

Early Work Costs City HUD Funds But City Manager Thinks Other Help Will Be Available

A case of unfortunate timing appears to have excluded Prestonsburg from among 21 Kentucky communities which have been awarded federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) funds.

Prestonsburg's Big Sandy neighbors, Pikeville and Paintsville, will receive $10.7 million and $385,000, respectively, over the next five years apparently because they had urban renewal programs in operation in 1971, while Prestonsburg, a pioneer in urban renewal among Eastern Kentucky communities, had, by that year, run out of money necessary to sustain such projects. The large sum awarded Pikeville came as a result of that community's "All American City" status.

Although Prestonsburg, in one sense, may have "lost out" for being too progressive in urban renewal work, City Manager Curtis Clark expressed optimism concerning the city's chances for procuring some of the $8.7 million in additional funds made available for rural communities in Kentucky.

"That may not sound like much when you consider the number of communities wanting some of this money," Clark said, "but towns that are prompt and 'on the ball' as far as applying is concerned will receive the most funds." Clark said the Prestonsburg City Planning Commission met over a month ago with its two city planners and an application for funding is expected to be submitted to HUD by way of the Big Sandy Area Development District office here in March.

Some suggestions offered at the meeting for use of the funds, should they be granted, included the construction of "double decker" structures over existing city parking lots to provide more parking space; the building of medium rather than strictly low-rent housing units with the possibility of acquiring land at the top of Abbott Mountain for the project; the construction of two additional buildings at the Indian Hills housing development, and further improvements of Archer Park through the use of matching funds.

Clark said a meeting will be held January 15 to help familiarize the public with proposed projects and to accept suggestions of interested citizens.

3 Under Bond In Mud Creek Shooting Case

Three men have been released under bond after their arrests in connection with an exchange of gunfire last Wednesday afternoon near Teaberry in which one man was seriously wounded.

David Akers, about 23, is in the UK Medical Center for treatment of face and neck wounds caused by a shotgun blast fired at a distance of about 50 feet. He is expected to recover.

McKinley Hall was charged with the shooting of Akers. He and his son, Randy, claimed they were pursued by David and Ralph Akers and that shots from a .22-caliber rifle were fired at them. When they were overtaken, they told Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, Randy Hall stepped from their car, arms uplifted. His father, this version of the shooting says, ordered David Akers to drop his rifle and when he failed to do so fired on him.

Sheriff Lewis said Ralph Akers admitted he had fired at the Hall car. He was placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of wanton endangerment. The same bond was required of Randy Hall, who was booked on a charge of assault third degree.

Another exchange of gunfire between occupants of two autos on Mud Creek Sunday resulted in charges of assault first degree against Norman, George and Harold Damron. Simon Kidd and his brother were identified as occupants of the second car.

Sheriff's deputies have within the week staged four liquor raids, with as many arrests. Two of the raids were made at Martin Dec. 31 when Bill Crum was arrested and nine pints of whiskey confiscated, and 11 cans of beer were taken in a raid on the premises of Donna Brown Wright. A third raid on Dec. 31 was made on Star Route 1, Prestonsburg, where Margaret Slone was arrested and 115 half-pints of whiskey and four bottles

They Just Can't Wait Any Longer

Several people either were stricken by a premature case of "spring fever" Sunday, or else someone forgot to tell them it was only January, as several boats ranging from houseboats to fishing craft were seen cruising Dewey lake.

This Town . . . That World

FIRST SHOT, A MISS

When I make mistakes I waste no time about it. This year, I started the very first paragraph of the very first column with one which is a dilly.

In my most learned fashion I referred to Janus as a goddess. Although she's no Woman's Libber, Mrs. Avery Wiley reminded me that it was a Roman god, not a goddess, who was this "two-faced" character.

If I had taken time to draw on my deep well of first-year, correspondence school Latin, I should have known that the "us" word ending indicated that the person in question was one of us men.

WE LOSE A FRIEND

He first came to The Floyd County Times 38 years ago, when he was a little shaver.

We called him Stinky—not in any derogatory sense but mainly in self-defense as he applied various names to each of us. I believe it was the late James B. Goble who gave him the nickname which he himself adopted.

But for an eye problem which became progressively worse as he grew older, this fellow could have been anything he wanted to be. A great lawyer, for instance. That remarkable memory and wit which supplied him a split-second rejoinder to any challenging remark would have made life miserable for any opponent in a courtroom.

Between Stinky and me there was only tacit affection. We simply knew that if either needed the other we somehow would be there; we didn't need to say it. In fact, he spent most of his time "getting a rise," as he put it, from those who were his friends. I recall the morning when he hailed me as "Kingfish" and I immediately dubbed him "Calhoun" as I recalled the pint-sized lawyer in the old Amos 'n Andy show.

2 Incumbents Take Oath; Hire New Grid Coach

Two re-elected members of the Floyd County Board of Education were inducted to their new terms of office at last Saturday's meeting of the board, and for the first time County Superintendent Charles Clark administered the oath of office.

Immediately after the board members, Dr. J. D. Adams and Ray Campbell, were re-inducted, the board held an organizational meeting at which John M. Stumbo and James Arville Duff were re-elected chairman and vice-chairman, respectively.

Phillip Haywood, Prestonsburg High School alumnus, will return to the school here as its head football coach and teacher as a result of Saturday's board action. Mr. Haywood was graduated two years ago from Eastern Kentucky State University, Richmond, and was assistant football coach this year at Meade County High, Brandenburg, Ky.

"Phillip Haywood fits well into the slot left vacant by the resignation of Ed Radjunas, not only for his ability but because he teaches the same courses Mr. Radjunas taught while coaching here," Supt. Clark commented.

Judge Directs Jury To Probe Floyd Slayings

In his instructions to the nine men and three women who comprise the grand jury of the Floyd circuit court for the January term, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley Monday reminded the jurors of the new criminal penal codes now in effect.

Judge Conley told the newly-empowered jurors that the new code which, in many cases, is radically different from laws effective in 1974, applies to crimes committed after midnight, January 1. The judge will be attending a special seminar in Louisville this week to familiarize officials with the new penal codes.

The jury was reminded by Judge Conley that "you're not deciding whether a defendant is guilty or innocent . . . but it's your job to determine whether evidence in the case is sufficient to bring the person before the petit jury." He explained the right of the jurors and encouraged them to investigate any official's or school board records if they felt something might be amiss. Conley said the grand jury could expect to hear

See New Penal Code Favoring Defendant

The victim was in UK Medical Center, seriously wounded as the result of a shotgun blast fired at a distance of about 50 feet. But the man who fired the shot is not facing a charge of shooting and wounding with intent to kill, as in the past.

The new Kentucky criminal code became effective Jan. 1, and the charge now is assault in the first degree.

A man who admitted to officers that he had been shooting at or into an auto occupied by another was not charged, as usual, with shooting into an auto or shooting at without wounding. He was booked under the new code on a charge of wanton endangerment, second degree.

A man walked down a street in a dry county, an open beer can in his hand. Officers could not arrest him.

A juvenile in this county was accused of stealing two tires. He later told authorities he had intended only to borrow them, then return them to the owner. Under the new code this is admitted as a defense plea, and the complaining witness decided against prosecution. A few nights later, the same juvenile was back in jail, charged with stealing an auto.

Stumbo Says He Will Ask More For Unemployed

"A drop in the bucket" was County Judge Henry Stumbo's description of the federal effort to provide jobs for the unemployed.

The statement was made after he and Claude Swiney, county planner, had attended a meeting in Hazard of the executive committee of the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP) Monday and there learned:

1. That $945,000 has been allocated to the 22 counties of Kentucky which have unemployment rates above the 6.5 per cent national average.

2. That Floyd county stands to receive little more than $60,000. This amount would over a period of a year afford employment for only about 10 persons, he said.

Judge Stumbo said an increase in the 22-county allocation will be sought and that if it is not received he and others will go to Washington to enlist the help of the state's Congressional delegation. Congressman Carl D. Perkins, he said, is already moving for added funds.

Floyd county's allocation was based on its unemployment percentage for three months, September, October and November, when unemployment was 6.4 per cent. Officials say they are certain that unemployment is now at 7 per cent or more. Earlier last year, it was even higher, despite a booming coal business, they said.

Mr. Swiney said many of the unemployed have failed to register with the

Work On Dock Yet Hoped But Date Uncertain

Proposed dock and harbor improvements at the Jenny Wiley boat dock which have for months been slated at an estimated cost of $750,000 have not been begun, a contract has not been awarded, and nobody knows when it will be.

