

Two Bidders Get Waste Contracts

Service Slated By July; Basic Fee Set at $4

The Floyd fiscal court last Wednesday awarded contracts to two bidders for the collection and disposal of solid waste materials in all four magisterial districts of the county.

Floyd County Sanitation, Inc., Prestonsburg, was awarded the contract for collection in Magisterial Districts 1, 2 and 3. Okie Lawson, of Harold, was the successful bidder for the work in Magisterial District 4.

Although the contracts did not specify a date for the beginning of the work, it was said that the collection of waste and its hauling to the county-owned landfill on Turkey Creek, or to other landfills which the court may designate, will begin not later than July 1. Each of the bidders posted a $5,000 performance bond.

The contract provides that each of the successful bidders shall pay the county $100 a year, plus a monthly fee equal to 1 per cent of the bidder's gross revenue from all customers.

The basic residential fee for the collection service to be rendered may not exceed $4 per month. Business and industrial rates are to be negotiable between the contractor and the customer. Collections are to be made from residences once a week and from

Youth Accused Of Bayonet Use In Holdup Here

Brandishing a bayonet, a 17-year-old Chicago youth robbed Roberts' Market of $900 and wounded store owner Lee Roberts Sunday night at the Goble-Roberts Addition here. Mr. Roberts suffered two cuts on his hand during the holdup.

The stolen cash was recovered the same night with the arrest of the juvenile by City Policemen Craig Kilgore and Keith Lawson in the nearby Dixie housing area. A hearing for the youth will be held in Juvenile Judge Richard Fitzpatrick's court. The case will be remanded to circuit court.

On the same day City Policemen Dickie Campbell, Ralph Thornsberry and Darrell J. Conley arrested Danny Kerr, of West Prestonsburg, at Archer Park and charged him with the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages. A quantity of wine and beer were recovered.

Three separate incidents of breaking and entering were recorded here Thursday night by city police officers. Candy and soft drink machines were broken into and desks were rifled in the Board of Education building, cigarettes and candy were taken from the storage room of Davis' Market, and the Social Security office was entered. Police said an unsuccessful attempt to break into the safe at the Social Security office was evidently made. The identify of those involved is not yet known.

Seek 150 Donors For Blood Unit Here March 20

The Prestonsburg-Floyd County Chamber of Commerce is making an effort toward enlisting 150 blood donors for the March 20 blood drawing at the mobile unit to be located in the municipal parking lot here.

Additional help will be sought from the Jaycees, the Businessmen's Association, the Interclub Council and other groups, it was said.

Based upon the amount of blood used by Floyd county residents, in Kentucky hospitals and elsewhere in the United States during the past year, this county's quota is 1,103 pints. It is far from that quota.

Any individual between the ages of 18 and 65 may be a blood donor. Anybody who is interested may help recruit donors.

A donation of one pint of blood assures for one year the blood needs of the donor, his wife, his dependents up to age 18, his parents and his wife's parents, whether they are residents of Floyd county or elsewhere in the United States.

Area Music Educators To Pay Posthumous Tribute to Elliott

Posthumous honors to the late Jesse Elliott will be accorded by the Eastern Highlands Music Educators' Association Sunday, March 16, at the library of Prestonsburg Community College.

Mr. Elliott's portrait will be dedicated at 3 p.m., and will be hung in the college library. Tribute to the educator will be paid at a reception to follow the dedication ceremony.

Mr. Elliott, who has been called "the father of music in Eastern Kentucky," came to this section of Kentucky after his graduation in 1928 from DePauw University. Carrying his band instruments with him, he visited every school in Floyd county as supervisor of the county band program, and it is now said that many music teachers and band directors owe their enthusiasm for music to his teaching. His interest in music education was matched by his devotion to his church and to the moral development of young people.

Mr. Elliott's last years were spent as band director at Mullins High School, Pike county, and the onset of his last illness came while he was directing summer band camp for Betsy Layne High School.

His widow, Mrs. Kelsey Gearheart Elliott, resides at Betsy Layne.

The Music Educators Association also plans to establish the Jesse Elliott music scholarship at Prestonsburg Community College which will be awarded, perhaps annually, to a talented and deserving young musician from this area. Those who would contribute to the Scholarship Fund honoring Mr. Elliott are asked to send their donations to Mrs. Virginia Lushbaugh, in care of the Don Wilson Music Co., Paintsville.

Mapping Delay Gives Counties 'Grace' Period

The national Flood Insurance Act will become effective July 1, next, but its impact is not expected to be as shocking as the law itself reads.

This view was expressed last week by Paul Greer, of the Big Sandy Area Development office here, who has specialized in a study of the flood insurance program while trying to be helpful to municipalities and counties of the area which are faced with a multiplicity of problems, whether they comply or do not comply with the program.

Incorporated towns or cities, which were supplied maps showing their flood-prone areas last June or thereabouts, will be required to be in compliance with the program as of July 1, Mr. Greer said.

Floyd and other counties which did not receive these maps until last December will have a year from that date, however, in which to comply with the law.

In this county only Wheelwright and Prestonsburg have officially complied with the program. Martin, Wayland and Allen must comply by July 1, since, it was said, they will have had their maps delineating their flood-prone areas a year at that time.

But, Mr. Greer explained, his frequent communications with both state and federal authorities indicate that the compliance of incorporated communities such as these will be in only the emergency phase. That means that flood levels will be subject to negotiation, that comparable flood elevation studies will be made and flood-deterrent additions such as upstream dams considered.

Later, the permanent flood-level figures will be established to fix the flood

Bullet Wound Claims Woods

William Alton Woods, 32, of Columbus, O., formerly of the Cow Creek section of this county, died Saturday at Mt. Carmel Medical Center, Columbus, of what was described as a self-inflicted revolver bullet wound.

A sufferer from multiple sclerosis, he had been playing cards with members of his family when he rose and went into another room, authorities were told. A shot was heard soon afterward. Woods died about four hours later.

Until illness forced his retirement he was a driver for the Smith Transfer Company. He was a son of Mrs. Rosie Endicott Woods and the late Frankie Woods. Besides his mother, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lucy Mae Morrison Woods, and two children, Pamela Yvonne and Jeffrey Cameron Woods, all of Columbus; three sisters, Mrs. Irene Hunter, Winona Lake, Ind., Mrs. Lula Mae Goodman, Homestead, Fla., and Mrs. Evelyn Mayes, Pataskala, O., and one brother, Franklin Lee Woods, Prestonsburg.

Funeral rites were conducted Monday from the Cow Creek Free Will Baptist Church, the Revs. Henry Crider, Randall VanHoose and Doug Burkett officiating. Burial in the Woods cemetery on Cow Creek was directed by the Carter Funeral Home.

McCauley Says Proposed Fund Requests Excessive

In a review of the city of Prestonsburg's pre-application for $306,025 in Community Development Act (CDA) funds for improvements here, Joseph L. McCauley, director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, last week pointed to what he termed excessive costs involved in the seven-point proposal.

Mr. McCauley's comments on the pre-application were made in a letter addressed to Mayor William O. Goebel. They follow:

On preparation of Housing Assistance Plan and Community Development Strategy application; $7,500 requested: "We believe the above cost to be excessive and an ineligible item to be reimbursed from CDA Funds. If our interpretation is correct, no work completed for a "Discretionary" funded city may be considered eligible for inclusion in the grant if done before a letter of authorization is received from HUD. Too, the Housing Assistance Plan is a simple document when compared to those documents ordinarily prepared by professional planners. We believe that a cost of over $1,000 for this service would possibly be considered excessive, since almost all of the data used is available through the 1970 census and other studies which have been made."

For purchase of Elderly Highrise Site, including appraisals, title search and negotiations (no relocation involved), $101,500:

"We believe the logical place for this unit is on the Indian Hills site where the Housing Authority presently owns land which would only have to be filled. By cutting down the hill for fill, additional land would be made available for this project. The esthetic qualities of this site exceed those of the one proposed for downtown. This site would lend itself to plenty of space for parking, landscaping, and space for certain outdoor recreational activities. In addition, it is near the soon-to-be-developed shopping center, near the medical clinic, and within walking distance of the economy-type restaurants of the area."

Purchase of Central Business District surface parking area, including appraisals, title search and negotiations, $99,950:

"The City is presently getting little income from its lot on North Lake Drive. As long as four years ago this lot was valued at $80,000. Even at this price the City cannot afford to let the property lie there for less than $600 per month. Since the present City administration has no intention of erecting a municipal building on this lot, then it should be paved and utilized for downtown parking, or else sold and use this money to acquire a parking lot in another part of town. Any objective, impartial appraisal of the City's parking needs will reveal that the Sears store to be located on North Lake Drive, and the new shopping center by the Archer Medical Clinic will solve the downtown parking problem within the next 12 to 18 months."

Parking structure feasibility study; parking and traffic flow improvement program study, $9,575:

"Within the past year the Pikeville district office of the Bureau of Highways, Traffic Division, made recommendations to the Prestonsburg City Council on how to solve any questions on the flow of traffic within the City. At that meeting the traffic engineer, Mr. Kirby Ison, offered the services of the Department to make any further studies and assist in the implementation of his recommendations with no cost to the City of Prestonsburg. On February 25, 1975, this office was told by the Pikeville office that any traffic studies needed by the City of Prestonsburg could be made at no cost to the City. So far as the

It's the Law Till . . .

On another page appears a story relating to the attempt to keep the so-called Broad Form Deed Law in effect until the Court of Appeals makes its decision. The motion was granted. Until the high court acts the law is in effect, and the landowner's consent is required before coal beneath his surface can be strip-mined.

Weight of Snowfall Causes Dock Sinkage

This was the scene at the Jenny Wiley State Park boat dock after the weight of Monday's wet snowfall caused a section of metal dock to tilt and partially sink. Park Superintendent George Barker said an earlier snow had tilted the structure, causing several "logs" of foam flotation to float away. He said no real damage had resulted and that the flotation units had been recovered and were being replaced. Barker said $11,000 has been allotted for dock maintenance and repair until major dock renovation work can be approved and begun.

Beaver Cr. Sewerage Gets $61,936 Grant

Sewerage to go along with the water service supplied by the sprawling Beaver Elkhorn Water District became more than a dream this week.

The office of Congressman Carl D. Perkins announced Tuesday morning that an initial grant of $61,936 has been approved for planning of the sewage project along the long route followed by the district's water lines from Allen into both the Right and Left Beaver Creek sections of the county.

Of this amount, the Environmental Protection Agency will supply $46,452. The remainder will be in local or state funds.

The sewerage grant application was filed on the grounds that water service to homes and businesses increases stream pollution unless sewerage is provided. The Beaver Elkhorn Water District recently proposed an extension of water services to the town of David and an area covering most of the Left Fork of Middle Creek, along KY 122. Annexation of the area to the district will be ruled upon by the Floyd fiscal court at a coming meeting.

If annexation is approved, the water system development will involve possibly $282,600 in Appalachian Regional Commission funds. Sewerage help also will be sought for the town of David, it was said, and that may involve a "package" treatment plant.

A new source of water for David is expected to result in its acquisition by a non-profit group which has taken an option on the town. It is presently owned by David Property, Inc., which is headed by Woodrow Branham, of the Auxier road.

Floyd Artist Announces Print, Exhibit

The above painting, in egg tempera, is entitled simply, "Barns."

Gary Akers, of Grethel, well-known Floyd artist, is presently displaying an exhibit of his works at the Kenton County Library in Covington, Kentucky. Including work in egg tempera, water color and pencil drawings, the exhibit was begun March 3 and will conclude March 31. A recent limited edition print now available to the public is an egg tempera entitled "Two room school." Like many of Akers' works, the subject matter of the painting deals with a rural, and more particularly Appalachian theme.

Body Found at Paintsville Believed Rehab Center Student

Paintsville police last Wednesday found a badly decomposed body, through to be that of a girl missing from the Thelma Rehabilitation Center for several months. Although positive identification has not been made, officials suspect it is the body of Josephine Gorman, 18, who joined the Center from Richmond on Sept. 29, 1974. The discovery of the body was made by two boys walking in a field owned by the C. and O. Railway Co. and known as Water Plant Bottom.

