

PCC Community Service Office Offers Wide Range of Helps

From braille to help with your smoking problems, from the Old Testament to cake decorating—the Community Service Office of Prestonsburg Community College offers, these days, courses designed to meet a wide range of human needs.

Study already arranged or in the planning follow, as announced by James Ratcliff, coordinator of Community Services:

Basic braille will be taught by Diantha Hodges. The course will teach the student to read first-grade braille and to write it with a stylus and slate. An organizational meeting for those interested will take place Wednesday, January 28, 7 p.m. in Room 105 of the Pike Technology Building, Prestonsburg Community College.

A class in basic cake decorating will meet on Wednesdays, January 28-March 3, 6:30-9:30 p.m., in Room 216 of the Pike Technology Building. This course, limited to 18, will be taught by Connie Scarberry.

A class in ceramics will be taught by Lynn S. Rogers. The course is designed for the beginner and others who wish to further develop their individual styles. Emphasis will be on handbuilt construction; however, those interested in learning wheel techniques will find the course useful also. The class activities will take place in the Pottery Shop on the campus (Magoffin Complex, Building A), 6:30-9:00 p.m., Tuesdays, beginning January 27 and continuing through April 6. For those who desire it there will be a work period each Thursday evening.

An introductory course to the Old Testament will be taught by the Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, Prestonsburg. To be taught as an introduction to the Old Testament, this class will meet in Room 208 of the Pike Technology Building, 7-9:00 p.m., Mondays, January 26-March 22.

A seminar on religion will begin Tuesday, January 27, and will meet on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m. in Room 105 of the Pike Technology Building. The seminar will meet for informal discussions, the first of which will center around "Sin and Guilt." Subjects for the following weeks will be selected according to the interests of those who attend. Some possible topics are: "What Is a Person," "Ethics," "Understanding Theology," "Existentialism," "The Protestant Reformation;" and other topics dealing with the history of Christianity. Participants will select topics to be discussed. The Rev. William Thomas and Steve Hodges will lead the seminars.

Fines and Penalties For Environmental Damage Up in 1975

By MARVA GAY

Frankfort, Ky.—Fines and penalties collected by the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection during 1975 almost triple those collected in 1974. Penalties collected for violation of state reclamation regulations alone exceed the total collected by all divisions of the department during 1974.

During 1975, the department collected $325,295 in fines and penalties for violation of environmental regulations. The total for 1974 was $122,960, of which $111,200 was for violation of reclamation regulations.

Fines and penalties collected in 1975 for violation of reclamation regulation totaled $225,255. The $64,600 collected in 1975 for violations of water quality regulations includes several penalties paid by coal companies for allowing "blackwater" from their coal storage areas to run into nearby streams.

Penalties collected in 1975 for violations of air pollution regulations totaled $30,000.

The largest penalty was $19,000 paid by Harlan Fuel Coal Co., of Harlan county, for violations of state water pollution regulations. The next largest penalties were $15,000 paid by Mark IV Coal, Inc., of Barbourville, for violation of state reclamation regulation, $15,000 paid by Agrico Chemical Company, of Henderson, for violating air pollution regulations, and $15,000 paid by Grays Knob Coal Company for water pollution violations in Harlan county.

The dead lower branches of an evergreen tree, sheltered by the living cone of limbs above them, will provide quick, dry kindling and firewood on a rainy day in the woods. These brittle branches snap off with ease.

Floyd County Health Notes

By DONNA J. GRIFFITH
Health Educator I

Thursday, January 22, the Floyd County Health Department will conduct a Pap Smear clinic. This clinic will last from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 2 p.m.

The public health nurses remind all women that they should have a Pap Smear at least once a year in order to have continuing protection against cervical cancer.

This clinic is free and all women are welcome to attend.

The following day, Jan. 23, the health department will be conducting a Glaucoma Clinic from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Glaucoma is a serious disease which can slowly and painlessly cause blindness in persons age 35 and over.

Since early detection and treatment is your best defense against Glaucoma, the health department advises all persons within this age group to take advantage of this free Glaucoma Screening.

