

Perkins-Called Meet Airs ADD Grievances

Fifth District's Friend's Windfall Termed 'Mistake'

Pat Dillon, federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) representative, assured members of the Big Sandy Area Development District Board, Congressman Carl D. Perkins, and other representatives of various state and federal agencies Friday that HUD would adopt new regulations and make "adjustments" within a project priority rating system that allowed a distribution of the federal agency's funds in Eastern Kentucky which most Big Sandy ADD board members and local officials consider one-sided and unfair.

Dillon's statement came at an all-day meeting at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, which was sponsored by Big Sandy ADD as a follow-up to a June 24 session in Congressman Perkins' Washington, D. C. office.

"I really can't explain the statistics," Dillon told the group, referring to the fact that over two-thirds of all HUD funds for fiscal year 1975-76 went to Republican Congressman Tim Lee Carter's Fifth District. Dillon blamed the apparent inequities on a "faulty" system of judging priorities and stressed that there was nothing "political" involved in the granting of federal funds.

The topic of HUD's funding practices for the current fiscal year was brought up by Prestonsburg Mayor William O. Goebel, Jr., who questioned why most of the federal funds went to the Fifth District and expressed displeasure at having this ADD board "treated like a step-child."

Aside from Dillon's statement, there was little discussion of the topic of HUD funding, a matter which prompted the June 24 meeting in which 16 individuals from Big Sandy ADD met with Congressman Perkins, HUD officials, and representatives of the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), to express concern over the imbalance of grant monies.

Congressman Perkins opened Friday's meeting, which featured a number of representatives from various federal and state agencies. He stressed the point that "we are here to answer your questions, and let you know just what is available in the way of funds." Perkins discussed the Farmers' Home Administration (FmHA), a key funding agency for the state's area development districts, and pointed out, "We haven't got as much money as we feel we should have." Perkins stressed the importance of submitting applications and proposals in a clear, understandable way, "so the funding agency won't have to keep sending them back." Congressman Perkins referred to Friday's session as a "general information meeting" and told the group, which also consisted of many citizen representatives from area communities, "I just want to be able to assist you people when you come to any of these governmental agencies."

Gene Graves, FmHA supervisor for the five-county area which includes Floyd, reviewed area projects which are being funded by his agency. Graves said the Prestonsburg sewerage-water expansion project was "pretty well done," and the Abbott-Little Paint water system is

Crossing Mishap At Cliff Feared Fatal to Driver

Albert Laferty, 63-year-old Cliff farmer, is in critical condition at a Lexington hospital after the truck which he was driving was hit by Chessie System freight train early Monday morning at a crossing in front of his residence. His son, Charlie Laferty, 41, suffered lesser hurts.

A relative reported that it was said at the hospital that Mr. Laferty had suffered such extensive brain damage that he is not expected to recover.

The accident occurred around 8 a.m. while fog obscured vision at a distance. The son was quoted as saying he and his father looked for the approach of a train when they pulled near the crossing but did not see the freight till the truck was on the tracks. The son leaped from the truck and was attempting to pull his father from the cab when the train struck the vehicle, broadside. The truck was dragged along the tracks, then thrown over an embankment, a distance estimated at 30 yards.

The crossing is not blacktopped and was described as being in disrepair. Relatives of the injured man said rail employees had told them they were not required to sound a warning whistle as a train approaches the farm crossing. They said no whistle was heard prior to Monday morning's crash.

Hayden Fails In Second Jail Break Attempt

Gene Hayden, who escaped the custody of a turnkey as he was being booked at the county jail here July 2 on a warrant charging grand larceny, tried another break, this time unsuccessful, as he was returned to jail Sunday night by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, Deputy Sheriff Randall Lewis and ABC Agent Ted Salisbury.

Arrested on the Conley Fork of Spurlock by the officers, Hayden again tried the break as he was being booked at the jail here. This time, however, he was apprehended before he could make his way out of the jail. Charges of theft by unlawful taking, grand larceny, jail escape and reckless driving were lodged against Hayden.

Arrested last Tuesday at Toler Creek by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and Deputy Sheriffs Doug and Randall Lewis was Raymond Coleman. Coleman, who had moved to the area from Pike county only a few weeks earlier, was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages after the officers recovered 30 cases of beer in a nearby "coal bank." Coleman was fined $57 in Magistrate Dewey Roberts' court. A 30-day jail term was suspended.

Sheriff's Department officers arrested Kenneth Hall, of Dema, Knott county on a possession charge Saturday night after confiscating three cases of beer and a fifth of wine from the truck he was driving. Hall, who allegedly had been selling beer at the Almar Drive-In, reportedly attempted to flee from the officers when the tailgate of his pickup fell open, revealing the illegal beverages. Hall paid a fine of $45 in Magistrate Bill Wells' court.

Stumbo Says Jurors' Letter About Courthouse '50% Right'

County Judge Henry Stumbo said this week that members of a circuit court jury who criticized the fiscal court for the condition of the courthouse (July 14 edition of The Floyd County Times) was "about 50 per cent right" but was unfair to him and the court in their failure to meet with the court and learn the facts before writing a letter for publication.

"Speaking for myself, I can say I have not been just sitting around while this condition existed," he said. "The court has spent about $50,000 on the roof and plumbing, and still we have trouble. If we could have had hindsight when the courthouse was planned, we, of course, would not have the jail on the top floor."

Floyd Man Asks $250,000 Award Of Mineworkers

Mike Little, owner of the Melvin Gas Company and a former miner, last Wednesday filed suit in circuit court here against the United Mine Workers of America, asking restoration of his UMW pension benefits and $250,000 punitive damages.

His was the second suit of the week asking heavy punitive damages. The other action was filed by Vada Rogers, Carl, Cecil and Edward Adkins and Hazel Means against the Flatwoods Coal Company, asking $250,000 punitive damages and an accounting of coal mined from their land on Toler Creek and also of coal hauled across their property.

Little's petition points out that he was notified in March of this year that he owed the UMW Pension Fund $3,945 for payments made to him from April, 1974 during periods when the UMW claims he was not eligible for payments. He alleges that the denial of pension payments to him was "wrongful, capricious, wanton, wilful and without due regard" to his rights.

In a hearing of his case held at Allen

The jury, Judge Stumbo feels, expressed criticism of the courthouse annex now under construction to provide jail quarters for juveniles and space for offices. "They're 100 per cent wrong on that," he said. "The building is absolutely necessary. Every day that we keep juveniles in the present jail, we are in violation of the law." (The Court of Appeals has held that juveniles must be held in detention beyond sight and sound of adult prisoners.)

Stumbo said he plans contacting an architect to determine if a drainage system from jail bathrooms to outside drainage is feasible.

W'wright Policeman Under $3,000 Bond

Policeman Harold Bates, of Wheelwright, executed $3,000 appearance bond here last week following his arrest by State Trooper D. Williamson on a warrant charging him with second degree assault. Bates appeared before Trial Commissioner Yvonne S. McCormick, accompanied by his attorney, and indicated he will ask for an examining trial.

The warrant for the officer's arrest was issued on the affidavit of James Hobart Blevins, who said that Bates "did unlawfully commit the offense of assault in the second degree by causing physical injury to the affiant by striking him with a dangerous instrument."

A brother of the complainant said Monday that grand jury action will be sought against Bates.

Trustee Seeks Private Sale For Princess

Robert K. Wood, trustee in the bankruptcy proceeding of the Princess Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Auxier, has filed application with Bankruptcy Judge Joe Lee, of the Eastern U. S. district court, for permission to sell at private sale the manufacturing plant, equipment and real estate of the company.

The sale, the petition points out, is intended to be made to Frank Dawahare, Jr., of Lexington, on his bid of $160,000. A hearing on the application will be held at 1 p.m. August 11 in the U. S. district courtroom, Pikeville, and at that time the court will receive any higher offer for the purchase of the property.

Dawahare's offer is for all the remaining personal property of Princess Manufacturing, including two real estate parcels, on one of which is a house and on the other the manufacturing plant and equipment.

Mr. Dawahare, a Lexington merchant, said a few weeks ago that three of the top men in the garment industry are committed to association with him in the plant operation, if legal and financial problems besetting the plant can be solved. He predicted the annual production of 80,000 sports coats. The plant would be operated as a union shop or non-union, depending upon the desires of workers, he said.

The Dawahare plan envisions the establishing of one such plant in each of possibly 10 counties of the area to provide the diversification of industry that is so badly needed.

Has your luck at fishing, pinocle or just simple breathing gone sourer than usual? Blame it on Dog Days, that season when snakes are said to be blind and the water is pizen and scratches won't heal, and Sirius, the Dog Star, rises and sets with the sun. 5-Ton Limit Set On Martin Bridge

Because of damages resulting when a large truck loaded with a bulldozer crashed into the end post of the steel truss bridge on KY 80, near the junction of KY 80 and KY 122 in the west end of Martin, a five-ton load limit has been placed on the span, it was announced last week by G. B. Mullins, district engineer, Bureau of Highways, Pikeville.

The bridge was damaged July 9, and after an inspection by Bureau of Highways engineers four days later it was decided to restrict the load limit. The five-ton limit will remain in effect until repairs can be made, Mr. Mullins said.

Council Warns Developers Of 5-Mile Zoning Authority

Following last Thursday's meeting of the City Council, Mayor William O. Goebel, Jr. and the eight members of the Council this week notified by newspaper advertisement all planners and developers of subdivisions of the authority the city has under state law over subdivisions within a five-mile radius of Prestonsburg.

Developers were advised to contact city officials and submit plats of proposed development. Kentucky statute 100.131 gives the city zoning powers governing areas within a five-mile radius. An example of such jurisdiction was the action taken several years ago to halt building development on Stratton Branch, near Dewey Lake.

A Downtown Improvement Committee was named at last week's meeting to work with Mayor Gobel in a study of needs of the central business district and to make recommendations for its upgrading. All three appointees—"Huck" Francis, Tommy Rose and Mrs. Clyde Burchett—are representatives of

2 Federal Grants Total $235,000.00; C. & O. Deed Waited

Two federal grants totaling $235,000 for the proposed Floyd county recreation center near Allen became effective June 30 and will remain in effect till Dec. 31, 1978, Congressman Carl D. Perkins' Washington office told The Times last week.

County Judge Henry Stumbo said Tuesday that the county expects the project to be completed well before the terminal date set on the grants.

"We're pushing this project," Judge Stumbo said. Howard D. Bell Engineers, of Lexington, already have preliminary plans made and are continuing work necessary to get an early start on the job. "We want to be ready to advertise for bids and let a contract as soon as we get a deed from C. & O.," he added.

The fiscal court's offer to buy C. & O. acreage as a part of the park site has been accepted, but the deed has not yet been signed and returned here. Another portion of the park was given the county by National Mines Corporation.

One of the grants effective June 30 was for $205,000, made by the Appalachian Regional Commission. The second, from Land and Water Conservation funds, is for $30,000.

The funds, according to Congressman Perkins, are for the operation of an 85-acre park with a circulation road, parking, lighted ballfields with dugouts, bleachers and restrooms, lighted tennis and basketball courts, picnic and play areas, a swimming pool, bathhouse, walks, paths, fencing and security lighting.

Also planned for the park is a nine-hole golf course.

Johns Cr. Rail Completion Set Within 2 Years

A $13-million railway construction project into the Johns Creek section of Pike county was announced last week by Chessie System officials.

The nine-mile railway, scheduled for completion in 1978, will link Johns Creek coal mines with the main Big Sandy division line at Coal Run, Pike county, connecting to Scotts Branch and the Johns Creek and Coon Creek branch lines.

A major factor leading to the new construction is the Pickens-Mather Coal Company's new Scotts Branch mine which is expected to be in operation this fall. It is expected to have a production capacity of 96 railroad cars a day and by 1978 an annual production of 1.5 million tons.

The proposed rail line will replace almost nine miles of the 14.8-mile route which extends from Levisa Junction to Winns, W. Va., along with the Lower Pompey Branch which was built in 1946. The old branch will be abandoned from Millard to a point near Milepost 9 on Coon Creek.

The railroad will realize substantial service improvements in constructing the new route, which will eliminate track grades of up to 3 per cent. Grades on the new route will not exceed 1.2 per cent against loads and 2 per cent against

Akers-Nelson Vows Said

In a double-ring ceremony performed June 26, Miss Jeannie Akers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Euhlan Ray Akers, of Dana, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Dean Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nelson, of Banner.

The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Walter L. Akers, officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white nylon acetate daisy lace, with rows of nylon organza ruffles at the hemline and puffed sleeves. The velveteen ribbon at the waistline tied in back with streamers to the hemline. Her elbow-length veil was nylon illusion on a camelot style head-piece, and she carried a bouquet of blue daisies, white miniature carnations and green and white baby's breath.

Miss Janet Lynn Akers, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a pale blue and white floor-length gown and carried a bouquet of blue daisies, white miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Mr. Randy Mullins, of Harold, served as best man.

Mrs. Akers, mother of the bride, wore a peach street-length dress with matching accessories.

Mrs. Nelson, mother of the groom, wore an orange and white street-length dress with matching accessories.

Well-Known Ceramic Sculptor To Head Workshop at PCC

David Middlebrook, an innovative and noted ceramic sculptor and teacher, will conduct a workshop at Prestonsburg Community College here, the week-end of July 24 and 25.

