ADD Waits For Views Of Public

KENTUCKY

Five-County Group Expects $1 Million Over 2-Year Period

The five-county Big Sandy Area Development District (Big Sandy ADD) will receive an estimated $1,046,000 this fiscal year and next in coal severance tax funds, and that leaves the district with the job of deciding how best to use the money. It has made no allocations, to

Two meetings of Big Sandy ADD's executive committee with county judges of the five counties have been held for discussion of possible projects, and a public meeting will be held early next month to let the public air its views as to needs, Joseph S. McCauley, Big Sandy ADD's executive secretary, said this week.

From public hearings held in the various counties a regional program will, hopefully, be established and priorities set, he added. Allocations will not be made until the hearings are held and all findings given consideration.

Under the formula included in Governor Carroll's "package" coal severance tax legislation each area development district in the state was allotted a portion of the tax for capital construction projects. The amounts each district will receive may vary from original estimates because they depend upon coal production.

The Kentucky River ADD expects to receive $1,234,000 for the two fiscal years. and it has already made some allocations.

One of its allocations is $300,000 to be used toward construction of a $2,250,000 lodge at Carr Fork lake. The lodge is planned to have 50 rooms, a restaurant with meeting rooms and parking areas at the Irishman Creek site.

Two industrial sites would each receive $200,000 toward their development from the capital construction allocation. One is

Martin Span Work Hits Truck Traffic

The town of Martin was virtually isolated from heavy truck traffic from both the Left and Right Beaver Creek sections this week as a KY 80 bridge there was closed to through truck traffic while it was being repaired.

Gail B. Mullins, district engineer, Kentucky Bureau of Highways, said the truck detour will be in effect till repairs are completed and that it applies to trucks with a gross weight of more than

Access to downtown Martin was earlier effected through use of the old county road from a point near the railroad crossing to connect with the Left Beaver road at Hite, but use of that route reportedly became impractical as it deteriorated under traffic.

Trucks will be routed around the area in this way

From Prestonsburg, follow KY 114 west to KY 404, thence on KY 4040 to Goodloe and from that point take KY 850 to the junction with KY 80 at Midas.

The Martin bridge was damaged July 9 when a large truck loaded with a bulldozer hit the end post of the span.

TROUBLE SPOT . . . Repair of this bridge at Martin which is closed to heavy truck traffic, has created problems. Use of the span will continue to be restricted till the repair work is completed, Gail Mullins, district highway engineer, said.

Taking a gander from the wry side, consider this, seen in a local restaurant: "Just when I knew all the answers, they changed the questions.'

Time was when a groundhog was nothing more than another target for me. Now, I wouldn't shoot one on a bet.

This reminds me that perhaps the most destructive thing ever turned loose on wildlife is a boy with a .22 rifle or with one of these hard-shooting air rifles. And that includes cats. I confess my boyhood sins. Every bird or wild thing was fair game, a test of marksmanship. Why kill? It wasn't killing, it was a challenge.

Let a quail of a springtime morning mount a hillside stump and begin his beautiful mating call, and the pretty creature was stalked by a boy with his rifle. Flat on the ground, the bird lined in the sights-how many songs I have interrupted I shudder to think about. And those cardinals which we feed, almost the year around, and about which I fret because there aren't more of them to brighten the fading eye with their flashes of scarlet and entrance the ear with their liquid notes-how many I have toppled from their perches in the tops of the

Governor Carroll Says KY 80 To Be Costliest Ever Per Mile

Reporting on his efforts to help Eastern Kentucky as well as the state as a whole, Governor Julian Carroll last week cited the work of his administration to get KY 80 under construction from Water Gap to Hazard—a road which he predicted will be the most expensive per mile ever built in Kentucky.

His remarks were made in an appearance before the Kentucky River Area Development District board at La Citadelle, Hazard.

'Nobody's been willing to spend the 46 miles costs until now," Carroll said. The governor said it would cost $4 million a mile to build the road between Hazard and Water Gap in Floyd county.

'Friendly' Suit Would Hasten Work at Allen

There is no quarrel between Floyd county and the Chessie System over the land needed by the county and owned by the company at Allen, but the county is in a rush to get started on development there of a central recreational facility.

So the county last week filed a condemnation action in circuit court in order to get right of entry to the 9.93-acre tract owned by the C. & O. Railway Company (Chessie System), because "time is of the essence.

The company has accepted the county's offer of $33,300 for the land, but the Chessie System now includes one or more other rail companies, and the final signing of the deed to the tract may be delayed three months or longer.

County Judge Henry Stumbo, who signed for the county its condemnation petition, said the fiscal court wants to begin work at Allen this fall. Grants of $235,000 in federal funds became effective June 30 and extend only to Dec.

The condemnation petition indicated the friendly aspects of the suit, nothing that C. & O. has agreed not to oppose the action. Attached to the suit was a copy of a letter from C. N. Murphy, manager of field services for the Chessie System, in which he stated that he was "agreeable to recommending" the sale of the land by special warranty deed for a consideration of $4,300. The transaction, however, would be subject to the understanding that the county will erect and forever maintain a 42-inch woven wire fence along the northerly (railroad side) of the property line; relieve the (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

August 15 Set For Operation; Park Bids Asked

The Floyd fiscal court agreed during its meeting Monday to buy the franchises and equipment of both Floyd County Sanitation and District 4 Sanitation and to begin the operation of both solid waste collection systems August 15. The transaction was effected on bids submitted to the owners of the two systems by the court, and these were accepted-$65,000 for Floyd Sanitation and $15,000 for District 4 Sanitation.

Most county officials were not available for comment after the meeting, but Magistrate Bill Wells said Tuesday that the court intends to reduce rates to residences and to adopt official, hardand-fast policies in an attempt to make the collection system as a county project work and serve the people. The proposed collection fee reduction may be from $4 a month to $3, Wells said.

Two landfills, one on Turkey Creek and another on Middle Creek, are now in use. A third at Drift is almost ready for use, and a fourth is being sought for the upriver section of the county.

The court voted to increase the allocation of coal severance funds to the solid waste program by $40,000, making a total of $277,050 marked for the cleanup

The court authorized the county attorney to advertise for bids on construction of the Left Beaver District mini-park at Minnie which is planned to include a 700-square-foot building, an outdoor basketball court, four tennis courts, a shuffleboard court, miscellaneous walks and paving, parking and fencing. Estimated cost of the project is $85,652.

Action was delayed on construction of athletic facilities at Allen Central High School, pending a topographic survey

Martin Ambush Clues Missing, Ufficers Say

One of two rifle shots reportedly fired from ambush on Buckingham mountain in Knott county into the truck of Johnny Martin, of Estill, last Friday afternoon smashed Martin's right arm

The shots from a heavy-calibre rifle were fired, the wounded man was quoted as saying, as he was driving alone from Wheelwright across the mountain to KY 7 and his home near Wayland, around 4 p.m. He had been working as a carpenter at Wheelwright.

After being wounded Martin pulled his truck to the roadside, farther down the mountain, and there was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to the Mc-Dowell Regional Hospital.

The shooting took place at a point about halfway down the mountain. Both shots passed through the windshield of the

Carroll Names Ex-Miner Moore To Conference on Handicapped

Gov. Julian Carroll has appointed Burnis S. Moore of Melvin to the Kentucky White House Conference Committee on Handicapped Individuals.

The 19-member committee is planning four regional meetings which will prepare Kentucky for an upcoming national conference on handicapped persons

'It's an honor to be appointed to such a position," says Moore. "I think we will be able to help people who need help."

Moore, a retired miner, lost an arm in a mining accident in 1957. "I wouldn't call anyone with just an arm off handicapped," he says. "In fact, I wouldn't call anyone on the committee handicapped.

Most of the committee members have handicaps, have handicapped children, or provide services to handicapped in-

The conference will help convince people that they can help themselves, in one respect by getting a job and becoming independent, Moore said. "Whoever really wants to be helped will "A lot of people make themselves handicapped by thinking that they have a handicap," says Moore.

Times, dates and places for Kentucky's four regional conferences will be set in Conference participants will concentrate on health, educational, social, economic and special concerns. Their recommendations will be taken to Washington in May, 1977 for the first national White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals. The outcomes of this national meeting are expected to influence future legislation, promote general public understanding and acceptance of handicapped and improve conditions for both physically and mentally handicapped individuals

Development Here Would Build Own Sewage Treatment Plant

Paul J. Kissel, Lexington architect, has filed with the Kentucky Water Pollution Board for permit to install a private sewage treatment plant to serve a business development complex near here that has been in the planning more than a year Approval of the plan has been recommended, The Times learned last

The proposed sewage treatment plant is designed to serve a 150-room motel, a 200-seat restaurant, an 80-seat coffee shop, a 500-seat twin cinema, an 18,000 square-foot Shoppers Choice retail supermarket, a two-bay service station and 60,000 square feet for retail shops.

J. E. H. Development, of Lexington, headed by J. E. Holdren, first announced the development in April, 1974, with building proposed then, as now, on a sixacre tract at the Mountain Parkway-US 23 interchange, near the mouth of Katy Friend, which is owned by Edward C. Music, the Dr. George P. Archer estate and Tom Ruth.

Originally, a 100-room motel was planned, and the supermarket was planned to occupy 28,000 square feet. The restaurant at that time was planned to seat 160 and the coffee shop 64. The twin cinema was not in the original plans.

The architect asked the Water Pollution Board for "your comments as soon as possible to allow construction to begin." The sewage treatment plant would have a 30,000-gallon capacity, and the effluent would run into Middle Creek which enters the Big Sandy downstream from the water intake for the Prestonsburg water system.

The new construction plans, apparently near the working stage, were reported as J. E. H. Development is completing a major portion of its complex near the Archer Clinic here for occupancy by Heck's, a major discount store. This portion of that development will be ready for a Heck's opening next month, it was said recently. Next to be built there is a Shopper's Choice and other parts of the shopping center which will be occupied by other businesses.

Both Heck's and Mr. Holdren have expressed confidence in the future of Prestonsburg and vicinity. There was no estimate of the cost anticipated for the Katy Friend development. "We feel," Mr. Holdren said, "that

County Behind On Blood Quota As Drawing Set

If Floyd county could meet the quota of 1,523 pints of blood set for 1976 by the Central Kentucky Blood Center (CKBC), then all residents of the county would have their blood needs assured for one year, whether they had donated or not. As of this week, however, with less than one-seventh of the total collected in the county, this goal seemed a long way off.

Only 211 pints have been donated by Floyd residents this year, leaving 1,312 pints that are still needed for the county to receive total coverage. CKBC, which supplies all blood used by hospitals in Floyd county, set the quota for 1976 based on the amount of blood used by residents

Sue Egan, CKBC public information official, stressed that even though the figures are discouraging, there is still adequate time to meet the quota. "The program has only recently, within the past few months, really gotten into full swing with many more new donors turning out for each drawing," Miss Egan said. "However, we need more and more turning out each time in support of the program if Floyd county ever hopes to meet its quota.'

Miss Egan pointed out that by donating a single pint of blood a county resident can cover the total blood needs for one year of his or her spouse, unmarried children to age 18, any other dependents, and parents and parents-in-law.

CKBC's next blood drawing for the county is scheduled Friday, this week, at the Mormon Church, Martin. Sponsored by Our Lady of the Way Hospital, the drawing will be held from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Appointments for donors can be made through Sue Egan or Dave Fitzgerald at 285-3251. Any individual who has used blood and needs either to replace or predeposit units may do so at this drawing.

