks, secretary; Delphia Hicks, treasurer; Edgar Bingham, parliamentarian. The following committee chairmen were chosen: Pam Wohlford, Publicity; Ray Brackett, and Anna Sue Stumbo (co-chairmen), Auditing; Elsie Stephens, Evaluating; Janet Jones and Doris Robinson (co-chairmen), Organization; Sarah Lavens, Nominating; Fonzo Akers, Research; Leonard Allen, Rules; and Marie D. Stumbo, Program.

Executive board members chosen for the new year are Dr. Catherine Shrewsberry, Bertha Ratliff, Marie D. Stumbo, Ray Brackett, Pam Wohlford, and Leonard Allen.

Members were invited to participate in the Clark elementary school's open house which will be held on May 25 to acquaint all the people of that community with the Right to Read Program which is now a part of this school. The Jenny Wiley Council will set up a booth on the Right to Read effort and assist the Clark school staff in any way possible to make this program a success. The Council members take pride in the fact that a Floyd county school has been awarded such a distinction.

Dr. Shrewsberry, Council president, reported on Jenny Wiley Council's representation at K. E. A. in Louisville. While there she and Leonard Allen set up ad hoc committees to advertise the Right to Read effort and to carry out a talent search. The talent search is directed toward having the Council members make themselves available for speaking tours, telling what is happening in the field of reading in this area.

The new board of directors will meet at the Clark elementary school May 25 following open house activities.

HOMEMAKERS ELECT

Maytown Homemakers held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Sally Osborne at Eastern, May 11. Miss Alda Gibson gave the scripture reading. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Marcella Bailey, re-elected president; Mrs. Helen Boyd, vice-president; Thelma Hicks, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Alda Gibson, devotional chairman.

Mrs. Boyd gave a report on the trip to Lovely, Ky. to visit Rufus M. Reed, and the beautiful wild flowers seen by the group. The club members helped Mr. Reed celebrate his birthday with a picnic and presented him gifts. At the meeting members enjoyed working with Swiss straw and making flowers. Mrs. Otela Smiley, of Prestonsburg, was a guest.

Mrs. Osborne served refreshments to Minnie Gearheart, Helen Boyd, Charlene Sexton, Stella Martin, Trilby May, Margie Sue Osborne, Thelma Hicks, Alda Gibson, Judy Barnett, Marcella Bailey, Otela Smiley and Frances Pitts. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Margie Sue Osborne.