Mr. Middlebrook received his Masters of Fine Arts at the University of Iowa in 1970 and has since worked as Professor of Art at the University of Kentucky at Lexington, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and San Jose State College in San Jose, California. He has participated in many exhibitions, one man shows and over 33 workshops and jury duties in colleges and universities. He utilizes innovative wheel and hand-building techniques for forming unique and totally original ceramic sculpture. His work expresses a freedom to do with the clay exactly what he wishes and his teaching style is noted for his ability to give his students the same energy and excitement toward the clay that enables him to do this.

Ronald T. Benson, currently Head of Art Education at the University of Kentucky said in an introduction to an exhibition of Mr. Middlebrook's and his students' at the University of Kentucky that: "Providing students with an atmosphere that nurtures trust and confidence to raise questions about himself and society, as well as the aesthetic dimension, Middlebrook had defined rich new possibilities for young artists in the treatment of form and expression. While these artists share Middlebrook's abundant energy and humane spirit, they seldom mimic his subject matter. The exhibition is testimony that Middlebrook does not emphasize techniques to the exclusion of philosophy."

The workshop will be conducted Saturday and Sunday, July 24th and 25th beginning at 3 p.m. Saturday. It is co-sponsored by the Community Service Program Potters' Guild at Prestonsburg Community College, and the Kentucky Arts Commission.

Further information on registration and fees may be obtained by contacting James W. Ratliff, coordinator of Community Services, Prestonsburg Community College, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653, (606) 886-3863.

Miseries of the Courthouse

Members of a Floyd circuit court jury last week in a letter to this newspaper expressed their dismay, if not downright anger, upon observing the condition of the courthouse here. They rendered more than mere jury service by doing so.

Apparently, the major cause of damage to the relatively new courthouse has been from water—first of all, water through a leaky roof, and later from one or more faulty drains and from clogged bathroom commodes.

The fiscal court filed suit against the contractor, or his subcontractor, to force repair of the roof. While the suit was pending the court had the roof repairs made. Later, the plumbing was overhauled.

But all this cannot prevent a drunken or malicious prisoner from cramming a towel into the bowl of a commode, then flushing it and causing a heavy spill of water onto the bathroom floor. Meanwhile, the ceilings and walls of second-floor offices, particularly those of the circuit court clerk's, suffer and remain in unsightly condition. Clerk's assistants work, never knowing the moment when another spill will come down onto them or their desks. Under such conditions records are not safe.

The fiscal court has been concerned about the situation for a long time now. The solution to the problem is one which is not easy. As long as the jail occupies the top floor of the building, bathroom overflows will occur. The jail was placed there for security reasons, but from the vantage point of hindsight it is apparent now that that was a mistake. Then what to do?

A new jail could be built, and the present jail quarters converted into needed office space, but that would entail heavy expense. Perhaps the cheaper and more practical thing to do would be to make the jail floor waterproof or to provide some means of drainage.

Other courthouses with top-floor jails are having the same, or similar, problems. But, however much misery may love company, that doesn't remove the misery.

Stranger in the Night

"The Great Chief in Washington sends word that he wishes to buy our land. How can you buy or sell the sky—the warmth of the land? The idea is strange to us. Yet we do not own the freshness of the air or the sparkle of the water. How can you buy them from us? Every part of this earth is sacred to my people . . .

"We know that the white man does not understand our ways. One portion of the land is the same to him as the next, for he is a stranger who comes in the night and takes from the land whatever he needs. The earth is not his brother but his enemy, and when he has conquered it he moves on. He leaves his father's grave and his children's birthplace is forgotten.

"There is no quiet place in the white man's cities. No place to hear the leaves of spring or the rustle of insect wings. But perhaps I am savage and do not understand—the clatter only seems to insult the ears. And what is there to life if a man cannot hear the lovely cry of the whippoorwill or the arguments of the frog around the pond at night?

"The whites, too, shall pass—perhaps sooner than the tribes. Continue to contaminate your bed and you will one night suffocate in your own waste. When the buffalo are all slaughtered, the wild horses all tamed, the secret corners of the forest heavy with the scent of many men, and the view of the ripe hills blotted out by talking wires. Where is the thicket? Gone. Where is the eagle? Gone. And what is it to say goodbye to the swift and the hunt, the end of living and beginning of survival?"

—From a letter written and sent to President Franklin Pierce in 1855 by Chief Sealth of the Duwanish tribe.

empties. The steep grades on the present route sharply limit train size, speed, and frequency and call for heavy use of locomotive power.

Equipment savings on the new route are expected to be about $1.5 a year, it was said.

The track-building program will include construction of a 1,700-foot tunnel and five bridges, including two major spans across the Big Sandy River.

Included are construction of two 110-car sidings, east of Coal Run; construction for a direct connection between Johns Creek and the new bypass; and rearrangement of sidings on Coon Creek above Milepost 10.

The by-pass will mark the largest single construction project on Chessie System track in Kentucky since the original Johns Creek route was completed 12 years ago.

Nov. 13, 1975 the hearing officer held that pension payments shall be suspended for any month in which the pensioner is employed in the bituminous coal industry and that he is not to benefit until such time as when he is no longer "employed by an employer."

In the suit against the coal company the plaintiffs claim that Flatwoods Coal trespassed on their land, a tract of about 120 acres, in late 1973 "without any color of title," and began stripmining without their permission and continued to do so till April, 1975. At that time, the petition says, the company ceased mining but resumed work in November of that year. Plaintiffs claim the company also began stripping an adjacent tract and hauled the coal across their land in violation of their property rights.

A temporary injunction against the company was asked. (Only one side of damage suits is reported.)

resulted in the arrest of Earl Salisbury on a possession charge. The officers seized 192 cans of beer in the raid at Hunter and Salisbury paid a fine of $45 in Magistrate Wells' court.

Letters to the Editor

Trap as Well as Test?

Speaking of official contrariness, as who doesn't—a prime example of it seems to me to be the route mapped out here for those who are attempting to pass their driver's test. First they are required to negotiate Westminster Street, which will accommodate two horse-drawn wagons, two compact cars, and sometimes two large cars going in opposite directions with the loss of only one coat of paint. That is the preliminary to the real test of nerves, temper, you name it.

Then, after that comes the parallel parking test on Highland Avenue at one of the few places in town where the curb slants in some places and is for all practical purposes nonexistent and at all places drops off so that if the driver is not as skilled as he or she should be, is left with the car axle resting on the curb. Left, that is, when the accompanying officer immediately leaves without a backward look. It has been explained that this is according to instruction from above.

When it was suggested that the route be changed, pointing out that this particular place is a trap which even those who live on the street are sometimes caught in, it was counter-suggested that perhaps the city should correct the situation. This would only entail filling up to street level, building a retaining wall, and so on. A mere bagatelle compared with changing a set pattern.

No, I am not one of those who has been in this precarious position which seems embarrassing, infuriating, and even expensive, for unless the driver can find two or three strong men to lift the car there is no recourse except to call a wrecker. Personally, I'm just sick of seeing this go on week after week when it is completely unnecessary.

Members Ask Questions

We are interested members of the Big Sandy Rural Electric, yet we are not fully informed about the business details of the corporation. We would like for the answers to the following questions to be published in The Floyd County Times and any other county paper in which members are being served:

(When, where and at what time do the directors hold meetings? We ask this, so that interested persons may attend.)

What are the qualifications needed to be a board member?

When can a person register to have his name on the ballot and when is the deadline for that registration?

waiting on comments from the state Office of Local Government. The Water Gap water project awaits preliminary engineering reports, according to Graves.

The current problems of the Mud Creek Water District were discussed by several officials present and a group of Mud Creek residents was on hand to hear official comments. Barkley Sturgill, of Prestonsburg, chairman of the late Public Service Commission, called the Mud Creek project "one of the major water problems in Kentucky." Sturgill called the water system in the Mud Creek section "under-engineered and ver-financed" and he said the problem had been discussed with Congressman Perkins. Charles Mason, Economic Development Administration (EDA) representative, said EDA officials plan to meet with Mud Creek and Beaver Elkhorn Water District persons to discuss strategies for alleviating the inadequate service that many county residents are experiencing.

Dave Olson, representing the Environmental Protection Administration (EPA), said his agency's top priority is "cleaning up our water." He pointed out that of $62 million in EPA money which has been allotted for Kentucky, the Big Sandy area will receive $120,000. Olson said the relatively small amount set aside for the Big Sandy area resulted from the fact that "you don't have the pollution problems that other areas do."

Kentucky Department of Resources and Environmental Protection representative Jack Wilson sounded a discouraging note when he told the group that no grant money was now available for solid waste disposal for the Big Sandy area.

Chairman of the Big Sandy A.D. Dr. W. C. Hambley, of Pikeville, pointed to housing as one area of greatest need in the Big Sandy. "We're operating under an archaic housing system which involves high labor and materials and no competition," Hambley said, adding that a new emphasis is needed on durability in housing construction. "We're building houses that may not outlast the mortgage period," Hambley pointed out. He said long-range planning was needed in the construction of new housing and suggested locating schools and busing together, referring to the school-busing plan as housing "universes."

To offset diminishing federal money, Hambley urged the adoption of an occupational tax for fiscal courts. "We have to think of supplying an adequate tax base to help fund our own projects," Dr. Hambley said.

Complaints from Auxier

I know this letter will not endear me to the county officials of this county, but right is right and wrong is wrong.

I have lived in Auxier since January of 1974 and have built my home here. Our streets were in a deplorable condition until recently when they put a little asphalt on them.

Here is my problem though: The first thing that happened, they let a big coal truck, sometimes loaded, come in here and make deep holes in what road we had. In front of my house there are still three mudholes which measure two yards and 17 inches from the asphalt, which have had no gravel, red rock or asphalt put in them.

I have to work every day and I'm not here to defend myself. The first gravel that was delivered down here, one certain individual, who wasn't working, came out and instructed the county truckdriver to put the gravel over in front of his house, which he did.

I called our magistrate and told him about this and also who the individual was. He said that the gravel was supposed to be put over the whole street and assured me that the next trucks would put it all over the entire street. However, when the next red rock and gravel were delivered the same thing happened. The gravel and red rock were all put on the other side of the street. The mudholes are still in front of my house, with no red rock, gravel or asphalt in them.

I again called our magistrate and told him about it and said that I thought at least they could have put the asphalt in the center of the street. He said he had been down here and it looked like it was in the center to him. I'm afraid he doesn't see too well, though, because the asphalt is three yards and one inch from my property line. It is two yards and two inches from the other property line. This leaves me three yards and one inch of mud to park my car, which is two yards and ten inches wide.

You figure it out—I still have mud left over after I park my car.

I pay my taxes and I think that the least our officials could do is treat everyone fairly and not let individuals tell the road crews how to do their jobs. It seems that certain individuals are the bosses instead of our officials.

A Mountain Drive

I took a drive today along a scenic road that leads to the German Bridge camping grounds on our well-known Dewey Lake. The road wound around the side of the mountain beneath the overhanging trees, which made cool, shady patches on the road. I was enjoying the landscape about me when there ahead, on the side of the road in a patch of Black-Eyed Susans I saw garbage bags of all sizes and shapes with rubbish strewn everywhere.

This didn't dampen my spirits too much, because the day was beautiful and I could look down into the valley and see the homes of my neighbors and happy children running about. When I rounded the next curve not only did I see one pile of garbage but it was on both sides of the road and even into the ditch. My stomach did a handspring and my spirits dropped 'way down. Just then I saw a tiny rabbit go hopping across the road but, alas! he had to take the long way around, because of garbage he could not climb over. That's when it dawned upon me that my beautiful, leisure drive had turned into a trip through Garbageville. Yet I managed to see the sun playing games through the leaves of the trees and making dancing shadows on the road. I could hear the birds singing and I saw a dove light, just for the slightest moment, on top of a barrel of junk at the side of the road.

From the top of the mountain I expected to get a breath of fresh air and maybe get out and take a look at the mountains, the trees and the view. But the air was not fresh. In fact, the rubbish was almost everywhere and a kitten that someone had left behind was crying so, I got back in my car and started home.

Coming back down the narrow, winding road I saw the green grass and the blue sky. I saw a crow circling around overhead. The wind was blowing through the trees and a Bob White was calling from somewhere across the valley.

Won't you take a leisure drive through my valley and across the mountain to the German Bridge? If you can block out the garbage, trash and rubbish from your mind and see only the things that God meant for you to see, you will enjoy your drive and find there are many lovely things to see in spite of man's carelessness.

Cable TV Workshop Benefits by Grant

Frankfort, Ky.—Nash Cox, director of the Kentucky Arts Commission, announced the receipt of a Kentucky Humanities Council grant to be used for a Cable Television Workshop, scheduled for early November.

KAC Director of Public Media Jon Dunn said the main purpose of the workshop will be to educate the public in the many possibilities of cable television.

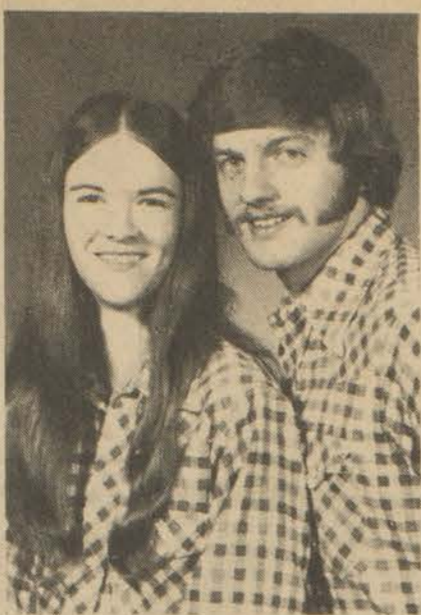

Cable television was initially designed to provide television service to areas where reception was difficult or impossible because of distance or topography but many other uses have been found. Many areas have discovered new uses after they had seemingly developed the use of cable to its fullest extent.