Letters to the Editor

Wants Quick Action

I hope you will print my letter on behalf of all the truckers and businesses in Floyd county. As most citizens of Floyd county know, the steel truss bridge on KY 80, near the junction of KY 80 and KY 122 in the west end of Martin is under construction. The bridge was damaged July 9, and a 5-ton weight limit has been placed on it.

I am, for one, asking why they wouldn't allow a one and a half-ton empty truck to cross this bridge. What are the truckers supposed to do when they can't cross the bridge, and when the detour is blocked by an overturned truck? If the truckers choose to wait, they will be behind schedule. If a small business man chooses to take a longer route, he is out more than he earns. What is the delay in repairing the bridge?

I hope all the truckers and other citizens of Floyd county are behind me 100 pct. when I say, "Get the bridge fixed—the truckers and small businesses need it now!

QUESTIONS

Why the tedium and artificiality of a national political convention when the people could nominate by direct vote? And why vote for electors instead of the individual for President? The only argument for a convention that I can in my deep political wisdom think of is that if might keep every crackpot in the country off the ballot. The people should be able to solve that little matter and get both nomination and election down to a direct vote, just like their other representatives of "the great, common peepul" are chosen.

Proud of David

We, of course, felt good about our judging but it was not until July 10 that we were acknowledged for our efforts. The NEKRCDA held a banquet at Ashland, in the Ashland Community College, and there we were given a marvelous dinner and those who, as clubs, participated were given awards for their outstanding communities. Bill Baldridge, of Prestonsburg, was master of ceremonies, and many guest spoke on keeping the spirit up and building a better community.

We are a proud town, having overcome the buying of our town and living through our antique water system, but that night when Vice-President Fred Buck said that "some people go out and buy candy, and some people go out and buy a Grit, but these people went out and bought a town," I instantly thought of a beautiful human being who never lost sight of David being a winner, even if we were to lose the judging and we missed him at this affair. This man is Bill Bridges, Area Development specialist, now in Korea.

This award will always be cherished by the people of David and now we will have to work even harder than before. We also would like to say that the Mountain Comprehensive Care Greenhouse under the direction of Chalmer Howard played an important role in our winning. They were kind enough to supply us with flowers to plant in David.

Many people from David went along to give moral support and we really gave Ashland Howard a hand when he went up to accept our award. Our teenagers went all out this year in beautifying the community and were very proud of themselves in Ashland on July 10.

We were and are very proud of David! DOROTHY CLARK

Proposed there are an outdoor basketball court, four tennis courts, a shuffleboard court, 1000 fixed bleachers and 600 moveable bleachers, a cinder track, croquet court, fencing and parking.

The county clerk was authorized to advertise for bids on construction of a 120-foot bridge across Right Beaver Creek at Eastern. Bids are slated for opening Aug. 23.

In other action the court:

-Authorized the county road foreman to buy gravel in the amount of $3,075 for the Sage Allen Branch road, and to buy a gasoline welding machine for the road

-Placed a 10-ton load limit on the Long Branch road until the court is satisfied with the maintenance of the road.

-Terminated the employment of Leo Jarrell with the road department. -Adopted a resolution calling for the immediate hookup for water service to those who have paid connection fees to the Beaver Elkhorn Water District. -Voted to build a bridge across Toler

Identify Knott Body As Haddix Resident

A decomposed body found July 17 at the head of Yellow Creek near Anco in Knott county has been identified as Thomas Phillip Keith, 31, of Haddix.

The body was found by a nearby resident. It was apparently thrown over a hill from a mining road and landed by the creek, said Det. Frank Fleming of the Kentucky State Police post at Hazard.

Keith was last seen June 26 when he left for work about 3:30 p.m., the detective said. He was employed by Appalachian Security Police and was assigned to a strip mine site about 50 miles from where his body was found.

through dental records. The body has been sent to a forensic pathologist in Cincinnati to determine the exact cause

Positive identification was made

Foul play is almost certain, Fleming said. The victim's gun and some clothing are still missing.

Keith's vehicle was discovered last Wednesday about eight miles from the death site on an abandoned strip mine road. It had apparently been burned, then part of the main body was removed from the site. However, evidence was found at the scene to positively identify the remains as belonging to Keith.

Terry Twins To Play at Parks

Pat and Pam Terry, piano-playing twins, will be visiting Kentucky State Parks this summer, entertaining park visitors with their unique duet style. The twins play their favorite songs on the same piano, at the same time. For variety Pam accompanies Pat on flute and Pat accompanies Pam on violin.

The twins, elementary teachers, returned in July from their third trip to Europe with the American Youth Symphony and Chorus from Duquene University in Pittsburg. After serving one summer as chaperones and another playing with the chorus, Pat and Pam were assistant directors for the chorus this Next fall, they will teach in the Fort Thomas Independent School. Pat, who earned a master's degree in reading diagnosis at the University of Kentucky, will teach fourth grade. Pam, who is working on a master's degree in guidance counseling, will teach first grade.

The Misses Terry attended Prestonsburg Community College for two years, then taught at the Shearer School in Winchester while attending UK. They gave private music lessons in Winchester and have played for organizations and churches around Kentucky. They will attend the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music this fall while teaching in Fort Thomas.

They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin R. Terry, of West Van Lear.

Was Santa Anna a Kentuckian?

Austin.)

Jack Maguire author of "Talk of Texas," (a book you should also have) has given permission to reprint his remarks about "The Yellow Rose of Texas" that was in his July 4 release to 26 newspapers in Texas: Mr. McGuire

Was Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, the Mexican dictator, actually a Kentucky native who got his military training at West Point?

The legend that Santa Anna really was an American has been around a long time. Irwin S. Cobb, the late actorhumorist, first recounted it in his autobiography, "Exit Laughing," in 1941. He believed Santa Anna was his an-

Now a Texas historian, Martha Anne Turner, says the story has some basis in

Two Save Man, 84. In River Accident At Banner Bridge

A boating mishap July 8 at the construction site of the Banner bridge brought near disaster to a Banner resident. James V. Hall, of Dana, a Kentucky Bureau of Highways engineer. and Don Reid, of Salyersville, crane operator for Greer, Inc., pulled 84-yearold Thomas Hamilton, Sr., from the Big Sandy after his small boat had overturned.

Bob Preston, of Pikeville, a Greer employee, saw the mishap while he was working atop the bridge pier. He quickly alerted the other men, and Hall and Reid swam across the river in a swift current and rescued Hamilton who was barely clinging to the overturned craft.

"Mr. Hamilton undoubtedly would have drowned had it not been for the alertness and courage of these men," G. B. Mullins, district engineer, said.

Yellow Rose of Texas." (Published at $7.45 by Shoal Creek Publishers, Inc.,

According to Miss Turner, one Nathaniel Saunders (or Sanders) settled near Frankfort, Ky., after the American Revolution. Between 1779 and 1798, he fathered eight children. One was the illegitimate son of his Indian mistress.

This half-breed son, nicknamed "Bull" because of his violent temper, was incorrigible. To discipline him, the family got him admitted to West Point sometime before 1812. There he excelled in military courses, but was accused of raping a girl and murdering her father. Bull fled West Point for Mexico.

There, so legend says, he assumed the name of Santa Anna, joined the army and advanced rapidly. By 1833, he was president of Mexico.

So much for legend. It is historical fact that, following the defeat of the Mexican Army at San Jacinto in 1836, President Sam Houston of the new Republic of Texas allowed Santa Anna to go to Washington to meet the U.S. president. En route, Santa Anna insisted on stopping over in Frankfort, Ky.

Was it to see his old home? In her book. Miss Turner presents some good reasons to believe that Santa Anna may have been a simple American country boy who used his natural violence to carve a place

Floyd CB News

By Grumpy KIR 4439 The Floyd County C-B Club held its business meeting Sunday at the courthouse. Items on the agenda which were approved included club signs to be erected at the county lines, and a financial drive to furnish red vests for the members. To start the drive, Ding Bat will at the next meeting donate a surprise gift to be raffled off. The next meeting will be Saturday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m. This meeting will be at Archer Park and not at the lake as usual. The REACT will vote into office the members nominated at the last meeting. There are 39 members in

REACT at this time. The trophies that we won for the most members in attendance will be displayed in the window of Wright Bros., Jewelers this week. Next week it will be on display at Foley's Bakery. The "Daddy Rabbit" is in charge of placing the trophies in windows of business places of the

Speaking of trophies: In last week's column there were a few, quite a few, mistakes in this C-B news column. I take full responsibility. As a columnist I know better than to print hearsay. I did and most of it was misinformation. The best dressed club to win the trophy was the Golden Wing C-B Club from Ohio, not the Poor Boy Club as I stated. The runnerup club to win the second largest number of members attending was the Party Liner C-B Club from Ashland. Leffie Harmon, Jr. won a base station antenna, not a radio, at Van Lear, July 17. I often wondered if catsup would enhance the flavor of words; now I know it does nothing for them. The Floyd County C-B Club and the Floyd County REACT members present at this past meeting were Messenger Boy, Ding Bat, Poor Boy, Corn Shucker, Moonbeam, Fisherman, Beechnut, Greenback Dollar; Horny Toad, Sweet Lucy, Daddy Rabbit, Twister, Flat Top, Casino Lady, Purple Pickle and Sun

VACATION SCHOOL ENDS

A vacation Bible school commencement program was held at the Salyers Branch Community Church last Friday night.

Children taking part were from the surrounding area. They were honored with certificates and awards for attendance and Bible memorization. Crafts and book work were on display.

The week's missionary offering is going to Miss Donna Anderson who is doing missionary work in Japan. Japanese curios were on display. Children were especially interested in eating with chopsticks.

Boys and girls honored especially for their work in Bible memorization were Beulah Prater, Lisa Ousley, Carolyn Bentley, Kathy King, Kelly Carr, Theresa Tussey, Brian Conn and Rhonda Prater.

Teachers of the school were Miss Lois Holmquist, Miss Barbara Wynsma, Miss Angie Elliott and Jill Elliott.

VISITORS FROM OHIO

Recent visitors here while guests of their son and grandson, Dr. Marty Breneman, and family, of West Van Lear, were George M. Breneman, Kidron, O., and George M. Breneman, Wooster, Ohio.

A Bit of the Past Remains

Frankfort, Ky.-Most people can't leave much to posterity. And those who do don't often leave an atmosphere—a bit of land untouched by time and encroaching progress such as the stand of virgin timber that is Lilley Cornett

But Lilley Cornett could and did. In 1918, not long after World War I, he bought the Letcher county woods that now bear his name. Despite many offers to buy the timber, he refused to let any trees on the land be cut. A few chestnut trees killed by the chestnut blight are the only ones he ever allowed to be felled. He even bought lumber for the farm from his neighbors

When Cornett died he left a forest of more than 554 acres to his children. And within the acreage, in a state that was once blanketed by natural forests, he left one of Kentucky's last virgin timber stands-175 acres of it.

His children, who also wouldn't allow the timber to be cut, wanted some agency to buy the land and preserve it for future generations. In 1969 the state of Kentucky bought it, and in that way it came to the division of forestry in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

According to Forestry Director Harry Nadler, research reports indicate that the Lilley Cornett Woods is one of the last and largest remnants of a forest that stood 70 million years ago-the Mixed Mesophytic Forest. Aside from the forests of the tropics, this woodland held more species of trees than any other in the world. And, Nadler said, the Mixed Mesophytic Forest may have reached its richest and finest development in the Cumberland Mountains of Eastern Kentucky

The Mixed Mesophytic Forest was bound to that Eastern Kentucky region, due to geologic and climatic changes that began 30 million years ago, Nadler says. Some mountain areas in China could still contain a forest like the Lilley Cornett Woods and a few small tracts elsewhere may contain some evidence of that time.

