JOB APPLICANT

The thermometer was threatening to strike boil when "Snow" White, at the melting point, entered these airconditioned precincts, the other afternoon, and panted: "Wouldn't mind havin' a job sleepin' in here."

DEFLATION

When a woman reader in another state informed us that The Floyd County Times is the finest newspaper that swims into her ken, the old hatband began to get real tight. Then she explained why:

"Yours is the only newspaper I get that isn't full of Watergate."

I am well aware of the fact that a lot of news doesn't necessarily win friends.

FRETFUL HANDS

Fiddle, banjo, guitar, piano, organ, zither-you name it, and I can't play it. And don't spring that fiction on me that anybody can play a musical instrument,

The scene at Archer Park as patients and other guests began arriving for last Wednesday's annual picnic. Mrs. Eva Allen Horn, president of the sponsoring Mental Health-Mental Retardation Association, appears in foreground.

Patients Come Home To Park Picnic Here

The Floyd County Mental Health-Mental Retardation Association's third annual picnic, held last Wednesday at Archer Park here, was attended by approximately 200 people, and association president, Mrs. Eva Horn, termed the day's activity "a great success.

Court House Happenings

Twenty patients from Eastern State Hospital, Lexington, were brought by bus to the outing and approximately 80 former Eastern State patients now living in After-Care homes in the county attended. A number of patients from the Golden Years Rest Home at Lackey enjoyed the event and family members of all these joined to make of the day what Mrs. Horn called "a combination picnic, homecoming and family reunion.'

The reuniting of patients with their families was a primary reason for

Title I Fund Cut To Cost 21 Jobs Meet To Decide Floyd Schools Probe Direction Lose $217,000; Teachers Hit In Archer Death

A decision on the direction the investigation into the shooting death here July 12 of Dr. George P. Archer will take was expected to be reached here at a meeting Tuesday of officers and officials engaged in the probe.

Identification of the murder weapon through ballistics tests made at the State Police laboratory apparently failed. Condition of the bullet which killed Dr. Archer was such that laboratory technicians declined to make a definite statement, officials were told, although a written report of the test results has not been made.

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said he has "nothing new" on the case and that nothing is expected until further investigation is made. He indicated that a court of inquiry may be considered in order to get testimony on the official record.

To Paint Landscape During TV Show

The Floyd county school system will lose approximately $217,000 in Title I funds this year, Supt. of Schools Charles Clark learned Friday, and as a consequence three supportive units involving 21.6 teaching positions will of necessity be eliminated.

The situation in this county is common to all Eastern Kentucky counties in ROPES Region 11, except Magoffin, and creates what is described as "a crisis." In the region between 150 and 200 teachers will lose their jobs, it was predicted.

Announcement of the Title I loss-from $842,000 last year to $625,360 for the 1973-'74 school year-was made the more shocking, Supt. Clark said, because Kentucky had been assured more funds this year than last and Floyd's as well as other school districts had proceeded with planning and hiring on the basis of that assurance.

The state as a whole is receiving more Title I funds, but the factors of school population and the economic status of pupils' families enters the picture. Title I benefits are limited to children of families with an annual income of less than $2,000 a year. Floyd county lost some of these pupils in the allocation of funds, according to the 1970 census, which showed that the school population had dropped from the 11,000 population figure used in the original calculation to around 9,000 at the 1970 census. That and the improvement of the financial status of many families-some from black lung,

Dr. Allen Is New Health Board Chm.

Dr. Claude L. Allen, of Langley and Martin, was named chairman of the Floyd County Board of Health last week to fill the vacancy created by the death of Dr. George P. Archer.

The place on the board occupied by a registered nurse remains to be filled following the resignation of Mrs. Shirley Callihan, who left the board to become a nurse with the Floyd County Health Department. The district association of registered nurses has been asked to nominate a nurse to succeed Mrs. Callihan on the board.

Yet another appointment remains to be made from the ranks of Floyd doctors.

Martin County Girl, New RECC Queen

Miss Vicki Pack, of Inez, is crowned Miss Big Sandy RECC, 1973 by the 1972 queen, Sharon O'Quinn, of Garrett, as Marti Brown, Nashville, Tenn., an entertainer at the RECC annual meeting here, and Miss Clydia Warrix, of Hueysville, first runnerup in the beauty contest, look on.

Miss Vicki Pack, 17-year-old daughter First runnerup honors in the contest Ratliff, 11, Denver; Air Conditioner, organizing the yearly event, Mrs. Horn Judy McKinney Collins vs. Raymond said. It was decided to institute the picnics after it was discussed at an association meeting "how lonesome these people get and how good it would be for them to be able to come home, even if it was just once a year."

> Volunteer workers and staff personnel prehensive Care Center and the Social Service Administration assisted, and association members brought such things as soft drinks, cakes, salads and vegetables while Eastern State supplied hot dogs, buns and lemonade.

> Bingo, volley ball and horse shoes were enjoyed. Bill Little, of the Prestonsburg Rural Day Care Center, sang familiar songs to guitar accompaniment and led a sing-along which was especially popular among the patients last year.

> "They had a wonderful time and many of the patients remembered us by name from last year's picnic," Mrs. Horn said. She explained that many of the patients' families are unable to visit them due to problems of transportation, so the patients "really look forward to the event as a family reunion and homecoming.'

Local mental health agencies have made attempts to secure some sort of funding which would provide for occasional transportation of patients families for visits at Eastern State, Mrs. Horn said, but no response has been received.

One of the most rewarding "byproducts" of the annual picnic, according to Mrs. Horn, is the cooperative atmosphere that exists between volunteers and the response of the community and county. "This event involves the county as much as the community," she said, "and the response from both is great."

City Clerk Dies, Gunshot Victim, Friday Morning

Mrs. Judith D. Archer, 46, wife of William T. Archer, and city clerk of Prestonsburg for 27 years, was found dead at her South Arnold Avenue home here,early last Friday morning, the victim of a revolver bullet.

The .32-calibre bullet wound in her left breast was self-inflicted, it was held by an inquest jury empanelled by County Judge Henry Stumbo in the absence of Coroner James J. Carter.

A note addressed to her husband said, in part: "I am not concerned about any murder conviction, but I am too old to think about starting a new life in another place . One of several persons who had been questioned by officers following the slaying here a week earlier of Dr. George P. Archer, she had denied knowledge of the tragedy and had been supported in that claim by the testimony of two others.

A petition, widely circulated over the county, was returned to the meet with hundreds of names in favor of the club's program. "We are a growing group of Floyd county citizens who wish to preserve the natural beauty of our mountains and streams," the petition

The girl, according to her father, went to "band camp" at Camp Crescendo, and he alleges that Boesser, as agent or employee of the camp, unlawfully and without cause forcibly arrested her and held her prisoner at the camp, which is located near Lebanon Junction, Ky.

Plaintiff claims the girl was held "with the intent to humiliate and disgrace" her, and that she was held Aug. 7 and 8 and until about 4 a.m. Aug. 9 when, Greathouse claims, he released her.

