

Board Buys Wheelwright Grid Field

Advertising for Bids On Betsy Layne Job Authorized at Meet

The Floyd County Board of Education last week purchased from the Island Creek Coal Company the Wheelwright athletic field for use of the school there and at Saturday's meeting moved to begin installation of lighting at the field in the hope of completing the work before the opening of the 1972 football season.

The 2.97-acre tract, which is under fence, already has bleachers and has metal light poles on the ground, was bought for $5,000. Island Creek ownership of the field came through its purchase of the Wheelwright properties of the Inland Steel Co., which acquired the property 26 years ago.

Without a lighted field, Wheelwright high school played all its "home" games last year away from home.

The Board authorized George Lee Shannon, architect, to advertise for bids on the construction of a structure at Betsy Layne to replace the lunchroom and some classrooms destroyed by fire.

Advertising for bids was also authorized on blacktopping at Allen Central high school; carpeting at Clark elementary for the lower grades, in order to comply with Right-to-Read Program requirements; contract hauling of pupils, and fleet insurance.

Huey Darby was employed as special vocational education counsellor at Betsy Layne high school. The Board approved a contract with Kentucky Business College for adult education business classes at Prestonsburg high school.

Resignations of Zella Faye Wallace, Genevieve Pope and Steve Riggsby from teaching position were accepted.

Sheriff, Deputy 'Roughed Up'

Sheriff Frank Leslie and Deputy Sheriff Otto Fannin ran into unexpected trouble Friday on Bull Creek where they went to serve an insanity warrant on Cecil Whitt, 26.

Sheriff Leslie said Whitt had earlier warned him that he would "blow him up" if he came after him. But Leslie said he had had no trouble with Whitt on other occasions and so gave the threat little thought till Whitt ran into his home after cursing the officers on their arrival. Sheriff Leslie followed him inside and saw Whitt attempting to plug into an electric outlet what appeared to be an armature which he suspected might have been rigged to cause a fire or explosion.

The two closed and in the ensuing tussle the glasses of both the sheriff and Deputy Sheriff Fannin were broken. Leslie was struck alongside his head with a roller from an automatic washer, a bed was broken down, a door partially torn from its hinges and a chest overturned. The officers used their nightsticks as Whitt held onto Fannin's revolver, but they subdued him only when they succeeded in getting a trouser-leg around his throat and choked him.

Whitt was brought to jail here and later was transferred to the Prestonsburg General Hospital. In addition to the blow on his head, Sheriff Leslie was scratched about his face, and also suffered a leg injury.

Memorial to War Dead Dedicated

A crowd of several thousand persons jammed Archer Park and watched from vantage points outside the park as the Floyd County War Memorial was dedicated here, the afternoon of July 4.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins, recently risen from a sick-bed, came here to deliver the dedicatory address. In the gathering were parents and other relatives of the men to whose memory the memorial was dedicated.

The bronze plaque unveiled at the ceremony bears the names of 20 Floyd victims of World War I, 154 of World War II, 30 of the Korean Conflict and 19 of the Vietnam fighting.

The U. S. flag and flags of the 50 states which encircle the memorial were often whipped by a stiff breeze as the program proceeded. Two Army helicopter gunships circled overhead, and at the conclusion of the program staged an aerial dogfight. A color guard and drill team from Ft. Knox added military honors for the war dead.

Welcoming the gathering to the dedication, Dr. George P. Archer, mayor of Prestonsburg, expressed his personal appreciation to the people who by their contributions made the memorial possible.

The invocation was said by the Rev. W. Howard Coop, pastor of the United Methodist Church. Following Dr. Archer's address, representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, American Veterans and Disabled American Veterans made brief remarks, as did Circuit Judge Hollie Conley and County Judge Henry Stumbo. Following the presentation of the colors by the Fort Knox color guard, Congressman Perkins delivered the dedicatory address, and this was followed by the prayer of dedication with audience response, led by the Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church. Then the plaque was unveiled by commanders of local veterans' groups, the Ft. Knox detachment gave the salute and "Taps." The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dan Heintzleman, of Martin.

Moore Arrested On Left Beaver

The lone liquor haul reported as of Monday was made, early last week, when Deputy Sheriffs Dester Hamilton and Jackie Bartley arrested Sherman Moore on Sizemore mountain and confiscated 48 cases of beer.

Jake Moore and Edgell Hall, of the Left Beaver Creek section, were booked here Monday by Deputy Sheriff Ralph Howell on a charge of shooting into a dwelling house with intent to kill.

(Closing of offices for the holiday made difficult the task of learning details of several offenses in which arrests were made.)

What is reported as family trouble resulted Saturday in the arrest on Cow Creek of John Endicott and Cecil Jarrell on charges of reckless use of deadly weapons.

Voters To Register Anew, Law Provides

Purgation boards will cease to exist after the November election this year, and every voter must re-register before the November election of the following year, County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson pointed out this week in a discussion of new election laws.

These are two items of the legislation enacted the 1972 General Assembly in changing the residency requirements of voters. Under the new law a voter is eligible to cast his ballot in a precinct if he has resided there 30 days. Prior to passage of the new act, a 60-day residency was required.

Elimination of county purgation boards is being compensated for by a central, computerized system of maintaining registration and voting records at Frankfort. Names of voters who die or move from a precinct will be reported by county clerks of the state to the central office at Frankfort, and the voting lists for each election will come from the capital. The computer will automatically purge names of all voters who fail to exercise their ballots at two consecutive elections.

County Clerk Robinson said the new registration forms are expected here within a few weeks and that when they do he will permit new voter-registrants to register on the old form, which will be in use till after next May's primary, and also on the new form in order to save them the inconvenience of registering later. He also said he and others from his office will spend two or three days at each precinct in the county next year to afford registration convenience to voters.

County election commissions under the new law will have a fourth member. In addition to the sheriff and one representative from each of the major political parties, the county clerk will be added, and he will be chairman of the commission.

This Town . . . That World

NO EAGLE TO SCREAM?

July Fourth...traditionally the day to "make the eagle scream." But the day may come when there will be no eagle. We are told that Western ranchers, using poison and guns, threaten to exterminate the national symbol because they regard the eagle a bird of prey which decimates their flocks. When, and if, the day ever comes that the eagle is no more because of man's cupidity, wilfulness and folly, we suggest that we adopt the buzzard as the national bird.

THE MEMORIAL TO THE WAR DEAD

The designation of July 4, Independence Day, as the date for the dedication of the memorial at Archer Park here to the county's war dead is truly fitting. These to whom we all owe a debt that we can never pay found life as dear as any of us, but there wasn't a defector in the lot. They served to the "last, full measure," and but for their sacrifice "independence" would be only a word to be whispered fearfully by us oldsters to our children.

Suit Filed Here Assails Rights Under Old Deed

Rights of coal operators and the C. & O. Railway Company under terms of 68-year-old mineral deed were attacked in a suit filed July 1 in circuit court here by owners of a Stephens Branch tract of land at or near Manton.

Involved is a tract of 502 acres of land which was acquired by John and Cynthia Dove from Wes and Sarah Hale, but the coal and other mineral rights had been sold in 1906 by earlier owners, David and Florence Kennedy, to the Montrose Land and Mining Company, which in turn conveyed these rights to the Beaver Creek Coal and Coke Company. The Kennedys were paid $2,113.

The plaintiffs, Cynthia Dove, Adrian and Rose Lovely, Marylen and Ruby Joseph, Earl and Margie Yates, Paul and Lillian Dove, name as defendants the Manton Elkhorn Coal Co., Left Beaver Coal Co., Stephens Elkhorn Coal Corp. and the C. & O. Railway Company as defendants.

Plaintiffs allege that defendants were on, and prior to, last Feb. 20 using their land for purposes of processing, cleaning, storing and hauling products from their land in which they have no interest by lease or otherwise. They allege that trains block ingress and egress to and from their home and that Mrs. Cynthia Dove has no way of reaching her home at such times unless she

16 Persons Hurt In Three Wrecks

Although the county had had no holiday traffic fatalities as of Monday noon, at least 16 persons involved in three wrecks had been given emergency treatment or hospitalized at the Prestonsburg General Hospital.

Seven persons, none of whom were immediately identified, were taken to the hospital at noon Tuesday following a head-on crash of two autos at "Winchester," near Emma. Some were believed severely hurt.

Seven others were treated Monday afternoon following a four-car pileup near the Blue Sky Motel here. Two others were hurt in a wreck, near the mouth of Spradlin Branch, here Monday morning.

None of those in the Monday afternoon wreck was believed to have been seriously hurt. They were listed as Gerlene Goble, of Endicott, Mariah Hammond, of Water Gap, Rhoda, Nancy Jane and James L. Ousley, all of Risner, Cola and Ora Salisbury, of Hunter.

The epidemic of highway accidents apparently centered in the Prestonsburg area. Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin and the McDowell Memorial Hospital reported no wreck-injured had been hospitalized there.

Meanwhile, eight had reportedly died on Kentucky highways.