Nadler said that many of the 64 species of trees that have been found in the Lilley Cornett Woods were growing at the time Columbus discovered America. The virgin timber that remains includes a red oak 51.2 inches in diameter, a chestnut oak 47.7 inches in diameter and a white oak 47.2 inches in diameter and 150 feet

Plants found in the Lilley Cornett Woods, but rarely found elsewhere, include crested dwarf iris, pink lady's slipper, spotted mandarin, belleart and

For visitors to the Lilley Cornett Woods, an information building and museum are open near the forest. Persons needing information on the woods should contact Harry Nadler, director of the Division of Forestry, Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, 618 Teton Trail, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call 502-564-4496.

Pike College Exceeds Annual Fund Campaign

PIKEVILLE, KY.-Pikeville College officials announced today the $450,000 Annual Fund Campaign has been met and exceeded.

In a joint announcement, Dr. Jackson O. Hall, president of the school, and Charles B. Chrisman, chairman of the campaign and a member of the college's board of trustees, said the campaign reached an all time high of $461,694.12.

Chrisman said the figure was more than double the contributions for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

Chrisman said, "We are particularly pleased to announce we have met and exceeded our 1975-76 fiscal year goal. We set what we believed was a realistic goal of $450,000 a year ago. We believed the many graduates and friends of the college had realized the importance of Pikeville College's Christian mission of education in the mountains.

Laird Calls for Renewed U.S. Embargo of Cuba

The United States should reinstitute the economic and political embargo of Cuba in retaliation for its recent intervention in Angola and support for international terrorist activities, former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird has declared.

Writing in the August issue of The Reader's Digest, Laired urges that the United States should enlist support for the sanctions by all our allies, including NATO nations and Japan. "They are all now targets of the terroristic regime they are helping to strengthen via trade, Laird declares.

"For the same reasons we should not hesitate to use economic sanctions against the Kremlin's aggressions,' Laird argues. "Even as the Angolan invasion mounted, U.S. representatives in Moscow continued to negotiate a pact announced October 20 under which the Soviets are buying millions of tons of American grain to support their faltering collectivized agriculture.'

Laird declares the growing Soviet military power, combined with a growing neo-isolationist attitude in Congress has emboldened the Kremlin leaders "to throw down a challenge beyond daring a few years ago. In brazen defiance of the Monroe Doctrine, the Soviets have converted Cuba into a military base and springboard for anti-Wester subversion and strategic thrusts all over the globe."

Laird describes numerous cases of Soviet-Cuban support for terrorist activities ranging from Puerto Rico and the U. S. itself to Western Europe, Iran, Oman, Somalia, the Dominican Republic and Argentina. The Soviet secret police agency, the KGB, has extensive operational control over Castro's secret service, the Direction General de Inteligencia (DGI), Laird reports.

Their combined successes in Angola and elsewhere have produced "a king of Marxist intoxication in the Kremlin that poses the greatest danger to world peace," Laird declares. Last December top Soviet strategist Mikhail Suslov told a Communist Party Congress in Havana: 'Prospects for the second liberation of the Latin-American continent are becoming increasingly real.' "Coming from a man who promoted the 'liberation' of Budapest, Prague and Saigon, these are dangerous words which require immediate and long-term U.S. responses," declares Laird.

Using New Smoke Generator To Train Pollution Personnel

control officials recently started using a new smoke generating machine in a special school for recertification of enforcement personnel.

"Smoke schools are conducted every three months for division employes and representatives of industries to refresh their ability to 'eyeball' a column of smoke," according to Miles Smith, chief of the division's case preparation section in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental

Smith said a person must be able to look at smoke coming from a stack or other source to determine its "opacity"

Frankfort, Ky.-State air pollution and decide whether the emissions are within state standards. He described opacity as that quality of smoke that permits a given amount of the background to be visible through the

"Our people can read the different 'smokes' quite accurately" he continued, 'because we don't permit the average of their series of readings to exceed seven and one-half percent, or any single reading to vary more than 20 percent.

The air pollution control official said if the limit is surpassed by school participants they are required to attend the next recertification run during that

Smith commented that although federal regulations require recertification every six months, the state division retrains its enforcement personnel every three months. "Our people are out in the state using their talent, but not to any great frequency-maybe four of five readings a week," Smith explained, "so we feel the more practice we can give them, then they can maintain their proficiency.

Both black and white smoke are produced in the generator. Black is created by burning benzyne in the compartments and then channeling the gases through a cooling chamber. White smoke comes from the vaporizing of kerosene on a heated steel plate.

The smoke passes through a tall stack containing a "transmissometer." The device consists basically of a light source and a photocell. As the density of the smoke permits a given amount of light to strike the photocell, a measurement is recorded by continuously moving needles on a strip graph, or photopic response

Smith said the graph is accurate to within one-half per cent, plus or minus, and is a check against the school participants' efforts at reading the opacity of the smoke being emitted by the whiskers" will.

By JOHN WILSON

"Old Whiskers" isn't much to look at, but he proves the old saying that beauty (or the lack of it) is only skin deep. Under the catfish's ugly skin, there's some really beautiful meat just waiting to be turned into a mouth-watering fish fry.

And a catfish isn't as particular about what he eats as are some of the "fancier" game fish we often wear out our arms and our patience on. He'll take everything from an occasional artificial lure to special home-made concoctions which smell so bad that the cat will try to bury them.

The variety of a catfish's appetite is matched only by the number of methods fishermen have devised for catching him. Kentucky anglers go after catfish with everything from cane poles to rods and reels which look like they belong on a deep-sea fishing expedition.

The heaviest tackle will show up below the dams at Kentucky and Barkley Lakes, where anglers "fish the boils" for big blue, channel or flathead cats. For those who want their catfish angling exciting, this is the way to fish. The "boils" are the turbulent areas immediately below the dams where water from the generators is discharged. The water will actually boil up, sometimes as much as 18 inches, above the surrounding surface. In addition to water, the generators also discharge fish which have been sucked into the intakes and catfish gather at the outlets for an Expert boil fishermen prefer flatbottom boats with small outboard motors. They run the bow of the boat into the boil, then let the motor hold the craft stationary against the flow of the water. They then lower a hunk of cut bait directly down into the boil, using a 20 ounce sinker to counteract the upflowing current. And they pull out some monstrous fish. The state record blue catfish, a 100 pounder, was taken from Kentucky

Needless to say, this type of fishing is for the experienced. Just handling a boat in the boils takes some doing and it's definitely not the place to take the family for an afternoon's outing. But for those who want their catfish angling a little less exciting, there are suitable waters, and fish, just waiting.

Many farm ponds throughout the state are stocked with channel catfish, and these small bodies of water can offer some fine fishing. Rivers and large streams also offer the opportunity to laze away a hot summer afternoon by siting in the shade waiting for a catfish to pick up bait from the bottom.

Or you can try trotlining or limb lining. A limb line is just that—a line with a baited hook tied to an overhanging limb. The limb serves as a rod, its flexibility preventing the fish from jerking loose before the angler gets back to check it.

A trotline or limb line may be used by fishermen with a sport fishing license, but the trotlines must have no more than 50 hooks, with the hooks no closer together than 18 inches. These lines must be checked every 24 hours and must be removed from the water after use.

A favorite trotline bait is small bluegill or other bait fish, but cut bait or special catfish mixtures can also be used. For the family, on a combined fishing and camping trip, a trotline is sometimes an ideal choice. It can be set just before dark and run just after daylight, freeing the day for swimming, sight-seeing or other amusements.

Of course, some care must be exercised in handling a trotline. There are a lot of hooks flying around, and the fishermen should be careful, particularly when landing a large fish, not to catch themselves. Also remember that every member of a party participating in a trotline expedition should have a license

The publisher selects one of his poems in the new work, "Down by the River," as illustrative of "the theme of Blaine R. Hall's deeply religious conviction that the human race is of divine creation and, being a part of the Supreme Intellect, possesses the ability to weave from dreams a creation of its own making . . . that the human experience is of short duration and is an integral link in the transition to an eternal existence.' Blaine Hall is the opposite of the "poet starving in a dreary attic." He is a successful business man who writes, not to make money or even to establish a literary reputation, but to express in his favorite medium thoughts that demand expression. Born in Clay county, in 1921, he has spent his adult life in Eastern Kentucky, with the exception of three and a half years in England during World War II with the Eighth Air Force. He has been a school teacher, has worked as a mine

He is married to Ruth Compton, whom he met while attending Alice Lloyd College at Pippa Passes, Kentucky. They have one daughter, Mrs. Denise Clark, whose husband, Richard Clark, is associated in business with Mr. Hall. Hall is cofounder and president of Highlands Mutual Insurance Company of Kentucky and president of Hall & Clark Insurance Agency, Inc. Previously he was active in civic work involving the development of the area. He is a former vice president of the Kentucky Poetry Society, is listed in International Who's Who in Poetry, Who's Who in the South, Who's Who in Kentucky, Dictionary of International Biography, and in the 1976 edition of Kentucky in American Letters. He is currently published in "This Place Kentucky," a book of color photographs by the famous photographer, H. Harold

Earle Combs-"Country Gentleman" of Baseball

By JOHN DAVIDSON

PAINT LICK, Ky.—As baseball stories go, perhaps the most famous is the one of Babe Ruth, who with two strikes against him stepped out of the batter's box, pointed to the center field wall and proceeded to hit the next pitch over it. But one of Ruth's teammates did virtually the same thing, without the theatrics.

In a game against Boston, Earle B. Combs had badly missed two Danny McFadden slow curves. He stepped out of the batter's box and told the Boston catcher, "One more of those and I'll hit it out of here." The catcher told him to get ready because another one was coming. When McFadden delivered the next slow curve, Combs hit it out of the park.

Combs said that he remembers that occasion graphically because "I hit so few homers, I can remember them all." But the former Yankee centerfielder did hit more than just the one home run in his

The 77-year-old Hall of Fame centerfielder from the New York Yankee "Murderers Row" dynasty died July 21 in Richmond, after a long illness. Combs had lived with his wife on their 400-acres farm with a tree-lined driveway, a classic white home and a small lake near the front yard.

Born in Owsley county, Earle B. Combs attended Eastern Kentucky University where there is now a dormitory bearing his name. He played minor league baseball briefly in Louisville and semi-pro ball in Lexington before being called up to the major leagues by the Yankees. (Combs told a Floyd County Times representative, a few years ago, that he rode a horse from his home in Owsley county to Richmond to enter school.)

Compiling a .325 lifetime batting average with the Yankees, Combs was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in

A story some of Comb's friends tell about him is that when he was offered a professional baseball contract, he had to debate between teaching school for $40 a week and signing the contract. Combs laughed when asked about the debate and said that it was not a tough decision. "I always wanted to play baseball," he

A long-time friend of Combs, former Eastern Kentucky University baseball coach Charles "Turkey" Hughes, said that Combs' Yankee teammates called him "The Country Gentleman." He said that Combs never drank, smoked or chewed tobacco.

He added that Combs did not "carouse around" with the most famous member of his team, Babe Ruth. "If you wanted to play ball, you couldn't keep up with Babe," Combs remembered.

Hughes also said that Combs was a big player for those times, standing 6-feet-2. 'With those long strides of his, he didn't look like he moved real fast. But he was smooth and very fast," said Hughes. "Earle never really got credit for his speed.

Combs remembered that he stole 49 bases for Louisville the year before he joined the Yankees, but he was under strict instructions not to steal bases for the Yankees Combs was lead-off hitter for the club. He said that he really did not have to steal any bases and was instructed not to get picked off base, because he was followed in the batting order by rest of the legendary Yankee Murderer's Row-Tony Lazerri, Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth.

