Judge Dismisses Boyd's Contest Of Primary Vote

Contestant's Failure To Answer Allegation Cited in Final Order

The lone contest suit growing out of the May primary election ended in dismissal last week.

The suit, that of Sandy Boyd against Elder Hershell Hamilton, Democratic nominee for Magistrate in District 4, was dismissed by Circuit Judge Hollie Conley after Boyd had failed to reply to the allegation made by Hamilton that the contestant had violated the Corrupt Practices Act.

Hamilton will be opposed in the November election by Russell Clark, Republican nominee.

Hamilton had filed a written motion asking that allegations in his answer be taken as true, and the court sustained the motion, pointing out that under KRS 120.055 it was necessary that the contestant file a reply to the allegation contained in Paragraph 2 of Hamilton's answer within five days, and that the contestant had failed to do so.

The contestee had pleaded that the allegation in the paragraph should be taken "as confessed" because of the failure of Boyd to make reply.

Upholding this contention, Judge Conley cited as supporting court cases those of Payne vs. Blanton and Britton vs. Garland.

The court also gave another reason for the dismissal, pointing out that KRS 122.055 requires a contestant to complete his proof within "not less than 15 days." The dismissal order pointed out that no proof had been taken in the case and that no extension of time for the hearing of testimony had been requested.

Hamilton defeated Boyd by only 19 votes.

School Repair Done, Tho Funds 'On Paper'

Despite the failure of federal flood disaster funds to arrive in time to be of any help, the Floyd County Board of Education has gone ahead with the work—and the expense—of putting schools in shape for their opening to classwork Monday, August 22, Supt. of Schools E. P. Grigsby, Jr. said this week.

"We have about $750,000 in federal funds, on paper, but no money; so we're going ahead with the work, ourselves," Supt. Grigsby said.

The damage to Floyd school properties from the destructive April flood was estimated at $2 million, he added.

The Aug. 22 school opening will be preceded by a teachers' in-service day, August 17.

One coaching position left vacant by resignation was filled at last Wednesday's board of education meeting, but another remains open. Kenny Newsome, who has been assistant to Don Wallen in Martin County, Florida for the last six years, was employed as head basketball coach at Wheelwright High School. Mike Wells resigned as coach of the new Allen

CHANGE OF TIME

One of our citizens who under pressure might admit that he is mighty close to nature's secrets reportedly held forth, late the other day, or early the other evening, on the sounds of fall in the air. Duller ears were on the wrong wavelength as they strained to hear what he declared he heard—katydids, jar flies and so on. Then he dwelt on the "feel" that was in the air. His litany might have been titled, "Farewell to Summer," and there was nobody to gainsay him.

But next day, with the temperature rising into the 90's (not celsius—ugh!), this same character was vowing that this was the hottest summer he could remember, and he wondered when, if ever, there would be any relief.

'WAY BACK WHEN

Elsewhere in this newspaper there is a story in which our friend Dean Murray, Dewey Reservoir manager, reminisces about things as they were when he first came to the lake. His mention of Stratton Branch as it then was recalls the fact that we at that time kept our fishing scow tied up in the channel of the branch and never feared anybody would steal it. Maybe the fact that it wasn't worth taking helped. And that probably explains why we always took the motor home with us.

That free dockage reminds me of the morning when one of the boys failed to hold the boat snug against the bank while I lumbered out of it with the precious motor and as one foot reached for the shore the boat went in the other direction. The water was cold but the mishap engendered so much heat in the immediate area that the white bass started their run, a month early.

No Site Chosen For New Airport

Despite rumors to the contrary, no site for a proposed regional Big Sandy airport has been selected, and none will be until a detailed study is completed.

Allan Perry, chairman of the Big Sandy Regional Airport Board, emphasized this week that selection of a site will come only after a master plan and site survey is prepared by a consultant engineering firm.

The firm, G. Reynolds Watkins Consulting Engineers, of Bowling Green, will study potential sites in the Magoffin-Johnson-Floyd-Martin county area, including several recommended prospects, plus others the firm may recommend independently.

Site selection will also require approval by the Federal Aviation Administration and the Aeronautics Division of the Kentucky Department of Transportation, Perry emphasized.

"Development of a regional transport-type airport is a highly technical matter, requiring not only engineering but environmental impact studies and public hearings," Perry said.

Martin Sidewalk Work Underway

Concrete work at Martin which is presently under way will provide for about three-tenths mile of sidewalk in the lower end of the town near Martin Elementary. Utilizing state funds, the $15,000 project is designed primarily for the benefit of school children who must walk by the road side coming to and from school, it was said.

Criminal Court To End Vacation Starting Sept. 6

The long summer vacation from circuit court criminal trials will end Tuesday, Sept. 6, when the criminal term will convene here.

At least two trials in which defendants are accused of murder are scheduled for hearing during the term, and the grand jury will investigate three other slayings. Bobby Workman, who has been held in jail without bond since his bondsmen surrendered him to custody, is almost certain of trial on the charge of slaying James Chaffin. Carl Nance is also expected to go on trial for the pistol-slaying on Stephens Branch of Buster Carroll.

Ed Hall, Jr. was named in an indictment charging him with first-degree assault in the shooting of Larry Spencer, but will not be given trial on that count. Spencer succumbed to his wound after the April grand jury adjourned, and a new indictment may be necessary.

The grand jury and petit juries for the coming term will be formed from 75 persons notified to appear Sept. 6 for jury service. Names and addresses of the prospective jurors follow:

Gloria Tackett, Grethel; J. L. Nichols, Prestonsburg; Archie Moore, Bypro; John J. Hancock, Garrett; Landell Thornsberry, Bypro; Richard Allen, Bypro; Edgel Jarvis, Ivel; Lora Childers, Wheelwright; Denver Bolling, West Prestonsburg; Garfield Hamilton, Teberry; Ray Brackett, Allen; Lorene Horn, East Point; Gary Compton, Prestonsburg; Thomas Allen, Prestonsburg; Beatrice Bickford, Auxier;

Bell, New Director For Mental Health

David E. Bell, Jr., of Paintsville, has assumed the position of executive director of the five-county Mountain Comprehensive Care Center. The mental health facility, with offices in Pike, Martin, Johnson, Floyd and Magoffin counties, also serves South Williamson, Kentucky.

He succeeds Richard T. Stai, who recently assumed the same position with Gateway Comprehensive Care Center. Mr. Bell has been employed by Mountain Comprehensive Care since 1972. He is familiar with all phases of the program offered by Mental Health having served as team director in Johnson and Pike counties and as director of development for the center since 1975.

Prior to his employment by Mountain Comprehensive Care, Mr. Bell was field office administrator for the Department of Economic Security, Owensboro, and

Tarps for Coal Trucks Ordered By Fiscal Court

The Floyd fiscal court voted at its Monday meeting an order requiring all coal trucks on county roads to have their coal loads covered by tarpaulins.

The order presumably goes into effect immediately. Magistrate Leroy Akers introduced the motion to adopt the new ruling covering coal trucks, and all court members present, including Judge Henry Stumbo, voted for it. Magistrate Bill Wells was absent at the time of the vote. Sherman Cook, of McDowell, was employed as dog warden and livestock inspector, beginning Aug. 15, at a monthly salary of $350.

The court discussed extension of water service to Spradlin Branch and Spurlock Fork of Middle Creek residents, and called on Joe McCauley, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, for assistance in getting a $100,000 grant of federal funds for this work.

In another action the court voted to post a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons guilty of destroying the "swinging" bridge connecting Wayland and Glo.

Eleven Named After Hearing In Strike Case

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley cracked down on 11 men, former employees of Elkhorn Industrial Products, of Langley, after a hearing held here Monday on allegations that the men were in contempt of the restraining order issued by the court on the basis of an agreement made between the company and striking workers.

Fined $500 each and given 30-day jail terms were Ben Mullins, Harold Johnson, Dennie Perkins, Troy Owens, Kenny Slone, Max Williamson, Carl Conley, Arby Slone, Randall Thornsberry, Frank Gibson and Bill Sam Hall.

(The court action, however, as reported here, was only an oral order from the bench, and a formal order had not been signed Tuesday.)

The jail terms were suspended, but Judge Conley warned:

"If you're back in here again on this contempt proceeding, if something comes up that shows you have violated whatever penalty is put on you, at that time you will also have to serve your 30 days. I'm going to suspend those 30 days on your continued good behavior but I'm not going to suspend the $500 fines."

The men were given till next Monday to

Conley Slaying Reviewed Here During Hearing

Testimony by Commonwealth witnesses was heard Tuesday morning in the examining trial of 19-year-old Don Gearheart who is charged with the July 21 rifle-slaying at Eastern of Brian Marshall Conley, 22.

Principal witness in the hearing, which was presided over by County Judge Henry Stumbo, was State Police Detective Kenneth Deboard, Det. Deboard, who conducted an investigation of the incident which occurred in front of Smith's 76 Station near Allen Central High School, said he confiscated the alleged murder weapon, a Mauser high-powered rifle, from Gearheart's car. A .38 caliber revolver was found lying in the lap of Conley upon examination of the body, Det. Deboard's testimony revealed.

Deboard said Gearheart told him that he had shot in the direction of the pickup truck in which Conley had just pulled out from the station onto Rt. 80 but only in reply to a shot which Gearheart claims was fired from the truck. Gearheart told Det. Deboard he assumed Conley was shooting at him, since they had had an argument earlier, according to the officer. Later, according to Deboard, Gearheart told him he didn't think he had hit Conley, because if he had, "the bullet would have taken his head off." The officer further testified that the rear window of Conley's truck was shattered and confirmed the fact that a bullet struck the victim in the back of his head. His testimony confirmed that a bullet had been fired from Conley's handgun. He also said a partially empty "fifth" of wine and three cans of beer were found in the pickup truck.

Tax Assessment Rise 24% Over Last Year

The total assessment of Floyd county property for this year is $227,513,263—an increase over the 1976 evaluation of approximately 24 percent—figures released this week by Lovel Hall, county property valuation administrator (tax commissioner) shows.

Of that total, however, $11,979,123 is the assessment under the new state law of unmined coal. Taxes collected on that assessment go to the state.

The new assessment is $43,994,625 above the 1976 total if the unmined coal figure is included in this year's total. Heaviest increases were on residential lots, land and improvements, up by almost $7 million; tangible personal property, up by about $9 million, and motor vehicles with an increase of about $4 million.

The only items showing an assessment decrease for 1977 are aircraft, watercraft, drilling and mining equipment and manufacturing machinery.

The increase on farm land and improvements was approximately $500,000. Comparative assessment figures for the two years follow, the 1976 assessment appearing in parentheses:

Residential lots and improvements, $57,536,977 ($50,437,970); farm land and improvements, $15,505,706 ($14,998,979); commercial and industrial, $23,479,572 ($20,781,674); vehicles, $43,867,151 ($39,645,025); aircraft, $431,450 ($821,550); watercraft, $522,905 ($741,100); merchants' inventories and manufacturers' finished goods, $15,081,689 ($8,758,399); professional trade tools and business furniture, $2,388,267 ($1,789,759); drilling, mining and construction equipment, $10,120,881 ($11,719,509); other tangible personal property, $1,324,929 ($552,500); manufacturing machinery, $3,236,551 ($3,273,600); manufacturers' inventory of raw materials, $618,994 ($613,800); stocks, bonds and other intangibles, $16,875,859 ($13,053,792); bank shares, $9,001,235 ($7,782,050).

Festival Time Near in Region

There comes that time of year in Kentucky when mists begin to rise in the eastern hills at dusk and fog starts to settle and hover over lakes and ponds in the Commonwealth's west. It is time for some of the state's fall festivals to start swinging.

There is a difference about the gala entertainment in early autumn. The Kentucky sun, sometimes hazy and sometimes bright as a gold coin, warms the day to set the mood for gathering, singing, hand-shaking and festing together and at twilight a delicious coolness replaces heat of day.

A mountain father once remarked when noting plumes of smoke here and there in the hollows and hills, "Never can tell ifen Sam and his boys air a-makin' a new batch of moonshine or startin' up the cane mill."

Nowadays, it almost always is "startin' up the cane mill."