School Appreciation

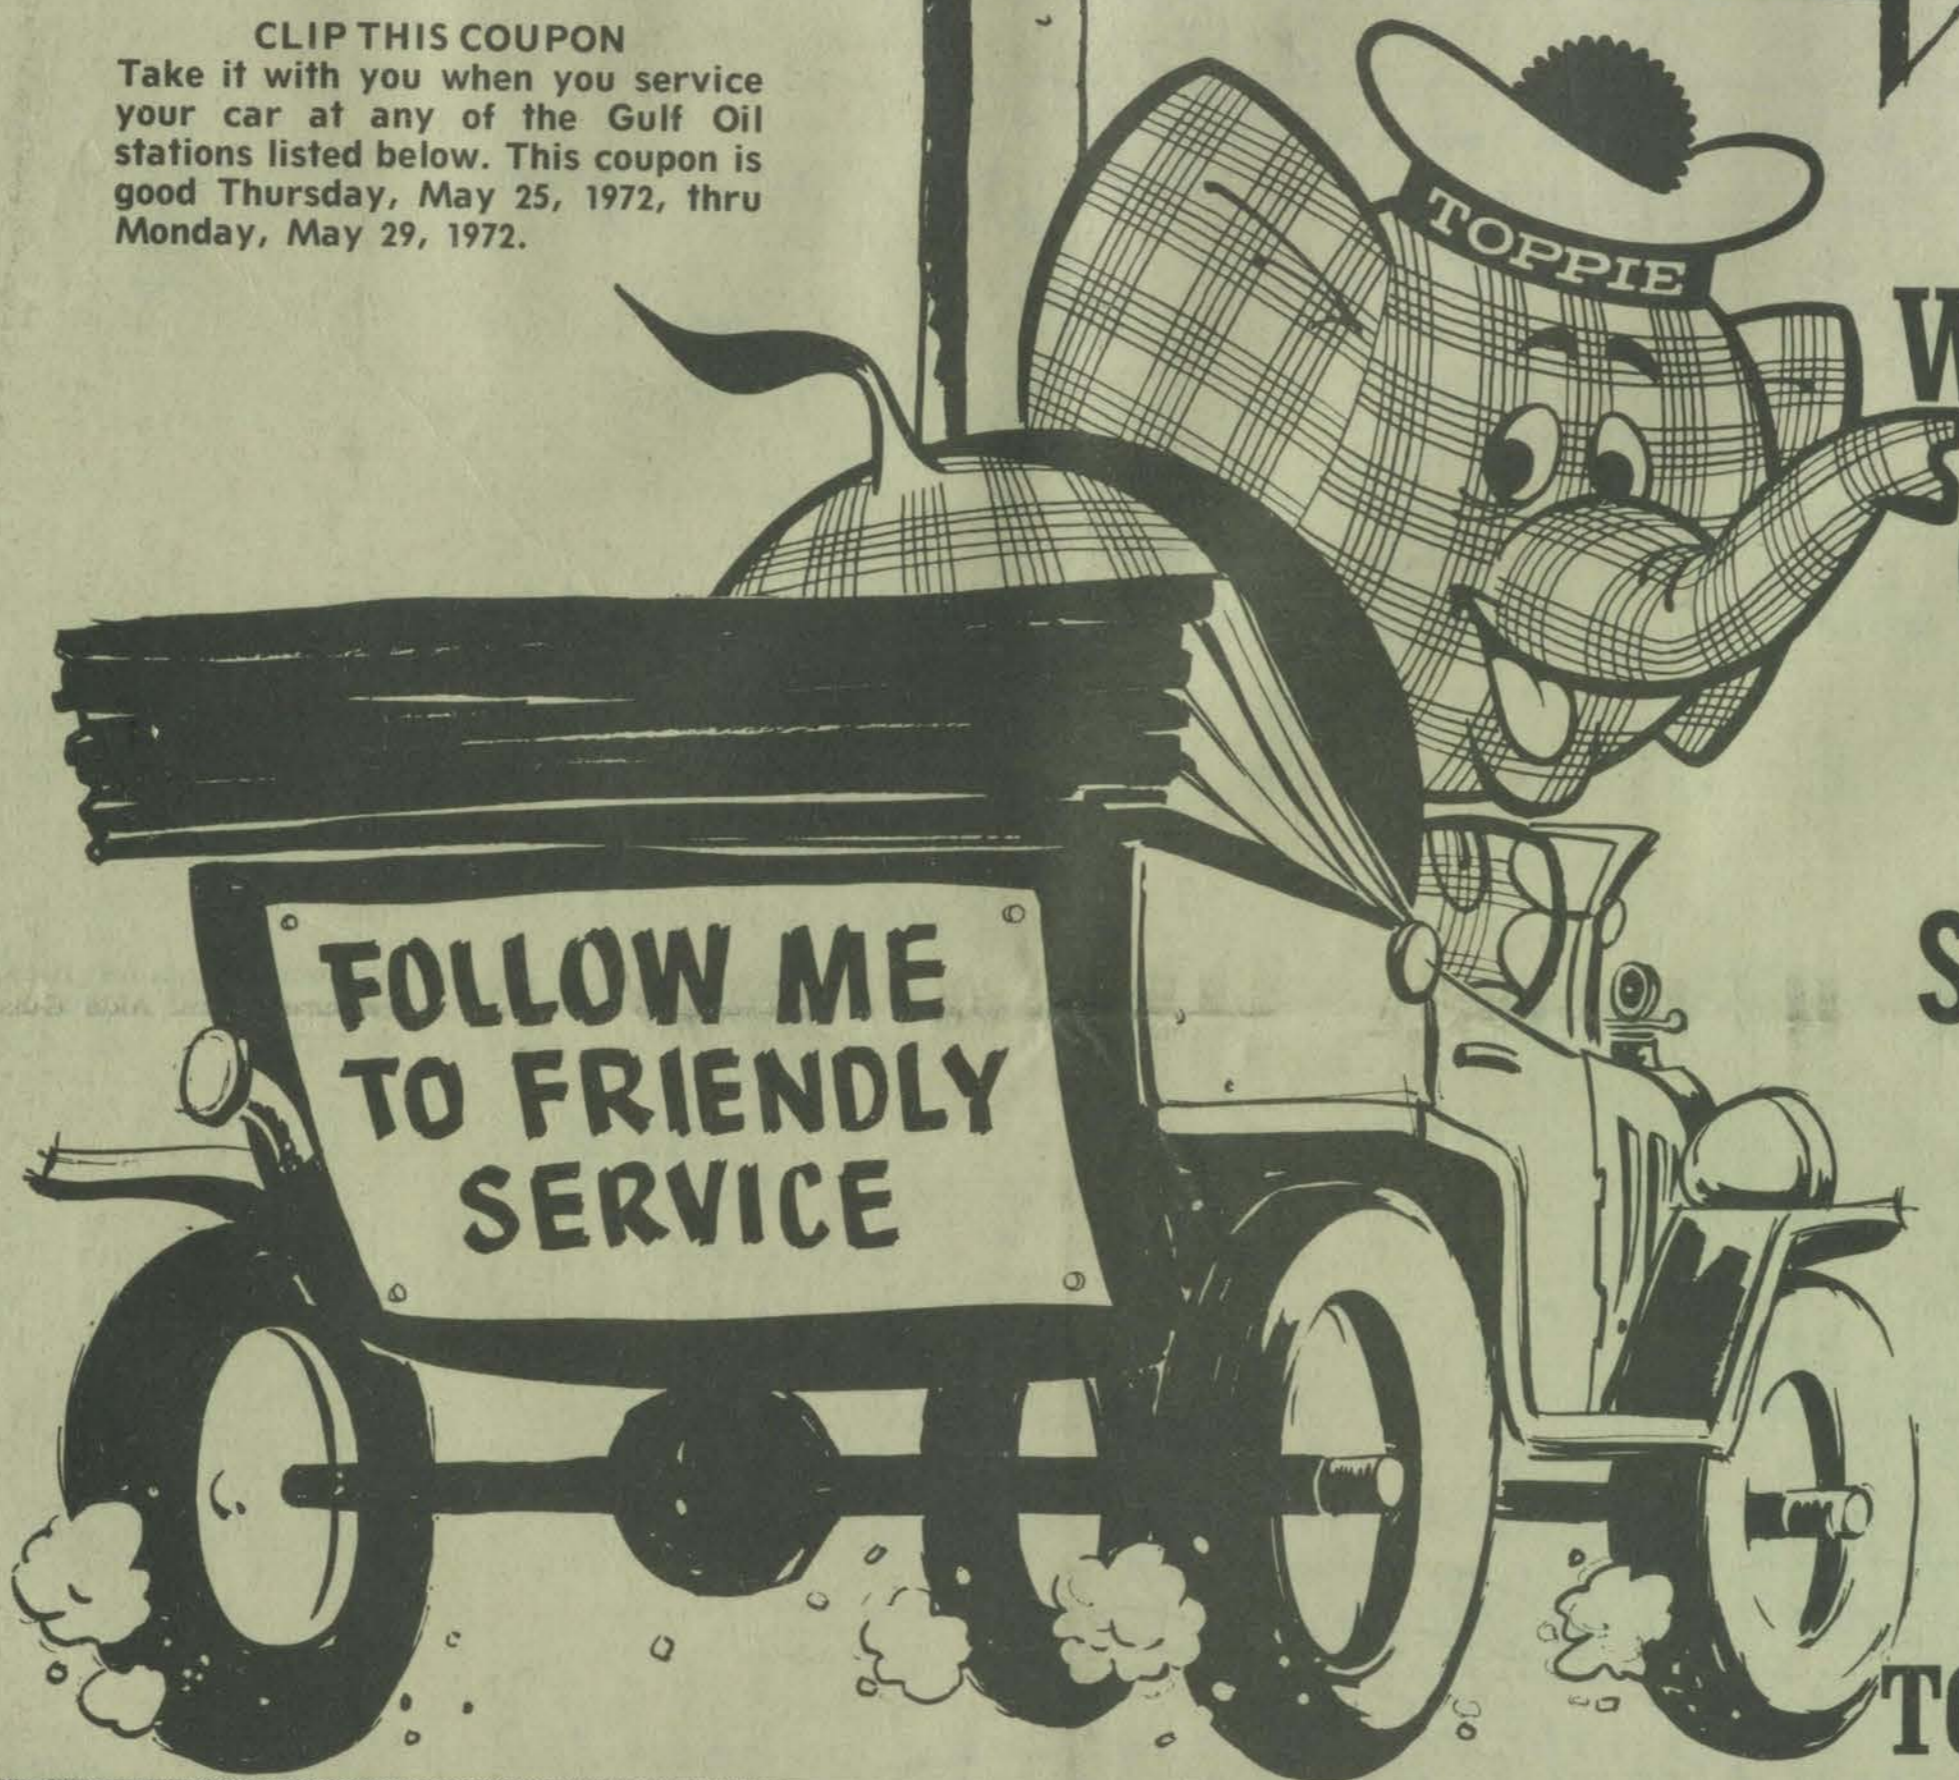

As the school year is ending, most of the parents of Betsy Layne school district join me in expressing our sincere thanks for an excellent job done by our teachers. The additional administration help has upgraded our school standards, and these advances are obvious to the community.

It's a pleasure to say publicly that we appreciate the extra effort extended by all of the county school administrators to improve our school.

Auxier Names Group To Review NEA Sanctions Probe Report

Kentucky Education Association (KEA) president Michael Auxier, of Emma, has named a seven-member committee to study and recommend action on the 14 recommendations in the National Education Association (NEA) sanctions investigation report on Kentucky.

Establishment of the special committee was mandated by the KEA Delegate Assembly last month when delegates directed the KEA leadership "to hold in abeyance the invocation of sanctions" against the state.

Auxier appointed these committee members:

James Baker, superintendent of Middleboro schools, one of Kentucky's two NEA directors, and a member of the KEA board of directors; Nelson Allen, principal of Russell's Central elementary school, vice chairman of the KEA Legislative Commission, and secretary of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association; Mrs. Golda Walbert, Glasgow, classroom reading clinician at Barren county's Red Cross elementary school, former president of the Third District Education Association, member of the KEA Teacher Retirement Council, and former president of the Kentucky Association of Educational Supervisors; Raymond Price, Danville, industrial arts teacher at Danville high school; Levi Peterson, Jr., Hopkinsville, social studies teacher at Christian County high school; Mrs. Edythe Owens, Covington, first-grade teacher at Kenton county's Park Hills elementary school; Lloyd May, Louisville, mathematics teacher at Jefferson county's Westport high school, chairman of the KEA Commission on Professional Negotiation (PN), chairman of the Jefferson County Teachers Association (JCTA) PN and salary committee, and former member of the JCTA board of directors.

The committee's first meeting has been scheduled for 3 p.m. Thursday, June 8 in Lexington at the Fayette County Education Association office, 1389 Alexandria Drive.

Delegates at last month's KEA convention directed that the KEA president within 30 days appoint a special committee of five to 11 members to study the recommendations in the NEA report entitled "Education in Kentucky: A Legacy of Unkept Promise." The report followed the sanctions investigation made by NEA during the 1970-71 school year at the request of the KEA Delegate Assembly.

Delegates had initiated the request for the sanctions investigation in February, 1970, after a statewide work stoppage of Kentucky teachers to protest inaction or inadequate action by then Governor Louie

"Little Shepherd" To Be Presented

Deep in the hill country of Eastern Kentucky lies a region known as the Kingdom Come Valley. Here, John Fox, Jr., one of America's best-loved authors, traveled on horseback up one creek and down the other. In this valley he developed a lasting friendship and love for the mountain people, and, above all, found inspiration for his novel, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

Now this tender love story is being readied for presentation as an outdoor drama on the amphitheater stage at Van, Ky., five miles north of Whitesbury.