Thursday, January 28, the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Department of Neurology, is conducting a Regional Neurology clinic at the Floyd County Health Department in Prestonsburg. This clinic will begin at 12:30 p.m. and last until 3 p.m.

Any patient who wishes to see a neurologist at this clinic must be referred by a physician and must be under 21 years of age.

If you are interested in being referred to this neurology clinic, you should contact your private physician so that he can make an appointment for you.

The U. S. Labor Department says overtime must be paid at a rate of not less than one and a half times the employee's regular rate of pay for each hour worked in a workweek in excess of the maximum hours applicable to the type of employment in which the employee is engaged.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN

A surprise birthday party was given at the home of Lona Ferguson for John and Lucinda Patton, Sunday January 11. Those attending were Buck Patton, Marina Ann Hoover, Donna Marie Hoover, Pearl M. Slone, Pauline Hoover and Pvt. Edgar B. Smith from Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri. Sandwiches, ice cream, cake and refreshments were served by Mrs. Lona Ferguson and Miss Pauline Hoover and the couple received several nice gifts.

ATTENTION!

The City of Prestonsburg's garbage dump on KY 114 (old Middle Creek Road) is closed for dumping by individuals. A $100 fine will be imposed on all persons found dumping at this location. Anyone living outside the city limits who has items to be hauled off should contact the Floyd County Sanitation Department, or Adrian Lafferty.

Dogs, Source of Legend and Love

By NEVLE SHACKELFORD

Since that long-ago and unrecorded day when a dog first licked man's hand instead of biting it, the relationship between Old Rover and his best friend has ever grown closer. Currently, he basks in an unprecedented golden age and some 14 million homes, including the White House, have one or more of these wonderful, intelligent pets.

As man's best friend, the dog has always induced strong emotions in the human heart. According to research, ancient Egyptians worshiped him, Israelites abhorred him, some Chinese ate him, and Abraham Lincoln jumped in the river to save one.

Egyptian tablets carved over 6,000 years ago show that dogs served as pets, hunters, and objects of reverence. People of the Nile regarded the dog as a symbolic protector in the realm of the dead. When a dog died, Egyptian households went into deep mourning. The body was embalmed, swathed in fine linen, and carried in solemn procession to a special burial site.

It has always been easy for dog lovers to go to extremes. In Ethiopia, tribesmen once crowned a dog king. If the canine ruler licked your hand, honors were bestowed; if it growled, off went your head.

As canine history reveals, everywhere man went, the dog went, too. This it became the most widely distributed of four-footed animals.

The dog has adapted to every use and climate. The Dachshund, for instance, was deliberately bred in sausage shape so it could crawl down into badger dens; the sled dog grew a heavy fur coat as protection against arctic cold.

A "dog's life" hasn't always been one of adoration. Some cultures have considered him merely as an efficient weapon for the hunt, as insurance against burglars, power for a sled or cart, or as meat for the table. Old Testament Jews pictured the dog as a pariah—an unclean scavenger of the streets. The term "dog" was the vilest of insults. Also, and not so long ago either, fashionable European ladies wore dogskin muffs, gloves, and shoes.

But as far as is known, that's all over now and if it is true that every dog has his day, that day surely must be now. According to marketing figures, Americans spend more than half a billion dollars annually on their pet dogs. Kennel shops sell everything from cashmere sweaters and low-calorie diet food to dog perfume and flea collars. Also more than 20,000 veterinarians in the United States, backed by 5,000 small-animal hospitals, minister to dogs' aches and pains.

In the great majority, dogs are loyal, intelligent, and delightful creatures. Few there are who ever had a good dog for a friend will resent the animal's present status.

200th BIRTHDAY PARTY

A "Happy Birthday, America" party was held recently at Marcella's Kountry Kitchen at Langley. Hostess for the occasion was Miss Janie Bailey. The predominant colors were red, white and blue. The tables were covered in red-checked oil cloth, decked with blue and white candles and a small cake with 20 candles, each representing 10 years. Everyone joined in singing patriotic songs while Marcella Bailey lighted the candles and Janie spoke on our country and the freedoms it offers.