Patrolmen Ashland Wallen and Roy Ratliff, who were called to the scene, said they found the body clothed and lying on its back. A pair of glasses was found to the right of the body. Officials said the glasses are the best lead they have in obtaining identification. Checks are being made to see if the prescription for the glasses matches that used by Miss Gorman. Police Chief Ross Spears said another clue to the body's identification is the position of the right hand. The hand was bent at the wrist, inward toward the torso. Spears said Miss Gorman was said to carry her hand in this manner.

But, Spears added, Miss Gorman was reported as having had brain surgery as a six-year-old. He said no marks to indicate surgery were found on the skull. Nine packs of Virginia Slims cigarettes were found nearby. In addition, a new Timex calendar watch was found on the body. The watch was stopped at 2:06 on the 11th.

(The calendar watch did not indicate which month.)

Police also said $6 and some change were found on the body. It is believed that Miss Gorman had at least $90 in her possession when she disappeared.

Her mother, the nearest relative lives in Texas. Miss Gorman was reported missing Oct. 5, 1974. She had been one of 40 students from the center to be brought into Paintsville for the Apple Day Festival. When she failed to return to the bus for the five-mile trip to Thelma, authorities were notified.

Johnson County Coroner E. W. VanHoose said Wednesday that Miss Gorman was a severe epileptic and was, at the time she was reported missing, dependent upon medication. The rehabilitation center Security Department reportedly received a tip at the time of the disappearance that Miss Gorman was in the Water Plant area, but a two-day search of the area found nothing.

Dentistry Merit Badge Soon Open to Scouts

Dentistry is a brand-new merit badge that will soon be available to Scouts in the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, according to John Fischer, council president.

The new merit badge was prepared as a joint project of the Boy Scouts of America and the American Dental Association and was introduced in connection with National Children's Dental Health Week and the BSA's 65th anniversary during February.

The requirements for the Dentistry merit badge call for the Scout to learn the nutritional requirements and role of fluorides in maintaining good oral health, the techniques of plaque-control, first aid for oral injuries, and the unique contribution of the dentist to overall health care. Each Scout works with a dentist-counselor to meet the requirements for the badge.

Local dentists will be asked to serve as merit badge counselors in each community.

Long Hours, No Pay Equals No Contest

By MARVA GAY

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The 242 victors of one of the least contested races in history will take office soon. Last November they all ran unopposed for the office of conservation district supervisor.

Most of those who take the oath this January will be familiar with the duties of a conservation district supervisor—90 per cent of them were re-elected to that post.

According to Bill Gayle, director of the division of conservation in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, the last election was not unusual. "Generally," said Gayle, "the race for supervisor is not contested."

A subdivision of state government, each of the 121 conservation districts is run by a seven-person board of supervisors. Two supervisors, each serving a four-year term, are elected for each district.

"The boards of the conservation districts," said Gayle, "are responsible for the conservation and development of the natural resources in the area they serve."

"Much of the board's effectiveness," continued Gayle, "depends on the know-how and work of the individual supervisors because a major tool of the board is the power of persuasion. These people spend much time trying to get land owners to develop and carry out conservation plans and to use land according to its capabilities. It's a big job and a thankless job with long hours and no pay. I'm happy to see experienced, dedicated supervisors returning to the boards."

Though conservation district boards have no enforcement or regulatory power, members of the policy-making Kentucky Soil and Water Conservation Commission are chosen from their ranks. That nine-man, bi-partisan commission sets regulations which are enforced by the division of conservation.

According to Gayle, most of the district board supervisors are agriculturalists. "We've been encouraging other groups to participate," said Gayle, "and some doctors, merchants and attorneys do serve on the district boards. But, agriculturalists still predominate.

Before a candidate for supervisor can be placed on the ballot, 25 landowners in the conservation district must sign a petition nominating him.

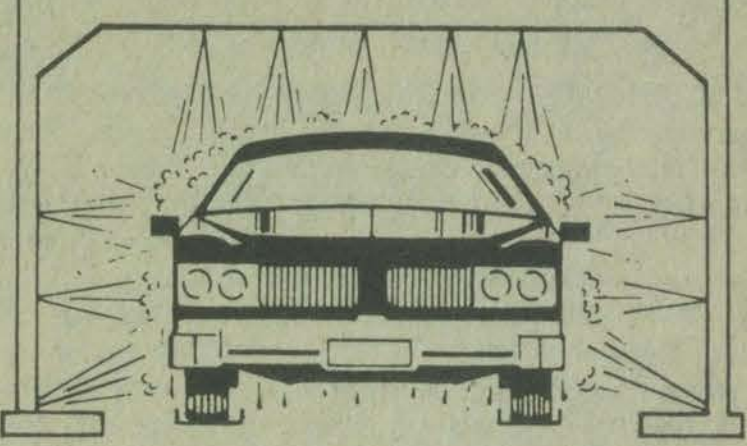

Vocational rehabilitation officials from Washington state are asking their Kentucky counterparts for assistance. They have solicited Kentucky's Bureau of Rehabilitation Services in the state Department of Education for help in a self-evaluation and productivity improvement effort presently being conducted by their state.

Park and recreation improvements in Archer Park and Goble Roberts Public Housing Project, $35,000:

"Prior to his death, Dr. Archer was moving towards developing mini parks in various areas of the City. With assistance from this office, the first land to be acquired was the Goble Roberts Site. This site should be developed as a first priority on the City's list."

Feasibility, cost analysis and preliminary engineering for utility and road to housing and industrial site on Abbott Mountain, $12,000:

"The industrial site must be considered as a separate entity from that of the housing proposed on Abbott Mountain. In 1969 the Big Sandy ADD Board had the "Cliff Industrial Site" engineered, core drilled, the road located as to type and cost, all completed for $4,500. The state of Kentucky will not permit the road to be constructed until an industrial prospect has signed an agreement to locate an industry on this site. During the first three months of Governor Ford's Administration, Dr. Archer, the Big Sandy director, Ed Music, Representative Bill Reynolds met with Commissioner Hogge, Mr. Calvin Grayson, and Mr. Floyd Hughes and received their agreement to do preliminary design on this road in order that the shortest possible time would be required to construct this access road were the Prestonsburg Industrial Commission to secure a prospect for the site."

"Housing is one of the area's greatest needs. Dr. W. C. Hambley has long advocated utilizing hillsides and tops (of hills) for the development of housing, leaving the bottoms or more level lands for industrial and commercial development. This proposed project would be a move in that direction; however, we believe that the proposed cost is excessive. We have talked with engineering firms in the Lexington area. Estimates for this study have not exceeded $2,000."

In conclusion Mr. McCauley wrote:

"We believe good business practices mandate that federal funds, even though requiring no matching by the local community, be spent in a manner that will get the greatest service for the dollar. Our responsibility is to see that the major portion of these funds be spent on those projects which can provide the greatest service for the dollar."

He pointed out in his letter to Mayor Goebel that his comments "neither assure approval or disapproval of any project which comes through this office for review. Our responsibility is to analyze each proposal carefully for purposes of avoiding duplication, conflict of plans, excessive costs."

The City's proposal was prepared by Will Linder, of the firm of Vogt, Sage and Pllum.

One member of the City Council commented that while Mr. McCauley's letter, a copy of which went to the HUD area office, is not necessarily fatal to the application, "it certainly doesn't help."

customers with negotiated contracts they may be of teners. (Basic residences include all buildings with fewer than 10 dwelling units.)

Refuse must be bagged and placed at the side of the road or street in front of residences. Material acceptable for collection include bulky household fixtures, appliances, furniture or similar items and stone from yard work not exceeding 20 pounds per collection. Not to be accepted for collection are radioactive materials, poisons which would contaminate the disposal area, liquid wastes, construction materials from significant construction projects, remodeling or demolition projects, single parcels heavier than two men can lift, material more than four feet in its greatest dimension or material not in convenient-size bundles or boxes.

The contract also provides that if any cities located in the county pass an ordinance making it mandatory for all their residents to subscribe to a collection service, the contractors shall serve such communities. Wastes are to be transported in fully enclosed truck-bodies.

The only individual listed as connected with Floyd County Sanitation was its president, Adrian Lafferty.

It is not known if the court will later adopt an ordinance making mandatory the use of the collection service, but this has been discussed. W. J. May, of Prestonsburg, was named treasurer of funds collected by the county from the two contractors.

plain. That is not expected to be done earlier than from three to five years hence.

There's no way counties can meet the July 1 deadline, Greer said. The U. S. Corps of Engineers finds the task of mapping areas over the entire United States of such magnitude that much more time will be required. The maps sent counties of this area last December were of the sketchiest variety, actual flood plains were not established, and this work must be in greater detail before the law is fully enforced.

Flood insurance is now available to towns and cities which are in compliance with the program. Existing structures in the flood plain can be insured. As of this time, the filling of lots to a point above the flood level is not required and will not be until comprehensive mapping is completed, Greer said. And even after such maps are available variances may be issued to avoid filling to the extent that adjacent properties are damaged and esthetic damage is done.

It also was explained that if a proposed building venture is out of the flood plain, the builder may procure a loan from a FDIC-associated lending institution, even if the city or county is not in the flood insurance program. The same leniency is made to cities or counties applying for federal grants if construction is to be done above the established flood level.

Unadulterated language of the National Flood Insurance Act provided that all areas of the United States were given till only July 1, this year to be in compliance with the law. Failure to do so carried this penalty: All areas not in compliance were to be excluded from receiving federal grants for public projects and their residents from negotiating loans for building costs with any institution governed by federal regulations. It required zoning and the prohibition of building in a flood plain unless the site is filled to above the flood level. This would have applied to restoration of old structures damaged by five or by other cause.

If strictly adhered to, practically all the level land on which Prestonsburg has been built would not be open to new construction without filling in of the sites. The Beaver Creeks of this county would have little more than the hillsides out of the flood plain.

But the hard-and-fast regulations appear to be more distant than first expected. And before that day of ironclad enforcement arrives, the law, hopefully, will be changed. Greer said members of Congress already are being importuned to make "sensible" changes.

The Flood Insurance Act was hastily created following the flood which almost destroyed the city of Wilkesbarre, Pa. Flood insurance was available there, but after the disaster it was learned that only two property-owners had it. Then the Congress decided to make the insurance mandatory, nationwide.

Greer is convinced, as are most others, that flood insurance is needed but he admits it presents problems as the law now stands. It is his job to work with city and county officials, and they, naturally, are reluctant to adopt ordinances defining flood plains and denying property-owners uninhibited use of their possessions. At the same time they shrink from leaving their residents in a situation which denies them the opportunity to borrow money, if necessary, to make desired improvements.

"I try to be as tactful as possible when I meet with city councils and fiscal courts," Mr. Greer said. "I certainly do not go into tell them they must do this and so. If I did, they would probably throw me out on my ear—and they should."

So speaks a young man who appears to be wise beyond his years. But he has no trouble sympathizing with an area such as this where level land is scarce and where that land could be rendered useless for building purposes. For he's a native of East Point, on the Floyd-Johnson county line, a few miles from here.

Dr. Allen Resigns Board Chairmanship

In resolutions adopted following his resignation the Board of Health wrote, in part:

"While serving in this capacity he was also practicing the profession of medicine and rendering professional services to many thousands of Floyd countians. Dr. Allen has an unselfish and quiet way of helping those in need."

QUESTION

These Sunday School jokes continue to bob up, here and there. The following is one such:

The teacher was telling her class the story of Lot. "Lot," she said, "was warned to take his wife and flee from the city, but his wife looked back and was turned to a pillar of salt."

Whereupon one little girl lifted her hand. "Yes?" said the teacher.

"I just wonder," the little girl more or less innocently said, "what happened to his flea."

Westvaco Aids State Reforestation Drive

A reforestation campaign aimed at owners of small, private woodlands in the state has been launched by Westvaco Corporation and the Kentucky Division of Forestry to supplement federal cost-sharing.

Kentucky landowners interested in planting trees on poorly stocked, idle, eroded or cut-over lands are urged to request information or seedling order blanks from the Kentucky Division of Forestry at Morehead, or county offices of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service. U. S. Agricultural Stabilization & Conservation Service, or State Agricultural Extension Service.

Westvaco's program emphasized pines for sites that will grow them, and the company will match one-for-one up to 10,000 such trees purchased from the state nursery for reforestation. Most hardwoods are best regenerated by sprout growth after carefully planned harvests, according to company foresters.