Participation in the workshop will lend awareness of the possibilities available to communities by involving others who have experienced or shared in the development of cable television in their areas.

Programs tentatively scheduled for the fall workshop are: Cable and the Political Life of a Community; Cable and the Social Life of the Community; Cable and the Cultural and Educational Life of the Community and Cable and the Health of the Community.

The workshop will be open to the public.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky delegation of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) ranked second nationwide in the total number of awards won at their 1976 National Convention, held recently in Miami Beach, Florida.

VICA members won 11 medallions in competition such as architectural drafting, bricklaying, welding and job interviewing. The 11 awards are a significant increase over last year.

Arthur Tackett, Ashland State Vocational-Technical School, was selected as one of the three finalists to represent the United States at the International Skills Olympics in Utrecht, Holland. Twenty-one nations will be represented.

Other winners include John Suvant and Doug Roberts, of the Daviess County club; John Lincoln, of the Ashland club; Ronnie Roberts, of the Madisonville club; Elisha Sharp, of the Hazard club and Jerome Williams, of the Bowling Green club.

Also winning medals were James Gosser, of the Russell County club, Elvadean Lambin of the Corgin club, and Pamela Wright, Annette McClendon, Charlene Ashley, JoCarol Fentress, Gladys Goldie, Deena Holstrom, Toni Webb and Howard Mills of the Glasgow club.

VICA is an organization for students enrolled in industrial education and health occupations. Designed to enable students to develop leadership qualities and occupational skills, it is operated as an integral part of the instructional program.

FLORENCE, Italy—Florence's ancient Archonfraternity of Misery, which aids the sick, the poor and others in need, has a rotating list of 2,850 active members drawn from all walks of life. Each devotes at least an hour a week to the order.

In a busy year the blackrobed members, their faces masked, respond to as many as 75,000 calls for help.

Dropout Training Studied By Education Commission

Frankfort, Ky.—According to Dr. Lyman Ginger, executive director of the State Commission for Postsecondary Education, one-third of all students never finish high school in Kentucky, resulting in a manpower source that may include almost a third of the population.

"What do you do with them? Do you plan and coordinate training programs so that you're sure you're preparing enough cooks, chefs, tailors or brick-masons?" asks Ginger. "We're talking about that big range of programs and occupations."

The commission he heads is responsible for determining what programs are needed for persons age 16 or over who are available for vocational, technical or non-professional career training below the collegiate baccalaureate level. He is also responsible for determining what occupations are needed in the state.

According to Ginger, Gov. Carroll's orders to the commission were to plan and recommend to him how programs in the state could be coordinated, and how vocational education can be related to the need for manpower in any particular occupation. The commission began July 1 under a 1976 law which was operational several months earlier under an executive order by Carroll. It has been working on finding out what vocational-technical training exists in the state.

"We have about 150 proprietary schools operating one way or another with vocational kinds of programs, a community college system which has career-type preparation, and a federal manpower program that involves 30 to 40 million dollars, in addition to 13 state vocational-technical schools coordinated by the state Board of Education," says Ginger.

The problem, according to the former state Superintendent of Public Instruction, is that there is little coordination between the different training systems and little though is given to what exists and what is needed.

"We are now beginning to get into the whole question of needs," says Ginger. "For example with cosmetologists in the state—How many do we need and where do we need them? How many programs do we have to meet that need? Are we under supplied or over supplied and where?"

Ginger says the commission won't reach a stage of recommending funding for various programs until after the first of the year and that one question facing it will be selecting certain programs for development. The needs analysis should provide the basis for this.

"In the coal mining industry, for instance, diesel mechanics may be needed along with other kinds of special skills," Ginger said. We can say to the Governor that one of the top priorities in developing the coal industry is to establish and give money to programs to train diesel mechanics.

"We want to be able to say, take this much money to develop a training program in that occupation over here because we need so many of them and take this much money for a program somewhere else and so on."

Ginger adds that federal legislation which calls for funneling of federal money for postsecondary education through the commission, but which has not been implemented by the state, will move the commission into the operational end of program development.

Mine Safety Comm. Sets Meeting, July 25-26, at Pikeville

The Deep Mining Safety Commission will hold a public meeting at the Pikeville College Campus on July 25-26.

The commission, created by Gov. Julian Carroll following the Scotia Mine Disaster, is responsible for reviewing Kentucky's underground mining laws and recommending improvements for consideration by the special session of the Kentucky General Assembly scheduled for later this year.

A highlight of the Pikeville meeting will be public hearing at Chrisman Auditorium, Monday evening, July 26, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Senator Kenneth Gibson (D-Madisonville), commission chairman, explained, "The commission is undertaking a comprehensive review of the problems relating to mine safety. We strongly feel that our best source of information is the person involved in mining coal on a day-to-day basis. We want to talk with the coal miner; we want to hear from the safety committeemen and from coal operators; we want an assessment of the problems from those involved in mine safety training and from those responsible for regulatory activities."

On Tuesday, the various task forces of the commission will work on specific problem areas relating to the future role and function of the state in underground safety; programs for training and certification of miners; and the feasibility of full-time safety officials in each mine.

In addition, the commission will hear an analysis of the causes of mine accidents presented by a United Mine Workers of America researcher from Washington, D. C., and listen to a state official from West Virginia discuss the new miner training and certification program that was recently implemented in that state.

All meetings of the commission will be held on the Pikeville College campus and are open to the public.

A Hundred Miles on Horseback State Unemployment Rate Up for Summer

By GEORGE L. MOORE

Not long ago I attempted to describe the old wagon trail from Limestone to Ibex. In this issue I would like to follow that same trail from Ibex to a point on Right Beaver Creek in Floyd county, some 30 miles above Prestonsburg.

As a small boy I sat by the fireside at night and listened to old settlers tell about this long journey through the mountains on horseback. As a young man, my father had made this trip many times. It was in the mid-20's that I induced him to make this trip with me.

We left about 3 a.m. on this long journey. After leaving Ibex, we crossed Big Caney and Little Caney and proceeded up the steep hill through the Kentucky Gap. This narrow, winding trail was hazardous in the days of the sidesaddle. Female riders had to use extreme care to keep the saddle horn from hooking on a sharp, jagged rock that protruded from the side of the road. Years later, when this road was graveled and graded, it was said to have the steepest grade of any road in the state. After we emerged on top of the cliff, we took a bridle path near a cut through the pine forest and came out on the old wagon trail at a point not far from Cracker's Neck. The name of this village has since been changed to Newfound-land. After traversing the Rowe Flats, we descended through a gap in the cliff and crossed the Little Sandy River. We followed up this river to a point just east of Sandy Hook. From here we turned due east and crossed two hills and came out on Middle Fork. We continued on through Isonville, followed a small stream up the valley and crossed through a low gap to the head of Blaine Creek in Lawrence county. We followed down this stream for about five miles, turned south and took a short cut to Keaton, in Johnson county.

It was in this vicinity that the first oil field in Eastern Kentucky was developed. This tiny village was the setting for a novel about people of the hill country. It centered around a country doctor and the oil drillers. I recall that in discussing the social life of the young people of the community the author said that they had two places to go—up on Keaton or down on Keaton. If they went up on Keaton one Saturday night they went down on Keaton the next Saturday night. We continued to travel through Johnson county and by noon we had reached a small village called Red Bush. It is 30 miles east of Sandy Hook and 15 miles west of Paintsville.

We ate dinner here at a roadside, country inn. The price was all you could eat for 50 cents and the same proposition was true for your horse. We were told that prices had doubled since the oil people came into the region. There were perhaps a dozen people eating at the long table. Any food you could not reach, you asked your neighbor to pass it to you. There was a large spoon in each dish and you dipped out as much as you wanted. In the platters of fried chicken, there was a two-pronged fork with which each diner speared his favorite piece. At the nearby barn you made your own selection of feed for your horse. The horse could have corn, as much as you wanted to feed him. There was a choice between oats and hay.

After dinner, we followed down Mudlick in the direction of Paintsville. Just before this stream enters the gorge there was an ancient sycamore standing just under the steep bank. It was sometimes called "the brandy tree." As a boy, I had heard many stories about it. My favorite one was told by "Uncle" George Stone. He said that in the early days a traveler could climb down the steep bank to the base of the tree where he would find a tin cup. The traveler would place a dime in the cup, give a jingle, and climb back up the bank to the road. After waiting about five minutes, the traveler would return, the dime would be gone, and the cup would be filled with apple brandy.

Just before this old wagon trail emerges from the gorge, it passes an underhanging cliff. It was just under this cliff that the Indians held Jenny Wiley captive for more than a year. It was at this point she escaped from the Indians and made her way to the safety of Harmon's Station at Blockhouse Bottom, five miles upstream from Paintsville.

We followed the old trail down Mudlick to the point where it flows into Big Paint Creek, about five miles south of Paintsville. From here we took a near cut across the mountain to Little Paint Creek. Both of these streams were named by the Indians. They were so called on account of the white spots on the green sycamore trees. In Indian lingo they were "the Streams of Painted Trees." After moving up Little Paint for a distance, we turned up Jenny's Creek. This creek, like scores of other places in Johnson county, was named in honor of Jenny Wiley. At this period in rural Johnson county, almost anyone you talked to could tell you a story about Eastern Kentucky's most famous woman. Many years later in reading Dr. Wheeler's book about her I could well understand why he ended it with this sentence: "Now this is the story of Jenny Wiley, as my grandmother told it to me."

From the head of Jenny's Creek we crossed into Floyd county. We had been traveling at a brisk, running gait during the long afternoon. As the slanting rays of the sun sank behind the mountains, we noticed that our horses were tiring and, to be honest, so were we. Darkness overtook us on Abbott Creek, about eight miles from Prestonsburg. We spent the night with a farmer and his wife. They lived in the largest two-story house I had ever seen. They had a large number of children, but, like many others in Appalachia, they had long since moved on to greener pastures.

We left the head of Abbott Creek early the next morning and followed a bridle path through the forest and came out on the old wagon trail on Wilson Creek. We followed it to Right Beaver and turned south up this creek where we reached our destination at 8 in the morning.

Kentucky's Unemployment rate rose to 6.5 per cent in June, up nine-tenths of a percentage point from May's rate of 5.6 per cent, according to figures released today by the Department for Human Resources.

Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the department, calls the increase "normal—due almost entirely to the seasonal factor of students seeking summer jobs." He explains that while there were 16,600 more Kentuckians out of work in June than in May, 13,300 of those unemployed persons were students. MacDonald says that similar increases in the June unemployment rates have been recorded in the past four years.

In June 1975, Kentucky's unemployment rate was 8.1 per cent or an estimated 117,500 unemployed persons. The 1976 rate of 6.5 represents 93,800 Kentuckians who are seeking employment—down 23,700 from the previous year.

REUNION CANCELLED

The family reunion of the Parley Flanery family, scheduled July 31-Aug. 1, has been cancelled because of the serious illness of Mrs. Flanery's mother.

"ATTENTION PARENTS"

The Prestonsburg Area Boosters Club was organized prior to the 1975-76 Grade School football season. With the support from local firms and individuals, the club was able to purchase all equipment needed to outfit 204 players.

Our members and parents have lost interest in attending meetings and unless support is obtained, we can no longer maintain our program. At present we have a proposal by the Floyd County Board of Education to the club, pending approval by club members.

To assure a continuing program of grade school football at Auxier, Clark and Prestonsburg Elementary Schools, we must have support from parents. If you are interested in keeping this program please attend the next meeting, Monday night, August 9, 1976, at the Floyd County Court House.

We must have parent support of this program or it will be discontinued. 1t-pd.

ATTENTION, DEVELOPERS

The City of Prestonsburg will exercise under KRS 100.131 its authority on subdivision regulations within a five-mile radius of the city. Any person developing or planning a subdivision should contact the city for approval of the plat for such subdivision.

Names Board To Aid Victims of Crimes

Frankfort, Ky.—The oath of office was administered today to the newly appointed members of the state Crime Victims Compensation Board. The new members, appointed by Gov. Julian Carroll, are Jack Miller, Lexington; Shelley T. Riberd, Glasgow; Earl Osborne, Gilbertsville; Fred Morgan, Paducah and Clarence Phillips, Newport.

These men will also compose the state Board of Claims, as provided for by House Bill 639, passed in the 1976 General Assembly.

Gov. Carroll directed, by executive order, the office of the lieutenant governor to administer the programs of both these boards.

The Crime Victims Compensation Board was created to help reimburse victims of crimes for part of their losses.

"These new programs will require a great deal of personal attention, and I feel that the lieutenant governor could make a great contribution to the function of Kentucky state government by providing administrative support services to these boards," Carroll said.

Earl Osborne, a former member of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, was named by Carroll as the chairman of the Crime Victims Compensation Board.

Kidd-Campbell Vows Said July 3

Miss Kathy Kidd became the bride of Mr. Terry M. Campbell in a ceremony solemnized by the pastor, Rev. Claude Ousley, at 1:30 p.m., Saturday, July 3, at the Regular Baptist Church in Ruggles, Ohio before an altar on which were placed candelabra with arrangements of yellow and white daisies.

Miss Kidd is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis B. Kidd, and Mr. Campbell is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Campbell, all of New London, Ohio.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of poly-chiffon fashioned with a scooped neckline, tucked bodice and full bishop sleeves accented with cluny lace. A panel of tucked chiffon formed an apron effect down the center front of the full skirt which flowed into a chapel train and a double flounce edged with matching lace encircled the hemline. Her only jewelry was a necklace, a gift from the groom, and she carried a handkerchief given her by Mrs. Elbert French. Her bouquet was a cascade arrangement of white sweetheart roses, mums, daisies, and fugi mums.