Everyone wore party hats, made by Janie, and even her granddaddy, 75-year-old Fred Bailey wore one.

Each person attending brought a covered dish.

Those attending were Mrs. Thelma Frasure, Ronda Rowe, Ann Rowe, Bobby Rowe, Mrs. Ora Amburgey, Charles Amburgey, Mrs. Dora Allen, Sheila Allen, Jimmy, Toni and Shawn Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Don Meade, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Showers, of Drift, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Bailey and Janie, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Frasure, Stevie and Mike.

Carroll Would Outlaw Bail Bonding Business

By GLENN HODGES

Frankfort, Ky.—Practices in bail bonding for profit have often encouraged defendants to commit further crimes to pay for their bond premiums, according to Gov. Julian Carroll, and that is one reason he is seeking to outlaw the industry.

In a dramatic news conference last Wednesday, Carroll said his legislative proposal to ban commercial bail bonding would "vastly improve our system of justice in Kentucky."

"It will keep defendants from being indebted over extended periods of time to bail bondsmen," Gov. Carroll pointed out. "It will stop the substantial trafficking in the pawning and use of personal items such as television sets and automobiles and other personal property often used to gain freedom on bond. It will greatly discourage individuals who are indebted to bondsmen from committing further offenses to pay off their debts."

A bill proposing the outlawing of the industry will be introduced at the governor's request before the Kentucky House of Representatives this week (Jan. 19-23).

The governor's proposal will suggest a system that would allow an arrested person to post 10 per cent of his bond with a court clerk, rather than with a bail bondsman. When the person's case is settled in court, all of his deposit would be returned to him except the 10 per cent that the court will retain for administrative costs. This would enable the defendant to save money he now pays a bail bondsman, a cost which would be applied toward his fine.

"Obviously if the defendant is found not guilty, it will be returned to him," said the governor.

Another point of the legislation will be to encourage courts "as a matter of policy" to accept personal recognizance in place of a cash or property deposit, Gov. Carroll said.

"One of the reasons recognizance has not been used in the past," he noted, "is that it has been preempted by the bail bondsman. By outlawing the industry the court will be encouraged to go through the system of recognizance."

In response to a newsman's question, Carroll said the effect of the legislation would not increase the chances of denying bond to a person who did not have the money himself or could not turn to a commercial source.

"It would give that person a greater opportunity for bail because the court now recognizing that fact could set his bond at whatever amount it should desire, and let him get out under its own recognizance or at a small amount of bail which could be put up by a friend."

There is nothing that would prohibit an individual from coming in and posting the "10 per cent as long as it is not a profit," the governor stressed. "That's the point of the legislation."

Carroll made it clear that state government has had trouble in regulating the bail bonding industry which generates some $2 million in premiums in the state annually.

"We've had extreme difficulty in making them even comply with the existing statutory law." The governor said he believes the legislation could withstand a test of constitutionality if it becomes law and not deny any bail bondsman the right to make a living.

In another matter related to the proposed legislation, Carroll said the revenue gained by the courts through such a new law would cover "substantial" costs of the clerks offices under the new integrated court system.

The governor said he expects heavy opposition from the bail bond industry in getting the bill passed, but added that he expects its passage by the General Assembly.

Best Financial Year For Scout Council

C. B. Wolfe, of Jenkins, vice president for finance of the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, announced today preliminary figures indicating that more than $110,000 was contributed to the Lonesome Pine Council during 1975, making the year the best ever in terms of contributed income in the council's forty-one year history. Economy measures effected by the council during the year coupled with the successful sustaining membership enrollment caused a reduction in overall council indebtedness from $23,060 on January 1, 1975, to less than $11,400 on December 31, 1975.

Wolfe expressed his appreciation to J. M. Wood, of Pikeville, chairman of the 1975 Sustaining Membership Enrollment and to E. M. Bane, of Grundy, Virginia, who organized and conducted a special campaign for funds to liquidate the council's indebtedness at a Pikeville bank. He said that both campaigns were highly successful resulting in the $110,000 income the council had during 1975. Wolfe also expressed his appreciation to the many generous contributors without whose support and confidence in the work of the Scout council these gains would not have been possible.