The cost of treatment of the girl following the incident was placed at $5,000. Plaintiff asks $25,000 compensatory damages and $500,000 punitive damages.

A Strong Voice Lost . . .

(An editorial from The Paintsville Herald)

Eastern Kentucky lost a strong voice and an outstanding leader last week with the death of Dr. George Archer.

Blunt and outspoken, George Archer devoted an inordinate amount of his valuable time to Prestonsburg, Floyd County, the five-county development district for the Big Sandy and to all of Eastern Kentucky. He seldom missed an opportunity to get involved in anything for the benefit of this part of the Commonwealth. And he left little doubt where he stood, on any issue. Chain-smoking his way through a conversation, punctuating it with colorful language, he was a force to be reckoned with on any matter. George Archer, to say it in a few words, was a man who got things done.

His accomplishments have been recounted in detail in the stories of his death, and there is no need to dwell upon them here. Many of them stand in plain sight . . the regional hospital, the doctor's clinic, the city park, and the downtown parking lot in Prestonsburg, among others.

What is not visible ... and what will be missed the most ... is the man himself. George Archer believed in, and worked tirelessly for, Eastern Kentucky's future. The breed is scarce, and his absence will indeed be noticed. That, perhaps, is the greatest single tribute we could offer.

Tribute to Dr. Archer

Editor, The Times:

Thank Those Who Helped

Editor, The Times:

Having worked in the Floyd County Health Department the number of years and appreciation to John Earl Dillion, I have, I would like to pay tribute to the late George P. Archer, M. D., chairman of the Floyd County Board of Health, for the many things he has done that can be seen and also for the many things he did that were never known. Dr. Archer served as chairman for the Floyd County Board of Health from June, 1953 to April, 1965 when he resigned to serve as a member on the State Board of Health. During these years Dr. Archer accomplished many things in Health for the people of Floyd county. Some of these were: Instrumental in the building of a new health center that officially opened in July, 1957, helping to get the U.S. Public Health Service to station the Cumberland Field Station in West Prestonsburg for treatment of intestinal parasites; helping to pass a county health tax for Floyd county health needs; establishing a tuberculosis clinic that is held in the Floyd County Health Department; getting the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Service started in this county which was conducted in the Health Department until they expanded and moved to their own quarters; getting a semi-annual heart clinic which is held in the Floyd County Health Department by University of Kentucky doctors. In 1965 Dr. Archer went on the State Board of Health and later served as chairman in that capacity. After serving the number of years required on the State Board he returned to the Floyd County Board of Health as chairman in 1971 and remained in this position until his death. Just before Dr. Archer's death he had approved the statewide Family Planning Program to begin in this county and also a neurology clinic to begin in September, 1973. Working with Dr. George P. Archer was always an inspiration to me, and I hope in years to come that we shall look around and always be reminded of the many good things he did for our community and the improvement to the health and welfare of our people. A great man is gone, but his image will always linger in this community where he did so much for the people he loved. PAULINE H. SPARKS Clerk Typist, III Floyd County Health Department

Car Insurance Rate Changes Scheduled

Frankfort, Ky.-Commissioner of Insurance Harold B. McGuffey recently announced approval of revisions to the private passenger automobile rules for the Insurance Services Office of Kentucky.

The revisions, effective August 1, 1973, will benefit those motorists who have automobile liability insurance with a company who uses ISO's manual of rules and rates. Over 50 percent of the private passenger automobile insurance business written in Kentucky is placed in such companies.

Effective August 1, 1973, a property damage loss will have to exceed $200 before a point will be charged againt the insured driver's safe driving classification. Previously, a point was charged when the property damage exceeded $100.

A new exception is also being introduced to the safe driver point system for rare classification. After August 1, no points will be assessed against individuals who can show that an accident occurred while they were responding to an emergency "call to duty,"-if they are a paid or volunteer member of any police force, fire department, first-aid squad or any law enforcement agency. This means that regular and volunteer firemen and plicemen will not suffer rate increases because of involvement in an accident when the accident occurrs during their response to a call for emergency duty.

The medical payment rules have been amended to make higher medical payment coverage available up to $100,000. The old ISO limit was $10,000. The higher limits can be purchased at a nominal increase in cost.

The protection for uninsured motorists insurance is also being revised. After August 1, an insured may purchase up to $100,000-300,000 for bodily injury caused by uninsured motorists. Heretofore, the maximum that could be purchased was $10,000-$20,000.

Locust Leaf Miners Due This Summer

Nearly every summer in Kentucky (as well as in most of the eastern United States) the leaves of black locust trees begin to turn brown and drop off.

The insect which causes this damage is the locust leaf miner, according to Mark Matuszewski, insect and disease specialist in the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

The adult of the locust leaf miner is an orange and black beetle approximately one fourth-inch in length. "These insects," said Matuszewski, "spend their winter in bark crevices or under debris on the ground. They emerge in the spring about the time the leaves begin to unfold and feed for a short time on the leaves. This feeding damage is negligible."

Matuszewski explained further that the locust leaf miners deposit eggs on the lower surfaces of leaves, and larvae soon hatch from the eggs. "It is from the larvae stage that the insect gets its name," said Matuszewski. "The tiny grubs bore into the leaf and feed between the upper and lower leaf surfaces," he added, "actually creating a mine. The feeding of the larvae causes the foliage to turn brown and this is the damage that is most noticeable." This year, according to Matuszewski's surveys, the locust leaf miner will cause localized damage to black locust trees throughout the state. "Attacks by the locust lead miner seldom cause tree mortaility," said Matuszewski. "However, large numbers of black locust may be weakened or killed during an extremely dry summer." Under forest conditions no controls for the locust leaf miner are recommendedsince the damage inflicted is objectionable mostly from an aesthetic viewpoint. However, on shade trees and ornamental black locusts, control may be desired. For information on controlling this insect contact: Director, Division of Forestry, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Perkins Urges Grads To Check Aid Plan

Congressman Carl Perkins this week urged all high school graduates who need financial assistance in order to continue their education to check and see if they are eligible for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

The Congressman said interested graduates should go to the nearest college, state employment office or county agricultural extension office, and ask for an "Application For Determination of Expected Family Contribution," which is the form needed to determine if a student is eligible for aid under the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program. The forms may also be available in some post offices, Perkins said.

"We approved the program in Congress to help young people who graduated this year, and wanted to go on to college or other advanced training, but don't have the money," Representative Perkins said. "Not everyone will be eligible under this program, but I know that it can help many of our young people learn a skill or a profession,"

He said the form has all of the information needed, and applicants should not delay securing one.

The 1961 White House Conference on Aging adopted a resolution recommending state laws to prohibit age discrimination and made other constructive proposals, according to the U. S. Department of Labor.