Her camelot headpiece was covered with clunylace and pearls with matching lace edging the fingertip veil of illusion.

Mrs. Richard Dankmyer, of Fairfield, O., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Carrie McCohn, of New London, O., and Miss Becky Young, of Norwalk, Ohio. They wore green floor-length halter dresses accented with orange, yellow and purple flowers and with matching shawls. They carried white lace parasols with yellow and white daisies.

Best man was Mr. Richard Dankmyer, of North Fairfield, O., brother-in-law of the bride, and ushers were Mr. Kevin Heileman and Mr. Larry Campbell, brother of the groom, both of New London.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kidd chose a floor-length dress of mint green. Her corsage was of white mums and yellow roses. Mrs. Campbell chose a floor-length gown in red, white, and blue, and her corsage was of white roses and red carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church. Assisting with the reception were Rita Harris, DeLee Jackson, Becky Switzer, and Mrs. Allen Williams, aunt of the bride.

After a wedding trip to Tennessee, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are residing in New London where she is employed at Macmillan Ward, Inc., and he attends North Central College where he is majoring in drafting.

Attending the wedding from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. George Meade and John Meade, all of Printer, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stewart, Rob and Joleen, of Harold.

Mrs. Campbell is a granddaughter of Mrs. Pricie Kidd Collins, of Honaker, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Sie Williams, of Printer.

Prisons To End Manufacture Of State License Plates

Frankfort, Ky.—Justice Secretary John L. Smith announced today that Kentucky Correctional Industries will end license plate production by the end of this year.

Smith said Correctional Industries is working with the Bureau of Motor Vehicles to ensure all commercial and supplemental tags for 1977 will be produced by the end of the year at the state reformatory tag plant at LaGrange.

Instead of manufacturing license plates, Smith said, the men at the reformatory will work in already existing prison industries which will be expanded and new industries which will be implemented by Jan. 1, 1978.

Director of Correctional Industries David E. Lampkin said the implementation of multi-year license tags in Kentucky has made it unfeasible to continue production. He said approximately $150,000 would be necessary to continue tag production, assuming the design remained the same.

Kentucky Correctional Industries is a self-supporting agency which receives no tax dollars. Their support comes from profits they realize from their products. "For that reason, we have to look at programs which will benefit us in years to come and which will keep our facilities busy every year," Lampkin said.

Their first project will be the expansion of their metal furniture division, Lampkin said. Metal frames are produced at the reformatory, then sold to the furniture plant at the state penitentiary near Eddyville where they are made into office furniture.

Lampkin said he also plans to sell the frames to other states and to expand their production into schoolroom furniture and library shelving.

He said the initial cost of the expansion would be $5,000 for the purchase of a steel binder. Correctional Industries has received tentative confirmations for approximately $750,000 in annual sales once production is implemented, Lampkin said.

The one-time expenditure for the production of library shelving would be $85,000 for additional machinery and dies, he said, with an estimated $250,000 in annual sales.

Another proposal under consideration, Lampkin said, is establishment of a graphic printing plant. An annual sales projection is currently being developed.

Lampkin said the estimated completion date for the new projects is Jan. 1, 1978.

Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Davis, of the Abbott Road, Prestonsburg, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. "Huck" Francis, Saturday, July 17. Attending were, daughters, Sylvia Helen Davis, and Nora Ann Long and husband, Tom; granddaughters, Carol Susan Burchett and husband, Paul, and Helen Ann Vickers and husband, Garry, and grandson, Ricky Davis. Other relatives and many close friends were also on hand to help Mr. and Mrs. Davis celebrate the occasion.

Democratic Convention, Fifth For Smith, Knott Co. Banker

Two of the oldest delegates to the Democratic national convention in New York City last week are Eastern Kentucky bankers, and both found the convention tame in comparison with the donnybrooks of other years.

W. R. Smith, 74-year-old chairman of the board of the Bank of Hindman, was attending his fifth convention. Mrs. Marie Turner, 75, president of the Citizens' Bank at Jackson, has attended so many conventions she isn't certain how many it has been.

Mr. Smith attended his first convention in 1932, when Franklin D. Roosevelt was first nominated for the Presidency, and he found this year's convention the most harmonious since that convention 44 years ago.

Both Mrs. Turner and Smith went to New York as Carter delegates, and the Georgian didn't disappoint them.

"He looks like a pretty shrewd politician," Smith remarked. Said Mrs. Turner:

"John Kennedy was my favorite. I think Carter is more like him than any politician around. He has a magnetic quality; he draws people to him."

The Hindman banker was a Roosevelt delegate at three of the five conventions which he has attended. The fourth was in 1968 when the Democrats went to Chicago where, he said, "everywhere you looked there were soldiers with rifles."

Demonstrations and riots drew more publicity at that free-for-all than the convention itself.

The other Seventh district delegates were making their first trips to the national convention. They are Floyd county's James "Jitter" Allen, state representative; William Weinberg, of Hindman, district chairman; State Senator Kelsey Friend, of Pikeville, and Kitty Hutchings, Maysville.

State Film Commission Created

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Julian Carroll has created a new state agency, the Kentucky Film Commission, to develop the film industry in the Commonwealth.

"There is a need for an organized and staffed governmental program in order for the state to capitalize on our opportunity to realize economic benefits through the development of programs to encourage movie, television and advertising production companies to select Kentucky as a site for their location and filming," he said in issuing the executive order creating the commission.

The commission, composed of 20 members appointed by the governor, will serve the state in an advisory capacity in the planning and implementation of programs dealing with the film industry.

Development Cabinet Secretary William L. Short, Louisville, will serve as chairman of the commission's executive committee, consisting of seven commission members selected by the governor.

Public Information Commissioner Jim Vernon, Frankfort, will also be a member of the executive committee and an ex-officio member of the commission.

Other executive committee members include: Hank Lindsey, Frankfort, vice-chairman; Peter Conn, Louisville; Carolyn Richardson, Cadiz; Leonard Smith, Louisville, and Alexander Spears, Louisville.

Members of the commission, receiving no compensation for their services, will serve one-year terms.

Other members are: Ned Beatty, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Christine Bennett, Lexington; Bill Conrad, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Nash Cox, Frankfort, Eben Henson, Danville; Victor Jory, Santa Monica, Calif.; Tom Kehrer, Louisville; Pat Kelly, Louisville; Irving Long, Louisville; Faith Lyles, Louisville; Lee Majors, Los Angeles, Calif.; Jennifer McCabe, Ashland, and Warren Oates, Los Angeles, Calif.

The commission will be placed under the office of the Secretary of the Development Cabinet for administrative and budgetary purposes.

C. Rogers, of Osborn.

Scotia Mine Entry Reported on Schedule

"It's pitch dark, it's damp, and there have been roof falls" inside Scotia Coal Co.'s No. 1 mine at Big Black Mountain. But the operation to recover 11 bodies entombed there since March so far is proceeding on schedule, Kentucky's top mining official said Monday.

Four recovery teams have penetrated some 2,000 feet into the mine and have reached a point about three miles from the section where the bodies are located, said H. N. Kirkpatrick, commissioner of the state Department of Mines and Minerals.

"The crews alternate every hour because it's hard to work more than an hour with oxygen on," Kirkpatrick said.

The current projection is that it will take about 50 days to reach the bodies, located in the "two-southeast" section of the mine about 1,400 feet underground.

However, Kirkpatrick said engineers have discovered that "there's possibly a body of water that has us blocked between where we are now and two southeast."

The recovery teams will reach that point on Saturday, and if the water is there the operation will have to be delayed about a week while the water is pumped out, Kirkpatrick said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., accused Blue Diamond Coal Co. of injecting politics into an effort to recover the bodies of 11 men from a southeastern Kentucky coal mine.

Ralph Dye, vice president of the Knoxville, Tenn., company, had made the same charge against Perkins during the week-end.

Dye made the charge after Perkins said the bodies of 11 men entombed in Scotia Coal Co.'s No. 1 mine at Oven Fork could be recovered within two weeks.

Blue Diamond, which owns Scotia, has said it will take two months, perhaps longer, to recover the bodies, which were left in the shaft after the second fatal explosion within three days in the Big Black Mountain mine.

Perkins proposed that an independent recovery team be allowed to enter the mine through a "bore hole," or oxygen shaft, which is about 2,900 feet from the bodies.

Dye said Perkins' suggestion was "too ridiculous even to comment on" and that the congressman had "no qualifications to make such a proposal."

Perkins, in a telephone interview from his Washington office, acknowledged he is not an expert on coal mines but that he has received advice from persons who are.

Perkins said he was issuing a challenge to Blue Diamond and Scotia officials to invite reporters to a news conference where mining experts he has talked with would outline a plan they feel would result in recovering the bodies within two weeks.

Perkins noted that after the second explosion at the Scotia mine, on March 11, a rescue team went down the bore hole and discovered the bodies. He said the bodies should have been removed then before the methane gas had a chance to build up again to an explosive level.

If the company, which owns Scotia, "is really interested in recovering the bodies" they should let an independent rescue team enter the mine through the bore hole, Perkins said.

"They had the equipment to go down and find those dead men," Perkins said. "Why can't they do that today? That's the question that Blue Diamond Coal Co. ought to answer."

After the second explosion, the bodies of the 11 victims were located within three hours, Perkins said, and should have been removed then.

Basil Holbrook, chief electrician at the No. 1 mine until he resigned in 1969, said the bore hole approach should present fewer problems than the current method.

Holbrook, whose uncle's body is one of those entombed in the mine, said he feels Scotia is "trying to get the mine ready, so that when they get the water out they can open the mine."

Seven Floyd Fire Depts. Receive Aid

Fire departments in seven Floyd county communities as well as the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad recently received grant monies from the office of State Fire Marshal Warren Southworth totalling $4,622.12.

The funds, for fiscal year 1975-'76, were approved by the 1976 General Assembly as part of Gov. Julian Carroll's executive budget and were part of some $450,000 which were allocated to local fire departments and rescue squads state wide.

Receiving grants of $566.89 in Floyd county were the fire departments of Allen, Auxier, Betsy Layne, Maytown, Prestonsburg, Wayland and Wheelwright. In addition, the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad was allocated $657.89.

The Floyd departments were seven of 441 in Kentucky which received the grants. To be eligible for the funds the department must maintain a fire truck and have a chief and at least 12 firefighters.

Ky. Nat. Guard Offers Tuition Assistance

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky National Guard has begun accepting applications for educational tuition assistance, and will grant eligible applicants as much as half of their tuition expenses at state-supported institution.

A spokesman for the state Department of Military Affairs explained that the Educational Encouragement Fund established for the Guard by the 1976 general Assembly should enable many Guardsmen to further their education and should greatly enhance recruiting capabilities.

The legislation permits a fund board to approve up to 50 per cent tuition reimbursement to Guard members who attend a state-supported university, community college, or vocational school. The department spokesman said that applicants may be seeking either an undergraduate or graduate degree on a full or part-time basis.

Farmers Indignantly Reject Field Toilet Proposal

By CARL STEPP
(In The Lexington Herald)
WASHINGTON—Farmers are riled up over a government plan to require them to install toilets and drinking fountains in their fields.
The Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which asked public comments on the proposal last April, is being flooded with hundreds of replies, overwhelmingly scolding the idea.
"My goodness," fumed a letter signed Jane Bland, "don't you know God Almighty provided bushes for field workers?"
"If you were here, we would like to take off the gloves," wrote E. Duane Chester, of Crossville, Tenn. "Be sensible. This isn't the Soviet Union yet."
Snorter a lawyer, "If you actually carry through on your plan to have 'field sanitary facilities' installed throughout the length and breadth of America, you are indeed full of the staff which will accumulate in those devices."
And A. P. Atkins, a Guyton, Okla., rancher, responded, "I hereby nominate OSHA for the 'Acme of Stupidity' award over all other government agencies. It was a tough decision but I feel you deserve it. Congratulations."
Confronted with the outcry, OSHA has issued a second notice, stressing that no decision on the proposal will be made until all comments are carefully studied.
The matter has been under consideration for several years.
In 1972, migrant workers petitioned the agency to set standards for agricultural workers, noting that health and safety hazards can result from poor sanitation in fields.
Under the OSHA proposals:
—Drinking water, toilets and hand-washing facilities must be provided for all field workers.
—There must be at least one facility for every 40 workers or fraction. It must be within a five-minute walk and "clean and in good working order."
—Drinking water must be dispensed from either "a drinking fountain equipped with an angled jet outlet, or a gravity water tap."
—For groups of under five workers, facilities don't have to be actually in the field but may be "accessible and immediately available . . . by transportation provided by the employer."
—Toilet paper on holders, soap, door latches, towels, disposable cups (with trash containers) and identification signs in as many languages as needed must be provided.
Not all the comments oppose the plan. Anita Holmes of Rohnert Park, Calif., wrote, "Do you have drinking water where you work? How about toilets? I assume that people in Washington have to go to the john and also get thirsty . . . Farm workers are people too."
A Presbyterian pastor in Fairfax, Va., urged swift approval of the proposal and called farm workers "practically the only type of worker in our society who has not been emancipated from slave labor conditions."
Still, most responses blasted the proposal, citing the cost, the plight of farmers, and the difficulty of enforcement. Many said it would be impossible to provide enough toilets on farms having thousands of acres.
While some big companies and organizations have commented, scores of letters have come, handwritten and with words often underlined in exasperation, from outraged and frustrated individuals.
"NO, NO, NO, NO, NO—Is that clear? Can you understand? Can you comprehend?" wrote Ruth C. Ward of Dallas.
A Kansas woman, in one page, called the proposal hair-brained, laughable, stupid, expensive and time-consuming. Wondered a Nebraskan, "How many of you are adults or sober people?"
"Farmers have enough problems without the government meddling in their toilets," snapped Ingrid Gebhart of Meadow, S. D.