Yet George Barker, Jenny Wiley State Park manager, is hopeful the work, which will require 300 days, will begin this winter or in the early spring.

The change in governors and park commissioners and Governor Carroll's 90-day moratorium on new projects to permit an assessment of the situation in the early days of his tenure are involved in the delay. The waiting period is not expected, however, to affect the Banner bridge construction because a contract for that work had been awarded before Governor Ford resigned to become U. S. Senator.

Sheriff To Quit Probe of Major Crime, He Says

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis told The Times this week that he proposes soon to leave murder and other major criminal investigations to state and county detectives and to center his attention on the enforcement of the liquor laws, doing police work to control drunkenness and to collect taxes.

Sheriff Lewis said there are now four State Police detectives stationed in this county, that the county has one detective and that a commonwealth's detective may be employed soon.

"That makes six detectives. I have only two paid deputies, and neither has had the training the detectives have had," the sheriff said. "I feel that they are better equipped to handle these investigations than my office is."

Lewis began the second year of his second term as sheriff last week. During the past year he and his deputies engaged in investigations of every category of crime, from murder to minor theft, and still took time to stage about 75 liquor raids and arrest 100 or more persons on charges of possessing alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale or for the actual sale of the beverages.

He pointed out last month in a review of the year's work that he and his deputies had lost only two liquor cases of the 80 or more prosecuted during 1974.

Cash Payment for Annex Planned

The courthouse annex planned for Floyd county by McCloskey & Associates and designed by Marvin Crider, of Prestonsburg, will cost an estimated $564,000, and County Judge Henry Stumbo hopes the county will not owe a cent for it when it's completed.

Judge Stumbo says he will apply for permission to use severance tax and revenue sharing funds to pay the entire cost of the structure. "I don't feel like issuing bonds when we have the money on hand," he said.

He added that the building is an absolute necessity. First of all, he pointed out, the county or its officials are violating the law every day juveniles are held in jail along with adult prisoners, since the courts have held that youthful prisoners must be detained "out of sight and sound" of older prisoners.

Besides that, he said, some county offices are badly crowded and more room is needed for the growing volume of records.

The annex will be of concrete, to conform with the appearance of the courthouse itself, with the second story walls of pre-cast concrete panels.

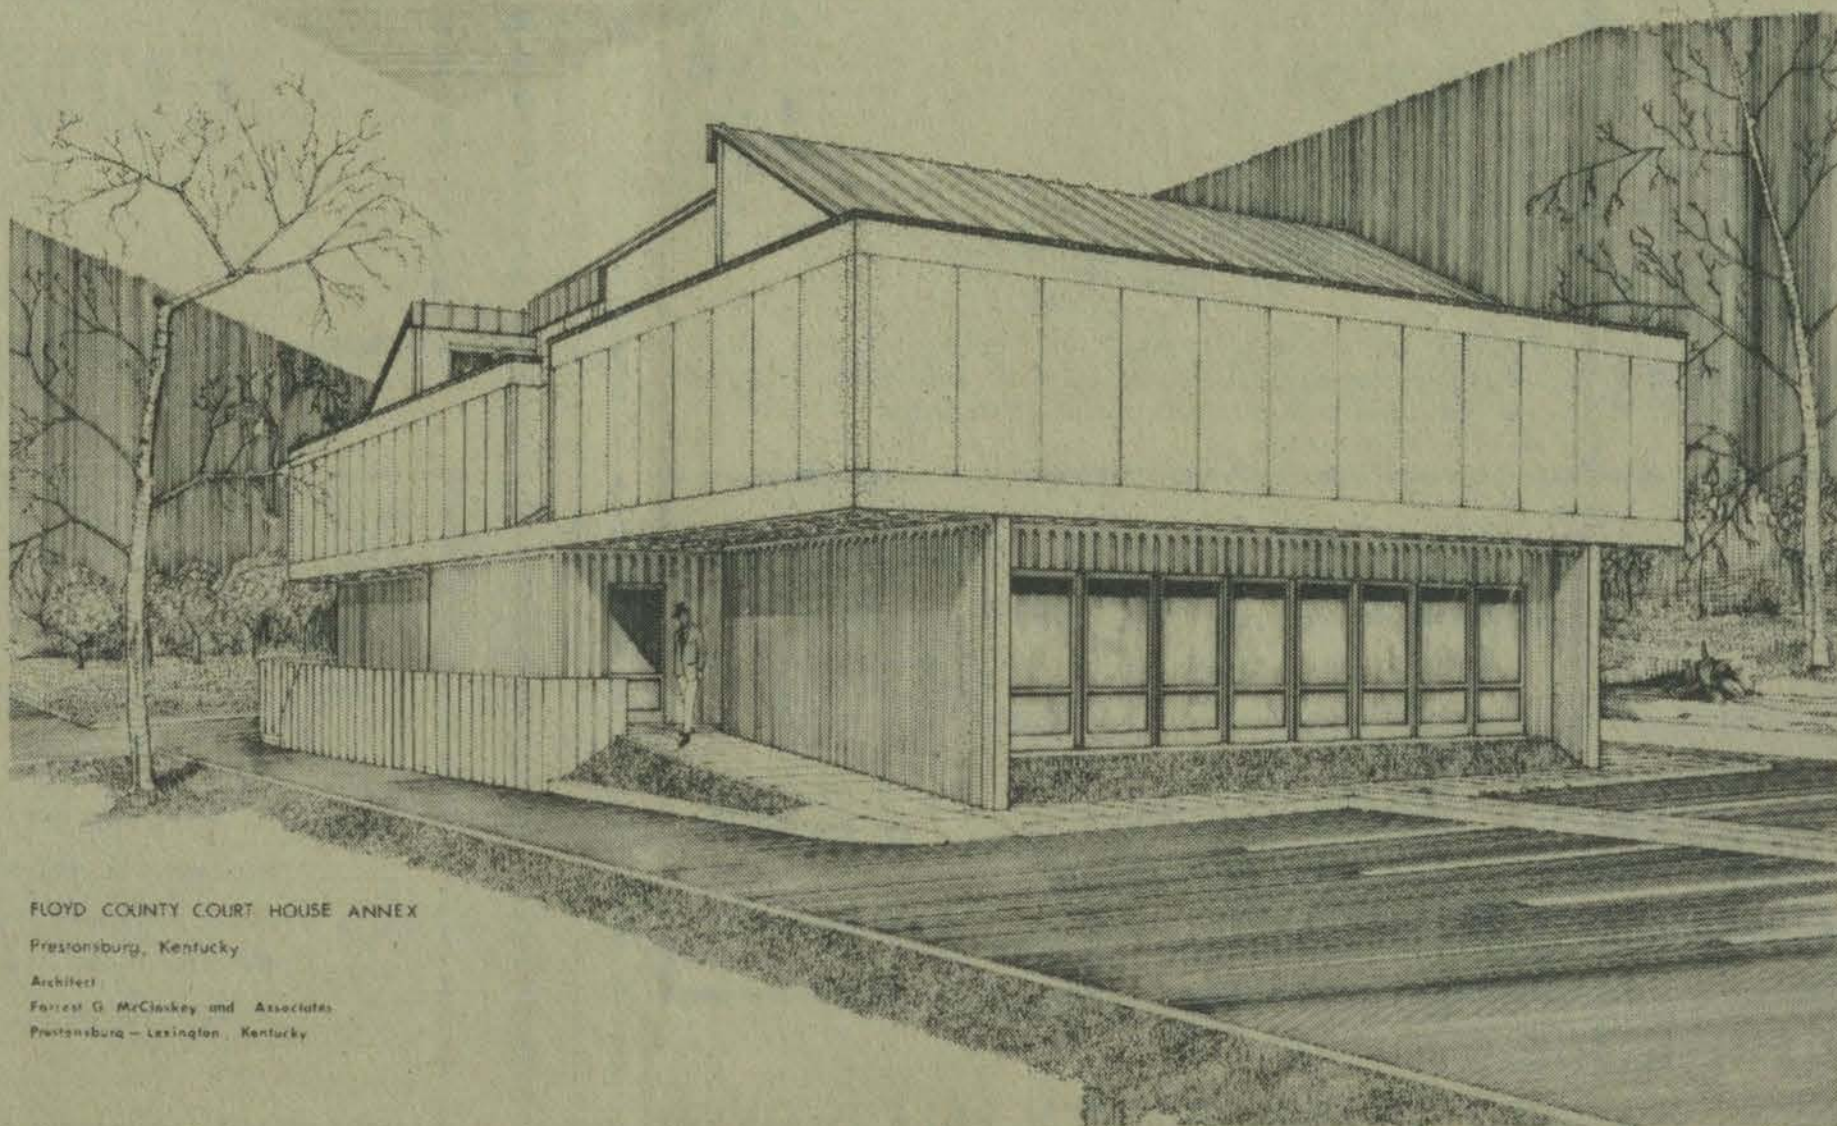

The juvenile detention area of 6,600 square feet will include, in addition to detention space for 12 to 14 boys and 6 to 8 girls, a large recreation area, dining area, kitchen, classroom and library facilities.

