

Severance Guidelines Broadened

Fiscal Court Study Seen As Tax Usage Restrictions Eased

County Judge Henry Stumbo said here this week that the recent broadening of guidelines for the use of coal severance tax funds in the several coal-producing counties was long overdue but none the less gratifying even at this late date.

The Legislative Severance Tax Advisory Committee headed by State Representative W. J. Reynolds, of Allen, last month asked for a clarification of its powers and how the severance funds may be spent, citing pressure from the counties to use the money for roads and bridges as well as for the recreation and industrial sites that had earlier been given top priority.

The broadened guidelines were announced, early last week, by Finance Commissioner William Scent at the direction of Governor Carroll. Soon thereafter, the advisory committee approved 36 projects involving $1.5 million, and these ranged from repair of the Ohio county courthouse roof to landing strips, industrial sites, landfills and a pipeline for a water district.

Road projects now may be included in the eligible categories, and Judge Stumbo indicated he favors work of this kind where it is justified. "The fiscal court, of course, will make the final decision," he added.

Asks $382,500 In Girl's Death

For the death of his daughter in an auto-train crash at a Price railway crossing last October John A. Collins as administrator of her estate filed suit in the Floyd circuit court last Friday, asking a total of $382,500 damages.

Named defendants in the action were the C. & O. Railway Co.; its employee, D. M. Hutchinson, of Martin; Danny R. Justice, of Ligon, driver of the auto in which Miss Collins was a passenger, and Anthony W. Caudill, of Hi Hat, owner of the car.

The plaintiff alleges that both the trainman and the driver of the car were careless and negligent, that the engine pulling several coal cars backed across KY 122 at the point of crossing the tracks, at night.

The suit asks $345,000 "for the wrongful death" of Miss Collins; $35,000 for pain and suffering, and $2,500 funeral expenses.

(Damage suit reports state only the claims made by the plaintiff.)

Warrants, Suits Name Ken Lane In Floyd, Pike

Ken Lane and his Pikeville-based Ken Lane Construction Company are in trouble in both Floyd and Pike counties.

Last week three felony warrants were issued in Pike, accusing Lane of "theft of labor," and a fourth charged him with being a fugitive from justice in connection with a Florida indictment.

In circuit court here two suits were filed against him last week. Sterling Tackett, of Teaberry, in one of the suits seeks to recover $68,000 which he claims to have paid Lane contracted to build the house for a total of $103,000, payable in three installments of $34,000 each. Tackett claims he has paid $68,000 and that construction has not been completed.

Moreover, he says, Lane has not paid suppliers for materials that have gone into the building, and these suppliers have filed liens against the structure.

The second Floyd county suit was filed by Raleigh Spradlin, doing business as the M. R. Trucking Company. He sued Lane individually, the construction company and East Kentucky Ready-Mix at Harold for $6,500. Spradlin claims this amount is due him for trucking stone from Olive Hill to Harold and for monies he paid other trucks for Lane.

Avery Lowe, of Corn Fork, near Lancer, is one of the workers who says he holds cold checks for labor. His wife said he has three $165 checks and another for $235.37—all returned by the bank. She also said her husband has done $1,000 worth of work for which he has not received even a cold check.

Disabled Miner Works Garden from "Bed"

Monroe Booth, lying on his mobile cot, is pictured tending a patch of pepper plants, part of the garden he raises at his home at Lancer.

A lot of the folks at Lancer raise gardens, and at this time of year most of the "over the fence" conversation between neighbors concerns such matters as the conditions and growth rates of different vegetables and general inquiries as to "how's your garden doin'?"

In this respect Monroe Booth is no different. In a narrow garden plot which follows the fence almost completely around his home, he raises all the beans, cucumbers, lettuce, tomatoes, onions, and peppers that he and his wife Eveline could ever use in a winter.

But what distinguishes him from the other neighborhood gardeners is that he almost single-handedly tends the garden while lying on a cot.

This Town . . . That World

The Postal Service got the new fiscal year off to a rousing start by whacking us with another postage raise. All they need to do now to destroy us all is to change all the zip codes.

Sometime tomorrow (Thursday) an American and a Russian, free for the moment of mundane attachments, will shake hands and, we think, be sincere in their greetings. It is quite possible that the ordinary Joes of both countries would be friends if they could escape the power, the ambitions, prejudices and fears of their governments. But the situation is like a quicksand from which nations seem unable to free themselves.

THE FEATHERED PARAGON

Transfer of Reynolds Ends Appointment Controversy

The months-long controversy over the appointment of W. J. (Bud) Reynolds, son of State Representative W. J. Reynolds, of Allen, as manager of the Manpower Services office here was believed last week to have ended.

The expected end of the row came with Reynolds' transfer—reportedly at his request—to Lexington where he will be assistant manager of the Manpower Services office, and the appointment of James L. Reed, of Salyersville, one of the three members of the Prestonsburg office staff who protested Reynolds' promotion here, to head the Prestonsburg office.

Reed, Thomas M. Hereford, III, and William L. Baldridge, Jr. charged that Reynolds' appointment was "political," alleging that he had had only two years' experience, far less than theirs, and that he holds only a bachelor's degree while both Hereford and Reed have their master's.

The state Personnel Board ruled last March that Reynolds' promotion here was not political. The case later reached the Franklin circuit court where it was dismissed, but further action was reportedly in the making.

Commissioner of the Bureau of Crushed in a slatefall while working in a West Virginia coal mine in 1950, Booth was paralyzed, losing the use of his legs, and for the best part of two years, spent time in hospitals in Charleston, W. Va. and Richmond, Virginia.

Since that time, Booth has adapted to the use of the wheelchair and his cot mounted on roller legs allows him to move about in the yard with surprising maneuverability, propelled by a powerful set of arms. Pockets attached to the cot carry garden and other tools along with a pipe and pouch of tobacco.

Much of the Lancer man's adaptability must relate to his background and love of gardening. Raised on a farm near Whitehouse, Ky., Booth said, "I've gardened just about all my life." He is a believer in the effect of phases of the moon on gardens. "My grandpa Ward believed in the old Farmer's Almanac—fished by it, farmed by it. I guess the only things he ever read were the almanac and the Bible."

Like his grandfather, Booth is also an avid fisherman. His fishing boat is docked at Dewey Lake so he can enter it with little difficulty in his wheelchair and he and son, Jackie, go "whenever we get the chance."

Monroe Booth, for all his handicaps, is a cheerful man. One thing puzzles him. "How," he wonders, "can able-bodied men say they can't have a garden?"

'Most Happy Fella' Is Next On Music Theatre Calendar

"The Most Happy Fella," the musical adaptation by Frank Loesser of the Pulitzer-prize-winning comedy, "They Knew What They Wanted," will be the next presentation at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre.

The show, which contains a record-breaking 35 musical numbers and was an overwhelming Broadway hit for 86 weeks will open at Jenny Wiley on July 16 and continue through July 27, playing at 8:30 nightly, Wednesday through Sunday, except Fridays, when "Godspell" is presented.

Success of "The Most Happy Fella" in New York was extraordinary for a show that, while being in popular musical comedy style, came close to being what is a dirty word at Broadway box offices—an opera. Like Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Loesser's "The Most Happy Fella" scales operatically emotional heights in its music, and nearly every word of it is sung, with few straight-spoken lines.

The entire score and dialogue for the show was written by Loesser, who set the action as it was in the prize-winning play by Sidney Howard, in the grape-hung, sunny hills of the Napa Valley of California, where a discouraged San Francisco waitress has come to marry the owner of a vineyard whom she has never met but whose postal courtship and handsome photo have promised security and happiness.

The plot relates the comic and near-tragic complications that ensue when the waitress discovers that she has been tricked by the vineyard owner. He is neither young nor handsome but is an aging, breezy Italian who had mailed his prospective bride the photo of his young foreman.

Dr. Benjamin Middaugh will be starred as Tony, the earthy Italian grape grower, and Barbara Thompson as Rosabella, his mail order bride. Robert Jackson Jackson plays the roving foreman rounding out the center of the story.

Their numbers include such tuneful Hit Parade songs as "Standing on the Corner" and "Happy to Make Your Acquaintance."

Medical Center Adds to Staff

Dr. Roberto Miranda recently joined the staff of the Highlands Medical Center here, and Lester Rankin has been employed as administrative assistant at the hospital.

Dr. Miranda will be associated with Dr. William B. Cook and Dr. John Ritter, part-time, and will work the emergency room at the hospital, Monday through Friday, from 1 to 5 p.m.

"Dr. Miranda's coming here draws us closer to our goal of 24-hour emergency service," Gene Divine, administrator of the hospital, said last week.

Dr. Miranda, who has worked earlier with Dr. Ritter, is a native of Brazil. He comes here from Harlan, Ky.

As assistant administrator Mr. Rankin's responsibilities will primarily be in the area of finance. He holds a degree in business, with a major in accounting, and the master's degree in health care administration. He completed his residency in West Lafayette, Ind. The Rankins have three children, and they have bought a home here.

Raiders Arrest Two Near Dam

Two Johnson county residents were arrested last Tuesday and charged with liquor violations after officers found them in possession of a quantity of beer at Butcher's Grocery, formerly the Dew Drop Inn, near Dewey Dam.

Ruby Carol Butcher was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale, and John Turner was charged with possession and sale of alcoholic beverages. The arrests were made by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, Commonwealth's Detective Doug Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Linzie Hunt. Forty-five cans of beer were confiscated by the officers, who acted on a search warrant, and Sheriff Lewis said two bottles of whiskey were hastily broken and emptied before the officers could find them. Mrs. Butcher and Turner, both of Williamsport, executed bond the following day.

State Police Trooper Phillip Tucker and Constable Paul Stilton arrested Allen Duncan Saturday after investigating reports of a man at Harold walking about clad only in a pair of shoes. Duncan, a former Louisvillian now residing at Harold, was fined $60 for public indecency and $10 plus court costs for public drunkenness Monday in Magistrate Dewey Roberts' court.

Others booked at the county jail over the past week, charges against each and arresting officers follow:

Anthony Norbet Gross, reckless driving, by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis; Noah Mitchell, assault and battery, by State Trooper Cantrell; Walter C. Harris, theft, a.w.o.l. by Deputy Sheriff James Napier; Nickette Goble, endangerment of a minor, by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis; Palmer Newsome, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriffs J. D. and Melvin Martin; Randy Scott Hamilton, drunk driving, no operator's license, resisting arrest and

How's This for a Start

Mrs. Sarah Hammonds, of Water Gap, fought this 19 1/2-pound carp 45 minutes in the tailwaters of Dewey Dam last Sunday before accepting the help of two men in landing it. But for the fact that the 30-inch fish was hooked on an 8-pound line, she might have completed the job, herself. Mrs. Hammonds had never fished till this summer.