His career with the Bronx Bombers lasted 12 years, from 1924 through 1935. A member of the famous Yankee outfield of Bob Muesel in left field, Combs in center and Ruth in right Combs explained that his career was cut short by colliding with the centerfield wall in St. Louis' Sportsman's Park while chasing a fly ball.

Although he only played 12 years, Combs was named to the all-time great New York Yankee outfield-consisting of himself, Babe Ruth and Joe Dimaggioby his manager Joe McCarthy. Mc-Carthy also managed Combs in the minor leagues at Louisville.

A few years ago after retiring to his Paint Lick farm, Combs suffered a stroke and his activities sharply decreased. But his face still brightened, he grinned broadly, giggled like an excited child and showed perfect recall when he talked about his baseball playing days.

He said that his teammate Babe Ruth set so many records in his career that his mark of hitting 60 home runs in one season "was just another record he set."

Remembering that Ruth's "average speed" in the outfield slowed down during his later years with the Yankees, Combs said he had to cover "pretty much" of Ruth's territory in right field. Combs' son, Donald, who is the athletic director at Eastern Kentucky University, said that his father played a prank on

"It was late in the season, the pennant had already been decided and in a rare situation, the Yankees were getting beaten badly," Donald Combs prefaces his story. "A line drive was hit between center and right field. Ordinarily daddy would have run the ball down. But this one time, he took off running as hard as he could in the opposite direction of the ball. Ruth looked over and saw dad running away from the ball, and lumbered off after it. When the inning was over and the team went into the dugout, Babe walked over to dad and said, 'Earle, you never did see that ball, did Earle Combs said that Philadelphia's legendary Lefty Grove was the best pitcher he ever faced. "Lefty threw the ball hard. One morning in Philadelphia he was throwing so hard that he literally knocked the bat right out of my hands,' he remembered.

To help preserve her husband's memories, Mrs. Combs has kept a scrapbook of his press clippings and mementos. The giant scrapbook has clippings from his college days through his induction into the Hall of Fame.

"There wouldn't be any keepsakes if I hadn't done it all for him," Mrs. Combs said. "He was embarrassed by a lot of attention being paid to him.

One of her prized possessions in the scrapbook is a get-well card from Lou Gehrig, sent to Combs when, as a rookie with the Yankees, he broke his leg sliding into home plate to win a game.

After his retirement as a player, Combs coached for the Yankees awhile. "I quiet three times," he laughed. "The last time I quit, I got fired, so I knew I

Chandler, Chandler, a former baseball commissioner, became governor after Combs returned to Kentucky, and appointed his former teammate commissioner of banking for 18 months. Former Gov. Chandler also appointed Combs to Eastern Kentucky University's Board of Regents, where he served from 1956 to the beginning of 1975.

One of Combs' fondest memories, he said, was being presented an honorary doctor's degree from his alma mater, Eastern, at the university's 1974 spring commencement.

Sitting in the house that looked like it came from the movie "Gone with the Wind," Combs once stated proudly that throughout his baseball career, he had not been kicked out of a game. His wife chided him with, "You came very near it once, though." Combs laughed and recalled, "The umpire told me "One more word and you're out of the

Of the 45,799 new enrollees in the Job Corps program during fiscal year 1975, men outnumbered women by 3 to 1, with the majority of enrolees under 18 years of age, according to the "Employment and Training Report for the President" for

Reconstruction of US 119 In Harlan To Cost $4.3 Million

to rebuild part of US 119 in Harlan county has been awarded by the Kentucky Department of Transportation to R. R. Dawson Bridge Co. of Bloomfield and Bizzack Brothers Construction Corp. of State Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts said this contract is part of a complete rebuilding of US 119 through Harlan county under the Appalachian Development program. The contract calls for grade and drainage construction from a point 800 feet east of KY 160 and extending to the east about two-thirds of

A bridge spanning the Poor Fork of the Cumberland River and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad tracks is also included in the project.

The highway is being rebuilt as a twolane facility, except in congested areas. At Cumberland, which has 3,500 in population, a community college, and is a center for the coal business in eastern Harlan county, the roadway will be four lanes wide. The road is to have a median 20 feet wide and shoulders 10 feet wide

The location of the highway in this area takes into account the narrowness I the valley which already con' the existing highway.

"To build a modern four-lane highway on the same location as the old would have wiped out the town. So, the new US 119 will bypass the main part of town, and cut through a mountain at the east end of Cumberland," Roberts said.

To get the road through the mountain, KYDOT engineers have calculated that 1.5 million cubic yards of earth must be moved. When finished, the new road will pass through a cut that will average 150 feet in depth.

The contractor will have 180 working days to finish the project. This contractual period will start when the department issues a work order, probably within two weeks Roberts said.

Under the Appalachian Development program, funding for this project will be 70 per cent federal funds-30 per cent state matching funds.

Joseph S. McCauley, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, told the Floyd fiscal court Monday that it is possible Floyd and Magoffin will be the only counties in the five-county district whose unemployment percentages are high enough to qualify them for public works funds under the bill passed last week over President Ford's veto.

As of this time, he said, only those counties with an unemployment percentage of 7.3 or higher are eligible. The April, May and June unemployment figures will be considered in establishing eligibility. In May Floyd county had 8.1 per cent unemployment while Magoffin's stood at 9.4 per cent. The June figures, which may be slightly lower, have not been released

Most members of the fiscal court were skeptical, holding that demands of the public will force a lowering of the unemployment level and that most counties of the country will be eligible for

Mr. McCauley said he has been told that the Economic Development Administration (EDA) will perhaps administer the public works section of the new legislation. The funding for public works amounts to about $2 billion, and Kentucky's share is roughly estimated at $40 million.

McCauley said full criteria for operation of the program is expected by late August.

"We will work hard and keep our ears to the ground to get a fair share for this district," he said following the court

Slone Loses Chase, Search Nets Beer

A reported attempt to elude sheriff's deputies, first by auto, then on foot, failed Monday for Clarence Slone as he was finally apprehended at a relative's home and later booked at the county jail.

Deputy Sheriffs Doug Lewis and Virgil Hunt, Jr., who sought to return Slone to jail after an investigation denied Slone's parole, said Slone wrecked his auto while fleeing from them and then attempted to elude them on foot. For his alleged attempted flight, the officers charged Slone with drunk driving, reckless driving, attempt to elude police officers and no operator's license. Slone had been convicted on an earlier charge of obtaining money under false pretenses and faced a one-year pen term on the count.

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Doug Lewis arrested Bill Tom Shepherd near David Monday on a charge of illegal possession of alcoholic beverages. Confiscated in the raid were 288 cans of beer.

Others booked at the county jail, charges against each, and arresting

Back to the Basics Is Back Again

on a waiting list for admission to one of

By ROB L. OLCOTT

(NSBA Publications Assistant) Twenty years after Sputnik and more than a dozen educational alternatives later, back to the basics is-once againthe most-talked-about movement to hit the nation's elementary and secondary

Increasing numbers of educators and parents, angered by declining student test scores and what many consider the 'shocking' number of high school graduates who lack even the most basic educational skills, are once again calling on schools to renew their emphasis on teaching fundamental skills.

Underpinning the basics movement is a general feeling that many of the educational innovations (e.g., "new math") of the late 60's and early 70's simply haven't worked. To this, add slipping student test scores, the rising cost of education, and deteriorating discipline in the nation's schools, and you can understand the renewed interest inand the rising numbers of -so-called fundamental schools.

What's more, the "push" for a return to the basics is coming right from the top. Last winter, U. S. Education Commissioner Terrel Bell (who recently announced he will leave the Office of Education later this year) blasted the country's school leaders for what he called their lax attitude about discipline and morality in education. Bell, calling for an end to permissiveness in both academics and morality, urged a return to a "disciplined education program" of "no-nonsense" that emphasized basic academic subjects.

More recently, California's youthful Governor, Jerry Brown, said he believes students in that state are badly served by the wide and expensive variety of nonacademic courses offered in California's schools and colleges. "Maybe we should all take macrame, but I'm really concerned about the fact that kids can't read," Brown said.

School board members seem to agree. Last March, an American School Board Journal ballot box found school board members favored-by nearly nine to one-establishing fundamental schools as alternatives to the regular school program in their districts. Perhaps even more indicative of board members' feelings: many respondents said they would prefer fundamental schools-not simply as alternatives, but—as their district's only educational program.

The term, "basic education," was coined by the Council for Basic Education (CBE) in 1956 when the council's founders were looking for a new term to describe the kind of public school education they advocated. Basically, they believed that all students should study and master-to the best of their ability—a basic and limited cirriculum. heavily ladened with the three R's. Moreoever, they advocated standards to measure a student's progress and standards to govern his promotion.

"The founders of CBE believed that it is the primary function of the school to cultivate the life of the mind," said BE's Executive Director A. Graham Down at the recent NSBA convention. "They felt that school should not usurp the function of the home, the church and other social agencies by concerning themselves predominantly with the psychological needs of the nation's young people. From this central premise they went on to insist-as the Council does today-that the high school diploma should mean something, specifically some mastery of the basic subjects, that is, English, history, foreign languages, natural sciences and the arts." But many of the fundamental schools now operating have modified CBE's emphasis on the three R's by adding an 'M"-for morality.

The widely-publicized John Marshall Fundamental School in Pasadena, Calif., for example, stresses reading and math, controlled classrooms, and strict dress and behavior codes. A 15-minute daily "character education" period gives students instruction in discipline, manners, courtesy and patriotism. In addition to John Marshall, the Pasadena district operates two other fundamental schools that now enroll 2,600 studentsabout ten percent of those in the district. Because of space and program restrictions, more than 1,000 students are in one of Pasadena's Fundamental Schools can expect to spend a large portion of their classroom time on all forms of the language arts and math before they move out to geography, history, and the full cirriculum, says J. M. (Mike) Keller, John Marshall's principal. Seventh- and eight-grade students are required to take both reading and math fundamentals, with additional courses available in reading development and English. Students in grades 9-12 must take four years of English and at least two years of math. And regardless of the grade level, students can look forward to a tightly enforced discipline policy and homework four nights a week. Basic to the fundamental school philosophy, the teacher is expected to maintain strict order and control in the classroom. Clearly, the teacher's role in a fundamental classroom is that of leader, not learning facilitator or resource person.

Up the California coast, the Hoover Elementary School, in Palo Alto, houses that disctrict's "experiment in traditional education."

According to the school's prospectus, "the contemporary school (as the district calls it) will emphasize academic skills and subject matter and the establishment of good study habits-(in) a quiet and orderly environment which many children need in order to learn-(and) a majority of school hours will be devoted to the teaching of reading, writing, spelling, language and arithmetic .

Visitors to Hoover (and other fundamental schools) report "an air of courtesy and a low level of noise in the school building," as the most noticeable differences from any other school. However, some critics of the fundamental movement say this "quiet, relaxed atmosphere" is simply the result of strict regimentation, and that many of the schools "are like armed camps, like private schools paid for by tax dollars." Others who oppose the back-to-the basics bandwagon, claim fundamental schools are "reactionary, repressive and overly rigid." Some see the addition of morality and patriotism to the regular fare of basic academic subjects as a violation of the schools' purpose: to help all students master basic learning skills.

Three things seem clear: Fundamental schools are controversial; they will continue to spread in number and gain acceptance; they are not for every student or parent.

"The present public demand for greater emphasis on basic skills must ultimately face the fact that earlier reform movements have discovered there is no one best approach to schooling; instead a variety of approaches is needed to meet the variety of public preferences and pupil needs that arise . . .," say California State Board of Education members Michael Kirst and John Pincus. "Public schools are largely reflections of society. Therefore, there can be no single best solution now; both the quest for reform and the frustrations that accompany it are the mirror of our nation's search for a new consensus."