On the first floor will be 1,150 square feet of space for the juvenile court; an 1,875-foot area for emergency employment offices; 1,375 square feet for conference area and official records, possibly those of the county clerk, and 1,050 square feet of space rentable to one of more governmental departments or agencies.

The mechanical room of 750 square feet will be on the third floor.

The designer said the structure will be unique in Kentucky.

Mr. Barker said plans for the harbor area and for the dock itself have been completed. He said he believes the work can be done while the dock is in operation.

Another project at the park, the central camping area at Goble Branch, is almost complete and will be ready for campers with the opening of the season, the park manager said. Construction of a store building and finishing touches remain to be done. More than 100 campsites are already complete. There will be 129, in all.

state Unemployment office here and that this results in an imperfect picture of the situation. Those without work should file immediately, he said.

The $945,000 allocated the 22 counties in Kentucky is the state's share of $2.5 billion, the spending of which will be based on the national unemployment average.

Magoffin county, according to data released recently, has the highest unemployment rate in the area, 9.7. Martin county, once the state's most economically deprived, has the lowest, 2.7. Pike, which shares with Martin in the current coal boom, has a rate of 3.6, and Johnson's rate is 5.1

New Pact Helps Pensioners' Widows

As a result of the recent contract agreement between the United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) and the Bituminous Coal Operators Assn., widows of pensioners who had been informed that their eligibility for UMWA Health and Retirement Fund's health service cards would end Dec. 31, 1974, will now receive new cards.

In accordance with the Fund's old regulations, when the widows received their first survivors benefits checks two years ago, they were told that their eligibility for health service cards would end with their final check in December. Under the terms of the new contract, however, widows of pensioners are eligible for health service cards, which enable holders to obtain health care, for the rest of their lives or until they remarry.

Widows of pensioners who died any time between May 29, 1946 and December, 1974 can apply for health service cards by filling out forms available at Funds Regional Offices and UMWA District Offices or by writing to Funds headquarters at 2021 K St. NW, Washington, D. C., 20006.

testimony in three slaying cases, a shooting and wounding, assault and battery cases and several liquor cases. Joseph Jacobs was named jury foreman.

Jury commissioners appointed were Doug Fitzpatrick, of Garrett, Don Layne, of Betsy Layne, and Clifford Wright, of Prestonsburg.

In a separate session with members of the petit jury Judge Conley advised the jurors to avoid discussing any case with relatives or friends of the individual on trial. By way of example, Conley told of an incident in which a relative of a defendant and a juror were seen talking together in a field and when word of the meeting came back to the prosecution, the prosecution filed a protest that the juror had been in some way influenced, thus making that juror unsuitable to hear the case. In truth, Judge Conley pointed out, the two men had been discussing trading cows and neither had any knowledge of the other's involvement in the case.

Judge Conley told the jurors that if an attorney should say something during the course of the trial that they considered offensive, they should take care not to hold it against the attorney's client. He also urged the jurors to keep in mind the fact that being indicted by the grand jury should have no bearing on their attitudes toward the defendant's guilt or innocence.

Business of the petit jury will begin next Monday.

The same officers and Deputies John D. and Danny Martin arrested Ruthie Hall, of Parson Branch, near Grethel, Jan. 4 and confiscated 232 cans of beer. All the defendants were charged with possessing alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale.

Almost every day that this office has been open for all these years, except for the weeks of his recent illness, he came calling. All through the shop he visited to exchange banter with us all; to disagree purposefully with me in my views of this situation or that, to "wind up" the others. The list of his "targets" is rather long—the late James B. Goble, the late "Printer" Goble, Jimmy Goble, Neil Allen, Grant Campbell, the late Savage Allen, Earle Martin, Stuart Stephens, Bill Darby, "Buck" Scaff, Willie Ray Conley, Dewana Rodebaugh, Johnny Adams, my daughters, Barbara and Sharon, my sons, Quentin, David and Paul Neil. Plus "innocent bystanders." He usually left each of us discomfited and tongue-tied, or laughing.

Carl and Clifton Horn, who in the 1930's operated the "commodity office" in a part of the old building which our plant occupied, perhaps remember the time when he "picketed" their office, carrying a placard which proclaimed to the world that they were "unfare to Lofers". I have lost considerable time over the years watching this fellow in action, but I regret none of it; the memories are pleasant.

Stinky's last visit with the avowed purpose of getting us "wound up" was several weeks ago, just before he became ill. He needed me. I flinched and continued to work. He called on others in the shop. Then he returned to inquire, "Is Barb coming in today?"

When I told him she would not, he rose to remark, "Well, I've wasted half a day. None of the rest of you have got life enough to get a rise out of. I'm goin' home."

And he did. And now our little friend is gone. For once, he does not leave us laughing.

Exemption for 1975 Raised to $7,700

Love Hall, Floyd county property valuation administrator, announces that the Homestead Exemption for 1975 will be increased from $6,500 to $7,700.

The increase was effected by the 1972 Legislature which amended the statute to read . . .

" . . . the $6,500 exemption shall be construed to mean $6,500 in terms of the purchasing power of the dollar in 1972. Every two years thereafter, if the cost of living index of the United States Department of Labor has changed as much as one per cent, the maximum exemption shall be adjusted accordingly."

The new exemption allowance is based on a cost of living increase of 18 per cent in the last two years. Landowners who have already received the exemption, do not need to come to the property valuation office here to get the increase, Mr. Hall said. It will be given automatically.

Those who have never filed and will be 65 years old during 1975 can get the exemption by filing before March 1.

When the Coal Boom Ends

Eastern Kentucky occupies in these days of economic recession a position that is unique in its history as it enjoys a coal boom while most of the country is in the doldrums.

A flourishing coal business is predicted for the next five to ten years. Hopefully, that will carry this part of Kentucky through till brighter days come for all the nation.

But after that, what? Floyd county has little coal left at this time for conventional deep mining unless operators venture into shaft mining. Most of the remaining seams fit themselves only to strip or auger mining. And at the rate stripping and augering has been done for the last 12 months, all recoverable coal may be gone from this county before the boom ends.

Which is to say, those who have found great financial rewards in Floyd county coal will move on to lush fields but those bound to the county by family ties, other business interests or plain inability to pull up stakes and leave for greener pastures will face a drear prospect.

However great the county's prosperity at this time may be as a result of the coal boom, and the need for coal notwithstanding, it must be realized that much of the beauty of these hills will be destroyed, that streams will be silt-filled, that the danger of flood will be greater and that the general environment will be less wholesome when the mining ends.

That will be Pay-Day for Eastern Kentucky, unless much serious thinking and planning is done now. Federal, state and county officials should join in protecting the land as much as possible—now. These and business and civic leaders should join now in planning for other industry to take the place of coal in the years ahead.

The Appalachian Regional Commission speaks of its interest in industrial sites for Appalachian areas but says some counties aren't worth saving. It speaks of its interest in access roads. We trust these are not mere access routes to an interstate highway providing our people a means of exodus. These should be access roads to industrial sites.

Industrial sites and other attractions to new industry should be sought by the coal counties which are sharing in the severance tax fund excess.

A Kentucky House subcommittee this week planned a meeting in Ashland and possibly other meetings for one day in Eastern Kentucky to discuss industrial development. More than one day is needed.

Coal prices will one day fall. Coal itself one day will be exhausted. Some serious planning now for other industry could save Eastern Kentucky. The people of the area must have something better to look toward than a giant federal WPA dedicated to repairing the damage done in the '70's to hilltops, hillsides, bottomlands and streams.

Huddleston Says More Severance Due 43 Kentucky Counties

Senator Walter Dee Huddleston said this week that he thinks the coal-producing counties of Kentucky should receive a greater percentage of coal severance tax revenues. Floyd county is one of the 43 such counties in the state.

"If ever an area produced great wealth for the country it is the coal-producing counties of Kentucky, which are carrying a great deal of the burden of the current energy problems," Huddleston said. "And right now they are not receiving benefits in proportion to what they are supplying the rest of the nation."

Huddleston, who helped enact the severance tax in the 1972 General Assembly, said he favors a national severance tax—but that is not a likely possibility within the next few years.

