Judge Rules TV Controls Legal

Judge Anderson Says Resolution Constitutional

Speaking of

and for Floyd County

The resolution of the Floyd fiscal court which divided Floyd county into areas for the granting of franchises to operators of community television systems was upheld Monday by Judge Reed Anderson, of the Pike circuit court, who had presided as special judge in the hearing of a suit attacking constitutionality of the court resolution.

The case at issue was that in which Everett Akers, et al were listed as plaintiffs, and during the time a decision had been pending-since May of last year-a temporary injunction had stayed further action by the fiscal court.

Judge Anderson's opinion held, in part: "The resolution as adopted by the Floyd fiscal court, . . . not being unconstitutional and not depriving plaintiffs of any vested rights, is hereby declared to be legal and a proper act of the fiscal court."

The fiscal court resolution, adopted Board of Education. Feb. 6, last year, set off a spirited legal fight. The court proposed to divide the county into areas for cable television franchise purposes and for the stated

Flood Act Compliance Step Taken Mayor Says Effect Of Dams on River Yet To Be Argued

The city of Prestonsburg last week became in compliance with the National Flood Insurance Act, and Prestonsburg property owners will be eligible for flood insurance before the July 1 deadline, Mayor William O. Goebel announced this week.

Mayor Goebel said he had been involved with community participation in the insurance program since last July when he enlisted the help of the Big Sandy Area Development office here. At the Jan. 16 meeting of the City Council Paul Greer, of the development office, produced the necessary forms and these were signed the following Monday and forwarded to federal officials, he added.

According to the mayor, Prestonsburg will be permitted for a few months to establish flood plain boundaries. After that, the definite boundaries will be set by the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

As is being done by the city of Paintsville, Prestonsburg will petition the Corps of Engineers to change the boundaries from the level of the highest flood within a period of 100 years to a "more sensible conclusion" based on the fact that upstream reservoirs and the existing floodwall here reduce the height to which future Big Sandy floods may be expected to rise.

• Flu Hits Floyd Co. Hardest Among Eastern Counties, Report

Although Eastern Kentucky counties have suffered relatively little from the flu epidemic according to reports received by the Department for Human those reported.

A survey of hospitals and doctors, made by Mrs. Pauline Sparks of the Floyd County Health Department, showed that in the period Jan. 10-20 there were "roughly estimated" to have been 1,374 flu cases in this county. The Martin area reported the largest number of cases with 910. Prestonsburg physicians and the hospital here reported 314, and McDowell had 150.

These estimates were based on patients reporting for treatment, and it is believed the estimate is low rather than high. There has been, however, no closing of schools or other public gatherings. Reports from other Eastern Kentucky counties for the same period were: Harlan, 69; Lee, 204; Menifee, 1; Rockcastle, 60; Wolfe, 43; Rowan, 105.

Kentucky has 18,786 reported cases as of Tuesday, Jan. 21, according to reports received by local health departments. Records are based on reports from physicians; therefore, a case must have been severe enough to warrant contacting a physician and the physician must file a report before it is included. Christian and Clinton counties are the two hardest hit in the state, according to these reports. Health Services Bureau

Murder Hearing Near End; Venue Change Refused

The murder trial of Greenbury Tackett on a charge of slaying Charles Hall was in its second day here Tuesday. The case was expected to reach the jury sometime during the day.

The Tackett case is the only murder trial docketed for the current term.

New murder indictments will be docketed for the April term of circuit court, which may be one of the busiest of the year.

One of the cases to be set for April trial is that of Eddie Jones and his father, Agnel Jones, who were jointly indicted last September for wilful murder; aiding, abetting, etc.

Blood Unit Makes Stop Here Friday

This Town . . . That World

I have the solemn word of a member of the family that a frog was heard the other night, out back at our house where a little stream carries off the water from the hillside. Two croaks. Period. Don't know if the sound froze in his throat or if he had only two protesting grunts to make and, having made them, adjourned without a motion.

THE ITINERANT CAT

That must have been the same night our missing cat showed up for a handout. Since the day I threatened to have this, the sole surviving member of our menagerie, come on in and share common grub with the rest of us, the cat has been making brief appearances only every three or four weeks or so. I feed him, if he isn't too snooty to partake of common fare, and then he hightails it for an abandoned coal-bank on the hillside. If this cat isn't hibernating between calls, how he manages to look so well-fed is something of a mystery. If I thought this critter was responsible for the scarcity of redbirds about the place this winter, so help me, I'd drag out the old fowling piece and be ready for him, next time he makes his rounds.

Time Schools Lost in Snow To Be Made Good Next June

Recent snows closed Floyd county schools seven days in a row, and before that the schools had lost four other days because of weather conditions.

If there had been no interruptions, the school term would have ended May 21, the office of Supt. Charles Clark said. With the 11 days missed—and if there is no further loss of time-the term will end June 6.

Broad Form Deed Act Loses Court Decision

The 1974 law setting aside the ancient Broad Form deed provisions for stripmining without the consent of the surface owner ran into its first roadblock last week when Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs, Jr. held the legislation unconstitutional.

The opinion will be appealed by Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock and Dean Rivkin, attorney for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, and may eventually go to the Supreme Court.

At issue is the controversial "broadfor m" deed by which mineral rights were acquired separately from the land surface in many Eastern Kentucky areas in the late 1800s and early 1900s-deeds which give mineral owners almost unlimited rights to use the surface in mining operations.

Even though today's widespread surface mining was not contemplated at the time, Kentucky's Court of Appeals through the years has upheld the mineral owners' right under the deeds to damage the surface during strip-mining without paying further compensation.

Over stiff opposition, the 1974 General Assembly passed a law, commonly referred to as House Bill 9, to require writen consent of surface owners before a state strip-mining permit can be issued. The bill took effect Jan. 1.

Supt. Eugene Sebastian, of Breathitt county, noted that his schools had been closed for an entire week, adding that the snowfall was the heaviest experienced by his area in several years. "January and February are bad months in which to have school, since the weather is unpredictable and so many children have to be bussed across rough terrain," he said.

Supt. Earl Clemons, of Jackson county, said his system also was closed the entire week, but added that widespread reports of flu might have forced the shutdown in spite of the weather. Nevertheless, Clemons said the make-up days will extend the school sessions "far into June," and this would be a burden for those teachers who take collegiate summer courses. Perhaps Laurel county is experiencing some of those earlier dire fall predictions of bad winter months. Richard Morgan, director of pupil personnel there, said closings thus far have advanced the last scheduled school day from May 16 to May 30 and that only about four or five days had been missed at this time last year. With at least two more months of winter weather remaining, that figure could very well continue to climb.

In ruling against the new law in a case from Knott county, Meigs relied on previous Court of Appeals decisions.

The high court "has consistently upheld the superiority of the rights of mineral owners to use the surface under 'broad-form' deeds over any competing rights of owners of the surface . . .,' Meigs held.