If you ever get a glimpse of me scampering about the premises, shirt-tails flying and ears pinned back, look for one of those br-er, youngsters somewhere back there behind with a rusty lizard in hand. It was right funny, watching them with this serpent (Sir Pent, they named him), telling us silly oldsters how pretty it was, and, I suspect, purposely letting the critter drop onto the grass to inspire a certain sedate lady to do a buck-andwing.

Very funny. Till the boy just chanced to unscrew the cap of the jar inside which the snake was confined, and that taking place as he sat beside me while I was at the wheel, topping Brush Creek Mountain. I almost took off for a landing at Blue River.

The McGuire family has been active in eastern Kentucky banking and finance for many years. The father is board chairman of the First National Bank of Grayson. His son, L. R. McGuire, is president and another son, E. E. McGuire, is a director. E. E. McGuire is board chairman of the Peoples Bank of Olive Hill; E. R. is vice-chairman and L. R. is a director.

E. E. McGuire was elected this month to the board of directors of the Second National Bank of Ashland, and L. R. is a director of the Citizens Deposit Bank, Vanceburg, Kentucky.

The Bank Josephine was chartered February 25, 1890 by an act of the Kentucky General Assembly. It began business with a capital stock of $50,000 subscribed by 10 stockholders who subscribed $5,000 each.

Leaders who formed the bank and whose descendants are still associated with it included the original six-man board of directors, Walter S. Harkins, Sr., A. J. Davidson, P. D. Harmison, Isaac Richmond, H. H. Fitzpatrick, and F. S. Martin.

Harkins was the first president of the bank. Isaac Richmond, H. H. Fitzpatrick, and A. J. Davidson also served as presidents.

The chief operating officer from the beginning was George P. Archer, the first cashier, who later became president. He was the grandfather of the late Dr. George P. Archer whose key decisions were involved in the present transaction.

The bank has never been robbed, and, though closed officially on Presidential order during the Depression, a side door was kept open to allow depositors to get their money if they needed it. In addition to the downtown banking facility, the bank has branches in Prestonsburg and Allen.

Currently serving as president of the bank is W. J. May who has held the position since September 1, 1955.

Social Security and similar benefits-cut deeply into the number of those entitled to benefit under Title I. The number of pupils entitled under Title I, according to the 1960 census, was 6,007. The 1970 census reduces the entitlement total to only 1,791.

Meanwhile, Louisville and Jefferson county will enjoy a Title I windfall that is almost double last year's. Also greatly increased are the Title I funds for Lexington and Fayette county and perhaps other population centers.

"This appears to be final, and we don't like it." Supt. Clark said. He dispatched letters to all board members to be handdelivered Monday.

The main thrust of Title I is remedial reading. The teaching force in this phase of instruction will not be reduced, and Title I officials have warned school boards not to cut into their numbers or their salaries.

That leaves three supportive units to remedial reading-guidance counselors, librarians and physical education instructors-to get the axe.

The superintendent said that most of these 21-plus teachers are under continuing contract. "We're going to track the law," he added, "and the law says that the last people to go are those under continuing contract." That means that those whose Title I jobs are eliminated by the lack of funds will be employed as regular classroom teachers, if there are that many non-tenure teachers who can be "bumped." Even tenure teachers could lose if they lack the teaching experience of those for whom places would be sought as a result of the program crisis.

All this makes for unpleasant work for the superintendent and board before the August 20 school-opening date.

Deep as the fund cut was to this county, the jolt to Pike county's school system possible to afford teachers who may lose their jobs an opportunity to look elsewhere for employment.

Under Title I last year $140 was assigned to each Kentucky child who was eligible to benefit. This year, the amount earmarked for the benefit each such child is $349. But Floyd and most other counties of the area suffer because they do not have enough children who are eligible.

He added that the trouble involved a normal relations problem which could and should have been settled through the usual grievance procedures. # "Damn Yankees"... A Review

If you think that "Damn Yankees" now playing at the Jenny Wiley amphitheatre show, with good songs, performed by a is about the Civil War, think again. Baseball! The Washington Senators (may they rest in peace)! The Devil! A witch! And one of the most delightful romps through the pros and cons of soulselling since Daniel Webster met up with Old Scratch himself.

Director Howard Enoch, a "zero-hour" hero, stepped into his directoral shoe and with a "little this and a little that-a" managed to pull together a production that is both entertaining and exciting. Mr. Enoch has exercised the good judgement to enlarge upon the show's strong qualities and to re-work its weaknesses, and the result is a harmonious blend of director and performer.

Allen Meek, as Joe Hardy, does much more than is required in the role, and he is delightful to watch as he slowly comes to the realization that a man doesn't know what he has, until he loses it.

Toni Hoffman adds a touch of dignity and a pleasant voice to the role of Meg Boyd, the "Old-Girl" that Joe leaves behind for a season, and Pete Franklin's superb voice is a welcome addition to any production. Denise Chetta and Kathy Paris in minor character roles provide some of the evening's highlights, and Kevin Dearinger's every appearance threatens to make one forget that there are other performers in the show. Kay Enoch is most effective as Gloria Thorpe, a Lois Laynish type femme reporter, and Jerry Winsett and Steven Wilmot contribute to the comical goings on. Dennis Kreider is a promising devil, called Mr. Applegate, and Kathy Herring, with a little hard-sell, will be just fine as Lola, the witch.

This is not the first production of 'Yankees'' to be upstaged by its own most popular number, "You Gotta Have Heart." Delightfully sung and danced by four performers, this number is the highlight of the evening.

The chorus is dynamic, and most of the dance numbers work very well, except for a locker room scene, where several housewives suddenly emerge from the woodwork to dance. There is no motivation and no plot furtherance, and though the number is well-executed, it does little except to suggest that the choreographers might be just a bit more familiar with their material.

All in all, "Damn Yankees" is a fine talented troupe of performers. Many of its songs have become such standards, that the opening night and audience hummed along with the orchestra to such tunes as "Heart," "Whatever Lola Wants" and "Two Lost Souls."

Performances continue through July 29, Wednesday through Sunday, at 8:30 p.m. at the amphitheatre.

How Jack and Betty Broke the Spell Cast on Them by the Wicked Stepfather

"Hi, Jack. This is Betty your wife, standing here in the doorway. I'm waiting to hear all about your raise. Did you get it when you asked your foreman this morning?"

"Oh, Hi, Betty. Well, not really. But I did get a promise."

"Oh, that's nice, Jack, another promise. I got some promises today, too."

"You got some promises, Betty? That's groovy. What kind of promises did you get, Betty?"

"Well, the butcher promised me he wouldn't charge us any more for beef than the price control people said he could. And the man at the filling station promised he wouldn't give anyone gasoline any cheaper than he'll sell it to us. And the grocery man promised me he'd sell us all the eggs and butter and flour and stuff like that as long as we can keep up with the prices and the payments. Promises are nice, Jack, I love promises . . don't you?"

"Yes, Betty, I sure love promises."

"Oh, Jack, sometimes you're awful smart, but sometimes I think you're awful slow. Those men won't give us meat and groceries, and gasoline for promises, no matter what Mr. Stix says."