As CBE's Associate Director George Weber says, "Nobody expects the schools to turn out 100 percent Einsteins, but more and more people believe it is not unreasonable to have all children achieve a minimum level of com-

More than 200 persons were on hand for the grand opening recently of the minipark in the Goble-Roberts Addition here. In the planning stage for some time, the playground site was purchased with city funds, and equipment was provided by the city as well as the Prestonsburg Housing Authority. Police Chief Ralph "Hack" Thornsbury and group provided live music as well as a benefit appearance by the nationally-known Goins Brothers Bluegrass group as residents of Goble-Roberts also celebrated the first anniversary of the annexation of the residential area into the city.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

A wise Persian poet who lived cen- Buy Hyacinths for the Soul richest blessings of all kinds, too turies ago once wrote

'If of thy mortal goods thou art bereft, And from thy slender store,

Two loaves alone to thee are left, Sell one, and with the dole

Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul." It has become expedient more than ever that we take time out of our daily routine of bread-and-butter problems to cultivate a deeper appreciation of earth's beautiful things. In his greed for gain, man has crushed out some of the finer things of life, so it is high time we changed this dangerous trend. The Great Teacher cautioned us: "Man shall not live by bread alone." When man tries to do so, he brings disaster on his head.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, the wise

philosopher, wrote:

"Never lose the chance to see anything that is beautiful; Beauty is God's handwriting; welcome it in every fair face, in every fair sky, in every pretty flower, and thank the Creator of Beauty, for it is His cup of blessing for mankind."

I urge both young and old to take time out to see and enjoy the beautiful things of our good earth and to put forth time and effort to keep our beauty unspoiled for the sake of future enjoyment, In his immortal classic, "Thanatopsis," Bryant wrote:

"To him who in the love of nature holds Communion with her visible forms, She speaks a various language;

There is peace for the mind and healing for the soul in the quiet cloisters of nature; in your harried life you will often feel constrained to retire to some quiet spot in the cool, green woods, there to let Great Nature restore your faith and confidence and steal away your cares.

Former Floyd Woman, Carding, Spinning Again after 65 Years

Mrs. Foley pictured carding the raw wool, a necessary step before spinning can begin.

> By RONDAL LAUDER (In The Portsmouth Times)

pearing art of spinning apparently is a little like learning to ride a bicycle. Once you learn, it seems, you never forget.

It is particularly appropriate in this, America's Bicentennial year, that the early folk art is making a comeback.

Mrs. Maude Foley, an 86-year-old Portsmouth resident, transplanted from her former home at Thomas, in Floyd county, is doing her part in reviving interest in spinning, which once was a vital part of most American homes.

Mrs. Foley, who lives with a daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Purdy, at 4535 Old Scioto Trail, is one of only a few remaining area residents who remembers the intricate spinning techniques and special touch required to produce a good quality, uniform thread, which was woven into clothing and a variety of items for use in

When Mrs. Foley resumed spinning two years ago, after 65 years without using a spinning wheel, the octogenarian found she had retained her touch at the wheel and with the device used to card the wool before spinning the thread.

Although Mrs. Foley once owned her own wheel, she now borrows one from a local resident, since hers was lost or oversized bobbin of thread, much like discarded during the move to Ports- that used in modern sewing machines.

She has saved a pair of wooden cards, which she says are at least 100 years old.

The implements were used by many natural materials, including certain women in her family. Mrs. Foley learned how to card wool onto a loom and woven into fabric. and spin when she was 5 or 6 years old.

During her youth, spinning was a necessary chore. All girls learned the process and the women of the family would devote most of the winter months to spinning and weaving and making the family's clothing. Spinning was ordinarily not a summertime activity, since the family worked outside during

She has operated the spinning wheel at events including the Scioto County Fair and Boneyfiddle Fair. A highlight for the spinner was an opportunity to demonstrate the art aboard the Army Corps of Engineers Bicentennial boat which docked at Portsmouth last fall.

The process from raw wool to finished thread, ready to be dyed and woven on a loom, involves several steps, Mrs. Foley

First the wool is carded using two wooden boards, with protruding metal spikes. The wool is put onto one of the cards and brushed back and forth to produce a smooth, fine quality, piece of wool, which resembles a short length of

The carded wool is threaded onto the spinning wheel and a special tension, which Mrs. Foley claims is "all in the thumb" produces a uniform, knot-free

The finished thread is wound onto a corn shuck, which has been dampened. When filled, the product resembles a

The thread is put onto a reel, where it is carefully measured and finally tied into a skein. The skein can be dyed using nuts. The thread then is ready to be put

In addition to spinning, Mrs. Foley also enjoys sewing and making her own clothes. She's proud of her membership in the Baptist Church and enjoys growing tomato plants from seed, as well as a variety of houseplants. One particularly unusual plant is a huge grapefruit tree. The tree, which stands about nine feet tall, was started from seed about 20 years ago and is moved indoors for winter and Reclamation officials with the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection have chosen Donald E. Mayo, of Martin, as an assistant area engineer for the Prestonsburg area reclamation office. His immediate superior is James Tramel, area engineer.

Mayo, who is both a registered professional civil engineer and registered land surveyor, has worked as a principal civil engineer with the planning section of the Kentucky Department of Transportation in Pikeville since 1969. Prior to that, he was a principal engineering aide for a year with the state highway department in

Mayo graduated from Berea College with a bachelor of science degree in mathematics and from the University of Kentucky with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering. According to department officials, Mayo has been added to the Prestonsburg staff as part of a reorganization in the structure of the division of reclamation. The reorganization established engineering positions in each regional reclamation office and, to balance the work loads and travel loads of regional personnel, set up two new area offices and redistributed many of the coal counties covered by both the new

Water Delays Scotia Entry

Recovery teams working to remove the bodies of 11 men entombed in Scotia Coal Co.'s No. 1 mine were expected to begin pumping water out of the shaft Tuesday after the rising water forced a halt to their descent Monday.

H. N. Kirkpatrick, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Mines and 58.50 cents for a free lunch, FNS officials Minerals, said the water is knee deep in said. the shaft but that it should not cause a serious delay in the recovery operation.

But after it is removed, the recovery teams will encounter even deeper water as they continue to descend into the tunnel, he added.

"The mine lies in a bowl, and we haven't reached the lowest part of the mine," Kirkpatrick said. "The engineers figure that deeper in the mine, the water will be all the way up the roof."

That could cause a delay of 10 days to free breakfast, which has been 25.25 two weeks while the water is pumped out, Kirkpatrick said, adding that the recovery teams still expect to reach the bodies by the middle of September.

"This means we've got about two and a half miles to go to the bodies," Kirkpatrick said. "We have fresh air and have ventilated down to 4,000 feet. We've hit some water and we're going to get some pipe in there and start pumping."

The recovery teams-three Scotia squads and one group of state volunteers-proceed into the shaft wearing oxygen masks. Normally, they proceed into the shaft 500 feet at a time, shoring up and ventilating each area before going deeper into the mine, Kirkpatrick said.

All efforts will be made to keep oxygen out of the section where the explosion occurred that killed the 11 men.

The men died March 11 in the second of two explosions within 60 hours inside the mine. Two days earlier, 15 men were killed in the first explosion of methane Kirkpatrick said that although methane gas caused the blasts, it is not known what triggered the explosions. However, he said it is generally believed that a battery-operated compressor on a mine locomotive caused a spark that triggered the explosions.

The locomotive remains in the area where both blasts occurred, and for that reasons no oxygen will be allowed into that section, the commissioner said.

"At this time, even if it takes two weeks to get the water out, there is no reason to believe it will take any longer than first expected to get to the bodies,' Kirkpatrick said. "At this time, we still expect to get to the bodies 60 days from July 14th.

Kirkpatrick said the work inside the mine is slow because "it's like a caveit's dark, pitch dark." He added that each member of the recovery teams has "a headlight on with a battery, and that's how he can see.'

He said officials believe the plan being used to get to the bodies is the safest of several proposed and that they feel there is no danger of another explosion. "But, like I've said, we're not taking any chance," he added.

Hold Workshop For New Supts.

Frankfort, Ky.—The state department of education for three days last week is holding a workshop in Frankfort to help the new superintendents of 19 school districts cope with what one department official calls "one of the lonesomest jobs

In Wednesday's opening remarks James Melton, associate superintendent of public instruction, told the group that the workshop's purpose is to let the newly-named local administrators know "who you can go to in Frankfort if you run into problems.

During daylong sessions Wednesday and Thursday and a half-day meeting Friday, the programs, policies and workings of department bureaus and those of the Kentucky Education Association, the Kentucky School Board Association and the Kentucky Association of School Administrators were outlined by their organizational

Among the nineteen new superintendents were Douglas Cole, Boyd county; E. P. Grigsby, Jr., Floyd county; Ellis E. Rasner, Owsley county; John H. Brock, Rowan county; and John Waddell, Pikeville independent.

Completes Timberland Work

Wayne Ratliff, former assistant superintendent of Floyd county schools, and now active in the real estate business, also has an active interest in forest management and natural resources conservation. With the recent completion of 20 acres of timberstand improvement, he has now improved some 47 acres of his woodland property over the past 20 years.

Timberstand improvement work is aimed at increasing the quality of the timber and the board-foot volume per acre attained by the remaining crop trees. Mr. Ratliff is accomplishing these goals by several sound forestry practices, foresters say.

Where his young, pole-size yellowpoplar timber was too crowded, Mr. Ratliff thinned the trees which were marked by foresters of the Kentucky Division of Forestry. By thinning a stand of trees which are too dense, additional growth may be distributed to selected crop trees. His grandsons intend to cut up the felled trees for use as firewood.

Larger trees, which were poorly formed and were interfering with the growth of good quality seedlings, saplins, or pole-size trees, were deadened by girdling the trees. This method allows the larger trees to remain standing and fall to the ground, piece by piece, without damaging the remaining

Mr. Ratliff is also pruning young, opengrown black walnut trees. Open-grown trees tend to retain their lower branches, resulting in lower grade of lumber at maturity. By pruning these branches while the trees are still young, however, future growth will heal over the wounds and produce high quality logs for lumber

Grapevines were cut where they were interfering with the growth of goodquality young trees. Though most of the vines were cut, some were left for the benefit of wildlife. Mr. Ratliff insists upon total conservation when working to improve his woodlands, foresters point out. This includes taking measures to insure ample food and cover be preserved for wildlife along with maintaining the natural beauty of his forest. Most of the understory tree species such as redbud, dogwood, sourwood, persimmon, and mulberry were not felled or deadened. In addition to being beneficial food sources for wildlife, these trees shade the lower stems of the crop trees. This shade helps to cause these trees to prune themselves naturally, resulting in a better overall stand of timber.

Mr. Ratliff has practiced natural resources conservation for many years. With his own knowledge and with technical assistance from foresters, he has seen what can result from proper conservation. Forestry practices such as those Mr. Ratliff and his family have been doing may be cost-shared under the Forestry Incentives Program. Any landowner interested in doing similar work on his or her property should contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry,-office located on Middle Creek road,-or the Floyd County ASCS office, downtown Prestonsburg, for further information.

Plan Coal Refining Facility

last Friday for the design and engineering of a solvent coal refining facility in Kentucky which, when completed, will cost an estimated $150 million

Governor Julian M. Carroll and Michael D. Dingman, president of Wheelabrator-Frye, Inc., headquartered at Hampton, N. H., in a joint statement announced that an initial $5 million contract for the design and engineering was signed by the Kentucky Center for Energy Research and Wheelabrator.