Tax Rate Voted By Fiscal Court Slightly Higher

The tax rate voted Friday by the Floyd fiscal court to provide county revenues showed raises in five categories but altogether increased the overall rate by only 3 cents per $100 evaluation.

Biggest single increase was made on the school tax rate, which is up 1.9 cents to 50.9 cents per $100 valuation. Other items in the levy are:

County levy, 17.7 cents, up .7 cent; health, 3.1 cent, up .2 cent; county extension tax (CET), 1 cent, unchanged; gym tax, which affects only Prestonsburg property-owners, 7.6 cents, up .1 cent; library, 1.7 cents, up .1 cent; timber, 2 cents per acre, unchanged.

The tax levy was calculated to meet a budget of $371,678. County Judge Henry Stumbo said some loss in real estate assessment as the result of the over-65 assessment exemption made slight increases in the levy necessary. Overall, the

Road Fund Gets $33,400 Increase Over Last Year

The Floyd Budget Commission last week adopted a budget calling for the expenditure during the fiscal year beginning July 1 of $371,678—roughly, $58,000 more than the county's actual expenses for the preceding 12 months.

The budget was based on anticipated revenues of $361,678 and a surplus from the preceding year of $10,000.

A major item in the new budget is the $140,600 outlay proposed on county roads. This is $33,400 more than was spent in fiscal 1971-72. Road expenditures were broken down into $2,500 for labor, $21,500 for materials, $2,000 for rights-of-way, $85,000 for the equipment operation account, $12,400 for machinery repairs, $5,000 for new road machinery and $7,200 salary of a road engineer.

Salaries listed in the budget follow, with changes, if any, appearing in parentheses): County judge, $12,600; judge pro-tem, $500 (decreased $600 from actual expenditures last year); other salaries connected with county judge's office, $4,800; jury fund and commission, $3,000 (down $500); trial commissioner, $6,000 (up $2,400).

Home Rule and a Tax Source

It has been suggested to the Floyd fiscal court that it exercise its powers under the new Home Rule law and levy a tax on strip-mine coal.

The court is weighing the suggestion carefully, may not be over-anxious to act, but it is a decision it will ultimately have to make, one way or the other. And the public will be watching to see how the ball bounces.

As matters now stand, the present state severance tax on coal penalizes the deep-mine operator and fails to help the counties that yield the coal.

The underground operator is required to pay the same per-ton tax on his coal that is paid by the strip-miner, although the latter produces coal at a fraction of the cost of underground mining. The balances are tipped so heavily in favor of the surface miner that the producer of coal by way of the "drift mouth" is at a competitive disadvantage—so much so that deep mining may be on its way out. And if that happens, if deep-mine operators are forced to quit or to turn to surface mining, the unemployment picture will indeed be a distressing one in the coal fields, since it is the deep mines that use manpower in the production of coal.

The coal-producing counties are, in effect, penalized because they do not directly benefit from the severance tax on the coal which is leaving their land forever as the tax goes into the state's general fund. (The argument that tobacco and liquor taxes go into the general fund, too, and that the coal severance tax therefore belongs in the same fund, fails to convince—for the simple reason that neither tobacco nor liquor is irreplaceable.)

The fiscal courts of this and all other coal-producing counties can achieve three things by imposing their own severance tax on strip-mined coal:

1. They can more nearly give the deep-mine operator an even break with the surface miner.
2. They can relieve farmers and other taxpayers of some of the burden by collecting from strip-mined coal which is produced at great and grievous cost to the land.
3. They can get into their own general funds, not the state's, some badly needed severance tax money.

LETTERS To the Editor

Editor, The Times:

I have been an avid fan of yours for several years, particularly with regard to your "This Town-That World" column.

I could hardly help but sense the inner glee you must have gotten when you outwitted your friendly adversary with regard to fish tales.

I heard one quite recently that delighted my husband and six-year-old son who are fishermen. Perhaps the story is an old one; however, almost immediately on hearing it I remarked, "That might be one for Mr. Allen's Column." So here goes.

Recently during a cruise on the Suwannee River in Florida the riverboat captain was acquainting his passengers with the geographical locations, history of the hanging moss, coloring, depth, and aquatic life of Stephen Foster's historical and legendary river.

When he was relating stories of aquatic life such as catfish, bass and numerous other fish, he was almost apologetic regarding the depth at this time. He mentioned the fish that made themselves seen, despite the dark coloring of the river.

Like any man proud of his work or his attempt to become a dramatist incognito, he related the story of "The Biggest Catch."

Of course the water depth was greater when a male passenger on his boat began to struggle to land his catch. As the fisherman pulled his catch on board the boat the excitement was so great that the family and most passengers lost their cool and were unable to photograph the catch.

A lady passenger happened to have a Polaroid camera and thus was able to capture the image, if not the weight, of the great bass. She established another record that day. As well as having the only Polaroid aboard, her picture weighed in at five pounds.

The unusual footnote to the story came from my sometimes pessimistic six-year-old. He immediately asked, "Mom, if THAT picture weighed five pounds, how did she hold such a heavy camera?"

Needless to say, Bobby's query elicited laughter and a comment from the once-proud captain. He was invited to join the captain, because the latter humorously acknowledged that the old adage, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," was inadequate in this situation.

Keep up the good work with one of the few humorous aspects of an increasingly complex world.

Tightening Kentucky's interstate water quality standards would make them "fully approvable" by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, according to Jack E. ## Harris Says State to Tighten Strip-Mine Slope Rules

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Strict interpretation of the 27-degree slope rule in strip-mining was promised last week by the state's new natural-resources commissioner, Thomas Harris, who said the lack of a standard definition has prevented proper enforcement previously.

Current law, he said, forbids stripping on land where the slope is more than 27 degrees, but the method of measurement often has varied and, in some cases, the land slope was altered by preliminary excavation.

A regulation proposed by Harris requires the mined land to be less than 27 degrees everywhere and specifies that the angle is to be measured "from any point along the base of the coal seam or its projection on the surface to any of these points." The top of the highwall. A point on the surface, 50 feet along the horizontal, beyond the highest elevation to be excavated. A point on the surface, 50 feet along the horizontal, below the base projection of the coal seam.

Harris could file the proposed regulation with the Legislative Research Commission at any time, and it would become effective a month later. It would be legal if it was not at odds with the intent of the state's strip-mining law.

However, Harris said, he probably will hold public hearings to give all sides an opportunity to be heard.

Harris, formerly a Democratic state senator from the Carroll county community of Worthville, also said he has drafted a regulation that would designate the state Reclamation Division as the final arbiter in controversies about strip-mine siltation. He said he would probably hold hearings on that regulation, too.

"The lack of a standard definition and procedure for determining the maximum slope angle...has remained a problem which has prevented proper enforcement of Kentucky's strip-mine laws," Harris said. In the Eastern Kentucky coalfields especially, he said, the variation of steep terrain and slope degree have made precise measurements of the degree of terrain a complicated matter.

"The inevitable result has been repeated violation of the intent and letter of the laws and regulations governing strip and auger mining," he said.

Harris said he plans to establish a staff of engineers within the Reclamation Division. One engineer will certify the slope reading, which would be made part of the permit application.

The other proposal is an attempt to cope with strip-mine siltation, one of the largest polluters of waters in the mountains.

"In the belief that one division can more effectively implement a water quality regulation adopted by the Reclamation Commission for the permitting of silt basins, I am proposing that the Division of Reclamation make the final determination..." Harris said.

"This will require a close cooperative effort between the Division of Water and the Division of Reclamation.

"This will also allow operators seeking permits to be required to come to only one agency."

Harris acknowledged that situations could arise under which the Reclamation Division approves a permit which the Water Division finds is inadequate to prevent pollution.

In such eventualities the matter can be worked out between the officials, he indicated.

Harris repeated what he said during the last regular session as a legislator: That strip-mine operators are on trial and must prove they will protect the land or face an outright ban on their operations in 1974.

He also said: "I did not accept this job with the thought in mind that I would try to put anybody out of business...But, I hasten to say, all of us must adhere to the laws."

Division Perfects Tree Seed

By Lois Campbell
Frankfort, Ky.—One of the Division of Forestry's greatest potential contributions to Kentucky's economy is its tree nursery program.

To encourage Kentucky landowners in reforestation of idle and unproductive land, the division maintains three nurseries for the production of forest tree seedlings.

They are the Kentucky Dam Tree Nursery, Gilbertsville; Morgan County Tree Nursery and Woodsbend and Pennyrile State Tree Nursery at Dawson Springs.

With the objective of attaining the best possible seed for nursery production, and since the finished product, the tree, depends to a great extent on the seed from which it starts, the forestry division initiated a tree seed improvement program more than 10 years ago.

Since then, obtaining improved superior seed has been the continuing endeavor of the program.

John P. Rhody, associate forestry director in charge of Nursery Management, says the tree seed orchards are constantly observed, tested and researched so that applied treatment will continually insure the production of superior seed.

Growth factors are continually tested and improved. Perfected soil conditions are maintained, and careful observations are made throughout the growing season for the presence of insects and disease.