"Don't you think they will, Betty?"

"Jack, baby, you've got to have in rocks in your sweet little, old head! Promises won't get us meat, food, and gasoline any more than they'll get meat, food, and gasoline for the butcher, the gas station man, and the grocery store man."

"Well, Betty, what are we going to do, Honey?"

"I know what you're going to do, Jack, and little Betty's going to be right with you."

What's that, Betty?"

"You're going to get some action on those promises Mr. Stix has been feeding you for years. You're going to get that Union that's been trying to help us for so long, Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, I think, into that shoe factory, and you're going to start working at it beginning right now."

"You know something, Jack?"

"No, what, Betty?"

"Those folks down at the shoe factory must love us."

"Why do you say that, Betty?"

"Well, they know we both love promises, don't they?"

"Yes, Betty, they know we both love promises."

"Well, Jack, they must love us . . . because they keep giving us what we both love . . . promises . . . promises . . . promises. I think it's nice, don't you think it's nice, Jack?"

"Oh, yes, Betty, it's very nice, but you know what I think you should do tomorrow?"

"No, Jack, what should I do tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow, Betty, you go back to the butcher and the filling station man, and the grocer and see if they'll swap their promises for ours. Maybe they like promises as much as we do, and if we could just swap the promise I got for a raise, for meat and groceries and gasoline, then we'll promise them that we won't stop buying those things just because we can't afford them any longer."

"Oh, Jack, you're so smart about things like that. But I wish we had money enough in your pay check to buy the things we need so we wouldn't have to fool around with all those promises, much as we both love them."

"Oh, Betty, why do you talk like that when you know Mr. Stix is doing the best he can. Money is tight, he told us; and he's got to cut costs, and promises don't cost anything. If we can just get along on promises until money gets looser, Mr. Stix will see to it that we'll start getting money instead of promises." "You think we should do that, Betty?"

"Jack, we both must have rocks in our heads not to have done this when those promises of Mr. Stix petered out when the union lost out the first time. And then when we believed Mr. Stix's promises instead of taking the union the second time, we were really blind."

"I think you're right, Betty; you could always see things clearly. It should have made us both sit up and realize that there are so many other unions here around Prestonsburg that there must be a good reason for having them."

"Oh, Jack, it's good to hear you say that. All those other unions mean that all the people who belong to them get their raises in money, and benefits. We've been getting promises from Mr. Stix and he's been making us believe we love those promises. You know something else, Jack?"

"What else, Betty?"

"I don't think we love promises at all. And what's more, I don't think Mr. Stix loves us because he pays you off in promises. And I think we'd better vote that Boot and Shoe Workers' Union in at the factory without any more nonsense. How about that, Jack?"

"Right on, Betty, who does that Mr. Stix think he's kidding anyway? He knows no one's going to give us meat and groceries and gasoline for promises . . ."

"Oh, Jack, I just knew you'd see it my way. Come in, come in. No sense just standing here in the doorway, is there?"

Jack and Betty broke the spell that blinded them twice before. Now, they've got another chance to join labor's united front in Prestonsburg.

Statement on Death Of Dr. George P. Archer

The tragic death of Dr. George P Archer, chief of staff and chairman of the board of the Highlands Regional Medical Center, was a crushing blow to the life blood of this hospital and the community at large.

A leader, as Mayor of Prestonsburg, in his community and state, honored by his fellow-doctors, as past president of the Kentucky Medical Association, the guiding force and inspiration behind the building of this new medical facility, one who gave untiringly of his time and skills to care for the needs of these "his people," Dr. Archer was truly a man among men.

It is with a sense of sorrow and great personal loss that we mourn the passing of this, our friend. And we extend our heart-felt sympathies to the family of Dr. Archer. Our thoughts and prayers are with them in this their time of need. CHALMER H. FRAZIER, Administrator

Announces Amendment To Stamp Regulations

Washington, D. C. - The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced an amendment to food stamp program regulations which would require that the income of certain individuals be averaged over a 12-month period in determining eligibility for participation in the food stamp program. This amendment applies to those individuals, such as teachers, who are under a contract which is renewable each year or longer. The income from contracted employment, even though the contract includes predetermined nonwork (vacation) periods, will be averaged over 12 months. If the average income exceeds the food stamp maximum income levels, the household will be ineligible to participate in the program, even during the non-work period.

Normally a household's eligibility is based on anticipated monthly income during the certification period. The usual certification period is three months.

The provisions of the new amendment do not apply to workers who are involuntarily laid off and workers whose income is unexpectedly halted.

The Barren County School Board cannot get bids on the half-million gallons of gasoline they expect to use next school year.

Prehistoric Indians Built Mounds Across Kentucky

By DAVID KENNAMER

A farmer turns up a human grave site while plowing a field. A group of low, grass-covered hills shows remarkable symmetry from the air. A field along a stream is littered with arrowheads, animal bones, and bits of broken pottery. Evidence such as this has been fairly common in Kentucky and shows that the commonwealth has been the site of considerable habitation for many centuries.

The first white explorers and settlers found that the Indians they encountered knew little more than they did about the strange artifacts and mounds scattered around the wilderness.

Because the most conspicuous remnants of the existence of ancient people in Kentucky are heaps of earth often containing skeletons, pottery, ornaments, and weapons, these mysterious people were labeled "mound builders."

Very elaborate myths have arisen to explain where they came from, how they lived, and who their ancestors were.In general, they were considered to be a superior race, quite distinct from the modern American Indians.

Gradually, however, the burial grounds and village sites scattered around the state have yielded a few of their long-hidden secrets.

Dr. Lathel Duffield, chairman of the University of Kentucky's Department of Anthropology, says that the term "mound builders" is both inaccurate and deceiving.

Research has shown, he says, that there were at least six separate groups of people with different cultures who inhabited the state during what is known as its "prehistory."

These groups lived in different areas of the state and only three of them built mounds. The term "mound builder" therefore refers to a practice and not a race or group of people.

According to Dr. Duffield, the mound builder myth grew because "the Europeans who settled North America expected to find a civilized society. They knew about the advanced civilizations the Spanish found in Mexico and South America. When they found mounds scattered about, they immediately imagined them to be the renmants of a the central and eastern parts of Kentucky. Mounds exist in Boone, Johnson, Montgomery, Henry and many other counties.

Not much is known about what made these cultures come and go, but there is evidence that the Adenas had some very serious problems. Dr. Duffield says, "A very high percentage of the skeletons of the Adena people show serious illnesses."

About 1,000 A. D., the Mississippian Culture arose in the far western part of the state. Almost entirely dependent upon the river bottomland farming of corn, beans and squash these people lived in stockaded villages and developed a very elaborate social structure. The foundations of this culture have been traced to Mexico.

The most dramatic remains of these people are temple mounds, high, steepsided mounds upon which were built temples or the houses or rulers. The mounds and burial sites at Wickliffe are examples of the Mississippian Culture.