In Morgan county they raise cane for fun and frolicking and a bit of profit-making at the annual Morgan County Sorghum Festival in West Liberty. This year the date is Oct. 7-9 and activities will take place on the town's Main Street which will be closed to other traffic.

In the past the sorghum festival has attracted thousands of visitors from many states who come to look over the top-quality crafts and arts on display beneath tents that make the street look like a setting for a giant circus. Hundreds of quilts, knitted, crocheted and patchwork items, hand-made chairs, stools, tables and other furniture, ox yokes, wooden ware, ceramics, original paintings, dolls and many, many other hand made crafts will be sold. Many Morgan Counties also demonstrate on the spot, such as basket makers, chair-caners, quilters and the like.

One of the main attractions at the yearly festival is Morgan-made molasses—gallons and gallons of the sweet, wholesome product. Farmers try to make enough to satisfy everyone who wants to take home a pail of the thick, amber syrup to dribble over hot biscuits on winter mornings.

Scottye (Mrs. Lanny) Franklin is overall festival chairman, while Mrs. Boyd Blair of West Liberty is chairman of arts and crafts. This year's festival and parade theme is "My Old Kentucky Home."

The week-end before the sorghum festival is the annual Kentucky Apple Festival in Johnson county. This is one of the biggest festivals and started more than a decade ago with a small apple display in a bank window. Now, several downtown streets in Paintsville are roped off to everything but people and food. The aroma of apple butter and spicy, fried apple pies permeates the entire area where booth after booth offers some form of food using apples as the base ingredient.

Entertainment for everyone is provided throughout the four-day event, all highlighted by top-name country music stars, balls and street dancing.

And for that great multitude who feed the soul on music, the Granddaddy of folk festivals is scheduled at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, near Prestonsburg, Sept. 2-4. The twelfth annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival will find singers, dancers, tale tellers, poets, musicians and craftspeople sharing the lore of the Southern Mountains in an unforgettable week-end.

Initiated during the great depression by that great lady, "Dame" Edith Fitzpatrick James, the festival continues to preserve and encourage traditional customs of mountain people.

Kathryn S. Frazier, festival program chairman of Prestonsburg, says, "We believe our cultural heritage is too precious to be allowed to pass away through neglect." The Highlands fling is devoted to preserving music and songs of ancient days, but does not neglect more modern music, such as popular Bluegrass style. This festival provides an opportunity to hear Eastern Kentucky's famous chant-singers. Information is available from Mrs. Frazier at Prestonsburg, phone (606) 886-2185.

It is that time of year when anyone with a hankering to go some where can follow a nose and a mouth to the apple festival in Paintsville, a mouth and an eye to the sorghum festival in West Liberty and an ear to the folk festival near Prestonsburg.

Travel Association Now in Third Year

The Kentucky Highlands Travel Association is beginning its third year of assistance to the tourist industry in Eastern Kentucky. The first two years have seen tremendous growth in travel income for local tourist facilities of Eastern Kentucky.

A 40-page all-color travel guide highlighted the efforts of the association last year. One hundred thousand copies were printed and were distributed at 10 travel shows during the winter months. Distribution was made by representatives of the Highlands Association in Cincinnati, Detroit and Toronto, Canada among other places. The travel guide has been acclaimed both within the region and at the state level. The travel guide will be published again this year. It is scheduled to be in the hands of the printer by November 1. Plans have been made to take it to 10 travel shows during the winter months.

School Children Must Start Immunizations Before Enrolling

August is Kentucky's Immunization Action Month, and the Floyd County Board of Education reminds parents that all kindergarten and first-grade children must present a certificate stating that their child has been immunized.

This is in accordance with Kentucky Law KRS 214.036, which, in part, states, "... no child shall be eligible to enroll as a student in any public or private elementary or secondary school without first presenting a certificate from a duly licensed medical physician stating that the child has been immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio-myelitis, rubeola and rubella. The governing body of the schools shall enforce the provisions of this section."

This law applies also to transfer students who will be entering school for the first time this fall.

Also required under this law is the provisions that the child entering school for the first time must also have a tuberculosis skin test and a physical examination. The tuberculosis skin tests are given free at the Health Department four days a week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The physical examination forms are available from either the Health Department or the Board of Education, but they must be signed by the child's doctor.

The immunization certificate can be procured at the local health department or from the family doctor's office, depending upon where the child received his immunizations. If a child has not completed his immunizations, he must present a statement from his family physician stating that the child has started his immunization series and that the child will have completed his immunization series, including both measles vaccines, before entering his second school year, 1978-1979.

All forms, physical examinations, verification of skin testing, and immunization certificates must be presented to the child's school before September 30, 1977.

Childhood diseases don't have to be a part of his life

By requiring that children receive their vaccinations, TB skin tests and physical examinations before entering school, the Board of Education hopes to help prevent countywide epidemics of whooping cough, diphtheria and measles among school-age children.

Completion of the master plan will take 10 months or more after funding is approved, he said, and any indication that a site is selected prior to that time "is premature."

"Reports have been received by the Airport Board that a site has been chosen," Perry concluded. "Since the application for study funds has not yet been approved, and several months of work lie ahead before potential sites are even considered, it is obvious that such reports are no more than rumor and should be considered as such."

The proposed regional airport would enable larger, transport-type aircraft to serve the Big Sandy area and possibly provide regular commuter service connecting with major cities and airports.

The regional airport board, appointed by the judges of the four participating counties, has made application for the study, and submitted the necessary technical documents to both federal and state agencies.

The $33,000 study will be funded 90 percent at the federal level, five percent from the state and five percent from local sources.

One of four eyewitnesses to the incident, Ivan D. Gunnels, of Eastern, said he was sitting at the service station with several other acquaintances when Jan Hicks, owner of the rifle, took it out of his car and handed it to Gunnels' brother Arnold. Just as Conley, who had been at the station for about 10 minutes, pulled out onto the road, Gunnels fired a shot into the air. Then, according to the witness, Gearheart grabbed the gun and pointed it in the direction of Conley "but then dropped it and smiled." It was then, according to Gunnels, that he heard a shot come from the direction of the Conley vehicle. At this point, Gunnels said, Gearheart fired at Conley from a kneeling position and the truck traveled about 500 feet and ran into a ditch.

The defense offered no testimony. Gearheart's $25,000 bond stood, unchanged.

The Commonwealth was represented by R. Donald Goble, assistant county attorney; the defense, by State Senator Jim Hammond.

SBA Loan Deadline Aug. 19; Senator Requests Extension

In an attempt to gain an extension of the Aug. 19 deadline for flood victims to apply for SBA loans, State Senator Jim Hammonds this week sent the following letter to Gov. Julian Carroll:

Dear Governor Carroll: After conferring with Carl D. Perkins, Congressman, 7th Congressional District, as to the extending of the time for flood victims in making applications for SBA loans, we have been informed that a formal request for extension has to be made by you as Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. I understand that August 19, 1977, is the last date in which a loan application can be made.

A lot of small businesses who gross less than one hundred thousand dollars a year already had loans with banks that need to be serviced or paid off completely. These people are at a disadvantage now, as opposed to people who would start a new business. They have not only to pay off bank loans they have already committed themselves to, but to borrow new monies in which to get started again, necessitated by the devastation of the April flooding. At first, some of these people, at the high interest rate of 6 1/2 percent on SBA loans, were told they could not borrow the monies they needed because they could not project the ability to pay same off at that rate, considering their other outstanding obligations. Now that Congress has acted and sent to the President a reduction for disaster victims in the interest rate, if they can qualify, upon getting the proper information and submitting same to the SBA in a formal application, they now need additional time.

By the same token, as you know, people who have sustained damages to their dwellings, who have residential loans, and because of their being employed were ineligible for grants from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, were having difficulty in obtaining financing to restore their dwellings to livable conditions. They, as the small business people discussed above, likewise can obtain financing if the time period for applications is extended by at least 30 days so they can make the proper application.

I am sure you will agree that it is incumbent upon myself, you, and Congressman Perkins to see that the business people and homeowners who suffered such grave financial devastation by reason of the calamity of April 1977 have every opportunity to work out their financial problems and to have adequate financing so they can pull themselves up by their own "boot straps" without having to have a "hand out". Therefore, would you consider this request from myself and Congressman Perkins to formally ask the Small Business Administration to extend by at least 30 to 45 days the time period for making applications for SBA loans since the United States Congress has acted in granting lower interest rates to people who come within the federal disaster program.

Where Do We Stand?

Recently Mississippi, following the lead of several other states, decriminalized marijuana. There have been arguments pro and con, but Robert Reinhold, whose column is carried in the Courier-Journal, and Doug Times, coordinator for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), summed it up in two sentences. Said Reinhold in his column, "Observers noted that several children of state legislators had been arrested on marijuana charges". In the same column he quoted Times, "It just started getting too close home". Pres. Carter, whose son Jack was expelled from the Navy for smoking marijuana, is in favor of decriminalization of the drug.

Studies provide evidence that the harm already known far outweighs any argument in favor of legalizing this drug. William F. Buckley, Jr. in one of his syndicated columns says that Dr. Nicholas Pace, president of the New York City Council on Alcoholism, warns that marijuana might put alcohol in second place as the most dangerous drug consumed in the United States. Berl Schwartz, chief of the Times' Washington Bureau, quotes Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., who is a physician, as saying physicians in the U.S. and England have provided evidence that marijuana causes brain damage. Schwartz also says Wendell Ford, Dee Huddleston and Gene Snyder have expressed concern that marijuana leads to harder drugs. Patrick Siddons, Courier-Journal staff writer, reports that Dr. Roger P. Maickel, Indiana University pharmacologist, told a drug and alcohol workshop in Bloomington that prolonged use by men can cause a decrease in male hormone production which leads to breast development, changes in hair growth and testicular atrophy. He said the cardio-vascular and respiratory systems are most affected. Users, he said, suffer significant impairment of memory, and the drug has been detected in the urine of people who have only been in the room where it was smoked. He cautions that the effects on birth defects may not be known until the next generation of children is born.

near the truth that I break a long-standing no-poetry rule and publish it, by request:

I dreamed Death came the other night
And Heaven's gate swung wide.
With kindly grace an angel came
And ushered me inside.
And there, to my astonishment,
Stood folk I'd known on Earth.
Some I'd judged and called "unfit,"
And some of "little worth."
Indignant words rose to my lips
But never were set free;
For every face showed stunned surprise—
Not one expected me!

WHO'S CONFUSED?

En route to the post office, I was sidetracked by Lenna Moore at the parking lot "tollgate," and while we jawed a man wanted out, handed Lenna some money which was duly deposited where it belonged. After waiting a reasonable time, the driver informed him that he had given him half a dollar. So Lenna checked and handed him some change. "You gave me a nickel too much change," the other told him, and Lenna reached forth and plucked a dime from his hand.

I added to the confusion by suggesting that, maybe, we ought to give Lenna the Breathalyzer test and was mightily pleased to see some one other than myself get confused. I gaily started back up the street.

"Where ya goin'?" the now-recovered gatekeeper asked.

"Back to the office," I told him.

Then it was his time to grin. "Seems to me like you were headed in the other direction when you stopped here," he said.

So I turned and walked soberly back to the postoffice.

Edmond Le Breton, AP columnist, quoted a top federal law enforcement officer as fearing decriminalization would promote more smuggling of the drug into this country. Also Mr. Le Breton reported that U.S. Customs Commissioner Vernon D. Acree warns that without the threat of criminal prosecution, many more people will become involved with marijuana. According to Don McLeod, AP reporter, studies in Oregon show an increase in usage following legalization.

According to a report from AP in Frankfort, March 25, 1977, the Kentucky Legislature may be facing the same vote in 1978. According to this article the Kentucky Marijuana Feasibility Study, Inc., of Lexington, strongly favors it.

Where do we stand? The time to take a stand is now. If we don't, this could pass without anyone's making an effort to stop it.

Understandably, the officers hate chasing users, while the pushers escape with a fine. The way to correct this injustice is not to increase the penalty for the pusher, and decrease it for the user. The growers and sellers can afford the fines, and often have political connections to escape conviction. As long as there are buyers, the pushers are not going to stop selling. The traffic in marijuana will be just like speeding, and no more of a crime. As long as drivers can afford to pay the fines for speeding, they are not going to slow down. Reducing the penalties for marijuana will result in a disastrous mistake.