$2.3 Million in Contracts Let On Eastern Ky. Coal Roads

Frankfort, Ky.—Apparent low bids totaling $2,367,804 were submitted last Thursday on the first highway repair projects under the new Energy Road Fund.

A total of $12 million was appropriated for the current fiscal year by the 1976 General Assembly to fund the repair and maintenance of coal haul roads in eastern and western Kentucky. The money will come from the receipts generated by the coal severance tax.

The bids opened by the Department of Transportation will be reviewed for possible mathematical error and will probably be finalized and the contracts let by the end of next week.

Last week's bids were for the surfacing and patching of some 80 miles of roads in eight eastern Kentucky counties. The largest bid was $567,893 by the Hinkle Construction Corp. of Paris for separate projects in Breathitt and Perry counties.

Hinkle's bid was for 1.2 mile and 4.9 mile sections of Ky. 28 between Hazard and Buckhorn in Perry county and 2.6 and 2 mile stretches of Ky. 1110 in Breathitt county.

The next largest bid was $359,857 for three roads in Martin county by the Adams Construction Co., of Pikeville. The project involves 6.4 miles of Ky. 1439, 1.5 miles of Ky. 2032 and 1.5 miles of county road 1116, the Meat House Fork road.

The Energy Road Fund is part of Gov. Julian Carroll's overall coal severance tax plan, which returns part of the tax to the coal counties in other areas, while also making some of it available to all of the counties through the Area Development Districts.

Other projects covered by the fund on which apparent low bids were submitted yesterday were:

—Ky.-Va. Stone Co., Middlesboro, $72,804 for 1.5 miles of Ky. 221 in Bell county;

—Adams Construction, $90,304 for 18 miles of Ky. 32 in Lawrence county;

—Adams Construction, $203,154 for 5.4 miles of Ky. 292 in Martin county;

—Adams Construction, $236,386 for 4.9 miles of Ky. 1051 in Perry county and .6 mile of the Neace Memorial Church Road in Breathitt county;

—Hinkle Construction, $90,719 for four county roads in Breathitt county totaling 2.2 miles;

—Ky.-Va. Stone, $115,939 for 2.4 and 1.8 mile sections of Ky. 987 in Bell county;

—Ky. Stone Co. of Louisville, $115,296 for 2.7 miles of Ky. 2014 and .6 mile of county 1100 in Bell county;

—Adams Construction, $98,284 for 2.2 miles of Ky. 40 and 1.7 miles of Ky. 1428 in Johnson county;

—State Contracting and Stone Co., Beaver Dam, $165,969 for four roads in Knott county, 1.1 mile of Ky. 1088, .3 of county 1159, 2.4 miles of Ky. 1231 and one mile of Collins Branch road;

—Adams Construction, $54,771 for 1.5 mile of county 1065, 1.5 mile of Ky. 805, one-tenth mile of county 1090 and 1.5 mile of county 1076 in Letcher county and 1.5 miles of Ky. 1498 in Knott county; —State Contracting, $196,428 for 6.3 miles of Ky. 588 and four-tenths mile of county 1139 in Letcher county.

State Dept. of Education Makes Bureau Changes

Frankfort, Ky.—Certain organizational changes within two bureaus of the Kentucky Department of Education became effective July 1 as ordered by Gov. Julian Carroll.

The governor, in his executive order, directed that the Division for Computer Services and the Division for Statistical Services shall remain as separate divisions within the Bureau of Administration and Finance and shall be transferred to the Office of Special Programs and Services.

Gov. Carroll had previously ordered that the two divisions be combined. The governor also directed the creation of two new divisions in the Bureau of Education for Exceptional Children.

The Division of Residential Services will include the Office of Coordinator for School for the Deaf and School for the Blind. The new division will direct and coordinate the activities and functions of the two schools.

The other division created by the executive order, the Division of Field Services, will coordinate the services of their personnel to the local school districts. The division will assist the local districts in the planning and evaluation of their programs for exceptional children.

Other divisions within the Bureau for Exceptional Children are the Divisions of Learning Disabilities; Communication Disorders; Mental Retardation; Physically Handicapped; Emotionally Disturbed and Supporting Services.

Education Region 12 Gets ARC Assistance

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Julian M. Carroll announced approval by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) of a grant for $70,000 to assist in funding an education project serving Education Region 12 in Eastern Kentucky.

The project is designed to enhance the educational opportunities for children in the eight-county region by exposing teachers throughout the region to innovative educational techniques developed by the LBJ School in Breathitt county. Carroll said the project "can help teachers from the region to use established, workable techniques to deal with educational situations they might encounter."

The project is to be administered by the Kentucky Valley Educational Cooperative located in Hazard, while the demonstration of the teaching principles will be carried out at the LBJ School.

The total projected cost for the project is $140,000. An additional $63,000 to be supplemented by $7,000 in local funds, is expected from a commission grant approved by the ARC executive committee in December 1975. Carroll said state ARC coordinators in the Development Cabinet are awaiting final notification on the original grant.

Former Floyd Minister Victim

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday at the McQuate Funeral Home in Plymouth, O., for Elder Henry King, 66, well-known minister of the Regular Baptist Church who died Monday at Methodist Hospital, Pikeville, of injuries received in a single car auto accident Sunday afternoon in Johnson county.

He was returning to his home in Plymouth, O. after conducting a foot-washing service at the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church on Left Beaver Creek when the accident occurred about seven miles northwest of Paintsville on Route 201, near Sitka. Elder King was conscious following the accident and told state policemen who interviewed him that he apparently blacked out before his car struck a culvert, then plunged over a 20-foot embankment.

Bernard Parsons, 15-year-old New London, O. youth, passenger in the car, suffered a broken arm, numerous bruises, and is a patient at Methodist Hospital where he is expected to recover.

A former resident of McDowell, Elder King was born December 16, 1909 in Wolfe county, a son of the late Henry and Alice Lawson King. He was a retired miner and had been a member of the Regular Baptist Church for 38 years.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Della Collins King; four sons, Ivan Ray King, of Shiloh, O., Leroy and Romeo King, both of Plymouth, O., Jerry King, of New Rome, O.; three daughters, Mrs. Ellarie Jones, Mrs. Linda Slone, Mrs. Brenda Slone, all of Plymouth, O.; two half brothers, Newman King, in Florida, and Dual King, of Mansfield, O.; two sisters, Mrs. Josie Noble and Mrs. Bessie Tuttle, both of East McDowell; one half sister, Mrs. Daisy Freeze, also of East McDowell, and nine grandchildren.

The body was returned to Plymouth by Hall Brothers Funeral Home for burial in Greenlawn cemetery there.

Featured Performer at Festival

Fiddlin' Dewey Shepherd, of David, was a featured performer last week at the Festival of American Folklife in Washington, D. C.

Each summer for the past 10 years, the Festival has brought together musicians, craftspeople, dancers, cooks and workers in a celebration of America's diversity. The Festival takes place on the National Mall, the 50-acre park between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. It is presented by the Smithsonian Institution and the National Park Service and is sponsored by American Airlines and General Foods.

Shepherd was invited by Smithsonian Folklorists to be part of the Regional America presentation. He demonstrated his particular brand of Southern fiddling. Shepherd started playing the fiddle when he was 12 years old and learned from his father who was a well-known mountain musician. He has played at schools and festivals, country bluegrass on radio stations WDOC and WPRT and at numerous TV fiddle jamborees.

The Smithsonian now has in its archives two gourd fiddles that Fiddlin' Dewey made and presented to the museum.

State Board Clears Boone Board Member

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Board of Education voted at its July 9 meeting to dismiss charges brought against Tom O'Hara, chairman of the Boone County Board of Education.

Paul Dickmann and Bernard Hogan, Boone county board members, had accused O'Hara of withholding information from other board members, putting additional items on the agenda of a special meeting called for a specific purpose and employing an architect for a school remodeling project without consulting the board.

State board chairman Bob Brown, Lexington, said that "it was the sincere and unanimous recommendation of the state board that O'Hara not take independent action in the future and that the entire Boone county board forget their differences and begin working for the good of the children."

The state board also voted to discontinue the Henderson Settlement School. The school's students will be sent to Bell County High School. The decision was based on the results of a study team report which indicated that Henderson Settlement would be unable to obtain standard accreditation or maintain its present basic rating.

The board also heard the appeal of Brenda Hall, a nursing student who had been expelled from the Hazard State Vocational School. Charges brought against her included that she charted patients' vital signs, such as blood pressure, without taking them.

The board upheld her expulsion but recommended that she be allowed to re-enroll to finish the nursing program. Following the recommendation, Brown stressed the importance of keeping hospital records "accurately and with good conscience," but said there were also question about "the entire supervision of a student."

In other action, the board rejected a proposal to change the site of North Campbell County Vocational School from Highland Heights to Newport and approved the state plans for the Bureaus of Rehabilitation and Vocational Education and the state plan for adult basic education.

CARROLL'S BUDGET FOR 1976-1978 STRESSES HEALTH CARE, BENEFITS FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Gov. Julian Carroll describes his 1976-78 budget for the state Human Resources Department as stressing local health care, which will especially benefit the elderly.

Also, it will help give every Kentuckian a chance for a decent living while not catering to freeloaders, he added in an interview about funding for the state's largest department.

Gov. Carroll's responses to specific questions follow:

Q—In your State of the Commonwealth address, you said that "it is an insult to our common sense to suggest that better government requires more spending." Could you tell us how your budget allocations in the Department for Human Resources reflect this firm fiscal posture?

CARROLL—As I pointed out in my budget message, I asked all agencies in preparing their budget requests to maintain "rigorous scrutiny, backed by an austere approach that would result in recommendations for continued essential services." In the Department for Human Resources my recommendation was a 3.6 per cent decrease in state funds for administration and support services.

This prudent fiscal posture has resulted in an extremely tight essential service budget for on-going activities.

In the area of health services, where 5.5 million new state dollars will provide expanded as well as new, innovative program starts, there is also a strict essential services budget to provide for existing activities.

Q—Governor, initially you talked about making services more available to the people—how do you feel you will accomplish this?

CARROLL—I have long believed that local health departments constitute the backbone of the state's system of public health

TRAINING FOR THE HANDICAPPED

Kentuckian. For this group, and the blind and disabled, who face the greatest problem in securing health services, we have expanded in-home services that actually make it possible for them to get needed medical attention at home.

Q—Are there any other ways in which the elderly will directly benefit in health care?

CARROLL—The budget for the next biennium in the Medicaid program provides increases in payments of in-hospital physicians' fees from 62 per cent of customary and usual charges to 100 per cent of the first $50 and 62 per cent of all over $50.

Q—What about the older person who is no longer able to move about, whose only alternative would seem to be an extended stay in a long-term facility?

CARROLL—One aspect of the In-Home Support Program is that payment can now be made directly to relatives of these elderly for Caretaker Service. Before, these payments could be made only to non-related Louisville Child Evaluation Center. Just what does this mean in service?

CARROLL—This is a highly sophisticated diagnosis and evaluation program that costs from $200 to $1,500 per service. The whole clinical procedure is very thorough and this allocation means that as many as 300 more children statewide can receive such treatment.

Q—What about the physically handicapped child?

CARROLL—This is a prime example of the need to bring services to the people. One of our biggest problems has been the child who needs corrective surgery or treatment but has had to wait months for it because of the lack of facilities.

To reduce these waiting lists, part of a $1.8 million biennial allocation will go toward establishing clinical programs of orthopedics, plastic surgery and other extensive treatment, in Harlan, Prestonsburg and Ashland.

PREVENTING DISEASE

With these clinics, services will be geographically available to all children needing them.

Q—Are the expansions in health care designed only for the mentally retarded or physically handicapped child?

CARROLL—An old cliché is "children are our most valuable asset" and protection of their health against these crippling and disabling disorders is a major goal of mine. Legislation was passed to expand programs for the prevention and detection of such diseases among children.

House Bill 80, for example, provides for the testing of pre-school children for tuberculosis, the first time we have had a major effort to catch this disease in this age group.

Q—The General Assembly followed your recommendation and appropriated $23 million for the next biennium for the treatment and prevention of physical disorders. What does this large allocation cover?

CARROLL—This relates to my concept of funding programs which have proven to be of value and produce results. Most of the dollars allocated for prevention and treatment of physical disorders will go into such proven programs as: family planning, maternal and child services, nutrition services, accident prevention and the prevention and treatment of venereal disease, cancer, kidney disease, glaucoma, heart disease and infectious diseases.

Q—Governor, let's move away from health and get into some other areas of great public concern. What about welfare?

CARROLL—I want to see every Kentuckian have a fair chance at a decent living, but I want to take every step necessary to see that the working taxpayer isn't just carrying the freeloader.

So my objectives in this area are to help those people truly in need—in other words make the assistance we provide a stepping stone. If we can meet basic needs—money for food, clothing and shelter—and at the same time help these Kentuckians find training, employment and other aid toward self-sufficiency, we can reach this goal. This ties in with my major efforts in the areas of economic development for the state and expansion of vocational training. We can't cut welfare rolls until we have enough training and jobs for these people.

Also, I have directed that we not only continue but intensify our past efforts to correct errors in assistance programs. We will search out and prosecute to the full extent of the law those who falsely receive financial assistance from the state.