At approximately the same time, the Fort Ancient Culture developed in the norhtern Bluegrass and along the Ohio River. They depended a great deal on corn agriculture. At first they built burial mounds but later began to bury their dead in pits. The Fort Ancient culture had faded away by 1650, not long before white settlement of Kentucky began.

According to Dr. Duffield, "Kentucky is unique because of the diversity of cultures represented in its prehistory." Woodland, Adena, Mississippian, and Fort Ancient overlapped and although they existed in different parts of the state there was almost certainly some interaction.

Anthropoligists say Kentucky was first settled about 13,000 B. C. by the descendents of people who had migrated from Asia to North America during the last Ice Age.

No mounds were built for more than 10,000 years. The first two prehistoric cultures, the Paleo Indian and Archaic groups, did not build mounds. The Paleo Indians were nomadic and hunted big game. The Archaic culture which followed was more broadly based on hunting, fishing, and gathering plant foods.

It was not until 1,000 B. C. with the beginning of the Woodland culture in Eastern Kentucky that the construction of mounds for both ceremonial and burial purposes became important.

Thes people hunted, fished, gathered food and cultivated sunflowers, squash, and other plants. Many examples of their mounds still exist in Eastern Kentucky. One just recenty discovered near Catlettsburg is a serpent-shaped effigy mound some 900 feet long which was used for ceremonial and religious purposes. Growing out of the Woodland culture were the Adenas. They depended more on agriculture than the Woodland groups although they continued hunting and gathering.

The most important aspects of their culture were the burial and ceremonial mounds they built. In Kentucky, the Adenas were centered in the Bluegrass. Adena Park, north of Lexington, is one of the best preserved mounds from this culture.

This mound, known as the "sacred circle," was ceremonial Dr. Duffield says, "At least we assume it was ceremonial. We can't think what else it could be."

The Adenas built a culture centered around the burial of the "honored dead." Most people were cremated, but a chosen few were interred in log tombs within large and often elaborate mounds. Weapons, ornaments, and pottery were often included with the bodies.

East Point Community Club Wins Top Development Award

The East Point Community Club, which was formed little more than a year ago, won first-place honors July 14 in the rural non-farm category for community development in the awards program sponsored by the Ashland Area Chamber of Commerce, the Second National Bank of Ashland and the Kentucky Power Company in cooperation with the University of Kentucky's extension service.

The East Point group won top place in the category which had the stiffest competition, with eight communities competing for the award.

The "intensity of the organizational process" was called the "apparent key to success" for the community.

The report before the Awards Program at Ashland had these things to say about the first-place winner:

A total of twelve regular meetings and six special sessions wereheld during the year. Not only were the people involved in community affairs, but they actively participate in county-wide activities which are associated with community development work-an example of which was sending eleven people to Community Development training meetings.

For a community center, the group completely remodeled the ground floor room of a lodge with paint and panelling, adding a kitchen and rest toom.

The group cleaned up 12 miles of roadway in their community, involing 50 people over five days.

Farm Safety Week Set For July 25-31

National Farm Safety Week, which begins Wednesday, July 25, is a good time for farmers in Floyd county to examine their farming operations and eliminate unsafe practices.

Each year many people are killed or critically injured in accidents on the farm that could have been prevented if basic safety precautions had been observed. This is one of the major reasons President Nixon designated July 25-31 as National Farm Safety Week.

All Farmers are urged to consider ways in which they can incorporate safer practices into their work at home and in Water supplies were tested for purity, and action has been started to secure access to a central water system. A scholarship was given to an individual to attend a vocational school. Road signs were made and erected. Club members "from 9 to 91 years old" made 900 quarts of apple butter for the Johnson county Apple Festival. Other activities which enhanced the quality of living included the painting of 21 homes, addition of running water to 22, addition of septic tanks by 32, and addition of phones to 21 homes.

"This club," a member of the East Point group said, "saved our community. "There used to be just people living here. Now they are neighbors.'

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK (Attorney General of Kentucky)

Since transportation represents one of the largest cash outlays made by many consumers, it is important to consider ways to make the most of the money we spend on just "getting around."

For some, public transportation might be a reasonable alternative to owning a personal vehicle. If it would cost less to use public transportation, it might be advisable to put up with momentary inconvenience in return for long term savings.

Most people, however, seem to consider public transportation an unworkable alternative-the decision to buy a personal car is already made

The key elements in the careful purchase of an automobile are analysis and comparison. Each person must carefully weigh for himself such alternatives as whether to buy a new or used car. Careful consideration should include such points as the overall cost of operation, including repairs, maintenance and insurance.

Compare the financing charges of several lenders. Interest rates and lending policies differ and the small amount of time needed for 'comparison shopping' may be rewarded by less overall cost.

Educate yourself as to the different car models that are available. Choose several that might be suitable for your needs, and explore these in greater depth. Consumer guides and magazines at your library can help in this area.

The amount you spend for transportation largely depends on how well you plan ahead and how well you use your head!

For answers and suggestions to aid consumer problems, call the Attorney General's Consumer Hotline, toll-free, between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, at 1-800-372-2960.

Kentucky Agreement Leads Nation In Water Planning

Frankfort, Ky.-When governors and legislators begin making decisions, they're often hit with mountains of studies and plans compiled by persons with vested interests. The result can be mountains of unread documents and decisions made without an overview of the problem.

With the recent signing of a memorandum of agreement, Kentucky now leads the nation in development of a system to coordinate and condense reams of water resource plans for the decision makers.

At a meeting of affected state agencies, Thomas O. Harris, commissionr of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, explained the agreement between the Ohio River Basin Commission (ORBC) and the state. The ORBC includes 11 states, 10 federal agencies and two interstate compacts. Harris represents Kentucky on the commissioner.

Advertisement for Bids FOR New Heating System Prestonsburg High School FOR Floyd County Board of Education Prestonsburg, Kentucky

Sealed proposals will be received by the Floyd County Board of Education at the Office of the Superintendent, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, until 1:00 p.m. (local time) Saturday, August 4, 1973, for the construction of a new heating system for the Prestonsburg High School, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read. Plans, Specifications, and Contract Documents are open to public inspection at the following places:

The office of ADAMS-FRAZIER-ANDERSON, Inc., Engineers, 1500 Leestown Road, Lexington, Kentucky 40505;

The office of CHARLES CLARK, Superintendent, Floyd County Board of Education, Prestonsburg, Kentucky;

ALLIED CONSTRUCTION IN-DUSTRIES, 3010 Yale Drive, Cincinnati, Ohio 45206:

BUILDERS EXCHANGE 3595 Dutchman's Lane, Louisville, Kentucky 40205; ASSOCIATED GENERAL CONTRACTORS OF AMERICA, INC., 1412 North Broadway, Suite 208-209, Lexington, Kentucky 40504;

"According to this agreement, the ORBC will work with Kentucky to assess the state's water resource needs and identify alternatives for reaching them. To do that, the ORBC will sift through stacks of existing plans and fill in the gaps where there are no data, if necessary. Then they'll write a short nontechnical report for use by the Governor and other public officials in making decisions on which projects to fund," said Harris.