It is the responsibility of every voter to fully inform himself about the widespread use and the harm already done to users here and elsewhere and act.

Maytown First Baptist Church is proud to go on record as being against legalizing marijuana, or any harmful drug. We urge you to send letters to the President, your congressmen, both national and state, and the governor of the state, letting them know where you stand. Even though Pres. Carter favors letting the states handle it, there could be national laws passed favoring it through the efforts of such organizations as NORML, unless the people act.

Murray, 'Youngest and Oldest' District Reservoir Manager

Dean Murray, Dewey Lake resource manager, has been promoted to the GS-11 rating under the federal Civil Service system and prior to the promotion received from General Heiberg, division engineer for the Ohio River Division of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, a special achievement award "for outstanding leadership" with the personnel assigned to Dewey Reservoir and other personnel from various Corps projects branches in providing assistance to the public during the disastrous flood of April, 1977.

Dewey resource manager for the last 17 years, Murray is the youngest Corps employee ever to be appointed reservoir resource manager, and he has held that position longer than any other in the Huntington district. In his long list of official credits are 20 commendations and three sustained superior performance awards from the Corps of Engineers, plus several commendations from Kentucky governors for his participation in local civic affairs.

Mr. Murray began his association with the Corps of Engineers as assistant warehouseman at Marietta, O., after military service during the Korean Conflict. He later was assigned to Piedmont dam and lake, Piedmont, O., until 1960 when he was promoted and assigned to Dewey Lake.

At Dewey he lives and works within five miles of his birthplace at Van Lear and the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Murray.

The veteran reservoir manager takes a personal pride in the development of Dewey Lake and Jenny Wiley State Park, and emphasizes the modern facilities and varied attractions which now attract a million to two million visitors a year by recalling things as they were when he first went to Dewey:

"When I arrived at Dewey in 1960, the only way in to the dam was by old US 23 to West Van Lear, on through Van Lear and over a patched, winding road to the dam and Hager Gap. No other access, except by boat, no "Lake Road" that we now have. No state park, no lodge, no developed camping areas or public conveniences; one small boat dock at Brandy Keg, one park dwelling. A lonely beach with a wooden building for a change station at Stratton Branch near the present site of the Olympic pool there, a gravel road ending at Stratton Branch as you come in from Lancer." "At that time," he recalls, "if you wanted to drive from the dam to Brandy Keg, you went to Van Lear, on to US 23, across Abbott mountain and through Prestonsburg and Lancer. German bridge, to get there you drove a rock-and-gravel road across Cow mountain to the bridge where the only "conveniences" were a two-pit toilet and primitive camping."

Now, in conjunction with state park facilities, the Corps maintains a $100,000 camping facility at German.

Murray and his wife, the former Shirley Hicks, of Louisa, have a daughter, Sheri, 20, and a son, Greg, 18—and, speaking of changes, he recalls, "Sheri was only three years old when we came here."

Pikeville Methodist Hospital Expanding Staff, Services

Pikeville—Despite what Louisville newspaper stories said last week, Pikeville's hospital is not in danger of closing or having to cut back services, its administrator said today.

On the contrary, the Pikeville Methodist Hospital continues to expand its staff and its services, it was announced by Lee D. Keene, the institution's head.

Both emergency and physical-therapy departments of the local hospital have been expanded recently, and look forward to further expansion. The emergency room, enlarged some time ago by the addition of an admitting office, will be given considerable space for new examining and treatment rooms. Physical therapy, which started in one room in 1973, now occupies three, and more space is soon to be provided for that important service, which will continue to be fully staffed, the announcement said.

Recent additions to the staff of the X-ray department also were announced by Keene. Besides Dr. G. N. Combs, diagnostic radiologist who has been on the hospital's medical staff for 29 years, the group now includes therapeutic radiologist Dr. Jose A. Avila and Dr. Brent D. Brandon, specialist in diagnostic radiology and nuclear medicine.

In June alone, the group administered 552 radiological treatments to a total of 314 patients. Besides the conventional X-ray equipment the hospital uses, the powerful new radiation unit, financed by local independent coal operators and housed in a specially built three-room addition, was put into operation last January, and the nuclear scanner, also used as a diagnostic tool, has now been in use for a full year.

Other staff additions include two specialists in neurology who visit the Pikeville hospital on a regular schedule, and three full-time emergency-room physicians, on duty there around the clock.

Also planned for the near future is renovation of the hospital's seventh floor, which they recently received state permission to use for acutely ill patients. Among the changes will be converting the nursing station, built for service to extended-care patients, to a larger station like those on the other floors.

In spite of these plans, salaries and wages at the Pikeville Methodist Hospital continue to compare favorably with those of other hospitals in the state, Keene said. The institution is happy that no employees lost any salary during the period after the April flood. When some were not needed at their regular jobs because of the smaller number of patients in the hospital at that time, they simply stepped in to help clean up the mess which engulfed their institution, along with the rest of Pikeville and the entire area.

Besides all these expenses, the Pikeville hospital is saving taxpayers of the country almost half a million dollars by paying its share of the purchase price of the former Miners Memorial Hospitals, W. E. Elliott, Sr., president of the hospital's governing board, added. He recalled that when the Appalachian Regional Hospital chain was set up by the purchase of nine hospitals in this area in 1966, the tenth was sold to the Pikeville Methodist Hospital. All the transactions were financed by loans from the U. S. Government, and the Pikeville facility is making regular payments to retire its debt of $492,000. None of the Pikeville hospital's indebtedness has been forgiven, as has the remainder of the $4,100,000 cost of the ten hospitals.

Craft Elected

Edgar Craft, veteran Floyd County educator, has been elected president of Post F, Travelers Protective Association of America.

Other officers named at the August meeting were: Vice-presidents, Don Layne and E. B. May, Jr.; board of directors, Bobby Wells, Bill Wells, W. J. Reynolds, Jr. and John Wayne Shepherd; secretary-treasurer, Gordon Moore.

Craft, who is guidance counselor at Prestonsburg high school, said that the civic and fraternal men's organization has many new community projects for the coming year.

THE VETERANS Administration resumed "postpayment" of GI Bill allowances July 1. For the past several years, monthly allowances were prepaid.

No-Fault Insurance Is Still Debatable

State Insurance Commissioner Harold McGuffey recently told the joint interim legislative committee on Banking and Insurance that Kentucky's auto no-fault insurance law may be working better than any other no-fault system in the country.

However, other proponents and opponents alike appearing before the legislators advocated some changes in Kentucky's two-year-old system, through which persons involved in car accidents are reimbursed by their own insurance companies for expenses, no matter who is at fault.

James O'Connor, executive director of the Kentucky Trial Lawyers Association, and James Lenihan, of the Kentucky Bar Association, both proposed a reversal in the elective procedures for no-fault. Taking issue with McGuffey's claim that no-fault is successful because 98 per cent of Kentuckians have opted for the insurance, Lenihan said no-fault has been chosen by most people only because the procedures for requesting the old tort system are too complicated.

Lenihan further contended that no-fault is basically "health insurance" and that 90 per cent of Americans are already covered by hospitalization and medical insurance.

Robert Preston, of the Kentucky Central Insurance Co. and a former insurance commissioner, agreed with McGuffey that no-fault has been beneficial to the state. "Regardless of my original opposition to no-fault plans, I must concede, that the vast majority of people are more interested in getting their bills paid after an accident than they are in determining who was at fault. People who have been involved in injury accidents favor the no-fault system overwhelmingly."

But, Preston said, no-fault's provision for mandatory auto insurance "has failed miserably." He explained that four out of 10 private passenger cars are uninsured because "it became evident that enforcement of this portion of the act would be neither vigorous nor uniform."

McGuffey said his office has noticed a recent increase in fines levied by courts against those persons who are discovered without auto insurance. He predicted that the percentage of those drivers without insurance would decrease if penalties remained high.

Richard Reeves, an official with Travelers Insurance said his firm was also pleased with no-fault's success in Kentucky. He did advocate, however, a "verbal" threshold that would contain descriptions of various types of injuries for which a person might file suit instead of the current $1,000 medical expenses standard.

The state Department of Insurance has received several requests for increases in rates charged for no-fault protection since a moratorium on auto rate increases ended Jan. 1. Travelers is thus far the only company to receive an increase in car insurance rates.

McGuffey said the filings for rate increases are regarded as a "trickle" by his department in comparison to the more than 200 companies writing auto insurance in Kentucky. Most companies have cited inflation as necessitating the rate increases and have stated that the request would have been higher under the previous tort system.

The Banking and Insurance committee will hold three citizens' hearings around the state to further gather opinions on no-fault. The sessions have been set for Sept. 19-20 at Lake Barkley State Park, Sept. 29-30 at Jenny Wiley State Park and Oct. 12-13 at Barren River State Park.

The fastest time anyone has run the 100-yard dash is 9.0 seconds. That world record is held by two Americans: Ivory Crockett who set his record in 1974 and Houston McTear who matched Crockett's record a year later.

The fastest time any woman has run the 440-yard run is 52.5 seconds. That world record is also held by two Americans: Kathy Hammond who set the mark in 1972 and Debra Sapenter who equaled it two years later in 1974.

World records probably won't be set by any athletes participating in this summer's 1977 National Track & Field Youth Program sponsored by Hershey's, but the 250,000 boys and girls will be competing in a spirit of goodwill and true sportsmanship. The program is for youths aged 10 to 15 in 10 southeastern states, and will be climaxed by the Southern District Regional Finals Meet August 6 in Huntington, W. Va.

The fastest mile ever run was by John Walker of New Zealand. He set his record in 1975, in Sweden, turning in the amazing time for the distance of 3 minutes and 49.4 seconds.

Big Sandy ADD To Pay $100,000 On Sewer Work

Commissioner Ralph Ed Graves of the Department for Local Government last week announced approval of an application for Area Development Funds to construct 1.9 miles of sewer collector line from the National Guard Armory now nearing completion near here to the Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Big Sandy Area Development District recommended use of $100,000 of its area development fund allocation for the project.

The existing package treatment facility at the hospital is inefficient. The proposed line would connect the facility to the Prestonsburg city utilities sewer system.

Department for Local Government recommends approval of this project, contingent upon issuance of highway department right-of-way permit.

Area Development Funds were made available through action initiated by Gov. Julian Carroll and approved by the 1976 legislature, with $12 million allocated for the biennium.

Final authorization is made by the Executive Department for Finance and Administration following a technical review of each project.

Leaflets Three, Let It Be; Berries Red, Never Dread

In this line-up of look-alikes, can you spot the shady character? (See below)
 Answer: 1 box elder; 2 Virginia creeper; 3 poison ivy.

To avoid the itchy "scourge of summer," it is not only helpful to learn what poison ivy looks like, but to learn what looks like poison ivy.

Why? Because poison ivy has several look-alikes, such as Virginia creeper and box elder. If you learn what they look like, then it is easier to spot—and avoid—the "shady character" that causes watery welts and great discomfort.

Poison ivy, which grows best in the shade and on moist ground, can be deceptive. It can have light green leaves or very dark green leaves (turning to yellow or red in the fall) and the leaves can be shiny or dull, with smooth or wavy edges.

"But," says the Ranger Rick article, "poison ivy always has three leaflets, and its flowers and berries are always light green or dull white." These characteristics distinguish it from the Virginia creeper, which always has five leaflets with jagged edges and whose berries are a bluish purple.

They also distinguish it from the box elder, although the leaves of the box elder are almost identical to those of poison ivy. Some small box elder leaves have only three leaflets, but "if the plant has some leaves with five leaflets, it is a box elder," according to Ranger Rick. Another clue: The box elder is a bush or small tree, never a vine like poison ivy, which creeps along the ground and sometimes climbs trees.

The basic differences between poison ivy and its harmless imitators are still summed up in the old jingle:

Leaflets three, let it be,
 Berries red, never dread.

Is it possible to "get" poison ivy even if you memorize the jingle and don't touch any "leaflets three"?