Westvaco is one of Kentucky's major forest industries and has joined with the State Division of Forestry to promote continued tree planting and forest management in the counties where Westvaco buys pulpwood and manages company woodlands. Westvaco's matching seedling program had donated more than a million trees to match a similar number bought by landowners in Kentucky last year. The program—established in 1966 and now reaching landowners in 10 states where the company operates—won a national award from the American Forestry Association at the New Orleans Tree Planting Conference in 1973.

Judge Awaits Ford Evidence In 'Lift' Action

Circuit Judge Henry Meigs, of the Franklin circuit court, will await depositions of Ex-Governor Wendell Ford and Ewart Johnson, former state commissioner of parks, before ruling on the state's motion for a summary judgment declaring void the lease allowing Cumberland Falls Chair Lift, Inc., headed by Prestonsburg businessman Ed Music, to begin construction of a chairlift at Cumberland Falls.

The delay was at the request of C. Kilmer Combs, attorney for the chairlift firm.

The present litigation follows the order of Governor Julian Carroll to stop payment on a $127,000 check in payment of an out-of-court settlement of the chairlift firm's suit to collect expenditures made in good faith after the lease was granted. Judge Meigs last month did set aside the agreed judgment, and attorneys for the governor then filed for a summary judgment declaring the lease illegal and void from the start.

The Wild Rivers Act, which Governor Ford used as grounds for cancelling the lease, requires the secretary for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection to fix the system's boundaries at the visual horizon from the stream up to a maximum of 2,500 feet. Combs argued Monday that the Department of Natural Resources did not take action sufficient to establish legal boundaries by the June 16, 1974 deadline.

"All they had done was to take a crayon (and draw) on a topo (topographical) map . . . and stick that topo map away somewhere," Combs said.

"The only visual horizon these environmental 'Keystone Cops' saw was from the 10th floor of the Capital Plaza office building," Combs said.

Attorneys Joseph Leary and Larry Greathouse, representing the Carroll administration, argued that drawing boundaries on a departmental map carried out the law. Leary said one terminal of the proposed chair lift was within 200 feet of the river and clearly within the area protected by law.

In a written response filed in court, Combs charged that the state violated the lease by not granting the chair lift firm a new location in the park, once the original site was ruled out.

"The evidence will demonstrate the feasibility of another suitable site," Combs said.

Title Clearance Only Hindrance To Armory Here

The Kentucky National Guard armory, announced a year or more ago to be located in the Prestonsburg vicinity, will not go to any other county, County Judge Henry Stumbo has been assured by Governor Carroll.

Because of the long delay in finding a location for the armory, a representative of the Adjutant General's office had indicated that it might be located in a neighboring county. But a site near here was available, all the while, needing only clearance of title.

The armory site is almost certain to be the state-owned property embracing about four acres which was acquired for a dump-site of stone and earth removed in the construction of new US 23. It is located at the mouth of a hollow, in the vicinity of the Plantation Motel.

Title to the property has been cleared in a court action in which the Bingham plaintiffs claimed the site was sold to the state for highway purposes only. Circuit Judge Hollie Conley held that the state has clear title, and the site will be available for armory purposes after March 14.

Water and sewer service from the Prestonsburg system has been assured the Guard installation. The National Guard has proposed that if the city of Prestonsburg will install a line larger than is needed only for armory purposes, it will share the cost. This would afford service to locations en route to the site, or others near it.

Armory construction is expected this year.

He was Prestonsburg City Attorney for four years and served in the State Senate from 1968 to 1972.

As your Senator, he was Chairman of the Public Utilities and Transportation Committee, the Special Committee on Education, the Special Committee on the State Employees Merit System, and a member of several other committees.

He worked for and sponsored bills on education, black lung, crime prevention, natural resources, and good government.

His experience and legislative know-how are needed now, at a time when Eastern Kentucky is at the crossroads.

There is new prosperity in Eastern Kentucky, but there are also those who would like to take it away and will try to take it away in the next Legislature.

You need Clifford Latta speaking out for you in Frankfort at this critical time.

The communion table held a basket of white gladioli, white carnations and English ivy. A small candle arrangement graced the organ, and white bows marked the family pews to complete the setting.

Mrs. Bart Jones, of Lexington, cousin of the bride and organist, provided a program of appropriate nuptial music and the traditional wedding marches for the processional and recessional. She accompanied the wedding soloists, Mrs. Albert Wolf, of Erlanger, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer," and Miss Radean Wiley, a student at Morehead State University, who sang "Until the Twelfth of Never."

The bride, escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, wore a designer gown of white silk tulle, enhanced with alencon lace and seed pearls. The scooped neckline, cardinal sleeves, empire waist and A-line silhouette enhanced the attached chapel train. Her Juliet headpiece held her ballerina mantilla, and she carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, carnations, and baby's breath.

Mrs. Jack Christian, of Lexington, served as matron of honor for her sister and was attired in a floor-length gown of pink lutesong featuring an empire waist, a scoop necked bodice overlaid with a flocked sheer flowered polyester. ## "Go Ye"

By ANNIE JOHNSON FLINT
Hear your commission, O Church of the Master!
Friends and disciples of Jesus, take heed.
How are you doing the work of the Father?
How are you caring for hunger and need?

Useless to stay in your doorway, and beckon—
Those who most need you will never come in;
Fighting the devil with art and with culture,
How he must laugh at his stronghold of sin!

Go—to the sheep that are scattered and fainting,
Having no shepherd, and tell them to come;
Go—to the highways, and tell every creature
Still the feast waiteth, and yet there is room.

Go—the time shortens, the night is approaching—
Harvests are whit'ning and reapers are few;
Somewhere, perhaps, in the darkness are dying
Souls that might enter the Kingdom with you.

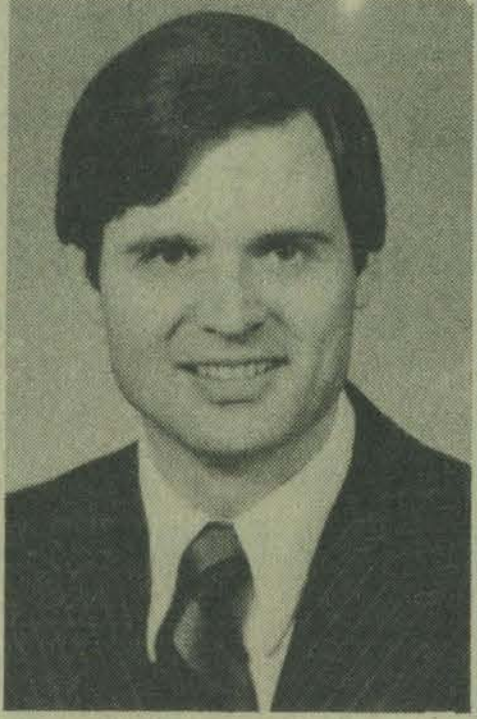

Go—for the foe goeth, tireless, cunning,
Body and soul he is holding in fee.
Go—lift his gauge in the might of the Stronger,
And in that Power declare the slaves free!

Go—our Lord goeth to man's petty judgment,
Bearing His cross in the midst of His foes;
Let us go forth to Him, mocked and derided,
Bear His reproaches, and share in His woes.

Go—Church of Christ, for He goeth before you,
And all the way that ye take He doth know.
On the bright morrow He'll say, "Come, ye blessed,"
But till the dawning, the message is "GO!"

RC&D Approved For Operations

The office of Congressman Carl D. Perkins has informed Ollie J. Arnett, RC&D Council chairman, that the Big Sandy Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Project has been approved for operations.

Approval for operations means, according to Mr. Arnett, that local RC&D sponsors can go ahead with development of measure plans for various local measures and that the U. S. Department of Agriculture is authorized to provide technical and financial assistance for these measures, as funds are available.

Measure plans are now being developed by local sponsors for flood prevention at Porter Elementary School in Johnson county, for flood prevention at Salyer Elementary School in Magoffin county, for land drainage at Prestonsburg Community College, for a water-based recreational area at Pikeville, and for a county recreation park in Martin county, near Inez. Preliminary studies of several other measures are being made.

Sponsors expect to start actual construction on some of these measures by late spring or early summer.

A total of $3,795,521 was paid to Kentucky's unemployed during the week ending Jan. 25. Compared to last year's statistics, benefits have increased by more than $2 million. These individuals include domestic and farm workers and government employees.

Under new provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, any retail, service or agricultural employer may hire up to four full-time students at a subminimum wage by notifying the Secretary of Labor.

Cats Stage Comeback To Win District Title

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

Down during the first half by as many as 18 points, the Prestonsburg Blackcats staged an impressive second half rally to overcome the Wheelwright Trojans, 70 to 66, in the 58th District tournament championship game Saturday night at the Betsy Layne fieldhouse.

Facing a fired-up Wheelwright team, the Blackcats were hard-pressed to trim the Trojans' lead to 11 points at the half. Although the Wheelwright team retained its lead through much of the second half, Prestonsburg steadily decreased the point gap until the score stood at 48-43 going into the final quarter of play. Utilizing an all-court press and shooting with increased accuracy, the Blackcats tied the contest and went on to down the Trojans.

High scorer for the Blackcats was Robbie Herrick with 20 points while Gormie Collins and Kippy McNally picked up 18 and 17 points, respectively. Other P'burg players collecting points during the game were Dell Jagers, 6; Dennis Walker, 4; David Harrington, 4, and David Flanery, 2.

Jeff Riley and Gary Anderson shared high scoring honors for Wheelwright with 16 points each. Other scorers for the Trojans were Walter Howard, 12; Zenith Hall, 8; Dewey Jamerson, 5; Larry Isaac, 4; Gary Isaac, 3, and Bobby Isaac, 2.

The tournament, which got under way Wednesday night, saw McDowell upset by the Betsy Layne Bobcats, 76 to 64, in the first game. The following night, Allen Central was eliminated by Wheelwright, 91 to 60.

Friday night saw Prestonsburg facing a tough Betsy Layne team which led at the half, 29 to 22. The Blackcats pulled the game out only in the fourth quarter with a final score of 59 to 54.

Awards presented after the game named Wheelwright as the Floyd County Conference winners with James Francis as conference coach of the year. (Prestonsburg was not eligible for conference honors since the team did not play enough conference games.)

The individual free-throw trophy was shared by three players who tied in the competition. They were Ron Clark, 8 for 6; Rick Prater, 7 for 7, and Kippy McNally, 9 for 9. Betsy Layne won the team free-throw trophy, hitting 80 per cent of its free shots. McDowell won the sportmanship trophy and the McDowell cheerleaders won first in the cheerleading category. The Prestonsburg cheerleaders placed second. In the KAPOs honors for cheerleading, Prestonsburg's girls won first place, with Allen Central the runner-up.

This year's all-conference and all-district teams were announced. Named to the all-conference team were:

Zenith Hall, Wheelwright; Gary Anderson, Wheelwright; Jeff Riley, Wheelwright; Larry Isaac, Wheelwright; Rick Roberts, McDowell; Larry Daugherty, McDowell; Phil Paige, McDowell; Jeff Hall, McDowell; Ricky Jo Roberts, Betsy Layne; Linus Newsome, Betsy Layne; Rick Pack, Allen Central; Mike Howard, Allen Central.

Players named to the all 58th all-district team included:

Betsy Layne Girls Upset McDowell for District Title

Kathy Isaacs' three free throws in the closing seconds of the girls' 58th District basketball tournament championship game Saturday night "sewed up" the victory for the Allen Central Rebelettes as they downed the McDowell girls, 51 to 48.

The contest, which preceded the boys' championship game between Wheelwright and Prestonsburg at the Betsy Layne fieldhouse, saw McDowell's Geri Grigsby score 38 points while Isaacs led Allen Central with 29.

Other scorers for Allen Central included Kim Hall, 14; Denita Compton, 4, and Mary Francis, 4. McDowell's other points were picked up by Rita Roberts, 7; Pam Reid, 1, and Donna Humphrey, 2.

The girls' tournament opened Wednesday night with the Betsy Layne girls winning over the Wheelwright team by a score of 62 to 47. In Thursday night's play, the Allen Central girls defeated Prestonsburg, 63 to 34. Kim Hall and Kathy Isaacs scored 23 points each while Bridget Clay scored 27 points for Prestonsburg. The following night Betsy Layne and McDowell met in what was probably the tournament's most exciting game. Trailing by one point and with four seconds left, Geri Grigsby tied the game up for McDowell with a foul shot. In the overtime, McDowell "turned on" and scored 12 points while Betsy Layne picked up only two. Geri Grigsby scored 50 points in the contest.