In addition to providing a basis for decisions on water and related land problems, the studies will provide a summary and analysis of date relating to water utilization in the state.

The studies will also provide a substantial part of Kentucky's portion of the ORBC's Comprehensive Coordinated Joint Plan (CCJP) for the entire river basin. These studies will conform with requirements of Federal Water Pollution Control Legislation.

Although developed cooperatively by the staff of the ORBC and the state's Division of Water, the state will have primary responsibility for scheduling priorities for study. The state will also have primary responsibility for developing conclusions and recom-

Harris explained that by combining its efforts and money with the Basin Commission, the state can speed up its planning and obtain federal matching funds for the effort. "It's really an acceleration of what Kentucky's been doing with a bonus of saving the state money.' Kentucky's share of the project comes to about $120,000. Of that, $80,000 will be immediately available and $40,000 will pay for time spent on the studies by the staff of the state's Division of Water. The $80,000 investment from Kentucky could generate as much as $250,000 depending upon the amount of federal matching monies obtained.

According to Harris, Kentucky is able to greatly increase its money for water resource planning under the agreement. According to Fred Morr, chairman of the commission, their evaluation of existing plans will be different from others because it will be flexible. Morr says it wouldn't be a plan, but rather a non-technical evaluation or assessment of other plans which can be used in making a final plan According to Morr, the ORBC will gather plans made with certain interests in mind such as water quality, recreation and industiral development. Then they'll see where the conflicts are, condense the reports and tell the decision makers what they found out.

Nature Trails By Rufus M. Reed Pennyroyal, Benefactor of Man

Pennyroyal, modest little member of the Mint Family, is truly a benefactor of man. It is Nature's own insect repellant. If you dread to take a stroll in the woods because the persistent little red devils called "chiggers" cover your legs, gather some plants of pennyroyal, crush the leaves and rub them on legs, arms and around the waist. Put one of the plants in your pocket and you will not be bothered by chiggers. If the fleas invade your domain, scatter some crushed pennyroyal around the place and the fleas will flee! If you are camping out and wish to sleep under the stars, but are plagued by swarms of mosquitos, gather some pennyroyal and rub it vigorously on Pennyroyal tea was used as a tonic and a stimulant in the days of Queen Elizabeth of England.

A lotion of pennyroyal was also used by both the whites and Indians to cleanse and heal ulcers and old sores.

I feel that such a valuable little plant as pennyroyal deserves more study and better protection. It was one of the standby remedies of our esteemed foreparents.

Floyd County Board of Education By CHARLES CLARK, Supt.

Although the final document is scheduled for completion in 1975, some reports will be submitted to Governor Ford in a few months.

Morr said, "We're not 'expert planners' . . . We're not going to make decisions. We're just sorting out those things that can be done so the decision makers can decide what needs to be done and how to do it.

"All the other reports and plans are our backup material. We'll produce an account sheet that summarizes them. It's a process, a way of assessing needs and a way to meet them."

the face and arms and over the body. The mosquitoes may buzz around but they can't tolerate the strong, penetrating odor of pennyroyal.

> If you come down with chest congestion, severe colds or chill, drink pennyroyal tea, hot as you can bear it. and go to bed. You will soon sweat out the congestion and feel sweet relief.

Pennyroyal, most modest of the mints, grows in thick patches in old fields, clearings, always in dry, sterile soils. It has small, ovate leaves and pale blue flowers. Oldtimers of our region called it, "pennyrile," and hung it up in bunches to dry out for winter use. It was used to treat grippe, colds, coughs and other maladies common to winter. A western doctor said: "Pennyroyal tea is good in all chest or head colds, as it provokes perspiration."

The Indians used the tea to reduce. fevers caused by bolds. They also used the plant as a tea to relieve gripping abdominal pains. A few drops of the tea was often given to babies for colic. For nasal congestion, the Indians sniffed a small piece of the plant up the nose. The Aztecs claimed: "Whoever is troubled with a running nose can be cured by sniffing pennyroyal."

Pennyroyal can still be found, but not in abundance as formerly. It once formed dense patches in old, dry clearings and flourished best in worn-out, depleted lands. Thus it became a symbol of the poorer farming sections of Kentucky, which today is called "The Pennyrile Section." This section lies next to the famous Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, famous for its lush growth of blue grass and the opulence of the farmers.