Coal refining, known industrially as the Solvent Refined Coal Process (SRC), was developed to derive an environmentally acceptable clean fuel from coal. The clean fuel can be produced in either liquid or solid form. Initially, the new plant will be designed to process 2,000 tons of Kentucky coal per day.

The first phase of the project will be the engineering, environmental-socioeconomic studies and to site, design, and prepare for the start of construction. Once it has proven to be commercially

> We have your best interest at heart.

Frankfort, Ky.-A contract was signed feasible, Wheelabrator-Frye, Inc. will construct and operate the facility. At that stage, Wheelabrator has agreed to make a financial commitment of up to $30 million for the project.

Governor Carroll said, "This is the fruitful culmination of discussions that started more than 16 months ago between Wheelabrtor-Frye, my office, the Kentucky Center for Energy Research and other agencies of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. We look forward to working with Wheelabrator and others in both the private and public sectors to seek effective, economic solutions to the energy dilemma we face in the United States

SILVER IN LIMITED SUPPLY

Silver-vital to industry, photography, health care, aeronautics and energy-is limited in supply. But it is remarkably reclaimable, according to the August Reader's Digest. During World War II, for instance, 403 million troy ounces of silver were "borrowed" from the U. S. Mint to provide fittings for top-secret nuclear research. After seven years' service, the fittings were put through the smelter to retrieve the silver: only a small fraction of one percent of the original silver was not reclaimed.

GRAYSON: Crappie fair over submerged cover; black bass slow to fair casting artificial nightcrawlers und live eels along rocky points and shallow banks; in tailwaters, trout slow; clear, stable, six inches above pool and 84

NOLIN: Crappie fair early and late around stick ups; bluegill slow off deep banks; in tailwaters, white bass fair; clear, stable, 112 feet above pool and 85

GREEN: Bluegill fair along deep banks; black bass slow early and late on surface lures and at night on artificial nightcrawlers off points, in inlets and bays and over drop-offs; in tailwaters, trout fair; clear, stable, six inches above pool and 81 degrees.

Mine Strike Causes Chessie Layoffs

Chessie System posted notices Monday of a furlough for 875 employes of its Raceland Car Shop, effective this

The railroad said effects of the wildcat strike by coal miners in West Virginia brought the layoff.

In addition to the coal car construction shop at Raceland, 175 employes were furloughed at Chessie's locomotive repair shop in Huntington.

Chessie, the nation's largest coalhauling rail system, announced Friday several hundred employes in the West Virginia coalfield have been furloughed because of the wildcat walkout

Consumer Comments

The growing season is here again and, to insure a good yield, Kentucky farmers must use herbicides to check weed and grass growth. It has been found, however, that certain herbicides on the market are being misrepresented in both function and price.

Several of these herbicides are being offered for sale over the telephone. Described as a new chemical which can eliminate all your weed problems for the entire crop year, the product does not meet the claims made in the sales pitch. The chemicals are not effective on every weed and grass and are not intended for the full crop year. Because the false claims are made over the telephone and are not in writing, the buyer cannot do much when later he discovers that the herbicides are intended for uses contrary to those named in the sales pitch.

Another deceptive practice takes place when the name of the herbicide is changed to give the prospective buyer the impression that he is buying some new "wonder" chemical. Often the farmer purchases the herbicide at a price that is much higher than that of the same chemical under a different name. Before buying a new chemical herbicide, check with a reputable dealer and seek

To prevent these deceptive and misleading practices from happening to you, follow these precautions:

1. Avoid doing business over the telephone.

2. Make sure you have everything in writing.

3. Find out the chemical composition of the herbicide and check its price against other products of the same composition. 4. Be cautious about any deal offering the "price of a lifetime."

If you have a consumer complaint, write to the Office of the Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601. The office has found that it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourages you to write when you have a complaint. However, if you have an emergency situation, call the consumer hotline. The number is 1-800-372-

Johnson-Salisbury Vows Said

Miss Linda Johnson and Mr. David Paul Salisbury were united in marriage on June 12 in a candlelight ceremony in historic Bruton Parish, Williamsburg, Virginia. The Rev. David J. Tetrault, curate, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Louise K. Johnson, of Williamsburg, and retired Army CWO Ronald Johnson, of Newport News, Virginia. The groom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Newcombe, Williamsburg, Va., and Dr. Robert J. Salisbury, of Mt. Sterling, Kentucky. He is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Salisbury and the great-grandson of Mrs. Winnie F. Johns, of Prestons-

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown, designed and made by her mother, of white satin with a lace inset bodice, long lace sleeves and empire waistline joined in the back with a satin tie and chapel length train. Her fingertip-length veil of illusion fell from an organza bow trimmed with seed pearls. She also wore an heirloom necklace belonging to the groom's mother which has been worn by every bride in the family for the past 125 years. She carried a cascade of white roses and english ivy.

Miss Dale Lee of Newport News, Virginia served as maid of honor, wearing a floor-length gown of blue, flowered organza over blue taffeta with an empire waistline, V neck and cape sleeves. She also wore a picture hat and carried a hand woven white oak basket of daisies, apricot and pink miniature carnations and english ivy.

The bridesmaids were Miss Evelyn J. Salisbury and Miss

Jane Lee Salisbury, sisters of the groom, Miss Teresa Sapp, of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Daniel Ferguson, of Anaheim, California. The bridesmaids wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor in apricot and pink and also wore picture hats.

Mr. Terry Bowles, of Williamsburg, Va., served as best man. The ushers were Carl Johnson, brother of the bride, of Newport News, Va., Claude Salisbury and Bill Salisbury, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., brothers of the groom, and Mr. Daniel Ferguson, of Anaheim, a floor-length gown of her own creation of flowered organza over beige taffeta with a corsage of talisman roses.

The groom's mother was attired in a floor-length gown of mint green with a corsage of gold roses.

A reception followed the ceremony at the "1776" Inn in Williamsburg. After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks of North Carolina the couple will be at home in Williamsburg where the groom is associated with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation as a craftsman in the Cabinet Shop. The bride is employed as an accountant with the Colonial Virginia Tours.

Our Error

In the obituary of Georgia Ann Hubbard (last week's Times) the funeral home in charge of arrangements was incorrectly listed as Hall Brothers. The Floyd Funeral Home directed the services.

RUMMAGE SALE

A rummage sale will be held August 2 and 3 in front of the Prestonsburg Elementary School for the benefit of Prestonsburg Head Start.

Floyd County Health Notes

PARENTS REMINDED OF IMMUNIZATIONS

Certain immunizations are required by state law before a child can be eligible to enroll in school.

The Floyd County Health Department urges all parents who have children enrolling in the first grade this fall to check with their doctor or the health department to see if their children have had all their required immunizations.

Every child should be immunized against polio, whooping cough, diphtheria, measles, and lock jaw within the first 24 months of life - in which case only booster doses will be required before he enters school.

The health department offers all of these immunizations, free of charge, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 12 and 1 to 4 p.m.

The Floyd County Health Department will conduct a glaucoma clinic, Friday, July 30, from 9 a.m. to 12 and from 1 to 2 p.m. Glaucoma is a serious disease which can cause total blindness, slowly and painlessly, if left undetected, and it usually strikes persons age 35 and over.

The community health nurses advise all persons within this age group to take advantage of this free glaucoma screening. This test is a fast and simple procedure that could save your

Monday, August 2, a community health nurse will hold an outpost clinic at the Beaver Valley Clinic in Martin. Clinic hours will be from 10 a.m. to 12 and from 1 to 2 p.m. and the following medical services will be offered, free of charge: immunizations, pap smears, diabetes screening, TB skin tests and blood pressures.

All persons in the Martin area The mother of the bride wore are welcome to attend this clinic.

Witnesses' Meeting Fills Auditorium

Roanoke, Va.-A capacity crowd of 9,200 persons filled the Civic Center Coliseum in Roanoke July 18 for the final session of the "Sacred Service" District Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses.

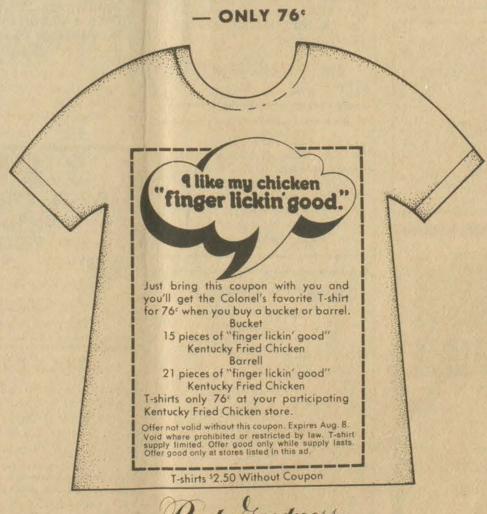

Tom Cabeen of New York spoke on the question "Will Serving God Solve Your Problems?"

Cabeen outlined the problems of modern society: inflation, unemployment, food shortages in many countries and a breakdown in family life.

Strip Violation Fines For May Total $36,000

Frankfort, Ky.-Fines and penalties collected by the reclamation division of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection totaled $36,000 in May.

Those fines, paid by 11 strip mining companies, brought the division's 1976 total collected fines to $181,500. The highest fine levied was $7,000, the lowest

The penalties are the results of legal action taken by the state environmental agency for the companies' violations of state strip mining regulations.

INVITATION TO BID

Sealed proposals will be received by the Office of County Judge, Pike County Courthouse, Pikeville, Kentucky 41501, until 11:00 A.M. local time, on July 30, 1976, at which time they will be taken to Quarterly Courtroom, opened and read

Bids will be for furnishing all labor, materials and equipment to complete the following single-span bridge projects using new precast superstructure on new and-or modified concrete substructure:

Lexington Center Opening Set

Central Kentucky for the first time will have a complete sports, entertainment and convention facility when the new $50 million Lexington Center opens in Oc-

The Central Kentucky Exposition, October 7-10, featuring business and industry in the Bluegrass area, will be the first event in the grand opening of Lexington Center.

The following week, an international concert artist will perform the first musical show for Lexington Center.

The Joseph T. Griffin Company of Louisville, a professional exposition management firm, has leased the exhibition facilities of Lexington Center to produce the Central Kentucky Exposition, under the auspices of the Greater Lexington Area Chamber of Commerce and the Lexington Center Corporation

Visitors to the Exposition will be taken on a guided tour of the huge facility, which has been more than two years in the making. Included in the tour will be a look at many of the behind-the-scenes areas not normally seen by the public. Lexington Center is composed of four parts, each one structurally connected to make a completely enclosed facility. The four parts are: -Convention-exhibition hall, with about 70,000 square feet of exhibit and meeting space. The Central Kentucky

Exposition will be set up in this area. Rupp Arena, a mammoth arena that can seat nearly 23,000 spectators for basketball. Rupp Arena will be the home court for the University of Kentucky basketball Wildcats beginning with the coming season, and will host large concerts.

-Retail mall, featuring about 70,000 square feet of commercial space devoted to exclusive shops and restaurants.

-Hyatt House Hotel, a 17-story, 377room luxury hotel which will feature a five-story atrium and indoor swimming

Visitors to Lexington Center can go to any area of the complex while remaining inside. This will allow convention delegates, for example, to stay at the hotel, shop at the mall, and attend events in Rupp Arena or the conventionexhibition hall with no concern for bad weather.

Lexington Center has already been credited with being the stimulus for a building boom in downtown Lexington.

In addition, the center will put Lexington back in the market for conventions and "big-name" entertainment. The center has already attracted bookings for many state and regional conventions and meetings.

Guests who cannot be accommodated at the adjoining Hyatt House Hotel can stay at one of the many fine hotels and motels elsewhere in Lexington.