McDowell and Allen Central shared conference title honors, each with a 7-1 record. Bobby Lynn Moore, of McDowell and Pat Murphy were selected as coaches of the year while the free throw trophy was won by Pam Clark, of Betsy Layne. The Tram free throw trophy was also won by Betsy Layne. The Wheelwright girls were awarded the Sportmanship trophy and the cheerleader trophies for first and second were won by Allen Central and Prestonsburg, respectively.

Choices for all conference and all district teams were as follows:

Geri Grigsby, Kathy Isaac, Kim Hall, Rita Roberts, Bridget Clay, Mary Stumbo, Pam Clark, Benita Hamilton, Tammy Hamby, Lisa Grigsby, Karen Duff, Jamie Martin (selected for all conference), and Denita Risner (selected for all district).

In the first game of the girls' regional tournament which opened Monday at Johnson Central fieldhouse, Sheldon Clark won over Virgie, 69 to 13 and the Allen Central Rebelettes won their opener, 46 to 32.

Four Coal Counties Receive Severance Checks for $187,281

Gov. Julian Carroll presented checks, Tuesday of last week, to the first four Kentucky coal-producing counties eligible to receive severance tax surplus funds.

Judges from Muhlenberg, Webster, Bell and Letcher counties received checks totaling $187,281.

It marked the first time severance tax surplus money has been allocated from the Coal Producing Development Fund, a product of legislation introduced and guided through the 1974 General Assembly by state lawmakers representing the coal counties.

Muhlenberg county, the largest coal producing county in the state, received the largest amount of funds—two checks totaling $151,399 for the purchase of heavy equipment to build a solid waste disposal system.

Webster county was awarded $21,282. The money will finance two road pavement projects: 3,700 feet of access road from Highway 41A to the Providence-Webster County Airport, and a 500-foot section of road from Highway 56 to the Shane Manufacturing Co.

Bell county received seven checks, totaling $9,600, to finance purchase of equipment for landfill operations, including a garbage pickup service.

A check of $5,000 went to Letcher county to be used to buy a bus to transport the elderly to hospitals, doctors and Social Security offices.

The 1974 law provided that half of any surplus received from the collection of the coal severance tax in Kentucky would be channeled back to the coal producing counties, pro-rated on the basis of their production.

The money is to be used for the acquisition and development of industrial sites, public recreation facilities, drainage and land reclamation projects related to industrial and recreational site development, and other construction and renovation of publicly owned facilities.

Since being established last June, the fund has accumulated $6,247,704, half of the $12,495,409 surplus severance tax collected in the state general fund.

The four counties receiving money Tuesday were the first of 22 which have completed the process of submitting projects for fund approval.

The counties have submitted 58 projects, seeking total allocations of $2,766,649 in surplus severance tax money. Three projects involve industrial site purchases and/or development; 37, public recreation facilities; 14, supporting related industrial site development and/or acquisition and four are listed in the "other" construction and renovation category.

So far, none of the counties has requested money for drainage control and reclamation.

The remaining 17 of the state's coal producing counties have not submitted projects and are waiting for their accumulated portions of the surplus funds to increase.

Before funds are awarded, each of the projects must be aired at a public hearing, advertised publicly and approved by the county fiscal court, a state Legislative Advisory Committee established by the law and the commissioner of the Executive Department for Finance and Administration. The same process is required before vendors for the projects can be selected.

Accepting the checks for the projects Tuesday were Judge Robert Draper of Muhlenberg County, Judge Harold Childress of Webster County, Judge Estill Blair of Letcher County and Judge Willie Hendrickson of Bell County.

The checks were made out to the vendors who have been approved for the projects.

Wrong Soybean Can Cause Poor Crop

Choose your soybean variety for 1975 with care, advises Morris J. Bitzer, Extension grain crops specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Planting a variety which is not well-adapted to your area can result in a poor crop," says Bitzer. "Last year, several farmers in northern areas of Kentucky had their soybean crops damaged by early frosts because they grew varieties which were too late-maturing for their areas."

Bitzer says there is a good supply of seed of most varieties available in Kentucky this year, and seed quality is generally high. However, he recommends lining up a supply of seed early. If farmers shift large acreages from corn to soybeans because of nitrogen shortages, seed supplies could become tight. Also, there are some problems with seed quality in states north of Kentucky, which could cause high-quality seed of the early varieties used in Kentucky to be in great demand in these states.

Before choosing a soybean variety for 1975, Bitzer recommends checking Progress Report 216, Kentucky Soybean Performance Tests-1974. This publication, which is available from your local County Extension Office, contains the results of soybean variety tests conducted at five different locations in Kentucky last year by the UK Agricultural Experiment Station.

Bitzer points out that a list of recommended soybean varieties is prepared each year based on the variety tests conducted during the previous three years by the Experiment Station. Early-maturing varieties on this year's list are Calland and Williams. Mid-season varieties on the list are Cutler 71, Custer, and Kent. Late-maturing varieties which are recommended include Essex, Dare, York, Mack, Forrest, and Hood.

The soybean cyst nematode is a problem for soybean producers in the Purchase Area, and has also been found in other areas. Varieties resistant to the cyst nematode include Custer, Mack, and Forrest. Forrest is a variety which is new in Kentucky this year and is described by Bitzer as having the same maturity as Mack but with better lodging resistance. It should yield better than York or Dare where the cyst nematode is a problem.

Essex is another variety which is new for 1975. It was developed in Virginia, and Bitzer says it is a high-yielding variety which is three to four days earlier than Dare in maturity. It has better lodging resistance than any of the other late-maturing varieties and tends to set pods high on the plant, thus being relatively easy to harvest.

The UK specialist says Williams is a variety which did an excellent job for Kentucky farmers in 1974, particularly when used for double cropping in the north half of the state. He says it stands better than any other variety and has excellent shattering resistance.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Salt-water fishermen know him as the striped bass, but more and more Kentucky anglers are being introduced to him as the rockfish. Often this introduction can be startling, as when a white bass fisherman, expecting a two- or three-pound fish, suddenly finds himself tied into something weighing from 18 to 50 pounds.

The rockfish (Roccus saxatilis) is being stocked in increasing numbers in Kentucky, both as a fine game fish and also to fill an empty ecological niche in the food chain in many lakes. His biological purpose is to control gizzard shad populations, a role for which his large size and voracious appetite makes him particularly suited.

Young gizzard shad provide excellent food for bass, crappie and other predatory game fish, but members of this species soon grow to weight from one and one-half to three pounds, obviously too big for even the largest bass to tackle. Thus there is no natural biological check on the shad population, which can increase rapidly and compete with populations of game fish, seriously lowering the quality of fishing in lakes where this occurs.

The rockfish, however, considers the largest shad as merely a snack. By establishing rockfish in a lake, the shad population can be held in check, freeing available food and cover for game fish.

But the fisherman who ties into one of these monsters doesn't have time to worry about the biology of the situation. He's generally too busy trying to keep from being pulled out of the boat. The current state record, from Herrington Lake, is 44 pounds, four ounces, and unconfirmed instances of even larger fish have been reported. In salt water, these fish can grow to over 100 pounds, and their potential fresh-water size has yet to be determined.

As a fresh-water species, the rockfish was "discovered" in the Santee-Cooper Reservoir in South Carolina. These fish make their spawning run from the sea into rivers and when Santee-Cooper was impounded, some were trapped by the dam. To the surprise of everyone, they survived rather nicely in the fresh-water lake and a new sport fish for inland anglers was created.

Herrington, Barkley and Barren Lakes are receiving current stockings of rockfish, and Cumberland and Kentucky Lakes, in addition to Herrington, have been stocked in the past. Rockfish also have been caught below the dams at Barkley, Kentucky and Cumberland.

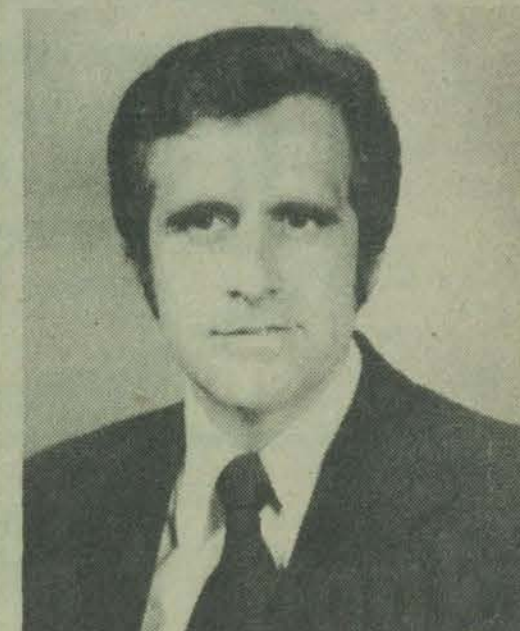

Probably the best time to fish for "rocks" is during their spring spawning runs. They usually run about the same time white bass do and in many of the same locations. Either large minnows, jig-and-eel combinations or extra-large minnow-imitation lures can be effective. Use heavy tackle—for rock fish, even a stout bass-fishing rig falls into the ultralight category.

Both the daily and possession limit for rockfish is five, and there is a 15-inch minimum size limit. Since most of the stockings are still in the experimental stage, the Division of Fisheries would appreciate hearing about any rockfish caught in Kentucky. If you manage to land one, contact your local conservation officer or the Division of Fisheries, Department of Fish and Wildlife, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Community Action Agencies Funded

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Julian M. Carroll and C. Leslie Dawson, secretary of the Department for Human Resources (DHR), have announced the allocation of $1,096,635 in federal funds for local Community Action Agencies and one board of education to continue programs presently in operation.

Five grants have been awarded in Eastern Kentucky. They are:

- Harlan County Community Action Agency, Harlan, $26,400;
- Lake Cumberland Community Services Organization, Somerset, $103,800;
- Daniel Boone Development Council, Manchester, $42,500;
- Knox County Economic Opportunity Council, Barbourville, $77,000;
- Leslie-Knott-Letcher-Perry Community Action Council, Whitesburg, $126,732.

Community Action Agencies are local administrative units dealing with services to the needy. They are an outgrowth of the former Office of Economic Opportunity and were established in 1965.

These agencies operate on a regional basis and deliver services geared to the needs of the local people. In this way, the people have a voice in establishing the particular program for their area.

Several different programs are presently in operation and funds recently allocated will enable the agency to continue them. Examples of the various projects which can be financed with these federal monies are:

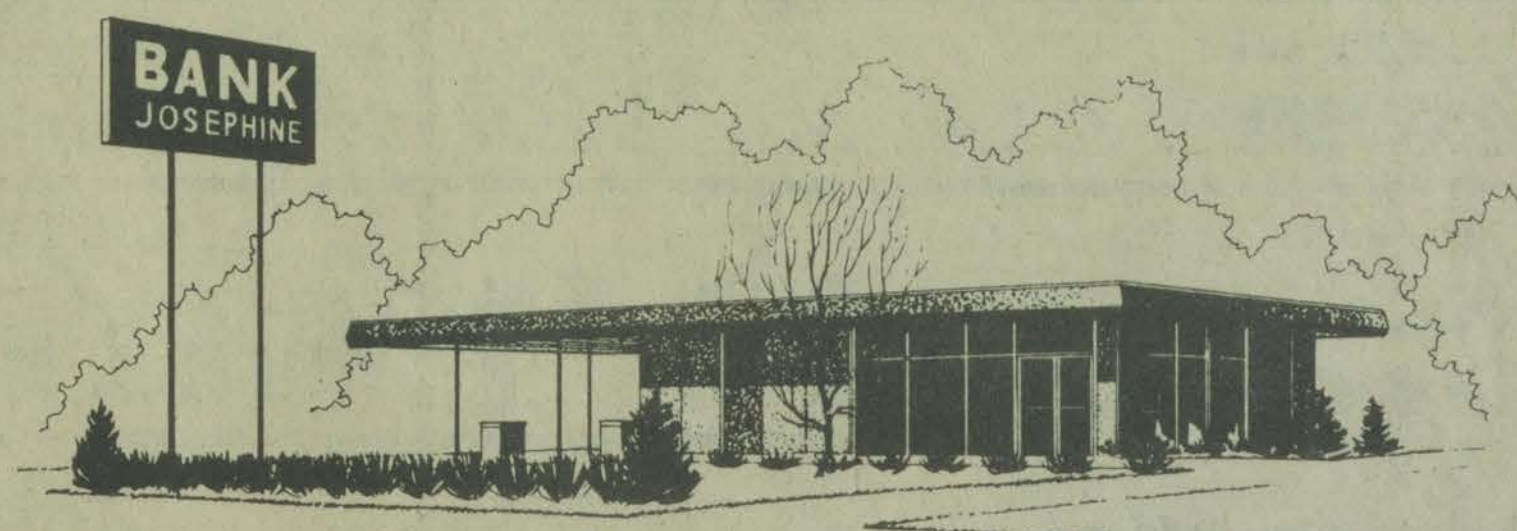

Head Start programs, which provide pre-school training for children from low income families. Head Start, under CAA guidelines, also provides medical and dental services for the child.