Silt Dam, Road Work Are Sought

"Save our lake before it's too late." is the appeal heading a petition being circulated in Floyd and surrounding counties and later to be submitted to the U. S. Corps of Engineers.

The lake for which help is asked is Dewey. Barry Storm, one of those heading the move, said it is expected that petitions bearing the names of 10,000 area residents will go into the Corps of Engineers' district office at Huntington, W. Va., within a matter of weeks.

The Corps will be asked to approve a combination silt dam and water control installation in the German bridge area of the lake, in the vicinity of where Buffalo Creek, the main tributary, enters the main lake.

Suggested for construction is a silt dam-flood control levee designed to stop the heavy load of silt, plastic jugs and other debris entering the impoundment from the main stream and its largest tributary.

Such an effort, the petition says, "will save the lake before it is completely doomed, like Fishtrap."

(Fishtrap has suffered sedimentation as a result of coal mining to a depth of six or seven feet in one area, and the Corps of Engineers admitted last year after a sedimentation survey that Dewey Lake siltation had at that time been heaviest from Dick's Creek, on upstream.)

The petition suggests that the existing German bridge be replaced and the road level raised. "This," the petition reads,

Water District May Be Stalled As Funds Short

The Water Gap-Bull Creek Water District development may be stalled, this fiscal year, for lack of federal funding.

Curtis Hatfield, district chairman, was told in a letter from Joseph L. McCauley, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District that, although Big Sandy ADD is interested in the Bull Creek project, extension and improvement of the Prestonsburg and Paintsville water systems hold top priority because both are now operating at near-capacity. All available funds this fiscal year may be used on those two systems, he said.

The Water Gap-Bull Creek district has completed all engineering for its development. Although its leaders are disappointed as they face an apparent postponement of the day when the system into that area will be completed, they admitted that increase of the capacity of the Prestonsburg plant does hold No. 1 priority.

That fact is plain, they said, because the water district will be depending upon the Prestonsburg water system for its water supply.

Court Offers To Buy Tracts For Park Site

Site for a proposed mini-park at Minnie consumed much of the attention of the fiscal court at its Monday meeting.

The court voted to offer Palestine Vanderpool $16,500 for a tract of 3.63 acres as a part of the park location and to pay Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stumbo proportionately for other land needed for the project if Mrs. Vanderpool accepts the offer made her.

The bridges at Minnie and Eastern were included in the County Aid Program, and County Judge Stumbo was authorized to contact the Department of Highways in an attempt to get the bridges included in the supplemental road agreement. At the same time, the court reopened the old road from Harold Gap to the road at Boldman.

In other action the court accepted the settlement with Sheriff Joe W. Lewis on tax collections, voted to place $200,000 on deposit with the Bank Josephine for 90 days at 10 per cent interest, and employed till the beginning of the school term David Harmon as light equipment operator.

4th of July Tourney Goes into 5th

The Winners . . . Eastern Kentucky Auto Parts

The annual Fourth of July softball tournament ended on the 5th of July, at 11:30 p.m., with Eastern Kentucky Auto Parts winning over Watts Mobile Homes, of Salyersville. This year, attendance was one of the best and the tournament has become one of the top events of the kind across the state, due to the caliber of play, and with a total of 23 teams from the Floyd County Amateur Softball League, plus teams from Pikeville, Paintsville, Salyersville and West Liberty.

The tourney began July 3 and by the time of the championship game a total of 45 games had been played. Henry Harris, Jr., tournament manager, said this was one of the finest tournaments ever held here. Billy R. Collins, commissioner of the district, commented on the fine brand of play and the sportsmanship of the players. We might also add that the umpiring was outstanding and a special thanks to Tommy Thompson, umpire-in-chief and his staff.

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

This year's tournament had very few runaway games. There were three shut-outs in the last six games. Going into the final day of play there were only 10 teams left in the double-elimination tournament.

On Sunday morning, East Kentucky Auto Parts won over Triple Elkhorn, 9-1; Watts Mobile Homes defeated Kentucky Fried Chicken of Paintsville, 5 to 2; National Mines eliminated Starlite of Pikeville, 2 to 1, and F. S. Vanhoose of Paintsville eliminated Owens Construction Co., 9-4. Going into Sunday afternoon, National Mines won over F. S. Vanhoose Co., 8-1; A & P Coal Co. of Salyersville and eliminated Don-Rons of West Liberty, 6 to 4. Watts Mobile Homes remained the only undefeated team by downing East Kentucky Auto Parts, 7 to 5. National Mines won over Kentucky Fried Chicken of Paintsville, 2-0. Sunday evening, A & P Coal Co. shut out Triple Elkhorn, 4-0, and moving into the final four games of the tournament National Mines won from A & P Coal Co. 6-2, and A & P finished fourth in the tournament with a team record of 6 wins and 2 losses. East Kentucky Auto Parts won over National Mines, 16 to 1, and National Mines finished third with a tournament record of 5 wins, 2 losses.

East Kentucky Auto Parts won over Watts Mobile Homes, 1 to 0, for Watts' first loss of the double elimination tournament. So, in he deciding and championship game, East Kentucky Auto Parts again played Watts Mobile Homes, winning 6 to 4. Watts Mobile Homes, the runner-up, finished in the tournament with a record of 4 wins, 2 losses, while Eastern Kentucky Auto Parts won the championship game and had a tournament record of 6 and 1. East Kentucky Auto Parts has lost only two games all season, losing to the National Mines in regular play and to Watts in the tournament.

Third, Fourth Place Winners

Third place in the annual softball tournament played here was won by the National Mines team, of Wayland (top photo). Fourth place was won by A&P Coal Co., Salyersville (bottom). Photo of the runnerup Watts Mobile Homes team of Salyersville was not available.

Floyd Co. All-Stars Fall to Hazard Team

The West Floyd County Babe Ruth All-Stars lost in the finals of the Babe Ruth All-Star tournament Sunday at the M. C. Napier field to the Hazard All-Stars after defeating Hazard previously as well as the Carr Fork team.

The Floyd county team defeated the eventual tourney champs Thursday, 3-2 after Creig Seals, of the Wayland team pitched a four hitter. In that tournament opener, the Floyd team, down 2-0, came back in the bottom of the fourth inning as George Reynolds singled, Barry King walked, and Tim Branham, of Wayland followed with a double over the left fielder's head to place his team on the scoreboard. Mark Johnson, also of Wayland scored King and Branham with a hit to a right field.

The team defeated Carr Fork Friday, 11-8 putting them into the championship double-header with Hazard. The Floyd county team started out strong in the championship contest with Creig Seals striking out 13 Hazard batters but ultimately lost to the Perry county team.

The Veterans Administration since 1944 has guaranteed some nine million GI home loans valued at more than $112 billion.

Breathing Clinic Slated Open House Preceding Opening

The Big Sandy Breathing Clinic will hold open house, July 17 and 18, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The clinic is part of the McDowell Regional Medical Clinic under the supervision of Jerry Frost, administrator. It will be located in the old laboratory in the McCowell Appalachian Regional Hospital. The Breathing Clinic will officially open for patients on July 21.

The clinic at McDowell will be a treatment center for any person suffering from a chronic lung disease. The diagnostic center for the Breathing Clinic is at Highlands Regional Hospital, Prestonsburg, under the supervision of Dr. Chris Rivera, medical administrator for both breathing clinics.

The program was developed under the direction of Bedford Bird and John Kennedy, who are with United Mine Workers of America, Department of Occupational Health. The Breathing Clinic has been working closely with District 30 and local unions.

The program is an eight day (two hours each day) for two weeks' treatment, instruction, and education experience, followed by a continuing home care plan. The program is designed to give the patient and his family the necessary background to carry on a treatment plan at home. The Breathing Clinic will try to help the patient accept the fact that his condition is not temporary, that it cannot be cured, and that he can expect recurrences of the periods of breathlessness. He can be comforted, however, by the realization that his discomfort can be relieved by the use of medication and various breathing aids.

Any person with a chronic lung problem or interested in the same is invited to the open house. The staff will answer any questions pertaining to the clinic and its program as well as give actual demonstrations of the treatments that will be given in the clinic.

The staff of the Big Sandy Breathing Clinic at McDowell consists of Douglas Fleming, technical administrator for both the clinic in McDowell and Prestonsburg and director of the Diagnostic Center at Highlands in Prestonsburg; Jan Lenker, business administrator for both clinics and director of the Treatment Center at McDowell; Clark Stone, chief respiratory therapist; Don Hoover and Jill Newsome, respiratory therapy technicians.

Was a Crime Committed?

The Ashland Oil Company may have dirtied its corporate hands with more than oil in its political machinations at home and official payoffs abroad. We offer no excuses for this Kentucky-based industrial giant on that score.

But the longer we ponder Ashland Oil's alleged connection with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the more difficult it becomes for us to condemn it.

The charge apparently boils down to this:

The CIA paid Ashland Oil upwards of $100,000 for permitting a CIA agent to pose as a company official while doing undercover work in western Europe over a period of some five years.

Obviously, the CIA asked the company for its cooperation in an area which is a hotbed of espionage and international intrigue. It would seem, also, that the money paid Ashland Oil was reimbursement for the salary of the CIA agent which was initially paid by the company, the more completely to identify the agent as a bonafide employee.

The request for help, mind you, was made by an arm of the government of the United States—an agency which uses its wits, skills and daring in a shadow world overpopulated by enemy counterparts, many or most of whom have as their target this country of ours.

Then, we ask, what is wrong with an American company cooperating in this subterfuge upon which more may have depended than we may ever know?

In these post-Watergate days all government is suspect to many, anathema to some. Crimes have been committed, true, but not all is wrong with America. It is almost certain that the CIA has been careless with the ethics of certain situations and in some cases downright uncaring of right and wrong. But the people of this country need to realize the importance of this agency to the present security and the future existence of the United States.

It is estimated that our 30,000 CIA representatives compete with a giant Soviet spy organization which numbers 400,000 agents. The Russian KGB, which no Soviet newspaper dares to criticize, is going to continue working. Yet there are those in this country who favor disbanding the CIA. These would have us walk a jungle filled with savage beasts, unarmed, deprived of both hearing and sight.

For 30 years now, the Congress has appropriated funds to keep the CIA operating. Now, because of isolated failures and because a few of these 30,000 representatives have failed to maintain the sans peur, sans reproche ideal, even some national leaders would toss into the discard the nation's most vital intelligence apparatus.

This newspaper has no way of knowing the full story, but we have an idea that if the Ashland Oil Company, or any other company, never commits a crime any darker than that of helping this country learn what the other fellow is thinking, whispering and plotting, it deserves a medal rather than a black mark against its reputation.

blurry-eyed, to wonder at the bird. On one occasion I saw him give his mate a morsel. On another, I am told by a member of the household, the cardinal gave food to another bird not of his kind. I marvelled at the nobility of the bird but was saved from bursting into verse about him. While I watched, one day, a sparrow hopped into the feeder and this feathered paragon showed that he is by nature at least half-human, after all. He bristled and actually hissed at the intruder.