The deed in question, signed in 1906, gives the mineral owner the right to use the land surface "in any and every manner that may be necessary or convenient for mining said coal . . .'

HB9, by attempting to add the requirement of the surface owner's consent to strip-mining, violates contract rights slated in the Kentucky and U.S. Constitutions, Meigs said.

"No . . . law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted," Section 19 of the Kentucky Constitution states.

The contract-impairment argument was a key issue during legislative debate on the bill, which was sponsored by Rep. Raymond Overstreet, R-Liberty, and others.

Meigs' ruling was in the form of a memo opinion. A judgment is to be prepared and entered within about 10 days, the judge said in an interview.

Until the judgment is entered, House Bill 9 remains in effect, Meigs said. The question of whether the law will be in force during the appeal period likely will be brought up at the time the judgement is entered, he said.

The case decided by Meigs arose last August when No. 8 Limited of Virginia, a Clintwood, Va., corporation, applied for a state permit to strip and auger mine 13 acres of the area covered by the 1906 deed.

Floyd Strip Miner Among 5 Restrained

A Floyd county strip mine operation was one of five named in connection with temporary restraining orders issued last week by Franklin Circuit Court Judge Squire Williams.

Rules of the contest are:

(1) Aluminum cans only will be accepted and must be enclosed in plastic bags; (2) The cans must be brought by a school official or other person to the place of weighing, Mountain Metal Co., West Prestonsburg, on Saturday, before 12 noon; (3) The days of weighing will be Jan. 25, Feb. 1, Feb. 8 and Feb. 15.

The total poundage will be announced Feb. 15, and the prize will be awarded shortly thereafter.

Those who wish to help their schools in this contest may take their collection of aluminum cans to their school principal for transporting to the weighing station.