Q—Where are costs going up?

aged, blind, or disabled residents of personal and family care homes, to adequately cover the basic needs of these Kentuckians. Q—Another action you have recently taken is in the area of child support. Would you explain this?

CARROLL—Human Resources has established a child support unit whose job is to locate missing parents, to establish paternity for children born out of wedlock and to enforce support payments directed by the courts. I funded $230,000 for fiscal year '76 and $239,750 for fiscal year '77 for this unit. Child support activity will be carried out through cooperative arrangements with courts and law enforcement officials not only within Kentucky but in other states as well. It is my belief that the support of children lies with the parents and I am committed to taking whatever measures are necessary to see that parents shall assume financial responsibility for their children.

Q—Governor, you referred to the training and employment of people to get them off welfare rolls, what steps have you taken to help this happen?

CARROLL—I fully funded the Work Incentive program which is a job placement and training program for parents receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The recipients are required to register for employment when they begin receiving the assistance payments. If they are not ready for jobs, they will be put into a training program.

Q—We've talked about health care for senior citizens, but what about their other needs stemming from problems such as fixed incomes, isolation from services, need for activities, and help in everyday chores required to maintain their own homes?

CARROLL—Let's take your questions one at a time. With regard to income assistance, Kentucky has elected to provide supplement payments to selected groups of persons requiring special living arrangements or needs. These are the Social Security recipients in personal care facilities, licensed private homes and those requiring a caretaker in the home to prevent institutionalization.

My $5 million per year increase in this program raises payment for these special care residents.

I also supported the legislation that provides an additional $20 income tax credit for all persons who are 65 or older. This will eliminate the necessity of filing income tax returns by a large number of senior citizens and will result in a savings to them of approximately $900,000 each year in state income taxes.

Q—I guess we should next talk about the isolation of the elderly when transportation is not available for them to get to services or continue normal activities.

CARROLL—I have initiated a program to make funds available to private, non-profit organizations for the purchase of transit vehicles to help the elderly and the handicapped remain active.

The Hot Meals program which is being expanded under my budget not only provides a daily nutritious meal for the senior citizens but brings them back into the activities of the centers where other services and recreation are also provided.

My budget allocations to the Hot Meals program will provide this service to more than 6,000 aged persons daily by the end of 1978.

Q—Activities for the elderly is a general term used in citing needs, just what are we talking about here?

CARROLL—Just because you reach 65 doesn't mean you no longer have a contribution to make to society. We must not push the experience and knowledge of this generation out of the mainstream; they have too much to offer.

Many want to continue in some way in the work force and for these I have encouraged volunteer opportunities for the elderly and have established a program which opens many active volunteer positions in local communities where older citizens have proven to be valuable and productive.

Many see retirement as the time to get the education they have wanted, yet had no time to secure. To give them this opportunity, I have supported and received legislative action for free tuition for persons over 65 enrolling in any state college or university.

Q—Lastly the ability to maintain their own homes is the wish of most of our elderly, but the daily chores in doing this often create a burden that the elderly cannot continue to carry. You keep stressing the importance of keeping them in their own homes. How?

CARROLL—My legislation in this area called for the permanent establishment of a Support Services program for the elderly which includes housekeeping and home maintenance chores, adult day care, transportation, and even foster care. I had initiated this program last year in a less extensive form and found it to be "an answer to a prayer" as some of the people have told me. The passed legislation will allow it to go into full swing.

Q—Governor, before we conclude discussing progress in Human Resources, I think we must address a subject that has had a great deal of public awareness recently and that is the services in the area of juvenile justice.

CARROLL—My first step in this area was to get outsiders to take a look at what we were doing and tell us where we were headed in the right direction and where we were wrong. This survey of both adult and juvenile corrections has now been completed and I have directed the respective cabinet heads to proceed to implement the changes necessary to correct the inadequacies.

One of the things receiving support in the Master Plan was a continuation of programs, treatment and services to reduce crime among youth. Our system in this area has been fragmented in the past.

Our goal is to continue to develop community based programs that will offer alternatives to sending a teenager off to an institution. Every study shows that although a bad home-life situation may contribute to problems with youth, the best results in correcting the problems still occur when the youth can stay in a familiar environment.

Where this has become impossible and the young person has really earned the title of delinquent, then our institutions will intensify their efforts to help with counseling and rehabilitation.

Q—Governor, I think that concludes the areas on which I have specific questions—is there anything you would like to add?

CARROLL—Government at every level is having problems today and ours is no different—it is my belief that the direction we are taking in emphasizing fewer state programs and more state support for local level services—allowing every citizen regardless of age to have an opportunity to remain in their own community, is pointing us in the right direction.

HEALTH CARE FOR THE ELDERLY

delivery. The demand for local health services has been increasing dramatically but state support for this important arm of health care has increased only five per cent in the past five years. My budget includes $2 million to establish a state-local matching program on a 50-50 basis which will upgrade district and county health department physical plants, and a $1 million allocation each year which increases the state share in the local health department operating program.

Q—What about the elderly? The rising costs of health care and getting to health care create real problems for this group.

CARROLL—The elderly will benefit most from the steps being taken to bring health care closer to each persons. Often a family places an older person in a long-term facility because of the lack of financial resources to do otherwise. This monetary support will hopefully make it possible for more families to care for their own in their own homes.

And, we have made every effort to assure that, where the last resort of long-term facility care is needed, its quality is kept at the best possible level.

This is one of the reasons we have established the position of Nursing Home Ombudsman, with the responsibility to receive and investigate problems involving residents or the staff of any nursing facility in the state.

Q—Governor, you have also shown personal concern for

SENIOR CITIZENS—AN IMPORTANT RESOURCE

Historical Society Library Help To Family Researchers

By HELEN PRICE STACY

History is where you find it. A family record written years ago in a Bible is considered factual when researching a line. Letters from old ones that might begin, "Dear Child," and end with, "I trust I have answered all your questions regarding our family," often provide valuable links in history. Most libraries have volumes relating to early marriages, census records and regional history that are invaluable in completing family lines and links with the past.

One of the libraries that provides much material for any one interested in history, especially genealogical records, is on the third floor annex to the Old State House in Frankfort. This beautifully decorated building, which in itself is part of history, holds many surprises.

Native Kentuckians can find a multitude of records on the third floor, but those who are not Kentucky-born might find even more. There are county histories from many states, such as marriage records and census indexes from Virginia, Pennsylvania and other states.

A book considered rare in West Virginia, Bishop's History of Roane County, is on the shelf.

Everyone comes from somewhere, and when one starts out to find this "somewhere" it is like working a crossword puzzle.

"I had always heard that my ancestors came from England and fought in the Revolutionary War," was one comment heard on the third floor genealogy section of the Kentucky Historical Society's quarters in the annex, "and I took it for granted that he fought for America. Now, right here in this book is the real record. He was a soldier for King George III."

One point emphasized in histories that deal with states north of the Mason-Dixon line is a reverence for Kentucky's Henry Clay and his stand on slavery. In family sketches in almost all regional volumes, note is made that "he and his family were conductors on the underground railroad." Almost to a family, ways were provided to help slaves on their road to freedom.

A number of family sketches give names of children and who they married, ancestors and often the year these ancestors arrived in America and the ship on which they sailed.

"It states here," commented, one researcher in the Kentucky Historical Society quarters, "that old Henry Mace 'arrived on the Eastern Shore.' Is that the name of a ship or a place?"

Another researcher replied that he thought it meant a location. "It can mean any place along the Atlantic coast," he said, "though some think it means either Virginia or Maryland."

History does not always mean silk, satin, brocade and silver. In sketches of oldtimes it is revealed that times were hard, food scarce and clothing ragged, old and patched. Most early ancestors lived in crude sapling units until they could hew logs for stronger walls and split logs for puncheon floors. Animal grease, usually from bears, smeared on paper and placed over openings provided window light; pine cones brought from the forests gave torchlight for reading and working.

Marriage records occasionally are revealing of more than a date but sometimes omit other important factors.

Reading through the many books in this section gives insight to life in earlier days and reveals hardships, battles and connections with Indians. A surprise in reading about these early days of the country is the number of white children who were captured and taken by Indians, adopted by them and reared in Indian families.

Anyone doing family research at the Kentucky Historical Society or in any library or collections of clubs and organizations quickly grasps the significance of history. In a family paragraph, among hundreds in a book about Pennsylvania, a researcher found her missing line. "It was a matter of names," she said. "A great-great-grandfather had the same name as his son and grandson, and we had been overlooking an entire generation. Family history gives me such a feeling of belonging."

The Old State House and the annex are part of historical Frankfort. Every street has its churches and homes where people made contributions to history. In the Kentucky Historical Society's genealogical section are books telling how people in other states, as well as Kentucky, had a part in history. They may be your ancestors. It's worth a look in order to have your record brought up to date for future generations.

Opinions from Office Of Attorney General

Frankfort, Ky.—The new Open Records Act does not require state agencies to provide records upon a request made by mail, according to an opinion of the Kentucky Attorney General's office.

Blanket requests for information on a particular subject without specifying certain documents need not be honored either.

"State agencies and employees are the servants of the people, as stated in the preamble to the act, but they are the servants of all the people and not only those persons who ake extreme and unreasonable demands on their time. For this reason, we believe that a person desiring that lists be made or that he have copies of broad categories of information must expend his own time in digging out the information unless it has already been compiled," Assistant Attorney General Carl Miller said.

The Open Records Act, passed by the 1976 General Assembly and signed into law by Gov. Julian Carroll, provides that "all public records shall be open for inspection by any person, except as otherwise provided by this act."

Frankfort, Ky.—The county judge pro tem, appointed by the county judge and serving at his discretion, can perform the duties of the county judge only under specific circumstances, according to an opinion issued by the Kentucky Attorney General's office.

The county judge must be absent from the county or unable or disqualified to perform his official duties because of sickness or other valid reasons before the judge pro tem may assume the duties.

However, the county judge pro tem may act for the county judge on the fiscal court in his absence.

The opinion, delivered by Assistant Deputy Attorney General Charles W. Runyan, noted that the judicial functions of the county judge and county judge pro tem will end on the first Monday in January 1978. Their nonjudicial functions, including their work on the fiscal court, will continue except where changed by legislative action.

Another Use—Maybe—for Coal

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Department of Transportation (KYDOT) is experimenting with another use for coal wastes.

According to State Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts, "wet bottom boiler slag," produced by electric power plants burning East Kentucky coal, is being tested as a surface for shoulders along Kentucky's interstate system.

Roberts said using the slag, if the experiments prove successful, would be much cheaper—about 15 cents per square yard at installation compared to 37 cents for the slurry mixture currently in use—and more durable.

KYDOT maintenance engineer E. C. Halcomb explained, "the slag is produced when cinders from the power plant's boilers drop into a pool of water beneath the boilers. The cinders are around 2000 degrees when they hit the water and are instantly crystallized."

Halcomb said the slag is then mixed with asphalt and applied to the shoulders on top of the existing blacktop when repairs are needed.

Recently, KYDOT's Division of Maintenance applied two 10-mile strips of the slag mixture on the shoulders of I-71 in Boone and Gallatin counties, beginning at the I-75 junction.

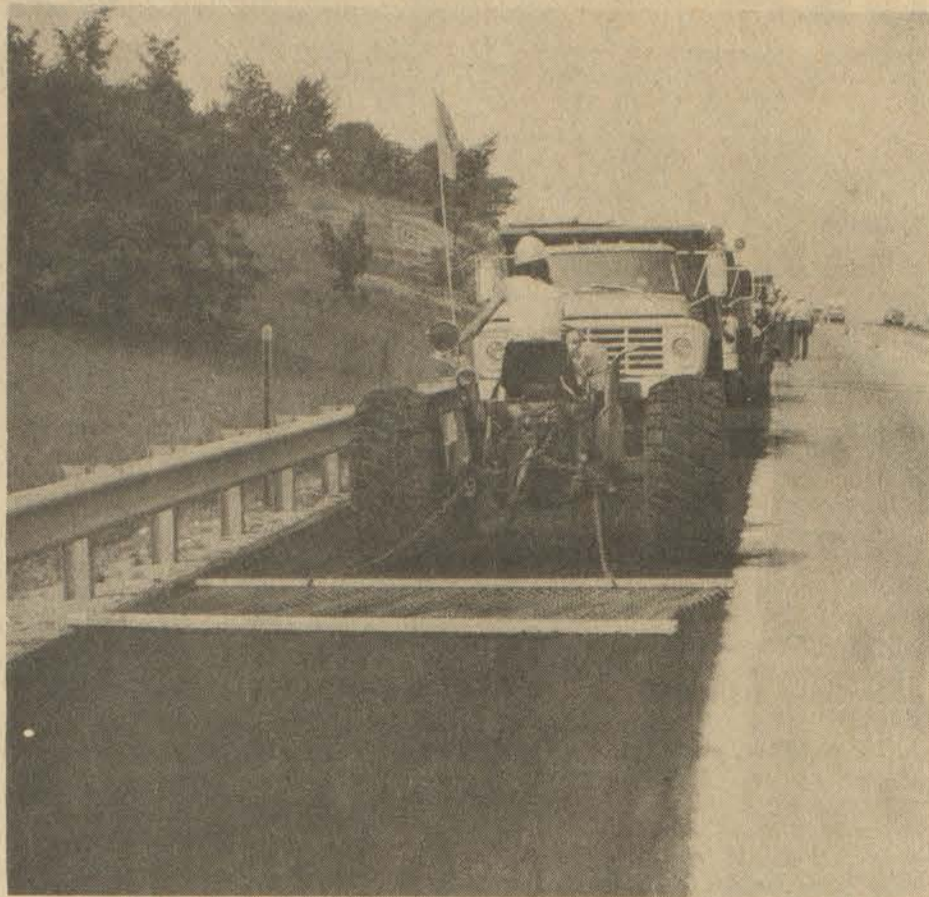

Halcomb said KYDOT plans to have the mixture laid along the edge of the Versailles-Frankfort Rd. (US 60) so the personnel at KYDOT's central office in Frankfort can closely monitor the results.