This story of mountain people will be seen on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, beginning June 30 at 8:30 p.m., and continuing through August 27.

B. Nunn and the 1970 General Assembly on KEA's legislative program.

The findings of the NEA investigating committee fully supported the allegations of KEA "concerning the inadequacy and inequality of public school programs in the Commonwealth" and listed 14 legislative recommendations to resolve Kentucky's school problems. These included a number of items related to school finance plus enactment of a professional negotiation law.

The resolution adopted at last month's KEA Delegate Assembly directed the KEA committee that has been named by Auxier to coordinate its investigations with the appropriate state and national agencies and to report its findings and recommendations for specific action to a special session of the KEA Delegate Assembly to be called no later than December 1, 1972.

Auxier and the KEA board of directors have announced that the special Delegate Assembly will be December 1 and 2. After that session delegates will discuss the committee's findings and recommendations with the general membership in their localities. Action on the recommendations of the committee will come at the regular KEA Delegate Assembly meeting in April, 1973, in Louisville.

The Romance of the Apple

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
(UK College of Agriculture)

Down through the centuries the apple has played an important role in the history of man. It has figured prominently in his legends, myths, literature and, perhaps, his destiny. Had not Adam and Eve meddled with the apple, mankind might still be dwelling in the Garden of Eden and had not an apple dropped on the head of Sir Isaac Newton, he might not have discovered the law of gravity. In any way it is taken, the apple is a wonderful fruit that has contributed immeasurably to human health, nutrition, economy, and enjoyment.

According to Carl E. Chaplin, horticulturist at the UK College of Agriculture and authority on pomology (the science of fruit growing), the apple is the most profitable fruit of temperate regions and probably the most valuable in all the world. It grows in every state of the Union, at least to some extent. The apple blossoms throughout Europe, all across Asia, and is picked and eaten in Japan, Australia, New Zealand, and South America.

In fact, says Chaplin, the apple can thrive where few other fruits survive. It will grow and produce in warm climates, provided there are moderate winters in which the tree can get a rest, and many varieties can withstand temperatures down to 40 degrees below zero.

There are many species of apples, or crab apples, according to Chaplin, but the ones from which our present varieties were developed, Malus pumila, probably started in southwestern Asia in the area from the Caspian to the Black Sea. Long before man started recording his history, however, this fruit had spread across Europe. There is evidence that Stone age lake dwellers of central Europe not only stored fresh apples for eating, but also preserved them for future use by cutting and drying them in the sun.

Research indicates that apple cultivation started with the beginning of agriculture in Europe. In one of his treatises on botany, written about the fourth century B. C. Theophrastus, the Greek philosopher, mentioned a number of varieties being grown in his country. Early Romans knew and prized the apple, and probably introduced it into Great Britain. At the time of the discovery of America, it was the most important cultivated fruit in central and northern Europe.

Because of its popularity, it is not surprising that the apple tree was taken along by first settlers to temperate regions of the New World. The English are given credit for planting it in Virginia and New England, the Dutch in New York, and the French in Canada. Once started, seedling apples, like honeybees, preceded white settlers westward on their course of Manifest Destiny. Some Indian tribes planted apple orchards around their villages and, to further disseminate this wonderful fruit, Johnny Chapman ("Johnny Appleseed") roamed frontier settlements preaching the Gospel and planting apples.

Although their ancestors came from Europe, most apple varieties now popular in America started as seedlings developed here. The apple, according to Carl Chaplin, does not sprout true to form from seed. A hundred trees from the seed of a single tree will all differ from the parent and each other. Occasionally, however, a stray seedling found growing in a fence corner or back pasturefield will prove excellent. When this happens, if the new tree is discovered and propagated by budding and grafting, it becomes a new variety. Fine examples of such chance finds are the McIntoch, Baldwin, and the famous Delicious.