One of the more interesting methods of tree seed improvement is through clonal grafting. This involves grafting a superior tree tip onto a seedling, using a beeswax resin.

This generally results in a highly superior seedling. The method is similar to that used in developing hybrid fruit trees.

At present, loblolly and shortleaf pine seed are being produced at the Kentucky Dam nursery. Generally, seed orchards start to produce seed when they are seven to ten years old.

The seeds are processed at the state's seed extractory plant in the Pennyrile nursery and are kept in refrigerated storage until planting time.

With this tree seed program in effect, not only is superior seed being obtained but some $25,000 to $30,000 is being kept within the state. In the past this money has been paid to out-of-state seed dealers.

Long-range plans have been made to establish 500 acres of seed orchards to produce seed for all nursery production.

The loblolly, shortleaf and white pine seed orchards are being expanded. Other seed orchards with a greater variety of species, such as Virginia pine, white, red and cherrybark oak and black walnut, will be established soon. Production at the hybrid poplar and superior cottonwood orchards will be expanded to supply the demand.

Auxier, Weeksbury Win Top Spots In Development Competition

The Floyd County Community Development Association held its annual awards banquet at the TCT Truck Stop here June 27. The banquet, sponsored by the First National Bank of Prestonsburg, was held to honor the winning communities in the 1972 Floyd County Development Contest.

There were five communities competing this year in two categories. All five communities received blue ribbon certificates, and will later receive cash awards.

The two champion communities—Auxier in the village category and Weeksbury in rural non-farm—will also receive plaques and compete in the area contest against winning communities from 11 other counties in northeast Kentucky. The winners of the area contest will be honored at a banquet in Ashland, July 15.

The Floyd county contest was made possible by the Big Sandy RECC, of Paintsville, and the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce, each contributing money for prizes and awards, and by the First National Bank, which sponsored the banquet.

Racing Commission Finances Probe Set

Rep. Lloyd Clapp (D-Wingo), chairman of the Audit Committee of the Legislative Research Commission, says his committee will examine the finances of the Kentucky Racing Commission.

"They are a creature of the legislature so it's only logical that we have the authority to investigate the Racing Commission's finances," Clapp said.

During the recent special session of the General Assembly, Rep. Harold De Marcus, R-Stanford, House minority leader, asked for such an investigation.

Clapp said the commission apparently is prepared to cooperate in the investigation, which is expected to be ordered when the LRC committee meets in Frankfort July 20.

Non-Farm Jobs Rise To Record Numbers

The Department of Economic Security announced late last week that a record number of persons were employed in non-farm jobs in Kentucky during the month of May.

According to Economic Security Commissioner Gail S. Huecker, this new record represents 952,000 jobs, or 8,100 more than the previous high set in December, 1971.

An increase of 4,000 new jobs in wholesale and retail trade increased the total non-farm employment figure to its record high.

Commissioner Huecker expects the total number of non-farm jobs to reach the one million mark by the end of 1972.

Tighter Restrictions Would End Objections to Ky. Water Plan

Adoption of some proposed tighter restrictions would make Kentucky's interstate water quality standards "fully approvable" by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, according to Jack E. Ravan, administrator of EPA's Atlanta region.

Gov. Wendell Ford recently urged the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission to adopt those stricter standards in an effort to meet federal objections to the state's water quality regulations.

The conflict began last year when the state commission proposed recreational water standards for 40 per cent of the Ohio River in Kentucky, despite an EPS recommendation calling for such classification on all of the Ohio as well as the Big Sandy River.

The Ohio River, flowing along Kentucky's northern boundary, is considered

Kentucky territory, subject to Kentucky regulations.

Recreational and public water supply standards are the two highest of five classifications into which rivers are put for pollution control purposes.

Under the latest proposal, the commission would apply recreational standards to all of the Ohio River in Kentucky, the Big Sandy River, and Tug Ford and Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy.

Ravan told a recent commission hearing that adoption of the regulations would end all federal objections to the Kentucky water quality plan.

He also requested the commission to give recreational classification to 127 minor streams which cross into Tennessee, by no later than Jan. 1, 1973.

Cox Auto Parts Co. To Pay 10 Workers $5,989 Back Wages

Cox Auto Parts Company, of Pikeville, Paintsville and Prestonsburg, has been ordered to pay 10 employees back wages in the amount of $5,989.17 and to refrain from violating the overtime and record-keeping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson obtained the court order in U.S. district court for the Eastern district of Kentucky at Pikeville. The judgment was entered by Federal District Judge H. David Hermansdorfer. Under the terms of the judgment the money will be distributed to the individuals by the Department of Labor.

The judgment was entered following the filing of a complaint based upon an investigation conducted by personnel under the supervision of Area Director Ernest Orr, U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division.

What To Do In July

By Neville Shackelford
(UK College of Agriculture)

Glorious summer which begins in June reaches its maturity in July. Dog Days set in: vegetables ripen in the garden: mimosa, trumpet vine, Rose of Sharon, hydrangea, St. Johnswort, and sourwood bloom. Katydid begin calling from the trees and in the intense heat and languor of the season, there is a tendency to slow down just a little.

But still, according to Darrel Apps, Extension horticulturist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, there are many things to do in July.

Roses, for instance, need weekly sprays to control blackspot and powdery mildew. Ornamental shrubs should be checked for scale and spider mites. Old flower spikes of delphiniums should be cut back, bearded iris divided, and evergreen hedges such as taxus, euonymus, and Japanese holly should have some mid summer pruning.

For blackspot on the roses, Apps recommends Daconil 2787, phaltan, or maneb. If mildew is a problem, it can be checked with benlate, acti-dione PM, or karathane. Aphids often attack roses also. If found, they can be eradicated with a malathion spray.

For cleaning up scale on euonymus species, he recommends three sprays with malathion at weekly intervals during July. If spider mites are discovered on the evergreens, spray with a miticide such as kelthane.

In cutting back the old flower spikes of delphinium, Apps advises leaving a few bottom leaves until new shoots start from the base. Then remove the entire old stem.

In dividing iris for replanting, incorporate one-half cup of superphosphate deeply into the soil. Iris usually show up better if three to five fans are set out in each spot. Space the fans 12 to 15 inches apart and place them so that they will face outward from clump.

Pinch out the tips of late blooming chrysanthemums for the last time about July 15. Early blooming varieties (those flowering in late August) should not be touched.

July is a month that will raise a thirst, not only in the gardener, but also in his lawn. If rainfall is insufficient, Apps suggests watering once a week, leaving the sprinkler in one spot from one to three hours to deliver at least one inch of water. Daily sprinkling, he says, makes grass roots develop too near the surface where they cannot take advantage of subsoil moisture. Shallow, frequent watering helps weeds more than grass.

In doing the things that must be done in July, we may grumble about the heat, but one thing to keep in mind is this: at least we don't have to shovel it off our walks.

ALC Theatre To Present 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine'

The Appalachian Summer Theatre at Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes, will begin free showing of its second major production, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Monday, July 10.

The theatre, under the direction of Ken Baldrige, of Garrett, has already had outstanding success with its premiere performance of "The Wizard of Oz," which plays every Sunday at 2:30 in Cushing Hall on the Alice Lloyd College campus.

"Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which is based on the novel by John Fox, Jr., is a historical play about life in the Appalachian hills around the turn of the century. The story centers around a young mountain girl named June, played by Kay Strong, of Beattyville, and a Yankee intruder named Jack Hale, played by Dennis Burton, of Hazard. Hale comes to the hills to buy coal rights from June's father, but soon finds himself caught in a powerful drama which causes him to take a second look at what he is doing and to realize how much the mountain ways have to offer.

The Appalachian Summer Theatre will present free performances of "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" in rural communities of Floyd, Knott, Letcher and Leslie counties, where Alice Lloyd College maintains ALCOR centers.

In Floyd county, the play will be performed in Ligon on July 26.

Knott performances will be at Dry Creek on July 10, Watts Fork on July 12, Salt Lick on July 14, Mill Creek on July 28 and Bearville on August 1.

All performances will be at 6:30 p.m. "Our Appalachia," a day of singing, music, drama, story-telling and folk-dancing, will be held at Alice Lloyd College, July 8. The public is invited to perform or just enjoy the day, and admission to all events is free of charge.

Local church singing groups have been invited along with banjo, guitar, fiddle, dulcimer and harmonica players. They will perform and compete in contests, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Arts and crafts displays will open at 10 a.m., with various contests and story-telling at 1 p.m. The public is invited to bring picnic lunches, and the college will provide a free supper for all visitors.

CONTRIBUTION TO COLLEGE—Not every college can boast a contribution like this Mack truck but Pikeville College, is one that can. The truck was received recently in the college's $450,000 fundraising campaign. Contributors of labor or parts for the truck were Eastern Kentucky Mack, Inc. and the R. & S. Body Company, both of Allen, and the Diesel Injection Service, Louisville.