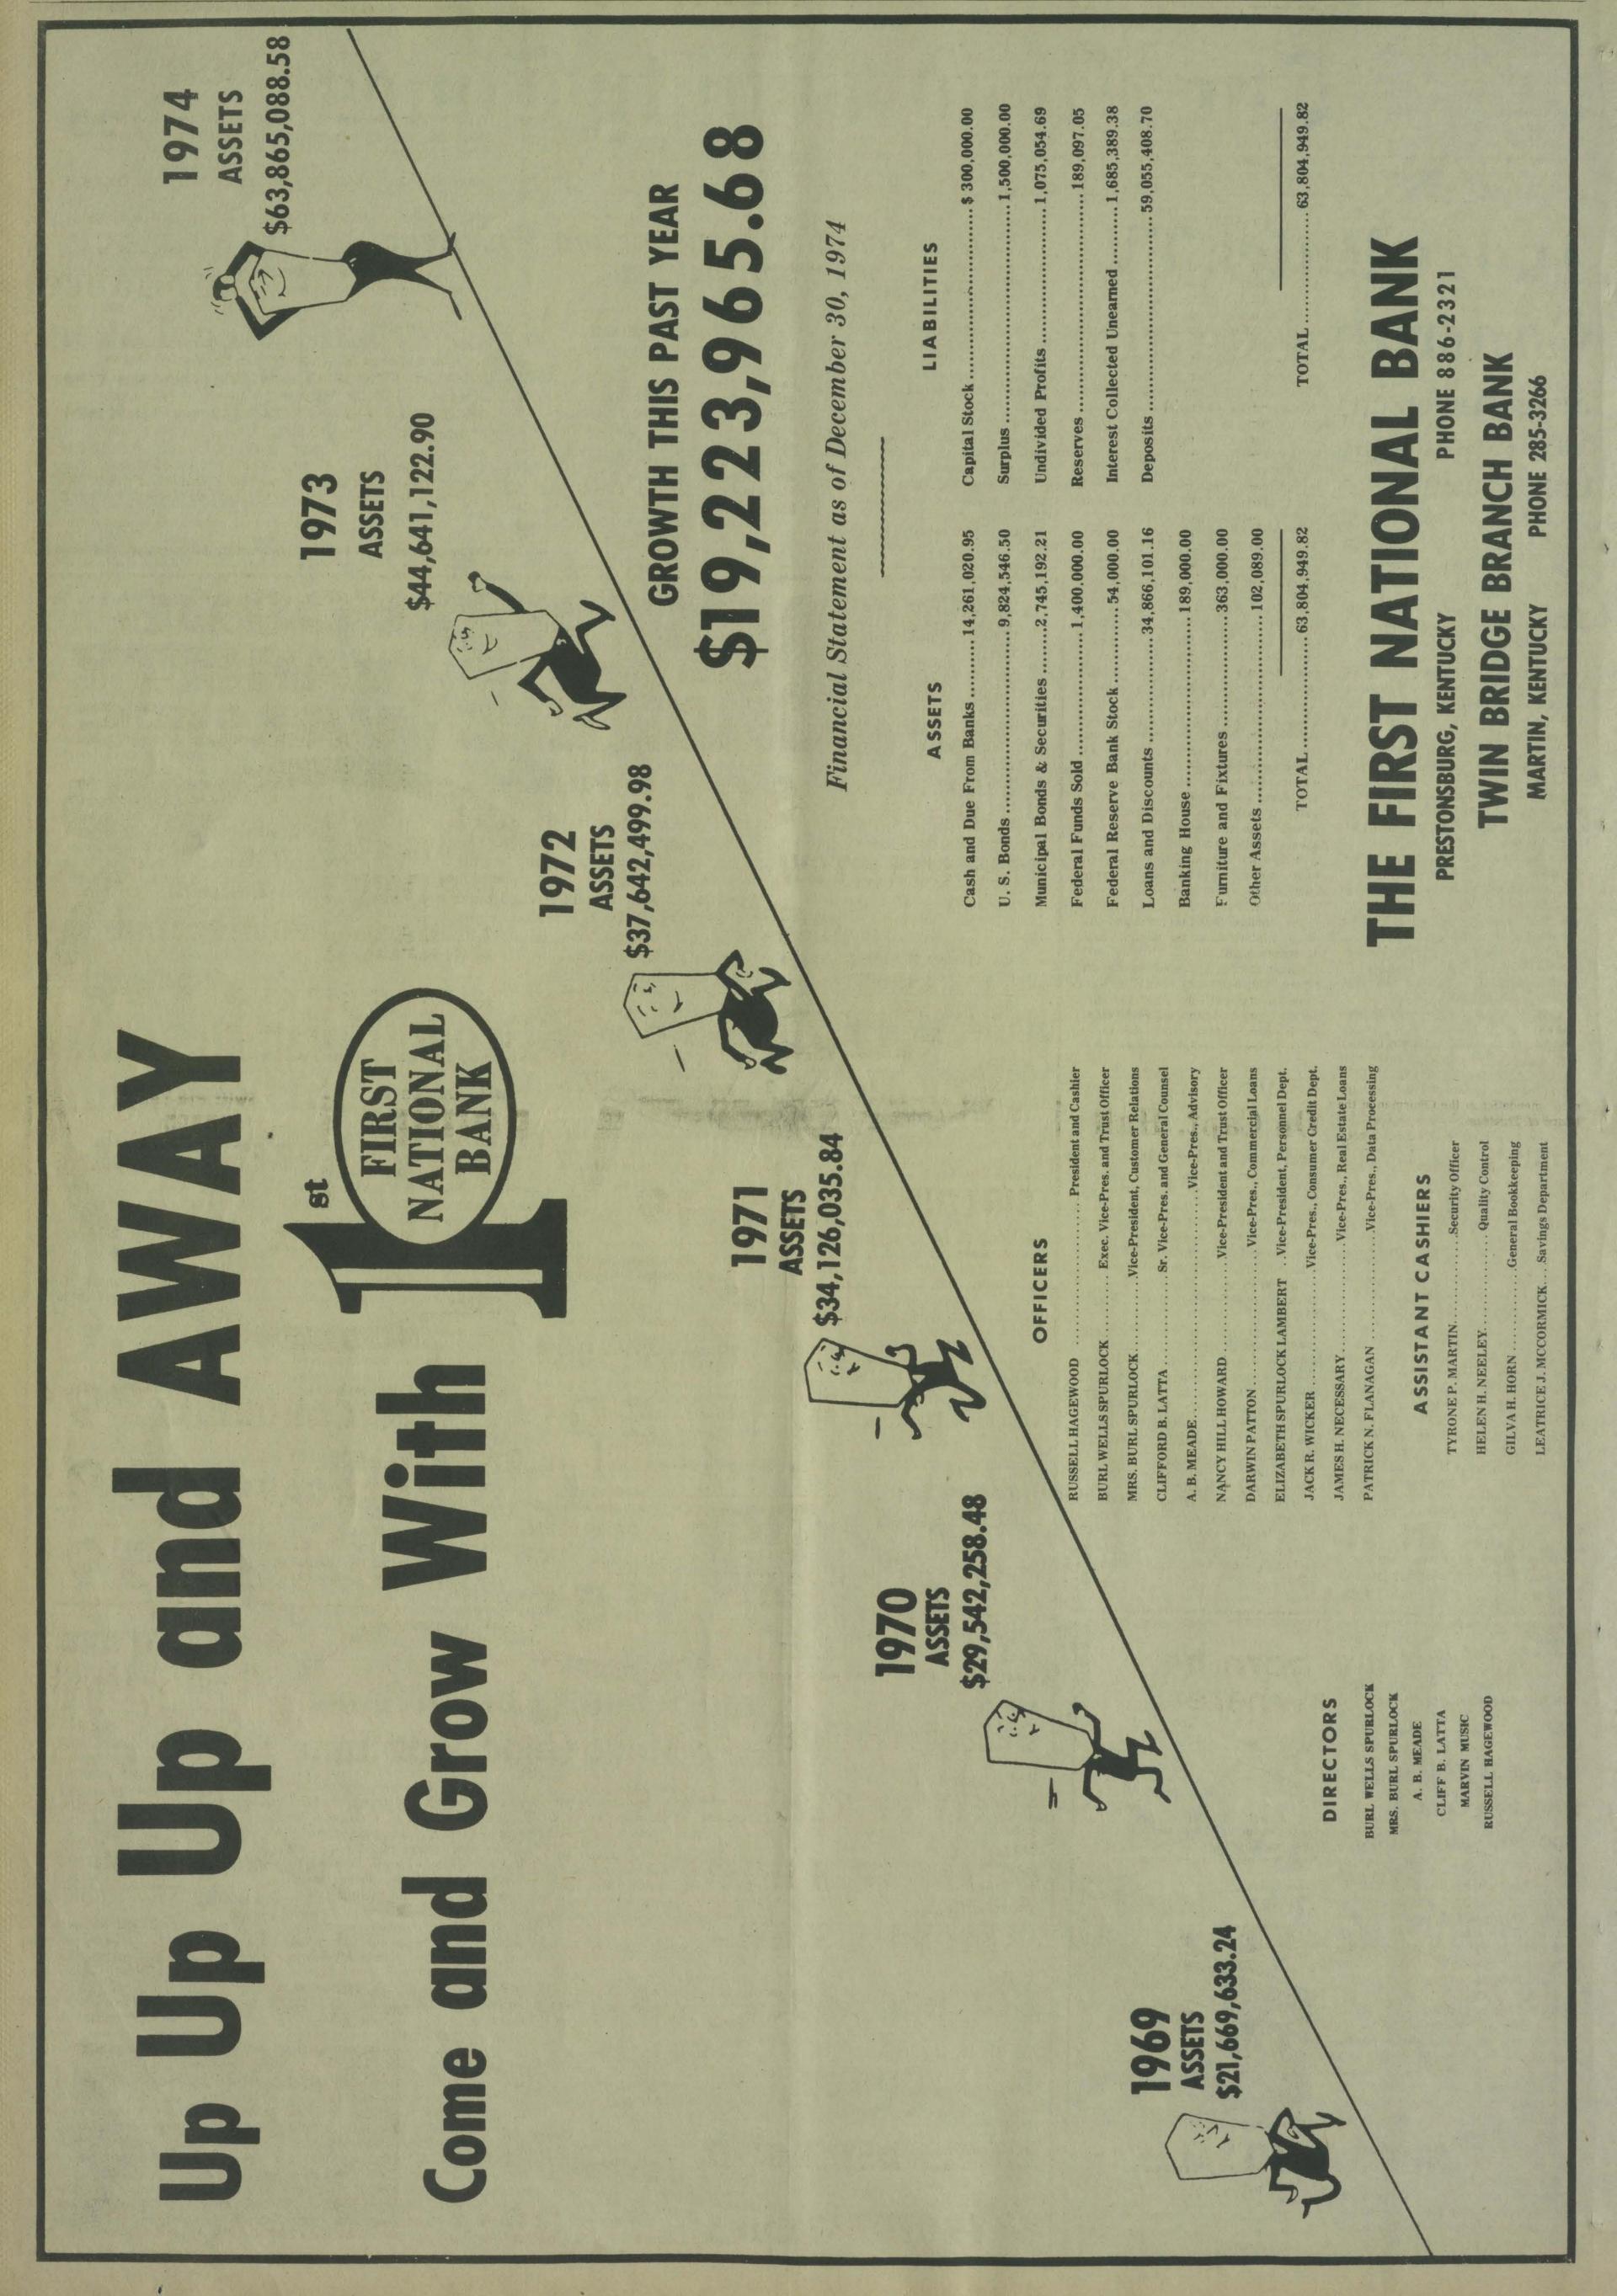

Pictured above is a scene inside the Kentucky Central Blood Bank's mobile collection unit which operated Friday afternoon in the parking lot of the Archer Memorial Clinic here. Sixty-eight donors came in during the day and 42 pints of blood were collected.