Unfortunately, the answer is "yes," according to Ranger Rick. Because the gummy oil found in all parts of the plant rubs off on anything that touches it, even in wintertime, it is possible to "go for a walk in the woods with your dog and come home safely enough, then pick up the poison by patting your dog!"

Distant Infant Care Centers Result in Eastern Ky. Deaths

Frankfort, Ky.—A resolution seeking to restrict the use of state funds for abortions in cases other than rape, incest or danger to the mother passed the Interim Joint Committee on Health and Welfare Wednesday, July 27.

As introduced by state Sen. Clyde Middletown (R-Covington), the resolution did not mention abortions in case of incest or rape. However, the committee amended the resolution to permit use of public funds for abortions under those circumstances.

The resolution asks Gov. Julian Carroll and human resources Secretary Peter Conn to enforce the intent of the resolution.

The issue is the result of a recent Supreme Court decision which leaves the use of public funds for abortions to the discretion of states. Abortions in the first three months of pregnancy are now available in Kentucky under the state's medical assistance program if a woman cannot afford to pay for an abortion.

The resolution passed over the objections of Rep. Gerta Bendt (D-Louisville) who said the public had no chance to be heard on the issue.

In a lengthy meeting, the committee also heard from Dr. Irwin J. Light, director of newborn clinical services at the University of Cincinnati. Light appeared before the committee at the request of committee members Dr. Mitchel Denham (D-Maysville) and Rep. Steven Beshear (D-Lexington).

Beshear sponsored a bill during the last session of the General Assembly which would enlarge facilities for sick newborns at the University of Kentucky Medical Center. The only other hospital providing specialized care for sick newborns is at the University of Louisville Medical Center.

Light told the committee that 20 percent of the sick newborns treated at Cincinnati Children's Hospital from January through July 4 were from Kentucky. Forty-two came from Northern Kentucky and 28 from Eastern Kentucky.

He said he was not advocating sending Northern Kentucky infants to hospitals farther than those in Cincinnati. However, he pointed out that the death rate for infants who must be transported from Eastern Kentucky is much higher than the rate for those closer to Cincinnati.

The committee voted to invite representatives from UK and U of L to the next meeting to discuss newborn facilities.

Examples of improvements made to date, Burkett said, were the hiring of additional staff; and the creation of a human rights committee which reviews requests to place a patient in a restraint or in seclusion.

The committee asked that a DHR representative appear and update members on deficiencies.

He's suffering from a Heart Attack, but he may die from ignorance

Because the people around him have no idea what to do. And, because they don't, he may die. Needlessly

If you don't know how to help a heart attack victim, it's time you learned.

If you discover someone who has collapsed, chances are you can save him if you know CPR, (cardiopulmonary resuscitation). CPR will teach you how to tell whether his heart has stopped, or whether he has just fainted. If his heart has stopped, you'll know how to keep him alive until medical help arrives, with mouth-to-mouth ventilation and closed chest cardiac compression. CPR has to be learned. Contact your local American Heart Association for information on CPR training in your area.

If you don't know CPR, the only thing you can do is call the emergency medical service as fast as you can. Because if his heart isn't beating, he'll be past any kind of help in six minutes.

So remember what we've told you. Take the time to learn CPR. Ignorance is a terrible reason to die.

Weinberg Seeks KY 80 Group To Protect Families' Rights

Bill Weinberg, state representative-elect for the 92nd district, (Knott, Magoffin and Letcher counties) last week called for the formation of a citizens' committee to work with state officials in the planning and construction of new Route 80.

Weinberg, who is unopposed in the November general election, said that such a committee was necessary "to safeguard the rights of families being relocated and to assure that people being affected by the project are treated with fairness, respect and dignity."

He suggested the committee be composed of the state representatives, the state representative-elect and the state senator representing Knott, Floyd and Perry counties and two citizens from each county. Weinberg said that such a committee would provide a regular channel of communication through which people who are being relocated or having land taken by the state could register their complaints; and would furnish a means of urging changes in project plans aimed at increasing the benefits of the road for local residents.

"We must not and cannot forget or neglect the human element in our haste for changes. Families who have lived on the same tract of land for generations are being relocated. Many of those being relocated are elderly. Moving anytime, anywhere is a grinding process; when it is a forced movement from a family farm which has been a person's lifelong home, it is heartrending. Too often, the goal of completing the road according to a set timetable overshadows, in the minds of some state workers, the impact of the project on local residents."

Weinberg said he has had many complaints about the highhandedness of state personnel involved with the road. "Time and again, people have complained about having their trees cut or damaged without permission being requested; about being unable to get straight answers or even getting false information from employees who have come to their homes; about being treated as if they no longer own their land, before it is sold; and about being offered unreasonably low prices for their property. Such treatment adds insult to injury and it must not be allowed to continue."

Weinberg noted that a citizens group has been meeting for several months at Garrett to discuss the problems created by the road project. Some of the problems identified by the group, chaired by Floyd county teacher Lowell Conley, included unfair prices, appraisers who are unfamiliar with local property prices, arbitrary relocation procedures, unnecessary movement of streams, landlocked property, failure to provide for continuity of gas supply, and plans to fence the right of way to Route 80.

"The issue is not support or opposition to Route 80. The road is going to be built and it should be of great benefit to our area. But it is the duty of elected officials to protect to the best of their ability those who are going to be affected by the project. It is likewise the duty of elected officials to work to maximize the benefits of the road to local residents. We are not interested, and our people are not interested, in a throughway for those traveling from West Virginia to the Bluegrass. We want the road to be used as a tool to stimulate the development of our region and to increase employment opportunities. Fencing the road and failing to provide crossovers and access will inhibit, rather than encourage development; such ideas should be discarded. I have asked for, and received, a commitment from Governor Carroll that the road will not be fenced and I look forward to official confirmation of this."

Weinberg said he had sent letters to all state representatives and the state senator in the three county areas, as well as to Lowell Conley, chairman of the Garrett citizens group, asking them to join with him in forming the Route 80 committee.

MILWAUKEE ORDERED TO STOP POLLUTING LAKE MICHIGAN

CHICAGO—In a precedent-setting case, U.S. district judge John F. Grady has issued an injunction against the city of Milwaukee, ordering the city to stop polluting Lake Michigan.

Grady's ruling Friday was a victory for the state of Illinois, which filed suit against Milwaukee, the city's sewerage commission, and the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission of Milwaukee County seven years ago.

The suit charged Milwaukee with creating a public nuisance by dumping raw and inadequately treated sewage into Lake Michigan. The suit said the sewage travelled to Illinois territorial waters, harming the lake and Illinois residents. The state of Michigan then joined Illinois in the suit against Milwaukee.

Dr. Allen Succumbs At Martin Hospital

Dr. J. H. Allen, dean of Floyd county physicians and former member of the Floyd County Board of Education, died Monday night at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, where he had been taken two days earlier after suffering a heart attack at his home at Langley. He was 89 years old.

He began his medical practice after graduation from the University of Louisville Medical School in 1910 and did not retire till 61 years later. The earlier years of his practice antedated established hospitals and modern transportation in the county, and for years he travelled horseback to the homes of the sick. Later, he was associated with his son, Dr. C. L. Allen, in practice at the Beaver Valley Hospital at Martin.

Dr. Allen was a member of the board of education 33 years—the longest known tenure of any such official in Eastern Kentucky. He retired from the board in 1972. The new high school at Eastern was named the Dr. J. H. Allen High School in his honor.

FEWER SOVIET AUTHORS READ ABROAD, PAPER SAYS

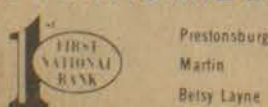

MOSCOW—Seven times more English and French authors' works are published in the Soviet Union than Soviet authors' works are published overseas, the Soviet Culture daily newspaper said Saturday. It said that three times more Western television films were broadcast in the Soviet Union than were Soviet films in the West. At the same time, the Soviet Union had a hundred times more students of Western living languages, while the study of Russian in the West is uncommon, the paper said.

By WILMAY

Eastern Kentuckians who were flooded are grateful to Congressman Perkins for insisting that interest rates on flood loans be much lower. It is right to assist foreign powers, especially the backward ones so drastically in need of technology and monetary aid. But it is a shame that we contribute billions abroad yearly—by gift and loan—much of which likely will never be repaid (check records to see how many fail here) and then turn around and charge interest to our own people, many of whom in better days paid taxes to help provide loans and gifts to outsiders. Perhaps the biggest bouquet deserved by Mr. Perkins should be for establishing and promoting vocational schools that enable thousands to become permanently self-supporting, who otherwise might not.

Numerous persons are happy to see on the market more shoes made in the U.S.A., because they are more attractive than many from foreign countries, particularly the dress shoes for women. Complaints to legislators are slowly putting back into business some small shoe firms that were curtailed or closed, due to trade agreements with other lands. Those who do not care for heavier shoes welcome a return of a wider range of choice. Perhaps some day Washington will realize that friendship cannot be bought, even by international trade, which in recent years has inundated the country here with some goods so cheap in quality they are close to being useless.

Recent statements by former Kentucky State Fire Marshal Williams and some others seem to indicate a strong possibility of some political eye winking, looking the other way, and favoritism by someone, some time, somewhere along the line that may have led, at least indirectly, to the restaurant holocaust that wiped out so many lives. Unfortunately, influence and money still talk in some circles. This makes all good, honest, upright public officials stand out. How often do we show them genuine appreciation?

The Korean scandals that allegedly kept more than one representative from running again last fall make one wonder what next on the national scene of political corruption. If there were fewer posh soirees in the capital, particularly those with strong drink, and if more time were spent in work, study, reading bills, and prayer, America might not be in her present condition. Many of our public officials do participate regularly and actively in prayer groups. On the red side of the ledger, liquor consumption per capita is higher in Washington than in any other city of America. For all its faults, the U.S. is still by far the best country on the globe, the last citadel of freedom. If America falls, so will all mankind, in many respects.

For long years U.S. women have lived 7-8 years longer than men. The gap in longevity of the sexes has trebled in this century. Latest figures show a slight increase in the lifespan of men and women, plus a small decrease in the breach. The campaign against cigarettes is believed to have reduced both cancer and heart fatalities, chiefly among men. Research as to the possible causes of the disparity between length of lives of men and women should prove enlightening, and it might spark a Men's Lib!

Three Injured, One Seriously In Tunnel Work

Three men narrowly escaped death and one of the trio was seriously injured last Friday afternoon when a rock fell from the roof of the Midas tunnel while repairs were being made to the tunnel following the recent fire which caused heavy damage there and stopped all rail movement of coal between that point and Deane, Kentucky.

Robert R. Barker, Jr., of Milton, W. Va., suffered a possible skull fracture and other injuries when the rockfall smashed onto a scaffold car which he and two others were operating. He was taken to Cabell-Huntington Hospital. Rickey Gividen was admitted to Our Lady of the Way Hospital but was later released. Charles Dixon was released at the same hospital after examination and treatment.

The rockfall, a Chessie System employee said, was restricted to a small area of the tunnel and is not expected to delay restoration to rail service.

The tunnel fire, believed to have been maliciously set, was discovered the night of July 19. At the same time a trestle on the Middle Creek rail line partially burned.

Monitoring Nuclear Plants Sets Safeguard Precedent

In a pact that may set a precedent for the nuclear power industry, the Massachusetts Wildlife Federation (MWF) and the Boston Edison Company (BEC) have agreed on a plan under which an independent oversight committee will monitor off-site radiological emissions from the utility company's nuclear power plants.

The agreement, which received approval from the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board on June 9, 1977, after four years of negotiation, is the first instance where the nuclear power industry has joined with an environmental group to devise such a stringent plan to monitor radioactive wastes, and establish an oversight committee made up of members of the environmental community, industry, state and federal governments.

Thomas Kimball, executive vice president of the 3.5 million member National Wildlife Federation, of which the MWF is an affiliate, called the settlement "a splendid example of environmentalists and industry working together to protect our environment from potentially hazardous substances. The Massachusetts Wildlife Federation and the Boston Edison Company are to be commended for the extraordinary amount of time and effort they spent working together to reach this unique agreement." Kimball also commended the efforts of Dr. Vaughan T. Bowen of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and Henry Herrmann, a lawyer, who spearheaded MWF's effort during the negotiations.