"That being the case, I think coal-producing counties should receive a set percentage of severance tax revenues so they can make some long-range development plans," he added. "Coal is a non-renewable resource, and the coal-producing counties have to think about what will be left after that resource is gone.

"I just believe the coal-producing counties—which are doing so much to supply the nation with energy—should receive something of lasting value in return. And that means giving them the resources to provide the services and long-range development facilities they need."

HONORS 'DAUGHTER CLUBS'

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club held its annual Christmas party, December 19, in the downstairs of the newly renovated Masonic Lodge building at Wayland. As is its usual custom, the club honored its "daughter clubs," Wheelwright, Drift and Salyersville. The party was originally planned to have been held December 9 at May Lodge but was postponed because of bad weather on that date.

Dr. Mary Pauline Fox, of Pikeville, second vice-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, showed colored slides of her floatation trip down the Colorado River in Grand Canyon.

Following the program, Mrs. J. C. Wells, club president, explained that the club was not only honoring its daughter clubs but also three of its charter members of the original "Mothers' Club" organized in 1926, from which the present federated club was born. Mrs. Wells presented Mrs. Sallie G. Webb, Mrs. Beatrice Collins and Mrs. Billie Castle with Lifetime Membership Certificates in recognition of their years of meritorious service in promoting the programs and activities of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. She also presented Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Castle with Kentucky Colonel commissions (Mrs. Collins is already a Kentucky Colonel). She presented Mrs. Otto Martin also with a Kentucky colonel commission honoring her for her services in the various offices she has held in the club and for her many years as publicity chairman. She presented various members with gifts for their service and cooperation, as well as a gift to the guest-speaker, Dr. Fox.

A turkey dinner was served prior to the program. The program began with the Pledge to the Flag led by Mrs. S. M. Martin, followed by devotions by Mrs. J. T. Spillman.

Those attending were Mesdames Alma Souleyrette, Betty Mullins, Jimmie Lou Johnson, Margot Lee, and Judy Meade, of the Wheelwright Club; Isabel Reed, Ruby Akers, Anna Hoffman, and Anna Sue Stumbo, of the Drift Club; Alma Frazier, Seventh district governor, KFWC, of the Magoffin County Club, Salyersville; Dr. Mary Pauline Fox and Mrs. N. D. Howard, of the Pikeville Club; and Mesdames J. T. Spillman, Floyd Tackett, Dora Reed, Marcellous Dunfee, James E. Martin, J. C. Wells, S. M. Martin, Sallie G. Webb, Marie Mullins, Anne Castle, Virgie Spencer, Florence Pack, Betty Stevens, Mervil Dixon, Otto Martin, Beatrice Collins, Felix Coburn, Hansel Bradley Billie Castle, and Don Hughes.

Between meal snacks for preschool children are probably a good idea, according to the United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) Welfare and Retirement Fund's nutrition expert, as long as the snacks are nutritious ones. A young child can become too hungry between meals, thus becoming tired, irritable and unable to eat well when meal time comes. The Fund recommends small peanut butter sandwiches as an ideal snack, along with fresh fruit, vegetables and cheese.

Speaker for the final session, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, will be Raymond Williams, Kingsport, Tenn. watercolorist. A graduate of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts and a teacher, Williams has 20 years of experience as a commercial artist. He will demonstrate his art during the session.

Judging, which will begin at noon on Saturday, will cover 11 categories in art and nine in photography. Art categories include: oil landscape and seascape; oil still life; acrylic pastoral scene; acrylic still life; abstract, any medium; watercolor landscape and seascape; watercolor animals, flowers or birds; pastel, any subject; ink, pencil or charcoal, any subject; portraits, any medium; and watercolor still life. First, second and third place winners in all categories of both art and photography will receive ribbons. The grand award winner in art will receive a rosette, as will the photography grand award winners in black and white and color.

2. Any customer who selects an option (either one-way or two-way) must make DDD station to station calls under any plan contracted for.

3. Charges for Business or Residence all hours service would be $5.35 for the first hour (per month) for one-way service and $5.85 per hour (per month) for two-way service. After hours residence only service would be $3.35 for the first hour of one-way service.

Individual Phys Ed Piloted at Ashland

An advanced physical fitness program, which eventually may have statewide impact, is now being tested in Ashland.

"This new program focuses on the why of physical fitness rather than on just the how," said Eugene Cantrall, physical education consultant for the state Department of Education.

It is general practice in physical education classes, Cantrall noted, to have the entire group work on the same fitness program, even though certain class members may already be proficient in the skills being developed.

"This policy leads to a situation in which we have football players spending class time on strength exercises and long-distance runners doing laps around the gym when they could be developing other aspects of physical fitness," Cantrall said.

Experimenting for a solution to this problem, Cantrall borrowed some special equipment from a Louisville YMCA and traveled to Paul G. Blazer High School to give advanced physical education students there rigorous tests for lung capacity, cardiovascular endurance, strength, flexibility and fat measurement.

"We let the kids evaluate the tests," Cantrall said. "They did their own mathematical calculations and spotted the areas in which they needed work."

Each student then set specific fitness goals for himself and, with the help of the physical education staff, worked out his own individualized program for improvement.

The two classes of juniors, both boys and girls, now working on the pilot program spend part of each gym period sprinting to develop lung capacity, climbing ropes to strengthen upper arms or doing other exercises keyed to individual fitness goals.

Blazer physical education teacher Judy Morris said the program has made students more aware of their fitness deficits and has sharpened interest and enthusiasm for physical education.

Consumer Comments

By Atty. Gen. Ed. W. Hancock

One person's estimate is another's "guesstimate." Consumers should remember that estimates are not exact statements of what a job will cost, but rather a general approximation of the cost.

It's a wise practice to get at least three estimates for such things as car and appliance repair or home improvement jobs. When getting estimates, there are some precautions consumers should take.

Explain fully to the estimator the exact work you wish to be done, so that there will be no late surprises. Insist that a contractor come to your home and personally assess a job. Never accept an estimate for appliance repair without showing the appliance to the estimator.

Get all estimates in writing, including all additional charges and costs. If there is a charge for the estimate itself, or if the charge is to be refunded at the time of payment, get that in writing, too. The estimate also should contain a specific description of the work and the kind and quality of materials to be used.

Get a commitment, also in writing, that if the actual charge is going to exceed the estimate, the company will obtain prior approval from you.

Ask the amount of time it will take to complete the job. Have it put in writing.

Once you've received the written estimates, consider more than just the dollars and cents. Information on the company or vendor's past performance and reliability must be taken into account.

Remember, too, that in some instances, the estimator may have difficulty in determining even an approximation of the cost. The extent of such things as water damage may be unknown until a job is begun. Prices for materials may change. And if some of the work is subcontracted, the charges of the subcontractor may not be known.

If you have a consumer complaint, be sure to contact the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division, Room 34, the Capitol, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Kentucky residents may call free of charge on the Consumer Hotline: 1-800-372-2960.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie D. Rice and sons, Ronnie and Michael, of Wildwood, Florida, spent the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Rice, of Pyramid. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Rice, of Dwaile, and Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Carpenter, of Mt. Sterling.

Explanation

Similarity of names was a source of embarrassment last week for two well-known Floyd county men when their names appeared in The Times as having been arrested on drunken driving charges. We explain that the John Henry Woods and Frank Reffitt listed as arrested were neither the Rev. John Henry Woods, of Cow Creek, nor the Frank Reffitt who resides at Hueysville.

Opinions from Attorney General's Office

Among opinions from the office of Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock were the following: In response to Bruce Lester, attorney for the Newport Board of Education, the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) said that funding a public relations plan with public funds was unconstitutional. The board had proposed that they would advise the administrators of the local school system to join and attend the functions of the various service clubs to help upgrade their community image. The OAG replied that, although another opinion stated that funding would be constitutional for membership in the state school board, the local service organizations are not directly concerned with the public school program.

The Office of the Attorney General outlined proper procedure for the channelling of criminal cases for Perry County Judge Babe C. Noplis. First, when a peace officer makes an arrest without a warrant late at night, he can only take the defendant before a magistrate having jurisdiction of the subject matter. Secondly, the county jailer does not have the authority to deliver the defendant into any court he wishes. And thirdly, the OAG stated that a magistrate must hold court in his district and in the same location.

Jerry Alleyne, of KEA UniServ Unit 4 in Frankfort, asked the Office of the Attorney General if teachers are liable for injuries or damages that may occur during school functions they are required to attend. The Office of the Attorney General stated that a school teacher may be held personally liable for his negligence, but the standard of negligence will be measured according to what a reasonable teacher would do under the same circumstances. Each case must be decided on its own merits, the opinion stated.