The unit's next stop in Floyd county will be February 27 in the Allen-Betsy Layne area and anyone interested in working with the unit on that day is asked to call 886-6861.

The snow that blanketed Eastern Kentucky forced widespread school closings, although no financial loss to the systems was incurred since the students will make up those days spent outside the schoolroom.

In fact, Fred Johnson of the state Education Department's Finance Division noted that some districts might come out slightly ahead financially. He explained that pupils are more likely to attend school in the warmer months and that the institutions also could save on heating bills by turning thermostats down lower than they normally would if classes were in session. And, many local boards are now paying roughly 300 per cent more for coal, as well as a 100 per cent increase for electricity.

Defendant in the Floyd case was listed as Elwood Parker, of Pikeville. Parker, who was charged with strip mining without a permit, was cited for illegally removing 1,800 tons of coal from a oneacre site on Toler Creek. Filed by the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, the suits seek $1,000 for the alleged violations and also $1,000 per day for each day of violation. The four other defendants were listed as Berry Mitchell, Middlesboro; Jeffrey Coal Sales, Lexington; L and L Coal Co. and Linville Lee, both of Crown; Ed Grubb, Sexton Creek, and Emery Hibbitt, of London.

How Deep Go Rights?

The Kentucky Court of Appeals, the lone highest state tribunal in the nation which has upheld the so-called Broad Form Deed, will soon have another opportunity to make a decision which will affect the ancient document.

In past decisions the high court has ruled on the validity of the deed itself. It has perversely held that, although strip-mining was unknown at the time these old deeds were signed by property-owners, such surface mining is legal under the contract blindly or ignorantly entered into by the landowners.

The Kentucky court has, on occasion, suggested that the deed be voided by the Legislature, not by court action.

So the General Assembly last year enacted what is known as House Bill 9, legislation which would make it illegal to surface mine any citizen's property without his consent. The law was enacted on the premise that the state's legislative body had police powers to protect the health and well-being of Kentucky citizens.

Will the Court of Appeals now support the General Assembly in its effort to enact legislation which it has suggested? The answer to that question will not be known until the court decision is handed down.

If that decision again goes against the landowner, we (with no knowledge of the law but with a belief in human rights) suggest that legal action be instituted to determine how deep go the rights of the surface-owner-one foot, two, ten?-then attack taxation of that landowner for any holdings beyond that depth, and sue to force reimbursement of taxes paid on surface which has been claimed and destroyed by strip-mining.

No Kentucky citizen should be required to pay taxes on property that is not his to have and to hold against all encroachment.

Improvement Priorities Set After Public Meeting Here

Further development of city housing, recreational facilities and expanded parking accomodations were listed at the January 16 meeting of the Prestonsburg City Council and Planning Commission as top priorities on which to base application for federal funds.

The city is currently engaged in an "all-out" effort to procure a fair portion of the $8.7 million in Housing and Urban Development (HUD) funds set aside for Kentucky communities not included in HUD's program of automatic funding which affected 21 cities throughout the state. These cities, including Pikeville, Paintsville and Whitesburg, were guaranteed federal funds over the next five years because they were involved in some form of urban renewal in 1971 when the plan was formulated. Because Prestonsburg did not have funds for such projects at that time, the City Planning Commission is vying for the "left-over" federal money.

At the council meeting, which was open to the public, a recently-hired Cincinnati planning consultant, Wilbur Linder, submitted his conclusions relating to community projects and needs which he feels would be most conducive to the acquisition of the funds. Cloyd Johnson, council representative to the planning commission, explained that it was Mr. Linder's job to look at the suggestions and ideas for use of funds which the city council and area citizens had offered and rank them according to the priority in which they would be considered by the funding agency.

To prevent a monopoly, the court provided that no owner or operator of a community TV system will be allowed to bid on an area where another system is in operation; and that, should a bidder other than the operator of a system in an area become the successful bidder, such bidder must buy the existing system at the value set by a three-member appraisal board representing the bidder, the owner and the court.

Akers, owner of a large TV system at Martin and in adjacent areas, contended the resolution was unconstitutional because it exercised undue police power, took private property without due process and in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment deprived him of the right to expand his TV system. Judge Anderson held, however, that, since the resolution applies equally to all present cable television system operators and systems existing in the county, there is no discrimination and that, even though expansion is curbed on one, the same restraint is imposed on others who may desire to expand into other areas. Cited in the Anderson opinion was the case of the Louisville Home Telephone Company vs. the City of Louisville, in which the Court of Appeals approved the elimination of a prospective bidder for the sole purpose of preventing a monopoly Individual TV system operators in this county contended their investments were threatened by Akers' plans for widescale development. Akers maintained that he simply offered improved service and that individual TV customers would be given a choice.

"A city shopping mall," Mr. Johnson said," was not high on the list, for example, while such things as housing and parking was given high priority by Mr. Lindner."

Linder advised city officials to list four projects for funding in a pre-submission application which must be in by March 1, 1975. They included the following:

(1. The purchase of a downtown site for an elderly, mid-rise housing development. Councilman Johnson said any funds obtained for this project would go strictly toward the site purchase rather than actual construction of the housing structure. Hopefully, he added, other federal funds such as Federal Housing Administration (FHA) would allow construction of the project which would afford senior citizens convenient access to downtown shopping and services.

(2. Further study and development of downtown parking facilities. Johnson said the river bank area adjacent to First Street is presently considered a prime area, since the idea of multiple-story parking structures built over existing city parking lots has been discarded as impractical.

(3. The construction of mini-park areas as well as improvement to Archer Park. According to Johnson, specific areas for development of mini-parks would not be listed in the application to allow the city to use the funds where and as needed.

(4. A feasibility study for extending city utilities to the top of Abbott Mountain. The Industrial Development Corporation, composed of a group of Prestonsburg businessmen who own industrial sites in the Cliff area, also own land extending to the top of Abbott Mountain. Johnson said the purchase of this land by the city would provide a site for additional community housing and consequently the need for utilities.

"The acquisition of these funds is of vital importance to Prestonsburg," Mr. Johnson pointed out, "because we feel if we can get federal funds this year, then we can get at least an equal amount of funding or more in the next few years." Johnson said a source of confusion stemmed from the fact that definite federal guidelines for application for the funds hadn't been clearly set.

Floyd community to be in compliance with the flood insurance program. Wheelwright was first. The county as a whole has not yet acted toward compliance.

According to O. T. McCutchen, director of the division of water resources of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, the federal flood insurance program serves two basic purposes. Its first aim is to provide flood insurance coverage which is unavailable elsewhere. It also provides an incentive for flood plain management and provides information to local governments.