Oh, well, as they say—nobody is perfect.

NO HELP THERE

Lenna Moore stopped by this week to commiserate with me about the low supply of grist for my mill. Said he would help out by trying to tell a fish tale but didn't want anybody ever, ever to think he would stoop to lying.

SINGIN' SCHOOL

And "Smoky Joe" Meadows reported that his old sidekick, Ralph Marshall, has lost his voice. "Been going to singin' school and 'pears to have strained his vocal cords," he explained.

Remind me, some time, to tell my experiences at a singing school. I learned all there was to get out of the book but, as one of my fellow-sufferers remarked, "couldn't sing a lick."

I was at the age when boys' voices change and squeak and saw at the oddest moments. So they put me over on the girls' side for the singin' on the last day of school.

I shall not describe the commotion which followed. But I will admit it all came out on a sour note.

Stumbo said he expected to confer Tuesday with officials at Frankfort on the use of Floyd county's severance funds. After that, he will recommend to the fiscal court projects for consideration.

Among the Eastern Kentucky projects approved last week were these:

$106,000 for a housing development in Perry county.

$200,000 to develop an industrial site in Pike county.

$100,000 for an industrial site in Martin county.

$75,000 for a landfill in Pike county.

$54,000 for a Perry county industrial site.

Said Governor Carroll of the counties' use of severance funds:

"Those counties possessing large deposits of coal are not able to fully utilize that land for improvements on which a property tax can be levied for county expenses. When we replace that revenue loss with shared severance tax receipts, we should allow the receipts to be used by the county as they would normally use their local property tax revenue."

U.L., KET Begin TV Series On 'Our County Courthouses'

How is county government put together? What does it do? How is it financed?

These are among the questions to be explored on three 30-minute video tape programs developed by the University of Louisville Urban Studies Center.

Produced under a $14,000 grant from the Kentucky Humanities Council with Kentucky Educational Television (KET), the programs are designed to inform and educate Kentuckians about the workings of county government.

Landis Jones, U of L assistant professor of political science, is narrator for the series. Jones will be joined on the programs by government officials from Kentucky counties who will participate in the program discussions and add their viewpoints.

The first in the "Our County Courthouses" three-program series discussed the structure of county government on KET Monday.

The second program on county government finances and the third program on services are presently scheduled for viewing at 7:30 p.m.

on KET, July 28 and August 25, respectively.

Duplicate video tapes have been prepared and are now available by reservations to any interested organizations or groups in Kentucky through the U of L Urban Studies Center. A set of questions will accompany each program to aid with the discussion on the issues following the showings. Other program materials will also be provided.

To reserve the tapes interested groups should write: Urban Studies Center, University of Louisville, Gardencourt Campus-Alta Vista Road, Louisville, Kentucky 40205 or call (502) 897-5161.

Johnson County Sheriff Indicted On Dozen Counts

Johnson County Sheriff Ray Melvin was named last Wednesday in a dozen grand jury indictments charging him with theft by extortion and of accepting bribes while acting as a public servant.

Two days later, a protective order was issued by the Johnson circuit court to prevent him from interfering with or harassing persons who may be witnesses against him.

The indictments stemmed from bootlegging activities in the county and followed an investigation coordinated by State Police Detective Lt. Chester D. Potter, of Prestonsburg. Commonwealth's Attorney Eugene C. Rice said the sheriff was accused of soliciting bribes in return for not investigating or hindering bootlegging.

Six others were charged in indictments of bribing a public servant. They were listed as Morris Johnson, Jim Pennington, Paul Raymond Tackett, Ed Osborne, Charles (Paudie) Pigg and Herbert Gene Wheeler.

"I am not guilty—I am definitely not guilty," Sheriff Melvin was quoted as saying. This report said Melvin claimed he had been "framed by a bunch of hoodlums."

The protective order issued following the voting of the indictments is intended, it was said, to protect Tackett and his wife, Glenna, who are expected to testify for the Commonwealth when the case against the sheriff comes to trial.

The prosecutor was quoted as saying the Tacketts cooperated with State Police in obtaining recordings of "meetings, payoffs and telephone conversations" which were played for the grand jury.

Rice said Melvin later charged the Tacketts with making threatening phone calls to his home. Melvin then obtained a search warrant for the Tackett residence.

In searching the residence two cans of beer were found, and charges of possession of alcoholic beverages with intent to sell were issued, Rice said.

The attorney called this action an attempt to "intimidate the two bootleggers who are attempting to cooperate."

Arraignment for those indicted is scheduled for July 21.

Rice said earlier that the Tacketts were allegedly told to "pay off or you're out of business."

He said the Tacketts decided to go out of business and help the State Police gather evidence. The investigation was handled out of the State Police headquarters, in Frankfort.

The commonwealth's attorney said five to six hours of electronic surveillance was obtained for the grand jury. Two State Police officers also testified.

"would serve a dual purpose, because when the lake rises as much as five feet above the summer pool Route 194 is closed by water, and persons travelling to and from Johns Creek and Prestonsburg must detour all the way into Pike county where 194 intersects with 119 and brings them into US 23, near Pikeville, which is an estimated 30-mile detour in order to reach Prestonsburg for medical treatment, college work, etc., plus there is no mail delivery during the time of such flooding, sometimes for a period of two weeks or more. Flooding occurs five to six times a year on the average, and is occurring more frequently each year, due to the siltation build-up in Dewey Lake."

Immediate action is asked to prevent siltation from defeating the purposes for which the lake and Jenny Wiley State Park were created at public expense. The petition adds:

"We are advised that federal funds are available to provide the type of facility to prevent siltation" and yet permit coal to be mined. "This alone," it is argued, "should be enough to justify the cost of construction of a silt dam and a badly needed road."

In Pike county a local union claims it has paid $21,000 for remodeling work which has not been done. Another man claimed he paid $20,000 for home construction but that only a "shell" of a house was built.

Lane was quoted by a Williamson Daily News reporter last Saturday as saying in a telephone conversation that he had suffered a heart attack and had been in Central Baptist Hospital, Lexington. "When I left, everything was running smooth," he was quoted as saying.

The reporter also said Lane told him one of the company's vice-presidents is missing, as also is an amount of money ranging from $25,000 to $40,000.

It was said Lane vowed to return to Pike county as soon as possible. "Nobody will lose a cent," he was quoted as saying.

Figures Show Food Stamp Users Less Than Number Eligible

Over half a million more Kentuckians are eligible for food stamps than are receiving them according to statistics released today by the Department for Human Resources (DHR).

As of April, 1975, some 471,430 individuals were using food stamps.

The study, required of all states by the federal government, shows that 512,900 more Kentuckians are eligible.

The estimate is based on a 1973 population estimate and the federal poverty guideline.

Essentially, the estimate is the number of people in Kentucky who fall below 125 per cent of the federal poverty guideline.

The department has launched an extensive outreach program which has been mandated by the federal government. The new outreach will include expansion of staff as well as intensified public relations contracts to reach eligible Kentuckians.

Attached are the statistics for the Eastern region.

Left Beaver Dumps Closed by Court

Garbage dumps in use in the Left Beaver section have been ordered closed by the fiscal court, and prosecution of persons using them has been promised, it was announced this week.

Waste from the area must be hauled to the county landfill on Turkey Creek, either by the franchised Floyd County Sanitation Service or by private trucks which will be required to pay for use of the landfill.

The sanitation service said this week it has approximately 4,000 customers in Magisterial Districts 1, 2 and 3. The Akers Sanitation Service has the franchise in District 4.

Adrian Lafferty, of the Floyd Sanitation Service, said the work is developing satisfactorily. "We're still getting the bugs out, but the people have been very patient," he said.

Letters to the Editor

Liddy, a Modern Hess?

Looks like E. Gordon Liddy is scheduled to be the Rudolf Hess of the Watergate mess. Many of you will remember that during the course of World War II (Governor Wallace, take note) many of the German leaders could not understand why we were so diligently helping Russia when they considered the Russians to be the ultimate threat to future world security. Hess in an attempt to influence the Allied powers commandeered a fighter plane, landing in Scotland to try to convince them of the error of their ways, and because he would not yield or submit to the Russians' position was forced to spend practically all his life in prison.

Apparently, Liddy, who will not bow to Judge Sirica, will be forced to do likewise.

A Young 94

None of the tensions of modern life is reflected in the face of Z. S. (Uncle Dick) Dickerson in this photograph made at his home here last Sunday, a week before his 94th birthday. A firm faith and a calm outlook on the passing scene have kept the lines away.

Although admittedly not as active as he would like to be, Mr. Dickerson every Sunday attends the Community Methodist Church, of which is a charter member, and he takes a daily walk, weather permitting.

Uncle Dick has always been a Floyd countian. He was born in Floyd county, Virginia, July 20, 1881, and has been a resident of Prestonsburg and vicinity since 1908. He and Mrs. Dickerson, the former Bertha Mae Alley, were married June 17, 1906. They have three sons and a daughter, the Rev. J. A. Dickerson, of Olive Hill, Mrs. Josephine Meadows and Fred L. Dickerson, both of Prestonsburg, and Dr. Z. S. Dickerson, Jr., of Harrisonburg, Virginia.

State Program Allots $15,649 For Work Here

Gov. Julian M. Carroll and Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts announced Friday the 1975-'76 Municipal Aid Program for Prestonsburg. The program is based on an anticipated allotment of $15,649 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1975.

It provides for correction of a slip and blacktop resurfacing for Archer Park Drive, initial blacktop surfacing and blacktop resurfacing for Scott Court, blacktop resurfacing for Central Avenue and sidewalk construction for North Lake Drive.

The authorized activities will be carried out by the city, with the Bureau of Highways financing all or a portion of the work in accordance with the Municipal Aid Agreement.

The Municipal Aid Program, which became effective July 1, 1973, is supported by a one-half cent per gallon gasoline tax.

Program Drops 3 Area Stores

Atlanta, Ga.—Three Kentucky grocery stores have been removed from the federal food stamp program because of violations, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) reports.

They were listed as follows:

Eulah Back, of Fritz, Magoffin county, owned by Eulah Back, disqualified for one year, from June 24 after being charged with redeeming food coupons accepted in violation of the food stamp regulations.

Everett Maynard Grocery, of Job in Martin county, owned by Everette Maynard and Mrs. May Maynard, disqualified for one year from June 30. It had been charged with selling ineligible items for food coupons.

Georgia's Grocery, of Harold, owned by Mrs. Georgia Salisbury, disqualified for one year from June 26. It had been charged with selling ineligible items for food coupons.