Rupp Arena is expected to become a major facility for concert artists, ice shows, circuses, rodeos and many other kinds of entertainment and sporting

Uppermost in the minds of UK fans is the fact that Rupp Arena, named for former UK coach Adolph Rupp, will be UK's new home court. UK's first game in the new arena will be November 27 when the Wildcats take on the University of

Serves Floyd Youth

Operation of the center will be under the direction of the Lexington Center Corporation (LCC), a non-profit corporation guided by an 11-member board of directors and an executive directorgeneral manager, Thomas D. Minter.

The center was built with a mix of public and private funds. A $37 million bond issue by the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government and $4 million from state funds provided the public backing, while private interests, the Hunt-Landmark, Ltd., will lease the retail mall and construct the Hyatt House

Plans for such a center for Lexington cropped up as early as the 1920's. The present facility grew partly out of a need for a larger facility for UK basketball to replace 11,500-seat Memorial Coliseum.

Lexington will be getting much more than a new arena for basketball, however. Lexington Center is a complete sports, entertainment, convention, shopping and dining center which has facilities rivaling those of similar centers in much larger cities.

More Gardens, Less Food Stamps Is Belief of Lee County Woman

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

If every able-bodied person with a piece of land available for the purpose would grow a garden, there would be less need for food stamps and other federal handouts. The taxpayer's load would be less heavy, much self-respect would be regained, and better food would be available for the table.

That is the firm opinion of 80-year-old Mrs. Edith Hicks who practices what she preaches. A widow who lives alone, she raises a big garden every year on her tiny Lee county farm at St. Helens. She has been doing this for the past 11 years since she retired as manager of an elegant tea room in the famous Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati.

"I could have worked on at the hotel," ehe said, "but I wanted to get back to Lee county where I could so some gardening before I got too old.'

"I love to garden," she went on to say, "and I think it is good for a person. You not only can produce some of the finest food in the world for the table, but the work also does wonders for the body, and to be out tending a garden with the birds singing and the soft winds blowing is solace for the mind. I dread winter but I am sustained through it by the thoughts of garden time in the spring.'

A farm girl by birth and raised to young womanhood on a Lee County farm, Mrs. Hicks came by her love for gardening quite naturally. "Actually," she said, "I grew up in a garden and have never lost my love for it. I do most of my own work, and I raise enough for myself and have a lot to share with my neighbors who, for one reason or another, do not have gardens of their own.

Being of the old-time garden school, she gardens a lot by tradition. Although she doesn't do so all the time, she believes in planting according to the signs of the Zodiac and phases of the moon. Notwithstanding claims to the contrary by the U. S. Biologic Survey, she believes scarecrows, temporarily at least, will help keep rabbits out of the lettuce bed and blackbirds out of the pea

Also, whenever possible, Mrs. Hicks likes to grow old time-tested varieties of vegetables such as "tater onions" that you set out on election day in November and "sallit peas" that must be planted, rain or shine, on St. Valentine's Day in February. In fact, the pea patch this year came from seed believed to have been saved from year to year by the McGuire Family of Lee county since the time of Daniel Boone. The seed was given to Mrs. Hicks by a member of the McGuire family whose ancestors had been with Boone at Boonesboro

In the matter of: Princess Manufacturing Co., Inc., Bankrupt No. 75-49 NOTICE OF PROPOSED SALE OF ASSETS

A hearing will be held at 1 p.m. (EDT) August 11, 1976 in the U.S. District courtroom, Federal Bldg., Pikeville, Ky., on the application of Robert K. Wood, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Princess Manufacturing Co., Inc., for leave to sell at private sale for the sum of $160,000 the real and personal property of the Bankrupt, consisting of two tracts of real estate, one containing a storage building, and the other a modern 23,000-squarefoot sewing factory, complete with equipment-all located at Auxier, Floyd County, Kentucky.

At said hearing the Court will entertain any higher offer for the purchase of the assets of the Bankrupt.

Copies of inventories and appraisals of all real property and equipment and arrangements for inspection prior to the hearing may be obtained from:

ROBERT K. WOOD, Trustee in Bankruptcy, 115 N. Broadway, Lexington, Ky. 40508, Phone 606;254-8716; or DAN D. BROCK, JR., Brock & Davenport, 177 N. Limestone, Lexington, Ky. 40507, Phone 606-254-5531.

For the uninitiated in that great order of pea planters, "sallit peas" grow on tall plants that must be supported by sticks. They are picked, strung, broken up like snap beans, cooked, and eaten hulls and all. In pioneer days, this was the only pea available, and to do their best in Kentucky, this variety must be planted in mid-February.

Mrs. Hicks also grows old-time beans that have been handed down by generations of Kentucky mountain families, and while she is sure some newer varieties of vegetables are just as good as the older ones and some perhaps are better, she believes the older types are better adapated to the region's soil and climate.

Mrs. Hicks cans, freezes, dries, and otherwise stores away a lot of her garden truck. In winter, she gives a lot of this away to her less fortunate neighbors and gets a lot of joy out of doing it.

As can be seen, she is a firm believer in gardening and plans to keep on raising one each year until the "good Lord calls me home" or until she is no longer able to use a hoe. That may be a long time yet to come because as she says, gardening does wonders for the body and keeps it

Maybe Allah, as Old Izaak Walton said about fishing, does not detract from the allotted span of man those hours he spends in gardening.

"Sometimes," says Mrs. Hicks, "I almost believe that to be a fact. Leastwise, I never feel old while working in the

Vocational Needs To Be Studied

Frankfort, Ky.-Morehead State University and the University of Louisville have received $33,000 through the state Bureau of Vocational Education to finance a joint study of Kentucky's future vocational needs.

"The purpose of the study is to project potential problem areas, barriers and needs in regular vocational program in order not to be caught off guard by social or technological developments," said Dr. B. Glen Davis, who coordinates research in the bureau.

The study will use a modification of the Rand Corporation's Delphi technique, a method of arriving at consensus from information supplied by a panel of experts. No expert is told the identity of any of the other experts to create an atmosphere of complete freedom for their thinking. "Anonymity means the experts won't be influenced by any of the others,"

Also, the experts are asked to consider general areas of concern rather than to answer specific questions, which would tend to restrict their thinking. For example, the experts might be asked to discuss what changes might occur in education as a result of legislation such as Title IX, consumer education and career education.

"The Delphi technique has proved extremely accurate in forecasting events," Davis said. He added that 'while the project isn't intended to be a blueprint of the future, at least it will give advance insights into what vocational education will face 10, 20, or 50 years from now."

Martin and Wayland Drive Leaders Named

Mrs. Ora Mae Allen and Mrs. Fred Ridner have been named Martin and Wayland chairmen, respectively, of the Breath of Life Campaign to fight children's lung-damaging diseases, according to Jay Crouse, president of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. They will lead local volunteers in raising funds to support research and care programs for children affected by lung-damaging diseases like Cystic Fibrosis, severe asthma chronic bronchitis, and bronchiectasis.

The Breath of Life Week will be September 11-24 with a door-to-door drive scheduled during that time.

Frankfort, Ky.-Gov. Julian Carroll, speaking at the Southern Legislative Conference, Council of State Governments in Nashville, said that governmental red tape "deforms the essential structure of government and its service to our citizens.

Carroll said that the proliferation of forms in government and the resulting avalanche of red tape "seriously impairs the ability of governmental employes to render effective service; imposes an unnecessary burden on our cities. counties, school districts, and other units of local government; and it creates a burdensome, time-consuming, and costly responsibility on our citizens, businesses and others required to fill out an endless number of blanks and spaces.'

Earlier this week the governor announced that the state has eliminated 25 per cent, or more than 2,100 of the forms, used in state government.

Gov. Carroll told the conference that his philosophy in eliminating excessive paperwork was to abolish all forms and then reissue only those forms found to be absolutely necessary

Gov. Carroll shocked his fellow governors at the winter meeting of the National Governor's Conference when he pointed out his October, 1975, executive order abolishing all forms effective June 30 of this year.

According to John Nichols, press secretary for Gov. Carroll, a motion was made at the conference for Kentucky to provide information on his efforts at reducing paperwork to all the states. Nichols said that there has been correspondence on the subject with practically every state since then.

Since the executive order, review committees in each of the eight cabinets of state government have reviewed forms to determine which ones should be reissued July 1.

Of 8,601 forms reviewed, 2,159 forms were eliminated and another 1,563 have been modified

Gov. Carroll told the conference that in reviewing the forms six questions were to be asked

-How often the form was used. -The "time cycle" of a particular form, or the time involved in preparation, processing and initiation of appropriate action. -How difficult the form was to read and complete.

-How well the form actually supplied necessary information.

-If the form was overused and resulted in repetition of work.

-If the agency personnel required instruction for completing the forms. Gov. Carroll said the state is also using federal regulations as tools in eliminating excessive paperwork. He said that in preparing 10 federallyrequired state plans new administrative proceedures in funding, reporting, ac-

Vocational, Industrial Students Not Required

To Have Compensation

Frankfort, Ky.-Vocational and Industrial Arts students in Kentucky's public schools are not mandatoril subject to the Workmen's Compensation Act, according to an opinion issued by the Attorney General's office on July 8.

Martin Glazer, assistant attorney general, said, "While the 1972 Workmen's Compensation Act enlarged coverage, we believe that the act still requires an employer-employe relationship."

"In the public school system, a vocational and industrial arts student is just that-a student. There is not true employer-employe relationship," he counting and auditing resulted in the replacement of 120 federal-state-substate contracts with one federal-state-regional contract. Gov. Carroll said grant administration costs to the state have been reduced by $1 million.

Gov. Carroll urged the conference to utilize and strengthen the authority of federal-regional councils in fighting bureaucratic duplication.

He said that federal-state functional planning has been initiated at the local level which has enabled state government to better allocate resources to local

NOTICE OF SALE OF BONDS

The City of Prestonsburg, Floyd County, Kentucky, will, until the 5th day of August, 1976, at the hour of 7:30 p.m. (local time), receive at the usual and customary meeting place of the City Council, in the City Hall in said City, sealed bids for the purchase at not less than par of the City's $150,000 "Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System Revenue Bonds, Series of 1976," dated as of the date of delivery, and bearing interest from said date; maturing serially, February 1 of the years 1977 to 2006, inclusive, bearing interest at such rate or rates as may be established on the basis of competition, no rate to exceed 5 pct. per annum, as hereinafter provided. The Bonds are issued pursuant to KRS Chapter 58. The maturity and redemption provisions, places of payment, and other details are set forth in the Official Notice of Bond Sale.

Bids may be submitted at not less than par value for the entire issue of Bonds. Bidders shall stipulate the interest rates for said Bonds, in multiples of 1/8 of 1 pct. or 1-10 of 1 pct., none to exceed 5 pct., only one coupon rate per maturity, no proposal that interest becoming due on any Bond at any interest payment date be represented by more than one coupon; and the difference between the highest and lowest interest rates in any bid not to exceed two percentage points. For the purpose of determining the lowest bidder, calculations of net interest cost will exclude the bid of the United States Department of Agriculture, Farmers Home Administration ("FmHA"). These Bonds will be secured, in common and on a basis of parity as to security and source of payment with the outstanding bonds of the City's "Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System Revenue Bonds, Series of 1969" and "Series of 1974"; but subject, however, to the acknowledged pledges of the City (a) as to water revenues and sewer revenues, for the security and source of payment of certain bonds issued under date of November 1, 1962; and (b) as to combined water, sewer and flatural gas system revenues, for the security and source of payment of certain bonds issued by the City dated November 1, 1963. Details are set forth in the "Official Notice of Bond Sale," to which reference is herein made. The Bonds offered for sale are being issued to provide funds for the construction and installation of additions, improvements and extensions to the City's combined and consolidated Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System.