A completely voluntary flood insurance program began when Congress passed the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, amended in 1973.

"The basic theme behind the original act was to provide incentives to regulate future building in flood prone areas," McCutchen said.

"To qualify for flood insurance a community had to fulfill certain requirements," he added. "First the community had to develop a building permit system. It also had to agree to control development in flood prone areas."

McCutchen went on to explain that in 1973 another requirement was added. The 1973 amendments set time limits on obtaining flood insurance. After July 1, 1975, any federal financial assistance for acquisition or construction in flood prone areas without flood insurance is prohibited.

"The deadline hasn't passed yet," said McCutchen, "But, in the future, if a community wants to build a library in a flood prone areas, it won't be able to get a federal grant without purchasing flood insurance. Of, if someone wishing to build a house wanted to get a federally insured loan, he wouldn't be able to without flood insurance."

"To qualify for the national flood insurance program," McCutchen explained, "a unit of local government must submit a complete application to the Federal Insurance Administration for the entire area within its jurisdiction. Included with the application must be copies of adopted land use and control measures which are consistent with the program regulations. Items pertaining to the nature and extent of the flood hazard in the community also must be sent."

The program requires that certain land use regulations be undertaken in the flood hazard areas-those which are prone to the 100-year flood (have a one per cent chance of flooding each year). A property owner in a participating community may purchase a flood insurance policy from any property and casualty insurance agent licensed to do business within the state.

The 13 acres is on Young's Fork of Lotts Creek near Anco in Knott County. The permit application noted that mining would not be started until 1975, after the effective date of HB 9.

ne)

The Division of Reclamation in the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection denied the permit because the landowners' consent did not accompany the aplication.

No. 8 Limited then filed suit against the department, seeking to reverse the permit denial and to have the law declared unconstitutional.

The surface owners-Henry Hurt, Jr. R. Kelly, Mrs. Nancy Kelly and Floyd Whitaker, all with postal addresses of Feisty-intervened against the suit, with representation by the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund based in Lexington.

A defense advanced for House Bill 9 is that the law is a valid exercise of the state's police power and its power to protect the general health and welfare.

are as responsible for what they call "recession" as any of the economic realities. Of course, the public and its perverted tastes are to blame, after a fashion, as witness its thirst for gore, the violent, the prurient and its scorn for most things that are good. Upshot is, they get from the media the fare they want. Yet there's no excuse for this contribution the media makes to the defeatist psychology that besets much of the country. We've featured and headlined and yelled "recession" and "unemployment" so long and often that the public forgets the millions who are employed and the high standard of living that America enjoys.

Why do we play the complete misanthrope and yelp about an unemployment rate of 7 percent when it would sound much better, and be equally true, to rejoice in the fact that the employment rate is 93 per cent?

BUTZ FOR CONSTABLE?

I probably wouldn't vote for this fellow Earl Butz for constable, but anybody with his sense of humor can't be all bad and would probably make a good constabule. Butz is having his troubles with farmers and just about everybody who eats farm products, but he's still in there, pitchin'. During one of the recent beefprice furores, according to Butz, cow can have only one calf a year because her gestation period is nine months. So, he said, without blinking, a bill was prepared which would have ordered the nine-month gestation cut in half and thus speed up the beef output. "And," he added, "I think if that bill had been introduced, it would have passed."

Wayland. The original murder indictments against Eddie Jones and John Martin in the two slayings were shifted on change of venue to Pike county for trial after the defense had contended they could not get a fair trial in this county.

The Commonwealth recently filed on its own behalf a change of venue, seeking trial in Pike county, for Eddie and Agnel Jones. Special Judge Ralph W. Walters, somebody in Congress discovered that a of West Liberty, heard testimony and arguments on the motion last Friday. He held that the Commonwealth had failed to prove that publicity given the case had made a fair trial in this county impossible and directed attorneys to arrange trial of the case here at the April term In other cases the court heard a plea of guilty from Anthony Wayne Stratton, charged with breaking into a service station. Stratton's reformatory term was set at one year. Larry Wright, who had been fined $100 and jailed for 30 days on a charge of transporting intoxicating beverages, was granted a new trial, and the vehicle involved, which had been ordered impounded, was released to its owner, Paul Flannery, upon his execution of $2,587.60 forthcoming bond.

Mayor Goebel described her as "a very fine, efficient and qualified person for the job.'

He admitted that Mrs. McCauley did not receive a raise this year when other city employees were given pay increases of at least 10 per cent but pointed out that the only reason for this was that she was already being paid $700 a month. Prestonsburg, he said, is paying its employees better salaries than any other town in the area. As a consequence, the turnover in personnel is being held to a minimum.

The case is expected to be appealed.

Woman Jailed In Scrap Trade

A Mud Creek woman was arrested Monday morning and charged with knowingly receiving stolen property after she allegedly sold, or was attempting to sell, stolen batteries to a local scrap metal company.

Forty batteries had been sold here January 24, and the woman, Vannie Damron, was in the process of selling 15 more when she was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Doug Lewis. Ted Salisbury, Island Creek Coal Company detective, identified some of the batteries as belonging to company mines and the sheriff's office is continuing the investigation to determine if others were involved in the actual theft.

Study of Strip Mine Bill Begun in Ky.

As one of his first actions since taking over as secretary of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, John S. Hoffman has directed his department to headed by Birney Fish, an executive study proposed federal strip mine assistant to Hoffman. reclamation bills.

Hoffman has formed a committee within his department to review federal bills on surface mining and to keep state reclamation officials aware of any changes in the bills. A surface mining reclamation bill, passed by both houses of Congress, was recently vetoed by President Gerald Ford.

Hoffman said he was initiating the study of the federal bills because he believes a bill similar to the one which was vetoed would be passed by the next session of Congress. The vetoed bill was expected to have little effect on the flat and rolling lands of the Western Kentucky coal fields. However, some state reclamation officials say the vetoed bill could have significantly affected the mountainous Eastern Kentucky coal fields because it required restoration of most disturbed land to its approximate original contours.

Announcing the study at a recent meeting of the Environmental Quality Commission-a citizen's advisory group-Hoffman said, "The department has identified some negative aspects of the federal bill. There are also many very good points in the bill. In anticipation that a similar bill is likely to be passed, within perhaps a year, I have initiated a number of projects that will give us sufficient lead time to take effective action.

"We are beginning this study," continued Hoffman, "so that we can participate in solutions to reclamation problems along with the congressional committee staff and federal agencies that will draft the new federal bill."

Hoffman said his department will give special attention to departmental training and manpower development activities necessitated by the federal bill, especially to the training of reclamation field inspectors.

The task force also will study information about lands which have been disturbed by surface or underground mining. "We intend," said Hoffman, "to find out how much land in Kentucky has been disturbed, where the land is and what its present condition is. Then, the study group will prepare a strategy to rehabilitate mined lands which have been inadequately reclaimed. This information is absolutely necessary if we are to be prepared to administer the federal bill when and if it is passed."