Robert L. Cunningham, in charge of the Prestonsburg field office of the Food and Nutrition Service, explained that the stores will not be allowed to accept food coupons during their respective disqualification periods.

Because of violations, 16 Kentucky grocery stores were disqualified from the food stamp program during the first six months of 1975, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) reports.

"Considering the fact that there are 6,819 grocery stores in the state authorized to accept food stamps, it is quite obvious that the vast majority of Kentucky grocers are adhering to the regulations of the food stamp program," observed Carl Horn, Kentucky district manager of the Food and Nutrition Service at his office in Prestonsburg.

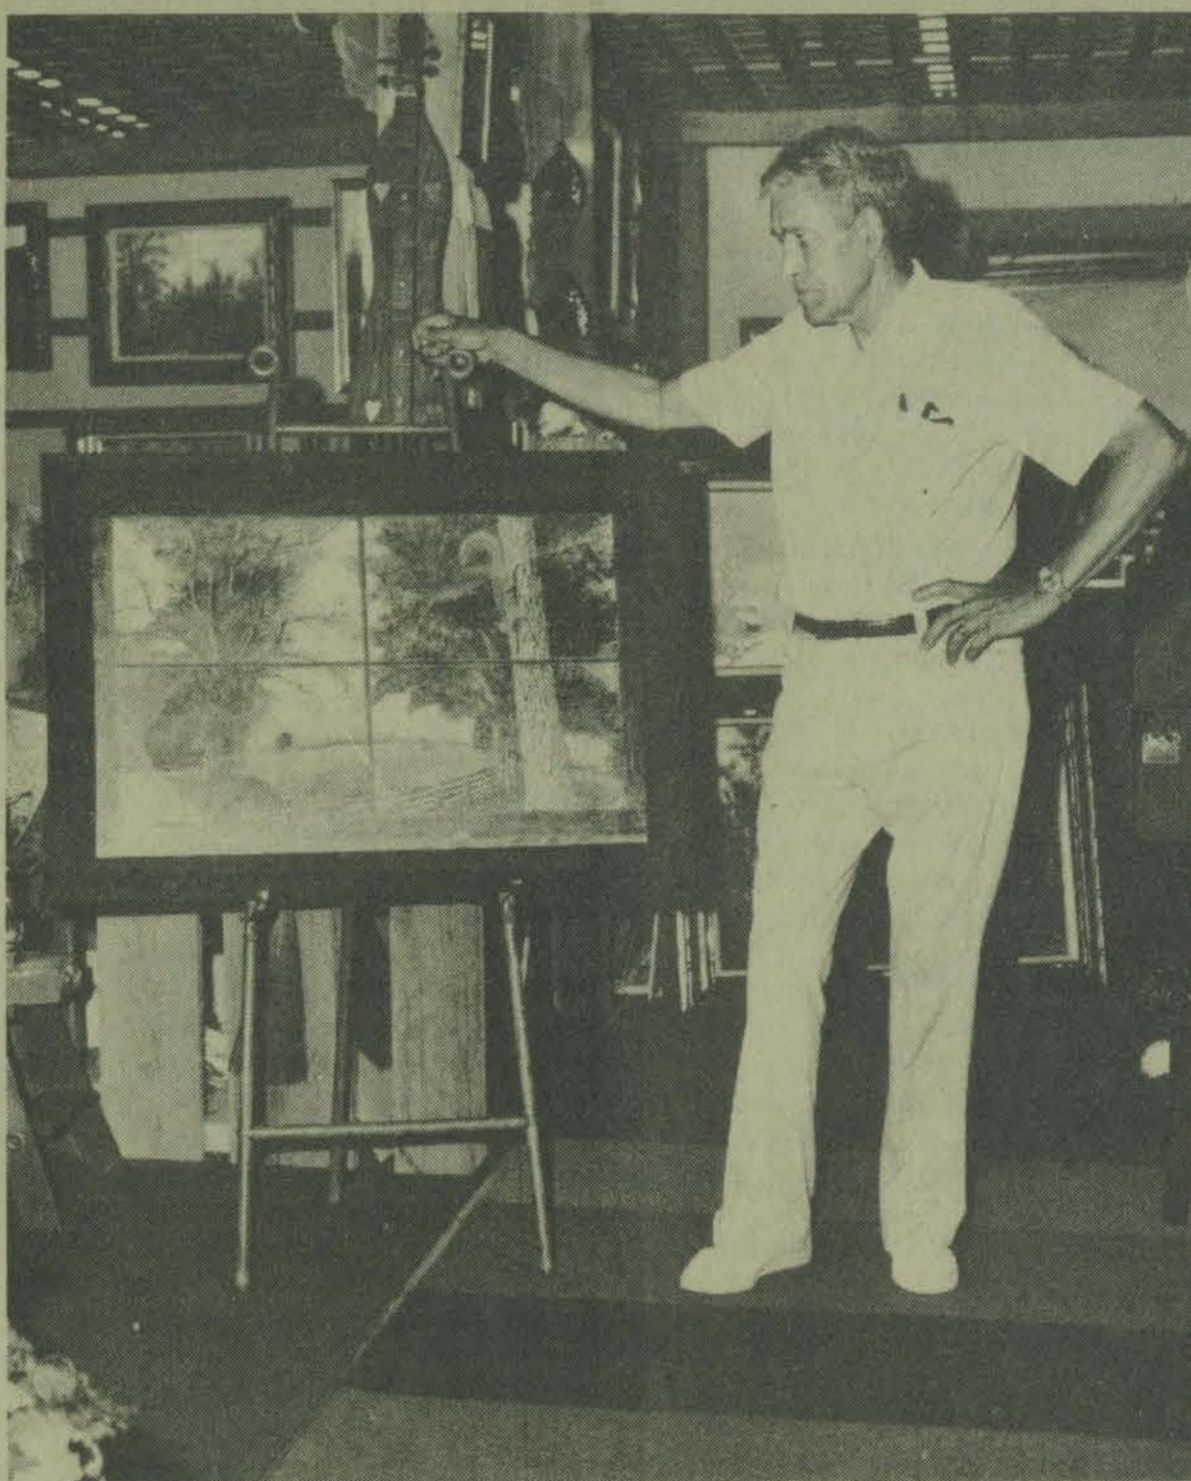

Most of the disqualifications, he said, resulted from stores selling ineligible items for food coupons or discounting stamps for cash. Food stamps, by law, can be used only to buy food, he continued. The only exceptions are garden seed and plants to be used to produce food.

Horn explained that grocers, when applying for authorization to accept food stamps, agree to abide by the rules and regulations of the program. When stores violate the program, they are subject to criminal charges and disqualification from the program.

Horn added that 551,765 low-income Kentucky people are now on the food stamp program. Each month they are issued around $18.9 million in coupons. Of this amount, about $12.7 million is in free or bonus coupons. This is an average of $23 per person in bonus stamps.

VISIT AT PRICE

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Pennington, of Lima, O., visited Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Breeding at Price, recently.

ARTIST HONORED—Kentucky artist, Cliff Johnson, of Morehead, is pictured with another of his award-winning paintings, "Broken Window." The painting won one of five ribbons awarded at the July 4 art festival in Southern Indiana which included about 175 exhibits. It has been chosen, along with 39 other paintings, to hang in the Floyd County Museum for a month. The painting won first place at the Jenny Wiley State Park annual Artists Retreat, and has been accepted through slides for the Big October Show at the World Trade Center in New York City. Johnson's works are displayed at his gallery on East Main Street, Morehead.

Bible-Preaching Week Features Old and New

RIDGECREST, N. C.—"An Old Favorite Reshaped for Our Times," theme of the 1975 Bible-Preaching Conference at Ridgecrest Baptist Conference Center here, illustrates the attempt to blend the "old and the new" in this summer's conferences.

Designed for pastors, staff members, deacons, laymen and their family members, the Bible-Preaching Conference at Ridgecrest is slated for Aug. 2-8.

Harper Shannon, pastor of Huffman Baptist Church in Birmingham, Ala., will be the featured speaker for the evening worship services.

According to Howard Foshee, secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board's church administration department, "This week is an attempt to revive the enthusiasm of the old Bible weeks at Ridgecrest and couple that enthusiasm with the new concepts and approaches in Bible study. Participants will be exposed to a week of warm-hearted preaching, Bible study and music."

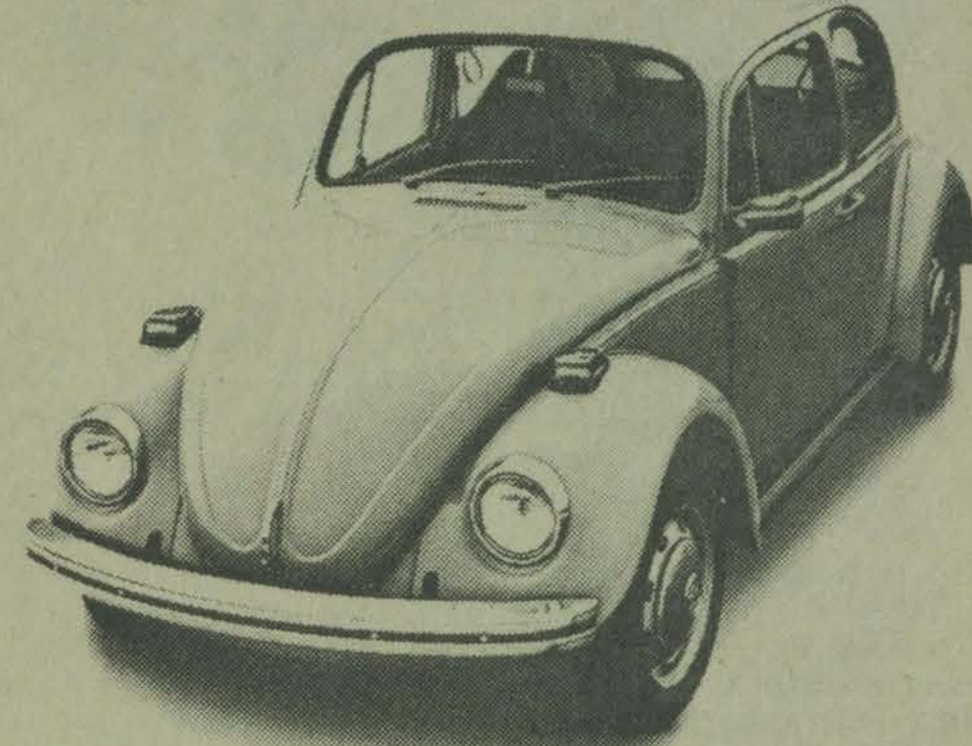

Skill-development sessions will be held concerning church administration, pastoral ministries, family ministry, vocational guidance, deacon ministries, Day Care-Kindergarten, Baptist Heritage, associational clerk work, church secretarial work and youth ministry leadership.