In a recent letter, Joyce A. Morse, assistant state auditor, listed certain dates for the payment of property tax bills. Her questions concerned when the discount for early payments ends—whether on Oct. 31 or Nov. 1—and when penalties for late payment should begin—whether on Jan. 1 or Jan. 2. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's Office that a taxpayer making payment of his bill on Nov. 1 would be entitled to the two per cent discount. All state, county and district taxes, however, shall become delinquent on Jan. 1 unless there has been a significant delay in mailing tax bills to justify failure to collect the penalty.

Martin F. Sullivan Jr., Louisville attorney, has asked whether a private, church-related secondary school may permit the sale of cigarettes on school property and whether the same school may designate an area, outside the school buildings, but on school grounds, for the smoking of cigarettes by students. Since it is against the law to smoke cigarettes on school property in the presence of minors, it is the opinion of the Attorney General's Office that neither the sale of cigarettes nor the smoking by students on school grounds is permissible. However, there appears to be no authority for stopping students from smoking off the school grounds proper.

R. Wayne McGee, Harrison County attorney, requested an opinion on whether an arresting officer must offer and specifically designate an authorized test to be performed when a person is accused of driving while intoxicated. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's Office that the arresting officer must request the subject to submit to a test and the request must be so phrased as to call for a response of agreement or refusal. If there is a failure to designate a test for analysis, the revocation of the subject's license under the implied consent statute cannot be valid.

All Property To Be Listed by March 1

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Kentucky Commissioner of Revenue Maurice P. Carpenter has issued reminder to property owners of the upcoming Jan. 1 listing date of all property for ad valorem taxes. Carpenter said that the property may be listed with the property valuation administrators between Jan. 1 and March 1.

The coming assessment is especially important in view of a recent ruling of the Franklin Circuit Court, Carpenter added. In October, 1974, Franklin Circuit Court Judge Henry Meigs reconfirmed the Court of Appeals rulings that all property must be assessed at its fair cash (market) value. The court also held that the Department of Revenue could not accept any county's 1975 assessment which did not conform to that rule. Further, Judge Meigs ruled that any property valuation administrator who failed to assess property at fair cash value may be removed from office.

This fair cash value ruling also applies to farm land. However, any owner of land devoted exclusively to agricultural or horticultural use may make application for valuation and assessment at the agricultural use value rather than for assessment at a greater fair cash value due to its development potential. This application must be filed by April 1.

The homestead exemption for persons 65 years and older will be raised from $6,500 to $7,700 in 1975, in accordance with House Bill 436, which ties the exemption to the cost of living index. Under Senate Bill 219, persons becoming 65 at any time during the year are entitled to claim the exemption. Persons becoming 65 during 1975 are required to file application for the exemption by March 1.

The property valuation administrator in each county has the necessary forms for both the agricultural assessment and the homestead exemption.

Johnson Owes Music's Claim, Senator Avers

Versailles, Ky.—State Senator Tom Ward, (D-Versailles) last week said Ewart Johnson owes the people of Kentucky $127,100. Ward said, "I am burned up that the taxpayers of Kentucky are stuck with the folly of Ewart Johnson."

Ward's reference is to the out-of-court settlement made by Johnson and other state officials with Edward Music, of Prestonsburg, in which the state agreed to pay Music $127,100. Music brought suit against the state following cancellation of the controversial Cumberland Falls chairlift last May.

Ward said, "Ewart Johnson is the one who made the deal, passed the contract around for everyone to sign, thereby placing the state in this terrible fix. Therefore, Ewart Johnson is one who ought to pay for it, and not the taxpayers. As Parks Commissioner he was sworn to uphold the Wild Rivers Act; either he willfully violated the Wild Rivers Act or he did it in ignorance—either is inexcusable. He ought to be man enough to face up to this and relieve the taxpayers of Kentucky of this $127,100 payment to Ed Music."

Ward, who is a candidate for lieutenant governor, added:

"The first plank in my platform is legislation which mandates that all state contracts be subject to public notice and competitive bidding. I have already prepared a draft of a bill for this purpose. This bill will relieve the people of Kentucky from costly foolishness such as this."

The March of Dimes reports that birth defects affect the daily lives of about 15 million Americans.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

Man, and His Planet Earth

"This earth," wrote John Burroughs, the great naturalist, "is a paradise, and it is our good fortune to be a part of it."

The great naturalist evidently wrote this before men became dispoilers of the earth, littering it with garbage from one end to the other, also breaking many of the vital links of nature, and causing untold misery to many lesser creatures, as well as to man himself. Today modern man, despite his science and technology, has let the serpents of greed, waste and selfishness despoil his earthly paradise and bring us to the brink of disaster. Man, who was made to be the very acme of creation, has become the arch destroyer of creation—the earth and its resources, its wild life, its beauty and grandeur.

Man needs to learn anew the great lesson that all life on planet earth is one life, all linked together in innumerable ways, and that he is a part of that life and has a deep responsibility to protect all the lesser life forms. The fact that man was given dominion over the earth and its resources entails a grave responsibility to safeguard the earth and all her resources and all her manifold life forms, whether animal or vegetable.

More than ever, man needs to embrace Dr. Albert Schweitzer's great ideal, which taught reverence for life and a sense of responsibility for the welfare of living things. Men are too greedy and selfish to embrace this great ideal; they destroy life ruthlessly, break the chains of nature and cause needless suffering. Thomas Henry Huxley, English scientist, wrote: "True Education is the instruction of the intellect in the laws of nature, the shaping of the affections and the will into a strong desire to live and move in harmony with Nature's laws."

John Ruskin, English author and champion of social reform, had a creed which we need to adopt in this mercenary age. It was:—

"I will not kill or hurt any living thing needlessly, nor will I destroy anything of beauty, but will strive to preserve and protect all gentle life, and guard the natural beauty of this earth."

All life on this earth is linked together; it is ruled by the infinite law of Compensation: Life forms help other life forms to survive and in turn they are helped. In other words, life is based on "group effort."

Findings of a U. S. Government survey reveal that one in 20 youngsters between the ages of 12 and 17 is unable to read at a 4th grade level and this rate is even higher among poor and inner-city students; And as for Grandpa—a Harris poll found that 34 percent of the people surveyed couldn't fill out a Medicaid form.

The cycles of Nature are infinite, eternal, and are designed to keep the earth stable and in balance; they work to build the soil, to renew the oxygen supply, to keep the water supply at a normal level to sustain life. But man often disrupts the cycles of nature; he endangers the oxygen supply by pollution of the atmosphere; his chemicals and detergents pollute the water supply and create hazards to life.

Man's abuse of nature's laws is bringing him to disaster. His waste of energy resources has brought him to the grim realization that there is a limit to earth's resources and that wanton waste of them can cause hardship and misery.

Man has long been too careless of the environment. He has let corrosive acids from his mines and factories pollute the once crystal streams and destroy the aquatic life in them. His industries have long belched poisonous fumes into the atmosphere and today "smog" has become a deadly menace in many sections.

But man cannot live by bread alone. He needs to preserve the beautiful things of earth—the scenic wild rivers, the grandeur of the mountains, the beauty of the forests, the wild life.

In destroying the beautiful things of earth, man is literally destroying himself, for he cannot live by bread alone. Man has destroyed too much of the beauty of his planet earth. He has muddied the pure running streams with silt; he has polluted the lakes and oceans with pesticides and garbage. So today we have a terrible tragedy: Dead lakes, dead streams, a dying ocean.

These ghastly things are a grim warning of future tragedies unless we shortly mend our ways.

The Wife of Daniel Boone

By DAISY CAROL KING
 (Morgan School, Falmouth, Ky.)

Rebecca Bryan was born in Virginia in 1739. She was the daughter of Joseph and Alee Bryan. Rebecca was one of 11 children. She grew to be a dark-eyed girl on the fords of the Yadkin River in North Carolina.

At the age of 16, Rebecca began work on a cambric apron, which she would wear over her first woman-length dress to the wedding of Mary Boone, a best friend. Mary was the sister of Daniel Boone, who later was to become Rebecca's husband. Mary Boone was marrying Rebecca's uncle, William Bryan.

It was at the wedding feast that Rebecca met Daniel Boone, a volunteer under Major General Edward Braddock and his British regulars. After the feast, Daniel gave Rebecca's hand a tight grip and told her he would be back.

When Daniel was home from war, William and Mary Bryan gave a feast for the Boone families. It was at this time that Daniel asked Rebecca to be his wife. They were married August 14, 1756. The marriage was a good match, for Rebecca was almost as handy with a rifle as her husband.