Wolfe also indicated that he has been working on an improved plan for conducting the council's annual campaign during 1976 which includes among other features an opportunity for persons to "Buy a Day of Scouting" at a cost of $275. This amount of $275 represents the cost of administering the Scout program each day throughout the thirteen counties served by the Lonesome Pine Council. Potential contributors will be offered the opportunity to select a specific day and have it designated as their day throughout the council.

Wolfe also reported that at the end of 1975 the Lonesome Pine Council served 2,275 boys who were members of 111 Scout units. Scout units are located in each of the counties served by the council.

Right To Bargain Favored in Survey

The advent of public employe collective bargaining has been described as the most significant development in the industrial relations field in the last 30 years. Many states recently have developed new legislation in this turbulent area, including Kentucky, which has an estimated 150,000 persons involved in public employment.

A special legislative panel conducted a series of public hearings during the past year to gather information and measure public sentiment on the question of bargaining. Although the committee, by a margin of 5-2, voted not to prefile any bargaining legislation, the issue is expected to rise during the 1976 session of the Kentucky General Assembly.

Public employment policies in Kentucky currently vary depending on the type of employe and where he lives.

State employes are regulated by a policy statement adopted by the Personnel Board in 1966. It acknowledges that state employes have a right to join associations and unions, but stipulates that no agency of state government will recognize or bargain with any third party agent. No binding agreements with employe associations are permitted, and the right to strike or conduct any type of slowdown or job action is prohibited.

For teachers, the Attorney General has indicated that in the absence of any prohibitory statute, "teachers and other employe groups may legally organize and bargain with their employer, the Board of Education." Separate opinions, however, have said that the boards themselves have the sole right to decide whether they actually will bargain.

Policemen have a right to bargain over specified topics, if they live in Jefferson County, according to a law passed by the 1972 General Assembly. They are, however, prohibited from striking.

The 1972 legislature also passed a more comprehensive statute mandating collective bargaining for firemen in any city with a population of at least 300,000 or any city that petitions the Commissioner of Labor to be included. Under this statute, a process is created to elect an exclusive employe representative, the duty of employers to bargain is described and a procedure is established to resolve an impasse when negotiations break down. Also, a State Labor Relations Board is created, unfair labor practices are defined, deduction of union dues from an employe's paycheck is authorized and the right to strike is prohibited.

A public opinion survey conducted for the Legislative Research Commission (LRC) in October indicated that nearly 62 per cent of those surveyed favored collective bargaining for public employes, while slightly less than 27 per cent said they opposed it. (The remaining percentage gave no response or answered "don't know.")

A majority of the special legislative committee recommended felt that collective bargaining was a matter which should be handled locally under the principle of Home Rule. Two members of the committee, however, felt that public employe collective bargaining eventually would become a reality in Kentucky, and that enacting legislation giving direction and guidance for its implementation would be the most realistic and orderly approach.

WINS HONORABLE MENTION IN CATHOLIC POSTER CONTEST

Miss Lisa A. Heinze is one of three in the Covington Diocese to receive honorable mention in a nationwide poster contest open to all students in parochial schools, grades 5 through 12. The contest was held as a way to involve youth in the spiritual program for the 41st Eucharistic International Congress which will be held in Philadelphia, August 1 through 8. This is the first such Congress to be held in the United States in 50 years, and one million people from over the world are expected to attend.

Miss Heinze is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Heinze, of Prestonsburg.

In the mid-1920's these three operated Prestonsburg's leading barber shop. From left they are the late J. H. (Harvey) Howard, the late W. V. (Bill) Bunting and Otto Baldrige. Mr. Baldrige, lone survivor of the trio, continues to practise his trade at Paintsville.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our husband and father, Malcolm V. Ferguson, who passed away Jan. 12, 1975:

One year has gone by since God called you away: Our hearts were broken then and still are today. Your gentle face and patient smile we still recall, The kind words you had for us, and died beloved by all. You are not forgotten, loved one, and you never will be. For as long as life lasts we will always remember thee. We miss you, daddy, our hearts are sore; As time goes by we will miss you more. Your loving smile and gentle face, No one that can ever fill your vacant place. We loved you then, we love you still. As time goes by, we always will. God Bless You Sadly missed by Wife and Son

Art Therapy Offered First at L'ville U.