Persons interested in attending the Bible-Preaching Conference this summer should contact Ken McAneer, manager of Ridgecrest Baptist Conference Center, Ridgecrest, N. C., 28770.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., July 14—Cooler weather around the state has caused fishing to improve somewhat at several of Kentucky's major lakes. The lake-by-lake rundown, as compiled by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources:

S.A.L.T. Program To Stimulate Leadership In Appalachians

A program of leadership training fellowships for individuals from the Southern Appalachian Mountains was announced last week by the Center for Community Change, a private, non-profit Washington based organization engaged in technical assistance and leadership training program in the United States.

The Southern Appalachian Leadership Training (SALT) program will provide grants to enable participants to engage in a six-month period of individualized research, study and travel. As part of the program, fellows will also take part in a series of short training workshops designed to familiarize them with problems of the southern mountains. The first six-month period, with five to seven fellows participating, will begin this fall. The deadline for applications for this first period is August 20.

The program is designed to assist in developing new and emerging citizen leadership in Appalachian communities. It will focus on issues of critical public concern such as education, housing, health care, social services and land use.

Selection of Fellows will be based on demonstrated involvement and interest in issues related to community and public education rather than on occupation or formal educational background.

The Southern Appalachian Leadership Training program is open to all persons native to the Southern Appalachian region (including those reared in urban, migrant communities) and to non-native residents who have demonstrated exceptional, long-term commitment to the region.

The Southern Appalachian Leadership Training program is open to all persons in these categories without regard to sex, race, age, marital status, occupation or educational experience. Older individuals and people with families as well as younger, single people are being encouraged to apply.

Fellows will be able to participate on either a full-or-part-time basis and will be paid according to the amount of time they are involved in the program. They pay for full time fellows will be based upon family size and need. In addition to this basic pay, the program will cover the expenses of the training workshops and normally the costs directly associated with each Fellow's individual study-research program.

Each Fellow's research and study program will be designated around his/her interests and the particular needs of the community from which he/she comes. Normally these individual programs will include:

—Research into an issue of public concern in the Fellow's home community.

—Travel to other communities both inside and outside of Appalachia where similar issues have surfaced; and —Active involvement in the Fellow's home community with groups or individuals in either an educational or social change capacity.

The Southern Appalachian Leadership Training Program (SALT) is the second project developed in Southern Appalachia by the Center for Community Change. The other is an ongoing program of technical assistance and leadership training for communitybased citizens groups involved in such issues as community development, health care, housing, land use, education, entitlement counseling, and economic development.

Anyone interested in applying for a Southern Appalachian Leadership Training fellowship or in knowing more about selection criteria or applications for either of these projects should contact: Mike Smathers, Rt. 5, Box 275, Crossville, Tennessee 38555 (615) 484-7072.

Two Floyd County Clubs Win Development Ass'n Contest

Competing with 20 other development clubs in the Northeastern Kentucky Rural Community Development Association contest at Ashland last Saturday, two Floyd county clubs, Abbott Creek and Weeksbury, emerged as first-place winners in their respective categories.

The largest delegation ever to attend from Floyd County was present for the 13th annual Awards Banquet held at Ashland Saturday evening.

Weeksbury won the rural non-farm category, moving up from the second-place rating attained last year. The club was cited for having 112 youths attend 4-H day camp at Archer Park, supplying games and refreshments for 300 school children at the Weeksbury community park, conducting a Bible school for 30 youngsters, holding sewing classes, assisting with trying to organize a development club and withorganizing two development clubs and a community-wide cleanup.

Abbott Creek won first place in the farm category. Less than a year old, the club was honored for its work in improving the community school, conducting a book drive for the school library, building bookshelves, erecting basketball goals and fencing the school yard. The club also has long-range projects which include seeking a water system, organizing a Homemakers' Club and a community-wide clean-up campaign for the fall.

The Wheelwright Junior Development Club took third place for its work for the community library, working toward establishing a credit union, community cleanup, fund-raising projects and organization of a youth club.

Other awards going to Floyd county was the Traveling Trophy for the largest increase in the number of development clubs and a quote-busting certificate for exceeding the quota set in July.

The following delegates from this county attended the Awards Banquet, at which trophies were awarded: Wanda and Susie Rodebaugh, of Prestonsburg; Vita Stewart, West Prestonsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Akers, Prater Creek; Peggy Bradford, Causby Branham, Frank Smith, Ida Burke, Robin Humphrey, Elbert Gibson, Barry Tackett, Debra Smith and Dena Tackett, all of Weeksbury; Mr. and Mrs. Felmon Blackmon, Mike Armour and Gary Taylor, Wheelwright; Mr. and Mrs. Billy Merritt, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hill, Abbott Creek; Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Clark, Larry Leedy, of Prestonsburg; Novella Froman, development assistant; John Sparks, county extension agent.

'Moonshining, Bootlegging, Politics'

Ted Salisbury in a recent lecture appearance at Alice Lloyd College.

"Moonshining, Bootlegging and Politics" is the subject of a humorous but important lecture given by Floyd county native, Ted Salisbury, to visiting groups at Alice Lloyd College.

For about two years Mr. Salisbury has been relating the intricacies of the illegal whiskey business in Eastern Kentucky. Included in his talk are the method of making "moonshine", its transportation and sale, and a strong admonition to his listeners to stay away from the dangerous and often fatal business.

Salisbury presents his subject with great authority, having lived many years among persons who practised this dying "art". The Martin resident has been invited to several colleges in Ohio and Kentucky because of his interesting lectures on this unusual facet of Appalachian life.

Visitors from many states in ALC's Appalachian Term usually vote his talk high in their evaluation of the course work.

Women's Rights Group To Meet at W'wright

There will be a meeting of the Appalachian Women's Rights Organization, Sunday, July 20, at 3 p.m. at the library in Wheelwright. The main topic will be getting better paying jobs for women, and how to fight job discrimination. If you have a problem or want help come to the meeting. The group will have skits, and a time for everyone to speak out about their problems, as well as information on where and how to apply, and what to do if you face discrimination.

Anyone who is interested in helping women to obtain both paying jobs or who needs to get a better-paying job, is urged to get in touch with Ellie Graham, 478-5389.

Kentucky Afield

It has been said that 10 per cent of the fishermen in Kentucky catch 90 per cent of the fish. Conversely, of course, this means that 90 per cent of the fishermen catch only 10 per cent of the fish.

So, if you happen to be one of the "most with the least," at least you aren't lonesome. However, if you'd like to be in the "top ten," here are a few suggestions.

First, consider hiring a guide when you're on unfamiliar waters. The guide is, after all, a "pro" and he should be able to lead you to a spot where the fish are hitting. He can also advise you about what kind of fish to fish for; e.g., black bass fishing might be slow but the bluegill might be really "tearing" things up. Even the top 10 per cent of fishermen use a guide when fishing new waters and that might be one reason for their success.

Another way to build up your "catch" record is to find a friend who is also an expert angler. Fishing with someone who knows more about the sport than you do can teach you a lot, if you watch carefully and aren't afraid to ask questions.

Such a friend will be a lot more patient and eager to share his knowledge if you've done your homework before taking to the water. That is, you should have learned the basics of your sport—how to handle the equipment comfortably; how to tie knots; how to rig your line for live bait or artificial lures—and have at least some knowledge of the habits of the fish you seek.

All this requires a lot of practice and at least a little reading. The publications available are many and varied. A trip to your local newsstand will supply you with almost more how-to and where-to information than you'd want.

Another good idea is to find a lake that you know is productive and stick to it long enough to learn your way around. You'll find that certain places are nearly always productive and you won't spend a lot of time scouting new territory.

Be as quiet as you can, don't throw the paddle in the bottom of the boat or bang your tackle box around. And don't wear yourself out, either. Plan to spend three or four hours maybe, but try to make those hours fall during "prime" time. In late spring, summer and early fall, try the early morning or late evening hours. In early spring or late fall, mid-morning is a good fishing time.

The main things you need to make the "top ten" are desire and patience. Your stringer will soon show the results.

Milk Marketing Head Watches Milk Prices

By PATRICIA MELLEN FRANKFORT, Ky.—When a premature baby in a Frankfort hospital was found allergic to cow's milk, the infant's mother called the state's leading "milk man"—James Claycomb, director of Kentucky's Milk Marketing and Antimonopoly Commission.

Claycomb, whose office regulates the fair-price selling of cow's milk in the Commonwealth, contacted regional dairies and found in Chicago a supplier of goat's milk, the only kind the baby could tolerate.

The task was outside the realm of his job, he admits, but the man whose office is decorated with a collection of antique milk bottles probably knows more about milk supplies than the average milkman.

For five years he's kept watch over milk retailing in Kentucky.

Kentucky's MILK Marketing and Antimonopoly Commission does not impose a high price for dairy products, says its director, but it does set the ground rules for a fair, competitive system of milk marketing.

Claycomb, who directs a staff of seven, says that the commission is specifically prohibited by statute from setting a price for milk. The law states simply that milk-products processors and retailers cannot sell their milk below cost.

The MILK Marketing and Antimonopoly Commission was formed by the 1960 legislature to meet farm and processors demands for a protective milk marketing law, Claycomb said.

"In the late '40s and early '50s, the state became a dumping ground for out of state dairies—particularly in Western Kentucky," he said. These marketers would bring extra milk to Kentucky and sell it below cost. To compete, local dairies had to cut their price, and this practice drove some small dairies out of business.

Kentucky stores and distributors also had to cut prices and ultimately lowered the price they would pay the farmer. Dairy farmers, milk processors and distributors lobbied for legislation to prevent what they called unfair marketing practices.

The milk marketing bill passed by the 1960 legislature provides a semblance of order in the market, Claycomb says. It does not guarantee that the "little men" would stay in business, nor does it protect an inefficient operator, he added. It guarantees only that every dairy has the right to compete by preventing cutthroat tactics.

Without the law, for example, a national chain could cut its Kentucky milk prices, while charging high prices in other states. By underselling the local competition, it could drive Kentucky dairies out of business and set up a statewide monopoly, Claycomb explained.

Claycomb, who has done graduate work in dairy nutrition, heads a staff of six field workers, who monitor retail stores and dairy processors and who investigate complaints received by the office. Complaints are received every day, said Claycomb, from storekeepers, distributors and processors of milk products.

Under the provisions of the milk marketing law, the department, after a hearing, can fine the offending processor or retailer. The most severe penalty, he said, is revocation of the milk sales license, the $1-a-year permit that milk sellers must have.

If you see a wild animal acting strangely, leave it strictly alone. There's always the possibility that it has rabies.