Their first home was with Daniel's mother and father. Before long all the Bryans and Boones took part in the raising of their cabin on Sugar Tree Creek. The cabin had one room, one door, two windows and a punche on floor. Shortly after they moved into their new cabin, their first child was born.

Now, for the first time of many, the family was forced to move because of Indian trouble. This time they found a small home in Culpepper County. After a treaty was signed with the Cherokees, Rebecca and Daniel again returned to Sugar Tree. Here they remained until 1766. They sold their Sugar Tree home and drove to the head of the Yadkin. . . There they built their second log cabin, a replica of the one on Sugar Tree.

In 1773, Rebecca, now the mother of eight children, went with her adventurous husband on the trail to Kentucky. It was on the early part of this journey her son James was killed by Indians. The family then settled on the Clinch River in North Carolina, where they stayed for almost two years. Rebecca was very much grieved over the death of her son. Nothing seemed quite real. She must have more work to do, so that she would have no time to think, to brood, and then work came knocking at the door. Her uncle, James Bryan, was standing in the doorway with the news his wife had died, leaving six children, ages six to 16. Rebecca insisted he bring the children to live with her and Daniel. One family, two families—overnight.

Rebecca's ninth child was born soon after the treaty of Sycamore Shoals was signed and Kentucky purchased from the Indians. In 1775 the Daniel Boone family and a caravan started for Fort Boonesborough, Kentucky named after Daniel.

Rebecca was the first white woman to stand on the banks of the Kentucky River. There Daniel built a cabin with a dirt floor, a hole for a window and daylight coming in between logs. Daniel also had built Rebecca the loom he had promised her earlier.

Rebecca was soon busy weaving cloth out of nettles. As soon as they were settled, she thought it was time to teach the four older girls how to bake. First she taught them the different kinds of corn cake, the frontier staff of life; pone, the Indians called it. The girls soon learned the kinds of work necessary in pioneer Kentucky.

Rebecca faced many challenges in the untamed land. She had to mold bullets and load rifles in time of siege. She heard the screams of a daughter kidnapped by Indians and saw a tomahawk raised over her husband's head. She would guard the cabin and children while Daniel hunted. She never despaired when Daniel was reported killed, now gave up hope when Indians later captured him. Boone always returned from his adventures to find his wife waiting for him.

When intruding settlers pushed her hunter-husband westward, she followed along, determined not to "hobble her traipsin' man."

She and Daniel closed their long life together in the new settlement in Missouri, surrounded by children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Rebecca's "forever rest" began in her sleep, March 18, 1813. She was buried in her cambric apron.

Rebecca was a true pioneer woman, with great courage and patience.

State Unemployment Below Nat'l Figure

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The unemployment rate is a far cry from a "cut and dried" statistic. "Determining the rate involves a 70-step estimating procedure required of each state and developed by the United States Department of Labor," said Robert W. MacDonald, head statistician for the Bureau for Manpower Services, Department for Human Resources (DHR).

Simplified, the unemployment estimates include everyone 16 years of age or over who is looking for and is available for work, including persons who are laid off and waiting to return to work.

The methodology uses the number of persons who are collecting unemployment insurance benefits as a base for the estimate.

"Covered employment represents about 65 per cent of Kentucky's work force, so the persons who are covered by unemployment insurance represents a substantial portion of the state's total jobless," said MacDonald.

Persons not covered under Kentucky's Unemployment Insurance Program are added to this base figure to give a total unemployment figure for the state. The non-covered portions of the unemployment estimate include most government workers, railroad workers and new and returning job seekers, such as college and high school graduates and dropouts.

In contrast, the employment estimate includes everyone who works for one hour or more during the reference week, which includes the 12th of each month. This reference week has been established by the U. S. Department of Labor and all states in the nation use the same week.

"Since 1970, Kentucky's unemployment rate has been below the national rate," MacDonald said. "This is due in part to industrial development in Kentucky."

"For many decades, Kentucky was a labor supply state for the industrial states to the north," MacDonald said. "We used to have an out-migration of 400,000 persons every ten years due to the lack of job opportunities. Since 1965, this out-migration has been stopped and during 1973 Kentucky has had an in-migration of 42,000 persons," he said.

While national unemployment has risen to 6.5 per cent for the month of November, Kentucky's is still below the six per cent level.

"The nationwide upsurge in unemployment means we are experiencing a recession, if one is defined as a slow-down in the economy due to decreased consumer demand for goods," said MacDonald.

"What underlies our national recession, though, is the personal 'depression' that jobless individuals are experiencing," MacDonald said.

Considering that the soaring unemployment rates of the early 1960's averaged 11.6 per cent of the work force, the situation has been worse.

"What complicates the picture of the 1970's, however, are the energy crisis, inflation and the general national and world economic situation," said MacDonald.

Jail Improvement Is Difficult Task

By LEONARD N. KIMBALL
Frankfort, Ky.—"No man, no matter what his status in the eyes of society, should be forced to live even one hour in a rat-infested cell."

If Joe Barbee had to summarize his personal working philosophy, that undoubtedly would be it. As chief jail consultant for the Kentucky Department of Justice's Bureau of Corrections, Barbee has the difficult job of inspecting local jails and trying to persuade local officials that improvements need to be made if rehabilitation is ever going to become a reality.

But convincing county officials that jail improvements ought to have a higher funding priority hasn't been easy, he says, especially since most communities are hard pressed to meet their financial responsibilities.

Of 119 county jails inspected by the justice department last summer, 64 received "poor" to "very poor" ratings. Another 25 were rated as being in "fair" condition only, while the remaining 30 earned "good" to "very good" ratings.

According to Barbee, no one area of the state has a monopoly on good or bad jails. There is an even distribution of every quality of jail in every part of the state. The criteria used in judging jails includes a check of security, sanitation and dietary provisions for inmates. How well the jailers do their job is not on Barbee's checklist.

Barbee said that the low ratings received by most county jails were due largely to the limited amount of local tax money being allocated for jail improvements. But the situation is changing, albeit ever-so-slowly, he says, and some of those changes are expected to become more evident soon.

For one thing, more funds for jail improvements now are becoming available without having to tap local tax sources. Much of the new money is reaching local government through federal revenue sharing and grants from the Kentucky Crime Commission (KCC).

In addition, the 1975-77 Comprehensive Criminal Justice Plan for Kentucky, approved just last October at a special KCC session, also has earmarked an additional $50,000 for more jail renovation work by June, 1975. Similar amounts also have been projected for expenditure during 1976-77.

Nearly another $500,000 in federal-local money will be pumped into a program which will permit construction of a regional confinement center to replace existing local facilities in a four to six county area. Two additional centers also are planned for 1976-77.

The plan also calls for still another $180,000 in federal-local funds to be expended over the three-year period for hiring at least one deputy jailer for every jail certified by the jail consultant's office as meeting specified minimum standards for security, sanitation and prisoner diet.

Fully staffed for the first time since January this year—by Barbee and a five-man team of trained consultants—the state's Office of Jail Consultants already is receiving praise for giving local jailers help in an area which, according to one source, traditionally offered "little incentive for jailers to do a better job."

Jack B. Lesley, assistant director of management services for the state's Department of Justice, describes the work done by Barbee and his staff over the past year (1973-74) as impressive.

The "firsts" credited to Barbee's office by Lesley included a three-day, in-service training program for newly elected jailers and a series of 10 regional training seminars attended by more than 50 per cent of the state's local jailers and their deputies.

Barbee's office also joined with the Jailers Association in writing legislation which, enacted by the last General Assembly, now makes it mandatory that all planned jail construction and renovation projects get approval from the office of Jail Consultants before any work is begun.

Thus far, that office has supervised jail renovation projects in at least 10 facilities and sold 9 counties on using federal revenue sharing money to build new jails.

Lesley said that another 20 talk sessions with fiscal and county court judges on jail renovation and new construction also are being planned for fiscal year 1976. In addition, Barbee and his staff expect:

—To work with the state's Bureau of Training at Richmond in developing a regular training program, with the goal of instructing no less than 50 per cent of all local jailers in Kentucky by June, 1976.

—To conduct, also by June, 1976, over 48 special investigations into the "just and fair treatment of prisoners" per a commitment made by the governor's office, the state Attorney General and the state's Office of the Public Defender.

Artists To Supplement Schools' Art Program

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Artists and craftsmen who wish to participate in the Kentucky Arts Commission Artists-in-School program during the next academic year should submit applications to the commission before March 1, 1975. Schools desiring services of a resident artist or craftsman must apply to the commission by the same date.