A young man sat for an hour staring at the sheet of paper lying on the table before him. Crayons were neatly tucked in a box nearby.

Once a week for 12 weeks he had entered the same room, sat at the same table and stared. The crayons remained undisturbed.

On the 13th week, he picked up a black crayon and drew three uneven, parallel lines in the lower right hand corner of the page.

"It was more beautiful than a Rembrandt," the speaker told her audience.

Hanna Kwiatkowska, a professor at George Washington University in Washington, D. C., was a panelist at a recent convention of the American Art Therapy Association sponsored by the University of Louisville.

She is an art therapist who uses fine arts for the prevention and treatment of mental and emotional disturbances.

Her description of the young man, one of her more dramatic cases, is only one example of the work art therapists throughout the country are doing.

Art therapy was first offered as a university-level program at the University of Louisville. It is relatively new as a mental health profession, although art has been used in psychotherapy for many years. It is adaptable to the treatment of children, adolescents, adults, senior citizens or entire families.

The University of Louisville's Institute of the Expressive Therapies is considered one of the country's leading centers for educating young art therapists. Founded in 1973 as a part of the graduate school, it became the first institution in the country to offer a master's program in art therapy.

Graduate work in art therapy was first initiated at the University by Dr. Raymond Bixler, of the psychology department, in May 1958. A master's degree was given from that department in cooperation with the art department. The program graduated two students but later died for lack of interest. It remained a part of the University but was inactive.

There was an upsurge of interest in the field during the middle and late 1960s, and Sandra Kagin was hired in 1969 to reactivate the program and to serve as its coordinator and director.

Kagin attributed this new interest in art therapy to a rise in "humanistic psychology." Also, it occurred at a time during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations when more federal funds were expended for mental health, she said.

Kagin, like so many art therapists, did not receive college training in the field. She did her graduate work on exceptional children and received in-service training at Children's Medical Center in Tulsa, Okla. Her art background eventually led her to the art therapy field.

When the first courses were offered at U of L under a revised program in January 1970, four students—all from Louisville—were majoring in art therapy. The institute became an outgrowth of the new program.

There has been a steady increase in enrollment at the institute, and 57 students have graduated since then. Today about 90 percent of the institute's students are from outside Kentucky.

Mental health institutions throughout the country are realizing the value of art therapy, so the institute's students are in great demand, Kagin said.

During their training period, students work at the institute's clinic as well as with many local agencies to obtain field experience.

"Our national reputation has preceded any local reputation," Kagin said. "For awhile there was no place outside the University of Louisville to study. Now, while there are other programs elsewhere, we still are the oldest."

Kagin said about 10 institutions in the country are offering degrees and others are working to organize programs. But, because of its reputation, the institute receives inquiries from prospective students from as far away as Canada and England.

Only 20 students are admitted each year as majors because of the necessity for individualized attention.

The Hills of Home

By DELTA ROSE MILLS

It is strange and curious how landmarks will stand in a country, ignored and unsung by the people living there, and accepted as nothing extraordinary by the children growing up among them, as, for instance, the mountains surrounding the valley where my family lived, and we grew up.

All our lives we had looked at the two high mountains—the ominous-seeming bulk of Mt. Hope to the north, overlooking Cumberland river, and for miles beyond, and the brooding Rattlesnake mountain facing Mt. Hope to the south, rising to the highest point in many miles, dominating the valley, and strictly off limits to the native in summer, being over-run with rattlesnakes, that stayed mostly at home, except in dry weather, when they came to drink at the creek that divided the two mountains, and a few would stray up Mt. Hope. However there were never as many reptiles on Mt. Hope as made their home on Rattlesnake.