Rep. Lloyd Clapp, D-Wingo, chairman of the Audit Committee of the Legislative Research Commission, says his committee will examine the finances of the Kentucky Racing Commission. The investigation was requested during the recent special session of the General Assembly.

Mrs. Reba H. Gibson Shares in Award

Mrs. Reba Gibson shared in the Education Award presented recently by the Administrative Management Society, Louisville. Mrs. Gibson is the wife of John Gibson, formerly of Prestonsburg, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hammond, of Martin.

Business education departments of each high school in both the Louisville city and Jefferson county systems, are studied for one year before the AMS Award is presented. The award for outstanding business teaching and training went to the Ahrens Vocational Technical high school business education department.

Said B. G. Smith, coordinator of Ahrens business education department:

"A major factor in presenting the AMS Award is teacher professionalism. As a skilled teacher and technician of business subjects Mrs. Gibson has shown considerable ability in teaching, student job placement, and overall understanding of educational objectives. She has established a rapport with her students seldom equaled."

Mrs. Gibson, a former student at Berea College, and graduate of Morehead University, will return to Berea this fall to conduct a two-day workshop in business subjects. She will attend the summer conference of Kentucky Business and Office Education to be held in Murray, Kentucky this summer. She is a member of state and national Business Education Associations.

A law passed by the 1972 General Assembly may have greatly broadened Kentucky counties' power to regulate strip mining, according to the state attorney general's office. The law, Senate Bill 165, does not refer specifically to strip mining but is intended to strengthen and extend counties' general-making and taxing powers. The attorney general's office indicated the law might allow counties to regulate strip mining, as long as they would not conflict with the state constitution and statutes. Asst. Atty. Gen. Charles Runyon said more study will be needed to determine whether a given regulation would conflict with state law on the subject.

Church Here Honors Pastor for Service

The Rev. J. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, was honored Sunday by his congregation on the 10th anniversary year of his pastorate here. At the conclusion of the morning worship service he was presented by H. C. Francis, Jr., on behalf of the congregation, the keys to a new Chevrolet. Mr. Francis' remarks expressed appreciation of the minister's service to the church and community. The Rev. Jagers and his family were later guests of honor at a dinner given at Prestonsburg Community College by the congregation.

The plans for the expression of appreciation were known to every member of the church but it was a secret so well-kept that it was a complete surprise to the pastor. The appearance of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Jagers, of Elizabethtown, also was unexpected to him.

Ford To Lead Revival

The Philadelphia Church of Christ on Johns Creek will be led in revival beginning Sunday, July 16, Evangelist Bill Ford. Services daily will be held at 7:30 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

WE PREDICT

It's a great county. We are so convinced it is great that we confidently predict that the United States of America will survive another Presidential election.

See the "Definition"

Subscribing to the theory that a picture is worth 10,000 words, we are not defining the word, "Donnybrook," but are suggesting that any who need to know the meaning thereof should eye the "tube," beginning next Monday, and watch that Democratic convention.

Biologists and others have gone to considerable pains to learn when a fish grows fastest, but we call it all wasted effort. Any fisherman knows it's after they're caught.

THE CRAZY FISHERMAN

For no adequate reason I recount here the story of the man who was espied sitting out in a wide, open field, busily casting a lure out and retrieving it, tensed, ready for the strike. A passerby stopped to watch, and while he wondered what in tunket another man drew alongside.

"Wonder what that fellow thinks he's doing out there, fishing in that field?" the first spectator inquired.

"Never mind him," said the other. "That's my brother, and he's crazy. But he's harmless. As soon as I can get a boat I'll go out and get him and take him home."

WE LEND OUR SUPPORT...

It has been suggested to us that we should urge Floyd county's people to patronize those events of cultural value which are offered at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre, Prestonsburg Community College and elsewhere in Prestonsburg and the county. Our support and encouragement of these are needed. We gladly offer them generous helpings of publicity, and urge others to encourage these talented performers with their presence.

Which gives us an excuse—as if any were needed!—to urge upon our people a more important matter. Go to church, do not neglect something that is reality rather than mere realism, something that is life rather than mere living, and more of joy than enjoyment.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Cause me not to hide my light beneath a bushel. Let not my light be so small that it may be hidden beneath a thimble.

EASTERN NEWS

DeLeone will conduct the Orchestra and Ballet Company in a performance of four beautiful dances and three symphonic works. Tickets for the ballet performance are $1 per person.

The "picnic lunch bunch" will again be entertained at noon on Thursday, July 13, when the Cincinnati Symphony will present a "pops" concert with Carmon DeLeone conducting. Again, there is no charge for this hour of entertainment.

The final concert of the Mini Festival will be a performance by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m. on Thursday, July 13. Carmon DeLeone will conduct the concert which spotlights music by American composers and features Gwen Conley as soloist. Miss Conley is the popular young singer who appears regularly on "Bob Braun's 50-50 Club." She has traveled with the Dee Felice Trio on the James Brown concert tour and appeared at many nightspots. Gwen likes to sing message songs and writes a lot of her own material.

The Cincinnati Enquirer said of Gwen Conley: "She is a tall, regal, all-woman woman with the assurance of a young earth mother. At 30 she is smooth and polished in both looks and singing style, enticing and outgoing, full of warmth and promise, and through it all, so cool!"

Tickets for both the Wednesday and Thursday evening performances may be purchased at the Francis Store and Burchett's Jewelry in Prestonsburg and at Castle's and Wright's Jewelry in Paintsville.

This project is made possible by a grant to the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and Cincinnati Ballet Company from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Kentucky Arts Commission. The festival is sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Concert Series and Prestonsburg Community College.

Bring your own lawn chair and join the festivities. In the event of rain, concerts will be held at the Prestonsburg gym.

crawls over or under a train. They also contend that noise of trains and dust create discomfort and decrease the value of their property.

The suit asks damages of $20,000 and 25 cents a ton for all coal hauled, cleaned or processed on or over their land. A court order to restrain defendants from obstructing access to the home was also asked.

Damages totalling $150,000 were asked in a second suit filed here last week. In this action Mrs. Thelma Cook Hicks and her minor children, Mark V. Hicks and Jennifer Adams, claim permanent injuries as the result of vehicle collision and name as defendants the Southern States Cooperative, Charles William Young, of Grayson, and William J. Conlon, a resident of Michigan.

Mrs. Hicks alleges that Conlon so negligently operated his vehicle as to cause its collision with the Southern States vehicle driven by Young and that the co-op's truck then jack-knifed onto US 23, knocking down a stop sign and striking the Hicks car.

Ky. Police Increase Traffic Crackdown

The Kentucky State Police have launched an accelerated highway law-enforcement program as the state's 1972 traffic death toll continues to run ahead of the total for this time last year.

From his hospital bed in Houston, Governor Ford ordered Kentucky's 16 State Police post commanders to begin concentrated patrols on all high-accident roads and to organize special units to move from county to county in a coordinated, statewide drive to arrest traffic offenders.

The program is a continuation of the Memorial Day Weekend campaign which saw troopers donning black armbands to focus motorists' attention on Kentucky's spiraling death toll.

Maj. R. F. Norsworthy, State Police field commander, said all troopers participating in the program are equipped with radar and VASCAR-equipped vehicles and are being backed up by the patrol's aircraft.

Roadblocks and moving traffic surveillance are also being used, Norsworthy said.

Abolish Railroad Commission, Recommendation Made by LRC

The Kentucky Railroad Commission should be abolished and its functions transferred to another agency, according to a recommendation by the Legislative Research Commission.

"The amount of workload carried by the Railroad Commission does not justify a separate agency," the report said. "Nor does it justify the employment of a full-time staff."

The 1972 General Assembly placed on the November 1973 ballot a "cluster" amendment which would, among other things, eliminate the Railroad Commission.

A bad side effect of the commission's continued existence, the LRC contends, is that voters are not interested in who serves on it. "As a result, election does not insure properly qualified commissioners," the report said.

LRC staff member John D. Hinkle, who prepared the report, suggested placing the commission's duties under the Public Service Commission, and eventually with an agency regulating all transportation utilities.

"Kentucky today is unique among the states in the organizational arrangement it uses to regulate railroads," Hinkle said. "No other state has a regulatory commission now in existence for that primary purpose."

The Railroad Commission first was created in 1880 with power only to assess the values of railroads. Abuses of railroad power led to a stronger commission under the current State Constitution, written in 1891.

Since the commission's duties statutory—that is, established by law—rather than by constitution—it would be possible, Hinkle said, to transfer the duties without amending the State Constitution.

Ohio-Kentuckians Visit in Kentucky

By Judi Ledford Frankfort, Ky.—The O'Tucks, an organization of Ohio-Kentuckians who promote Kentucky culture, recently were presented an "Ambassador of Good Will" certificate by Tommy Preston, press secretary to Gov. Wendell Ford, on the Governor's behalf.

The presentation was made as some 75 members of the group visited the Capitol during a three-day tour of the state.