Neighborhood Youth Corps, a program established in 1964, which provides poverty-level youth with paid jobs to encourage them to continue their education. It also provides remedial education, work experience and training in the out-of-school program.

Emergency Food and Medical Services, which offers immediate relief for the needy during crisis situations such as the April, 1974 tornadoes and assists seasonal or migrant farm workers and the jobless while they are applying for other types of assistance.

Energy Crisis funds, which help lessen the impact of the energy crunch on the poor.

'Dry' Forces Win At Paintsville

Paintsville voters last Friday defeated the move to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages there.

By a 72-vote margin the residents decided the sale of alcoholic beverages should remain illegal.

On the question asking, "Do you favor the sale of alcoholic beverages," the voting ran: Middle Ward, 143 yes, 197 no; Upper Ward, 8-56; Southside 181-177; Bridgeford, 148-189; Lower, 82-101; Absentees 7-1, for a total of 649 "yes" votes and 721 opposed.

Paul Deaton, chairman of the Citizens for Legal Sales and Alcoholic Beverages Sales in Paintsville, said after the vote was announced he would challenge the Southside ward's results because he believed his side lost 50-100 votes there unjustifiably.

He said the secretary of state's office did not have these voters listed on the computer printout and they were therefore denied their vote.

He said "other voting irregularities" would be listed on a complaint he will file within the next 10 days.

Broad Form Deed Argued

Frankfort, Ky.—After an hour-and-a-half hearing on a motion to allow the state to continue enforcing a 1974 requiring the surface owners' consent for strip mining, the Court of Appeals last Thursday took the matter under advisement and Chief Justice Scott Reed promised a ruling as soon as possible.

The law was declared unconstitutional Jan. 20 by Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs and last week's hearing was on a motion by the state and four East Kentucky land owners to stay Meigs' judgment until the high court decides the appeal of the case. Meigs on Feb. 10 allowed the law to remain in effect for 20 days, but that time period has expired.

Former Gov. Bert T. Combs, representing No. 8 Limited of Virginia, the Clintwood, Va. mining firm which successfully challenged the law in lower court, moved to have the court advance the case on its docket so it could be heard quickly.

The attorneys for the state and the surface owners joined in that motion and Reed indicated the case was of such significance that the court will hear it as quickly as possible.

Justice John Palmore at one point said he believes it is unconstitutional for the General Assembly to let a state agency abolish strip mining.

And he wondered now, if the legislature can't delegate it to a state agency, if it could do so to an individual—the surface owner.

Dean Hill Rivkin, an Appalachian Research and Defense Fund attorney representing the surface owners, replied it is "not irrational for the state to let the owners who know their land best to have the power to decide if it should be strip mined."

Asst. Atty. Gen. David G. Beals, representing the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, said the law did not prohibit strip mining, but merely required the landowner's consent.

Combs maintained the law unconstitutional on several grounds.

Foods and Vitamins From Nature's Store

1. THE MUSTARDS. I urge my readers to eat all of the mustard greens they can obtain, both wild and garden varieties. All of the many species are edible and make one of the best spring tonics and blood purifiers. They are rich in Vitamins A, B, B2 and C. Sometimes in winter you can find enough mustard to make a mess of greens. The cultivated species, called black mustard from the black seeds, often escapes and can be found in abandoned fields and old gardens.

Then we have the white mustard growing in cultivated fields and bottomlands. It is also rich in Vitamin C and has sulphur as a blood purifier. Then we have the field mustard, which some call the "warlock"; it grows two feet high and its yellow blooms are conspicuous in fields of early spring. All the mustards have yellow blooms and deeply lobed leaves. Many have curly leaves and are called "curly mustard."

When young the leaves of wild mustard, or the garden variety, may be eaten as salads.

COOKED MUSTARD GREENS. Prepare as follows: Parboil the greens and drain off the water; then cook again. Add some sugar to take away the acrid taste. Add some chopped onions, salt and pepper, also a piece of bacon. This mess is better served with hot cornpone.

Mustard was widely used by the Indians, both as a food and as a medicine. For pneumonia, they ground up the seeds and used them with flaxseed meal and onions to make a poultice for the chest. The seeds were also used to make a stimulant for nervous exhaustion or fatigue. Mustard plasters were also used for chest colds. The Indians kept a supply of ripe mustard seeds stored for future use.

WILD LETTUCE. All species of wild lettuce are edible. There is one sure way

HOFFMAN ISSUES STATEMENT

John S. Hoffman, secretary of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, issued a statement this week regarding allegations of impropriety in administering the state's plumbing laws. Hoffman said that he, the commissioner of environmental quality and the department's general counsel turned the investigation of the allegations over to the Kentucky State Police, saying this was the most judicious course to follow because it would assure the protection of the rights of the persons involved and would make sure the truth would be known.

to tell a wild lettuce plant: Break off a leaf and the stem will exude a milky juice. The word lettuce is derived from the Latin: Lactuce, meaning milk. Lettuce has valuable narcotic properties and is fine for inducing sound sleep.

In our region, we have the tall, blue lettuce growing six feet high with light blue flowers; the prickly lettuce, which bears pale yellow flowers and is sometimes called the "compass plant" because one or more of its leaves turn edgewise around noon and point due north. Old sallet-pickers call this lettuce "blue sissel," and eagerly seek it in early spring. Also in our region, we have the white lettuce, which bears panicles of pale white flowers. All of these species are common to our region. The young lettuce plants make excellent greens. They must be picked when young and tender; the older plants are tough and wormy.

LETTUCE GREENS. Pick the leaves while young and tender and cook lightly with a moderate amount of water. Add butter, salt, pepper and bits of bacon.

LETTUCE SALAD. Cut up the green leaves, add chopped onions, then pour hot grease over this. Brown sugar and vinegar can be added to make a tasty salad. Wild lettuce mixed with poke or mustard makes a good mess of green.

The Indians knew the value of wild lettuce as a food and medicine. Pliny, in his NATURAL HISTORY, lists 42 disorders which may be helped by the use of wild lettuce. The Indians used the milky juice to cure coughs; they steeped it and drank the juice to induce sound sleep. If you are troubled with insomnia, try this: Pick a mess of wild lettuce greens, cut up fine and mix with chopped onions. Your insomnia will disappear like magic!

MAYOR GEORGE CLARKE

FOR STATE SENATOR

I have been Mayor of the City of Hindman for over six years and have worked hard to make Hindman and Eastern Kentucky a better place in which to live. I have served six years on the LKLP Community Action Council and am now its Treasurer; six years on the Kentucky River Area Development District Board; am a board member of East Kentucky Housing Development Corporation of Whitesburg; am a board member of Mt. Top, Inc., of Jackson, Kentucky; an active member of Region 12 Tourism Committee; Secretary of the Knott County Emergency Ambulant Care Center (June Buchanan Clinic), and Chairman of the Knott County Development Corporation.

I attended Hindman High School and Morehead State College; spent two years in Germany for Uncle Sam; worked in Cleveland for Ford Motor Company; in Los Angeles, California for Chrysler Motors; in Miami, Florida for the First National Bank of Miami, and in Columbus, Ohio as a stockbroker for the Ohio Company, an investment banking firm.

I returned to Hindman almost seven years ago and will never leave again. I intend to live my life in Eastern Kentucky and help make it a better place in which to live so that when my boys get older they will not have to leave.

GRANDSON OF PROFESSOR CLARKE

I have always wanted to be a State Senator since the first time I rode around with my uncle, "Saw-Logging" Doug Hays, as he campaigned for the State Senate when I was a boy.

I am the son of Bramlett Clarke and Corinne Hicks Clarke, both of Hindman. Bramlett has owned and operated Clarke's Grocery in Hindman for the past 28 years. My mother, Corinne, was the daughter of Lige Hicks and Lucinda Hicks.

My great-grandfather was "Red-Headed" Lewis Hays, who was the first County Clerk of Knott County. One of my great-grandfathers was Soloman Everage who walked to Hazard and convinced the "quare" women to come to Hindman and start the Hindman Settlement School on land donated by local citizens. Another of my great-grandfathers was Captain Anderson Hays who fought with the Confederacy during the Civil War and continued to feud with Clabe Jones after the war was over. They fought many battles on the streets of Hindman, but Capt. Anse and Clabe ended up friends in their old days and would sit on the porch and talk about the old times. I guess that the old men would be happy to know that the Hays and Jones families really got together when I married Racine Jones. We have two fine boys from that marriage.

Professor George Clarke and Lucinda Hays Clarke were my grandparents. Professor Clarke taught many of the older generation in Eastern Kentucky. A highway information plaque has been erected in Hindman in his memory.

I BELIEVE . . .

1. that Eastern Kentucky should have at least half of the coal severance tax returned to the county where the coal is mined.

2. That Eastern Kentucky should have adequate highways to support heavy coal trucks, since coal is our major industry. Also new and better highways to help us take advantage of the tourist industry.

REBUILDING ROUTE 80 FROM HAZARD TO ALLEN IS A MUST!

3. That the Federal and State Governments should provide funds to research better methods of using coal. Construction should be started immediately on the Coal Conversion plants to help combat inflation and the energy crisis.

4. That Kentucky should spend more per child on education. We are now in last place and have enough natural resources to be first.

5. That Eastern Kentucky children should not have to leave home to find employment.

If you believe as I do, elect me to the State Senate for Floyd, Knott, Perry and Martin Counties, and I guarantee that you'll have a voice in Frankfort!

Calvert, the 1972 national delta-wing kite-flying water ski champion, was making this weekly free performance with the Ski-A-Rees Club off Island Park when the accident occurred.

Calvert operated a nursery in co-ownership with his mother, Mrs. Emmett Calvert.

Other survivors include his wife, Patricia Stivers Calvert; two daughters, Cynthia and Debra; a brother, Emmett, of Lexington; and his grandfather, Clyde B. Calvert, also of Lexington.

A memorial service was held at 2 p.m. today (Wednesday) at Victory Christian Church in Lexington. Calvert was buried there.

The Little Red Hen

Once upon a time there was a little red hen who scratched about and uncovered some grains of wheat.

She called her neighbors and said, "If we work together and plant this wheat, we will have some fine bread to eat."

"Who will help me plant this wheat?" "Not I," said the cow. "No I," said the duck. "Not I," said the goose.

"Then I will," said the little red hen. And she did.

The wheat grew tall and ripened into golden grain.

"Who will help me reap my wheat?" asked the little red hen.

"Not I," said the duck. "Out of my classification," said the pig. "I'd lose my seniority," said the cow. "I'd lose my unemployment insurance," said the goose.

Then it came time to bake the bread. "That's overtime for me," said the cow. "I'm a dropout and never learned how," said the duck. "I'd lose my welfare benefits," said the pig. "If I'm the only one helping, that's discrimination," said the goose.

"Then I will," said the little red hen. And she did.

She baked five loaves of fine bread and held them up for her neighbors to see. They all wanted some, demanded a share.

But the red hen said, "No, I can rest for a while and eat the five loaves myself." "Excess profits," cried the cow. "Capitalistic leech," screamed the duck. "Company fink," grunted the pig. "Equal rights," yelled the goose.

And they hurriedly painted "Unfair" picket signs and marched around the little red hen, singing, "We shall overcome." And they did.

For when the farmer came, he said, "You must not be greedy, little red hen. Look at the oppressed cow. Look at the disadvantaged duck. Look at the underprivileged pig. Look at the less fortunate goose. You are guilty of making second class citizens of them."

"But . . . but," said the little red hen, "I earned the bread."

"Exactly," said the farmer. "That is the wonderful free enterprise system; anybody in the barnyard can earn as much as he wants. You should be happy to have this freedom. In other barnyards, you'd have to give all five loaves to the farmer. Here, you give four loaves to your suffering neighbors."