The agreement affects BECs's Pilgrim nuclear power plant, already in operation at Plymouth, Mass., and a proposed plant which is expected to be constructed at the same site starting in January, 1978.

The oversight program, which will be funded by BEC, is unique because it calls for strict monitoring of plutonium, improves the quality control standards on laboratory work and provides for a radioactive survey of the public beach and residential areas near the nuclear power site. An improved program of monitoring edible shellfish and fin-fish will also provide an early warning of any radioactive contamination.

In addition to the monitoring activities of the oversight committee, MWF, with federal government approval, will maintain its own aerial radioactivity monitoring station across the bay from the plant.

Highway Employees To Receive Pay Hike

Kentucky Transportation Department Secretary Calvin G. Grayson has announced pay adjustments for most highway maintenance workers. Personnel Commissioner Addie Stokley approved the 10 per cent adjustments to become effective Aug. 16.

"Gov. Julian M. Carroll made these needed adjustments possible," Grayson stated. "He knows our highway network is among the best in the nation. Much credit is due the workers who maintain that network. These pay adjustments acknowledge their efforts," Grayson emphasized.

"These adjustments are made possible by Gov. Carroll's foresight in asking all state agencies to eliminate any non-essential positions through attrition from retirements, resignations, etc. The transportation department has effectively reduced its total payroll by 927 permanent full-time employees since Jan. 1, 1976, making additional funds available for use in upgrading the salaries of essential employees on a selective basis," Mrs. Stokley noted.

Transportation officials estimate annual savings from these payroll reductions in excess of $6.5 million.

Toxic Chemicals Pollution Problem

After six months as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, Douglas M. Costle thinks that an "insidious epidemic of poisonous chemicals" is the "single most demanding problem" facing his agency.

With approximately 30,000 chemicals in use, "we are just beginning to learn how toxic some of them are," the EPA chief said in an interview published in the current (August-September) issue of National Wildlife magazine.

Enforcement of the new Toxic Substances Control Act, Costle said, is further complicated by the fact that qualified scientists in the field are scarce and "industries that will have to comply with a toxic substances control program are just as anxious to find them as we are." To administer the act (PL 94-469), which became effective last January 1, "we have to establish a brand new organization," he added.

Despite these problems, "the job is doable," Costle said. "We can't afford not to do it. The stakes are too high."

Costle, who observed his 38th birthday on July 27, was a member of the study commission that recommended establishment of the EPA seven years ago. He later served as head of Connecticut's Department of Environmental Protection.

One of his first struggles after being named EPA administrator last February was to win Carter Administration approval of 600 new EPA jobs to staff his toxic substances and solid waste management programs. Some of his first decisions as administrator involved restrictions on such toxic chemicals as Kepone, PCB's and Mirex.

In his interview with Jim Doherty, executive editor of National Wildlife, he expressed belief that "five years from now... the toxic substances law will be considered as much of a landmark as the air and water (antipollution) laws are today."

Asked to characterize his administration of EPA after its seven years of birth and growth pains, Costle said he thought the key word would be "consolidation."

"We've been through an enormously creative legislative period," he said. "The nation now has an imposing array of tough new laws to safeguard the environment and it is EPA's job to make those laws work. What we need is a period of administrative stability to consolidate the legislative gains."

This, he said, did not mean that he would not ask for new environmental legislation "if I see a need for it. But right now EPA has wide-ranging authority and we face an urgent need to consolidate it and make it work."

MIAMI—Romance-minded serpents seem to have discovered what lovers of other species have known for a long time—Miami is swell place for a honeymoon.

Bill Haas from Miami Serpentarium reports that pythons, boas and anacondas apparently are escaping from their South Dade owners and "propagating at the edge of the Everglades. Florida has a very good climate for tropical snakes."

As a result, exotic snakes have been turning up in residential areas.

Just last week, Metro police turned big-game hunters when an eight-foot python slithered into one resident's yard.

While Pablo Rodriguez and his two brothers watched the snake move through the yard, their father, Huberto, called police, who were able to "lasso it like a horse."

Special Military Exhibits Planned

The Kentucky Military History Museum will present a special swords display at a gun show scheduled Aug. 13-14. The show, in the Bluegrass Convention Center, Ramada Inn, I-64 and Hurstbourne Lane, Louisville, is sponsored quarterly by the Kentuckiana Arms Collectors.

The exhibit will include more than 30 swords, ranging from a silver hunting sword used during the Revolutionary War to a 1917 U.S. Navy Cutlass, according to Nicky Hughes, curator of the military history museum.

During the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville, scheduled August 18-28, the museum will have an exhibit tracing the military history of the Kentucky National Guard. "The exhibit will include uniforms and equipment from every major conflict in which the Guard ever participated," said Hughes.

The museum, located in Frankfort, features one of the world's largest and most complete automatic weapons collections, according to Hughes. The weapons and other items which trace the state's military history come from the collection of the Kentucky Historical Society, the U.S. Military services, the Smithsonian Institution and from donations of Kentuckians.

About 100 visitors are attracted to the museum daily, including Sundays, when it is open from 1 to 5 p.m., Hughes said. "We are averaging about 1,500 visitors per month and the rate is increasing."

CORRECTION

In a Page 1 story which appeared in last week's issue of The Times concerning the dismissal of two Wheelwright law officers, Elmer Ferguson was mistakenly named as mayor of that community. While Ferguson is a former mayor, present mayor or, more correctly, chairman of the board, is Mr. Delbert Davis.

The museum is a joint project of the Kentucky Historical Society and the State Department of Military Affairs. To schedule speaking engagements and exhibits, contact Nicky Hughes, (502) 564-3265.

Many Unaware Of Services Available

Free services available to some 70,000 Kentuckians are not being fully utilized, according to Adam Ruschival, director of the Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (LBPH).

"We are currently serving around 2,600 people," said Ruschival. "The library has all of this equipment—some of it new—and it's not being used as it could be."

In an effort to make the free services of the LBPH better known to all Kentuckians, Ruschival will be visiting libraries in the 15 state development districts in the next several weeks.

"What we hope to do is to make an area's population—not only those who are disabled—aware of our services. We also wish to make ourselves acquainted with doctors, nurses and such people who may possibly know folks that could benefit from the LBPH," he said.

"We're going out there with a big club and beat them out of the bushes," said Phil Veno, director of special services at the LBPH. "There are a lot of people all around the state who are not aware that we even exist. Adam's visits will change that."

Ruschival's first visit, tentatively scheduled for Aug. 15, will be to the Green River Library Development District, a six-county area surrounding Owensboro. He will be assisted in that project by district library director Lucille Callis.

Nocturnal Animals of Our Region

By GEORGE L. MOORE

As the sun sinks behind the majestic oak trees on the distant hilltop, there follows a period of quiet and solitude that all of God's creatures seem to enjoy. It is the period in which all activity comes to a standstill and nature seems to say, "It is time for a rest period".

Someone has said that there is nothing so eloquent as silence. To appreciate this, one must live off of the beaten path where the sound of the motor car and the clang of machinery cannot be heard. The only time the silence is broken is the rumbling sound from an airplane, high in the sky.

It is the period between sundown and dark, and as this period changes to twilight all the day creatures begin to settle down for the night. It is time for the nocturnal animals to begin to stir.

The most conspicuous is the large, black, hoot owl that takes his usual place on the flat top of the large white, post above the tall grass. From this vantage point, it keeps watch for small rodents to leave the tall grass and emerge into open view where the lawnmower has shaved all green things closer to the earth. When the owl spots one of these small rodents it drops down from its perch and devours the mouse or mole, on the spot. He looks about to see if the coast is clear and then flies to the top of another fence post to resume his vigil as before. This will continue until the twilight turns to darkness and the lightning bug begins to dart hither and yon as he lights up the scene with flashes from his everburning torch.

It is about this time that you begin to hear the chant of the whippoorwill in the deep valleys below. As this strange bird continues its off-repeated chant, it moves slowly up the mountain. As it emerges into the clearing and comes closer to the house, one can hear a distinct cluck as it repeats its name over and over.

Next emerges the sly fox. It seems to be everywhere as it searches the woods, the fields and meadows for anything it can eat. It is one animal that is not particular about its menu, it will eat almost anything. It is, for the most part, a silent animal and seldom utters a sound, except during the mating season.

The deer is getting more plentiful in these parts. On rare occasions they may be seen in the open fields where a herd of cattle is feeding; however, you will see a lot more tracks than you see deer. This would seem to indicate that they do most of their feeding in the open fields at night. A deer will stand very still and stare at you as you approach; however, as you come closer, it will suddenly bolt and disappear into the brush. It is as fleet as the wind and gracefully glides over the top of a barbed wire fence with the greatest of ease. Of all the animals I have observed, the deer appears to be the most defenseless. With a sympathetic look on its face it seems to say, "No, don't shoot me, I have done you no harm".

The most nocturnal of all the night animals is the skunk. It is also one of the most beneficial as far as man is concerned. It feeds mainly on grubs that damage a lawn or garden. It makes a funnel hole with its long, keen, nose as it zeroes in on the grub five inches below the earth's surface.

A couple of years ago, one of these beady-eyed creatures became quite friendly with me. The friendship ended in tragedy for the skunk. It was in the winter time when I went out on the back porch for firewood. A snow-white skunk would be examining the pans where I had fed my dogs—at first, it would retreat a distance of some 20 feet and stare at me until I went into the house. It wasn't very long until it ignored me completely. I would walk as close as a foot beside him. Somehow, he always managed to keep his lethal end toward me. I lived in mortal fear that I would stumble over him, in which case I would have to take up residence in the barn. One night I coaxed him away from the porch with food. I took dead aim and ended his life with a blast from a 12-gauge shotgun.

Before I run out of space, I would like to pay my respects to the Japanese beetle. It is one of the most voracious beetles in the animal kingdom. It doesn't recognize nature's time clock and consumes everything before it, day or night. In these parts, it is worse than Pharaoh's Plagues. A quotation from the Book of Job is appropriate, "The range of the mountains is his pasture, and he searches after every green thing".

State Allocates $300,000 for HSA

Health officials of the state Department for Human Resources announced Thursday the allocation of $300,000 in state health planning funds for fiscal year 1977-78.

The funds are intended to support the local efforts of three Health Systems Agencies (HSA). Kentucky is divided into the three areas under the National Health Planning and Resources Development Act which went into effect last year.

According to Health Services Deputy Commissioner Burnice Ransdall, Kentucky is one of the first states to commit state funds for the newly formed HSAs which would otherwise operate on federal funds of about 42 cents per capita.

Speaking to local health officials from across the state, Ransdall said formal contracts will be signed between human resources and the HSAs at a later date.

Local sub-area councils will be able to support their planning efforts with the newly allocated funds, Ransdall said. "These 16 sub-area councils will be able to do the groundwork and local planning needed for input to the HSAs," he said.

Floyd Unemployment Rate For June at Area Average

Eastern Kentucky's unemployment rate rose from 4.4 per cent in May to 5.7 per cent in June, according to figures released Aug. 2 by the Department for Human Resources. The figure for the area is the highest in the state with the state rate for the same month at 4.7 percent but below the national figure for June of 7.5 per cent.

Floyd county's rate was exactly that of the area average, 5.7 per cent, and for the first time in two years dropped below the Martin county rate.

Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the department, says the increase in the unemployment rate is due largely to students seeking summer jobs. Magoffin county has the high in the state at 10.9 per cent with Boyd county the area low at 3.4 per cent. In Eastern Kentucky an estimated 16,266 people were looking for jobs.

Other county unemployment figures for June follow:

Workers Honored at Reception

These people were honored at a reception given last Tuesday evening by the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club for their active participation in the 2 1/2-year fundraising drive by the Area Volunteer Fire Department for the purchase of a new fire truck. They are, from left: Standing—Elmer Morrison, Bill Waugh, Mrs. Rusha Coleman, Mrs. Patsy Murphy, Daryl Gibson; seated—Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. Mae Cox, Mrs. Sybol Bentley and Mrs. Lola Hall. The reception was held in the Masonic Lodge recreation room at Wayland. The Wayland club has supported the fund-raising drive, along with the local townspeople, and still keeps it as its Community Improvement Project, realizing that the Fire Department will need continued support in its multi-community area of service.