The mountains were isolated places, and as usual, tales and folk-lore common to people living in the hills were told of them, partly fact, partly fiction, bit if a hardy soul hunted long enough he would find a lonely grave hidden among the trees on Mt. Hope, said to be the grave of a peddler, who came through the country at intervals, selling jewelry and notions, who had been killed, robbed and buried there.

No one lives near these mountains now, the forests have taken over and the snakes must have multiplied by the hundreds.

There were also a few "sink holes" in the valley to be casually avoided by the children who were told the sinks apparently had no bottom, and they believed it. But these dangers too were accepted as a way of life, and by the grace of God, somehow they managed to protect themselves, for as I remember no child was ever seriously hurt by the hazards of the country.

What Must We Do To Be Saved?

One of the biggest questions of our time is: Was Jesus Christ the son of God, and if he was what must I do to be saved?

In the third chapter of St. John we find a story of a man named Nicodemus, who wanted to know how to be saved. Jesus told him he had to be born again. Nicodemus could not understand how a man, being old, could be born again. Being born again seemed like an impossible thing to him. This is the story of a man who walked in the flesh, and had no understanding of the spirit. We are saved in the spirit, the flesh will go back to the dust. Ecclesiastes 12:7—Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God, who gave it.

Romans 10:9—That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

Believe in your heart that he is Christ, and tell others he is the Christ. People do many things trying to be saved. They give money, work in the church, some would even give their lives. They do all kinds of things but the one thing they should do is come to Christ.

You are saved by grace through faith in Christ. Acts 16:25-35—We find the Philippian jailer asking Paul and Silas what he had to do to be saved. Did they tell him to work to be saved, or give the church money? No, they said unto him, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you shall be saved."

We are not just to believe with our minds but with our hearts. Some people are hoping they are saved. Romans 8:24—For we are saved by hope, but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? The word to be used here is not hope but faith. Since faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, our hope becomes faith and our faith saves by the grace of God. Once we are saved, why should we hope we are saved. Hope without faith will get you no place with God. So let us quit hoping, and have faith.

How should we go about becoming a Christian. We can come to Him by saying, "I— come to you, O God, with an open heart, asking that through the blood of your son Jesus, who died for my sins, that you save me. You have promised in your Holy Word, the Bible, that all who come to you will be saved. So I am asking that you save me."

How will you know you are saved? You will know because you will want to live a new life. You see, now that you have accepted Christ, He lives in you. Let me say to you here that Christians are not made, they are born. Will you now come to Christ? Our country is in trouble, our homes and families are in trouble, our schools are in trouble. And the only answer to a better world is a return to God. If you are not saved, get saved, Jesus is soon coming!

Public Access to Gov't Records May Be Debated by Assembly

Because a democratic government is founded on the principle of citizen selection of public officials, many people feel this carries an implied right for citizens to have access to public records as evidence of government operations.

This "right" may be debated when the 1976 Kentucky General Assembly addresses the issue of open records.

Legislation has been prefiled which would give citizens access to virtually all records not specifically closed by law.

Over the years, citizens have shown little desire to delve into public records. But in the 1960's, efforts to get access to records increased as part of a broader movement by news media and various student and public interest groups to make government more open and more responsible for its actions.

Some public officials were concerned that records containing personal information might be opened, thereby creating an invasion of privacy. Some felt that a great demand for records might disrupt the operation of government because of the time that would be spent gathering information to comply with citizens' requests.

In 1966, Congress decided that the importance of citizen access to public records outweighed potential problems, and it passed the federal Freedom of Information Act. Because of certain loopholes and federal agency obstruction, amendments were passed in 1974 to strengthen the measure.

An analysis of state laws published by a Washington based public interest group shows that 44 states have some type of public records law. Kentucky's current law, enacted in 1958, requires that, unless otherwise provided by law, all papers, books and other records required to be kept by an agency shall be open to inspection by any interested person. The law also provides that a copy of the record shall be furnished upon request.

The law has been given a narrow interpretation since its enactment, which has sharply restricted public access to records.