Although this dread disease is most commonly associated with dogs, virtually all mammals can contract rabies and transmit it to man. Foxes, bats and rats are among the most common carriers of rabies, but skunks may actually be more dangerous, since they can carry the rabies virus for six to eight months, according to Joe Bruna, director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife's game management division.

This means that even a "deodorized" skunk bought from a pet store and certified disease-free could suddenly develop rabies months after it is purchased, Bruna says.

A wild animal with rabies often does not exhibit the fear of man that is natural among wild creatures. This can lead many people to think that the animal is a lost "pet." Children are especially prone to try to adopt such an animal, since they have been conditioned by TV and movies depicting all wild animals as cuddly, lovable creatures.

In one recent case, a group of youngsters at a church-sponsored children's home captured a fox. They thought the animal looked sick, so they brought it to the Game Farm at Frankfort for treatment. After a few days the fox died, and the Department of Health confirmed that it was rabid. Two of the Game Farm employees and all the children who had come in contact with the fox had to take the painful series of rabies shots.

All children, particularly those living in rural areas where the chances of encountering wild animals are great, should be warned about the dangers of handling, or even approaching, any animal that is acting sick or unusual, or which does not seem to be afraid of them.

Rabies is transmitted from one animal to another, or to man, by the saliva from the diseased animal, usually through a bite. But the virus can enter the skin from any open wound which the saliva contacts.

Any suspicious animal should be reported to the local authorities—either the county health department, the local conservation officer of the sheriff's office. If someone is bitten or otherwise attacked, he should seek immediate medical aid and every attempt should be made to kill or capture the animal.

By the time the symptoms of rabies appear, it is too late to counteract the disease by vaccination. Health department officials can determine, by examining the animal's head, whether or not it is rabid. If the animal cannot be located, then the victim usually must undergo the rabies treatment as a precaution.

Of course, all dogs, cats or other pet animals should be inoculated as directed by a veterinarian, and even an immunized pet should be watched closely if it is bitten by a suspected rabies carrier.

Plan Hatfield-McCoy Reunion

Logan, W. Va.—It can now be officially said the Hatfield-McCoy feud that erupted nearly 100 years ago in West Virginia and Kentucky is officially ended.

A reunion of the hundreds of descendants of the clans who warred and killed in the 1880s is being planned in West Virginia, stronghold of the Hatfields.

The McCoy descendants are going to put up a monument in memory of their leader, Randolph (Randall) McCoy (1825-1915) when they can find his grave in Pike county, Ky.

And they will buy it from a Hatfield who sells monuments, Henry Hatfield, of Sarah Ann, W. Va., near Logan, stronghold of the family of William Anderson (Devil Anse) Hatfield. Henry is his grandson.

The monument money would be put up by Joe and Leonard McCoy, great-grand-nephews of Randall, who run the Caney Branch Coal Co., Phelps, Ky. They recently gave $500,000 to build a gymnasium at the high school at Phelps.

There already is a 12-foot monument, counting the base, for the 5-8 Devil Anse in what is called Devil Anse Cemetery, William Anderson Hatfield Cemetery or plain Hatfield Cemetery at Sarah Ann, just outside Logan.

With its 40-50 Hatfield graves, plus that many more other local residents, the cemetery is a sight to see—up the stony side of a mountain, where the caskets are carried on foot on the narrow, steep rocky road. Wild roses and daisies grow profusely. But it's full of snakes too, says Henry Hatfield.

They've quit burying there, saving the remaining plots for Hatfield family members.

Few people outside the Sarah Ann-Logan area know that at the tiny village of DeHue, outside Logan, lives Willis Hatfield, who is the last remaining member of old Anse's family of 13 children. He is 87.

He was born Feb. 10, 1888, at Dolorem in Mingo County, and is recuperating from a heatstroke suffered last week when he blacked out after setting out 300 tomato plants by hand, plus other vegetables.

He lives with his daughter, Mrs. June Rutherford who said the doctors report his heart strong, his blood pressure normal, but must rest awhile and quit gardening to which Hatfield agreed.

"I knew nothing about the feud. It ended about the time I was born and dad never talked much about it," he said.

(The grandson, Henry Hatfield, mentioned in this news-story, is a son of Mrs. Sadie Click, of Allen, and the late Tennis Hatfield, onetime West Virginia sheriff. Another of her sons, Zach Anderson (Jack) Hatfield, of West Virginia, was named for his grandfathers, Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield and Zach Walters. Another son, Tennis Hatfield, also lives in West Virginia, and a fourth, William Grant Hatfield, is a resident of Lincoln Park, Michigan.)

Wayland, Babe Ruth League Champs

P'burg and Wayland Chairmen Selected

Mrs. James Allen, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. James M. Collins, of Wayland, have been named chairmen for their respective communities of the Breath of Life Campaign to fight children's lung-damaging diseases, according to Stanley H. Tichenor, president of the Mid-South Chapter, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

They will lead local volunteers in raising funds to support research and care programs for children affected by lung-damaging diseases such as cystic fibrosis, severe asthma, chronic bronchitis, and bronchiectasis.

The Breath of Life Week will be August 17-24, with a door-to-door drive scheduled during that week.

Approximately one of every 1,500 babies is born with Cystic Fibrosis, which is still incurable. It is inherited when both parents carry the recessive gene for C-F. It is believed that one in twenty persons, or a total of 10 million Americans, is a symptomless carrier of this gene. Current research funded by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation is seeking a practical test to identify these carriers, as well as a cure for C-F and better methods of treatment for all lung-damaging diseases.

Pesticides Laws Confuse Many

Frankfort, Ky.—Probably a quarter of a million Kentuckians are using one of the 4,000 brands of pesticides registered for sale in the state. Confusion over new state and federal pesticide laws is causing many of them to fear they're committing a criminal act.

Those laws require certain users of pesticides to obtain licenses from the pesticide control agency in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. A pesticide user might have to obtain a commercial applicators license, a private applicators license, a restricted pesticide user license or any combination of those. The troubling question is, who must obtain a license and which license must he obtain?

Determining who should be certified as a commercial applicator is easiest. Anyone who is paid for applying any pesticide or for supervising the application of any pesticide for any purpose is a commercial applicator.

Anyone who obtains a commercial applicators license must pass a written examination and obtain $100,000 public liability and $25,000 property damage insurance, with a deductible clause not to exceed $1,000. They also must pay a $25 license fee.

Employes of commercial applicators who work directly with the pesticides must pass a written examination and pay a $10 license fee. Also, every piece of equipment the commercial applicator uses in applying the chemicals must be inspected by the state and approved at a cost of $10 per piece of equipment.

Persons who use pesticides classified for restricted use by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency or by the state agency must obtain a private applicators license, a restricted pesticide users license or both.

Anyone who uses or supervises the use of a restricted pesticide on an agricultural commodity must obtain a private applicators license. Agricultural commodities include anything produced primarily for sale, consumption, propagation or other use by man or animals. That includes tomato plants in a suburban backyard.

Private applicators must attend a state training session before they can be licensed.

Restricted pesticide users apply or supervise the application of restricted chemical on non-agricultural commodities. They also must attend a training session before certification.

One more big problem remains for pesticide users. How do they find out which pesticides are restricted and which aren't? Fred Waters, head of the state pesticide control program, answered that question bluntly. "At the moment, no one can find out what is restricted and what isn't," he said.

The list of restricted chemicals, expected in January, still has not been published by the federal environmental control agency. Waters said the state will not restrict any chemicals until they see what the federal government has restricted. "Hopefully," said Waters, "the federal list will be out within a few months."

Until then, the state agency encourages the securing of appropriate licenses by anyone who works with pesticides which probably will be restricted. According to Waters, restricted pesticides generally will be highly toxic chemicals or those which have a history of accidents.

"Probably anyone who lives in a city or suburban area," said Waters, "won't be using a highly toxic pesticide on their lawn or backyard garden anyway. They certainly won't need one and probably they won't even want one. It's reasonably safe to go ahead and spray the garden without worrying about breaking a law."

Anyone with further questions should contact the pesticide control agency, division of special programs, Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, 3rd floor, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call (502) 564-7274.

Long-Range Reclamation Plan Acclaimed by State Officials

FRANKFORT, Ky.—In the year 2000, about 10,000 acres of what is today rough, steep land in Bell county is expected to be rolling pasture.

The landowner wants it that way. A strip mine firm suggested it and will do it. The state reclamation agency will make sure they do.

The division of reclamation in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection recently gave an Alabama-based mining firm approval to develop the first detailed long-range reclamation plan ever drawn up in the state. The go-ahead was based on a 25-year general plan the firm submitted to the state. The 25-year plan is considered a long-sought-after breakthrough by some state reclamation officials.

According to Larry Springate, an assistant director in the reclamation division, the proposed long-range plan differs from past reclamation plans not only because it covers so many years (reclamation plans usually only span one year), but also because it seems to make everyone concerned happy.

The state division of reclamation is happy about the long-range plan because the inspectors now know what the result of the total project will be. "The mining firm," said Springate, "is going beyond what the state requires. Rather than viewing the land as a nuisance that covers some coal, this company is viewing the land as a resource—is looking at what the land value will be after the coal is removed—and is trying to conserve and improve the land.

"This type of detailed pre-planning," continued Springate, "is something we've been encouraging for a long time and we hope we'll see more of it in the future."

The landowner—Asher Coal Mining Company of Pineville—is happy about the plan because the value of the land will increase after it has been mined and reclaimed. Springate estimated the land might bring $50 to $100 an acre now, but $400 an acre after reclamation is complete.

Slopes will be reduced to no more than 25 per cent—The maximum over which farm equipment can travel—and pasture grasses will be seeded. Springate said that should make the land suitable for grazing or future development.

So, the landowner will get the usual royalty others receive when their land is stripped for coal, plus a bonus—increased land value.

The firm that is mining the land—Harbert Construction Corporation (Mountain Drive Coal Company) of Birmingham, Alabama—is happy about the plan, too. After all, it was their idea. The Harbert people persuaded the landowner to hire Harland Bartholomew and Associates—an Atlanta firm of planners, landscape architects and engineers—to develop the long-range plan. Now, Harbert has retained the same firm to assist it in following the plan.

The big question is why the mining firm would want to do more than is required.

For one thing, Springate said the reclamation division would approve some modifications normally disapproved because, using the long-range plan, the mining company was able to show how the modifications would better help them obtain the desired result.

For instance, water impoundments are usually discouraged by the division because mining companies in the past have claimed they were for irrigation or livestock when actually the companies simply didn't want to fill in a hole. However, the long-range plan documents the need and intended use of water impoundments for livestock and irrigation. So the impoundments can be approved.

According to Springate, following a long-range plan won't cause the coal firm much more trouble than following a short-range plan. "After all," said Springate, "the company has to move the dirt anyway, so they might as well put it where the landowner wants it and plant on it what the landowner wants."