And they lived happily ever after, including the little red hen, who smiled and clucked, "I am grateful. I am grateful."

But her neighbors wondered why she never baked any more bread . . .

(EDITOR'S NOTE—The Little Red Hen story appeared in the Buckeye Farm News, March 1974.)

State Coal Men Study Future By Look at Japanese Economy

By PHIL NORMAN
(In The Courier-Journal)

This is the time of year when coal producers, including some in Eastern Kentucky, try to read the tea leaves of the Japanese economy.

Annual price negotiations on long-term contracts with overseas customers usually are concluded by April 1. The seasonal mood of Japanese buyers can be important to mountain coal operators, who for a while last year were riding the crest of the export market for high-priced metallurgical coal.

This year's economic reading, like the quality of the Eastern Kentucky coal shipped to Japanese steelmakers in recent months, seems partly good and partly bad.

Contract prices for the best metallurgical coal could be going up, according to at least one expert in the field. But the Japanese are expected to buy less coal than they did last year. And they seem to be turning their backs on the spot market—the open market for coal not covered by long-term contracts—and on any coal of marginal quality.

That prognosis, if it holds up, could be good enough news for big companies with deep, metallurgical-coal mines. But it shoots another hole in the wild coal boom that caused such excitement last year among Eastern Kentucky's relatively small independent coal operators.

The boom was borne on a variety of circumstances, including the energy crisis, the shortage of railroad coal cars and the threat of a long coal strike. It took the form of seemingly unreal prices on the spot market, which can be served quickly by mountain mines that tend to come and go with the demand for coal.

After a three-week strike last November, the boom prices subsided. The nation's coal-burning utilities have backed away from the spot market while they use up some of their high-priced stockpiles. The export market, particularly for marginal, spot-market coal, has faltered at the same time, according to some industry spokesmen.

The changes were felt abruptly in the Pike county fields, observes Robert Holcomb, president of Coal Operators & Associates, a group of about 300 independent producers.

At the height of the boom, Holcomb says, about 20 per cent of the steam coal turned out by association members was being mixed with metallurgical coal for exportation. (Steam coal normally is used in generating electricity. High quality metallurgical coal is turned into coke for steel-industry blast furnaces.) Most of the shipments were going to Japan, which produces little metallurgical coal of its own. But those orders "just stopped" in December and haven't been resumed, Holcomb says.

Holcomb says that about half of the mining operations of the group's members have been shut down. He adds, however, that many of the shutdowns have come at mines that were opened or expanded to meet the boom demand.

Pike county operators were getting as much as $70 a ton for export coal, according to Buddy Johnson, a Pikeville coal broker. Steam coal was commanding $35 and $40 a ton, three or four times the prices in effect before the boom. Currently, the best spot prices are about $25 a ton—still relatively high—for high-grade domestic steam coal. But some orders come in for $16 to $18 a ton, the Pike county sources say, and the market for marginal coal is almost nonexistent.

The market has been so confusing that some news stories have been referring to a continuing boom and others to a minor recession in the coal fields.

The consensus among coal-industry spokesmen is that hard times are being felt mainly in the spot market, which affects many Eastern Kentucky operators but amounts to perhaps only 20 per cent of the nation's coal production. "Good operators with good long-term contracts are doing very well," says Tom Duncan, president of the Kentucky Coal Association.

That observation can be applied to the foreign as well as the domestic market, according to Joel Price, coal analyst for Dean Witter & Co. Inc., a Wall Street brokerage firm.

Witter says that Japanese buyers seem willing to pay more for contract coal but are tending to abandon the spot market and "insisting on high-grade stuff." He says he knows of one early contract agreement calling for an increase of $5 a ton.

The stock analyst notes that coal exports to Japan rose from about 19 million tons in 1973 to 27.3 million tons last year. While the figure should drop back this year, he is guessing that it won't go below about 22 million tons. Current economic woes notwithstanding, he says, the Japanese seem bullish about their economy in the second half of the year.

Price's observations on Japanese spot purchases are striking. He says the spot market accounted for some 3 million tons in 1973, probably soared to about 14 million tons last year and should fall to about 6 million tons this year. Spot exports brought as much as $120 a ton last year, he says, but currently are down to $50 and $60. Contract prices have more than doubled to more than $40 a ton and could still be rising, he adds.

Such analyses hardly augur a return to boom times for the itinerants among Eastern Kentucky's independent operators. But Price suggests that some of the independents, notably strip miners, hardly qualify for sympathy. During the boom, he says, "more guys became millionaires who couldn't read and write than at any time in the history of the world. They took their money and walked away."

A great deal of steamcoal, was sold on the metallurgical market, he says, and low quality shipments were common. In some cases, he asserts, coal was shipped with "a layer of dirt on the bottom."

But Price notes that Eastern Kentucky still is one of only three parts of the country—the others being in Virginia and West Virginia—that produce good metallurgical coal for the Japanese market.

Last year, Price says, U. S. coal production reached about 590 million tons, of which about 63 million were exported. He estimates that production will rise to about 625 million tons this year, with exports declining slightly.

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK
(Attorney General)

When greeted by a casual acquaintance with "Hi! How are you?" most people say, "Fine," even when they're not. When you're dealing with insurance, however, you had better be more honest and more specific. Concealing health conditions can lead to denied insurance benefits.

Recently a consumer telephoned our office to tell us of a visit she had had from a health insurance agent. When the consumer mentioned that she had a bad heart condition, the agent (or salesperson) suggested that she not mention the heart condition on her health statement.

Let's pretend that she took his advice, neglected to inform the company of her heart condition and then became ill. Once the company finds out she lied to them, they would simply return her original premium, but they would not award her any benefits, because she had falsified information.

According to Kentucky law, the insurance agent is actually the consumer's agent, not the insurance company's. Even though it was the insurance agent who suggested this ploy, the consumer still would be responsible and would be denied the benefits. In fact, even if the agent had filled out the form himself and had not even discussed the questions with the consumer, the consumer would still be denied benefits if the answers on the health application were not totally truthful. The fact that a consumer tells an agent about a condition or illness makes no difference. No matter who fills out a form or questionnaire, it is always the consumer who signs a statement agreeing that what has been stated is true and complete.

In filling out all health and life insurance application forms, be sure to give all the relevant details, so that there is no question about your willingness to disclose the facts regarding your health. Don't listen to any salesperson or agent who tells you that you don't have to put all the information down. An agent will make money when you pay the premium, whether or not you receive benefits. Don't lose those benefits from carelessness or laziness. Check all insurance application forms for accuracy.

If you'd like to hear more about consumer protection, tune in your TV set to the Consumer Survival Kit, a new series designed to help save you headaches and money. Check your local listings on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday for the exact times and channels.

Would you be moved by a pamphlet on mobile homes? Are you hungry for information about food prices? Would a leaflet on mail fraud laws send you? Pamphlets and leaflets on the topics of mobile homes, food prices and mail fraud are just a sample of the many pamphlets available free or at low cost to consumers from the Consumer Information Center.

Four times a year, the center lists in its Consumer Information Index about 250 titles of publications that might be of interest to consumers. The index is available free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colorado, 81009.

In the 1975 Winter Index, there is a pamphlet called "Tips on Financing a Car," which compares estimated costs of credit from different lending sources. The pamphlet explains annual percentage rate and it's free! Another "freebie" is a "Dennis the Menace Comic Book on Poison Prevention," 15 comic pages about the warnings on drugs, pesticides, paints and cleaning solutions.

The topics covered include automobiles, budgeting, child care, home maintenance and improvements, food, energy, health, appliances, safety, environment, clothing, education and consumer fraud. There's even a 3-page leaflet called "Dishing up the Dog Food," which gives both the nutritional content and purity of pet food and the nutritional requirements of pets.

About half of the publications listed in the Consumer Information Index are free; the charges for the others range from 25 cents to $2.60.

If your friend tells you he had something notarized, has he seen a dry cleaner, a doctor or a member of the clergy? The answer is, "None of the above." Actually, he has been to see a notary public, a person certified by the state to verify that a person has appeared, furnished proof of his or her identity and signed a document or taken oath.

The notary simply serves as a kind of "witness" who attests to someone's identity. A notarized statement does not attest to any facts. When a notary signs a document, it does not mean that the facts are necessarily true. And, in the same respect, a notarized statement is not necessarily a true statement; it simply is a witnessed statement. For example, if Wanda Weightloss makes a notarized statement that she lost 100 pounds in two days, the notarization only means that Wanda appeared before a notary, showed her identification and made the statement. The notarization does not prove that she lost weight quickly, but just signifies that she did, in fact, say she lost weight.

Don't be fooled when an ad claims a notarized guarantee. A notarized guarantee, like any guarantee, should be put in writing and should be specific as to exactly what is guaranteed, by whom and for how long. And remember, a guarantee is only as good as the person or firm making the guarantee.

Consumers themselves may be asked to have certain documents notarized, or "witnessed." If you have trouble finding a notary public, check with your county clerk.

If you have a consumer complaint, contact the Attorney General's Division of Consumer Protection. Call us toll-free from anywhere in Kentucky on the consumer hotline: 1-800-327-2960. Or write to Attorney General's Division of Consumer Protection, the Capitol, Room 24, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Math Contest Set At 2-Year Colleges

Freshmen and sophomores enrolled in Kentucky's two-year colleges who are proficient in algebra, calculus and business math will have an opportunity to compete for valuable prizes in a contest on March 31.

The contest, in the form of an exam, will be administered on that date by officials at each of Kentucky's two-year colleges.

U. S. Savings Bonds will be awarded to the top three contestants. Certificates will be presented to the top five contestants in the state.

The Kentucky Math Association of two-year colleges is sponsoring the contest in cooperation with the University of Kentucky Community College System.

Interested freshmen and sophomores in the two years colleges should contact their school's math faculty, a spokesman for the sponsoring association said.

Stowers-Hall Vows Said

Beneath an arch of pine accented with red poinsettias, Miss Mary Jeanne Stowers and Donald Lee Hall were united in marriage, Dec. 28.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude A. Stowers of Williamson. Mr. Hall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adrian L. Hall of McDowell, Ky.

The Rev. Warren O. Shields officiated at the double ring ceremony on Dec. 28 at the First Baptist Church in Williamson.

Pre-nuptial music was furnished by Mrs. Eugene Murphy, organist, and Miss Jody Ritchea, soloist, of Parkersburg, W. Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of maricaine jersey accented with seed pearls and fashioned with a softly shirred bodice which was outlined with a double strand of pearls, high rolled neckline and full bishop sleeves extending into deep cuffs. The empire waistline held her soft A-line skirt that swept into a chapel length train. A Camelot hat of maricaine jersey accented with a double strand of seed pearls held her chapel length silk veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white poinsettia and white carnations accented with red roses, holly berries and leaves.

The maid of honor was Miss Cathy Harless of Lewisburg, W. Va. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Ted Poindexter of Manassas, Va., and Miss Judy Stowers of Galax, Va., both sisters of the bride, and Mrs. Rick Hall of Huntington, W. Va., sister-in-law of the groom. The flower girl was little Miss Rhonda Sue Stepp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Stepp. All the attendants wore matching formal length, A-line gowns of forest green polyester knit, styled with fitted bodice, empire waistline, a high lace neckline and long tapered sleeves extending into deep lace cuffs.

Edd Nolan served as the best man for

Mr. Hall. Ushers were Rick Hall, Randall Carpenter, who lit the tapers, and Johnny Ray Turner. The ringbearer was Master Jeff Zevely, nephew of the groom.

Mrs. Stowers was attired in a formal length gown of forest green polyester featuring a V-neckline, fitted bodice, accented with matching accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Mrs. Hall wore a formal length gown of turquoise polyester that featured a high neckline bodice and a pleated skirt and matching jacket, accented with matching accessories and a white carnation corsage.

The wedding was under the direction of Mrs. Mae Stallard.

After the wedding, a reception was held in the social hall of the church.

The bride was graduated from Williamson High School with the class of '68 and is a graduate of Marshall University with a degree in business administration. She is employed with the circuit court of Mingo county. She also is an active member of the First Baptist Church of Williamson where she is presently serving as a member of the Board of Christian Education. She also is active in the community where she serves as president of the Tug Valley Jr. Woman's Club.