They also visited the Drug Clinical Research Center at Lexington, Cumberland Falls, Renfro Valley, a salt-peter cave in Rockcastle county, Bardonia, where they saw "The Stephen Foster Story", Shakertown and a Central Kentucky horse farm. The O'Tucks concluded their visit with a stop at the Versailles home of Ex. Gov. A. B. Chandler.

The group makes a three-day tour of the state each year and, according to O'Tucks founder Stanley DeZarn, only one tour has missed Frankfort. Past tours have concentrated on Eastern and Central Kentucky. But next year, DeZarn said, they hope to visit the western part of the state.

The group was formed in 1959 "to promote folklore and all the rich qualities we brought from Kentucky to Ohio," according to DeZarn, a Clay county native who presently is an elementary school principal in Hamilton, Ohio.

Membership in the O'Tucks numbers in the thousands, DeZarn said, but he could not give a definite figure.

Anyone may join the O'Tucks but only native Kentuckians may be elected officers or serve on the board of directors. Annual dues of $2 per person go into a fund for scholarships for needy boys and girls in Kentucky and Ohio.

Jim Cecere, an Ohio native who is active in the group, said 10,000 to 15,000 persons—7,000 to 8,000 of them Kentucky residents or natives—attend the group's folk festival at the Butler county (Ohio), fairgrounds each September.

DeZarn said people who move from Kentucky to Ohio find themselves in a different setting, and the organization helps them make necessary adjustments.

While he said he loves Ohio and plans to stay there, DeZarn added, "We will always be Kentuckians and promote Kentucky and remember our heritage."

The group's philosophy is to work together, he said. A recent project of the O'Tucks was the restoration of one of Hamilton's oldest homes. Now, DeZarn said, they want to build an outdoor theater in Butler county.

His selection to assume the coaching post vacated at the end of last season by Robert Slone was announced Monday by Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark. Setser's formal employment will be effected at next Saturday's meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education.

At the University of Mississippi Setser was a guard on the varsity basketball team. In baseball he was a pitcher. He was graduated from Ole Miss in 1969 and for the last two years has been basketball coach at Memphis Treadwell high, Memphis, Tennessee.

"I'm pleased to be back home," the new coach said Monday after conferring with Supt. Clark. He, his wife and son will move soon from Memphis to Prestonsburg.

The Hillbilly Has a Word for It

By LIDA WILSON PYLES
(In The Eureka Springs (Ark.) Times-Echo)

4-H GOES TO TOWN. Those Head-Heart-Hands-and Health kids have gone to town. Although lots of 4-H'ers are raising calves and baking blue-ribbon cakes, 4-H'ers in both country and city now do hundreds of other interesting things—in everyday science, entomology, child care, good grooming, photography, community development, home uses of electricity, dog care and training, bicycle safety, and many other subjects.

There was a time, several years ago, after the publication of some so-called humorous books on the Ozarks, that natives were ashamed to admit they lived in the Ozarks. Not so any more. From Maine to California they come to the hills for work, for play and for retirement.

It has been said that it is easy to tell if a man is a hillbilly. Just call him that. If it makes him mad, he isn't. True natives of the Ozark hills are not ashamed of that fact. About the best way to spot a native is to listen to his speech. Regardless of his education, sooner or later he will lapse into his native Ozark dialect. Often, college professors or other erudites with enough letters after their names to play a game of Scrabble, will say something like, "Oh, yes, I remember you. I seen you last summer."

It is natural for the Ozarkian to mix his tenses and drop final g's. In the early days, if one had enough formal education to know better, he was afraid to use correct English, for fear of being accused by his friends of, "puttin' on th' dog."

One of the most interesting things about the Ozark lingo is the similes which they use in description. Often an event or happening will be described in such a manner that the same expression is soon being used all over the country, sometimes by people who had no idea where the saying originated.

One such phrase is often used and is possibly familiar all over the United States when describing someone who has done well financially. Very often we hear that "John and his family are livin' high on th' hog."

Very few people who use the description know of its origin or that it was first used in the Ozarks, or when it was first used.

The early settlers mostly lived far below what is known as the poverty level today. Many people did not have money to buy the choice cuts of meat or to invest in a hog which they might butcher for their own use.

There were no freezers or any way to preserve their meat except to hang and smoke it. Thus...many of the less desirable cuts were given to their less fortunate neighbors, or sold at a very low figure. Naturally, the portions to be disposed of in such manner were not the choice cuts. Usually, the feet or the lower shank of the animal. If a family was able to buy the hams or more desirable cuts, they were "livin' high on th' hog."

It is believed that more true Ozark expressions originated in one certain area of the hills than perhaps all of the others combined. It is a strip ranging about ten miles in width, running on either side of the Missouri-Arkansas border. This area is often referred to as "Lap Land, where Missouri laps over into Arkansas."

There, one will hear stock expressions, often which had their origin in the same area, even though the origin has long since been forgotten. Often, when describing a good job well done, we hear someone say, "Well, that's just as good as Bill or Ned could do."

Few know or have taken the time to learn where the expression was first used.

It all goes back to the time when neighbors used to gather in some home on Butler Creek for an old fashioned square dance. The fiddlin' was usually done by Bill Walden or Ned Stapleton. Another young man in the neighborhood whose name has long ago been forgotten, was making a valiant effort to master the art. The sounds which came from his instrument were not conducive to dancing and he had been discouraged from playing by his friends.

One night neither of the regular fiddlers showed up for the dance and the young man decided that it was now or never. He resined his bow, took up his fiddle and began his tune. At the end of his efforts, he waited for the praise which failed to come. The crowd stood around in silence. It was not polite to fail to comment on the music but they could think of no favorable comment to make, so said nothing.

Waiting a few minutes the young fiddler said, "Well, that's about as good as Bill or Ned could do." The same phrase is used throughout the area, almost a century after it was first used.

The story is often told in that same area, of a man who was perhaps the world's most henpecked man. His wife told him each morning exactly what farm chores he was to do that day. He did them without question. One morning very early, he was seen approaching the home of his neighbor. The neighbor, surprised at seeing Old Ned, visiting around the neighborhood at such an early hour, finally asked him, "What are you going to do today Ned?" Old Ned bowed his head and said, "Well, I don't know what in the Hell to do. Sarah died last night."

It was true. His wife had passed away during the night and without her guidance her husband had no idea what to do. Today, when people in that area are undecided, they come up with Ned's summation, "I don't know what in the Hell to do, Sarah died last night."

Many of the pioneer families carved their spoons or other "eatin' tools" from pieces of cow's horn. That, as well as many crafts today, was an art of its own. Many people could waste a whole horn and never come up with anything which faintly resembled a spoon. One man, tired of making failures, finally told his wife, "I'm goin' to make a spoon or spile a horn."

So, today, more than a century later, often we hear, when one is making a last effort or "going for broke" that they are going to "make a spoon or spile a horn."

(Nobody used the word "spoil" in those days. They said "spile".) Frank Smith lived in Lap Land and in addition to illiteracy he had a speech impediment. Some of his expressions are still alive in that area today. Many love to tell of his threat to the roving hornet, who had landed in his coffee cup. The insect had made its way through the unscreened doors, along with any other winged creature who desired to share the family breakfast.

After buzzing the table a couple of times, the hornet made a perfect three-point landing in Frank's coffee. He took his spoon and carefully lifted the insect from the cup and placed it on the table. Soon, it was flying around again and repeated the process. Frank again lifted it from the cup and to the surface of the table. Solemnly, he spoke to the hornet, "Now, if I haf to do that again, I'm gonna' put you out rough."

Today, when patience is growing thin, someone invariably comes up with the remark, "If I have to do that again, I'm gonna put you out fough."

Inadequacy is also described in Lap Land by using a term which had its origin in that area. The story is told of Cal Emmery (a native of Searcy county) who was cutting ties on Butler Creek with a neighbor.

Their supply of drinking water had run out. The two men had started homeward, tired and thirsty. They came upon a wet weather spring which was almost dried up from the rays of the summer sun. Both men were thinking that perhaps there was enough water left in the hole to quench two thirsts. The neighbor, considerate of Cal's need as well as his own, stepped aside to allow Cal to get the first drink. He took his cup, improvised from a leaf, and dipped it into the water. He quickly drank the contents and went back for the second cup full, which took all the remaining water. He wiped the moisture from his lips with the back of his hand and said, "Well, that was a hell of a drink for two thirsty men."

That same expression is often used in that area today to describe anything in short supply. An original phrase is used in the same area too when one is in doubt and needs a fitting phrase to describe his indecision. The much told tale, is of a farmer and his young son who were looking for stray cattle and stopped at the home of a neighbor.

The host invited the visitors to stay for supper. His wife was busy making biscuits, chewing away on the snuff stick in one corner of her mouth. Hanging on to the end of the stick and almost ready to drop into the dough was a great gob of the tobacco juice.

The little boy was hungry from his walk in the woods and anxious to know if his father was going to accept the invitation. "Are we goin' to set for supper, Pa?" he asked.

"I don't know son," his father answered, "it all depends on which way the drop falls." Many folks in the hill country today, when waiting to make some kind of decision, explain it be saying, "It all depends on which way the drop falls." A greater percent of them have never taken the trouble to learn where or by whom it was first used.