Hoffman said the department will use several existing regional studies in compiling the statewide inventory of disturbed lands. The study groups will be

The Prestonsburg Blackcats rolled to their 15th win of the season last Tuesday night defeating the highly regarded Golden Eagles of Johnson Central, 57 to 48. This was the second win for the Cats 4. over Johnson Central.

The Blackcats have lost only one game and that was to Johnson Central during the Sandy Valley Conference tournament at Belfry. With this win, the Cats zoomed into the top 20 teams, and is ranked 15th by a statewide wire service. Coach Setser's team played the "Blackcat style" of game and kept the Eagles at bay throughout the entire contest. Prestonsburg at the end of the first quarter was leading, 20 to 10, thanks to Dave Harrington and Gormie Collins, each of whom had scored 7 points and dominated the boards. In fact, David Harrington did everything right and had his best game of the season. He scored 19 points and was outstanding on defense. Collins twisted an ankle in the second quarter and, hampered, scored 9 points. Johnson Central's Rick Meek took game scoring honors with 22 points. Johnson Central has a record of 14 and 3.

The Wheelwright Trojans rolled to their fifth straight win by defeating the McDowell Daredevils, 91 to 59. This was the best offensive game of the season for the Trojans. Larry Isaacs had 26 points and Jeff Riley 21 points for the Trojans. McDowell was led by Jeff Hall with 16 points.

Earlier in the week, McDowell won over Allen Central, 73 to 69. Friday night, Allen Central lost to Sheldon Clark at Inez by a score of 74 to 69.

The Betsy Layne Bobcats finally started getting their breaks and won over Salyersville and M. C. Napier. The Bobcats downed Salyersville at Salyersville in their new gym, 100 to 97, as Bruce Stapleton scored 27 points and Rick Roberts gathered 25. Saturday night at the D. W. Howard Fieldhouse, the Bobcats won over M. C. Napier, 75 to 71. Sophomore Bruce Stapleton racked up 20 points, but scoring honors went to teammate Ricky Roberts who scored 24 points.

Roberts Seeks Re-Election from 94th

Lee Roberts, democrat, of the Mullins Addition, Pikeville, has announced his candidacy for re-election to the post of State Representative of the 94th Legislative District in the May Primary. The 94th district consists of Pike county and parts of Floyd.

Roberts, prior to his election as State Representative, served eight years as Justice of the Peace, Pike county Magisterial District 1. He attended Pikeville College and Morehead State University. He is a former teacher and Air Force veteran of World War II.

Announcing his candidacy for reelection, Roberts said he believes 50 per cent of the coal severance tax should go back to the county of origin, with no strings attached. "I don't think any additional severance tax should be imposed on the coal industry," he said, "we have plenty of money coming in from the present severance tax if we can only get our fair share back to the county.' Roberts stated his record in the past session of the general assembly speaks for itself. "I have voted on all bills for the best interest of the state, Eastern Kentucky, Pike and Floyd counties," Roberts said. Roberts said his vote shows his continuing interest in labor, industry, teachers, education and the needs of his legislative district. 1t.

also apply to FHA home loans, he added. The 8.5 per cent rate is the lowest since April 1974 when the rate was increased from 8.25 to 8.5 per cent. The rate was increased to 9 per cent last July, then to 9.5 per cent last August, and then was cut to 9 per cent effective November 25, 1974. The half-per cent decrease would mean as much as $9.90 per-month savings to the typical veteran home buyer, and, over the 30 years life of a $27,500 VA loan, the total saving could be as much as $3,535.

The VA Administrator said the VA home loan market was greatly expanded under legislation approved by the President December 31, 1974, when more than four million veterans whose GI home loans have been paid in full and the home disposed of became potentially eligible for new loans guaranteed by VA.

The legislation also increased the maximum VA loan guarantee amount from $12,500 to $17,500, authorized loans for the purchase of mobile home lots, increased the amount of mobile home loans and broadened the possibilities for guaranteeing loans on one-family condominiums.

My Mother ANNA E. HART

She was my mother,

She was love, God sent her to us from above. No great career, No one great deed could give her fame or to fortune lead. As I recall her smiling face I see a queen of stately grace. She wore a life of golden lace

That time and tears cannot erase. She was my mother, She gave the most there was to give, She knew no other way to live. She never wanted wealth or gold; What she treasured could not be sold. As memories of time unfold I feel the love her life did hold. When her heart could give no more God opened up another door To paradise and joys unknown To reap the love so dearly sown, To heal her heart is what He chose, To give her peace and sweet repose. Her work is ended, a new life begun In obeying God, she truly won.

Speeds Reduced, Deaths Decrease

vehicle miles traveled, Americans had in 1974 the safest highway travel year in history, according to a report released by the Federal Highway Administration. For the first time since 1963, the total number of highway fatalities in the nation has fallen below 47,000.

That's far too many deaths, but when you consider that in the intervening decade, traffic volume has increased by 50 per cent (from 805 billion to 1.27 trillion vehicle miles), the rate of highway deaths per mile traveled has never been lower.

In Kentucky, the figures are even more dramatic. According to Bennie R. Maffet of Kentucky's Office of Highway Safety Programs, the total number of highway deaths in the state last year was the lowest number since 1961.

In Kentucky, 707 died in the past year as compared to 722 in the year 1961. Every year since, until the advent of the energy crisis a year ago, there had been a steadily increasing fatality toll.

Asked for comparative travel figures for 1961 and 1974, Maffet said that the mileage traveled in the earlier year was 11.5 billion miles compared to 23.4 billion miles of motor vehicle travel in 1974. A simple computation shows that travel on

FRANKFORT, Ky.-In terms of Kentucky highways had more than doubled in those 13 years, while the number of fatalities was held close to the 1961 level.

In 1961 an average 5.4 people lost their lives in Kentucky for each 100 million vehicle miles of travel. In 1974 the records show three people killed for the same volume of traffic.

Nationally, fatalities were reduced 16.5 per cent for 1974 compared to 1973. Kentucky experienced a reduction of 30 per cent for the same time period.

Using the criteria established above, Kentucky drivers have a safer driving record than drivers nationally, Maffet said.

At least one transportation official gives credit for 1974's reduction in highway fatalities to the man behind the wheel. Bennie R. Maffet, director of the Office of Highway Safety Programs, says that drivers of the Commonwealth's highways now have a better awareness of safe, energy saving driving habits.

Highway accidents claimed the lives of 785 people in Kentucky during 1974, according to fatality figures released by the Kentucky Department of Transportation. The figures indicate approximately 30 per cent fewer highway deaths than the 1,117 reported in 1973.

"We cannot overlook the impact of the 55 mile per hour speed limit," Maffet said. "It has brought down the accident figure dramatically. Still, the lowered limit, of itself, was no panacea. The constant reiteration of the speed limits imposed last spring has made us all aware of the hazards of driving."