Plastic Pipe Wins Wider Approval

The state Plumbing Code Committee, an advisory group to the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, has approved a greatly expanded use of plastic pipe.

The committee at a recent meeting recommended all above-ground uses of the pipe up to 60 feet, an increase from the 30-foot limit already approved during the past year. It also recommended use of the pipe underground or under concrete slabs.

These recommendations represent major breakthroughs for the plastic industry, according to Art Curtis Jr., an official with the state department.

Curtis said that the use of plastic pipe and then the extent of its use has been a source of controversy since the mid-60s.

College To Feature Classes in Building

Building construction classes will be among the features of Prestonsburg Community College Community Service schedule this fall. Presently, four of these classes are on the agenda with more to be offered next spring.

Block laying, which was offered for the first time last spring, is again being taught by James D. Daniel, who has had many years' experience as a bricklayer, masonry contractor, instructor and inspector. The course will begin Thursday, September 8, at 6:30 p.m., and it is prerequisite to Brick Laying, another class which begins Wednesday, September 7. For either class each participant must furnish a trowel and a level.

Blueprint Reading I and Basics of Carpentry I are two additional building construction classes to be taught for the first time. Blueprint Reading will begin Tuesday, September 6, 6:30 p.m., and Carpentry Monday, September 12, 6:30 p.m. These classes are for carpenters, electricians, plumbers, masons and others interested in building construction.

Continuing Education units will be awarded for each course, and for each course there is limited enrollment. Interested persons should contact the Office of Community Services, Prestonsburg Community College, telephone 886-3863, Ext. 243.

Rate High in State Contest

Seven Floyd county 4-H members competed in the state 4-H vegetable judging contest August 2 at the U.K. Quicksand Experiment Station, Jackson, Ky.

Grady Stephens placed second in the senior contest with 1315 points out of the 1500 possible. He won the second place award in the insect part of the contest. He is the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Stephens, of Pyramid.

Dwayne Fraley, 13, was the third place winner in the junior division of the contest with 1255 points. He was the first place winner in judging vegetables. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fraley, of Eastern.

Greg Slone was fourth with 1235 points and picked up third place honors in both seed identification and vegetable judging. He is the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Slone, West Prestonsburg.

Todd O'Brien, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob O'Brien, of Stanville, was fifth with 1220 points and was the third place winner in insect identification.

Other Floyd county judges and their point totals were Dan Moore, Langley, 1215 points; Phillip Gibson, Langley, 1175 points, and Rondall Martin, Langley, 1160 points.

Reed Loses Post As Police Chief

Andrew J. Reed, the former Floyd county man who has been embroiled in a fight with city commissioners, was fired last week from his post as chief of police of Richmond, Ky., and also was threatened, along with the Richmond Register, with a libel suit.

But the situation there continues to have the earmarks of an old-fashioned row. Some policemen who apparently are friends of the deposed chief reported sick, soon after Reed was placed under attack. Some were fired, others suspended. Some have been reinstated.

Some of those who were fired expect to go to court. They protest that the hearing for Reed and them, held behind closed doors, was "a kangaroo proceeding" and that it was a case of the accuser sitting as judge and jury.

Reed himself has indicated he will take information in his possession to the next grand jury.

One of the discharged policemen, Ed Graves, said he will fight his case. Of Reed he said:

"I love Richmond. I believe that's the feeling of the majority of officers. I feel Chief Reed was definitely a strong figure in keeping me and a lot of the officers here because, when everything reeked of politics, Chief Reed was kind of like a rock. He was the one we looked to, depended on."

Frank Reffett pitched the title win for National Mines. The winners broke the game open in the bottom of the seventh inning when Robey Slone, Jr. led off with a home run and Dickie Davis followed with a three-run triple.

One weekend Jim Murray burned some leaves, the trash, and most of the neighborhood.

The wind was brisk. The forest, dry. And Jim decided it was a perfectly beautiful day for clearing and burning trash and debris. The outcome? A tragic wildfire in neighboring woods.

Remember. Any form of unauthorized trash burning is illegal. And dangerous. Because it can rage out of control. Call your local forestry agent before burning debris. And protect that perfectly beautiful day for you, and others. Wildfire. It's a crime against you.

Aid Expected for Hospital System

As a result of a meeting last Wednesday with high-level officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Kentucky Sens. Walter (Dee) Huddleston and Wendell Ford are optimistic that short-term federal assistance will be expedited to provide temporary relief to the financially-beleaguered Appalachian Regional Hospital System.

The meeting was called by Huddleston and Ford to convince HEW officials of the necessity for federal intervention to avert a fiscal crisis that threatened to disrupt hospital care to thousands of people in Eastern Kentucky and five other states. Joining the Senators at the meeting were Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll, Seventh District Rep. Carl D. Perkins, West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, Sen. Jennings Randolph (D-W. Va.) and officials from the Appalachian Regional Commission as well as HEW.

"This was the first time we had been able to get everyone involved to sit down together and look for an immediate solution to this most serious problem," the Senators said. "We were able to convince the HEW officials of the urgency of the situation; now they are working to determine what can be done not only for the short term but the long term as well."

At the meeting, HEW officials agreed to expedite processing of Medicare-Medicare reimbursements for the hospital system. This would help the hospital system meet its short-term financial obligations.

In addition, HEW agreed to immediately begin reviewing possible long-term solutions to prevent similar crises from occurring in the future.

"We received assurances that this study would be completed within 60 days, perhaps even sooner," the Senators said. "State officials as well as representatives of the Appalachian Regional Commission will be working closely with the HEW team to find a long-range solution."

The hospital system has facilities in Hazard, Middlesboro, Harlan, West Liberty, McDowell, Whitesburg and South Williamson, as well as Mann, W. Va., Beckley, W. Va. and Wise, Va.

Commission May Get Preservation Grant

Frankfort, Ky. (Aug. 9, 1977)—"If all goes as we hope it will, Kentucky will be receiving the largest historic preservation grant fund in its history," said Eldred Melton, state historic preservation officer, to members of the Kentucky Heritage Commission at their Aug. 4 meeting.

On July 27, 1977, President Jimmy Carter signed into law a new process for apportioning preservation grants funds to the states, thus allowing approximately $45 million for historic preservation on a national level in fiscal 1978, Mrs. Melton told the commission. "If events go in Kentucky's favor, the state will receive approximately $800,000," she said.

Receiving the amount is contingent upon two factors: —Congress, which is currently discussing the apportionment process, must free a percentage of the funds to be divided equally among all the states.

—Kentucky must be able to provide matching funds.

Also at the meeting, the commission approved a recommended federal grant of $5,000 for architectural research and preparation of plans and specifications for the restoration of Liberty Hall.

The Kentucky Heritage Commission will next meet at a special session scheduled to take place at Russellville in October.

THE VETERANS Administration offers vocational rehabilitation training to veterans with service-connected disabilities.

Pikeville College Offers Graduate Credit, Degrees

Eighteen persons from the Pike County area received post-baccalaureate degrees through the Appalachian Graduate Consortium between Pikeville College and Morehead State University during summer commencement exercises at Morehead this past Thursday, August 4, 1977.

Dr. Judith Harris, director of the graduate consortium, announced that four people finished their fifth year programs, one person received certification beyond the master's level in supervision, six earned master's degree in elementary education, two were awarded master's degrees in education with an area of specialization in history, and five received master's degrees in secondary education.

Eloise Hall, of Hueysville, Floyd county, completed requirements beyond the master's level for certification in supervision.

Harris said that graduate consortium classes for the fall semester, 1977, will begin the week of August 29. Registration will be held in the lobby of Faith Chapel at Pikeville College on August 24 at 6:30 p.m. For further information, contact Harris at 432-3161.

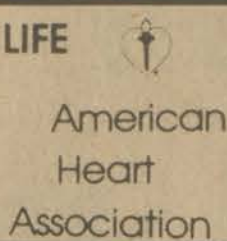

Exhibit Features Work of Hale

An exhibit featuring the paintings, drawings and photography of Alice Lloyd College Art instructor Golden Glen Hale is currently on display at the Floyd County Library here. The exhibit will run through the week.

Reduce If Overweight

A Heart Too Good To Die.

It's our guess you've never even heard of cardiopulmonary resuscitation—right? Well, there are some new lifeguards around these days, trained by the Heart Association in a lifesaving technique called cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

You'll see them in hospitals, industrial plants, ambulances, football stadiums—even large offices. Many are doctors, but others are firemen, nurses, ambulance and rescue personnel, policemen and just plain people.

When someone's heart stops, his brain begins to die. Minutes count.

Prompt application of mouth-to-mouth breathing and chest compression keeps blood flowing to the brain. CPR can restore life, or sustain it until complete cardiac care can be started. Thousands of victims of sudden heart arrest have been saved by these CPR "lifeguards."

A lot is being done these days to prevent premature death, to save hearts "too good to die"—and the Heart Association is doing it. Your gift to the American Heart Association will keep us at it.

Community Club Plans Projects

Community Action Club volunteers, Kim Mullins, Rona Bartley, Linda Holbrook, Katie Newsome and Eric, Ronald Bartley, Chris Mullins and David Ropp, weed flower garden.

The Wheelwright Community Action Club met at an open Board meeting July 28 to get summer projects started and a temporary fund-raising committee elected. There were discussions concerning the findings on the swimming pool, a report on meeting with the Big Sandy ADD Board and donations received through Mountain Investment.

Mountain Investment donated the use of the Clubhouse restaurant for monthly meetings until the restaurant is rented, and after that the club has permission to use the upstairs lobby in the clubhouse for meetings until a permanent location can be found. They also offered the use of the restaurant and lobby for the Community Action Club to sponsor a dance. In response to this donation the Community Action Club formed a committee and weeded the flower garden in front of Mountain Investment business offices.

Members of the Community Action Club attended a special meeting of the City Council July 25, and Mayor Delbert Davis and the City Council gave permission to use the tennis courts for community activities. They, too, offered their help and support for club goals.

Pearl Bartley was elected temporary fund-raising chairman. A permanent chairman will be elected at the regular meeting August 18 at the Wheelwright High School Cafeteria.

The club also voted to take an opinion poll of the town to see what each individual household thinks are the community's more pressing needs. Someone with the club will be knocking on doors before the end of August. The club will use this poll as guidelines in its annual scheduling. Cooperation of residents in these projects, donations of time, money, know-how, equipment, etc. are solicited.

A motion was made to present the club's president of 10 years, Felmon Blackmon, a letter of appreciation for his years of dedicated service to the community. This motion was carried with unanimous approval.

Present at the last meeting were Elmer Ferguson, president; Felmon Blackmon, vice-president; Amber Hines, secretary; Pearl Bartley, treasurer; Katie Newsome, Jimmy Sanders and Charles Williams, board members, Mabel Trammell, John H. Butler, James H. Butler, William (Bill) Smith, Jackie Cotton, Donna Mullins, board member, Linda Holbrook and William Bartley.

The club acknowledged appreciation to Mountain Investment and Dr. Carlos Blankenship, Wheelwright dentist, for their support.

Next meeting of the club will be August 18, at 7:30 p.m. at the high school cafeteria. An invitation is extended to all interested persons to attend.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

Are there giant geese in Eastern Kentucky's future?

There well could be, if things work out the way Daniel Boone National Forest officials hope.

Last Monday, 20 giant Canada geese were released along the shore of Cave Run Lake, near Morehead. Gene Brown, a wildlife biologist with the U.S. Forest Service, hopes these goslings will form the nucleus of a resident flock on the lake.

The giant Canada goose gets its name from its size—it weighs about four pounds more than the common Canada goose. But what is more important, this subspecies isn't migratory.

This means that these large geese will stay near where they were raised. Regular Canada geese will return to the far north with the coming of summer (not a bad idea, considering the weather we've been having lately).

The 20 goslings at Cave Run are what Brown hopes will be the beginning of a flock of these birds on the lake. The forest service will ask the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources to close the lake to goose hunting to allow the birds to grow and multiply. Nesting first occurs when the birds are three years old, so it will take a while to get a flock established. However, Brown hopes to get a few pair of adult birds to speed up the population growth.