In the early days, most wedding ceremonies were performed at the home of one of the contracting parties of the local Justice of the Peace. Occasionally the preacher was called upon to tie the knot. The state of Arkansas made it necessary for the couple to acquire a license long before the law went into effect in Missouri. Very often, couples went across the state line to be married in Missouri in order to avoid the cost of the marriage license. During pioneer days, it was common for a question, especially those asked by a minister, to be answered with "I'll endeavor so to do."

It is related that during a marriage ceremony in the hills, the bride being a spinster and anxious to get the groom tied fast and tight before he got away, answered the question in a manner which has never been forgotten and is still in use to describe definite intention. When the preacher had asked, "Will you take this man to be your lawful wedded husband?" She turned, spit a stream of tobacco juice into the fireplace beside her and answered, "Why, shore. I come apurpose."

The kitchen cuterly, too, comes in for one of the oft-told tales in the Ozark country. Most households was lacking in many of the necessities and all of the luxuries. No housewife had a complete set of anything. Her "eatin'" tools were a conglomeration of pieces gathered from here and there. Most of them were different and could be identified by description or name. It is told that one housewife named her kitchen knives thusly, "Big Butch, Little Butch, Old Case, Cob Handle and the One Granny Cut the Gut with."

The list of Ozark expressions is long, deathless and always amusing. Perhaps they will be used as long as the hills are the habitat of people. Newcomers to the area, pick them up from the natives and use them without knowledge of the origin. Even though we are invaded by people from all directions who once made jokes about the Ozarks and who now like to call them "home." The true hillbilly never changes his manner of speaking, very much.

Perhaps sometime, in the distant future, our great-grandchildren will be welcomed on the moon with, "Come up an' stay a week with us. We're just pore folks but we got so many pore ways, you'll be shore to like some of 'em."

In the first quarter of 1972, output per man-hour in the corporate sector rose 7 percent, compared to 4.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1971. This rise reflects an increase in real corporate output from 9.0 percent in the fourth quarter to 12 percent in the first quarter.

Mine Safety Regulations Hit By Judge in Leslie County Case

U. S. District Judge David H. Hermansdorfer voided coal mine safety regulations devised by the U. S. Secretary of the Interior in 1970 to carry out provisions of the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969.

He acted on a motion in the case involving the December, 1970 disaster in a Hyden mine owned by Charles Finley and the Finley Coal Co.

The judge held that the current underground mine-safety rules and regulations promulgated by former Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel are invalid, since the secretary did not consult with other government agencies and with coal interests before adopting the safety standards, as the federal law provides.

Hermansdorfer's opinion came unexpectedly after a pre-trial conference in Lexington during which defense attorneys and the prosecution met to lay ground rules for the trial of the owners of the ill-fated mine.

The trial of mine owners Charles Finley, of Manchester, and the Finley Coal Co., on 24 counts of violating the mine safety law was set to begin but was continued indefinitely after Hermansdorfer's ruling. Attorneys in the case were unsure what the judge's opinion means to enforcement, nationwide, of the mine safety law. U. S. Atty. Eugene Siler said, after a closed-door conference on the ruling in the judge's chambers, that the ruling is "the law" in the Eastern District of Kentucky until reversed on an appeal to a higher court. Siler said the ruling probably would set a precedent nationwide if there are similar cases pending, at least until the ruling is either upheld or reversed by a high court.

Siler also said, "The ruling has in effect dismissed at least some counts of the indictment, those concerning non-permissible explosives and excessive coal dust."

Siler said his office will immediately appeal the decision to the U. S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. One attorney involved in the case, who asked not to be quoted by name said the case may be postponed "three or four months" awaiting the appeal decision.

"It renders us unable to prosecute under some counts," said Asst. U. S. Atty. Eldon Webb, the government's chief prosecutor in the Hyden case.

Defense attorneys former Gov. Bert Combs and Edward F. Prichard Jr. of Frankfort, reserved comment on the ruling until it is filed in written form.

East Kentucky Co. Judge May Ban Silt Dams

Pike County Judge Wayne Rutherford said last week that he proposes to use the power of Home Rule to prevent state-ordered coal-silt dams from being built in valleys of his county which are prone to flooding, and other county judges of the region, including Floyd County Judge Henry Stumbo, are sympathetic toward his plan.

Action at the county level is considered to halt the construction of larger dams.

"They are too dangerous on our steep slopes," Judge Rutherford said of the large dams. "They won't hold when heavy rains come down the slopes. Somebody might be washed away."

Judge Stumbo commented: "The big dams could be dangerous, and I don't want our people hurt. I will give some more thought later to stopping them if it turns out that the counties have that power."

Judges George Wooten, of Leslie county, and Robert B. Collins, of Letcher county, were strong in their support of the Pike county plan.

(The U. S. Bureau of Mines reported recently after an on-site inspection of Floyd county silt dams that there is no dangerous dam of this type in the county at this time.)

Natural Resources Commissioner Tom Harris said in Frankfort his thought has been that Rutherford was opposed only to the larger dams proposed under a directive issued recently by Buddy A. Beach, acting director of reclamation.

The directive stipulated that strip-mine permits will be issued only after plans for silt basins, to catch the runoff from mining operations, have been submitted and approved.

Harris said his department is just as concerned as the judge over big basins that might break and flood the hollows.

"We don't want that, either," he said. "There are many places where we would not permit one larger dam. There might be two or three smaller ones instead. All will have to meet our criteria."

"I called Beach," Rutherford said, "and I told him I am a reasonable man, not a crank, but that 'I am not going to let you build those big dams in this county.'"

He said Beach was noncommittal, but that Pike county coal men are complaining that they still are not getting their permits. Harris said 48 applications for permits are pending from applicants who have not submitted silt-basin plans.

The fear of dam-bursts stems from the Buffalo Creek, W. Va. disaster. A strip-mine operation on Mud Creek was reported halted last week when residents of the valley below it staged a demonstration.

Paul Justice, of Pike county, owner of the operation, denied that the work was stopped by the demonstrators. He claimed work had already been shut down for repairs.

John Sherman Cooper Backs $664,000 Study of Strip-Mining

In the new Appropriations bill voted by the U. S. Senate last week $664,000 was included for research in strip-mining to be conducted by the U. S. Forest Service at its Berea experiment station.

The Senate also approved $200,000 for construction of the Martin local flood protection project. Since this is the same amount voted by the House, the Senate action assures these funds for the Martin work.

The amount voted for the strip-mining study represents an increase of $300,000 over the 1973 budget recommendation of $364,000 and an increase of $150,000 over the amount provided by the House passed bill. Senator Cooper—who had testified before Senator Bible's Interior Appropriations Subcommittee for the funds—urged the Senate conferees to insist upon the higher Senate figure when they meet with the House conferees to work out the differences between the Senate and House bills.

Senator Cooper said, "While $664,000 is less than the amount which I had requested for the research effort, it represents almost a doubling of current funds used in the research and can significantly accelerate the effort."

Senator Cooper, who in 1964 had requested and secured the first substantial increase in appropriations for the Berea Experiment Station, urged the Congress to expand the research effort further in future years to the full capability of the Forest Service. Senator Cooper told the Senate, "Reclamation is dependent upon the store of knowledge and technology in methods of reducing or preventing damage to the land, environment and forest resources during surface mining operations and of restoring these values during and after mining."

The research at Berea is the only effective federal research conducted in reclaiming contour strip-mined land, Cooper said. "Unless remedial action is undertaken soon, our hills and mountain lands may be spoiled without the prospect of restoration. This research is absolutely vital to efforts of reclamation," Cooper added.

Refuse Act Invoked, Area Mines Probed

George Harlow, chief of the enforcement branch of the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Atlanta, Ga., admitted last week that two special investigators have been assigned to Kentucky with specific instructions to comply with the 1899 Refuse Act which forbids industrial pollution and obstruction of all navigable streams and their tributaries. Assistant U. S. Attorney John Compton, Lexington, of the Eastern district of Kentucky, said federal agencies plan the investigation, first, of larger coal companies and eventually to check virtually every operation.

The work of investigation apparently is beginning in the Kentucky River section, because, it was said:

The federal government's enforcement of the long-neglected Refuse Act followed a letter-writing campaign by Whitesburg's Harry Caudill, author-attorney. He informed the Louisville district, U. S. Corps of Engineers, and the U. S. district attorney's office in Lexington that coal companies in his county were not complying with the law.

Harlow emphasized the point that the crackdown is not aimed especially at a particular industry but that it came about in the coal fields after several coal companies had indicated they did not know about the law or felt they were not subject to its terms.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Compton said most Kentucky coal operations violate at least some parts of the 1899 law.

The Big Sandy, Kentucky and Licking rivers are all classed as navigable streams, and they and their tributaries cover the Eastern Kentucky coal field.

Spokesmen for both the Huntington, W. Va. and Louisville Corps of Engineers' offices and the U. S. district attorney's office in Lexington confirmed the fact that the investigation is under way under the 1899 law as a means of cleaning up silted and acid-polluted streams, many of which have been impounded through costly federal flood control projects.