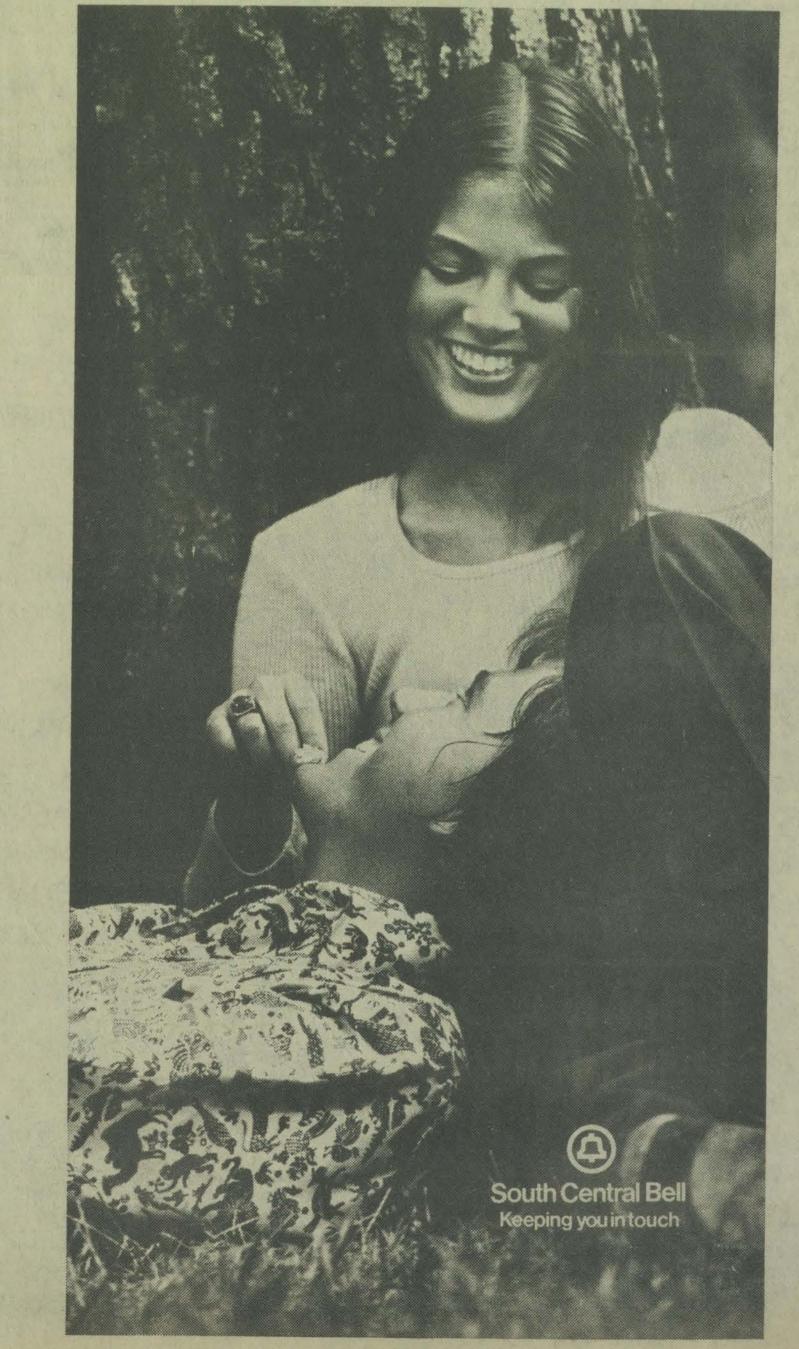

Today pennyroyal is much scarcer than it used to be, due perhaps to most of the old fields growing up in thickets, shrubs and briers. The small plant was once gathered widely for the herb markets but has become too scarce for that.

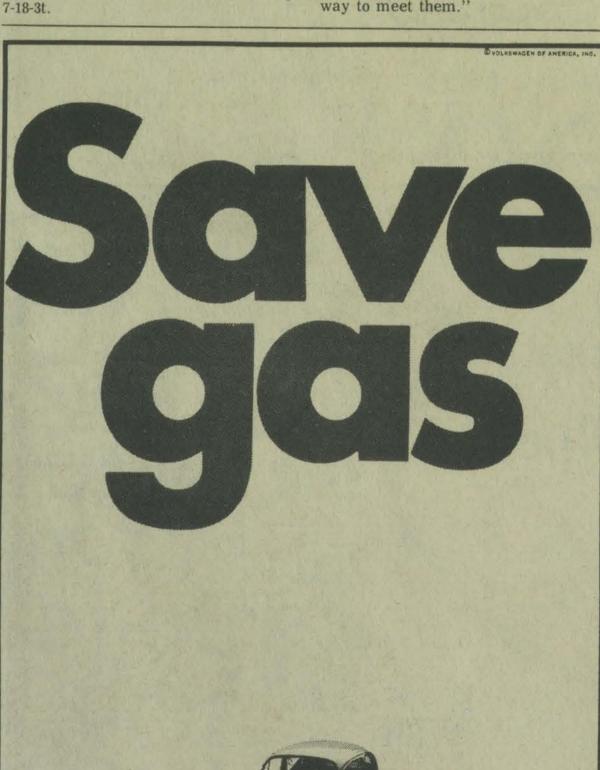

The Indians used pennyroyal to bring a fainting person back to consciousness. They held the crushed plants to the nose and let the victim inhale the strong odor. Soon the victim was restored to consciousness. To cure a headache, the Indians rubbed pennyroyal briskly between their fingers and then inhaled deeply of the aromatic odor, which is pleasant to humans but abhorred by insects.

To cure the itch, the Indians washed the victm's body in water in which pennyroyal had been steeped. They also used the tea to cure the gout and to cure toothache. In case of snakehite, pennyroyal teas was drunk in copious amounts. Indian women also used pennyroyal tea to relieve painful menstruation.

Slate Radiothon As ALC Benefit; $100,000 Sought

Facing a challenge from the Lilly Endowment of Indianapolis to raise $100,000 before July 31, Alice Lloyd College will broadcast to Floyd county throughout Saturday on WDOC AM and FM in a fund-raising telethon.

If ALC can raise the $100,000 before July 31, the Lilly Endowment will grant the College an additional $50,000. Participating in the college's Campaign 50, friends and alumni from Floyd county have tape-recorded messages to listeners, urging them to help in this effort. According to William S. Hayes, ALC's president, the college is near its goal but needs help from its home area in Eastern Kentucky to go over the top. Along with many Floyd county citizens, Former Governor Bert Combs has worked during the last 60 days to help Alice Lloyd get this grant. He underlines the fact that although people from outside the area have been generous, they want to know what the people from Eastern Kentucky are doing to help the College."It's very important," he commented, "that the people of Eastern Kentucky support Alice Lloyd College because it has meant so much to this region, and because it is doing so much today. Once we have provided our own leadership and done our share, then we can step forward with pride to seek gift investments for Alice Lloyd from other people throughout the United States." The college announces that anyone who wishes to call or write in their pledge or donation may do so. # School Bus Driver Training School Set At Allen Central

More than 440,000 children in Kentucky are driven to school daily by bus. With the heavy responsibility of transporting these children, Kentucky's school bus drivers have achieved a "commendable" record of safety, according to state Department of Education officials. To help keep this safety record, the Division of Pupil Transportation will conduct the ninth annual driver's training school in 20 regional centers throughout the state. The program will be divided into two sections this year to train new drivers and inform veteran drivers about new safety measures. Serving the school districts of Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike counties, the Paintsville and Pikeville independent schools, a driver training school will be held at Allen Central High School, Eastern, July 26-27, beginning at 9 a.m. Kentucky State Police will participate in training more than 2,000 school bus drivers in federal, state and State Board of Education regulations for traffic safety and pupil transportation.

By PHIL PRIMACK

(In The Mountain Eagle)

Star-studded entertainment rolls into town on August 6 with the arrival of the Clyde Bros. Circus vans and caravan of talent. With a precision gained from 30 international tours, skilled hands will set about the preparations for the annual Oleika Shrine Circus to be presented on the Prestonsburg High School grounds. Billed as "Clyde Bros. Circus 43-73 Editon," the circus features lions, elephants, chimps and the greatest aggregate of animal acts on the circus tour.

Stars of the trapeze and high-wire demonstrate their sensational skills.

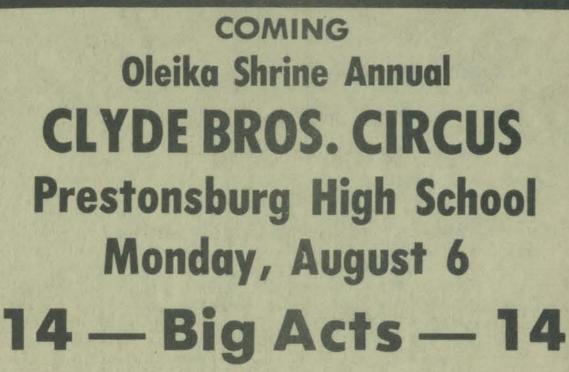

Months and years of unrelenting training result in fast-moving performances of skill and strength. There will be laughs a-plenty when the circus comics, the capering clowns, hit town with their merry madness.

From the moment the door of the first van swings open and the sound of trumpeting elephants and roaring lions and tigers herald their arrival, until the last light is dimmed on the final dazzling performance, there is excitement and entertainment for all at the Oleika Shrine Circus.