In determining who is an interested person, public officials have used the common law definition that a person is interested only when the records requested are necessary to support a law suit, and until recently, this definition was upheld by the courts. Public officials also have interpreted "agency," to mean only a state agency and not a local government unit.

On November 22, 1974, the Kentucky Court of Appeals struck down the use of the common law definition of "interest" as a prerequisite for inspecting public records.

However, the court left many questions to be resolved by the legislature. During the 1974-'75 interim, the Interim Committee on State Government appointed a subcommittee to study these concerns, and the study resulted in legislation which has three basic purposes—to define "public record"; to identify those records which would continue to be kept confidential; to establish guidelines for public officials to follow in allowing citizens to inspect their records.

Under the bill a public agency would have three days in which to respond to a request for information, and each agency would be required to publish rules and regulations for complying with the act. Among records which would remain closed to the general public under the act are certain business and police records, test questions used in administering academic or professional examinations, preliminary drafts and memoranda of a public agency and personal information, disclosure of which would constitute an invasion of privacy. Individuals would, however, be allowed to inspect records maintained on them or in which they were mentioned.

GOP To Ask Pike County Probe

By ED RYAN
(In The Courier-Journal)

Frankfort, Ky.—The Republican Party of Kentucky decided last Saturday to ask U. S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi to investigate allegations that Pike county strip-mine operators were pressured to give large sums of unreported money to Gov. Julian Carroll's campaign.

"We have to fully recognize that we will get no satisfaction on the state level with this; we should recognize the futility of that," said state Rep. Harold DeMarcus, R-Stanford, who asked that the GOP State Central Committee seek a federal probe.

Last month the Republicans called on Carroll and the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance to investigate the allegations made public in an article in The Courier-Journal Nov. 27.

"The Registry of Election Finance owes its entire allegiance to the present (Carroll) administration," DeMarcus charged.

The registry is the legal watchdog of campaign spending in Kentucky. Its directors have held on hearing on the Pike County matter. They called three Republican leaders who advocated an investigation and Kyle Vance, the reporter who wrote the newspaper story. Little was learned.

DeMarcus' resolution, approved by a unanimous voice vote yesterday, said the alleged solicitations, if they occurred, may have violated federal law.

He referred to the newspaper story, which quoted sources as saying that coal operators solicited for funds were promised that John Stanley Hoffman soon would be removed as secretary of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

Hoffman, who remains in his job, reportedly is disliked by coal operators for his tough stand on reclamation of mined land.

Eugene E. Siler Jr., a former U. S. attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky and now a federal judge, already has said he would consult with his successor and the Federal Bureau of

ANNOUNCE BIRTH

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Wallen, of Stanville, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, Jan. 13, at the Pikeville Methodist hospital. The baby has been named Heather Renee.

Mrs. Wallen, the former Susan Porter, is the daughter of Mrs. John M. Porter of Prestonsburg. The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Wallen, of Stanville.

Investigation to see if a violation of the federal Hobbs Act might be involved.

The Hobbs Act prohibits the use of coercion in fund solicitations.

Atty. Gen. Levi disclaims any party of affiliation but is in a Republican administration. Siler is a Republican.

Carroll defeated Robert E. Gable, the Republican candidate for governor, by about 193,000 votes in the Nov. 4 election.

Adding his support to the Republicans' request for a federal investigation was former Gov. Louie B. Nunn, who attended Saturday's state central committee meeting.

Nunn chided new state Atty. Gen. Robert Stephens for saying in a radio interview yesterday that he planned to keep the attorney general's office.

"There no better way to separate himself than by beginning an investigation (in the Pike county charges)," Nunn said.

Nunn told the state party leaders that a presidential primary contest in Kentucky between President Ford and challenger Ronald Reagan will "whet the political appetite" of Republicans and be "a wholesome and healthy situation."

Nunn is working for Reagan in several states but didn't make a pitch for him. The Kentucky presidential primary is May 25.

Portrait of an Educator

By SALLY WILSON

can influence students so profoundly simply by being what they are.