Mr. Hall was graduated from McDowell High School in 1967 and Marshall University in 1971 with a B. A. degree in Social Sciences. He was a member of the Marshall University baseball team and of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Social Fraternity. He received his Master's degree from Eastern Kentucky University in the field of Educational Psychology and is presently in charge of counseling services at the Southern West Virginia Community College Williamson campus.

Avoid Waste Feeding Hay Bales or Stacks

Harvesting and feeding hay in large round bales and stacks has really caught on in Kentucky the past couple of years. Cattlemen are finding that this system of handling hay saves a lot of time and labor, notes Curtis Absher, Extension beef cattle, specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"In the past, the large bales and stacks have been used mainly for feeding cows," says Absher. "This year, however, many farmers are using them to winter lightweight calves."

The UK specialist recommends using some type of feeding rack made of heavy wood or steel to avoid waste when feeding large hay packages to calves. Calves should have continuous access to the hay, but they will bed down in it and trample a lot of it into the ground if feeding racks are not used.

Calves wintered on hay also need supplemental protein and energy if they are to make adequate gains, according to Absher. "For calves weighing around 500 pounds to gain a pound and a half per day, they should be fed two to three pounds of shelled corn and one-half to one pound of protein supplement per day in addition to all the hay they'll eat," he points out.

Absher says feeding racks should also be used for feeding large hay packages to cows which are nursing calves, since these cows should have continuous access to hay.

Dry cows, however, do not need hay in front of them all the time. Absher says dry cows need only 16-18 pounds of hay per head per day, although they will usually eat more if they can. Thus, many farmers who feed large bales to dry cows have been able to hold down waste without using feeding racks by giving the cows only as much hay as they need. These farmers allow access to one foot of perimeter of a large bale or stack for each dry cow, and provide a new hay package only often enough to meet the daily feed requirements of the cows.

For example, a farmer with 25 dry cows who has large bales with feeding space on the perimeter of 25 feet per bale would feed one bale at a time. If the bale weighs 1,000 pounds, it will provide 40 pounds of hay per head. If the farmer wants to provide 20 pounds per head per day (allowing for some waste), he will give the cows a bale once every two days.

Absher says that in most cases, cows wintered on hay will not need supplemental protein. However, they will need a vitamin and mineral supplement. Vitamin A and phosphorus supplementation are especially important.

Cattlemen feeding hay can more easily determine what supplemental nutrients are needed by their animals by having a forage sample tested through the University of Kentucky's forage testing program. Information on forage testing is available from local county Extension offices.

The Versatility of Wood

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
(UK College of Agriculture)

Since the first days of settlement, Americans have been blessed with trees. From the wood of the tree came shelter, warmth, food, and material for furniture, tools, and vehicles of conveyance. Pioneer babies were rocked in cradles of wood, and it was in boxes of wood that they, their parents, and ancestors were finally buried. Without the abundance of trees and their products this nation, undoubtedly, would have never attained the pre-eminence and greatness it now enjoys.

Even today, with all our brick, stone, plastics, and synthetics, wood is still one of the best construction materials available, notes Ralph Lewis, Extension forestry specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. It ranks among the most beautiful of materials and, according to the National Forests Products Association, the production of lumber requires the least energy consumption and pollution when compared with the production of other common construction materials.

To give an example, it takes only about 430 kilowatt hours of electricity or its equivalent to produce a ton of lumber. A ton of steel requires over six times that amount of energy and a ton of aluminum needs almost 40 times that of wood.

Then, after construction, wood keeps on working to save energy. As an insulator against the cold of winter or the heat of summer, wood is four times more efficient than cinder block of the same thickness, six times more efficient than brick, 15 times more efficient than concrete or stone, 400 times more efficient than steel, and 1770 times more efficient than aluminum.

Not only is wood the best natural insulator of any commonly used building materials, but also advances in design of wood-frame construction permit other insulating materials to be used to the best advantage—air spaces and added insulating materials within the frame. Comparative tests between wood-frame and masonry construction in several states have shown that masonry structures consistently require more fuel to maintain the interior temperatures at desired levels. Whether heating in summer or cooling in winter, the tests showed fuel-saving advantages ranging from 18 to 30 percent.

When it comes to conserving energy and money, wood is a winner. Whether used in the construction of houses or the manufacture of furniture, it will, if given protection, withstand the wear and tear of generations. Houses built of wood more than a century ago still stand—as sturdy and substantial as ever. There are also furniture pieces and wooden tools in existence that were made in colonial America.

Highly workable and lending itself to a thousand uses, wood has a unique charm and a singular beauty. It is a renewable resource that can be maintained year after year by good forest management. The tree from which it comes filters impurities from the air and releases a surplus of oxygen upon which all animate life depends.

Wood is not only versatile, but also vital.

Extension Service News

By FRANCES H. PITTS
(County Extension Agent)
Where can you get up-to-date plans for a new home, a new tobacco barn, or new livestock facilities? Last year many people requested plans from the Farm Building Plan Service provided by the University of Kentucky's Department of Agricultural Engineering.

A total of 6,121 plans were requested from the plan service in 1974. This is the highest number ever, and is about a 50 percent increase over 1973.

More than 400 different plans for items ranging from small storage sheds to barns to trailers are available through the plan service. They are listed in a catalog available without charge from local County Extension Offices or from the Plan Service, Agricultural Engineering Department, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. 40506. There is small charge for the actual blueprints, the amount depending on the number of pages in each set.

CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS
The Drift Woman's Club met March 3 in the clubhouse with Mrs. Bill Ward, president, presiding. The devotional was given by Miss Ruby Akers.

Officers elected for 1975 are: President, Mrs. Sophia Cahill; vice-president, Mrs. Lloyd Stumbo; second vice-president, Mrs. Bill Ward; recording secretary, Miss Ruby Akers; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Glen Ward; treasurer, Mrs. Nick Cooley; parliamentarian, Mrs. McKinley Little.

Plans were completed for the inter-club dinner to be held in the club house, March 17.

Miss Ruby Akers and Mrs. Lloyd Stumbo are serving on the Floyd County Friends of Kentucky Educational Television mini-board, and Miss Akers gave a report on the first meeting they attended. Enjoyed was a tape of Miss Chloe Gifford's speech during her recent appearance on KET.

Mrs. Demoris Martin, hostess, served refreshments to Mrs. Bill Ward, Miss Ruby Akers, Mrs. Glen Ward, Mrs. Sophia Cahill, Mrs. McKinley Little, Mrs. Nick Cooley and Mrs. Harry Martin.

Library Notes

Coming soon to the Floyd County Library:

"The Romance of Atlantis," by Taylor Caldwell. Miss Caldwell wrote this when she was 15, but her grandfather would not let her publish it because he refused to believe she had not copied the work of some adult. In the story, Atlantis is a technologically advanced culture, but one that is failing even as its social and political strengths are failing. The waters that eventually flooded the continent in no way dampened the interest in the civilization of Atlantis; it is one that lives today.

Also: "The Moneychangers," by Arthur Hailey; "The Last Testament of Lucky Luciano," by Martin Gosch; "Sandition," by Jane Austen; "A Grand Man," by Catherine Cookson; and "Knight's Acre," by Norah Lofts.

Please call the library for information about the book-mobile schedule. Because of weather and breakdowns, we cannot give a schedule in advance, but if you leave your number, we'll be glad to call before the truck leaves.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Clemit Damron, of McDowell, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Judy Kaye, to Mr. Randy Looney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Junice Looney, of Pikeville.

The bride-elect is a graduate of McDowell High School and is now a senior, majoring in music at Pikeville College. Mr. Looney is a graduate of Pikeville College and is presently employed by United Parcel Service in Pikeville.

The ceremony will be solemnized June 14, at 2 p.m., in the Left Beaver Regular Baptist Church at Hite. The gracious custom of open church will be observed.

Spring Folk Fest Slated at London

By HELEN PRICE STACY

The cultural affairs committee of Sue Bennett College in London, the Laurel county seat, will host its second Sue Bennett Folk Festival, April 3-5.

"This will be a part of the Kentucky Bicentennial celebrations," Mrs. Don Chesnut, festival chairman, said. "We will have a wide variety of crafts, folk art and paintings on exhibit."

Invitations have been extended to artists throughout the Commonwealth in an effort to make this year's event even more successful than the initial festival.

Said Mrs. Chesnut: "James Trantham, ballad singer from North Carolina, will perform during the week, as will other entertainers. We also will have films, including those by Appal Shop."

Harry Caudill, Whitesburg attorney and author, is scheduled for an appearance, as is poet Jim Wayne Miller. There will be woodcarvers, quilters, weavers, potters and others adept in the region's folk arts.

Since creative persons are highly versatile, most of those in London for the festival, either as exhibitors or visitors, will take time out to learn about the county and its people.

There are several places to visit which were included in the 1971 "Survey of Historic Sites in Kentucky." They are:

- The administration building on the Sue Bennett campus, built in 1896, when the institution was called Women's Industrial Training School;
- Ball's Chapel, Levi Jackson Wilderness Road State Park, dating from 1881 when it was a log Methodist Church;
- The "Barn," built in 1945 as a replica of pre-Civil War two-pen log barn and displaying early-day tools;
- Manor House, now a mountain life museum and originally the home of Edward Hopkins, dating from 1860;
- McHargue Water Mill, 1812; reconstructed 1938;
- The curiously shaped rock for which Rockcastle River is named;
- Two 1880s section houses once used by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad;
- The Twin Branch Methodist Church built prior to 1860.

The spring festival will be a time for discovering old ways with a nine-patch of drunkard's path, a new landscape artist or young poet or musician, and also a time for rediscovering history in the region of the great Wilderness Trail.

For further information write to Mrs. Don Chesnut, 110 Skyline Drive, London, Ky. 40741 of phone 606-864-4235.

Vets Student Loans Are Made Available

Veterans attending college under the GI bill and who experience economic difficulties are eligible to apply for a loan up to $600 in one academic year from the Veterans Administration.

Robert F. Welch, director of the regional office of the VA in Louisville, said the loans were available as a result of new legislation enacted in December.

The VA has also made it easier for student veterans to secure a loan by requiring only two rejections from local lenders for a guaranteed student loan instead of the previous five rejections.

Welch said the effective date for the loan program was January 1 but that all eligible veterans, wives, widows and children will be considered for initial loans based upon the full amount of their tuition and all other costs of attendance anticipated for the entire 1974-1975 academic year.

Under the new law, those granted loans will be required to sign promissory notes agreeing to repayment of principal, plus 8 per cent interest. Repayment will be delayed while the student is attending classes at least on a half-time basis, but installments must start nine months after the student ceases less than half-time enrollment. Full repayment must be made within 10 years and nine months after that date. Interest does not accrue until the required beginning date of repayment.

The student applicant must have exhausted all efforts to obtain student loans administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Welch said forms to apply for the loan are available from the Veterans Administration, 600 Federal Place, Louisville, 40202, through Vet Reps on Campus, or through service organization representatives.

Crippling disorders prevent almost one in six Americans from leading what is termed a "normal" life, the Easter Seal Society reports.

NOTED SPEAKER IN VISIT

Langley.—The Rev. Ottvar Berg, nationally known speaker, and Mrs. Berg visited Mrs. Marcella Bailey here last Wednesday while en route to South Carolina where Mr. Berg had a speaking engagement. The minister, who is a native of Norway and a resident of Russellville, Ky., is widely known for his lecture, "What's Right with America." He was scheduled to speak here at the 1974 Red, White and Blue Day which Mrs. Bailey founded, but because of circumstances beyond his control was prevented from arriving here for the occasion.

On Panel of Judges At Alice Lloyd Pageant

Nell Lawson, of the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club, served as a judge at the Miss Alice Lloyd 1975 Pageant at Pippa Passes, March 6. This was the first Miss Kentucky preliminary pageant to be held at Alice Lloyd College.

Nine girls competed in evening gown, swimsuit and talent presentations. Miss Alice Lloyd 1975 is Zena Mullins, of Amburgey, Kentucky.

The panel of judges also included Jim Cox, of Ashland, and Gary Burns, of Wise, Virginia.

Barbie Liedecker, a new member of the club from Pittsburgh, accompanied Mrs. Lawson to the pageant.

Miss Sturgill, Mr. Akers Wed

The marriage of Miss Rose Ann Sturgill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Sturgill, of Harold, Ky., and Mr. Hobert Akers, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Akers, of Virgie, Ky., was solemnized at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 7.