Many years ago Froude said: "Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour in the world, insincerity is the most dangerous..."

We see so many people who are not sincere. They fill positions from governmental spheres down to person-to-person levels. Someone has said that if you are too sincere you are regarded as weak, and you can be exploited and maneuvered by the hardcore individuals in the world. We don't agree with this thinking. It is still a good feeling to meet people who are sincerely good, and honest. It is through the "holding-on" of the sincere people in this world that the destiny of man can and will be reshaped. It is through the efforts of sincere people that we can say—"God has truly blessed our land."

Carroll Thinks Public Schools Not 'Free' Enough

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Julian M. Carroll recently asked the state Department of Education for recommendations to alleviate the economic burden of excessive school fees.

In a letter addressed to Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, state superintendent of public instruction, Carroll stressed his "interest in and concern about fees that are being charged pupils in elementary and secondary schools in the Commonwealth." A recent study submitted to the governor by the education department revealed that in excess of $4 million is collected from public school students each year. Carroll suggested that while some of the fees appear to be legitimate and appropriate, others should be eliminated. Such fees then would become part of the regular instructional programs in the schools.

Carroll defined justifiable costs to include breakage of or damage to equipment or property (incidents not likely to occur during normal learning processes), personal wearing apparel and materials used in the construction of furniture or other handicrafts when the finished items become the student's property. The governor also considered fees for personal materials, such as pencils, notebooks and paper used by the pupil as part of his homework, as legitimate.

However, Carroll felt that instructional supplies used in laboratories, shop and art classes should be provided by the school and not charged to the student.

Gov. Carroll also stated that he intends to ask the 1976 General Assembly to consider instructional fees as part of the weighted pupil unit cost, used in allocating funds for elementary and secondary education. If carried out systematically, such action would hold all schools responsible for providing their own teaching-learning materials.

Carroll underscored his concern by announcing that no student "should be charged a fee for the privilege of participating in any course, belonging to any club or organization that is directly related to the instructional needs of the student."

Shawnees, Wyandotts, Boone— All Traveled Through Estill Co.

If you didn't make it to Estill County July 4-6 for the Foothills Folk Festival at the county fairgrounds for all that folk, mountain and bluegrass music, don't give up; just plan another trip down, over or out that way. There is enough to see and enjoy in the Estill-Madison counties are that it would not be possible to do it all in one visit.

On a recent visit to Berea via Irvine, the countryside seemed to be one huge pastoral painting, with handsome farms edging the highway. Neatly painted and shuttered farm houses were standing in well-kept lawns. To one side would be a weathered barn, its paneling the color of old silver. All around would be green crops or fields furrowed in soft earth colors ranging from an artists' umbers and sienas to classic golds.

Making a background for all this splendor were mountains, misty in fog, but nonetheless beautiful as they rose steeply from green valleys to wooded cones high in the sky.

Estill County was named for Capt. James Estill, who died March 22, 1782 in battle with a band of marauding Wyandotts. The battle of Estill's Defeat resulted in death for eight pioneers. Estill County, formed in 1808 from parts of Madison and Clark, gave, in turn, territory for parts of five counties.

Estill Springs, located near Irvine, was popular for its mineral waters. The Shawnees, Boone, Boyle and McAfee, as well as settlers who followed the early scouts, stopped there. As early as 1814, the spa was luring travelers. Its resort hotel continued operation until 1924.

"Ah-wah-nee" is the name of a Shawnee campground at West Irvine where Indians found a plentiful supply of lead. Here in 1769, the Boones (Daniel and Squire), Joseph Proctor and other pioneers made camp, giving the place the name of Station Camp.

These are the "lazy, hazy days of summer" when Eastern Kentuckians rise early to do hard work in the cool of the day. At noon you will notice that many farm folk relax on their porches before continuing their chores.

There is a special neatness about this country in July, for rows of corn, tobacco and vegetables remain aligned as planted and vie with clipped lawns for beauty. A bit later, plants will have matured and spread to form a thick mat. Even weeds like ironweed, Queen Anne's Lace and queen of the meadow charm those who drive along country roads.

It is true that no resident of the Commonwealth need travel far from home to see magnificent scenery or revel in history.

The Veterans Administration during fiscal year 1976 plans to spend a record $3.9 billion on its hospital and medical care program.

Aid to Families Plan Requires WIN Enrollment

By DIANA PETERS

Frankfort, Ky.—Unemployed fathers who become eligible for the new Aid to Families with Dependent Children Unemployed Parent Program (AFDC UF) also will be covered by the work incentive program (WIN), which requires a registration for work as a part of eligibility.

WIN was established to cover mothers who were eligible for AFDC. The new program covering fathers went into effect July 1, after unemployment rates had exceeded six per cent for January. WIN funding changes recently announced will affect the AFDC UF recipients. This means the WIN program will be available only in 48 of Kentucky's 120 counties due to fund cuts.

An exception for the unemployed fathers is a recent Supreme Court ruling which states that those who are eligible for both Unemployment Insurance and AFDC UF may choose between the two sources of help.

If the unemployed father chooses AFDC UF, he will be screened by a DHR worker to see what skills he has that may lead to employment. The worker will then try to place him in a job.

If the unemployed father should need on-the-job training, the WIN program provides a subsidy to the employer to offer the additional supervision and instruction he will need to provide for the worker. Other benefits Work Incentive participants receive may include such items as day care for their children, remedial medical treatment, counseling and uniforms required for their job.

In instances where the father of a household is certified by the Bureau for Social Services, DHR, to participate in WIN, the mother will be exempt from mandatory registration.

Mud Creek Project Sets Clinic Opening For Sunday, July 20

The Mud Creek Health Project will expand its services on July 20 by initiating a "black lung" educational and treatment program.

The program will teach miners and their families about the nature of chronic lung disease, how it can be treated and prevented. This service is also available to any person with any serious lung disease, not only black lung.

The service was made possible by a grant from the UMWA Department of Occupational Health. UMWA international and district leaders have given the program their full support.

Staff members will be Dr. James Squire, medical director; Dara Fumagalli, R.N. supervisor; Butch Paige, respiratory technician, and Janice Stone, receptionist and billing clerk.

The Mud Creek Respiratory Clinic will accept persons from the Harold-Mud Creek-Clear Creek areas and also from some areas of Pike County. McDowell Hospital and Highlands Regional Hospital have similar programs to serve their areas.

An open house at the Mud Creek Health Project at Craynor will be held Sunday, July 20, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for the public to see the new facilities. Refreshments will be served. For further information, phone 587-2200.

Ft. Boonesboro Show Features Dan's Kin

Visitors to Fort Boonesborough July 26 will be entertained by Daniel Boone's most famous descendant. A free show by Pat Boone and Family will highlight the Fort Boonesborough Bicentennial week-end of July 25-27.

Pat Boone, nationally known singer, actor, author and tenth generation descendant of Daniel Boone, will perform with his wife Shirley, a Kentucky native and daughter of country music star Red Foley, and their four dynamic daughters, Cherry, Lindy, Debby and Laury.

The Boone girls have been harmonizing with their famed father and talented mother since childhood. However, it was all in the family until 1970, when they accompanied the Pat Boone tour of the Orient. No longer children at ages 20, 19, 18, and 17, they add a refreshing note to an already warm and energetic show.

Pat Boone and the five women in his life travel thousands of miles a year singing, speaking and charming young and old alike. They are coming home to Kentucky July 26, at 8 p.m., Fort Boonesborough State Park.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of Clara Jo Gearhart. Born: Jan. 27, 1954. Died: July 16, 1974

We think of you, not just today, but every day,
Though you are just a prayer away.
We miss your presence here in our home,

Yet are so thankful our Shepherd has you in His fold.

How dear you've always been to us.
Our constant companion every day,
And then at night so sweet to pray:
"Goodnight, Mamma, I love you—now say your prayer."

"I love you, too, honey, now you say yours, Clara."

"I love you, mother, Goodnight to you,
And tomorrow know what I'll do?
I think I'll be able to go back to school.
I love my classmates, I'm so excited now,

I'll get to be with them in our caps and gowns."

We miss you so, Clara Jo, yet so thankful that we know.

We'll see you soon in God's heavenly place.

How wonderful to see again your dear face.

Kentucky West Virginia Gas ERDA Sign Research Pact

A cooperative agreement designed to increase natural gas production from marginally economical reservoirs in Eastern Kentucky has been signed by Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company and the federal government's Energy Research and Development Agency (ERDA). The program will take place on leases held by Kentucky West Virginia Gas, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Equitable Gas Company, Pittsburgh.

Kentucky West Virginia Gas has been experimentally fracturing the Devonian Shale since 1965. The program with ERDA is an expansion of this research effort. All gas and oil discovered as a result of the cooperative program will remain the property of Kentucky West Virginia Gas.

Phase I of the study will involve drilling, coring, logging and stimulating the Devonian Shale in a vertical well located in Perry county. During the fracturing process, unusually large amounts of water and sand will be forced into the well at high pressures. Baseline data from this experiment will help evaluate the results of Phase II.

Phase II will involve drilling through the Devonian Shale formation at about a 45-degree angle with the hope of intersecting additional natural fracture zones, and thus increasing potential production.

Thinking of buying a Mercedes-Benz?

Both the Mercedes-Benz 280 and the Audi 100LS are German automobiles, designed for substance and quality. Engineered to last, they are surprisingly similar in concept and design.

EXTERIOR: Both were designed from the inside out to incorporate similar spatial requirements resulting in classic exteriors. Both are aerodynamically-designed to reduce wind resistance.

COMFORT: The Mercedes-Benz is known for its roominess; the Audi comes within 1' of its headroom, legroom, and trunk space. Both have anatomically-designed reclining seats.

SAFETY: Both are designed with rigid safety-cell passenger compartments and energy-absorbing collapsible front and rear sections. Both have power-assisted brakes and the kind of steering-roll radius which instantly compensates in a front-wheel blowout.

PERFORMANCE: Both have sophisticated suspensions and drive trains. Audi's front-wheel drive gives greater tracking stability. Both handle precisely, Audi using rack-and-pinion steering.

28 mpg and 18 mpg, respectively.

Of course, there are differences. It's those differences that make Mercedes-Benz one of the finest cars in the world and well worth the price. So for some people the answer may be Mercedes-Benz. But, when you add the similarities and subtract the differences, we think you'll agree the answer is Audi.

A Prayer For Those Who Live Alone

I live alone, dear Lord,
Stay by my side,
In all my daily needs,
Be Thou my guide,
Grant me good health,
For that indeed, I pray,
To carry on my work
From day to day.
Keep pure my mind,
My thoughts, my every deed,
Let me be kind, unselfish
In my neighbor's need.
Spare me from fire, from flood,
Malicious tongues,
From thieves, from fear,
And evil ones.
If sickness or an accident befall,
Then humbly, Lord, I pray,
Hear Thou my call.
And when I'm feeling low,
Or in despair,
Lift up my heart,
And help me in my prayer.
I live alone, dear Lord,
Yet have no fear,
Because I feel Your Presence
Ever near. Amen.