Maffet referred to urban accident figures by way of example. "For the most part, urban roads have always had lower speed limits, yet urban accidents are also down."

Nor is reduced travel necessarily the caue of lower fatalities. By year's end, traffic volume was nearly up to 1973 standards. Vehicle miles traveled are currently within five per cent of their level before the energy crisis occurred. In addition to the 30 per cent reduction in fatalities, Maffet points out that state police have reported 4,000 fewer accidents this year than last year

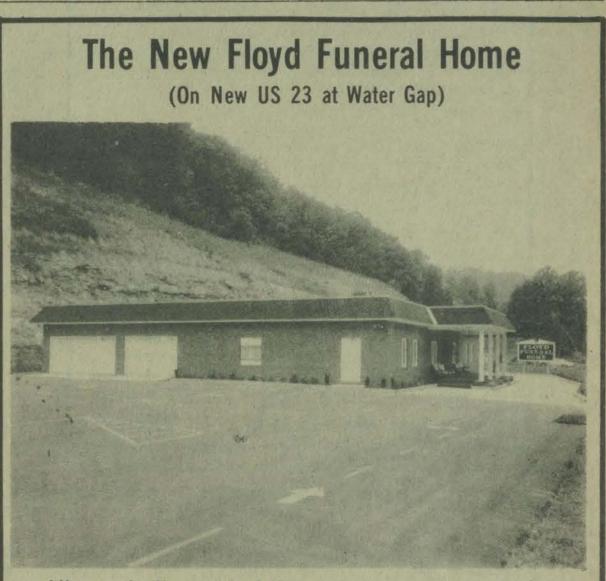

The director of the safety office cites a number of contributing factors to the safety record. "Concentrated enforcement has certainly helped in

Fertilizer Prices Higher This Spring

"Farmers may pay 10 to 15 percent more for fertilizer this planting season over fall 1974 prices," said Sharon Conley of the Floyd Co. ASCS office. "Such a price advance-far less than the doubling of a year earlier-may signal the end of the price spiral, according to a recent report of USDA's Economic Research Service."

Fertilizer supplies fell short of demand in 1974. Despite tight supplies and high prices, the U. S. farmers used record amounts-47 million tons-of fertilizer on their fields, 9 per cent of 4 million tons more than in 1973. On a plant nutrient basis, the rise was 7 per cent.

The report also shows that farmers fertilized more acres with both more gross tonnage and more plant nutrients last year than in 1973. They fertilized 360 million acres, compared with 354 million in 1973, using 91 pounds of primary plant nutrients per acre, compared with 1973's 87 pounds.

High nitrogen fertilizers purchased in the coming spring may cost 10 to 15 percent more than those for the fall of 1974. The average price for ammonia may retail at about $250 per tone. Over one-third of nitrogen fertilizers go on corn.

With Snow Comes Tales of Treasure

By HELEN PRICE STACY When snow is falling and folks are housebound, especially in the Eastern Kentucky hills, it is traditional to tell ghost stories around a fire, or stories of great feats or buried treasure.

Tales of gold coins buried here and there in the hills crop out with each snowfall, for in winter trees are bare and treasure seekers see more clearly the holes dug in cemeteries, on hills and beneath rocks-all evidence that someone once believed the stories and legends.

Several years go Mrs. Estelle Rizk, of Carter county told of the Anglin cache of gold, "a goodly amount," secreted away somewhere in the vicinity of Pactolus and Oldtown.

Perhaps then as now, anyone who had no trust in regular ways of saving also might be eccentric. Even relatives of old John, Bill and Adrian Anglin admitted that the brothers had ways that seemed odd, even over 100 years ago.

The brothers were bachelors, making their home in a giant log house with one window. They would cook half a hog at butchering time for a feast, then rest long hours in front of a fireplace so large that only tree-trunk logs could be burned. In the big room were three beds, one for each of the brothers.

"Bill's bed was a high one," recalled Mrs. Rizk, "and close beside it were three chairs that he had made, each one smaller than the other." Stacking the three chairs, Bill could fashion a ladder to his bed. "No one ever dared move his chairs!"

The other brothers, though concerned about Bill's eccentricities, had a few of their own. Each time they killed a bear, they used the animal's skull to decorate the walls of the room.

Still, they smiled when winter temperatures got colder and Bill added a quilt or coverlet to his bed each night. "By spring it was not unusual to find 17 or more heavy bedcovers on the high bed."

The brothers had money. The neighborhood was well aware that they did business in hogs, cattle and corn and other crops. Since they lived almost entirely from their land and made most of their furniture, they spent little coin.

It was Bill who made Sunday trips to the general store at Oldtown, where he had his money changed for gold.

With talk of a war between the states. together with rumors that the military plundered as they traveled through a region, old Bill Anglin decided to hide his gold for safekeeping. "He never revealed to anyone, even his two brothers, where he had put the gold."

The war over and the countryside settling down to serious farming, Bill became ill. In time all three brothers were buried on a hill on the farm.

Treasure seekers have made holes around the graves, and there is a legend that a neighbor suddenly became rich, made numerous purchases with gold, then left the country. But no one knows for sure that he found the Anglin gold.

Today, as travelers pass through the community of Oldtown or visit around Pactolus, they might pass by a vast treasure of gold coins.

All bids are to be sealed and filed with the County Clerk's office.

The court reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Phosphate prices doubled over the 18 months between April 1973 and September 1974. Prices may average 10 percent higher during 1975 than those of the previous year, however, they may average higher during the spring planting season when demand is high.

Potash fertilizer prices advanced least of the primary plant nutrients. Supplies will likely be tight in 1975 because demand has risen and no new mines have opened or are likely to open in the United States or Canada.

Plan Meeting To Map Drive For Industry

FRANKFORT, Ky.-Looking toward an eventual decline in the coal boom, an interim legislative committee will try to meet in Eastern Kentucky next month to find ways to get industry to move there. State Rep. Hoover Dawahare, D-Whitesburg, raised the subject at a meeting of the subcommittee on consumer protection. He said the state commerce department should be required by law to set up a branch development office in Eastern Kentucky. General approval greeted a suggestion by State Rep. Thomas Burch, D-Louisville, chairman of the parent Labor and Industry Committee, that the full committee meet in Eastern Kentucky to consider the subject.

Burch said he would see if the full committee could extend a meeting already scheduled for Ashland next month so as to also have a series of meetings the next day in several other Eastern Kentucky cities.

Most subcommittee members said now would be the best time to finance any plan to attract industry to that area because the boom in the coal industry could provide the revenue.

"Coal will go down again. It always has," commented Sen. Joe Stacy, D-West Liberty, the subcommittee chairman. "If we don't do something now to bring in industry, we'll be right back where we've always been (when that happens)."