In this category is Dewey Lake, which is widely reported to be acid-ridden and suffering from siltation as a result of strip-mining in the Pike county headwaters of Johns Creek, which is the source of the impoundment. Fishtrap Reservoir in Pike county has been an outstanding example of siltation.

One coal company cited by Harry Caudill as a violator—the Elkhorn Jellico Coal Co., of Whitesburg—has already been visited by an EPA investigator and has been given a timetable for correcting four alleged violations of the 1899 law.

Under the Refuse Act, violators are subject to criminal prosecution and fines of $500 to $2,500 for each day of the violation or imprisonment for not less than 30 days nor more than one year, or both. The law also provides that a citizen who informs the corps of the appropriate U. S. attorney about a violation and gives sufficient information to lead to conviction is entitled to one-half the fine set by the court.

EPA enforcement chief Harlow said the pollution problem, and the crackdown, also extends to several oil producers in Western Kentucky, where wastes from wells have been emptied or permitted to flow into navigable streams.

Youth Accused Of Kidnapping

A youth who had given his address as Prestonsburg but who actually is a resident of the Middle Fork section of Magoffin county was sought last week as the alleged kidnapper of an Index, Morgan county woman.

The fugitive, Eddie Risner, is accused of forcing Mrs. Janie Sheets into the trunk of his car and driving to Magoffin county where he fled at the approach of deputy sheriffs.

His hostage is the mother of Freddie Alan Sheets, 15, who was drowned two weeks earlier in Grayson Reservoir.

Mrs. Sheets, an employee of the Riverside Motor Company at Index, had accompanied the youth to the courthouse in nearby West Liberty to effect the transfer of title of a car to young Risner. Instead of driving her back to Index, he turned in the opposite direction, later stopped the vehicle and at gunpoint forced her into the trunk. When he stopped in Magoffin county at the home of a relative, Mrs. Sheets screamed. He drove away, but officers were notified and soon thereafter he abandoned the car.

Winfred Howard, a salesman at the motor company, said Risner told him he lived here. Risner was described as "harmless looking little fellow," but he later was described as dangerous. He is reportedly a two-time escapee from a reform school.

Ford Names 12-Member Group To Form State Safety Plan

All industries involved in interstate commerce are subject to the provisions of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, which is regarded as legislation having the most profound effect on industry, but if Kentucky's Department of Labor can submit to the U. S. Department of Labor a total plan equal to or superior to the federal plan, the Kentucky department will have complete control of inspection and enforcement of the state plan.

A 12-member committee was appointed last week by Governor Wendell H. Ford to undertake formulation for Kentucky of such a plan, and one of those named is Homer D. Neeley, of Prestonsburg, supervisor of safety for the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company. Membership of the committee is divided evenly between representatives of labor and industry. Mr. Neeley, a 19-year employee of the gas company and a member of the American Society of Safety Engineers, said the committee is expected to begin work this month.

If the plan evolved by the committee is acceptable to the U. S. Labor Department, its operation will be monitored by the federal department during a three-year probationary period.

Purpose of the law is to assure every employee a safe and healthful place of employment, free from recognized hazards which are causing, or likely to cause, serious physical injury or death. The Secretary of Labor has authority to set safety and health standards.

Inspections are to be made by representatives of the Secretary of Labor with representatives of employees and management, of places of employment while actual work is in progress. Employees or their representatives may request an inspection if they feel a situation of "imminent danger" exists, or that a standard is being violated.

Citations may be issued if an inspector or compliance officer determines standards or a specific standard is being violated.

If a citation is issued an employer has 15 working days to contest the citation or penalty, of both. Civil penalties up to $1,000 are provided for violations. Willful violations of standards which result in death are subject to a fine of up to $10,000 and six months' imprisonment. Failure to adhere to posting of notices, etc., carries a fine of $1,000 for each violation.

A plant may be partially or completely shut down if an "imminent danger" situation develops, until the condition is corrected. (This may be accomplished by a U. S. district court order).

The law requires records to be maintained of all work-related deaths, injuries, and illnesses, excluding minor first-aid treatment cases. Records of employees who are exposed to materials potentially hazardous must be kept and employees permitted to review them.

NOTICE

State Reclamation Director Buddy A. Beach says new regulations are being drafted to bring "punch mining" and other in-between mining techniques under Kentucky's new strip mine law. Punch mining involves the use of deep-mining to remove coal from an already stripped surface seam. Since coal is mined from shallow shafts in the highwall, the process legally is considered deep mining and therefore not subject to the strip mine law.

Special Treatment For Special Kids

(Photos By Department of Public Information)

The Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children was established in 1924 primarily to help victims of polio epidemics. Today the state agency treats various handicaps in persons up to age 21 whose families are unable to meet the full cost of medical care and treatment. With offices in Louisville, Lexington, Paducah and Bowling Green, the commission frequently holds specialty clinics in these and 12 other cities around Kentucky. Recently, at an area clinic for children with orthopedic handicaps in Bowling Green, patients were seen first by a pediatrician, then by a specialist in orthopedics. Finally, patients and parents were interviewed by a nurse to review the doctors' findings, make recommendations and follow through any of the doctors' orders.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

The famous cross-vine, a hardy evergreen of the Tri-State region, is a member of the Bignonia family, which includes our beautiful catalpa trees. This vine was named after a French clergyman, Abbe Jean-Paul Bignon, who was also librarian to the Royal Court at Paris.

If you should find this vine climbing up a tall tree in the woods of winter, you would see evergreen pairs of leaves extending all the way to the top of the tree. The leaves are quite hardy and can withstand severe winters. They turn a little purple but retain their fresh, vigorous look. Cut a cross section out of the stem of this vine, one that is about the size of a lead pencil, and examine it closely. You will see plainly showing in the woody stem a perfect cross. No matter where you might cut the stem crosswise, the cross will always show.

Some claim that this vine with its cross imprinted in the woody stem is nature's way of keeping the memory of Christ's Cross. Those who have observed this vine closely point out many analogies between it and the Christian way of life. First, there is the vine keeping green and vigorous all through the severe storms and cold of winter; so should the Christian follower of Christ keep his faith alive through the severe storms and tribulations of life. The cross-vine is also a climber; it clings to the bark of trees by means of tendrils formed at the crotch of each pair of leaflets. These tendrils cling with a firm hold, so that no storm wind can tear the vine loose. So should Christian believers cling to the Body of Christ and find safe anchor in the storm.

The vine is a diligent seeker after the pure, bright sunlight and air; which it can get by climbing to the tops of tall trees; it is not content to keep low along the earth but seeks the higher realm of tree-tops. So should the follower of Christ renounce the low, earthly things of life and seek the sunlight of God's pure love and mercy.

The cross-vine produces beautiful flowers, which are a showy reddish-orange and often form crowns and garlands in the branches of trees. The flowers are shaped like bells and ring out the glad tidings of spring; they appear in May and often swathe the host tree with their gorgeous blossoms. Some call the beautiful flowers the "bells of glory," which ring out the glad news of God's marvelous creation of earth's beauty—the gorgeous colors of the wild flowers, the fresh new green of spring and the resurrection of life at springtime.

The flowers of the cross-vine are large and showy and have five lobed divisions; the inside of the flower is a rich orange-yellow and the throat is a brilliant orange-red. Oldtimers of the region called it the "snake vine," and would sometimes go to the winter woods to scrape the bark from the vines, for use in a pipe tobacco mixture.

HOW MUCH OF A STEER IS STEAK?
Just over ten percent of the original live weight of a 1,100-pound steer ends up as steak. Such a steer will cut out a 660-pound carcass which yields about 485 pounds of trimmed saleable meat. This is converted to about 112 pounds of steak, 102 pounds of roast, and 272 pounds of ground beef, brisket, plate, stew meat, short ribs, cube steak, bone, and fat.

This vine is abundant in the southern counties of West Virginia and in all of Eastern Kentucky. I am told that it is seldom found as far west as Charleston and is sometimes found as far west as Missouri and Illinois. The leaves are formed in opposite pairs on the stem, with two paired leaflets at either end. Once I found a cross-vine that had climbed about 100 feet up the trunk of a large chestnut oak.

THE FAVORITE FLOWER OF HUMMINGBIRDS

This is another member of the Bignonia family, which produces large, showy trumpet-shaped blossoms of a gorgeous reddish-orange color. The large trumpets are eagerly sought by hummingbirds, which are the only creatures that can pollinate the trumpet vine. With their long, needlelike bills, the birds can reach down deep in the trumpet-corollas to get the rich nectar. If you like hummingbirds about the premises, cultivate the trumpet creeper and you'll attract lots of them. This vine is known to the botanists as CAMPSIS RADICANS, which signifies rooting. The vine doesn't bear tendrils like cross-vine but puts out aerial roots, which fasten onto the trunks and limbs of trees, or on a rail fence, where there is often seen trumpet vines trailing for several feet. The vine is hardy and persistent and its roots go deep in the earth. Farmers do not like the vine as well as the hummingbirds do, as it is hard to eradicate when it gets a start in fields or clearings. It is found in deep woods as well as in open places. It is a vine well worth growing for the sheer beauty of its large orange-red trumpets, which may grow to a length of three inches. It is said these flowers produce more rich nectar than most others, which makes them the special favorite of hummingbirds.