"The first benefit will be aesthetic," he says, "visitors to the lake should enjoy watching the birds." But he hopes the population will grow large enough to allow hunting in the not too distant future.

Although 20 birds doesn't seem like many, they have a way of multiplying rapidly. In 1973, Eastern Kentucky University stocked 16 of these birds on the Central Kentucky Wildlife Management Area near Richmond. By 1980, Eastern's wildlife biology students predict that this flock will have grown to 430 geese.

If the Cave Run experiment proves successful, these geese may be stocked at other Eastern Kentucky lakes. If they are protected until their numbers increase, this part of the state could possibly join the western portions of the commonwealth as a goose hunting region.

VISITS HERE

Mrs. Mae Hinchman, of Huntington, W. Va. called on Mrs. Margaret Alley last week on her way to Harold to visit her sister, Mrs. Alonzo Ferrell and Mr. Ferrell. She was accompanied home by Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell and Mrs. Verda Layne, of Lorain, Ohio.

Camp Shawnee Wins 'A' Rating

Honored on 93rd Birthday

M. K. Eblen, president of Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, has reported a summer full of successful Scouting activities which have affected boys from each of the 13 counties served by the council.

Eblen reported that Camp Shawnee, the summer camp operated by the Lonesome Pine Council in this county, received an "A" rating as a National Standard Camp from the inspectors sent to the camp by the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America. This is the highest rating a camp can receive, and Eblen congratulated the campers, the camp staff, and the camp director for their cooperation in giving the camp such high ratings.

Another positive note which Eblen reported is that attendance by Scouts at Camp Shawnee increased 31 percent this year over 1976.

Also in Eblen's report was the fact that the Scout council, in cooperation with Diversified Educational Cooperative of Norton, Va., again sponsored a special camping experience for handicapped youngsters. Joining with the council and Diversified to help make this camp a success were faculty and students from Keene State College, Keene, New Hampshire.

A social hour was enjoyed at the home of Greely Hackworth at Bonanza, August 2 honoring him on his 93rd birthday with a cook-out in his yard, given by his children and neighbors. Attending the celebration were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hackworth, of Dorton; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Leake and Dorothy Harris, East Point; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hackworth, Lesa and Lara, of Wooster, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Ishmel Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Campbell and Mike, Mrs. Alta Hall and Phyllis, all of Bonanza; Mr. and Mrs. Verner Conley and Bobby Jean, of Riceville; Mary Elizabeth Smallwood and Shan, of Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Campbell presented him with a birthday cake bearing 93 candles.

Elem. Teachers Have Ample Time For Basic Skills

A study of elementary school curriculum directed by the legislature shows no evidence that teachers have too little time to teach basic skills.

Dr. Donald Van Fleet, head of the Department of Education's research and planning office, gave a report on the study Wednesday during an Interim Joint Committee on Education meeting.

A draft copy of the study report says that from the information collected from a random sample of 600 teachers, "there is no evidence that the overloading of the curriculum with courses such as consumer education and career education results in a reduction in the amount of time a teacher has to spend on the basic skills."

Of the questionnaires mailed out, 66 percent were returned.

Van Fleet noted that basic test scores have declined over the last few years, in Kentucky as well as nationwide.

He said that this is not because teachers are doing a poor job of teaching. A better retention rate for Kentucky schools means that a different type of student body is now taking the tests, according to Van Fleet. That student body now includes students who several years ago would have dropped out of school and not taken the tests.

According to the study draft, the teachers surveyed agree that students should be required to prove specific competencies in basic skills, such as reading and math, before being promoted to the next grade level.

The Department of Education is working on a four-year plan for introducing competency-based education in schools statewide, Van Fleet reported to the committee. A major testing company will help the department develop tests to measure competency, then students who do poorly on the tests will receive needed attention to help them master the basics, he said.

An education and arts subcommittee of the full committee recommended Wednesday that because of the education department's plan, no legislation in the area of accountability be passed during the 1978 session of the General Assembly. In other action, the full committee heard a subcommittee report critical of the education department's involvement with consumer education.

Sen. Kenneth Gibson (D-Madisonville), chairman of the subcommittee on implementation oversight, accused the department of ignoring the legislature's mandate on the integration of consumer education in the schools.

State Attorney General Robert Stephens, whose office is responsible for consumer protection in the state, told the committee he expects to recommend legislation on mandatory consumer education courses for schools for consideration by the next legislature.

Of the present system of consumer education interspersed with other course matter, Stephens said, "I don't think we're doing a good job."

Responding to the sharp criticism from Gibson and Stephens, Van Fleet said the education department has encouraged local school districts to participate in consumer education programs. He added that a survey of schools on the incorporation of consumer education was honest and objective.

Gibson and Stephens also criticized the survey.

Floyd County
Health Notes

By DONNA J. GRIFFITH
Health Educator

That big moment is just a few days away for some children in Floyd county who will be enrolling in the first grade this fall, and as every parent knows, those last days can go by in a hurry.

Certain immunizations are required by state law before a child may enter the first grade. Kentucky Revised Statute 158.035 states that "Except as otherwise provided in KRS 214.036, no child shall be eligible to enroll as a student in any public or private elementary or secondary school without first presenting a certificate from a duly licensed medical or osteopathic physician stating that the child has been immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis, and measles. . . . The governing body of private and public schools shall enforce the provisions of this section."

The Floyd County Health Department urges all parents, especially those having children enrolling in school, to see if their children's immunizations are up to date and if not, to see that they receive their needed immunizations. The health department will be offering immunizations against all of these diseases, free of charge, Monday through Friday, from 8 to 12 and 1 to 4.

The following two clinics will be conducted by the Floyd County Health Department within the next few days:

Thursday, August 11, a pap smear clinic will be held at the health department from 9 to 11:30 and 1 to 2. This clinic provides all women with the opportunity to be screened for cervical cancer, free of charge. Also available at this clinic will be literature and an eight-minute film teaching women how to detect cancer of the breast by doing their own breast examination, once a month. This clinic is a free service and all women are welcome to attend.

Monday, August 15, a public health nurse will conduct an outpost clinic at Ethel Osborne's Store in Bypro. Clinic hours will be from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2 with the following services being available:
Immunizations, TB skin tests, diabetes screening, and blood pressures. All persons in the Bypro area are welcome and urged to attend this clinic for these free medical services being offered in their community.

10 PASSENGERS ARE INJURED
WHEN JET HITS DOWNDRAFT

ROME—A Pan American jumbo jet on a flight from New York to Rome hit a downdraft over Nice, France, Saturday, and 10 passengers were injured, airport officials said. Two women required hospitalization.

The plane, a Boeing 747 with 219 passengers aboard, apparently was undamaged and continued on to Rome.

Maria Majorana, 61, of Italy, was hospitalized for treatment of a back injury, airport officials said. Clementina Riccio, 66, of New York City, was being treated for head injuries.

Former Floyd Man Outlasts
Mistake That Impoverished Him

(The following, which appeared in The Valdosta (Ga.) Daily Times, tells of the privations suffered by a former Floyd county man and his family because of a Social Security Administration mistake which for several years deprived him of Black Lung benefits.)

By KATHY KING

The coal mines and the government deprived his body, but they couldn't take away his soul.

Charles Meadows, 49, of 314 Virginia Ave., has been living with his family in a dilapidated house with peeling paint, broken boards on the porch and tattered, borrowed furniture in the living room.

For the last few months, they've had no electricity and no gas. Helen Meadows, 38, cooked on a small barbecue grill until someone loaned her a camp stove. She drove a taxi at night to earn grocery money.

Then, on Wednesday, Meadows learned that the government found a mistake made several years ago in computing Meadows' black lung benefits. The Social Security people have mailed him a check for $15,233 to cover years of too-low payments.

"We can get our electricity turned back on," said Mrs. Meadows, when she found out about the money.

Her husband was calm and a little unbelieving.

About a month ago, Mrs. Meadows told the family's problems to this newspaper's Times Line column, a consumer information and complaint service. The Times contacted Emory Crandall, assistant to Sen. Sam Nunn, (D-Ga.), who contacted the Social Security Administration.

At that time, the Meadows were concerned because their monthly checks of $168 had stopped coming, and because their utilities had been cut off.

Nunn's office got the governmental wheels turning, and the Social Security office immediately mailed a check to the Meadows for two months' benefits.

But before that check showed up, one of the missing checks arrived and the Meadows cashed it. And when the new check came they were afraid to use the money. So on Wednesday they were still without electricity.

The Meadows have no telephone, so a reporter went over Wednesday to give them the news, which came from Nunn's office, about the big certified check for $15,233 which is on the way. Nunn's office also said Meadows' monthly benefits will go from $168 to $410.

Meadows, a tall man with a firm jaw, and Mrs. Meadows, a redhead with large blue eyes, were sitting around on worn chairs and sofas with their three sons, Charles Henry, 18, Roy Michael, 17, and Stephen Matthew, 14.

They were cheerful before and after hearing the news and spoke of the kindness of local residents.

"One thing we're going to do is pay back $10 to the Lee Street Baptist Church," Mrs. Meadows said. "They gave it to us for food, and now someone else can use it."

Meadows said he'll pay the utility bills.
And he hopes to buy and repair the house they live in. He said he'll buy his wife
"the furniture she's never had since we've been married." The rest of the money he'll spend wisely, he said.

Meadows nodded as his wife said:
"The hard times have been pretty good.
We've had our three boys."

They moved here in November from Auxier, Ky. Meadows worked in the Kentucky coal mines for more than 17 years.

Committee Told
Miners Harassed

Representatives of the United Mine Workers testified last week before the Interim Joint Committee on Labor and Industry about the year-long strike at the Blue Diamond Coal Mine in Stearns, Kentucky, and the committee heard the UMW representatives charge the Kentucky State Police with harassing striking miners.

Lee Potter, a UMW organizer in Stearns, said the state police are promptly answering calls from the Blue Diamond Company when there are problems with strikers. But, according to Potter, the strikers do not get similar treatment when they request help from the police.

"This is a big test for the coal companies down here," said John Cox, a UMW organizer from Washington, D. C. "If we (the UMW) lose this mine then some of the other independent mines who are under contract to us might go non-union again like they were in the 1960's."

The Interim Joint Committee on Cities discussed the progress of the investigation of the Beverly Hills nightclub fire.
The committee heard that State
Police Commissioner Ken Brandenburg will have his investigation of the fire completed and a report submitted to the committee by September.

The Interim Joint Advisory Committee on Nuclear Waste Disposal called the nuclear burial site at Maxey Flats a "mistake", but stopped short of recommending that the site in Fleming county be closed. It did recommend, however, that new ways of handling surface water
"be sought as a matter of urgency."

OUTDOOR LORE

by Neville Shackelford

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Some sounds, like the call of migrating geese or the lonely, far-off whistle of a train, stir up recollections so poignantly nostalgic that the mood of the moment may be completely altered. The auditory nerve picks up the sound, carries its findings to a seat of memory and imagination, and, as a bucolic poet once wrote, "sets the fancy drifting to dear spots we used to know... some wood, meadowland, or pastureland of the days of long ago."

land crops often consider this lonesome creature an insect villain. Living in underground burrows of its own digging, it sometimes supplements its diet of larvae and earthworms by feeding on potatoes and roots of other garden crops. Also, it is not what most would call a pretty insect. About two inches long, having a fat velvety-brown, bulbous body, and grotesque forefeet not unlike the diggers of a mole, it is actually somewhat formidable in appearance. But other than sometimes damaging crops, it is harmless to mankind.

An old-time, circuit-riding minister of acquaintance loved to listen to its sound as he rode home from late evening church services, and called it the "sweet singer of Zion." He stated that its sweet and somewhat somnolent melody must have been written by the divine harmonist Himself.

There have been many others—Theocritus, Thoreau, and Whittier—who paid tribute in story and verse to the mole cricket's song.