Stacy and others said the subcommittee also could help Eastern Kentucky by looking into the operation of coal-ramp operations, if that fell in its jurisdiction.

Agreeing, Dawahare said: "Ramp owners make most of the money (from coal) and they don't pay any takes."

DeBoard has been assigned to Johnson county for seven of his 10 years with the KSP. His first assignment was Nicholas county, then Magoffin.

DeBoard averages more than 100 contacts (assists, warnings, arrests) per month. Some 20 per cent of DeBoard's activity is criminal-related.

Johnson county, being dry, has its share of bootleggers. Liquor transporting is one of the criminal problems with which DeBoard consistently deals.

DeBoard says the volume of transport offenses depends on the courts. He says that since the courts are "tougher" now the traffic in illegal liquor has slowed.

DeBoard says he would most like to see in his job as a policeman, "courts that are not influenced by who the defendant is. We don't have a lower court that treats everybody alike." He noted that in one transport case he had to make 21 trips to court before the case was tried.

DeBoard goes on to say, though, "You do your job and the judge does his. You learn to live with a good case 'dismissed' or 'filed away'."

He feels that the most important aspect of his job as a state policeman is to "assist the public when they need it." He notes that one of the three state policemen in Johnson county is on call 24 hours a day.

So that local law enforcement officers in Johnson county could be better trained in the use of firearms, DeBoard and another officer recently set up a firing range like that used by the KSP for periodic practice.

It's Bird Feeding Time

Most of the time Old Mother Nature not feeding birds is actually beneficialprovides enough food for her children, but on cold winter days, especially when snow blankets the earth, many resident birds find life extremely austere. Unless they can find sufficient fuel to stoke their tiny furnaces, many of the less hardy individuals may perish from the cold. A bird feeder set up in the backyard, on a window sill, or on some other protected spot will help prevent this eventuality. The person feeding the birds will benefit, too. He will derive pleasure from doing a humane deed and will no doubt enjoy bird company. He can learn to identify birds, appreciate their beauty, and then have them around to sing to him and catch his bugs come spring.

A bird feeder need not be an elaborate thing and the more rustic the better. It can be an open-ended box, a plastic milk jug with a square hole cut in its side, or just about any other kind of a small container that can be easily stocked. It should be erected in a spot sheltered by a building, a tree, or some other object and where it can be easily viewed when birds come to feed. Birds will eat just about anything humans do, but a combination of foods will attract the most kinds of birds, according to John Tuttle, poultry specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Members of the sparrow family like the cardinal, junco (snowbird), and song sparrow are able to handle hard seeds and grains. Sunflower seed is a favorite, especially of chickadees, titmice, and nut-hatches. They will also feed on a seed mixture, and like woodpeckers and the Carolina wren, are also very, very fond of suet, of which a large piece can be put in a mesh bag, like those onions are sold in, and hung from a tree. Peanut butter, mixed half and half with cornmeal, will drive most birds half out of their minds. Be sure, however, to mix the peanut butter thoroughly with the meal until it is no longer sticky, else it may choke the birds to death. Chopped nuts, cracked walnuts, popcorn, oatmeal, bread crumbs, meat scraps, raisins, and table scraps also make good bird food, Tuttle notes. Sometimes squirrels can cause a problem at a bird feeder and may take more food than the birds. If the cute little varmints are not wanted around, their designs can be thwarted by swinging the feeder from a limb on a long wire or by placing the feeder on a pole with a funnel-like tin guard or baffle below the box. Starlings often present a proolem, too, and, unfortunately no method has ever been devised to keep them away. Since they are wilder than most songbirds. they scare off easier. Whenever they appear, step out in the yard and shoo them off. Unless powerfully hungry, they will stay gone for a hour or so and in the meantime songbirds can eat their fill. feeding whole corn may help, too, since grains of corn are a little too large for starlings to eat but are fine for cardinals. jays and doves, Tuttle says. Birds also need water in winter, especially when ponds and streams are frozen. Those who provide birdbaths for their feathery friends should fill them with water daily. Many peole even go to the trouble of putting electric heaters in their birdbaths.

beneficial to the birds, that is. Those questioning the practice say that feeders cause birds to congregate and become less wary, thus making it easier for predators to catch them. Another argument is that birds accustomed to being fed lose the incentive to forage for themselves and starve when the feeding stops.

Both arguments may have some merit, but the latter may be circumvented in this manner: when a bird feeding program is started, it should be kept up, as Solmon sang, until "lo, the winter has passed."

Personally speaking, we have winterfed birds for several years. We have had no trouble with predators and have found that when spring comes, the birds prefer to dine on insects rather than the foods we provided them. There has been no difficulty at all in weaning them from the bird feeder.

Appellate Court Judge Sees ^{the} No Problems With Penal Code

By RACHAEL KAMUF

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The new chief justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals does not foresee any major problems in implementing the state's new penal code. In effect since Jan. 1, the code is the broadest revision of Kentucky criminal law in recent years. While it decriminalizes some activities, its most outstanding contribution, according to criminal justice officials, is its simplification and clarification of all crimes, except those set apart by specific statutes. Scott Reed began his term as chief justice soon after the code became effective. His tenure will be an active one. As he said, "In no event will there be a lack of grist for our mill."

Interviewed at a state justice department seminar on the penal code given for circuit judges. Justice Reed said he expects the appeals court to be asked to rule on many of the new laws in the penal code. Anytime there is a new law, he said, there will be challenges to determine what it means and whether or not it is constitutional.

Reed said he does not anticipate any particular problems with the code. "In the major areas, I see no apparent reason for concern," he said, adding that some passages appeared to be vague and unclear and would need to be reworded and clarified.

He declined to comment on specific passages, noting that it would be improper for him to do so as his court may be asked to rule on challenged passages. One issue he does expect the court to study is the death penalty. Kentucky has been without a death penalty since 1972, when the U. S. Supreme Court (ruling on another state's law) said it was cruel and unusual punishment, therefore unconstitutional.

The penal code has reenacted the death penalty. Now certain crimes, such as multiple murders, carry an automatic death penalty. Because it is a new law, Justice Reed anticipates an appeal the first time it is invoked.

The penal code has been a controversial issue since before its authors began rewriting it six years ago. Some have argued that such sweeping changes will result in chaos. Justice Reed disagrees.

A certain amount of confusion can be expected during the initial period of adjustment, he said, but the changes are an "inherent aspect" of the law.

"It is apparent there will have to be amendments and changes, but these can best be developed by experience, which is the way the law has always evolved. Law is simply a natural process of development and response," he said.

Club Notes

The Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club held its regular club meeting January 16 at the Floyd County Library. Lora Hamilton, Home Life Department chairman, presented the speakers, Harris Howard, Prestonsburg attorney who spoke on "Wills" and Jim Dingus, associated with Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Lexington, who spoke on "Life Insurance."