The bride chose the date of Feb. 7 for her wedding because it was the 29th wedding anniversary of her parents. The vows were exchanged in the Coal Run Church of Christ. The gracious custom of open church was observed.

The sanctuary was enhanced with clusters of emerald ferns and arrangements of snowy gladioli spears and carnations tinted with emerald green. E. W. Damron, minister of the church, officiated.

Preceding the ceremony, Roma Lou McClanahan, the bride's former music teacher, presented a program of wedding music and accompanied her daughter, Marcie McClanahan, who sang "A Time For Love" and "If."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of peau de soie and Chantilly lace fashioned with a high scalloped neckline and Shepherdess sleeves. The A-line skirt was accented with a ruffle of Chantilly lace which extended into a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was caught to a tiara adorned with sequins and pearls. She carried a white Bible given to her by Mrs. Vernon Sanders, of Pikeville, and a colonial bouquet of white carnations, red roses and white satin streamers.

Mary Alice Lakin, matron of honor, wore a formal gown of light green silk styled with an empire bodice and A-line skirt.

Linda Rasnick, of Pikeville, and Lou Ann Akers, of Virgie, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They wore emerald green formal gowns and carried yellow bouquets made identically to that of the honor attendant's.

David Kiser, of Pikeville, served as best man. David Rasnick, of Pikeville, and Marcus Sturgill, cousin of the bride, served as groomsmen and seated the guests.

The mother of the bride wore a pale blue and white knit ensemble with matching accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore an emerald green knit ensemble, complementing accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

A reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church immediately following the ceremony. Dorothy Sturgill, Bernice Mason, Mary Damron and Mary Evelyn Thompson were in charge of reception arrangements and served as aides.

Miss Fran Ratliff and Miss Patricia Adkins, both of Pikeville, registered the guests. Ruth Scott, of Pikeville, and Dorothy Honeycutt, of Ashland, were in charge of the decorations.

Following the wedding trip, the newlyweds are residing at Harold.

Music Instructors Leading Observances In County Schools

Mrs. Kathryn S. Frazier, Floyd county chairman for the first national Music in Our Schools Day observance tomorrow (Thursday), said this week that all music teachers and band directors in the county are participating in the event.

She added that attendance by parents of programs in observance of the day is important, since the event is designed to build in their children a lifelong relationship with music. Locally, the program will be held at the elementary school auditorium at 2 p.m. Thursday.

The program planned here Sunday afternoon at Prestonsburg Community College to honor the late Jesse Elliott, who pioneered music education in the Floyd county schools, is a part of the Music in Our Schools observance.

Nationally, the Music in Our Schools Day is being sponsored by the Music Educators National Conference, Vienna, Virginia.

Floyd Library Favors 'Breath of Fresh Air'

We at the Floyd County Library agree wholeheartedly with the Times' editorial (March 5, 1975) and with Mrs. Martin and I'm sure with many of our readers in Floyd County. We could stand a breath of fresh air after the stagnation of "best seller" fiction, "Watergate" and crime expose.

Unfortunately we have found that many of the popular books of the past are no longer in print and so are not available to us. And, since we are a relatively young library, established in the middle 1950's, we didn't have access to many of the earlier books even then.

In recent years, we have been fortunate enough to receive contributions of books from many of our readers. This has helped us to accumulate many of the older works of fiction.

It is evident from the response elicited by your editorial that many of these books are still in existence and being read. Please share them with us! We'll be glad to accept any of these books (hardback or paperback) and add them to our collection.

Soil Tests Save On Fertilizer Cost

Phosphorus and potash needed for growing crops in Kentucky may be in short supply again in 1975. So says Lloyd Murdock, Extension soils specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"There has been some increase in phosphorus production during the past year, and supplies of potash should be about the same as last year," says Murdock. "However, prices for the materials will tend to be higher this year than in 1974."

Since prices will be higher, you can save money by applying only the amounts of phosphorus and potash actually needed by your crops. Murdock emphasizes that the best way to find out what amounts are needed is through soil testing.

"A soil test will tell you where you're starting from when you apply fertilizer," says the UK specialist. "You need to know how much phosphorus and potash your soil already has before you can decide how much to apply."

Fertilizing with phosphorus and potash will usually pay off well on soils testing low in these nutrients. Fields that test in the medium range or higher could probably get by without an application and not be hurt much this year unless they are used for growing a silage crop, according to Murdock.

The UK specialist also points out that you can save fertilizer when growing row crops on soils testing low in phosphorus and potash if you apply these materials in the row. "Compared to broadcasting the fertilizer, application in the row will provide equal yield response with only 65-75 percent as much fertilizer on these soils," says Murdock. "For soils testing medium or above, however, broadcast application is just as efficient as application in the row."

For soils testing high in phosphorus and potassium, there is no advantage to fertilizing with these materials. "It is often possible to go a year or more without applying phosphorus or potash on these soils," Murdock explains. "The important thing is to test the soil each year to make sure the supply of these nutrients in the soil doesn't drop."

Information on soil testing is available from your local County Extension Office.

Endorses Editorial Against Textbook 'Filth'

Editor, The Times:

Your recent editorial critical of the profane, obscene and anti-christian material in the Kanawha county, W. Va. textbooks was heart-warming, especially so since yours is the only publication in the area that I have observed taking a stand against this filth.

I have come into possession of some of the controversial material used and I find it thoroughly disgusting and repulsive. The name of the Lord is taken in vain many times, plus such other gutter-type stuff as "bastard," "bitch," "son of a bitch" and "whore." In fact, there is an entire newspaper-size sheet filled with such stuff.

It is so frustrating to have to try and make a case against stuff that obviously should be rejected by 100 pct. of the people. Why not just take the kids for a round of public outhouses and let them take in the whole scene, graffiti, aroma and all? Perhaps this would get them into a more receptive mood for what they are trying to teach them. The fact that so many people are willing to accept this stuff is more disturbing than the stuff itself.

If the black people are going to let the NAACP push this into our schools as black culture, they are giving the segregationists their best argument they have ever had for segregation.

It is equally disturbing to find the leading daily paper of the state defending this garbage, especially so after it had used untold thousands of words moralizing about Watergate which, unsavory as it was, pales into insignificance in comparison to this garbage, which when force-fed to our students undermine every moral, Christian and human value we have ever known, the very fiber upon which the foundation of our great country so precariously rests during this era of low member or non-moral standards. It is time for every concerned citizen and Christian to raise his or her voice in protest.

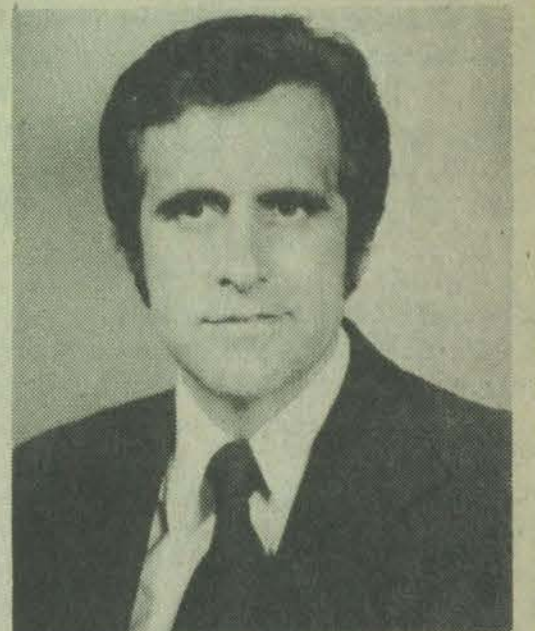

Remember—it is Kanawha county today, and just might be Floyd county next.

TREES AID OUR ENVIRONMENT

It's tree planting time again and, according to Jim Newman, Extension forester with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, when a landowner sets out a sapling or plants a new forest he is not only providing for future shade or financial security, but may also be contributing to the future quality of life in other ways.

Trees have long been recognized for their role in soil and water conservation, but only in recent years has their importance in producing the oxygen we breathe in and consuming the carbon dioxide we breathe out been realized. This transformation, which means so much to animal and human health, takes place in the leaves through the process of photosynthesis.

As Newman explains it, photosynthesis is the food manufacturing process carried on by plants whereby water absorbed by the roots and carbon dioxide taken from the air are combined to form a simple sugar. As the word "photo" implies, light supplies the energy. Oxygen is given off as a by-product.

And how much oxygen do trees produce? Newman says that scientists have estimated that for every pound of wood a tree produces, it consumes almost two pounds of carbon dioxide and releases about a pound and a half of oxygen into the atmosphere to be breathed by man and animals. This becomes important, he adds, when one considers that the average man consumes about one pound of oxygen daily. These same scientists have also estimated that an acre of healthy, well-managed trees can supply the daily oxygen needs of 18 humans.

However, only young and vigorously growing trees can produce this amount of oxygen, Newman points out. As a forest matures, it becomes less efficient as a producer of excess oxygen, as more and more is used by decaying vegetative matter and increased respiration. Mature trees and oldgrowth forests may consume as much or more oxygen than they produce. Thus, harvesting and use of mature trees not only keeps our forests young and vigorous but also keeps the environment in a healthy condition. Therefore, the planting of trees and the natural establishment of new forests is doubly important.

Trees and plants, Newman continues, also absorb some ozone and sulphur dioxide from the air, but he adds that overdoses of these pollutants will kill them.

All this should be reason and encouragement enough for homeowners and landowners to plant a tree or establish a patch of woods on their premises. Developers of parks, parkways, and subdivisions will also do well to include trees in their plans, not only for the amount of precious oxygen they can manufacture, but also because they can make any area more beautiful, livable, and desirable.

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

In the battle to clean up the atmosphere, trees have been proven to be an ally. They help make the environment healthy and our world in general a much more pleasant place. With these being facts instead of fancies, everyone should take a greater interest in trees and, whenever possible, plant one.

Red Cross Drive Plans Are Told

A countywide organization has been formed for the current Red Cross fund drive, it was announced this week by Sallye L. Clark, of Prestonsburg, county chairman.

The drive chairman and Ella Noel White, executive secretary of Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, said an extra effort will be made to reach the county's 1975 goal of $4,700.

Although Floyd county has often failed to subscribe the modest goals set for it, the Red Cross has never failed Floyd county or any other part of the world in their time of need, they pointed out.

Special gifts chairman is E. B. May, Jr., of Prestonsburg, who will contact business offices for contributions. Community chairmen named as of last week follow:

Mrs. Bonnie Walters, Emma; Mrs. Golda Boyd, Harold-Betsy Layne; Mrs. Jerry Frost, Allen; Mrs. Alma Souleyrette, Wheelwright; Mrs. Ora Reynolds, Auxier; Mrs. Avanelle C. Carroll Says Highway Surfacing This Spring To Total $9.5 Million

Bids on highway resurfacing projects totalling $9.5 million will be taken this spring by the Bureau of Highways, Gov. Julian M. Carroll announced today. This amount is expected to provide resurfacing for about 430 miles of state-maintained highways and shoulder treatment for 113 miles of interstate highways. Gov. Carroll explained that this program is financed totally with state funds and affects only state-maintained highways. It does not include similar activities funded by special programs, such as county road aid, rural secondary or municipal aid. Carroll said, "While a limited amount of mileage on coal-haul roads is included, the $20 million I have made available for a special coal-haul road program will not be used to fund any part of this program."

The governor said he recognizes the resurfacing needs of state highways are more than $9.5 million can meet. "If subsequent review of our revenues shows we can add to this program I will be delighted to approve any other projects we can afford," he said. The 113 miles of shoulder treatment on older sections of I-64 and I-75 will provide resurfacing for worn shoulders. This is the first time these sections have required such treatment since they were constructed. Highway Commissioner John C. Roberts said, "Considering the problems the economy is creating for all highway activities, we are very pleased with this resurfacing program. We have had a rather mild winter, at least so far, and that has helped." Funds available will be distributed equitably among the various regions of the state. Specific projects are selected on the recommendations of the Bureau's professional engineering staff, Roberts added.

Highway officials say they have seen some evidence of greater competition for road contracts. This leads them to expect better bids than they would have received last year. At the same time they recognize the threat to commodity prices presented by prospective taxes on imported oil. Roberts said, "All our program projections are complicated by the uncertainties of both revenues and costs." Resurfacing contracts are usually let as early in the year as possible since they must be completed before cold weather makes the use of hot bituminous material impossible. Bureau specifications show a cut-off date of Nov. 15 for surfacing activities.