Fresh, cooked, dried, or otherwise prepared, the apple is universally loved as a food and well deserves its popularity. Few things are more beautiful or fragrant than an apple tree in bloom in spring or laden with ripening fruit in autumn. Perhaps the world would be a happier place if everybody had an apple tree for his very own.

"We Remember— We Don't Forget."

There's an open gate
At the end of the road
Through which each must go alone.
And there in a life we cannot see
Our Father claims His own.
Beyond the gate our loved ones find
Happiness and rest,
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knows best.

Gov. Ford Launches 'War' On Highway Accidents

Frankfort, Ky.—A seven-area press conference held by Gov. Wendell H. Ford earlier last week marked the beginning of an all-out war on traffic fatalities and injuries.

Terming the venture "a series of crisis conferences," the Governor selected Monday, May 22, as the date on which to announce the new traffic safety campaign because, he said, it would serve as a prelude to Memorial Day Week-end which is a statistically tragic period on Kentucky highways.

Ford said, "Every innovative approach which could save lives by making the driving public more safety conscious was being considered."

"The State Police will spearhead this program, one which is unprecedented among law enforcement agencies anywhere," Ford said.

The governor was joined at each airport by state troopers who are to be part of a visual display illustrating the fight against death, injury, and property damage on Kentucky's highways.

Over the Memorial week-end, State Police and tour information personnel will wear black armbands to mourn those already dead and those who yet may die in traffic accidents during the months ahead.

"Every opportunity to make the public aware of this threat of life and property will be seized throughout 1972," the governor confirmed.

"With deaths on Kentucky highways headed toward an all-time high, we must give the public a constant and starkly visual reminder of just how dangerous life on our highways has become," Ford said.

The governor pointed out that, during 1971, Kentucky ranked among 24 states which reported a decline in traffic fatalities. Only 12 of those states bettered Kentucky's record which showed the state ending the year with 1,023 deaths, or five percent fewer than the number recorded during 1970.

"Unfortunately, instead of looking upon that achievement as an incentive to work toward an even greater reduction of this year's toll, we seem headed in exactly the opposite direction," he said. "Right now, indications are that as many as 1,100 persons will be killed on our highways during 1972."

Governor Ford expressed the hope that, because the State Police approach to the problem is unusual, it might "stick in the public's mind" and help to slow the current accident trend.

In addition to wearing the armbands, State Police also have prepared 60,000 black-bordered leaflets carrying safety messages by both the governor and the director of State Police, Col. Larry G. Boucher.

The leaflets will be distributed to traffic violators stopped by troopers over the holiday and at state-operated information centers and parks as well as through restaurants and filling stations along tollways and interstates. A recorded safety message by the Governor will also be released for use by every radio station in Kentucky. Boucher said that State Police post commanders and trooper information officers will also make safe driving pleas over local radio stations during that week-end.

Attorney General Thinks Disclosure Unconstitutional

A part of the penalty section of the 1972 state financial disclosure law was called unconstitutional by the Kentucky attorney general's office.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Walter Herdman said a constitutional officer cannot be removed from office for failing to disclose his finances, as the law provides. However, he said the law still would apply to candidates for such offices and to appointed state officers.

Because of a severability clause added to the law before it was enacted, the rest of its provisions will stand.

State Unit To Aid In School Programs

Frankfort, Ky.—The Department of Education is now organizing a comprehensive planning unit to aid in the coordination and planning of educational development.

The new unit, called the Office of Planning, Research, Evaluation and Dissemination, will operate under the direction of the superintendent of public instruction.

Ken Miller, director of dissemination, said the department hopes to have the new unit staffed by July 1, and that one of its first tasks will be to plan for the implementation of the statewide kindergarten program.

Although other objectives have not yet been established, the new office will basically study, evaluate, plan and implement new programs supported by state funds and federal planning grants as well as evaluate and coordinate existing programs.

Miller said the office will initially have a staff of 10 to 12, "but will gradually evolve into a larger force to meet the department's needs."

He said the concept of a planning office had been under consideration for more than two years, but no attempt had been made to implement it.