"An important aspect of the program is to bring professional artists and craftsmen into communities for a year to heighten an awareness of art as an essential process, both in education and the community," said Madison Cawein, program director for the commission. The visual artists set up a studio in the school itself where they are free to work and may also give instruction to interested students, teachers or members of the community. "The emphasis," said Cawein, "is on their role as practicing artists rather than teachers. The role of an art teacher is to impart specific skills and information, whereas the role of the artist is to impart, by whatever means, an attitude towards making and doing, towards art and life. They supplement art instruction programs rather than replace them."

This year the program employs two residents: Martha Nelson, textile sculptor and painter in Hazard, Kentucky and Dean Lichtmann, a sculptor of large works in ceramics at Cloverport, Kentucky. This next year the services of two artists and one craftsman will be provided by the Kentucky Arts Commission and the National Endowment for the Arts. Both the commission and the National Endowment provide 70 per cent of the artists' salaries and supplies. The school supports 30 per cent of the program, as well as providing a studio suitable to the artists' discipline.

For further information and applications contact the Kentucky Arts Commission, 100 West Main Street, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Equitable News

November-December, 1974

In the wake of outstanding successes with its Farmbrook and Glencannon projects, Ryan Homes, Inc. has undertaken its most ambitious planned unit development yet—a project called Hunting Ridge near South Hills Village Shopping Center.

Already Ryan has sold out the first phase of the 966-unit development, despite increasing consumer caution about buying new housing. According to Ryan, the rapid sales can be traced to three things—reasonable mortgage rates (Ryan does its own financing), the availability of natural gas service from Equitable and a comprehensive and workable warranty program.

New State Penal Code in Effect

When circuit court convened here Monday the new Kentucky penal code was in effect.

Generally speaking, defense attorneys hailed the new code as an improvement over the old, while prosecutors considered it confusing and favoring those charged with criminal offenses.

The first death sentence meted out under the new code is likely to end up before the Court of Appeals as a pivotal case testing reinstatement of capital punishment.

That seems to sum up opinions of a number of state corrections officials, including Charles J. Holmes, commissioner of the state's Bureau of Corrections, as the death penalty returned to Kentucky lawbooks on Jan. 1.

How the death penalty fares in Kentucky courts—and courts in other states and the U. S. Supreme Court—will shape correctional policies and programs, not to mention court verdicts, for years to come, Holmes said.

Holmes added that a long, drawn-out series of legal battles over constitutionality of the death penalty could delay—"perhaps for years"—use of the electric chair at the state penitentiary at Eddyville.

The last execution in Kentucky took place on March 2, 1962. There have been a total of 162 executions since 1911, the year the electric chair first was used and electrocution officially designated as the only means of carrying out the death penalty.

Capital punishment was revived for certain crimes by the 1974 Kentucky General Assembly as part of a sweeping revision of the state's criminal laws. Although 29 states have rewritten death penalty laws as prescribed by the Supreme Court two years ago, no one has been executed.

But North Carolina, one of the first states to reinstitute the death penalty, is being watched closely, as a prisoner there currently is testing the new law in court.

Under Kentucky's new penal code, the death sentence is prescribed for the following crimes:

- Murder for hire or profit;
- Murder in direct conjunction with first-degree robbery, first-degree rape, first-degree arson and first-degree burglary;
- Multiple murders;
- Murder of a prison employee during his or her work hours;
- Murder using a destructive device (such as a bomb);

Reprint of Letter To the Editor Of Knott Co. News

Dear Editor:

I don't know who is responsible for writing the front page headline article—"Gas Service Disrupted Again", but I do know who is responsible for publishing it. I have never read a more vicious, insinuating attack against men from our area who work for the Gas Company. The article definitely shows that you are on the side of "Big Business" with no concern for our native, local men who work for the company. If you do not have positive proof of who did this, which I'm sure you don't, or you would be collecting the reward, don't you think you should refrain from insinuating that the striking men committed this act? It is so very harmful to these men to be attacked in such a vicious, irresponsible manner by, of all things, a local paper.

You could have published a statement about the incident without allowing your own personal feelings to overshadow everything else. None of our large publications, such as The Courier-Journal or Lexington papers reported this incident in a hateful insinuating manner.

Yours truly,
 Leslie H. Smith
 Carrie, Ky.

Editor's Note: Our thanks to Mrs. Smith for the letter above. When things in the Knott County News do not suit a sector of population, we appreciate a letter such as this: we hope others will follow suite. As you see, the letter is not complimentary to us, but since it is to the point and without any unprintable terms, we print it as it is.

We'll also try to tell it as it is about the articles: We are not trying to make excuses at all, but the articles pertaining to the disruption of gas service came from the gas company, and as Mrs. Smith says, we are responsible for publishing the material. We do not favor big business over the local men or vice-versa. We try to treat both equally, although, as in this situation, it seems as if it isn't so.

Due to the letter calling our attention to the matter, we'll try to do a better editing job.

Thanks,
 Editor

While the election day results are still topmost in many minds, the Kentucky Citizens for Judicial Improvement is already looking ahead to the 1975 elections. Its primary goal is to inform the public about a constitutional amendment—slated for the ballot—which is designed to streamline and revamp the state's court system.

- Murder of a police officer, sheriff or deputy sheriff during their work hours;
- Kidnapping and then harming the victim.

"I suspect that many defense attorneys will claim that the death penalty is too broadly defined, too hazy in spots," said a spokesman for the Corrections Bureau's legal office. "They'll have to use care in picking the charge against a defendant," he added.

That spokesman said that juries, in an effort to dodge enforcement of the death penalty, actually may elect to acquit defendants charged in capital crimes. Under the new law they cannot throw out capital charges in favor of others carrying less severe penalties.

There are now five men at the penitentiary who have been designated as "death row" inmates, although there is no "death row" as such and plans do not call for the establishment of a specific area to lodge inmates sentenced to death.

After the Supreme Court in 1972 ordered a halt to executions until death penalty laws were rewritten, sentences of four of the "death row" inmates were commuted to life. The fifth man's sentence was reduced to life without parole.

The fifth man's sentence was more severe because of the nature of his crime—rape and murder. The other four men were convicted on murder charges, but received a lesser penalty over objections of a number of Commonwealth attorneys.

None of the five sentences will change automatically under the new penal code because the code is not "retroactive." That means that anyone charged or convicted of committing one of the new capital offenses before 12:01 a.m., Jan. 1 is totally immune from execution.

Capital punishment had been law in Kentucky since statehood in 1792. Before it was rendered inactive two years ago, the death penalty covered 15 different crimes. They included armed theft of a bank or bank theft, death resulting from obstruction of a road or private passway, shooting or throwing a missile into a train, station or motor vehicle resulting in death, and willful murder.

Of the 162 persons executed in Kentucky since 1911, 144 were executed for willful murder, six for criminal assault, five for armed robbery and seven for rape.

The last person to die in Kentucky's electric chair was Kelly Moss, a white mechanic from Henderson, who was sentenced to death on March 30, 1960 at the age of 45.

The penal code has changed the structure of sex offenses and totally eliminated others.

Under the new code, fornication, adultery, seduction of a female under 21 on promise of marriage, sodomy between consenting adults of different sexes and patronizing a prostitute no longer will be criminal offenses in Kentucky.

Changing morals and a growing reluctance to prosecute and convict such cases have been attributed as two reasons for the changes.

Guy Bayes, director of the Justice Department's training program, said police officers have been reluctant to enforce some of these laws because of a lack of "public support."

"Although I do not agree with decriminalizing such activities as fornication and adultery, many people believe such conduct is in an area of private morals which should be left to the discretion of the people involved, not the police," he said.

In recent years, few convictions have been obtained for such arrests and Bayes believes the code's authors decided a "lot of money and time" was being wasted by attempts to enforce the laws.

He also said some of the offenses, such as seducing a woman under 21 on promise of marriage, have been subjected to misuse in the past. It is now a felony, punishable by up to five years in prison, to falsely use a marriage promise to seduce a female.

Under the penal code, rape charges have been reclassified according to the victim's age and extent of injuries. Rape remains the most serious sex offense in the code, with the maximum sentence to remain at life imprisonment.

The penal code also changes the age of consent from 18 to 16 years.

The present laws on sodomy don't distinguish between sexes. It, too, is a felony with a prison sentence of up to five years for conviction. Although the penal code eliminates sodomy between adults of different sexes as a crime, sodomy between persons of the same sex is still considered a criminal offense in the penal code.

Bayes said the code's drafters believe that by eliminating certain sex offenses, the penal code will enable police and courts to concentrate on more important violations.