"In time, the department will be able to evaluate the characteristics of the mixture after it has set through summer heat and the freeze and thaw cycles of winter," he said.

Halcomb believes the tests will show the coal slag mixture will retain its anti-skid properties better than present pavement mixtures do.

Halcomb foresees the possibility of eventually surfacing entire roadways, especially the locations that become slick when it rains, with the money-saving mixture.

"We may have found a way to save a lot of money as well as another use for Kentucky coal," he added.

Maintenance employees of the state Transportation Department apply a new, experimental pavement surface made from coal wastes to the shoulders of I-71 in Boone county. According to state Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts, the mixture costs only 15 cents per square yard upon installation compared with 37 cents for the slurry mixture currently being used on highway shoulders. If the surface proves to be as skid-resistant and durable as KYDOT officials believe, it may replace the blacktop compounds presently in use.

To Take Survey On Employment

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment in this area during the work week of July 19-24, Joseph R. Norwood, Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Charlotte, announced today.

The survey is conducted for the U. S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 70,000 households throughout the United States. Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation.

For example, in May the survey indicated that of the 94.6 million men and women in the civilian labor force, 87.7 million were employed. The nation's unemployment rate was 7.3 per cent, down from 7.5 per cent in April and substantially below the recession peak of 8.9 per cent reached in the second quarter of 1975.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Interviewers who will visit households in this area include Mrs. Cauline B. Martin, of Garrett.

LOS ANGELES—Singer Cher Allman is "feeling well and doing fine" after giving birth to a healthy seven-pound, six-ounce boy, a spokesman says.

Storyteller Chase To Visit Alice Lloyd

Pippa Passes, Ky.—"One time away back years ago there was a boy named Jack. He and his folks lived off in the mountains somewhere . . ." the storyteller begins. And young and old alike listen with fascination as Richard Chase spins his tales of the Appalachian Mountains.

Master Storyteller Chase will be visiting Alice Lloyd College next week, and the public is invited to attend a storytelling session Monday, July 26 at 7:30 p.m., on the college campus.

Chase has compiled three books of American folk tales: "Grandfather Tales," "American Folk Tales and Songs," and "The Jack Tales," which have been performed by ALC's Appalachian Summer Theatre.

According to Chase his storytelling began in the early 1940's when he took care of 12 little boys at a boys' home in Virginia while their housemother was away. But his interest in English and Scotch-Irish folklore as handed down orally in the Appalachian Mountains began at Pine Mountain Settlement School in 1924, when he was only 20.

Opinions Given By Atty. General

Frankfort, Ky.—The constitutionality of a new Kentucky law was supported, an exception to the newly enacted Sunshine law was backed and specific consent requirements for home visitation by hearing aid salesmen were outlined in opinions delivered by the Attorney General's Office last week.

The new statute, as amended by Senate Bill 20 in the 1976 General Assembly, repeals the authority of the state Department of Transportation to revoke the driver's license of one who refuses to submit to a chemical test of his blood, breath, urine or saliva at the request of a police officer.

The law, before being amended, allowed the department to revoke the license and provided for a post-revocation hearing for a driver who refused to take a "breathalyzer" test. It had been declared unconstitutional by a federal district court.

The amended law, however, provides for a pre-revocation hearing, giving the defendant driver an opportunity to show cause why his license should not be revoked. Because of this provision, Carl Miller, assistant attorney general, held that the new law was constitutional.

Miller also issued an opinion saying certain records kept by the Kentucky Heritage Commission were exempt from public inspection under the new Open Records Act, The "Sunshine Law", enacted by the 1976 General Assembly.

The two categories of records, the Survey of Historic Sites in Kentucky files and the National Register of Historic Places files, were called exempt because opening these particular files could result in the misuse of information contained in them.

According to the opinion, the Open Records Act provides that each public agency shall adopt rules and regulations that may be necessary to the performance of their duties. The opinion held that it is necessary to the function of the Kentucky Heritage Commission to safeguard these particular records.

In an opinion regarding home solicitation by hearing aid salesmen, Assistant Attorney General Frank Radmacher held that written consent by a potential buyer must be executed prior to such a visit.

The consent must acknowledge that the potential buyer is aware that the visitor may attempt to sell a hearing aid device in addition to granting permission for the visit.

The salesmen would be in violation of Kentucky law without such written consent according to the opinion.

State To Accept Affidavits If Breathalyzer Refused

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Department of Transportation (KYDOT) will resume tomorrow (July 15) accepting police officers' affidavits concerning motorists who have refused the breathalyzer test after being arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Resumption of this practice is based on a recent opinion from the Kentucky Attorney General's office regarding the department's position on a newly amended statute dealing with the breathalyzer tests.

According to O. B. Arnold, commissioner of the state Bureau of Vehicle Regulation, the practice was abandoned in January of this year when the U. S. District Court at Louisville ruled that portions of the statute under which this procedure was followed, KRS 186.565, were unconstitutional.

The practice had been to suspend the operator's license of the driver when the affidavit was received by the Division of Driver Licensing in Frankfort.

The court had said that a part of the statute calling for suspension of a driver's license prior to giving him an opportunity for a hearing was unconstitutional.

The new procedure, according to Arnold, will be to notify the driver of his right to a hearing and to inform him that if he does not request the hearing within 10 days, his license will then be suspended.

The U. S. District Court ruling came after three separate suits were filed by motorists. These three suits were eventually consolidated, and then certified as a class action.

When the court ruled that parts of KRS 186.565 were unconstitutional, it also placed KYDOT under permanent injunction from enforcing those portions of the statute it had declared unconstitutional.

At the time of the ruling, the Kentucky General Assembly was in session. Senate Bill 20, which amended KRS 186.565 to remove disputed portions, was passed and signed into law while the case was still before the court.

Later, in response to a motion filed by KYDOT, U. S. District Court issued an order stating, in effect, that the statute passed by the 1976 General Assembly was not properly before the court and would not be considered.

Kentucky Afield

One of the most important fish in Kentucky's waters isn't sought by anglers, and its average length is about two inches. Yet the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will stock 126,500 of these fish this year and fishery biologists keep a close watch on the numbers.

The fish is the threadfin shad. It is one of the most important tools of fishery management we have and it forms the basis of a lot of good fishing around the Commonwealth.

The threadfin's value lies in its position on the food chain. It is the primary forage fish—that is, food—for just about every game species we have. The threadfin itself feeds on organic debris and microscopic plant and animal life, foods which cannot be utilized directly by game fish.

But by eating this microscopic matter and growing, the threadfin in turn provides a source of food for game fish. So what started out as microorganisms suspended in the lake ends up as bass, crappie or walleye filets (with a side order of hush puppies) on some lucky angler's plate.

The threadfin also proves that big isn't necessarily better. It obtains an adult length of about 2½ inches with an eight inch real "trophy". In contrast, its larger cousin, the gizzard shad, commonly grows to over a foot in length. Even an extra-large threadfin is potential food for game fish (although they prefer the smaller ones), while an adult gizzard is too big for anything but a large rockfish or musky.

Gizzard shad provide good forage when they are young, but within about four months after spawning, they are too large to be eaten by most game fish. Without a check on the gizzard shad, they can grow too numerous, competing with more desirable fish for living space in the lake.

But a strong population of threadfin shad will provide competition for food with the gizzard shad and can help keep the numbers of the larger fish down. While this is another advantage of the threadfin, its primary function is to provide forage for game fish.

Charlie Bowers, director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife's Fisheries Division, said that in years when there is a particularly good threadfin spawn, all game fish, even bluegill, are fatter and in better condition.

Thus, the threadfin shad is an important management tool for fishery biologists. A lake with a high population of forage fish can support more game fish than a lake without much available forage, so increasing the number of threadfin shad can result in more and bigger catchable fish for anglers.

New lakes are usually stocked with threadfin shad, as are lakes which, for various reasons, need more of these fish. The usual reason for supplementary stocking occurs when large numbers of threadfin die in the winter since these fish are not able to withstand sudden drops in temperatures.

Eight lakes were stocked with threadfin this year. Most of the 126,500 threadfin came from Herrington Lake, which has a very good threadfin population. To catch threadfin for restocking, fisheries crews shine bright lights into the water at night, then net the shad when they congregate under the lights. The fish are then transported in tank trucks to their new homes.

So the next time you come back to the dock with a limit of bass or a fine string of crappie, tip your fishin' hat to the threadfin shad—he contributed a lot more than most anglers know to your fishing success.

Melvin Quits Sheriff's Post, Is Succeeded by Cantrell

Paintsville, Ky.—Johnson County Judge James C. Witten last Thursday afternoon named Burl (Skip) Cantrell Jr., 32, to the post of Johnson county sheriff, made vacant by the resignation the preceding day of former Sheriff Ray Melvin.

Cantrell, a graduate of Oil Springs High School, is an Army veteran and in recent years has been engaged in the coal business in Johnson county.

Melvin was convicted in May in U. S. District Court at Catlettsburg on charges of extorting money from bootleggers, but earlier had refused to resign, contending he was framed by bootleggers. U. S. District Judge H. David Hermansdorfer sentenced Melvin to four concurrent four-year prison terms and fined him a total of $30,000 on four of the seven counts upon which he was convicted.

Melvin was sentenced to five years and fined $10,000 on each of the remaining three counts of his conviction, but Judge Hermansdorfer suspended those sentences and placed Melvin on probation for five years following his release from prison.

Ouster proceedings against Melvin were halted Tuesday after he voluntarily resigned from the post, although the door was left open to reinstate them.

Gov. Julian Carroll had brought the ouster proceedings against Melvin, charging him with neglect of duty following his May conviction. A hearing had been set yesterday in the Supreme Court room in Frankfort before hearing officer Eugene Mooney.

A Pikeville attorney representing Melvin presented the former sheriff's letter of resignation to Mooney last Thursday and moved for a dismissal of the action. Assistant Attorney Generals Ray Larson and Robert Chenoweth, who were representing the governor in the proceedings, objected, however, and Mooney granted their motion to continue the hearings with the right of the attorney general to reinstate the proceedings.

"We didn't want Ray Melvin, by resignation, to escape the sanction of the law," Larson said later.

State law provides a sheriff ousted from office cannot run for public office again for four years, and Larson indicated the case would be reopened if Melvin attempted to run for sheriff or any other public office.

Melvin is appealing his conviction in U. S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, and had initially refused to leave office pending the outcome of his appeal.

Robert L. Marsh, of Judge Witten's office, said that an opinion had been sought from the attorney general's office as to whether a special election should be held in November to replace the Johnson County sheriff at the same time an

Betsy Layne Meeting Held as a Prelude To Development Club

Betsy Layne residents held a Community Development organizational meeting recently with Gene Ball, Community Development specialist, talking to the group about the program and what other communities were doing themselves. A few of their needs that were listed included sewing and craft classes and a community park for all ages.

A nominating committee composed of Betty Hurd, Marie Conn, McDona Wallen, Shirley Adkins and Judy Stevens was formed. The next meeting will be July 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Betsy Layne Grade School auditorium. All residents are urged to attend.

election is held to replace the late County Judge Ward, or whether the sheriff's election should wait until the term ends next year.

Melvin cited the lack of cooperation from County Attorney James Knight, his assistant Nick Frazier, Witten and Commonwealth's Attorney Eugene Rice as his reason for giving his resignation to Witten about 4:30 Wednesday afternoon.

Melvin was bitter "about the way I was framed and the way I was treated."

Melvin accused the attorneys of refusing to prepare warrants against some bootleggers and being difficult to reach.

Frazier said he does not spend a lot of time away from his office and has never been asked by Melvin to prepare any warrants since Melvin's legal problems started.

Frazier said he has tried to assist Melvin whenever he (Melvin) called at night. "I'm sure he is emotionally upset because of his resignation."

Frazier said he was surprised Melvin named him as part of the reason for resigning. Frazier and Knight are law partners of Rice, who helped prosecute Melvin. Frazier said the connection may be a reason why Melvin blamed him for the sheriff's troubles.

Cantrell appointed Robert McKenzie as chief deputy.

KET's "Magazine" To Focus on Red, White, Blue Day

Kentucky Educational Television's (KET) "Kentucky Magazine" features personalities from Floyd, Woodford and Fulton counties Sunday, July 25 at 7:30 p.m. (ET), 6:30 p.m. (CT), and Monday, July 26 at 8:30 p.m. (ET), 7:30 (CT).

In Floyd county, Magazine Director Stan Petrey records Prestonsburg's annual Red, White and Blue Day held in October. "It's a day set aside to honor God and country," says Marcella Bailey, founder and coordinator.

Floats, parades, beauty pageants, speeches, exhibitions and booths are tradition as Prestonsburg and surrounding counties gather to reaffirm their ideals.

From Floyd county, Magazine travels west to Woodford county and the Weisenberger Mill in Midway. There, the crew explores more than a historic flour mill; rather, the narrative reveals the very old Weisenberger family who has owned and operated the factory.

The Magazine crew wraps up the show with a trip to the western-most part of the Commonwealth, to the gateway communities of Fulton and Hickman. The Mississippi River and the railroad are the arteries linking Fulton county to the rest of the country. Paul Westpheling, Bill Fossett and Sarah Bushart describe the conventions and changes of their towns in "River and Rail" on KET's "Kentucky Magazine."