FmHA will submit a bid at par at a single interest rate of 5 pct. for all Bonds, providing bids are not received from other purchasers for the Bond issue, on the terms hereinabove indicated. Good faith deposit by cashier's or certified check payable to the City of $1,500, except in the case of a bid submitted by FmHA. The successful bidder or bidders will be furnished, without cost, the approving legal opinion of Grafton, Ferguson, Fleischer & Harper, of Louisville, Kentucky, and customary closing documents including No-Litigation Certificate. Right to reject bids and to waive minor informalities and irregularities in the bidding is expressly

Bids are to be made on the Official Bid Form, copies of which, together with the Official Notice of Bond Sale and Statement of Essential Facts, may be obtained from the City Clerk, at the above address of shortages in a few years. These are serious problems. Not just for you. For all of us.

Because without electricity, machines stop. Work stops. Paychecks stop. The economy suffers. And progress stops.

So, how do we deal with this? By working together.

At the power company, we're continuing to expand our search for economical fuel sources. Planning for new facilities that will be needed in the future. And, we're continuing our efforts to hold our operating costs in line so we can efficiently provide the electricity that helps all of us get our jobs done.

How can you help? By using electricity wisely. On the job. And at home, too.

You can also help by understanding and sharing the joint responsibility we have in assuring our electric supply.

And working together offers the best chance for all of us to get the job done.

A few years ago I delivered the class address to a large group of high school seniors. My subject was, "Let Us Get A Philosophy Of Life." During the discourse, I attempted to examine the philosophy that we now live by as contrasted against what I thought our philosophy should be. It has always appeared to be a strange custom, to wait till the flame of life has been extinguished and consciousness is no more, to begin sending roses and saying nice things about an individual. I believe a little serious thought would reveal these wellmeaning gestures of kindness to be useless and of little value. When I am engaged in thinking on these matters, I think of the people in my own Sinking Community. *

There is a man who lives on the upper reaches of Arab Fork of Sinking Creek, whose name is K. C. Goodman. All of his friends call him Keener. He is nearing 90 years of age and has spent most of his adult life in the field of education.

Keener was born and raised on Bull Creek in Floyd county. Bull Creek is a small stream some six or eight milles long that flows into the Big Sandy River, a short distance above Prestonsburg. People would jokingly say there is too much bull in Bull Creek. There was the Right Fork of Bull, the Left Fork of Bull, the Forks of Bull, and the Mouth of Bull. The C. & O. Railroad passed through this tiny village at the mouth of the hollow. Passengers were amused when the conductor yelled out, "Bull, Bull, the Mouth of Bull." Keener attended a rural school on Bull Creek. He made rapid progress and was considered an excellent student. He was especially good in arithmetic. He had learned all his teacher could teach by the time he reached the age of 15.

After he finished the rural school, he attended a boarding school at Prestonsburg. The school was conducted by an old-time educator called Professor Byington. Keener was his star pupil. There were no problems in Ray's Higher Arithmetic that he could not handle with ease. He took the teacher's examination and qualified as a teacher with a first class certificate at the age of 17. He said, "I fudged a little on my age."

The county superintendent was not long to recognize his scholastic ability and made him one of the county examiners. A county examiner assisted the superintendent in administering tests to prospective teachers.

He began his teaching career near the Forks of Bull Creek, around 1915. He received a saiary of $25.50 per month. After 1916, the rural schools in Kentucky were brought into the Twentieth Century by George Colvin, the state superintendent. The questions for prospective teachers were made up in Frankfort and had to be returned to Frankfort to be graded. Sometimes a city slicker would find out about the questions and go about over the state selling them to people who feared they could not pass the examination. I think this happened only one time but a number of unscrupulous people would go about the state selling questions that purported to be the real ones when they were nothing of the kind.

One such person came to Prestonsburg and attempted to sell the questions to prospective teachers. They brought him to Keener and he denounced the questions as phony. The man went to Hindman in Knott county where he was arrested and lodged in jail. When brought to trial he gave Keener as a witness. He ignored the summons but when they sent the sheriff with an order for his arrest, he agreed to make the 50-mile journey to Hindman on horseback.

Although Keener had never carried a gun, his father insisted that he take one in his saddlebags. He began his journey early in the morning. He followed the Big Sandy for 10 miles and turned south up Beaver Creek until he reached the Forks of Beaver, about five miles upstream. At this point he followed Right Beaver Creek to the town of Lackey. Here he turned due south and followed Jones' Fork on the long trek to Hindman. Darkness overtook him near Still House Hollow. Here he stayed overnight at a boarding house by the roadside. They placed him in a room with two traveling salesmen, or "drummers," as they were called in those days.

In due time he returned to the thing he liked to do: Teaching in the rural schools. He taught at Clay Fork, New Salem and Mauk Ridge

After he retired from teaching, he continued to lead an active and useful life. He is mentally alert and his mind is sharp and clear. Until a couple of months ago, he would get into his truck and take his neighbors to the doctor or to the store when they did not have other means of transportation. He has been a lifelong Mason and still continues to attend meetings.

More than anyone I know, he has enjoyed a long and useful life. This community, this state, and this nation would be a better place if there were more citizens like K. C. Goodman. **

* The Sinking Community referred to in the article is named for Sinking Creek, a small creek, that runs parallel to the Moore farm in rural Elliott county.

 The subject of this article, K. C. (Keener) Goodman, died during the winter of 1975-'76. Many of his relatives, including members of his immediate family, still inhabit the area of Sinking Creek and Arab Fork. This article was initially published in the Olive Hill Times in 1971, while Mr. Goodman was active in his various fields of endeavor.

By whatever name it is called, or for whatever purpose it is used, America's vast Okefenokee Swamp is still a 'paradise teeming with wildlife . . menacing wilderness shot through with mystery," according to the current (June-July) issue of National Wildlife

The 681-square-mile swamp straddling the Georgia-Florida state line "remains as mysterious as when the first naturalists explored it two centuries ago," says the bi-monthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation, but fortunately four-fifths of its area has been made into a National Wildlife Refuge, guaranteeing its future at a time when booming development threatens other wetland areas in the Southeast.

Okefenokee got its "trembling earth" name, reports the magazine's Senior Editor Mark Wexler, when the Seminoles observed that its wide stretches of floating peat beds "rock back and forth when walked upon, causing trees and shrubs to bob up and down in bizarre rhythms.'

Most of the swamp is a mixture of black lakes, pine-covered islands, cypress trees and floating wild flowers. Of its 681 square miles only five per cent consists of solid ground, found on the 70odd islands. These islands once served as homes for runaway slaves, Civil War deserters, itinerant lumbermen and other adventurers. They bear such colorful names as Bugaboo, Roasting Ear and Soldier's Camp.

But the real attraction of the lush wilderness is its abundant wildlife, according to the National Wildlife Federation magazine. More than 10,000 alligators inhabit the swamp, which is also home for 42 mammal species, 20 types of frogs, 30 different kinds of snakes, dozens of turtle and lizard species, and tens of thousands of migratory waterfowl.

"Surprisingly, quite a few of the refuge's year-round winged residents are not water birds," notes Wexler in National Wildlife. "Nesting on the pine thickets and along the fringes of the sandy islands are such common southern species as the blue jay, Carolina wren, crested flycatcher, red-shouldered hawk and pileated woodpecker.'

Within the past decade, refuge biologists have discovered nesting colonies of the wood ibis on an island accessible by canoe only during highwater periods. The only stork species native to North America, the wood ibis had not been known to next anywhere in the U.S. except for southern Florida. More recently, the first scarlet ibis was sighted near one of the last nesting sites of the threatened Florida sandhill crane.

Among the mammal species found in the Okefenokee, the bobcat remains the most elusive, according to Wexler. He reports that the 40-pound creature now numbers between 700 and 800 in the swamp, where its numbers once had dropped drastically due to killings by swamp-island residents.

The most prolific of the swamp's inhabitants are the reptiles, of which

Move To Halt Profit-Making Farm Co-Ops

Louisville, Ky.-Securities and law enforcement personnel from nine states and Washington, D. C., voiced their support here July 21 of a plan to pool information gathered on profit-making farm cooperatives known to be operating in at least 14 states, including Kentucky.

Gathered for a one-day conference sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Banking and Securities, the 35 men also agreed that a U.S. Department of Justice task force study of the co-ops could deter their spread. All data will be forwarded to Jack Bunnell, director of the Kentucky securities division, and then presented to U.S. Senators representing involved states for possible intervention by the Justice Department.

Farm co-ops, traditionally non-profit organizations run by farmers, have enjoyed exemptions from costly and time-consuming securities registrations. However, the spread of the profit-making co-op in recent years has plagued securities administrators in several

Emergency legislation enacted by the 1976 General Assembly brought the farm co-ops under the anti-fraud provision of the state securities laws March 1. Since then one co-op has gone out of business,

The Kentucky Attorney General's office has also conducted investigations of the farm co-ops.

Similarities in farm co-op offering brochures were noted as representatives from attending states explained their findings. A typical offering calls for a 20year investment plan with annual payments of $360. Investors will purportedly receive large interest rates on the money over the 20 years, as well as substantial discounts on such farm items as fertilizer, fence posts and bailing

While many of the states said co-ops in their area have sold items for five to 10 cents above cost, they added that no business could survive long on such a narrow profit margin. Such "bargains," they said, enabled the co-op to gain a foothold in the community. Often leading residents are the first to be solicited.

Many co-ops promise to build retail outlets across the area to cut down on transportation costs for the farmer. One co-op operating in Kentucky since 1972 has locations in Irvine and Lexington. It has a stated goal of building retail outlets within a 40-mile radius of every Kentuckian, a claim the state securities division views as "unrealistic.

Bunnell said anyone reading the coop's offering brochure "would have to clined to listen to the sales pitch of the promoters. In addition, it was generally agreed that most people do not have agricultural backgrounds.

The securities director said the brochures do not mention the high sales commissions, sometimes as much as 150 percent of the firt year's payment. He said more than $30 million has been collected by the co-ops.

Many of those attending the conference suggested that one person or organization is behind the co-ops. No one has been able to pinpoint the source of the seed money used to start the ventures because of their exemption from securities registration. Throughout the day the same names were heard repeatedly as the different states explained their investigations of the co-ops. It was suggested that the same promotors were behind life insurance scandals in the 1960's.

Marshall Bennett, an assistant attorney general in Mississippi, said his state had "inherited" a group previously operating in Missouri. The same men, he said, backed a proposed "Bibleland" near Biloxi. The theme park would feature a ride on a "heart" through places mentioned in the Bible and finally conclude in "hell," complete with devils. Emerging from "hell," participants would then receive counseling in Christian teachings by Bibleland per-Bennett said the Mississippi group collected $8,000 before the project folded. Another $50,000 was gathered for a similar plan in Missouri.

Lewis Brothers, securities administrator from Virginia, produced a farm co-op ad published in a Roanoke paper. A drawing portrayed a giant figure guarding "Mount Profit." Below a bedraggled farmer stood helplessly with his barefoot, pregnant wife. The drawing asked, "Who will survive?"

Brothers said the co-ops, which appeal to farmers because of their promise to cut out the middlemen in farm production, are just beginning to operate in his state. On the other hand, an Illinois representative said. "thousands and thousands" of hours have been spent investigating the co-ops by his office. Most states said they could not afford the extensive research.

A federal Securities and Exchange Commission member said his interest in the farm co-ops was "greatly increased" after attending the conference.

Other states participating in the conference besides those previously mentioned include Texas, Indiana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Arkansas.