As an example, he said the hidden advantage of removing patronizing a prostitute as an offense from criminal laws will be the policemen's ability now to focus on organizers of prostitution. It still is illegal to promote or engage in prostitution.

Because patronizing a prostitute formerly was illegal, a suspect could refuse to testify by pleading self-incrimination. As a result many investigations were thwarted. Now, with the new code in effect, it no longer will be illegal and a patron can be subpoenaed and forced to testify or face imprisonment for contempt of court.

A change in state gambling laws soon may make life increasingly hazardous for anyone who believes that operating a gambling establishment is a surefire way to make some easy money.

Under the new penal code it no longer is a crime to patronize any establishment where gambling takes place. It still is a felony to operate such an establishment, however.

State justice officials say that drawing a legal distinction between operating or just patronizing a gambling establishment as a "player" should give them a better lever to use against organized gambling in Kentucky. Under the changed law, it now will be possible to compel anyone caught patronizing a gambling establishment to testify in court as a prosecution witness.

According to Capt. Leo Reynolds, head of the Kentucky State Police Organized Crime Unit, a major problem facing police in the past when attempting to build a case against operators or backers of gambling activities in Kentucky was a lack of witnesses willing to testify in court.

Under the old law, anyone caught patronizing a gambling establishment could be arrested and prosecuted. But, as a criminal defendant he then could refuse to testify against the operator of the establishment by standing on his Constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Effective Jan. 1, however, that protection will be denied them in the future, because simply patronizing a gambling establishment is no longer considered a crime. Now, if a patron refuses to testify, he may be charged with contempt of court and jailed until he agrees to appear in court and answer questions, Reynolds said.

Among the forms of gambling outlawed under the new code are book-making, lotteries, mutuals or numbers games, card playing, dice games and such devices as slot machines, roulette wheels and pinball machines. Anyone caught promoting or conspiring to promote a gambling activity or gaming scheme also will be subject to arrest and prosecution.

The "Friday night poker game" where friends gather to play cards with one another on an equal basis at home or in a local club does not come under the new law unless the "house" takes a share of the profits, Reynolds said.

Home for a Homeless Dog

By GEORGE L. MOORE

We never knew what Joe's real name was. He came to us when he was well over a year old. Neither did we learn the identity of his former master but he must have been a heartless person with no compassion for any of God's creatures. He had put Joe out on the highway near our mail box to starve to death or to be run down by a car. Although life was slowly ebbing, he used his last remaining strength to climb the mile-high hill to our house.

It was in late November and the chill of winter was in the air. We had been stripping tobacco and were just getting ready to close up shop for the night. The head of a horrible looking dog appeared in the hallway of the barn. Obviously he was looking for food and for shelter from the chilly wind. As dog lovers, we were already "dog poor" and had no desire or intention to take on another mouth to feed. A harsh scolding was all that was necessary to cause him to turn and disappear around the barn.

Before retiring for the night, I went up to close the garage. As I turned to pull down the door, I noticed a pair of eyes staring at me from the dark recess of the far corner. It was the dog seeking shelter to protect his raw body from the cold wind. I looked at him and he looked at me. You could tell from the look in his eyes that he was pleading not to be driven out in the icy cold. I thought the situation over for a moment and said: "Oh, come on!"

He fell in behind and followed me to the house. He could not take much food at first, for his stomach had shrunk from a long period of starvation. We fixed him a warm, comfortable bed in the tool shed. The next morning, my wife and a neighbor woman saturated him in motor oil and sulphur. They lines his quarters with heavy wool cloth. It is no exaggeration to say that he was a continuous sore with not a single visible hair on his entire body.

We started casting about for a name for him. We thought about calling him The Outcast of Poker Flat but decided that would be too cumbersome. We finally decided that the most appropriate name for him would be Hairless Joe. He did not seem to make much progress the first week except that he gained a little strength and his appetite increased enormously. He could consume six eggs for breakfast with gusto. As his strength increased, he began to follow me about the place.

At the end of the second week a few hairs began to appear here and there over his body. By the end of the third week you could even tell what kind of dog he was. By the end of the fifth week he had grown a new coat of glossy, black hair with whitish brown underneath. He had become a beautiful German Shepherd. He was no longer hairless but just plain Joe.

Now he is a full-fledged member of the family, and we call him Jody.

Records of the state Division of Water Enforcement indicate that boating fatalities have decreased substantially on Kentucky's waters through Oct. 31, 1974 as compared to the same period last year. Non-boating fatalities, predominantly accidental drownings, are on the increase. There were six water-related fatalities recorded in October, 1973, while in the same month this year, only two have been reported.

KENTUCKY WEST VIRGINIA GAS COMPANY

Now - each depositor insured to $40,000

Pursuant to a recent Act of Congress which was signed by President Ford on October 28, 1974, the general limit on federal deposit insurance has been raised from $20,000 to $40,000 for each depositor in banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, a U.S. Government agency.

- Q. When is this increase effective?
A. It is effective Wednesday, November 27, 1974, at all FDIC-insured banks.
- Q. How can I tell whether my deposit is insured by FDIC?
A. Each of the 14,500 FDIC-insured banks in the United States has an official sign at each teller's window using the FDIC logo that appears at the bottom of this ad.
- Q. Can I get more than $40,000 insurance at the same bank?
A. Yes, if you hold accounts in different legal ownership capacities. For example, if you are married, you can have an account in your name insured up to $40,000; your spouse can have an account in his or her name insured up to $40,000; and you and your spouse can have a joint account insured up to $40,000. If you hold several accounts in the same ownership capacity, however, the maximum insurance to which you are entitled is $40,000—even if the total amount in all of the accounts is more. The new law has not changed the rules—only the dollar amount of insurance has been changed.
- Q. How frequently do FDIC-insured banks fail?
A. In the past ten years, five or six FDIC-insured banks on the average have failed each year—about four-one hundredths of one percent of all insured banks in the country. The year 1974 will probably be no different in this respect than past years.
- Q. What is the record of depositor protection for insured banks that have failed?
A. To date, in all failed banks insured by FDIC, over 99 percent of all deposits, insured and uninsured combined, have been paid or made available to their owners.
- Q. If an FDIC-insured bank fails, when and how will I get my deposit back?
A. If an FDIC-insured bank is closed and liquidated, FDIC will start to pay insured depositors up to the statutory limit within ten days after the closing. As the bank's assets are liquidated, owners of claims in excess of the $40,000 insurance limit will share in the proceeds with other general creditors. In cases where the deposit liabilities of a failed bank are taken over by another sound bank with financial assistance from the FDIC, depositors have the use of all their funds to the same extent they had in the failed bank before it closed.
- Q. How good is FDIC insurance?
A. Since its creation in 1933, the FDIC has never failed to honor its deposit insurance commitment.

The federal deposit insurance fund, which has been built up from insurance premiums paid by FDIC-insured banks and the investment income on such premiums, now stands at more than $6 billion, and is increasing each year by about $400 million. In addition, the FDIC, by law, can borrow from the United States Treasury an additional $3 billion if it finds this necessary for deposit insurance purposes. The FDIC has never found it necessary to borrow any money from the Treasury, however. In fact, although the deposit insurance fund has never been much larger than 1% of all insured deposits in the country, the FDIC has never had to use more than a small amount of the fund at any one time, even when very large banks have failed.

- Q. How large have the insurance losses of FDIC been over the years?
A. Putting to one side for the moment the nation's two largest bank failures (United States National Bank, San Diego, in 1973 and Franklin National Bank, New York, last month) the FDIC's net loss in 506 bank failures since 1933 has been approximately $75 million.
- Q. Most of those must have been very small banks. What about the $1 billion United States National Bank and the $3.6 billion Franklin National Bank?
A. The FDIC laid out about $370 million in connection with the failure of United States National Bank, but it expects to recover a substantial portion of this amount as the receivership of that bank progresses. In the case of Franklin National Bank, the FDIC's only outlay so far has been $100 million for a capital note of European-American Bank & Trust Company and a small amount for initial liquidation expenses (since repaid). Further outlays are possible, but the FDIC's net loss, if any, will probably be very small. No depositor, of course, lost a nickel in either failure.
- Q. I thought the FDIC agreed to pay $1.7 billion to the Federal Reserve System to retire the liquidity loan Franklin needed before it closed.
A. It did, but it has the right to collect assets carried on Franklin's books at more than $2 billion in order to pay off this loan.
- Q. How can I obtain additional information and facts about FDIC and federal deposit insurance?
A. Information may be obtained by writing to the Public Information Office, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Washington, D.C. 20429.