By LARRY BURKE

We read much these days about looters, rioters, mobs and the unruly actions of people throughout our country.

"People have a right to express themselves," we hear these days. That is true! But, people do not have the right to take advantage of their fellowmen. There is no law that says a wrong will make a right. A man who possesses just one leg is foolish to cut off the other so they will match.

The annals of history tell us there has always been the constant struggle of mankind. He has always been trying to achieve something. History also tells us that man has never made lasting accomplishments by brute force.

On the other hand no man has the right to stand in the way of another... stifle his objectives if they are pure, honest and just.

OUR THOUGHT TO REMEMBER: Look at both sides—yours and the other fellow's.

Gov. Carroll Names New Housing Board Members

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Julian Carroll directed that amendments be made in three of his executive orders concerning appointments to the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Housing Corporation.

The changes concern replacements on the board: Robert Pope, rather than John Wright Polk, replaced Al Brinkley, who resigned; the vacancy left by the resignation of Carl Hines rather than Al Brinkley was filled by Jack Rhorer; and Pat Cvengros filled a vacancy created by the 1976 General Assembly rather than replacing Ernest C. Pepples Jr., whose term had expired.

Bevins-Laferty Vows Said

SIDNEY, Ky.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Bevins, of Hatfield, Ky., announce the marriage of their daughter, Debbie Lynn, to Larry Dean Laferty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dean Laferty, of Route 2, Martin.

The wedding was an event of Saturday, May 22, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the Highland Presbyterian Church, Canada, Ky. The Rev. Ernest P. Murphy performed the double-ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with an arrangement of red roses in the center of the altar flanked on either side by candelabra with white candles and red satin bows.

A program of popular songs was presented by Dale Newman, cousin of the groom. He was both pianist and soloist. During the ceremony Newman sang the "Wedding Song" and the processional and recessional played by him was an original composition.

The bride was dressed in a long, empire waisted, white polyester dress featuring a scooped neckline and butterfly sleeves. She wore a floor length veil. She carried a nosegay of red and white carnations with red and white satin streamers.

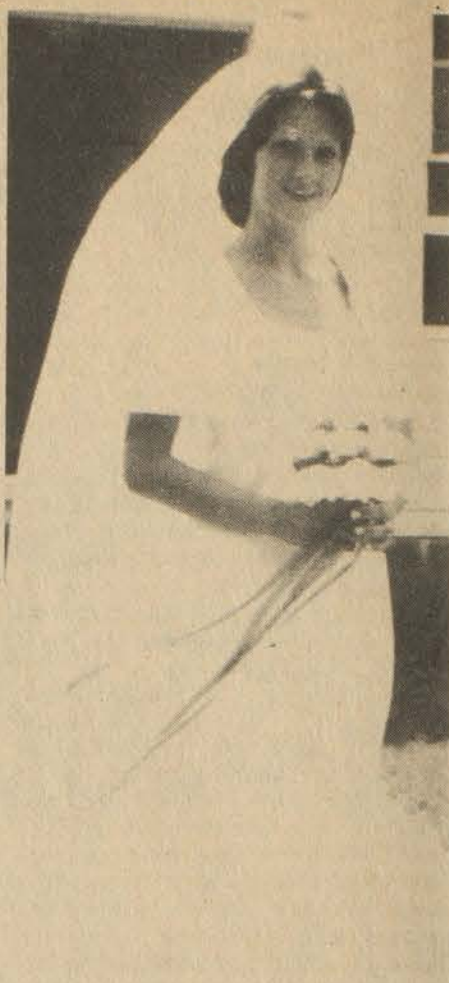

Penny Altizer served as maid of honor and Bonnie Williamson and Teresa Lee Hall, cousin of the groom, were bridesmaids. The honor attendant wore a long, red polyester dress made on simple lines and featuring cap sleeves. The bridesmaids wore dresses styled identically as the one worn by the honor attendant, but wre of red and white plaid polyester. The attendants carried long-stemmed white china roses with red satin bows.

Little Miss Lisa Kaye Clifton, niece of the groom, was the flower girl. Wayne Rudder, of Prestonsburg, served as best man. Ushers and taper lighters were Chris Shepherd and Donald R. Laferty, uncle of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a street-length blue and white polyester dress and a white carnation corsage with a blue ribbon. The bridegroom's mother wore a pink lace polyester dress and a white carnation corsage with a pink ribbon.

Freda Clifton, sister of the groom, was director of the wedding.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the social hall of the church. The tables were covered with white tablecloths and draped with red ribbons. The bride's table featured a two tiered wedding cake separated by Grecian columns and topped with the traditional bride and groom. Those assisting with the reception were Juanita Clifton, Teresa Runyon, Rena Runyon and Sharon Justice.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Donald R. Laferty and children, of Morehead, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Laferty, of Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, of Allen, Mrs. Mary Webb, Glen Webb and Keith Webb, all of Dwale, and Mrs. Marcella Bailey and daughter Janie, of Langley.

After a short wedding trip to Cumberland Falls State Park, Mr. and Mrs. Laferty are making their home on Rice Street, Irvine, Kentucky.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Belfry High School. She was a member of the Pep Club, a junior varsity cheerleader, art editor of Belfry Hi-Notes, a member of the Business Block Program and of Quill and Scroll.

The groom is a 1971 graduate of Martin High School and attended Prestonsburg Community College. He is presently employed as manager of Maloney's Discout Store at Irvine.

W'wright Clinic To Do Free Screening, July 26 thru July 30

The Wheelwright Medical Clinic staff will be engaged in free screening for high blood pressure, kidney disease and sickle cell detection from Monday July 26, through Friday, July 30, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., each day. Roger C. Marshall, executive director of Big Sandy Health Care, Inc., announced last week.

"If a person has high blood pressure, he can be helped if he has his blood pressure checked and stays under medical treatment," says Randy Worrell, R.N., supervisor of the Wheelwright Clinic.

Dr. Henry B. Ross, primary physician and pediatrician on the staff of Big Sandy Health Care, Inc., expressed concern for the people with chronic kidney disease. An estimated 54,000 Kentuckians are in danger because they are not aware they have an infection in the urinary tract, he says. That's why the Kentucky Bureau for Health Services and the Wheelwright medical team have launched a screening program to find hidden infections before they lead to trouble, he said.

Sickle cell disease is a hereditary blood disease in which the red blood cells sometimes assume a strange shape, like a sickle. Some people carry a gene for sickle cell disease which they can pass along to their children. If these children marry someone who also has this trait, their children have a higher risk of being born with the serious form of the disease. People with sickle cell trait almost always lead completely normal lives. Then why bother going to a sickle cell clinic? Dr. Ross, of the medical staff, points to these three advantages: For peace of mind; To take care of your own health; To plan for the future health of your children.

The Wheelwright Medical Clinic may be contacted by calling 452-2105, or 452-2106.

Grants To Fund PCC Arts-Crafts, Strings Workshops

Prestonsburg Community College, through its Community Services Program, has just received two grants from the Kentucky Arts Commission (K.A.C.), it was announced last week.

One of the grants, in the amount of $400 is for the guild programs including the Potters' Guild and the Art Guild for the purpose of having workshops in pottery and painting. Another grant in the amount of $500 has been given for the purpose of orchestral strings workshops during the 1976-'77 sessions.

The first workshop, which is co-sponsored by the college's Potters' Guild and the Kentucky Arts Commission, will feature David Middlebrook, ceramics sculptor, formerly of the University of Kentucky and presently on the art faculty of San Jose State College in California. His workshop will be held on the community college campus (as will all workshops) on July 24 and 25, 1976 beginning at 3 p.m., July 24th.

There will be two additional pottery workshops which will include Gary Robertson, "Functional Ceramics," September 11-12, 1976 and Jerry Rothman, "Ceramics Sculpture," April 9-10, 1977.

The Art Workshops covered by the grant from K.A.C., will include workshops by Doug Adams, "Collage" (September 30, 1976); Gary Akers, "Watercolor" (October 10, 1976); Dr. Bill Booth, "Art Appreciation" (November 14, 1977); and Sam KcKinney "Pastel" (January 23, 1977).

Each of these will be one day workshops scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m.

The K.A.C grant for Orchestral Strings Program will be for the purpose of having four strings workshops: two during the fall semester, two during the spring semester. During each semester one workshop will be for all people who play violin, viola, cello or string bass; then there will be a workshop for select string players. Hopefully, these workshops will give an added thrust to the strings program at P.C.C. and serve as the impetus for developing an orchestra here in Eastern Kentucky. Conducting these workshops will be Buddy Ratcliff, of Martin, who teaches orchestral strings at the college through the Community Services Program.

For those who wish more information on how to get involved with the strings program, the Potters' Guild or the Art Guild, contact the Community Services Office at P.C.C.

According to James Ratcliff, coordinator of Community Services, there has been a strong development during the past two years in the area of arts and crafts and orchestral strings and it appears that these programs will see even a greater development in the future.

MORE COCAINE REPORTED ON SHIP HEADED FOR U.S. BOGOTA, Colombia—A Bogota newspaper reported a second discovery of cocaine hidden on a Colombian naval training ship headed for a July 4 bicentennial event in New York.

The newspaper El Spectador said 48 pounds of cocaine were found in the Gloria's food-storage area. The Colombian navy would not confirm the report.

Earlier this month, 13 pounds were found on the vessel as it approached Miami. One officer and one sailor were sent back to Colombia and arrested.

Mrs. Parsons To Lead Breath of Life Drive In Allen Community

Mrs. Delmar Parsons has been named Allen chairman of the Breath of Life campaign to fight children's lung-damaging diseases, according to Jay Crouse, president of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Mrs. Parsons will lead local volunteers in raising funds to support research and care programs for children affected by lung-damaging diseases like Cystic Fibrosis, severe asthma, chronic bronchitis, and bronchiectasis.

The Breath of Life Week will be September 11-24 with a door-to-door drive scheduled during that time.

"Everyone can help," said Mrs. Parsons. "The job cannot be left solely to dedicated parents of C-F and lung-damaged children. The cause is great enough to engage the attention and support of men and women everywhere who care about children—and lung disease.

The Breath of Life Campaign supports not only research, but diagnosis and treatment of children with lung-damaging diseases in C-F Centers across the country.

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

The recently-publicized information that good wine can be produced from Kentucky-grown grapes brings to mind that, if the discovery made by Lief Ericson in the 11th century had attracted the same attention the voyages of Columbus did some three centuries later, this great country of ours might be known as Vineland.

This was the name Ericson gave it because, as history records, the thing that made the greatest impression on him and his men was the profusion of wild grape vines covering the Eastern seaboard.

When the first settlers arrived in this New World of Ericson and Columbus, they too were impressed by the profusion of wild grapes and naturally assumed European grapes would thrive likewise. As a consequence, glowing accounts of the grape-growing potential of this new country helped stimulate immigration, but alas, the first attempts at domesticated grape production ended in disaster for both vines and planters.

In 1621, the London Company brought a large shipment of domesticated vine plants to Virginia. The cuttings were planted around the last of December but before the following spring was over, Indians massacred the colonists. The grape vines fell victims to powdery mildew; black rot; and the deadly root louse, Phylloxera.

After that, except in California, hope for New World viticulture dimmed perceptibly for all but a few hard-twisted characters who kept on trying. They, too, may have eventually given up had not it been for a lucky discovery. One day, while out pranking around on a rocky slope above the Schuylkill River in Pennsylvania, a discerning citizen came upon a grape vine loaded down with delicious fruit. This was apparently a hybrid—a cross between a native American grape and one of the European grapes that had blossomed briefly before the root louse had time to do its deadly work. This grape, called the Alexander, was grown for many years and passed out of cultivation around 1850 when its place was taken by the Catawba. The Catawba, first found growing wild in what is now Buncombe county, N.C. is believed to be a totally indigenous American grape.

The Eastern seaboard now has several varieties of grapes of excellent quality. These grapes probably have a European ancestor somewhere in their genealogies, and while they may be less suitable for wine, they are superior to Old World varieties in making jams, jellies, and grape juice. They can withstand colder winters and are more resistant to disease and the sap-sucking root louse.

Consumer Comments

Those credit cards you carry aren't really yours—they belong to the companies that issue them. The cards have been "loaned" to you by the companies so you can make your purchases more conveniently and, if any of your cards are lost or stolen, you have the responsibility to report the loss as soon as you are aware of it.

Failure to immediately report the loss can be expensive. The card is your responsibility and you can be held liable for payment on all purchases made with it before you report the loss. Liability for unauthorized purchases does not exceed $50 on most cards, but for others it can be much higher.

Reporting the loss of a card is a simple task. If it is a general-use credit card, simple telephone your local bank. If the card is for a particular company or group of stores—for example, gas and motel cards—you should report the loss to the member establishment nearest you. It is also wise to report your loss to the police department of the city in which the card was lost.

When making your report, you should be able to provide the serial number and name printed on the face of the card. A list of credit card serial numbers, kept at home, is a necessity for those who use credit cards. The best record is a single photo-copy showing the faces of all your credit cards. The dime it may cost you is money well spent.

If you have any question about the use of the credit cards, or about any other consumer matter, you may write to the Office of the Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601. The office has found that it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourages you to write when you have a complaint. However, if you have an emergency situation, call the consumer hotline. The number is 1-800-372-2960, toll-free.

Sooner or later, the "Game of Living" is going to deal you an opportunity for home ownership. Maybe, just maybe, we can help stack the deck in your favor.