ROPES Advisory Council Hears Reports from Staff Members

Reports by staff members to bring council members up to date on ROPES activities and to familiarize new members with its programs and purposes were heard at the June 30 meeting of the ROPES Region 11 advisory council here. Council Chairman W. R. Conley presided.

Larry Jervis, curriculum consultant, discussed the Right to Read program, reporting that the planning segment of the program has been completed and that arrangements are being made for staff development activities arising from the planning. Each school district in the region will choose one pilot school, with the aim of developing the ability of teachers to deal with reading problems before the child falls far behind. The philosophy behind the Right to Read program is that reading is essential to every course of study and that the child who cannot read is handicapped in every field. Staff development activities involving the seven pilot schools in the region are expected to carry over into other schools in the districts.

Audrey Pratt, special education consultant, told of the growth in the program for exceptional children during the past year. She pointed out that units for exceptional children have increased from 37 in school year 1973-'74 to 64 in school year 1974-'75, and that at least eight additional units are planned for next year. She expressed the opinion that evaluation and placement of newly identified exceptional children will be the area of most concern for the coming school year.

Don Burchett, area guidance consultant, discussed the role of the school guidance counselor in the evaluation and placement of exceptional children. Burchett told the Council that a regional person to coordinate evaluation possibly could be employed with funds from Title IV.

Shirley Beard, administrative assistant, told the Council that most school districts have appointed their VC planning committees and that committee meetings will begin soon. The purpose of the committees is to assess each school district's total program and to make recommendations to the ROPES board of directors. Emphasis will be placed on utilizing resources available to the school districts without increasing costs. The ROPES Board will consider committee recommendations when updating ROPES priorities.

Mrs. Beard also discussed Morehead University's off-campus graduate program. This program, which features Eligibility expires Aug. 1, 1975 for 2.7 million veterans discharged between April 3, 1970, and Aug. 1, 1974, to apply for low-cost veterans group life insurance through the Veterans Administration.

graduate course offerings in Prestonsburg, Pikeville, Hazard, is coordinated by Dr. James V. Bolen, Morehead's Regional Graduate Programs consultant. Dr. Bolen is housed in the ROPES Region 11 office.

Reo Johns, executive director, outlined the growth of regionalization in Kentucky since the establishment of the first regional offices in 1972 and pointed out that Region 11 was the second region to be organized. Johns also discussed upcoming meetings to be held by the ROPES office in conjunction with the Department of Education. Among these are the School Discipline and Due Process meeting to be held at Clark Elementary School, near Prestonsburg, July 18, and the state directors' meeting to be held in Gilbertsville on July 13-15.

Council members were asked to discuss areas of concern to them. Vern Horne discussed the advisability of including parents in staff development activities to that parents will be more aware of classroom goals and purposes. Woodrow Maynard suggested that newspaper and radio releases could be utilized to help parents to be more aware of the importance of reading. Council Chairman W. R. Conley suggested that a letter be written to Claude Farley, member of the Council, expressing hope for his speedy recovery, and telling him that he was missed. This suggestion was endorsed by all Council members present.

The advisory council will meet again in September. At that time Bronelle Skaggs, regional vocational director, will report on vocational programs in the region.

Dam Safety Program Inspired by Disasters

Sometimes it takes a catastrophe to spur action for protective measures. For instance, the 1972 disaster in Rapid City, South Dakota and the Buffalo Creek tragedy in West Virginia hastened adoption of safe dam measures on the federal level. The 1973 Caulk Dam failure in central Kentucky sped this state's movement toward action.

The Rapid City Dam break, the result of heavy rains, killed over 200 people. At Buffalo Creek, more than 100 people died due to a break in a refuse dam. When the Caulk Dam broke, flood-waters covered the countryside with nearly five feet of water, although there were no injuries and a minimal amount of property damage. These disasters showed the need for adequate legislation to control the design, construction and maintenance of all dams in the country.

Subsequently, Congress passed legislation creating a national dam inspection program. The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers must make inspections of all dams 25 feet or more in height or with an impounding capacity of more than 50 acre-feet. An inventory of Kentucky dams completed in August, 1974 revealed that there are more than 750 dams which fall within these specifications.

The Corps, working with various agencies in each state, also was directed to develop guidelines for evaluating dams.

According to Doug Griffin, an engineer in the division of water resources in Kentucky's Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, the state's 1974 General Assembly passed legislation, giving responsibility to the environmental protection department to inspect dams and adopt regulations for evaluation of those dams. The inspections should be made every five years depending upon the potential hazards of the structures involved, said Griffin.

"No regulations have been developed yet," he explained, "because the final report to Congress by the Corps of Engineers is not scheduled until July of this year. At that time, the guideline criteria should be finalized so that the state may use it to develop their regulations."

Griffin added that "the department already has inspected 40 state-built dams. In almost all cases, deficiencies of various magnitudes were noted. As a result, the 1974 legislature appropriated $1 million for renovation of several older structures."

Preliminary work is being done to put the dams at Rainbow Lake State Park, Kincaid Lake State Park and Beech Creek into acceptable condition. "If proper maintenance is performed in the future," said Griffin, "we don't expect serious problems to arise."

However, no dam should be judged entirely safe. "Any criteria which is adopted," noted Griffin, "is the result of proper engineering judgment and involves calculated risk. This calculated risk must be based on the potential damage to property and loss of human life. Any criteria adopted for the evaluation of existing dams will therefore closely parallel the criteria for new structures."

Law Now In Force

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Regulations on political contributions and spending went into effect July 7 after an interim legislative committee declined to go along with another panel that had rejected them.

But the Interim Committee on Elections and Constitutional Amendments did agree the three regulations were not complete. It directed the Registry of Election Finance, which submitted them to draft another regulation within 30 days to fill the void.

The legislature's Administrative Regulation Review Subcommittee rejected the regulations on the ground they did not fully comply with legislative intent.

It said the regulations were fine as far as they went, but they also should cover reporting of persons taking part in fundraising events that net $1,500 or more, as required in a 1974 state law.

The regulations set out procedures for candidates, campaign committees and party executive committees to report contributions and expenditures in accordance with that law.

After deciding to approve the three regulations, the interim committee voted July 7 to ask the Registry to adopt another regulation within 30 days to cover events netting $1,500 or more.

Robert L. Sloss, Louisville, chairman of the Registry, said his agency had not included $1,500 fund-raising events because of uncertainty over what was wanted. He said that section of the law appeared to require disclosure of names of all contributors or ticket-buyers, down to five cents, although the rest of the law exempted contributors of less than $100.

Several committee members said they felt the general exemption of contributions under $100 applied to persons attending events that net $1,500 or more. Sloss said that interpretation would help the registry draft a regulation.

But Sen. Michael Maloney, D-Lexington, said he felt the law clearly required the disclosure of everyone who made any purchase—even a balloon—at such events.

Tho Funds Cut, WIN Continues

Frankfort, Ky.—Despite federal fund costs of $766,718 last January, Kentucky was able to rework its Work Incentive Program (WIN) so that the Department for Human Resources (DHR) could continue to serve 90 per cent of the persons in need of this type program. Another reworking of the program promises better efficiency for fiscal year 1976, starting July 1, 1975.

The function of the WIN program is to provide placement services to mothers whose families are receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) support payments.

The last half of fiscal year 1975, under the first revision, saw 18 counties continuing to have active WIN programs, serving some 90 per cent of those in need of such programs. In the remaining 102 counties, classified as "remote," those who were active participants were continued through their on-the-job training programs, but new activities were not scheduled.

C. Leslie Dawson, secretary of DHR, announced that on July 1, 1975, 30 more counties will be considered "active" and a projected 97 per cent of persons in need of this program will be served.

Moreover, the newly revised program will include unemployed fathers, making either parent eligible for a subsidized job, which is intended to lead to non-subsidized, permanent employment. In instances when the father is certified by the Bureau for Social Services, DHR, to participate, the mother in the household will be exempt from mandatory WIN registration.

As of June 1, 1975, a total of 19,007 women were registered in the program. Of this number, 1,134 were active participants and 17,873 were registered but not placed in a position.

Under the Work Incentive Program, DHR workers screen registrants to see if they have skills which could lead to employment and try to place those with such skills into actual jobs. If a participant needs on-the-job training, the program provides a subsidy to the employer to offset the additional supervision and instruction he will need to provide for those workers. Other benefits Work Incentive participants receive may include such items as day care for their children, remedial medical treatment, counseling and uniforms required for their job.

Attorney General's Opinions

G. S. Wesley, Danville city tax collector, asked if delinquent city taxes should be advertised in the local newspaper. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's office that Danville, being a third class city, does not have to advertise such notices as delinquent taxes because there is no provision in the statutes requiring it to be done.

B. L. Robey, co-chairman of the Bullitt county Democratic party, asked if it is a conflict of interest for a county chairman of either party to serve on the planning and zoning commission. The Attorney General's office held that under the statutes concerning the qualifications for membership on the commission, there is no section that would prohibit an officer in either major political party from serving on the commission. In fact, no conflict of interest would be involved.

Jane Singleton, Butler city clerk, asked if a city may pass an ordinance banning the use of home-operated amateur radios which have been interfering with local television. The Attorney General's office said it would be illegal for any city to pass such an ordinance because the regulating and licensing of amateur radio operators is a field preempted by the federal government. Any complaints should be directed to the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D. C.

Lists Those Eligible
For Jobless Benefits

By JEANNE BECKETT

Frankfort, Ky.—"There has been some confusion regarding the availability of unemployment insurance payments to teachers in secondary and elementary schools," said Commissioner Gail S.
Huecker of the Bureau for Social Insurance, Department for Human Resources (DHR).

According to federal law, teachers with continuing contracts are not eligible for unemployment benefits.

However, said Commissioner Huecker, the following persons are eligible unless they have continuing contracts or are part of the school faculty:

Teachers' aides, helpers or assistants;
substitute teachers; secretaries or receptionists; physical plant (janitorial) or maintenance workers; food preparation or food service (cafeteria) workers; bus drivers.

Individuals who served as full-time,
permanent teachers, librarians, guidance counselors or principal administrators must prove that they will not be employed for the next school term or school year in order to qualify for unemployment insurance benefits.

Mark It Account Paid

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Someone's conscience was apparently bothering them and the Kentucky State Treasury is $100 richer.

The state treasurer's office yesterday received an envelope containing two $50 bills and a note saying "money owed for a long time."

State Treasurer Drexell Davis said there was no return address on the envelope which was postmarked from New York and mailed on the afternoon of July 3.