There is no evidence that any insect enjoys reason, has any variety of thought, or feels any need for expression, but there is no doubt that the mole cricket's song fills a place in the great plan of creation. It is a sweet singer of the swamps, if not of Zion, and should you be passing along a country road some later afternoon and hear a drowsy "churr, churr, churr," coming from the damp ditch-line, this will be a mole cricket busy at its vespers.

Those who grow bottom-

Mole cricket

Probably no other sound possesses such profound capabilities of recall as that made in autumn by the mole cricket.

A seldom seen resident of damp meadows and roadside ditchlines, it begins its song around mid-August and continues until ice begins to glass over small pools and potholes in November. Silent by day, it does not start articulating its thoughts and emotions until the afternoon sun sinks low on the horizon and objects start casting long shadows across the land.

In this melancholy twilight concert, there is all the bitter-sweet sadness of a requiem. In the imagination, the sound seems a threnody, a lament for all the generations and all the summers gone.

Black Cats Hit the Road

It seems to make no difference how far the Prestonsburg High School Blackcats have to travel as long as there is a football waiting for them at the end of the trip.

Friday afternoon, the young Blackcat squad traveled to Mt. Sterling for their first pre-season scrimmage against a strong Montgomery County team. Early Sunday morning, the Cats were on the road again, headed toward football camp in Tennessee.

According to Head Coach Philip Haywood, the scrimmage went about as expected. "I knew we were going to make mistakes, and we did—about a thousand of them—but we also made a few good plays. You learn from your mistakes and that's why we went down there. I believe we learned a lot."

Montgomery County outscored Prestonsburg 5 to 1.

Later, Haywood commented:

"One of the biggest problems facing us this year is an overall lack of experience. We wanted each of our athletes to get in a lot of playing time to start gaining this needed experience, and we managed to do this."

One thing that did seem to please Haywood about the scrimmage was the physical condition of his team. "I don't think any of our players actually got tired. For this early in the season, I believe we are in excellent physical condition. Because of this, I feel like we will be able to accomplish much more at camp. However, we have a long, long way to go."

Prestonsburg has picked some tough opponents for scrimmage, because Coach Haywood believes that the only way to learn to play good football is to play other teams that play good football. He said, "We're not going to learn a thing by scrimmaging someone that we're just going to roll over, so we pick out some pretty tough people to play."

How about the upcoming season? "It's really too soon to say. Right now let's just leave it as it is, a question mark. However, it should be interesting."

Kentucky Carbon Pays $6,000 Fine

Kentucky Carbon Corp., of Charleston, W. Va., has paid the state $6,000 and agreed to perform measures that will prevent discharges of black water, coal solids or coal dust from the company's operations in Pike county into streams.

The Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection had charged the company with discharging black water from its coal preparation plant in violation of state water pollution statutes and regulations and failing to report those discharges to the department's Division of Water Quality.

The company is the fourth in recent weeks to sign agreed orders with the department as a result of legal action by the department. Approximately $45,000 has been paid by the companies to the state for black water discharges.

Tom Glover, attorney for the department, said negotiations are in progress with several other companies the department has charged with water pollution.

Kentucky law calls for civil penalties of up to $5,000 for each violation of water pollution statutes, and a $1,000 penalty for failing to report the discharge to the Division of Water Quality.

Floyd To Share In $81,200 Grant

An Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) grant of $81,200, has been awarded to Kentucky's Department of Education, according to Gov. Julian M. Carroll.

The funds will go toward a cooperative vocational education project serving five vocational education regions in Appalachian Kentucky. According to Development Secretary William L. Short, who serves as Carroll's alternate on the Commission, the project will affect schools in Floyd, Hazard, Bell and Madison counties.

"The project calls for the employment of five itinerant teacher-coordinators," Short said, "who will assist in the selection and placement of up to 200 vocational students in cooperative work stations provided by business and industry in our Appalachian region." Other project objectives, he said, include developing a procedural manual for teacher-coordinators and classroom teachers.

"A prototype inter-regional plan will also be developed for the utilization of teacher-coordinators in the region," Short said.

ARC will pay the entire project cost, according to Short. The salaries of the teacher-coordinators, totalling $64,938, represent the largest cost item in the project. The project is budgeted from July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978.

Layne-Stanley Vows Spoken

Miss Rhonda Gail Layne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Stratton, of Elizabethtown, Ky., formerly of Stanville, Ky., and Mr. Richard Allen Staley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Staley, of Lexington, were married at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 23, at the Cane Run Baptist Church, Lexington.

The Rev. Lewis Seward performed the double-ring ceremony. Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Ted Bragg.

The bride, given in marriage by her step-father, wore a floor-length gown of lace over white satin. She carried a bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and daisies.

The matron of honor, Miss Rita Carol Centers, cousin of the bride, wore a long, mint-green crepe gown. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white daisies. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Lynn Wallace and Miss Barbara Staley. They carried bouquets of white daisies.

Best man was Albert A. Staley, father of the groom. Ushers were Bobby Shelton and Rex Wallace, II.

A reception was held at the church with Mrs. Susan Staley, Mrs. Debbie Shelton and Miss Lola Staley serving. Miss Kathy Kelly presided at the guest book.

After a wedding trip the couple will live in Lexington.

The bride is the niece of Mrs. James M. Centers. Out-of-town guests, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Centers, were Miss Rita Carol Centers, Lloyd M. Daniels and Miss Kathy Collins, of Stanville.

Health and Retirement Funds Lose $5.3 Million in July

Wildcat strikes in July were worse than any other month of the year, the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association (BCOA) said last week. During the month over 279,000 man-days were not worked resulting in nearly 2 1/2 million tons of coal not mined, over $17 million in wages not paid and about $5.3 million lost to the UMWA Health and Retirement Funds, according to BCOA.

In making the announcement, Joseph P. Brennan, president of BCOA, said, "It is tragic that following the cut in health benefits the situation has been made worse by these wildcats, especially in relation to the cash flow problems of the 1950 Pension Trust which funds pensions for nearly all of the current retirees."

In commenting on the work stoppages currently in progress, Brennan said, "Once again, a small group of UMWA members are defying their own union and placing in further jeopardy the medical and pension benefits for which their fathers and grandfathers struggled. These senseless strikes hit hard at the integrity of the National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement and at the benefits which accrue to coal miners under that Agreement. At a time when both the union and the operators should be working toward a stabilization of the Funds and toward taking steps to insure that there will not be further cutbacks, the wildcat strike activity merely makes inevitable a continued deterioration of the financial stability of the Funds. Thus, we have the ultimate absurdity of wildcat strikes over the consequences of wildcat strikes, which can only result in further hardships and, if continued, further weaken the UMWA at a time when its strength is so important to achieve the nation's energy needs."

BCOA said that so far this year over 1.3 million man-days have been lost as a result of wildcat strikes, an increase of 49 per cent over last year, with 12.3 million tons of coal not mined during the period. This means the UMWA Health and Retirement Funds, this year alone, have lost $26.7 million.

Insurance Board Okays Rate Hike

The Kentucky Insurance Regulatory Board approved a 13.1 per cent overall rate increase on auto policies written by State Farm Mutual, the state's largest auto insurer.

Some 300,000 State Farm policyholders in Kentucky will find their premiums going up an average of $15.60 as their coverage is renewed. A public hearing was held on the rate increase request March 8, at which time the company officials cited inflation as the primary reason for the increase.

According to State Farm data for semiannual rates, an average policyholder in Frankfort will experience an increase from $80.92 to $93.02; in Lexington from $64.42 to $74.98; and in Louisville from $100.94 to $117.22.

Two smaller auto insurers, Cumis and Grain Dealers Mutual, also received overall rate increases of 10 per cent and 11.1 per cent, respectively.

In other action, the board delayed a decision on a redistribution of garage liability insurance proposed by the Insurance Services Office until members of the Kentucky Automobile Dealers Association express their opinions on the change.

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

In olden times in the Appalachian mountains, the dainty little wildflower we now know as wood sorrel, was called the "Raincrow Flower." Most likely this was because the plant started casting its bloom about the time the yellow-billed cuckoo, or raincrow, returned to the United States from its wintering grounds in Argentina and other parts of South America and started forecasting rain from the thickets. In this respect and oddly enough, early English herbalists also entertained a sorrel-cuckoo connection. They called it "cuckoo's meate," and were under the impression that the British variety of the cuckoo ate wood sorrel to improve its voice.

Wood sorrel is native to both the United States and Europe and in the Old Countries is known by still another name, "Alleluia." According to quaint old Dr. John Gerard, the plant blooms in England between Easter and Whitsuntide. During the season Psalms are sung in the churches and the welkins ring with this exclamation or expression of thanks and praise to God.

Some still think the ternate-leaved wood sorrel, or a variety of such, may have been the historic shamrock that St. Patrick used in an attempt to demonstrate to the ancient Irish the idea of the Holy Trinity in Unity. Certainly the triple leaf and purple or pink stained flower has long held a special connotation for Christian peoples.

In his famous Herbal, Gerard wrote that the French gathered wood sorrel for use as a "greene sauce," and that English apothecaries provided it to those that had "sicke and feeble stomackes." He added that he used it himself in treating those with weak stomachs and poor appetites.

The juice of this exquisite little wood sprite is pleasantly acid. It has been used in this country to add piquancy to wild greens and salads made from wild plants.

Wood sorrel is classified under the name oxalis acetosella. Its fastidious white or pinkish flowers are reminiscent of calicos that women once bought by the yard at country stores for making homemade dresses and bonnets.

As noted long ago by Swedish botanist, Peter Kalm, there are some 20 species of wood sorrel in the United States. Aside from delighting the taste buds of children, its leaves, flowers, seeds and bulbs are relished by many birds and animals. The plant also has a peculiarity that has attracted the interest of botanists since the beginning of that science. At night the leaves fold up and for all practical purposes, go to sleep. Responding to some mysterious force, they also fold in very bright sunlight. Presumably the leaves fold to avoid freezing or overheating.

Flouride Treatment Planned for 400,000

More than 400,000 children in virtually every county in Kentucky will be getting decay preventive flouride treatments in their schools this fall, the Department for Human Resources reported last week.

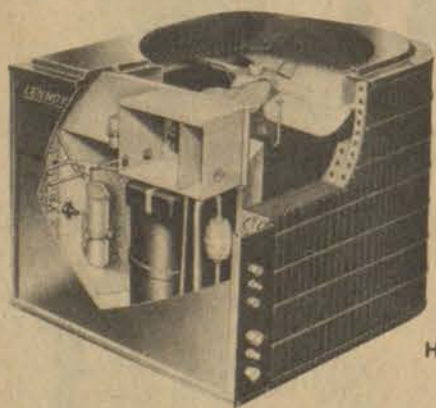

With parental consent, children in kindergarten through eighth grade will be offered a flouride mouth rinse once each week for 30 weeks under a program which began last year among nearly 150,000 youngsters in scattered counties.

Dr. James Corum, dental health director for the department said, "This program demonstrates cooperation between boards of health, the county health departments, school boards, community residents and parent organizations."

Corum said Kentucky may well be the only state in the U.S. where all counties are involved in such a dental program. He estimated that up to 40 per cent of the participants' cavities this year will be prevented by the flouride mouth rinse which takes just 60 seconds to administer.

"School children simply swish a pleasant tasting clear liquid in their mouths and spit it out after a minute," Corum said.

Giant Canada Geese Released at Cave Run

A flock of 20 young giant Canada geese, a subspecies of the native Canada goose, were released in Cave Run Lake, near Morehead, last week in an attempt to develop resident populations of the big birds in the Daniel Boone National Forest.

The project is a joint effort combining the work of the U.S. Forest Service, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Tennessee Valley Authority, which earlier that day flew the birds in from the Buffalo Springs Research Station in Rutledge, Tennessee.

It is expected they will remain on the lake and grow to maturity, weighing from 18 to 20 pounds. Food was scattered on the edge of the lake at the time of release. This area will be closed to goose hunting indefinitely by the state but hunters will be allowed to hunt other waterfowl during the regular hunting season.

They feed primarily on vegetation and aquatic plants and insects, particularly during the spring and summer. Normally, they reach sexual maturity in two to three years and can live as long as 40 years. The giant Canada goose has markings, black stocking necks and white cheek patches, similar to the well known native Canada geese, but its body is somewhat darker.