In addition to hiring, training, and upgrading disadvantaged workers the U. S. Labor Department's JOBS program has expanded employment opportunities for Vietnam-era veterans.

WED. - THURS. - FRI. July 25th, 26th and 27th If you're set to vote Monday on a bill establishing strict federal strip mining standards, particularly in mountainous areas.

The bill results from several weeks of public hearings and consideration by the Subcommittee on the Environment and Mines and Mining of the House Interior Committee. It is a far tougher measure than the Nixon administration proposal put forward earlier this year.

The bill, which is likely to pass with strong Democratic support within the committee, would require strip operators in each state to meet the federal standards within 90 days of enactment. States would receive up to $10 million a year in federal funds to assist in such enforcement.

If the states failed to demonstrate to the Secretary of the Interior adequate enforcement, federal inspectors would then do monthly strip mine inspections. Among the provisions in the bill is a ban on any stripping on slopes steeper than 20 degrees. If rigidly enforced, such a limit would curtail many operations in the steeper terrains of the Appalachian states. However, the 20 degree slope provision is weaker than language in the bill approved by the House last year which would have banned stripping on slopes of 14 degrees or more.

The bill also would require surface operators to follow such procedures as "preserving all top soil" for future reclamation use; segregating any possible acetic materials uncovered in operations, and desposing of them properly, and the back-filling and regrading of a strip area "so that it is restored to its approximate original contour with all highwalls, spoil piles, and depressions to hold water eliminated and with adequate provisons for drainage.'

Washington-A House subcommittee is A diverse and permanent vegetative cover is also required.

> Such reclamation must be seen after five years growth, and until then, a required bond of no less than $10,000 per mine shall not be released. The measure also would require that any drainage system, including water impoundments, must meet specified standards.

> While containing many of the provisions of existing Kentucky law, the key to the federal bill could be its enforcement procedures.

> In one major section, the bill calls for extensive citizen involvement.

> And, in what is perhaps its single most important feature for eastern Kentucky surface owners, the bill categorically states that "No stripping can be done by a mineral owner without the written consent, or waiver by," the owner of the surface. This would seemingly get around the power of the broad from deed in eastern Kentucky.

> Similarly, a strip operator must also get written consent of all area residents before any blasting can be done. The House draft also provides citizens the right to public notification of all strip permit applications. Any individual can notify the Secretary of the Interior of any alleged violation of the federal act, even if state inspectors have not done so. In such case, an on-site inspection with the complaining citizen allowed along will be conducted, as will a public hearing into the complaint.

> Local newspapers would be used for advertisements of such matters as notices of permit applications, and operator's requests to have bonds returned due to completion of reclamation.

> A $40 million federal program to reclaim abandoned strip mines is included in the bill. Financing for such an effort would come from a $500 per acre permit fee to be assessed each operator. Individual small land owners would be eligible to use such funds on their strip mine damaged lands.

Alice Lloyd College To Build Student Center, Dining Hall

Alice Lloyd College students congratulate June Buchanan, an early co-worker with Mrs. Alice Geddes Lloyd, about the construction of a new building. "Miss June" will lend her name to the June Buchanan-Alumni Center which will expand and add one floor to the building pictured in the background.

Pippa Passes, Ky.-Construction on the June Buchanan-Alumni Center at Alice Lloyd College is scheduled to begin within two weeks, according to an announcement by James Gayheart, business manager for the College. The have helped supply funds. For more than

Many friends of Miss June Buchanan, for whom the new facility will be named, new facility will house the College's 55 years "Miss June" has lived on Caney dining facilities, a student center and Creek, helping the College's founder, Mrs. Alice Geddes Lloyd, and presently is serving as president of the Caney Bradley and Powers General Con- Creek Community Center, parent organization of the College. About one half of the building funds came from private sources, including grants from the E.O. Robinson Mountain Fund and the James Graham Brown Foundation. The remainder was supplied by the U.S. Departments of Health, Education and Welfare and Housing and Urban Development, and from the Appalachian Regional Commission. There are 20,319 square feet in the structure, of which 14,119 are in the new facility. The new kitchen will also serve a snack bar. Seminar and conference rooms and lounge areas are designed to accommodate groups of varying size who will use the facilities for meetings and institutes. Architecturally the new facility blends with the character of the first buildings constructed in Pippa Passes by local men and students. Characteristics of Appalachian buildings have been found to enhance both the appearance and function of the modern structure.

Paintsville Dam Lacks Funding

Opponents of the controversial Paintsville Dam project were elated by a Congressional move Friday which would disallow funding of the project.

The Senate appropriations committee's list of recommendations for public works funding did not contain an allocation for further construction of Paintsville Dam, to be located in Johnson county.

The glaring absence of Paintsville Dam on the listing released Friday prompted Paintsville Mayor John Chandler to say he was "upset over the Senate dropping Paintsville Dam."

Chandler expressed hope the allocation will be granted when the listing is presented to the conference committee 'that makes the final decision."

Meanwhile, the Paint Creek Advisory Committee, a Morgan and Johnson county group of dam opponents, said its stand opposing construction has been enhanced by the Senate appropriations committee move.

Advisory committee member Winfred Howard of West Liberty said he was officially notified Friday by U.S. Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., that the full committee on Senate appropriation for public works had "scratched" the controversial Paint Creek project.

The House committee earlier had approved project funding.

126 in Floyd County Suffer From Cerebral Palsy, Claim

cerebral palsy sufferers who are either untreated or undertreated, according to services can call United Cerebral Palsy William H. McCann, president of United of Kentucky at 502-875-3696 or write UCP Cerebral Palsy of Kentucky.

The statement was made in connection with an announcement to the effect that United Cerebral Palsy of Kentucky is participating in the national program, "Project: Prevention," which is aimed at preventing cerebral palsy through proper pre-natal and post-natal care.

UCP is especially eager to reach women and girls of childbearing age in the "high risk" population. These are young women under 15, women over 40, women whose babies are not spaced far enough apart and women who may not be in good health. Many children could have been spared the physical, mental and emotional handicaps of cerebral palsy if their mothers had been healthier during the years before the birth of their babies and during the months of their pregnancies.

In addition to recommending good nutrition and prenatal care, UCP cautions women against excessive smoking during pregnancy, using any drug not prescribed by a doctor, and exposure to virus and bacterial infections, such as German measles, all of which can affect their unborn babies.

United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., the national parent organization, has estimated that if 20 percent of the pregnant women who are not now receiving prenatal care could be induced to see their doctors or go to public health clinics, the incidence of cerebral palsy would be greatly reduced.

Cerebral palsy is a condition caused by damage to the brain of the unborn or newborn baby. The damage usually occurs because not enough oxygen gets to the baby's brain. There are many reasons why this can happen. Babies born prematurely are especially subject to oxygenation problems since the brain and nervous system are formed in the last three months of pregnancy. Although medical science has made great strides in minimizing this possibility through intensive care of premature and other high risk newborn babies, not enough women are aware of the community services that