The most beautiful sight of flowers I have ever seen was the large display of the orange-red trumpets of this vine in the top of a tree. The crown of the tree was literally covered by the showy flowers.

The leaves of this vine are large, compound and bear about 11 toothed leaflets. The large flowers produce curved seed pods as long as one's finger; these pods split down the middle in autumn, to release their winged seeds.

While farmers detest this vine and call it "the devil's shoestrings," it is nevertheless one of our finest ornamental vines. When planted along fence rows or the border of fields, the vine forms good cover for the birds. The flowers appear in our region in July and lend a brilliant splash of color to the countryside.

Trumpet vine is found throughout most of West Virginia and Kentucky and as far south as Texas and Florida

Kentucky Permit Required For State Road Entrance

Many citizens are not aware that the state law requires a permit for construction of private and commercial entrances to the state road system across the Department of Highways' right-of-way.

"In order to protect the safety of the traveling public on state maintained highways, we have to see to it that entrances are properly drained and do not produce a sight hazard," said Russell Romine, director of the Division of Maintenance. The law refers not only to driveways, but also to buildings, fences, trees, ditches, embankments, signs, utility lines, and mailbox turnouts. This is a limited list of encroachments. It is safe to say, anything affecting state right of way must be covered by a permit, he said.

Applications for permits may be obtained at no cost from the Department's district offices. After a permit for a private entrance is obtained, the applicant is required to furnish any necessary materials as specified by the Department. It is the Department's policy to install private entrances, except where the cost would be considered excessive. In such a case, it would be the applicant's responsibility to both furnish the materials and do the required work.

Where commercial interests are involved, the applicant is responsible for the cost of both the materials and the construction in compliance with the plans provided by the applicant and approved by the district engineer.

If the Department finds any driveway or other encroachment interfering with the safe, continuous use and maintenance of a state highway, the person responsible will be given a 30-day notice to remove the encroachment. Failure to comply with this notice will result in the removal of the encroachment at the expense of the person responsible.

"These are in no way unreasonable provisions," said Romine. "They were designed specifically to provide convenient access to highway facilities without interrupting normal highway traffic and to maintain the beauty of the roadside."

Sports Afield

By Ted Kesting

"Thunderstorms are nature's best-staged horror show," according to Zack Taylor, Boating Editor of "Sports Afield." First come the lowering skies, the approach of an ominous black cloud, the ear-splitting crash of the heavens rent asunder. Then come the lightning bolts, smashing the earth like blows from a giant's fist. Who among us has not been a spectator to their awesome power? Shattered trees, exploded rocks, fire and death follow in their wake.

We are assured by popular writers that lightning is a "deadly killer." Story after story dramatizes how some luckless person was laid low by it. Yet the facts say very clearly that the danger element lightning poses is actually negligible. For all its might, lightning actually kills an amazingly small number of people.

Consider these facts. Between 1959 and 1965 an average of 150 persons in this country were killed yearly by lightning, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. Lightning-attributed injuries accounted for some 250 more. These are the figures the government uses. Writers attempting to exaggerate lightning danger usually add to the death toll those persons burned to death in fires thought to have resulted from lightning. This figure brings the total to 600 deaths yearly.

Using even this larger figure, the hazards of being struck by lightning are pretty slight compared with the hazards of other forms of activity. If you go swimming the chances are ten times greater that you'll drown. Some 6800 do every year. Walking down the back steps is 32 times more perilous. Falls kill 19,000 yearly. But if you don't want to rely entirely on statistics here are some words of advice.

To minimize lightning danger: STAY INDOORS. Inside any structure, the dangers of a direct blow are avoided and it is far likelier that lightning will divert through ground via pipes, wires or the wet sides of buildings than through you.

STAY IN A VEHICLE. Inside your car, camper or trailer, you are absolutely safe from lightning.

GET OUT OF THE WATER AND GET OFF THE WATER. Don't wade or swim. If in a boat, go to shore or get in the cabin. AVOID METAL WIRE SYSTEMS. Lightning can flash sideways through pipes, wires and fences. Avoid the telephone, plug-in electrical appliances and pipe lines all of which could carry a brief surge of voltage which could harm you if you are in actual contact with the conductor.

GET TO LOW GROUND AND TAKE COVER. A good spot if you can't get indoors is in a woods where all the trees are the same height. Perch under a low one. Any steel structure is a grounded lightning rod. Get near one but don't touch.

The U. S. Employment Service placed 1,120,547 persons in jobs during the first half of fiscal 1972. This represents a 37 percent increase over the 845,454 placements made in the first half of fiscal 1971.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D

Just where is Far Away how? It used to be some ten or fifteen miles away, say at the county seat. Since we had relatives two and three miles beyond the county seat, they certainly lived far away. They were so far away that I grew up without knowing any relative intimately. Once in every two or three years, after I got to be six or more years old, I would go for a visit to some of the relatives, along with Mother or Big Sister. And it took me many months to run out of telling all the odd things I had seen over on the other side of the world from us.

But, by and by I became old enough to go away to school and did go away, first some seventy-five miles away; and then all the way to Bowling Green, some two hundred miles by rail but a good deal less than that if I could have gone as the crow flies. By degrees, but in no sense very fast, I managed to get still farther away from Fidelity; however, I have never had and will never have the chance to see the other side of the Atlantic Ocean; it is my Carcassonne. But I have enjoyed the portions of America that I have seen and have felt almost as much thrilled as I used to feel when I had gone ten or fifteen miles from home.

Humanity has been very much like me for most of my life. It has gradually got beyond the county or state lines and come home with a desire to travel farther and see more. Some thousands of our people, too, have "been about," in the earlier phrase. Through the courtesy of Uncle Sam, lots of men and boys whom I have known have been to the veritable ends of the earth. A sort of milepost was set up in my class the day a student who was to make a three-minute speech began, "One morning as I was flying over the North Pole." Such a statement could have occurred in my youth only in a fairy story. But my student had been there and was in no sense trying to brag about it, as we bragged outrageously about having been three miles west of Murray, where the Wilson-Robertson clan lived. The student used this quaint introduction to say how, while flying over the North Pole on a typical twice-a-week visit, he could see, even with his eyes open, not the endless miles of snow and ice but the shady old swimming-hole where he had spent many a happy hour. Even though he had literally been to the ends of the earth, he was still a boy, just such a boy as used to tell about seeing a train and how badly it scared the old family nag.

This round-about introduction is just my way of reminding the people who read this that the same thrills that awaited us around the next bend of the road now come to flying boys or sailing boys and, quite lately, to air sailors who have been so far from Fidelity and the Martin's Chapel neighborhood that the whole earth was merely a large ball on the horizon. It has taken some adjusting to things, but in one man's lifetime we have gone from Fidelity to Murray and a little beyond and, believe it or not, others have gone away out yonder, thousands of times as far as I used to feel was a "fur piece." Let me moralize a little as I go along, for the problems that were alive and kicking at Fidelity in the mis-named Gay Nineties beset the descendants of that older generation and challenged the far-travelers as well as the stay-at-homes. It has been much easier to widen one's physical horizon than one's mental horizon. Prejudices in small worlds such as I knew seem perfectly normal; what did we know? Where had we been? How could we have any feeling for strange people over in another county or state? It has been a rather large moon voyage of adjustment from those early days; some of us have made it; some haven't. Why, as a folklorist I find almost every week some old, old belief or prejudice that was laughed at back in my Fidelity days, ideas that should have been adjusted to a bigger world along with the coming of the automobile, the airplane, and the rest of the modern gadgets of civilization.

Kentucky Gasoline Consumption Is Above National Average

Consumption of gasoline in Kentucky increased 6.7 percent in 1971, compared to the previous year, according to Thomas H. Maxedon, executive director of the Kentucky Petroleum Council.

Maxedon noted that Kentucky's percentage of increase last year was 63 percent higher than the national average of all states. He attributed a large portion of this increase to the fact that Kentucky's gasoline tax rate during 1971 was competitive with the tax rate in Kentucky's bordering states. The 2 cents a gallon increase in Kentucky's gasoline tax enacted by the last session of the Kentucky General Assembly will make Kentucky's gasoline tax higher than any state bordering Kentucky and could affect future sales, particularly in those Kentucky cities close to the state line, he added, the increase in Kentucky's gasoline tax will become effective on July 1 of this year and will provide a combined state and federal tax of 13 cents a gallon.

Total gasoline consumption for both highway and non-highway use in Kentucky in 1971 amounted to 1,541,088,000 gallons, Maxedon reported.

By comparison, he pointed out that Kentucky's gasoline consumption in 1970 amounted to 1,447,209,000 gallons.