Teachers can change attitudes in ways that are impossible to measure, he said, noting the theory that we all become a part of everything we meet.

It is all of this that Graham means when he talks about the oneness of education—the intellectual and practical skills, the attitudes and character traits which the child, aided by his teachers, brings together to shape his view of the world and of his own place in it.

Graham's belief that education is a unified whole marks him as an idealist, but, at the same time, he recognizes that making his belief a reality in the classroom must come from practical measures.

He would like, for example, to give teachers more planning time during the day. And, he said, he would like to eliminate as many errands and forms as possible so that teachers might devote their time to the real business of education.

Graham also plans to take a serious look at the size of Kentucky's schools. He wonders if they are becoming so consolidated that the closeness between students and their teachers is being lost. Perhaps, he said, we are losing something that a modern building cannot replace.

In another move against fragmentation, Graham, who wants to emphasize leadership rather than forms and regulations, said he would like to bring the department together under one roof. Achieving goals depends upon people working together effectively rather than working in isolation, he said. Also, he added, such a move could facilitate a continuing study of the department's structure to see if it might meet the needs of children more effectively.

Graham would also like to reduce the fragmentation which sometimes exists because of the different points of view held by the department—which deals primarily with general policies and programs—and by the local school boards—which must solve the practical problems of implementing the programs Graham should be effective at reconciling these points of view, since, as his background well attests, he's been there.

"I think I have the viewpoint from the local school district," he said. "If I bring anything (to the superintendent's job), I bring that. I think I know what's on the minds of many people who have to implement the programs. I share their frustrations, hopes and dreams for education."

As the conversation turned to specific policies and programs, Graham said, "It is one hope of mine to make education as free as possible."

Pointing out that he was one of 13 children in his family who were going to school during the Depression, he said that he knew what a financial hardship could be on a family. Consequently, he feels that fees for text books and instructional materials should be eliminated.

Graham also said he strongly believes in a return to the basic skills of education—reading, writing and arithmetic. Noting with concern the recent studies showing that millions of Americans cannot read grocery advertisements or fill out a job application, Graham said he would like a great deal of emphasis placed on the first through fourth grade. And, he said, there should be an early childhood program.

Graham is also a strong believer in equal educational opportunity, both through equalizing funds and through Title IX, which prohibits sex discrimination in the schools.

In general, he said, "What I want for myself, I want for the other person in equal measure."

Among other things, Graham mentioned career education, consumer education, human relationships, civic responsibility and vocational education as being concerns of his and of the people in the state.

But these hopes for education do not keep Graham from recognizing the practical problems of providing for them. In the past, he said, "Local boards have been called upon to do too much when they did not have the resources, time or means to do it as well as people wanted it done."

And, he said, we must be very conscious of how we spend tax dollars.

Graham was quick to point out that this didn't mean that he opposed any of these programs. But he said that he was afraid that if more years or more programs were added to the school system without adding more money, education would be watered down. And, he said, he wants what we have to be good.

Whatever his hopes for education and whatever his achievements during his four years as superintendent, Graham said that he hopes there will be a constant "spirit of looking for something better—we haven't met eternity yet."

Miss Hicks Is Local Betty Crocker Winner

Diana Lynn Hicks has been named Prestonsburg High School 1975-76 Betty Crocker Family Leader of Tomorrow. She competed with other seniors in a written knowledge and attitude examination, December 2. Miss Hicks will receive a certificate from General Mills, sponsor of the annual educational scholarship program, and becomes eligible for state and national honors.

State Family Leaders of Tomorrow receive a $1,500 college scholarship while state second-place winners receive a grant of $500. The state winner also earns for his or her school, a 20-volume reference work, "The Annals of America," from Encyclopaedia Britannica Educational Corporation.

In the spring, state winners and their faculty advisors will be the guests of General Mills on an expense-paid educational tour to Washington, E. C. A special event of the tour is the announcement of the All-American Family Leader of Tomorrow, whose scholarship will be increased to $5,000. Second, third and fourth place winners will receive scholarship increases to $4,000, $3,000 and $2,000 respectively.
